—How best may we serve Christ? By serving our fellowman. How best may we honor Christ? By doing an unselfish deed in His name, for His glory. This is the season of all the year when that deed is called for. Now we celebrate the birth of the Christ child.

Question and Answer.

What became of Benedict Arnold?

After the Revolutionary War closed, he engaged with his sons in merchandise in New Brunswick for a time. In 1791, he settled in London and lived there until his death in 1801. His last years were much embittered by remorse, it is said.

"THE FORWARD MOVEMENT IN THE MARYLAND CONFERENCE."

Dr. Tagg in his first page editorial in the Methodist Protestant of last week writes very encouragingly of the work of the Maryland Conference under the above caption. The Maryland Conference is the strongest and most influential Conference in the entire church and we should, and I trust all of us do, rejoice in the progress this Conference is making and the grand work which it has done in the past. But is there not a reason? From the beginning of the Church the Maryland Conference has had in her center a strong church paper edited by able men, and while this paper is called a general organ, yet because of its location it has of necessity been largely a Maryland paper and the Maryland Conference has been by far its greatest beneficiary.

For many years the Maryland Conference has had in her midst a first class Methodist Protestant college and for quite a number of years a Methodist Protestant Theological Seminary, and while both of these splendid institutions belong to the entire church, yet of necessity, as in the case of the church paper, the Maryland Conference has been and must continue to be the greatest if not the chief beneficiary,

Now

While we all rejoice in the progress the Maryland Conference has made, some of us are of the opinion that the time has come when there should be one general organ for the entire church, either by consolidating the Methodist Protestant and The Methodist Recorder, or by the institution of a new paper which shall become the general organ of the entire church.

And

Some of us in North Carolina are of the opinion that the time has come when the North Carolina Conference should go forward with the great work of establishing a denominational college in North Carolina. The bequest of $10,000 by the late and honored J. C. Roberts is available for this purpose until 1920, after that date it must be used for another cause. There was a time when this writer indulged the hope that his son might be among the first graduates of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant College. He no longer entertains that hope, as the son is now a Junior in a college of another denomination. but there are other Methodist Protestant boys who are not yet ready to enter college and it is due them and due our church that they be educated in a school of our own church and in our own state.

Let us not lose sight of, or faith in, the North Carolina College. We are able to build, equip, endow and maintain it and we cannot afford to do without it. "The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build." Nehemiah 2-20. W. F. Kennett.

WHAT WILL THE HARVEST BE?

We know that the wheat, oat and corn harvest has been gathered in, but the persimmon and acorn harvest has not been gathered yet. The wheat, oat, and corn harvest was limited in some sections, owing mainly to want of moisture in the soil. The acorn and persimmon crop seem to be more abundant, owing to the fact that tap root penetrated deeper into the soil for nourishment. So we can see by being deep rooted in the right soil the quantity and quality doth not suffer so much.

I have said something about things visible to the natural eye. Now I want to speak of that which we cannot see with our natural eye. We are ready, and many have assigned a reason, for the limited harvest of the perishing things of earth; how about the harvest of that which perishes not nor decays nor will ever be obliterated? That question should present itself to every human being. Which have I been most diligent, most earnest in cultivating? the perishing or the nonperishable? How oft we hear much said about that which will and must soon pass away and so little said about that which must live forever. Behold with what zeal, energy and earnest effort night and day do mankind strive to gather an abundant harvest of those things which as well as themselves are so soon to pass away, and spend so little time and attention to that which should engage their earnest thought? Another questian should press heavily on our hearts and minds more forcibly in the future than it has in the past. Upon which should we set our affections most, on earthly or heavenly? We are inhabitants of an earthly home, created by the wisdom and power of God for our temporal welfare not directly for our future happiness. And should we not use our mother earth and the blessings we derive from it to and for the glory and honor of so gracious a Donor? How can we better manifest our love to so liberal a Being better than to make a liberal use of the time and means that we are daily receiving from Him? Alas, how unmindful are many of us of the source from whence all things that are essential for our temporal welfare comes, and ofttimes attribute our success to our prudent and proper management, leaving God altogether out. How oft do we hear men say, I did so and so, I made thus and so, let others do or say what they will, I don't feel disposed to contribute so much of my hard earned money as some think I should to carry on the Lord's work, that He requires of us to carry on; that work which Christ quit the courts of heaven and came down to this sin-cursed earth to do for us deluded beings.

Some say, No, I believe it to be my chief duty to provide for me and mine and gather as much of this earth, and as much as I can get out of this old earth for me and mine. Seemingly unmindful of the fact that "me and mine" will have to be gathered in at harvest time; it is nearing, and it will not be long before some of us will be gathered up.

Oh, brother, how will it be with you and me? How have we been spending our time down here? How have we been using our God given time and means? For God's glory and honor or for our own aggrandizement? If so, how will it be at Harvest time? How have we been spending our time? Have we been sowing to the flesh in order when our days are numbered that it may be said of us, He left a big legacy for his children and when that day of separation up yonder comes it will be said to you that you sowed to the flesh down yonder, now you will have to reap what you were sowing for a home in hell. Oh, brother, will it not be better for us to be more liberal with the time and means placed at our disposal for the work of the Lord than to be so stingy and so slow in our efforts to be and do something for the honor and glory of God? We claim to be in the vineyard of the Lord: are we laborers or are we idlers? Shall we continue to sow to the flesh and make our bed in hell? For if we are not laying up treasures in heaven, we certainly are treasuring up for hell. We accept it as truth for the want of moisture in the soil the grain crop is short.

Evidently if our faith, love and obedience is not deeprooted in the heart of God. will we not soon begin to shrivel and decay when we begin to neglect our religious and Christian duties in striving to conform our lives to the will and word of God? How often do we hear it said, I have not time to attend to the meetings of the church—my crop needs my attention. I can't spare the time to attend quarterly meetings, I am too tired to go to Sunday school or to prayermeeting.

The fact is there are some people in those meetings I don't like. Brother, don't forget that you and I will be weighed in God's just balance soon. What profit will those sins of negligence and disobedience avail you then? What benefit will your earthly gain of those things that you failed to honor God with, be to you?

Oh, brother, don't let so many tares grow in your soul; if you do, what will the harvest be? T. R. T.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT IN SHOPPING.

In the last few years an increasing effort has been made, and happily not without some success, to induce Christmas shoppers to begin early. Again it is time to make the plea, in behalf of common sense and common charity. Let us not postpone our plans until the eleventh hour. Let us begin at once to put our lists into material form. Most of us do sincerely mean to make our gifts the expression of the Christmas spirit but we are a bit inconsistent in our methods. The Christmas spirit should not be saved up for December 25, but should begin its beneficent influence at once. It should not be limited to the recipients of our gifts, but should include our whole range of contact. If we would consider the shop girls from whom we make our purchases, as well as the friends on whom they are to be bestowed, the Christmas spirit would do a double work. And if our sympathy is extended one step further to the people who make and deliver the goods we buy, then indeed the significance of the season will permeate the whole offering. It is a cruel travesty upon the Christmas spirit to allow our celebration to be such a drag upon the multitude of men and women who stand behind the counters in December, worn out with long hours of overwork. And in our zeal to make the greatest number of gifts with the least outlay we are often unconsciously encouraging a system of cheap labor in unsanitary conditions among those whose hands fashioned our gifts.

Of course we all love the excitement of the last busy days—the crowded streets, the heaped-up counters, the littered homes. But what a tax upon human strength, upon Christian fortitude, upon the average brain! A concerted movement among sensible women might do much to ameliorate conditions. We can surely be more systematic and more considerate without losing any of the fun. We are always wishing that our purses were larger, so that we might take more presents in the line of charity. It is not the best expression of charity to be considerate of others—the people who make, the people who sell, and the people who deliver Christmas goods?—Congregationalist and Christian World.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS LAST SUNDAY.

Lincolnton, present, 56; collection, $1.64.
Mitchell's Grove, present, 40.

Christmas celebrates a simple event of world-wide import, which centuries cannot lessen. No one can tell the significance of the birth of any child, much less the value of Bethlehem's babe. Centuries pointed to his coming and centuries have proclaimed the "good tidings" to millions since. That manger scene has found its way not only into the New Testament, but into the art of the world and into the heart of mankind. The lullaby at the cradle of infancy, by Christian mothers for nineteen centuries, has been the echo of the song of the heavenly host over the Judean hills that night when the angel appeared to the shepherds. From that night until this, motherhood and children have come more and more into the light and love of mortals. That event changed the calendar of time, made a new era, and opened the world to progress. It has increased the world's joy, multiplied the world's industries, and quickened the activities of mankind. That simple story of that peasant babe has crept into every home in Christendom, flooded ever baby life with pleasure, and made midnight the dream of glad mornings; and it comes round every year with increasing splendor.

It would be futile to undertake the endless task of enumerating the additions which Christmas has made to labor, business, social happiness, and religious worship and service. Think of labor employed in the manufacture, transportation, and sale of "Christmas toys," to say nothing of fruits and candies, nuts and cakes, brought from all lands at Christmas time. Think of the crates and baskets, sacks and boxes, dainty cards and books, calendars and pictures that must be created, transported, and sold. Over this vast globe people have been busy for months, moving toward this one center that started in the manger. Think of the letters and papers, the postals and postage; the greetings and visits. See the crowded trains, the crowded stores, the busy hands and feet and brains at work, and all for Christmas! What would these busy millions be doing now, if there were no Christmas? I dare not answer. The thought is bewildering. The imagination tires in following the train of thought suggested by Christmas.

But that is not all. The preparation for home-coming of tired men from a years' toil, of children from the routine of school, of young mothers with their babies! The homestead glows with new fires and happy faces and silent hearts, tears of joy fill up the wrinkles of age, and the voice becomes resonant again with the overflow of glad emotions. Those family reunions are like angel visits to parental weariness, and likewise men coming to bow at the shrine of home. Nothing is too precious for such an occasion. That is involved in Christmas! Burdens of years fall away on such occasions and the memory of such seasons enriches experience. Banish Christmas! It would be easier to blot out the Judean hills that heard the angels sing, "Glory to God in th highest, on earth peace, good will to men."

Listen! The chimes peal forth the Christmas praise. The church doors swing open and the devout worshipers enter. The organ thunders, the choir lifts the voice, the temple is full of praise in grand anthem. Who built all those temples? Who wrote those anthems? Who built those great organs? The babe in Bethlehem inspired all this and more. The painter, the writer, the musician, the prayer, the sermon, all make us think of the "babe lying in a manger." Pull back the white linen and let us see that face never to be marred by sin! Let me hear once the beating of that heart never to be stained by an evil thought! Put the white linen back over that little face, for there is no other like it. Is that brow to be pierced by thorns? Nothing but sin could do that.

Who will dare make Christmas the occasion of revelery, dissipation, and rude voice? Who will forget the origin and significance of this great holiday? Who would rob childhood of its Santa Claus, the toiler of rest, the creditor of his due, and the worshipper of his quiet and communion with God? Adjourn Congress, shut down the mills, close the stores, silence the school bell, shut up the ledger, stop some of the trains, and open the heart. The stockings are on the wall, childhood sleeps. The house is still. Hark! the morning breaks and the music of bare feet and happy voices fills the world with joy. W. W. Staley.

"Many a Christian among the rich and the titled, who, as a less encumbered man might have been a resolute soldier of the cross; but he is now only a realization of the old pagan fable—a spiritual giant buried under a mountain of gold. Oh, many, many, such we meet in our higher classes, pining with a nameless want, pressed by a heavy sense of the weariness of existence, strengthless in the midst of affluence, and incapable even of tasting the profusion of comfort which is heaped around them."—F. W. Robertson.

—No paper next week! It is the printers' rest week.

METHODS AND RESULTS IN CHRISTIAN GIVING.

By President W. A. Harper.

The Revelator gives us just two classes of Churches with reference to Christian giving: the rich poor churches and the poor rich churches. The Church of the latter class is described for us in Rev- 3: 17-18: "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and have gotten riches, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art the wretched one and miserable and poor and blind and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me gold refined by fire that thou mayest become rich." This was a rich church, was the church at Laodicea, yet the wireless message from heaven declared it to be "wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked." Why? Because it was stingy in its gifts for the propagation of the kingdom. Have you ever seen a church like that?

The rich poor church is portrayed for us in Rev. 2.9-10: "I know thy tribulation, and thy poverty, (but thou art rich), and the blasphemy of them that say they are Jews and they are not, but are a synagogue of Satan——. Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." This fine compliment does the Spirit pay the church at Smyrna—poor, persecuted, blasphemed against, yet rich in sacrifice, monetary and personal, for the kingdom! May the number of such churches multiply and replenish the earth! But in order to this end, we must have definite plans and ends.

The good has been the enemy of the best too long in the financial administration of the kingdom. It is well and good to pay the preacher in full and to bring up our Conference apportionments, but it is better to have these matters attended to in a business-like way according to the Gospel plan. In the previous paper it was shown that the Biblical standard of giving was that our gifts should be systematic, participated in by all, and proportionate to our several ability. No system of Church finances which fails to accomplish all these ends can be said to be complete or even satisfactory. The good should come to be the enemy of the best. The end of giving is not to get the needful money primarily, but to develop in each the Christian graces consequent upon Christian giving. Let us keep this clearly before us in outlining our system of Church finances.

The first requirement of a sound financial policy is a budget of expenses. The church in open business session should consider what sum of money should be raised to meet all obligations during the year. We never lose anything by keeping the facts before the church. If the church votes upon itself such and such a burden in a financial way, it will be all the more likely to satisfy those burdens. Many churches seem afraid to give out in detail the financial burdens of the church. This is always a mistake. If you cannot trust your members with the facts, you certainly cannot hope for a ready and full response to your appeals for funds. Confidence begets loyalty and loyalty leads to liberality. The people must have the facts. A budget is necessary.

In the second place there should be a personal convass of the congregation by a committee charged with that duty, and each one should be given the opportunity to say what amount he will subscribe weekly to each item of expense included in the annual budget and to designate whether he will pay this weekly, monthly, quarterly, or yearly and whether he will pay it to the treasurer in person or through envelope on the regular meeting days. If the envelope system is used, it will be necessary to provide each member with envelopes and a neatly printed card on which he may designate the items covered by the money in the envelope and also the total amount included in it. The Duplex Envelope System, Richmond, Va., is perhaps the best general system on the market, samples of which may be had for the asking.

In the third place our church treasurers ought to be more business-like in their system of accounting for moneys paid to them than they are. I think they should issue receipts, preserving stubs, for every penny they receive. It would be far better for them to keep carbon duplicates of their receipts than to keep stubs, using some of the many devices employed in department stores today. A separate account should be opened in a ledger with every contributing member and there should be a cash book, showing cash items under head of receipts and of disbursements. For his own protection, the treasurer should insist that the secretary count over with him all the money from the public offerings and check with him all money on subscriptions received by the envelope paymnet plan and the proper receipts should be issued in the secretary's presence, receipt for money given aside from the regular subscription plan being issued to secretary, with whom for this purpose an account should be opened in the ledger. Furthermore the treasurer should pay out money only on the order of the Church, taking receipt for each payment. I have known many churches to be rent asunder, especially when repairs or other constructive work was in progress, because of a little lack of business methods. The treasurer and the church will both be in far better condition by reason of business-likeness in handling the Church finances. These principles apply as much to treasurers of Sunday- schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, Organized Classes, Ladies Aid Societies, and so on, as to church treasurers. No man who handles church money should be satisfied with a less business-like system of accounting than that exacted in the world of business round about him. The ambition of every financial officer in the church and its auxiliaries should be the avoidance of even the possibility of suspicion or of criticism.

Another hard problem to solve in connection with systematic, individual, proportionate giving—that is to say, according to the Christian standard, is arranging for gifts for children. But there are many ways to settle this matter. In every case the child should make his individual subscription and should pay it from his individual income. That means that the heads of families must institute some plan by which their children shall earn money, more money than the subscription in each case calls for, else the gift cannot be proportionate. From the very first the child should be encouraged to subscribe the tenth of his income, and also to save the other nine-tenths. This will teach him liberality and also parsimony, terms by no means contradictory or paradoxical in the Christian sense. Parents should, of course, provide plans for the children to earn the money, such as work in the yard, chopping wood, doing chores, running errands, and so on. This will be real training up of our children in the way that they should go and I am sure that when they are old they will not depart from it. We need more such training.

Many times during our investigation of the theme of these papers reference has been made to the Christian graces consequent upon giving—the reaction of the gift on the giver. Action is always equal to re-action in the physical world. There is no doubt that the same principle holds good in the spiritual world. The spirit of sacrifice, which is the spirit of giving, always has a benign effect upon the one practicing it, expands his soul, enlarges his spiritual horizon.

The first good that comes of Christian giving is the liberalizing tendency it has on the life and conduct and the attitude toward all the issues of living of the giver. Strictly speaking we ought not to speak of money for the church and its enterprises as a gift, for we are stewards and are but rendering our due account. We owe God the tenth and it is as real a debt and just as obligatory as a grocery or fertilizer bill. Until we have paid more than the tenth, we are simply paying our debts to our Maker. What we pay over the tenth, we might with more show at justification regard as a gift, but not even then in the strict mundane sense of the word. But whether we regard money invested in the Lord's work as a gift or not, the effect of the investment is unmistakeable of the investor. It liberalizes his views, his life, his conduct. You cannot be liberal in one department of life and illiberal in another. Liberality is as the yeast which the woman hid in three measures of meal, it leavens the whole lump, the entire man. Not only does the Lord love the cheerful giver, but everybody else does, has to, because liberality of life, consquent upon liberality of purse, is a magnetic, lovable quality in any man.

Giving also enlarges the vision. Our vision is largely determined as to its extent and quality by our gifts. He who gives only to local enterprises has only a local vision. He who includes in the sweep of his generosity the ends of the earth will have a horizon that is world-wide. I know nothing that will cure muck-raking and expand narrow hearts so easily as giving to missions, foreign missions in particular. A man may give to his local church or even to home missions by reason of a certain sort of refined selfishness, but when he gives to foreign missions, it is because of his love for the down trodden. His vision is accordingly broadened and widened and enlarged.

Giving also gives us joy in our possessions. How many rich men have we known or heard of who were unhappy! Wealth is not always a synonym for happiness, contentment, peaece of mind. The surest way to enjoy the prosperity God grants us is to give some of it to make someone else happy and to spread His kingdom. "We enjoy our candy so much better when we share it with our playmates," said two little sisters to their mother. "Yes," said their mother, "it is more blessed to give than to receive good things." How much more our nine-tenths would mean to us, were we to give the other tenth to bringing joy and peace and sunshine into other lives than our own!

It makes us Christ-like. The life of Christ centres around the cross. His was the sacrificial life, the life lived for others. A good man said to me the other day that he loved to give to religious causes, because Christ had given so much for him. This is the proper, the Christ-like spirit. If we give from proper motives, we shall become Christ-like in spirit. We can never give so much to His cause as He gave for us, but we can give as He has prospered us, and rest satisfied in the assurance that we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.

It will lay up for us treasures in heaven. It is sometimes said that man comes into the world destitute of material things and that he must leave all his possessions of earthly character behind him when he departs for the other world. I deny that as a necessary fact in human life. Many men do necessarily leave all their earthly possessions in this world when they die—they are low-visioned, selfish, stingy souls of earth, but others give their material possessions here an eternal value by investing them in doing God service and in uplifting man. The only money we can carry to heaven with us is that which we give away for Christian ends, dedicate to God's service. It becomes treasure laid up in heaven for us. How large, my brother, is your bank account in heaven?

FIFTY THOUSAND—NOT DOLLARS, BUT SOULS.

By Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D. D.

I am quite sure that every one in our beloved Church would like to see every cause of the Church well supported, and every appeal for money met with liberal response. I feel, too, that the entire Church will be glad to see an appeal which is not for money, but for the salvation of souls. With the hearty approval of the Assembly's entire committee, we sent out through the Church papers an appeal that our Church work and pray for at least fifty thousands additions on profession of faith for the year ending Mar. 31, 1912. This is to renew the appeal, and to make the following suggestions, which may be carried out by all of our churches and their entire membership.

1. Pray—A popular English poet said: "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." "Pray without ceasing."

2. Invite and lead others to Christ. "Let him that heaerth say come."

3. Seek the convicting, converting, comforting and consecrating power of the Holy Ghost. "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

4. Proclaim and preach the Gospel. "It has pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." "The Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth."

5. Let each and everyone engage in personal work. "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the Word of my mouth, and give them warning from me. When I say unto the wicked, thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning, nor speaketh to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul."

6. Co-operate with all the efforts of the Church. For this is the philosophy of all things—"Christ is head over all things to the Church, which is His body."

7. Evangelistic—We wish especially to suggest that evangelistic possibilities. (a) Every Home Mission field could have a series of meetings conducted by the pastor, the Presbyterial Evangelist, or a visiting minister. This was done this summer by some of our Presbyteries, with splendid results. One Presbytery reported one hundred and fifty thousand, another one, one hundred additions, by this special work.

(b) Each self-supporting church could hold a series of meetings. If the pastor wished a helper, he could invite some evangelist, or evangelistic pastor to do the preaching. Our committee has arranged such meetings, and is always glad to do so for any church desiring its help.

(c) Promote a union evangelistic service in your community. If there is no sensationalism, and there are no objectionable methods used, a union meeting is generally best. It gives so many more people to work and sing and pray. It makes possible to reach so many more souls for Christ. It gives a spiritual atmosphere in which to work, because one church isn't having a concert or a sale, while another is trying to win souls. The workers can do as much good for eight or ten churches with the same time and effort as for one, and even more, for in unity there is not only strength, but inspiration also. "One shall chase a thousand: two shall put ten thousand to flight." When the mind and the heart and effort of the entire community are concentrated on the work of soul-saving, it is much easier to get the non-church people out to the service. It removes the church critic's excuse, "That churches are fighting one another, instead of loving and co-operating with each other."

If every minister, officer and lay-member of our great Church will make "soul-saving" the primary object of their lives from now to March 31, 1912, it seems to me that we might expect the fifty thousand to be saved and brought into the Church, and find a reflex influence that would help every cause of our Church, and bring to our own souls a deeper joy and sweeter peace than we have ever experienced—In Presbyterian Standard.

From Pastors and People.

Richland Ct.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Giles' Chapel Saturday before Dec. 30, 1911. President Swain will preach at 11 A. M., business meeting in afternoon.

Good and attentive congregations at Giles' Chapel and Cedar Falls. We are hoping, planning, praying for a progressive and prosperous year.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Forsyth Ct.

Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Pleasant Hill Saturday before the fifth Sunday at 1 o'clock, Dec. 30th, 1911. The official members are requested to be present. Yours in the work,

T. A. Williams.

Littleton Ct.—Notice.

The first quarterly conference of Little ton Ct. will meet at Corinth Church on Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in January, 1912. All the official members are urged to be present. Let us begin early and work together.

Fraternally, J. A. Ledbetter.

Dec. 13, 1911.

Tabernacle Ct.

Remember our first quarterly conference will be held at Tabernacle on Saturday before the first Sunday in January, 1912. All officials are earnestly requested to be present. Preaching at 11 A. M. The people in Tabernacle community are requested to be present with dinner, and as I had to miss the 3rd Sunday appointment this will make up for it. Come one, come all—to transact the business of the circuit. Truly,

C. A. C.

Caroleen.

Dear Brother McCuloch:

I will let you hear from the Caroleen work. We have been well received by the good people on this work. We have as loyal people to serve as there is in Conference. This Ct. will be second to no circuit in Conference if nothing happens. We are now self-supporting and one year ago it was one of the weakest works in Conference.

We had 135 in Sunday school at Caroleen last Sunday; 79 at Shelby. We hope to have a good Sunday school at each church by spring. We now have a school at each church, but we are trying to improve them.

We want you all to keep your eyes on us and see if we grow any.

Yours fraternally,

H. W. Braswell.

Mocksville Ct.

The first quarterly meeting of this charge is appointed to be held at Bethel on Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in January, 1912, at 11 A. M.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Brown Summit Church.

We held our first quarterly conference at St. Paul Friday night, Dec. 15th. The business was all done in a spirit of love. I want to thank the good brethren of St. Paul for the hearty welcome shown us. We are all pleased to have Bro. G. F. Millaway for our pastor next year. The appointment for Brown Summit will be on the fourth Sunday in each month at eleven A. M.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We are having a very good attendance.

W. H. Chilcutt, Reporter.

Winston-Salem.

Our reporter, Miss Rosa Reynolds, is sales lady in one of our largest dry goods establishments and while the Christmas rush is on she has no time for other duties; hence her reqeust that we report for her this week. Her arduous labors for her church know no abatement, however, and yesterday when a fine congregation assembled to hear our new pastor, as the voluntary was being rendered so beautifully her fine voice, so rich and full, soared heavenward and as we listened at its tender pathos we thought of the glittering crown that we believe is being prepared in heaven for that fair brow when her work is ended below, and we offer this tribute now to her excellence and not wait until that kind heart is stillled in death before we show her any appreciation of her worth.

She is planning a sweet surprise for others of which the Herald will be apprised later.

Bro. Taylor preached his first sermon to an attentive audience; it was an excellent sermon in which he plainly set forth what he would try to do for us and he expected of us. His prayer for the retiring pastor was truly beautiful and touching, and we are looking forward hopefully. Brother Taylor's household goods have not yet arrived, but we learn that Mrs. Millaway had the parsonage thoroughly cleaned before leaving it, and it is now ready for occupancy, and we wish for our young pastor and his excellent wife a happy and profitable stay in our midst.

A Member.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.

We regret exceedingly that Conference removed our beloved pastor and wife from us, however, we consider ourselves fortunate in having him with us two years. We have heard him preach many sermons that have helped to cheer our souls along the way. And we wish him much success in his new field of work. Our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, filled his first appointment at Flat Rock Sunday, A. M. at 11 o'clock. He gave us a helpful and instructive sermon; the subject was: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." What a beautiful thought! And how many Christians can stand up and say, I am not ashamed of Christ? If we live as God would have us live, doing the things that are most pleasing to Him, we have no need to be ashamed of Him. I feel safe in saying we are fortunate in getting another one of the best preachers in the N. C. Conference. Many times during Conference did I hear this expression that if you get Rev. J. A. Burgess on Vance Circuit you will have one of the best preachers in the Conference and since hearing him preach I am almost tempted to say we have the best, but for fear I might hurt the feelings of some of our good M. P. preachers I will say we have one of the best. We enjoyed the Annual Conference which met in Henderson this time. It was good to be there, and shake hands with all former pastors and meet so many of our friends. Since attending Conference I look forward to the coming of the "Herald" with more interest than ever before. Since meeting so many of our reporters at Conference, I enjoy reading after people I know. So we feel that Conference did us good in many ways. I was indeed glad to meet Miss Auman, matron of the Orphanage, whom I had read of so often, and one whom I felt interested in. What a care and responsibility she has taken upon her young life! Let us do our best in trying to make her burden light.

The 1st quarterly conference will be held at Harris' Chapel Saturday before the second Sunday in Jan., at 10 o'clock. Let all official members be present.

We were glad to have Rev. J. A. Ledbetter spend last Friday night in our home. He was on his way to Littleton, traveling through the country. Since traveling two days in the rain, guess he feels more like a Baptist preacher than an M. P.

This is the last report for the year 1911, but let us endeavor to make the year 1912 the best year of our lives. Let us co-operate with our pastor and I feel that great good will be accomplished on Vance Ct. Josie Reavis, Rep.

Henderson, N. C., R. F. D. 3, Dec. 18.

Concord.

Bro. Lindley filled his reglar appointment last Sunday; he gave us two excellent sermons. He preached at Fairview at 3 o'clock.

Our Sunday school was good Sunday; 153 present, 4 new scholars and 4 visitors. A special collection was taken in the S. S. for the Xmas treat which amounted to $18.76. We have planned to have our Xmas tree on next Saturday night at 7:30; hope the service will be rendered well.

Our prayer meetings on Wednesday night are also well attended. Bro. Lindley and others always have good and interesting talks to give us which we enjoy and are always a help to us.

Wil close with best wishes for "a merry Xmas" to all Herald readers.

Reporter.

Bethel, Alamance Ct.

We are pleased to have Rev. W. M. Pike remain with us another year. He has been our faithfud pastor for three years and as he enters upon his fourth year's work among us he has the highest esteem and hearty co-operation of the Bethel people. He filled his regular appointment at Bethel Sunday and preached a very interesting and instructive sermon on the Sin of Unbelief.

Our Sunday School will elect new officers next Sunday and will continue through the winter months.

Miss Auman made a slight mistake in reporting the box sent from Bethel. The money was not sent by the Philathea Class, but by the W. F. M. S. and some others, members of Bethel Church who helped both in our collection and articles contained in the box. Bethel school is progressing nicely under the management of Prof. L. M. Foust and sister, Miss Lizabel.

We were pleased to see one of our former teachers, Miss Lalah Stallings at Bethel Sunday. She, Miss Mary Thompson, and Rev. W. M. Pike were pleasant visitor at the home of Mr. J. M. Foust after service. Mr. Robt. Thompson and family visited the family of Mr. A. L. Foust.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. W. A. Foust last fourth Sunday. Next meeting to be held Friday evening after Christmas, at 2:30 at the home of Mrs J. M. Foust. Every one invited to attend.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was a great day in our Sunday school. There were 183 present and the offering amounted to $17.05. It was the time for the regular semi-annual election of officers. The new officers are as follows: Supt., Rev. R. M. Andrews; Asst. Supt., G. L. Amick; Secretary, Chas. B. Way; Asst. Sec., Miss Dallie McPherson; organist, Mr. Walter Thomas; Asst. organist, Miss Flossie Loy; Librarian, Miss Agnes Heritage; Asst. Librarian, Miss Evie Lamb; Supt. Home Department, J. H. Boon; Asst. Supt. Home Dept., J. L. Thornburg; Sec. Home Dept., T. T. Stafford; Supt. Cradle Roll, Mrs. J. G. Rogers.

Bro. J. G. Rogers, who has been our Supt. for five years, declined to serve any longer. He has certainly been faithful to every duty imposed upon him and has done a vast amount of good for our school. Under his leadership the school has grown from an average attendance of 125 to the present average of 200. New plans for the betterment of the school have been tried and some of them have worked well. The school regrets to give up Bro. Rogers as Supt., but we believe that in Bro. Andrews we have another who will push the work forward, and we trust that he will have the hearty co-operation of every member of the school.

When we were through with the election of officers, we had the pleasure of hearing Mr. J. Van Carter, the Field Secretary of the State S. S. Association, for a few minutes. We believe ours and the other schools should adopt the motto which he gave us: "Every member present every Sunday, on time, with his own Bible." We think, with this motto and our new superintendent, that High Point will have to work if they expect to continue to say they "have the largest and best," etc.

Bro. Davis gave us another excellent sermon at the morning service Sunday. No service was held at night owing to the fact that the Township S. S. Convention was in session at the Christian Church.

Our Christmas exercise will be on next Sunday evening at 7:30. It will consist of songs, recitations, etc, by the children. On Monday night we will have a "Country Store." All during the year we have been giving out coupons which will be redeemed at the country store for gifts, treats, etc.

Chas. B. Way, Secretary of our S. S., and brother, Mr. W. T. Way, will leave Friday for Randolph to spend Christmas. Lots more of our people will be visiting, but these are all we know of at present.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Dec. 20, 1911.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

Since Conference the people at both churches have been hard at work at various good things. The congregations at preaching and prayer meeting services have been good. The Sunday school attendance has been improving. The Graham Sunday school is hard at work preparing a Christmas service. A special service like this always causes our children to show special interest and attend better. They are certainly showing themselves as little people who "have a mind to work."

About 36 of the Haw River people visited us on the night of Dec. 1, and brought with them quite a donation. The party was led by Bro. George Cates of the Baptist church. After they had left their supplies in our dining room the crowd gathered around Bro. Cates while he read from the Word and then offered a sweet prayer. After the party had gone we found they had brought us many good things, too many to mention. May God bless everyone who came. We appreciate the things they brought, but most of all we appreciate that which prompted them to this kind action.

Among the sick ones is little Miss Eunice Rich. She is one of our brightest. She will be missed in the Christmas exercises. We trust she will soon be well again.

101 at Graham Sunday school last Sunday. Geo. L. Curry.

Concord.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Concord on Saturday night before the second Sunday in January.

Pastor.

Thanksgiving Services at Hope Church.

Thursday (Thanksgiving day) was red letter day in the history of Hope Methodist Protestant Church. A large congregation gathered there and beginning at ten o'clock was held one of the very best Thanksgiving services ever held at Bonlee. It was one of the occasions where the Spirit of God was manifest on every side. At ten A. M. services were opened with songs, and prayer by various ones.

Next was an announcement of the occasion by that genial and consecrated Christian gentleman, Mr. I. H. Dunlap. Following this were several recitations by the children of the Sabbath school, which were by far the grandest the writer has ever had the privilege of listening to. The children were at their best and made a a lasting impression on the large audience. Truly the Spirit of God was in their souls and many were the eyes that were bedimmed with tears at the conclusion of their recitations and songs. A pleasing feature of the exercises was the presenting of a Testament to each child who participated in the exercises by C. E. Kinnaman, Superintendent of the Sabbath school. The speech of acceptance was made by Mr. I. H. Dunlap with appropriate words and great feeling. An oration by Mr. Simmons Phillips, entieled, "Home and Mother," was well delivered.

At noon a great Thanksgiving sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Bowman. After this Mr. I. H. Dunlap presented to every man, woman and child in the church a small Testament. Each one present was also treated to fruits, such as apples, oranges, etc., by the Sabbath school.

A nice collection was taken for the orphans. Everyone went away well pleased with the service, full of Thanksgiving and trusting that God in His goodness might spare them to spend many such days of joy and gladness.—X. Y. Z., in Siler City Grit.

TO PASTORS.

After the second week in May I will be free to aid in revival meetings. Those desiring my service will please address me at Westminster, Md.

Linley W. Gerringer.

Mrs. Plunkett's Death and Funeral.—Very sad because of its unexpectedness was the death of Mrs. Andrew Plunkett. She came to Greensboro apparently in her usual health last Thursday morning. While in Blackmon's store shopping, she had an attack that was supposed to be only a faiting. She was taken to her daughter's room in South Greensboro where she was attended by physicians and friends, and at bedtime seemed to be recovering. But her malady was indeed worse than it seemed. In the night, a terrible pain in her head caused her to speak to her daughter, who hastened to call others. But before anything could be done, she breathed her last, and the husband and eight children were suddenly bereft of their best friend on earth. One son (George) was in the far West and could not be located for a day or two. Another son, Dr. Plunkett of Lynchburg, came on the first train. Roy, a third son away at school, was called by telephone. When he heard the shocking news that "mother is dead," he dropped the receiver and could not hear more. He came home on Friday night. The funeral was at Moriah Sunday, in the presence of the largest congregation the pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, said he had ever seen there. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. D. Andrew, of Burlington, who was an early associate of the deceased in Sunday-school and church, both uniting with the church the same day. It was touching to see the grief striceken family taking the last look at the face of wife and mother. But for the hope Christ has awakened, how inconsolable would men be in such a case! But Christ has gone the death way Himself, and has taught us that it may lead to life unending and joy unbroken. Those left by Mrs. Plunkett have the assurance of meeting her to part no more if they follow in her steps. She was spoken of by those who knew her as a fine character.

Denton High School.

I am glad to announce that Prof. T. O. Pender will have charge of the school here this spring. Prof. Pender is better known to members of our church as a teacher of music than a literary teacher, yet he is fully prepared to work in either capacity. He is a graduate of the music school at Dayton, Va., and has completed in part the literary course at our State University. He is well prepared for his work here and we believe will do much good. Spring term opens Jan. 2, 1912, and the outlook for a large attendance is good.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

A Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank Bro. R. E. Briggs for the lead he took in securing from the members of Forsyth Charge the amount of $16.10 towards purchasing a suit of clothes for the writer. I wish to thank all who helped in this, and especially Bro. Briggs for the time he took from his work to secure that amount. May God bless the leader and the donors.

Sincerely. T. A. Williams.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil conducted the funeral of Mr. Ashley Foard at Moriah on Monday. He was more than eighty years old. Mrs. Shepherd, an aged lady of the same community, was buried one day last week.

—Mr. James Plott and Miss Dena Lefter were united in marriage, at the M. P. Parsonage in Concord on Dec. 13th, 1911, Rev. A. Oscar Lindley officiating.

Marriage Announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Kime have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter Rebekah Joy to Mr. Homer Benton on Thursday, the fourteenth of December, one thousand, nine hundred and eleven, at Burlington, North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Benton will be at home after Jan. 10, in Statesville, N. C.

Another.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher V. Hardin announce the marriage of their daughter, Maud, to Mr. J. Frank Spencer, on Wednesday, Dec. 13, 1911, Pleasant Garden, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer will reside at Pee Dee, N. C.

—Revs. Jesse Pritchard and Lindley Gerringer and Messrs. Raleigh Hunter and Roy Millikan, and Miss Bessie Ogburn are home from Westminster for the holidays. We will be glad to have the services of Mr. Hunter as linotype operator in our office part of the time. We ask the attention of pastors to what Bro. Gerringer says in another place in this issue.

—We were pleased to have a call recently from Mr. James Irwin, of Bellevue, Pa. He was formerly a student in Adrian College, and is now a traveling salesman. This is his second trip south. His first brought fifty thousand dollars worth of business to his firm, and they sent him again. He sells metal for ceiling, cornice, etc.

—The Durham Sun is in the hand of a receiver, but will still be published.

—The battleship Maine was destroyed by a cause external to itself is the final decision.

—We have received from our friend Rev. J. F. Cowan, now living and preaching and writing in Hawaii, the following, which pleases us in several ways:

Hawaii's Green Christmas.

Sea-green, pea-green, grassygreen the tufting cane;
Deep-green the wiry spears or the Ironwood Lane
Sunshine liquid, golden, irradiates the palms:
Bird & bee & murmuring tree sing a Christmas psalm.
Frostless, snowless, blizzardless, sunny Christmas air;
Southern, soft, and langourous wind wooes Hawaii fair,
As it blessed the Baby's brow lying very still,
At the Inn of Bethlehem, mid Judean hills.

The Manse, Kohala, Hawaii.

WHAT JULIE TAUGHT THE TEACHER.

If anyone had told Julie that the new teacher was going to learn more from her than Julie was from the new teacher. wouldn't she have opened her eyes? It was true all the same, and this is the way it happened. When Miss Field tied on her veil, just before starting for school that fine morning, she said to herself: "What is the use of trying to be anybody? My hair is thin, may face is sallow, and these glasses are so unbecoming. This world has no use for plain people like me."

As Miss Field shook hands with her new scholars that morning she knew that they were scanning her from head to foot and probably comparing her unfavorably with their last teacher. She was discouraged, and, then what would have become of her, I wonder?

Now Julie was a very plain little girl. Her hair was thin, like Miss Field's, and she wore glasses, too; and although her face wasn't sallow, it was dreadfully freckled. When she came tripping into school after the gong was sounded, Miss Field though she was as plain-looking a child as she had ever seen.

Of course neither Julie nor Miss Field knew that Julie was to teach a very important lesson that day. Nevertheless, Julie began at once just as if she knew she had to do it, and Miss Field began at once to learn it.

First, when Julie came into the room she began to show a great interest in everything around her. Her jolly little round eyes behind the glasses darted hither and thither, taking in the new teacher: the new globe on the platform; Mary McPherson's new dress, which was piped with red; and the new scholar, a pretty girl whose looks seems to delight Julie very much. Many other things interested her, and every once in a while Miss Field's eyes would rove around to where Julie sat, and she couldn't help smiling at her. "That child isn't troubling herself about her plain face," said Miss Field to herself. You see the new teacher had already begun to learn the lesson that Julie was teaching her.

By and by Mis Field began to examine the pupils on their last term's work. Julie took the liveliest interest in the questions. She watched the children's faces while they were answering and listened to every word they said, just as if their success or failure was a matter of vital importance to her. Her eyes lighted with satisfaction when the answers were correct; and when they were wrong, her disappointment was quite decided.

"Well, well!" said Miss Field to herself. "That child is as interested in each question as if it were her own. What an unselfish little creature she must be!"

After this speech you may be sure that Julie's success as a teacher was assured.

At recess time Miss Field went down to the playgrond to watch the children play, and there everybody was inquiring for Julie.

"Come and play with me, Julie."

"Julie, isn't this the way to play 'flumpy?'"

"Julie, I want to tell you a secret."

"Julie, will you have a piece of my apple?"

Miss Field heard remarks like these on every side, and Julie was here, there and everywhere.

"Dear me!" said Miss Field to herself "How the children do like Julie! It seems to me that looks don't count in her case"

You see the new teacher was progressing.

At noon, when Miss Field was putting on her things to go home, she saw that there was trouble on the play-ground. The children were gathered around the pretty new girl, who was talking very fast. "I don't want to play with Julie," Miss Field heard her say. "I don't like her; she wears glasses and has lots of freckles."

"There!" said Miss Field to herself. "Now here's trouble for Julie. She's got to reckon with her freckles. It's just as I said this morning: the world has no use for plain people."

"I don't think we know how to play the game without Julie," said Mary McPherson.

"I don't care. I wouldn't be seen playing with her," declared the pretty little girl.

"She isn't pretty," acknowledged Jane Butler.

"I never saw such freckles," said Bessie Conant.

"Nor I," agreed Nellie Davis.

"Nor I."

"Nor I."

It seemed now as if everybody was turning against Julie. Miss Field was going to take her part when she saw her bounding across the yard. "Come," cried Julie, "we'll play the new game. It's lot's of fun."

The children made no move to begin. Julie stopped short. "What's the matter?" she asked eagerly.

The children looked at the pretty new girl. "She doesn't want to play with you." spoke up Jane Butler.

"Why not?" inquired Julie.

Before Miss Field could speak, some child blurted out the truth. "For shame!" cried Miss Field, starting toward the group of girls; but she stopped before she had taken two steps, for she saw that Julie was equal to the occasion.

"Dear me!" cried Julie. "I thought something awful had happened. Why," she exclaimed, turning to the pretty new girl, "what does it matter about freckles and glasses and things as long as I know how to play the game? Come on."

Julie laughed and danced away and the children followed, every one of them, even to the pretty new girl.

Miss Field stood for a moment and watched the children. A big tear had gathered in each one of her eyes, yet her face was shining. "Dear little teacher!" she said softly. "She knows how to play the game, and so her looks don't count. Now I'm going to try Julie's way. Indeed I will."

When the new teacher got back to her boarding house, she began to "play the game." She greeted all the other inmates with the pleasantest smile. She took an interest in everything they said and did, and she told them about Julie, although, of course, she didn't mention any names. Happy tears came into her eyes as she talked; and after she had gone back to school, the boarders got together and decided that the new teacher was lovely. Wasn't Julie a nice little teacher?—Messenger for the Children.

NOTES.

—President Swain is in with mumps.

—The Portuguese seem to be very inflammable. Two Chinese women in Lisbon claimed to work miraculous cures and the people were flocking to them. The authorities put the women in an automobile and hurried them out of the country whereupon the cry arose, "Down with the Republic."

—The business of the American Warehouse Co., of Spray, N. C., has been placed in the hands of a receiver. Mr. J. L. Clement. This is said to be the result of a factional fight among stock holders, J. P. Morgan heading one faction and the Marshall Field Co., of Chicago, another.

—Steel cars are not a sure protection in a collision. In a recent wreck in Minnesota in which ten people were killed and a score or more injured, the diner sheared the upper portion of the sleeper from the floor as if it had been cardboard.

—The Wabash railroad is in the hands of a receiver on application of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. This is one of the Gould roads.

—The following post offices in N. C. have been advanced from the fourth to the presidential class: Elon College, Fairmont, Littleton, Mt. Gilead, and Mt. Holly.

A SURE CURE.

A friend of mine who had always suffered terribly from fear of storms was determined that her children should not be afraid. She would express delight and her children believe that she reveled in thunder and lightning, wind and rain. And now—she is really no longer afraid and watches the fiercest manifestations of nature with inward calm. She might have reasoned with herself and never conquered her fear. It was acting fearlessly that made her so.

In adjustment to life there is no more useful philosophy for women than directing primary effort to right acting rather than to conquering our emotions. Temperament and environment tend to make us care too much about how we feel and too prone to dwell on our inner states. A man goes to his work and forgets his mood. A woman stays at home and wrestles with hers. Often in spite of good intention she makes it worse. If instead of this vain struggle with a spiritual condition the will is directed to doing something, the state of mind is conquered.

If instead of saying, "I must not get the blues; I have no reason to complain; I must be cheerful," and so on, we say, "I need the sun; I am going for a walk," and go, the victory is won. Once out of doors, the heavy, oppressive sense disappears of itself; little things that seemed large assume their true relation. We are happy again. We have given nature a chance. The earth, the sun, the air heal and soothe, and the healthy, cheerful bodily action and environment restore the cheerfulness of spirit which was unmoved by argument. Great sorrows and serious ills are subject to the same laws as lesser troubles. Always the best cure for abnormal thought and subnormal feeling is healthy action, absorbing occupation.—Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, in Philadelphia Bullentin.

NO CHRIST, NO CHRISTMAS.

The two are inseparable. The babe Christ wields as much influence as the man Christ. Grown people, as well as children, are peculiarly touched by infant life; so Jesus the babe appeals to all. The story of the stable and manger never gets old; does not lose its interest nor power. The company around that ancient manger will be larger this Christmas than ever before. Not only will there be "wise men from the east," but they will come from every clime, and lay at His feet the best their country can give. This army of wise men and "shepherds" is causing "the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ," slowly, but surely. No wonder that "Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart," for she was standing with her babe in the center of the world's real existence. What a blessing to be such a mother!

"Christmas," how much it means! what holy memories cluster around it!

—Henry Crompton, in C. Vanguard.

THE GREATER VISION.

Recently so rare a privilege was accorded me that I would like to tell you something about it. I went as a delegate from the Christian Biblical Institute to a Convention of Seminary Students and Professors held at Oberlin College. The visit to the college was of itself the occasion of no small amount of pleasure. Oberlin is one of the largest as well as one of the oldest and most influential colleges of this section. It is in the center of a typical college town and scarcely has one alighted from the train ere he catches the spirit that seems to pervade everything there. He feels instinctively that he has left behind the rush and hustle of commerce and industry. There is a spirit of quietude, dignity, and scholarship that seems to rest upon everything; making one feel that it is an unusual opportunity to come in contact with the life of the professors and students of such an institution. Especially striking was the inpression made by the chapel service our Convention was permitted to attend. We were seated back of the choir where we could command an entire view of the great auditorium and look into the faces of the student body. Mr. John R. Mott addressed the students, the great burden of his message being a plea to those young men and women to consecrate their lives, no matter where their paths should lie, to the promotion of Christ's kingdom among men and the pulling down of all those things that debase men; in their places to plant those things that ennoble and uplift. And as we saw that company, two thousand strong, representing the flower of American youth hanging upon every word and applauding every sentiment, we felt that the coming of His kingdom would be hastened by that service

But I must pass on to the work of the Convention and the things it emphasized. Its purpose was to discuss the problems that face the Church today, and to find if possible what the seminaries can and should do to meet and solve those problems. The Convention was informal. There were no set speeches or speakers. A syllabus of the questions and problems to be discussed had been prepared, and those interested and best informed on the subjects led the discussions and every one gave his mite. One of the striking things of the Convention was the spirit of unity and brotherly love that ruled all the discussions. Had you been there you would have thought it a meeting of one harmonious denomination or as was generally the case you would have forgotten all about denominational lines. And it came as a surprise to all when we were told at the close of the Convention that it was representative of twenty-seven schools of theology and eighteen separate and distinct denominations.

One of the great questions discussed was how to meet the dearth of candidates for the ministry? "How to win strong men for the Christian ministry?" was the way it was expressed. The difficulties of pastoral work, the small salaries, etc., were passed over rapidly. These were held by one speaker in the same light that I remember Dr. Staley to have presented them once, as the things that keep out the fellows looking for the easy places and money making opportunities. It was the universal opinion that the situation was to be met only by appeals to the "pure, high and large motives that cannot be exhausted;" that ministers should avoid the apologetic attitude and to so magnify their calling as to win the enthusiastic admiration of able men; that ministers should hold up the fact to young men that the ministry offers the greatest opportunities for social service, and that it calls for the strongest and best in men.

An then there was the discussion of the Mission Work. In this Mr. Mott led and gave us an idea of missions never to be forgotten. He is without doubt one of the best informed and most influential men in the missionary world. He has traveled the world over in his study of the various phases of the work and whatever he says or does is in the light of the world-idea. As he talked to us the line of demarcation between home and foreign missions faded away, and we also were lifted to the world view.

China, Japan, Africa, and in fact all that we know as the foreign field was so portrayed that the miles of sea and land that divide us faded away and all nations became our neighbors and all men our brothers. Our duty with reference to missions caught a new meaning and a new glory as he presented it.

There were many soul-stirring messages that I would like to be able to present, but I fear my letter is too long already.

I cannot, however, close without speaking of the closing message that came from Dr. Ross, of Montreal, Canada. He spoke from the words of Paul, "Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?" From these he presented the necessity of the Christ vision, holding up the Christ as the one great power of righteousness and peace, the giver of eternal law of love and the second coming of whom is to mark the consummation of the ages.

In every particular it was a meeting fraught with a prophecy of the greater mission the Church of tomorrow is to fulfill. Stanley C. Harrell.

Defiance, Ohio.

HINDU PLANT AND ANIMAL WORSHIP.

By Elizabeth M. Benthien, On Furlough From Bangalore, India.

The Tulsi.

Among the 330,000,000 devas or divine beings that the Hindus recognize are some interesting plants and animals. One of the especially sacred plants is the tulsi (Ocimum sanctum of the Labiate family) resembling the basil plant of Europe which in Italy and Greece was credited with strange occult properties.

There are several stories regarding the origin of the sanctity of the tulsi. One says it is the product of the churning of the ocean. Another one in the Padma Purana tells us that it sprang from a seed which Parvati planted in the ashes of Vrinda, wife of Jalandhar, the conqueror of the kings of the earth. The tale is too long to relate here, excepting the climax which is to the effect that in the eighth incarnation of the god Vishnu (which was that of Krishna) the tulsi plant took the form of a woman, Radha, and became the wife of the gay and warlike Krishn. This wedding of the god and the plant is celebrated annually. Whatever the account of its origin, the plant is considered to be the wife of Vishnu and revered accordingly.

The Vishnavites, or followers of Vishnu, most carefully tend and worship it. Every morning the ground near it is cleaned with cow-dung and water; at night a lamp is hug before it. When it dies it is cast into the river, the same honor being given to it that is given to an image when the worship of it is concluded.

When a Vishnavite is dying, one of these plants is brought and placed near his head. After puja (worship) has been offered to it, a bite of its roots is placed in the mouth of the dying man, and the leaves are placed on his face, eyes, ears and chest. He is then sprinkled from head to foot with a tulsi twig which has been dipped in water. While this ceremony is being performed his friends cry aloud, "Tulsi! Tulsi! Tulsi!" The man can then die in the happy certainty that he will go straight to Swarga, the heaven where holy people are allowed to go for a time as a reward for goodness.

To obtain the pardon of all one's sins it is sufficient to look at this sacred plant. By touching it one is purified from all defilement. The plant may be seen in almost every Brahman home, where the women care for it daily.

The tulsi is a symbol of modesty and chastity. It has a small purple flower and its leaves have a sweet aromatic scent. It has many medicinal properties. The leaves act as a cough elixir and cordial, and Brahmans usually swallow one or two leaves after each meal as an aid to digestion. They also eat some both before and after performing their ablutions in cold water, to prevent chills. It was probably on account of its medicinal properties that the Hindus deified the plant in the first instance.

The Pipal.

There are seven different species of trees which are considered sacred and accordingly worshipped. The leading ones are the pipal* (Ficus religosa) and banyan or Indian fig tree (Ficus Indica). Both are sacred to Vishnu. The leaves are bright green, soft to the touch, light and thin, and as the petioles are very long the leaves are shaken by the gentlest breeze and cause a rustling noise which has given rise to many superstitious beliefs.

Besides being a beautiful shade tree—which is a priceless boon in hot climates—the tree is honored with the tradition that Vishnu was born beneath it; and it was, also, the sacred "Bo tree" of Buddha. No one is allowed to cut it down, lop off its branches, or even pull of its leaves unless they are to be used in worship. To cut down one of these trees would be an unpardonable sacrilege. Sometimes it is invested with a sacred cord like a Brahman. Sometimes it is solemnly married, when almost the same formalities are observed as in the case of a marriage between Brahmans. Generally the nim or margosa tree, which is sacred to Siva, is selected for its spouse. Sometimes they may be seen planted side by side on little mounds by the roadside and their trunks are so closely entwined that they have become incorporated one with another.

One of the requirements in the morning prayers of a Brahman is that he shall go to a sacred pipal and with his face towards the east make it a profound bow while repeating the following prayer:

"O tree! You are a god! You are the king of trees! . . . All those who honor you by performing the marriage ceremony to you, and by adoring you and singing your praises, will obtain remission of their sins in this world and a home of bliss in the next. . . . Deign to give me a proof of your goodness by vouchsafing the pardon of my sins in this world, and a place with the blessed after death."

THE LIZARD'S CHIRP.

As a little knot of Bible women talked with the women, an old man drew near and made his pitiful complaint:

"I have often heard you and the others tell of your 'Jesus Swami,' how good and kind he is, and I would have fain have him for my swami, for I believe that there can be but one true God and that Jesus Swami is he. So, night by night, I prayed to him, trying to forget my old swami. But my children fell sick and I was afraid; then my cow died and I was still more frightened. So I came back to this swami (the idol in the temple) to ask what I must do. Falling down before him I cried,

"'May I worship Jesus Swami?' No answer came. Again I cried out,

"'May I pray to Jesus Swami?' but all was silent. Then I asked,

"'O Swami, must I worship you?'

"'Immediately a lizard on the temple wall called 'Kluck, bluck!' The god had answered me and made me his. I cannot follow Jesus, I must worship him."

The stone image, the lizard chirping on the wall—such are the gods of India and the voices thereof. India knows not the living and true God who has "spoken unto us by his Son."—The Harvest Field.

—Mr. Victor P. Hammer, LL. M., a former Guilford boy, but now in Washington, D. C., has written a book of 170 pages on The United States Government. It is dedicated to "the cherished memory of the author's honored and beloved friends, Jesse R. Wharton and Abel G. Kirkman as a token of his high appreciation of their friendship and helpfulness to him through the striking adversities with which he met during his start in early life." The author's aim has been to provide a manual of such information as every American should possess regarding the government of his country. The book has a good index, facilitating the finding of matter sought for. It is published by the Neale Publishing Co., of New York, and sells for $1.25. We are glad to see our young men turning their hands to useful service, and we believe Mr. Hammer in the writing of this book has rendered a real service to many Americans.

THREE PRIZES OFFERED.

First prize to the boy or girl under sixteen years of age who makes out and sends us the longest list of words made from the letters of the word "P r o t e s t a n t," using no letter in any word more times than it occurs in the given word. No proper names to be included.

Second prize to the person of any age who sends us the longest list of words that occur once only in the King James Version of the Bible. No proper names to be included.

Third prize to the young man or woman over sixteen and under twenty-two years of age who best corrects the errors in the following, including spelling, punctuation, and use of capital letters. The answer must be in the handwriting of the person sending it, which will be considered if necessary to a decision. The piece to be corrected is this:

ida lewis the keaper for more than haf a sentury of limerock lite in naraganset bay nown the world over for her bravery and called the grace darling of america died in newport Oct. 24 she was born in newport rode iland in 1842 and almost continuously since 1857 made her home in the lime rock lite house miss lewis came of old massachusets stock her father having bin capt. hosea lewis of hingham and her mother a dauter of a physician of new shoreham block iland

All papers in all three cases to be mailed on or before Jan. 1, 1912.

A CHRISTMAS STORY.

By Ruth Fletcher.

It was a bright Sabbath morning, the 24th of December, when two young men came out of the village church together, and walked slowly down the street toward their homes. They had been fast friends from childhood. Ellis Wayne was a clerk in his father's store, and Frank Norris sold pills and plasters at the village drug store.

They were both clean young men as young men go, albeit, not as good Christians as they might be according to their own showing. The closing hymn in Sabbath school that morning had been that beautiful, and impressive one, "Building for Eternity."

"Do you know, Frank," exclaimed Ellis, "that one verse of that hymn seems to be speaking directly to me?"

"Every word that so idly falls
Giving some heart joy or pain.
Shall shine in that temple's walls,
Or ever its beauty stain."

"How little we realize that our mistakes are immortal!—that little actions that we forget in an hour, will never cease to influence some one for good or evil."

"Why, old fellow," replied Frank, "I didn't know you had a fault in your whole make up. I have so often wished I were as near perfect as you are."

"Every heart knoweth its own weakness, and though I may be able to keep them hidden, my whole nature is full of faults, and I have no excuse in the world for not doing right."

"Well, there are many things in my past life that I would hate to think would follow me through eternity, but I am going to turn over a new leaf when the new year comes, and I intend to get myself so well in hand that I can resist these petty temptations that meet me at every turn in life."

"Will it be safe to wait till the New Year? Why not turn over a new leaf now?"

"Oh, I want to have one more high old time with the boys. You know I don't drink or gamble, and if I am too straight-laced it will render me unpopular. Christmas comes but once a year, and every one ought to have a good time."

"It is a risky business. We have no future time promised us, and suppose by this time next week you have met greater temptations than ever before, and your character, perhaps life, goes down before it?"

"Well, I will try to be very careful that no such evil as you predict befalls me."

They separated at the gate of Frank Norris' beautiful home. As he passed up the walk to the house he saw the face of his baby sister, Jessie, pressed against the window pane, and heard her silvery voice as she lisped, "Buver tummin, Buver tummin," and she ran from the window to spring into his arms as soon as the door was opened.

"I've dot somefin to tell you, Buver."

"What in the world can it be?"

She pressed her coral lips to his ear, and whispered, "Santa Taus tummin tonight."

"I wonder if he will bring me anything?"

"No-o-o. He never bings mans fings, but don't you bover, I will dive you some of mine, tause I love you two, tree, five, nine, ten bushels."

"And brother loves you a whole hundred bushels."

The young men's club met the next day to make some final arangements about an entertainment they were going to have that night. All places of business were closed except for emergency calls, and Frank and Ellis were there. They always served refreshments, but no intoxicant was ever used and no thought of danger entered the two young men's minds. When the meal was nearly finished one young man arose from the table, went to his over coat, and extracted two bottles of wine from the pockets and placed them on the table. At the sight of them Ellis started up and exclaimed, "Frank, it is time for us to go. We do not need any of that."

"Oh! my," exclaimed the young men, "little sissie is afraid of an innocent glass of wine, but Fronk Norris is going to drink a glass with us to show that he is not as weak as some folks."

Ellis turned, and walked from the room, hoping that Frank would follow, but they caught his arms and insisted that he drink one glass to show his manhood. Now he well knew it was wrong, but he thought no great harm could come of drinking just one glass of wine when he had never drank any before. When they kept pleading and forcing it on him, he took it, and hurriedly swallowed the so-called wine. He set the glass down, and looked around on his companions. The liquid was still scorching his throat and it was bourne in upon him that he had been deceived. His look of dismay brought forth shrieks of laughter from the boys. Oh, it was too rich a joke to conceal. They had given him a glass of straight brandy colored to simulate wine.

He turned and walked from the room without a word. He was met at the door by his brother Willie, with his splendid St. Bernard dog at his heels.

"Oh Frank! Jessie is so very sick. Mother said fill this prescription and send it home to her as quick as you can."

He walked rapidly away with a great pain tugging at his heart. Strange to say, the pavement seemed to be rising up to meet him. He finally reached the drug-store and staggered up the steps, but it was some time before he could get the key in the lock. At last the door was open and he hurried around the counter to get the medicine. He stopped at the shelf where the various bottles were neatly arranged, and raised his eyes. The brandy singing through his brains almost blinded him, but he managed to read—strychnine, morphia, quinine. He grasped a bottle and turned to the scales to weigh it. After a long time he succeeded in getting the package ready for Willie to carry to his mother. Just at this time a customer came hurriedly in with a prescription to fill. He did not replace the bottle, but moved to another part of the store for the necessary medicine to fill the last prescription. After what seemed an interminable time the medicine was prepared and the applicant departed.

Now a great commotion in the street attracts his attention and he staggered to the door to learn the case. Oh, nothing! only a poor inebriate essayed to cross the street, and was run down by a motor car. It's only good riddance of bad rubbish; so "Public opinion." He turned back into the store, and saw the bottle where he had left it, and went behind the counter to replace it. He took it up and glanced at the label, and, oh heavens, have mercy! it was morphia instead of quinine! Sobered in an instant, by the awful calamity he dashed the bottle away, and started for the door, but his strength gave way and he fell in a chair, shaking in every limb.

At that moment Ellis Wayne appeared at the door, followed by Willie Norris. He was carefully explaining to Ellis how it happened that the package of medicine for his sister was lost. He had gone down the street, followed by Rover, until the dog stopped to exchange greetings with another dog, and he tarried so long that Willie reached the gate before the dog overtook him. He turned and whistled to him. The dog came bounding down the street and as he had done a hundred times before he reared to place his paws on his little master's shoulders. To tease him Willie stepped back and his paws came in violent contact with the arm that was holding the fateful package of medicine. The sudden jar sent the package flying to the middle of the street where it was crushed in an instant by a passing team.

His mother who was watching for him, and saw the transaction, soothed his ruffled feelings and sent him back for a new supply of medicine. When the situation was explained to Frank he exclaimed, "Father in heaven, for all thy mercies I thank thee!"

The prescription was soon filled again and dispatched, and then he told Ellis what he had gone through since they parted.

"And now, Ellis, the world will say, 'The boys played a joke on Frank Norris.' I say, Satan deliberately set that trap for my soul. Oh, no! the Prince of Darkness does not take so much pains to celebrate the birthday of the blessed Christ Child except to bring recruits into his army. The world will say, Rover saved me from wearing the brand of Cain to life's latest day. I say the infinite mercy of God saved me, and He used that most humble instrument to show me my dependence on him."

"For the perpetrators of that dastardly act I have only pity. I only wish they could feel for five minutes as I did when I thought I had murdered my precious little sister."

FROM UNCLE MILLARD.

Dear Children:

As Christmas will be here quite soon, I presume you are already anticipating the pleasure you will have when it comes. You in the South have more mild weather than we have in winter, and as we have snow much of the time, and you do not, there must be, it would seem, a difference in the sports indulged in by the children there and here. So, thinking the Southern Cousins would like to know some of the sports their Northern Cousins have, on Christmas and other winter holidays, I will try to tell you in rhyme of—

Pleasures Anticipated.

Ho! Christmas is coming, hurrah, hurrah!
We'll hang up our stockings for "Santa" to fill;
We'll get out our sleds and a coasting go,
And won't that be jolly when sliding down hill?
Or, just for a change, we'll speed to the pond,
Now frozen so hard, 'twill bear up a crowd,
And as with playmates we skate round and round,
We'll make the air ring with our laughter loud.
Then out on a sleigh ride we surely must go,
Our sleigh drawn by horses with tinkling bells.
The wild wind may blow, but we'll drive through the snow—
Our steeds speeding fast o'er hills and through dells.
Perhaps, when passing through a huge bank of snow,
Our fun-loving driver may upset the sleigh,
Then into the "drift" we'll laughingly go:
Nor can we complain—for its part of the play.
The dinner bell rings, and with quick steps we'll go—
To a banquet indeed of food rich and rare;
Fresh from the ride and with cheeks all aglow,
With zest we'll partake of the sumptuous fare.
But never in feasting and fun alone
Should we think of spending this hallow'd day,
Made sacred by the birth of God's dear Son,
To whom we owe all that true love can pay.
By remem'bring the poor with a generous gift.
That will cheer sad hearts, for awhile at least.
We'll relieve present want and a burden lift,
That will bring in return sweeter joy than a feast.

Uncle Millard.

Portland, Mich.

FRIENDSHIP.

We should never allow a friend to slip out of our lives if we can help it. True friendship is too rare and sacred to be lost, much less lightly thrown away. There may be slights given, even intentionally so, but they should be quickly set aside and forgotten. And as to misunderstandings, they arise from hidden influences of life, and from conflicting circumstances over which we have no control. Very frequently the slights we receive are imaginary, or else unintentional. In either case they give no ground for offense. But even if they are intentional, they should be pardoned with the first pang they inflict. Some lost friends through their inattention, failing to observe courtesies which cost so little and mean so much in all the relations of life. Sometimes the fad to find fault causes us to discard the truest friends; while others, through lack of patience or fickleness of soul, deliberately swap away old friends for new ones. The true philosophy of flawless friendship is to keep all your friends and add new ones to theier number. At any rate, and in all cases, jealously guard your friendships, both old and new, and secretly cherish them through thick and thin. Both life and friendship are too precious to be wasted. Stick affectionately to your friends, especially to the One who steketh closer than a brother!—Selected.

Any Help?

A little boy who had often heard his father talk about the civil war finally asked: "Father, did any one help you put down the rebellion?"—Collier's.

Limerick.

There was a young man in DuQuesne
Who wandered along a dark luesne.
He took a roll
When he stepped in a holl,
And suffered a great deal of puesne.

C. P. Rogers, the aviator who fell from his airship and was slightly injured, gave this explanation of his fall: "I yielded to the drowsiness that seizes all airmen at times, and I went to sleep. I can not recall when I fell. Johnstone, Hoxey and others went the same way, but I was lucky enought to live to tell the tale."

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 31.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Things I Want To Do Better Next Year." Phil. 3:12-14.

Daily Readings.

M. In daily tasks. 3 John 5; Col. 3:17.
T. In Bible study. Ps. 1.
W. In self-control. Prov. 16:32.
T. In church attendance. Heb. 10: 19-25.
F. In missionary gifts. 2 Cor. 8:1-5.
S. In personal work. Acts 11: 25, 26.
Sun., Dec. 31—The topic.

Comment On The Topic.

What is more important for our society than that this meeting should stir the officers and committees to do better work for the Master? Therefore let the prayer meeting committee or the leader try to turn the meeting in this direction by asking some representative of each committee, preferably the chairman, and each officer to express at the meeting a series of good resolutions that he would like to have adopted by his committee or by the society, and embodied in the Christian Endeavor work of the coming year.

To this end the secretary may be instructed to call the roll of officers and committees, and the responses may be somewhat as follows:

President: I am resolved to spend more time and thought upon the society, and seek more earnestly to get all the members to working for the Master.

Vice-President: I am resolved to aid the president in his work more faithfully than in the past.

Secretary: I am resolved to make my reports better, and to see what more I can do with my pen to advance Christian Endeavor.

Treasurer: I am resolved to urge the privilege of giving more than ever before, and persuade the society to increase its gifts for all good causes.

Lookout Committee: My committee is resolved, I hope, to work more earnestly and pray more fervently than ever before, that more persons may enter our society, and that all our members may be more faithful to their promises.

Prayer Meeting Committee: My committee is resolved, I hope, to labor more zealously to implant among the members of the society the spirit of the Saviour this coming year, and advance His blessed Kongdom.

Missionary Committee: My Committee is resolved, I hope, to do what we can this coming year to broaden the sympathies, deepen the knowledge, and intensify the activities of this society, so that we may hold up the hands of our proxies on the mission fields, at home and abroad.

Other Suggestive Helps.

1. "It is not the amount of service we render which secures for us the divine approval, but the disposition which holds us in readiness to do whatever our Lord requires. In the parable, they who worked but one hour, received the penny because they were waiting and went to work as soon as they received the invitation. They also serve who only stand and wait."

2. "There are two ways of enlarging our work. One is by cultivating twenty acres this year instead of last year's ten. Another is by more assiduous and intelligent cultivation, doubling last year's fruitage from that same field. We believe the second process to be more in harmony with divine ideas of spiritual husbandry, and commend it to ambitious presidents of Endeavor societies, superintendents of Bible-schools and pastors of churches."

3. "Paul seemed to be consumed by a spirit of sanctified acquisitiveness for souls and other trophies for his Master. We would have thought the harsh experiences of his first missionary journey would have extinguished his zeal for extending boundaries; but the second was farther reaching; and the third in planning, seemed to encompass the known and even the half known world. God forbid that age should chill our enthusiasm, contract our endeavors or narrow our sympathies."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL HAS COME BACK.

Not so long ago it was the fashion to belittle the Sunday-school. A man would tack the phrase "Sunday-school" to some cheap sneer at goodness and think himself both witty and keen.

Some politicians said, "Politics is no Sunday-school picnic," or some business men would say, "Sunday-school scruples don't go here." The man out for "a good time" would say to his hesitating companion, "What's the matter with you? You're not in Sunday-school any more." And so on, and so on.

Even the church did not quite see the worth of Sunday school. Remember the leading official who didn't think much of the revival, because it reached scarcely anybody but a lot of Sunday-school children? Have you forgotten the days when parents hustled their children off to Sunday-school without knowing or caring what happened to them there?

But all this is changing. The Sunday-school is coming into its own. The sneerer must find something else to use as point for his feeble wit. The Sunday-school is becoming one of the country's biggest institutions, and one of the best, as well.

The churches are putting more and more money and thought into the Sunday school. Some of them appropriate as much for Sunday school purposes as they do for the paid choir. The Sunday-school folks themselves are putting vast sums into the support of the work.

There is a new science of the Sunday-school. It is being studied by thousands of people, at their own expense. Teacher-training classes are becoming as plentiful as prayer meetings, and some of them are better attended.

Christian people are awake to the fact that the fate of the church of tomorrow depends almost wholly on the Sunday school of today. The Sunday school is the greatest by far of all the church's recruiting grounds. A Sunday school revival means more, in the long run, than a midnight mission.—Dan B. Brummitt.

AFRAID OF HIMSELF.

A very prominent man of the business world was talking to a gathering of young men at a Y. M. C. A. In the course of remarks he said:

"I have always trained to be afraid of myself."

His hearers looked at him in surprise, for he is known far and wide as a man of courageous temperament. He smiled back at them:

"I do not mean a cowardly fear of myself but a fear that over confidence or carelessness might lead me to betray myself. I have always had since boyhood my honor to keep, my name to preserve. My watchful fear has been to see that I did so."

This is another way of expressing the old saying:

"Know thyself."

Life is sweet and wholesome, life is good, life is companionship with the best when we know ourselves and make that knowledge yield the highest results. But we all have within us elements of temptation. There is the inclination to be idle, to contract weak habits, to be untruthful to forget love and duty to our neighbor.

Realizing this, then, may honest fear spring within our hearts that we are slipping away from the Master's heritage. Then may we well pray with the ancient Greek:

"Keep me in knowledge of myself that I may be true with all my fellow beings. Keep me in fear of trusting the flesh and in faith with love of the spirit. Hold my eyes ever upward that I may see and know only the best."

This is the prayer of righteous fear.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:35 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

1:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:10.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

4:10 a. m., No. 5 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

4:20 a. m., No. 31, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing Room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

4:50 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

5:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:10 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:50 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 a.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

—Dr. Holmes often makes us laugh at his keen wit, but he wrote with a philosopher's pen when he said, "Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all."

—Negroes charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon, of Cleveland Co., have been removed from Shelby to Charlotte to prevent lynching. One of the negroes has confessed, saying he killed Mr. Dixon because "he had a mortgage on my mule."

"Debt is as much a habit as saving. Every man will admit that saving is a habit but if one really has the debt habit he can always show you it was all due to a combination of unfortunate circumstances."—Caxton.

IMITATION JAPANESE.

If I'd been born across the seas,
In a little home of clean bamboo,
Among the flowery cherry trees;
If I'd been fed on fish and rice,
The queerest nuts that ever grew,
And all the different sorts of teas;
If I'd been used to a jinriksha,
And never seen a railroad car—
Perhaps it wouldn't seem so nice
To be a Japanese.

But Mary Jane does seem so plain,
Compared with "Neo Ina Yan."
And such a place as "Jones' Creek)
(That's where I live and must remain,)
Could not be found in all Japan!
Instead of "Pike's" and "Skinner's Peak,"
Of Fuji-yama there they speak—
The Sacred Mountain by the seas.
How elegant geographies must be in Japanese!

We have such very common things,
Like pigs in pens and coops of hens,
Round corner stores that smell of cheese;
While they have storks with spreading wings,
That live among the reedy fens.
Their girls have paper parasols,
And painted fans as well as dolls.
They wade in flowers to the knees,
And live a life of joyous ease,
The happy Japanese.

Yet, mamma wouldn't be the same.
With beady eyes and funny name.
And might not care so much for me;
And—come to think—they never can
Have any Christmas in Japan!
They worship curiosities,
Great metal gods made by man
About the time the world began.
So. on the whole, I'd rather be
A little, plain American—
An imitation if you please,
Not truly Japanese.

—Clara G. Dolliver.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

89. The word "duke" in the King James version has been replaced by the word "chief" in the American Revision.

Lesson for Next Two Weeks.

The Book of Ezra.

—Richeson, the Baptist minister in jail in Massachusetts charged with causing the death of a young woman, tried to kill himself with a piece of tin. Failing, he called lustily for a doctor.

ATTENTION CENTERED ON HEALTH PROTECTION.

What is Being Done Here and There Over The State for the Protection of the People's Health.

Guilford County has employed a well trained physician as County Superintendent of Health. He devotes his entire time to guarding the people against preventable diseases, and to inspecting the children for defective eyes, ears, throats, for hookworm disease, etc.

Twenty-seven counties have made provision for free State and County Hookworm Dispensaries: Johnston and Gates were the last two counties to take action.

Up to December 1, 816 of the State's physicians report having treated 24,315 cases of hookworm disease. 23,333 cases have been treated since July 1, in the State and County dispensaries, or a total of 46,648 cases have been treated within two years in the State.

The Superintendent of Health in Moore County is employed for half his entire time. He visits schools, lectures on the common diseases, and inspects the children for curable affections.

The Board of Education in Rowan Co. has already erected sixty-five sanitary surface closets at public school houses and the County Superintendent of Schools reports that they are giving splendid satisfaction.

The Wake County Medical Society passed a resolution recommending that all schools of the County away from water supplies be supplied with sanitary surface closets.

An important place on the program of the State Association of County Superindents of Schools was devoted to conserving the health of the children.

—The Seine is rising again and Parisians are in fear of another flood.

—Hendersonville is to have electric cars. Col. Pickens had horse cars there years ago.

—In the Los Angeles city election, Harriman, Socialist candidate, received 53,000 votes. Alexander was elected by a considerable majority.

—The national Republican Convention next year will be held in Chicago.

—Mrs. Hayne Davis, of Salisbury, is dead.

—The Christmas shopping has been heavy and money spending has gone on at a rapid pace. We are fast acquiring the reputation of being an extravagant people.

—"A little child shall lead them." Christmas is the child's season, and the children then lead us to joy, gladness, and unselfishness.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The Fall term was the best in the history of the College; the Spring Term, which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to be better still.

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for their sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young ment and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible advantages at the lowest reasonable cost.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE..

This course for teaches opens April 9, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to make the greatest success possible in their chosen work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

THE ELON SPIRIT.

It has been my privilege to visit a great many school during the six years that I have been a Christian Endeavor Field Secretary, and I want to say that Elon is absolutely the finest I have ever seen for a real, true, Christian spirit. Everyone—faculty and student body alike, seem to unite to make this spirit what it is.

It was a source of real pleasure to have fellowship with you during my recent visit. I shall never lose the impressions of those two days.

Your literary society halls are elegantly and appropriately furnished.

Everywhere I go in North Carolina I see the marks of Elon College work. I am so thankful for your loyalty to Christian Endeavor. May Elon long continue to be the blessing that she now is.

As I have opportunity I shall always be glad to say a good word for Elon and the Elon spirit.. Your sincere friend, Karl Lehman.

Field Sec. of U. S. of C. E.

PASS IT ON."

"You're a great little wife, and I don't know what I would do without you." And as he spoke he put his arms about her and kissed her, and she forgot all care in that moment, says a wise exchange. And, forgetting all, she sang as she washed the dishes, and sang as she made the beds, and the song was heard next door, and a woman there caught the refrain, and sang also, and two homes were happier because he had told her that sweet old story, the story of the love of a husband for a wife. As she sang, the butcher boy who called for the order heard it and went out whistling on his journey, and the world heard the whistle, and one man, hearing it, thought, Here is a lad who loves his work a lad happy and contented.—Ex.

Twenty thousand Italians are reported to have won a decisive battle near Tripoli over a strong force of Turks and Arabs. Losses on both sides were reported heavy.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

GETHSEMANE.

In golden youth when seems the earth
A summer-land of surging mirth,
When souls are glad and hearts are light,
And not a shadow lurks in sight,
We do not know it, but there lies
Somewhere veiled under evening skies
A garden which we all must see—
The garden of Gethsemane.
With joyous steps we go our ways,
Love lends a halo to our days;
Light sorrows sail like clouds afar,
We laugh, and say how strong we are.
We hurry on; and hurrying, go
Close to the borderland of woe
That waits for you, and waits for me—
Forever waits Gethsemane.
Down shadowy lanes, across strange streams
Bridged over by our broken dreams;
Behind the misty caps of years,
Beyond the great salt fount of tears,
The garden lies. Strive as you may,
You cannot miss it in your way.
All paths that have been, or shall be,
Pass somewhere through Gethsemane.
All those who journey, soon or late,
Must pass within the garden's gate;
Must kneel alone in darkness there,
And battle with some fierce despair.
God pity those who cannot say,
"Not mine, but thine," who only pray,
"Let this cup pass," and cannot see
The purpose of Gethsemane.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Salutations.

I tender my heartfelt good wishes for the New Year, and also make my grateful acknowledgements to the pastors and members, superintendents and schools, C. E. Societies and friends throughout the far-extending bounds of our continental Methodism for the sympathy and co-operation extended in the efforts to develop our Foreign Missionary enterprise during the year 1911.

The self-denial, self-sacrifice, energy and labor which in may places found expression in the Children's Day offering, the Christmas offering, the assessment and personal gifts attest the fact that our people are loyal and responsive.

Is it not reasonable to hope that very many of our churches that are able to make large expenditures for themselves will realize more fully the duty and privilege of doing for others with something like equal consideration and liberality, and thus, obeying the Christ, be greatly enriched spiritually?

I covet the sympathetic interest, the earnest prayers, the generous aid of every Methodist Protestant in the plan to raise an Emergency Fund of $25,000 by May 1, 1912, for land, buildings, movement of Missionaries, etc., for our successful work in Japan.

These are extraordinary demands that do not come often, and can only be met by special contributions for which we now appeal.

It is Not Too Late.

If your Sunday school has not made a Christmas offering for Foreign Missions, please attend to this. There is still time to do this, for if many more schools do not respond the work will seriously suffer.

Our hope is that the offering will be so increased over last year's that we can send a missionary to Japan who will be the Sunday schools' Missionary. We urgently need an offering from your school. Do not fail us.

Every C. E. Society is expected to make a special offering at this time for the support of their Missionary, Rev. E. I. Obee, and for his return to America after more than seven years of faithful service. I urge that this be done as soon as possible.

The Board is depending upon these two sources of income to help meet the emergency now upon us.

This Also.

Pastors are asked to help us meet the Board's regular monthly obligations in Japan by sending to me the assessment for foreign missions, and by having the Children's Day offering of 1911 sent at once, if it has not been forwarded. Those who retain the offering for months add to our financial embarrassment. Let us have your Children's Day offering at once. Every dollar is needed now.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltiore, Md.

A young lawyer some time ago started for the West. While he was in college he was a blatant unbeliever. He boasted that he would locate in some place where there were no churches or Bibles. He found a place which met his conditions. Before the year was out, he wrote to a young minister, a former classmate, begging him to come out and bring plenty of Bibles and begin preaching, for he had become convinced that a place without Christians, churches and Bibles was "too much like hell for any living man to stay in."—Ex.

—Alfred Tennyson Dickens, oldest surviving son of Charles Dickens, who lectured in Greensboro and other places not long ago, died suddenly at Hotel Astor, New York, on Tuesday of this week. Acute indigestion the cause.

—Rev. D. A. Highfill was called last week to the bedside of his father who was thought to be nearing his end. He was still living when last heard from, but was suffering from an affection of the heart, causing difficulty in breathing.

NO SECRETS FROM MOTHER.

The moment a girl keeps a secret from her mother, or has received a letter she dare not let her mother read, or has a friend of whom her mother does not know, she is in danger. A secret is not a good thing for a girl to have. The fewer the secrets that lie in the hearts of women the better. It is almost a test of purity. She who has none of her own, is best and happiest.

In girlhood, hide nothing from your mother: do nothing that if discovered by your father would make you blush. Have no mysteries whatever. Tell those about you where you go and what you do. Those who have the right to know, we mean of course. The girl who frankly says to her mother, "I have been there. I met So-and-So. Such and such remarks were made, and this and that was done," will be certain of receiving good advice and sympathy. If all was right, no fault will be found. If the mother knows, out of great experience, that something was improper or unsuitable she will, if she is a good mother, kindly advise against its repetition.

It is when mothers discover that their girls are hiding things from them, that they rebuke them. Innocent faults are always pardoned by a kind parent. You can not be blamed for making mistakes; but you will not be likely to do anything so very wrong if you keep no secrets from your mother.—Selected.

—Shall we not improve the usefulness and the influence of our churches in 1912?

—On New Year's day the official "counter" showed that President Taft had as callers, and shook hands with, 8,092 diplomats, officials and citizens.

—How long has it been since you have invited a person to church with you? You invite people to social functions, to good dinners, to all sorts and conditions of things; but when did you invite anybody to church?

—The fatalities from foot-ball the past season are not all in yet, but to date thirteen persons killed and forty-seven severely injured, against fourteen killed and forty-eight injured, last year, gives evidence that "the new rules" are working.

—China has a Republic and a President. Or, more correctly, it would seem that China is a Republic, of some sort, and Dr. Sun Yat Sen is President. Mirabile dictu. This seems unthinkable. But the great empire that has slumbered through the centuries has waked up.

—The Jews are a scattered, but by no means an exterminated nation. According to the latest tabulation there are 11, 483,876 Jews in the world. One thirteenth of this number live in New York City.

From Pastors and People.

Liberty, Davidson Ct.

Bro. Hulin is on the work and at his post; filled his appointment at Lineberry first Sunday, and on last Monday preached the funeral of Mr. Cornelius Riley, an esteemed citizen of 65 years of age, one who attended church at Lineberry and esteemed Bro. Hulin very much. A large congregation attended the services. Mr. Riley leaves a wife and two daughters and one son who have the sympathy of many friends in their loss, hoping it is his eternal gain.

We are looking for a prosperous year in the church work. Brethren, pray for us. N. F. Morgan.

Dec. 21, 1911.

Pleasant Hill, Forsyth Ct.

The Christmas cantata was a success. But owing to the very muddy roads and a heavy mist falling, the church was not packed full as is usual on such occasions. The children did well, showing the careful training given them by Mrs. J. F. Hunter, who entered into her work with a whole souled determination to win, and now her efforts stand crowned with success. Twenty years ago the Pleasant Hill Sunday-school could justly boast of a large school and nearly all were grown-ups. Now nearly all the scholars are children, the grown-ups having married, or moved away, and a few have gone to the bright beyond. A few of the old stand-bys are here yet. Uncle Quill Hunter is one of them; he is the oldest among them, but enjoys it as well as he did years ago. Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, was present at the Christmas exercise and received a large and beautiful lamp, presented by the Sunday-school. He and his wife and little Iola, received also other presents, and each scholar and the teachers and superintendent all got something, besides some to friends.

On the third Sunday our pastor preached a plain, beautiful sermon, showing clearly that we are "each building a character," and he implored us to see to it that we fail not to build on a solid foundation. Oh! my Christian friends, if each one who heard that sermon would live by it what a mighty wave of enthusiasm and spiritual awakening would roll over our entire community and keep on rolling until old Forsyth circuit would be awakened from her drowsy slumbering ways and next summer and fall, when the special meeting time comes around the preacher would not have to preach himself hoarse before a revival could be started.

Now, I step aside to make room for my successor, hoping and praying that whoever may come in next may be more faithful and prompt in reporting than I have been.

Wishing the Herald, its readers, and all God's people a happy and prosperous New Year, I am, Yours in His name,

Mrs. R. P. Petree, Rep.

Cedar Falls, Richland Ct.

While it rains I thought I would write and give the readers of the M. P. Herald a little sketch of my experience. Even before I was converted I heard the call to preach, but I failed to get any education, so I did not obey the call. I was afraid I would bring reproach upon the Gospel of the Son of God. I thought I had rather die and be lost in the end than do that. I tried to ease myself. I superintended Sunday-school and conducted burial services. I was true to my church as all of our pastors for the last 25 years can testify. Long ago I gave up ever trying to preach, but all along in life God would impress this upon my mind. After I had passed the 55 mile post on life's road and knowing that I must go before the great God of Heaven and earth, so this was a dread to me, I decided I had better obey. The first person I named the matter to was Bro. R. L. Melton. God bless Bro. Melton! He is a great big man with a great big heart. I love that brother and will help him in any way I can. He encouraged me, so after taking his advice I applied for license to preach and was licensed Nov. 11, 1910. Since then I have preached 37 sermons, have spoken in Sunday-school conventions and birthday celebrations. Several have come to Christ under my preaching; at least they have told be so. Notwithstanding my ignorance God has blessed my labors. I am in the fight and in to the finish, and when the good Lord says it is enough am ready to go. There is nothing that will take the place of obedience. When God commands it is man's duty to obey.

A few words about our church. Pastor C. H. Whitaker preached for us third Sunday and made a good impression. The writer was glad to have him spend the night in his home.. Bro. Hatley served us faithfully for two years and did a good work. May God bless you and yours, my brother.

Now I close by asking all who read this to pray for me. May God bless us all, is my prayer.

G. A. Laughlin.

Dec. 22, 1911.

Henderson.

Today's papers review the year and rate it as one of the most successful in the history of the world. Certainly very great progress has been made along all lines. Extra effort must be made, to keep it up throughout 1912, with the hindrances of a political compaign. That will certainly lower prices and reduce the volume of business, and distract the attention of people from their work. What a pity that elections are not less frequent! The more's the pity that we all have not sufficient sense and balance to consider the issues dispassionately and concede to all others the same right.

Since I wrote, Christmas with its usual incidents, presents, toy pistols, pop-crackers, dinners, etc., has come and gone. Our children of the S. S. put the "Santa Claus" in the foregn mission stocking and we didn't have any S. S. entertainment.

Our new preacher came also. He has not gone. Every service thus far has been dark and rainy: but he has searched our hearts and consciences with thoughtful and strong sermons that force us to sit up and take notice. We are hoping that he will be able to waken the consciences of the neighborhood. We do not remember to have heard two better sermons than he preached to day. One on winning victories in the battle of life, "He that overcometh," and the other on what to think about—"Whatsoever things are true," etc. What a fine thing it will be if our church all over the State would this year get very busy and wake up completely the conscience of the State—and as Same Jones used to say, "Make everybody break out with religion of a very contagious kind." I'm so busy thinking about the year just past and the one to be next, that I'm not sure this is worth printing, if not, drop it in the wastebasket. Life says: "The only difference between the editor and the office boy is, one fills the wastebasket and the other empties it."

T. T. Hicks.

Vance Circuit.

We have reached the field, filled the first appointments at Flat Rock and Gillburg Station. Congregations were not large, but gave good attention to the Word. We have received a nice "pounding" from the Flat Rock people for which we are thankful. We are now living "town life." We are having some trouble in adapting ourselves to the new circumstances, but think we are making some progress. We find ourselves looking at the automobiles, gazing at the signs, and watching every new thing, but we think that in a month or so we will be able to walk erect, and look as straight ahead as any one else.

The first quarterly conference of Vance Circuit will be held at Harris Chapel at 10 o'clock, St. before 2nd Sunday in January. This is to be quite an important conference, and it is hoped that all official members will be present.

J. A. Burgess, Pastor.

Winston-Salem.

The Christmas time, that time that brings gladness to every heart, from the oldest gray haired person to the youngest child, is now in the past, but that which makes Christmas, the birthday of our King, and the purpose for which He came, cannot be like time forgotten, but dwells in our hearts and brings gladness to us every day in the year.

Our pastor and Mrs. Taylor are now in the parsonage. We have already learned to love them very much and hope that their stay in our midst will be pleasant and profitable.

The attendance at Sunday school and preaching service yesterday was very good considering the very inclement weather. Bro. Taylor's subject at the morning service was, The Ideal Church. He spoke of the church founded by Christ and purchased by his own blood and what it takes to make an ideal church. It was indeed helpful and just what we as church people needed to hear as we take up the work of a new year, which we hope will be the best of any in the history of this church. We hope that before the dawn of another year that a beautiful new building will have taken the place of the old one, that the Methodist Protestants of Winston will have given Jesus their best and have a church that will be an honor to His name.

The Sunday school gave its Xmas entertainment last Friday evening; the splendid program was carried out in a most creditable manner. Old Santa was present and did his part well. Mrs. H. B. Glascoe is due all the credit for the splendid manner which the boys and girls were trained for this occasion. She is one of the best musicians in our city and at this season of the year is very busy and it required a great sacrifice for her to give so much of her time to this great work, but the Lord has for her a great reward.

The school remembered Mrs. Glascoe and Miss Nina Hester with nice gifts for their service as organist during the year.

There were twenty who had been present every Sunday during the year;seven of these were members of the infant class; these were given beautiful Testaments from the efficient Superintendent, Mr. O. W. Hanner.

The Sunday school elected officers for the year as follows: Supt., O. W. Hanner; asst. supt., W. A. Spear; Secty., L. E. Martin; asst. sec., Miss Lucy Masten; Treas, Miss May Brewer; Organist, Mrs. H. B. Glascoe; asst. organists, Misses Nell Curtis and Mary Murphy.

Mr. J. D. Newell, one of our most consecrated members, who has been very sick for twelve weeks, shows little if any improvement. Reporter.

Jan. 1st.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

The New Year.

Our earnest wish for all the readers of the Postal Card and especially for the brethren in the pastorate is for a very happy and successful New Year.

Christmas Cheer.

We wish to thank the following kind friends for Christmas good cheer: Mrs. H. G. Moore, for a very fat hen which easily filled the place of the proverbial turkey; Mrs. Geo. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Jones, Mr. Wm. Parish and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tucker for a general variety of fresh meats; Mrs. J. W. Pegram for butter; Mr. Early O. Pegram for quails; Rev. J. R. Dwiggins for oysters. We would also thank Bro. "Tom" Tucker for a necktie of a better grade than the editor usually wears.

Important.

The official members of Flat Rock Circuit will please to remember that the 1st quarterly conference is to be held in Flat Rock church on Thursday of next week (Thursday, Jan. 11th). We earnestly request a full attendance. The conference is to open at 11 o'clock, A. M.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.

Since our last report the Annual Conference was held and we are glad indeed that our good pastor, C. A. Cecil, was sent back to us. He began his third year's work with us last Sunday. He preached a very interesting sermon, using as his text I Sam. 17:47, "And all this assembly shall know that the Lord saveth not with sword and spear: for the battle is the Lord's and he will give you into our hands." He brought out very plainly even to the little children how to succeed. The secret of success is believing on God. Success attends those who have it; failure those who expect it. May we think over these helpful statements in the right spirit, for an effort without God is failure.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely for the winter months. We sent a small box to the Denton Orphanage; also our usual monthly collection. We are glad to welcome our new superintendent, Mr. Mark Witty, to his work at the beginning of the new year. We thank our superintendent, Mr. Henry Sharpe, for his faithfulness and good work in our Sunday school. May God help us to work closer together and accomplish much good.

We are sad to mention the sudden death of Mrs. A. L. Plunkett, one of our most faithful members. She leaves in our church a vacant place, which no one can fill. She joined the church when only 14 years old and always enjoyed helping the cause of God along. S.

Flat Rock Letter.

New Year's greetings!

"In the beauty of the lilies, Christ was born across the sea
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me."

At the opening of this new year, first we would congratulate Rev. J. S. Williams, who, owing to his peculiar adaptability to this specific work, has been made chaplain. I trust in his prolonged ministrations to the sick, he may not lose the sacred vessel of the ministry, but keep it inviolate.

In the revelation of St. John, the divine, when he was shown the Christ, the seven stars in his right hand were the seven angels, or ministers of the seven churches. To our some eighty ministers, Flat Rock sends greetings, these eighty chosen vessels that God has selected to bear his treasures.

From the mountains and plains with tired sandals laid down, to Conference you've journeyed. And these thoughts or unexpired prayers welled from our hearts:

Oh! holy angels, ministering spirits, servants of God; that halos of glory might encircle your heads; God's seal on your brows, and the significant glamor of a well spent year, typical of a similar life, be your only coveted rosary. Grace and peace to you from God the Father and our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ!

To you to whom he has given the coals from off the altar that makes men's hearts burn, and given power to distill in the alembic of men's minds His oracles.

To most of you work has been given. To those overtaxed and grown weary from long continued service, that the lines of their lives be relaxed, and a double portion of love and veneration given them and a support in their declining years, for the eyes of all these "have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord," for "Our God is marching on."

"He has sounded forth the trumpet, that shall never call retreat,
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat."

To you, dear ministers, we appeal. Supplicating in this burning query, Does the longing of the blue and brown-eyed violets and daisies, thick about your feet, as the (undergrowth of the forests,) in calicoes and golden ringlets clad, appeal to you? Does there ever burn upon the altars of your hearts the incense of helpless womanhood? Do the possibilities of the latent talents of the male constituency of your flocks appeal to you? Then from the pulpit and through press awake through thundering tones our church from the appalling lethargy by which it has been enthralled.

You know the warm Gulf stream will not mix with the Atlantic, but runs in all its ameliorating influence, a distinct current parallel to the coast, till it reaches Nantucket. Then it is supposed to be assimilated.

Have we not reached this stragetic Nantucket point? High up on some Pennsylvania plain, towers a magnificant Moravian College. Down through the states of the Union its genial influences flow. All around us its all pervasive spiritual atmosphere is felt. So will ours be. If the "Once in grace, always in grace," have built and fostered a Meredith College, the twenty thousand of us "to him that overcometh," can do so. We have our Dr. Van, (with both hands on) unhampered, developed without the crucible of the threshing machine.

"Reporter."

Asheboro.

An impressive and very helpful watch night service was held in or church Sunday night from 10:30 to 12 o'clock. It was a union service, the pastors and members of the other churches taking part. The attendance was good notwithstanding the unfavorable weather and every one present seemed interested every minute of the time. Some phases of church work and of church need were discussed, some special music, finally Tennyson's Ring Out, Wild Bells was read. This ending just at 12 the church bell was rung. T. M. Johnson.

Efland.

Our church at this place has sustained a loss in the death of Bro. W. H. Jones. Though he had been in for some time his death was unexpected and was a shock to his family and friends. Bro. Jones was a good churchman, always taking an interest in the work and attending the quarterly conferences when he could. His presence and counsel will be missed in the councils of the church, but the church had trained him to serve in another and higher service. We buried his body in the churchyard on Christmas day and turned away from his grave with sad hearts because of our loss, yet we hope to see him again in that home which God has prepared for those who love Him.

Homer Casto.

Siler City Circuit.

The work of this circuit is progressing nicely, and the churches seem to be encouraged to move forward. The five Sunday schools on the circuit each expect to run through the winter. This has not been done for a number of years. I am glad to say that each school is in a prosperous condition. The school at Siler City had a Christmas entertainment accompanied by a Christmas tree. The children rendered their pieces exceptionally well and the tree was as nice as the nicest. This was an occasion that was enjoyed by all present. The live Sunday school at Zion also had an entertainment and Christmas tree that will long be remembered by all who were present, the children were at their best, and the tree one of rare beauty, loaded with presents. The most excellent superintendent, Bro. J. H. Siler, will long appreciate and remember the crowning present, presented to him by the school as an appreciation of his faithful work. The pastor wants here to express appreciation for the number of presents received, some of which were indeed valuable. J. H. Bowman, Pastor.

High Point, Welch Memorial.

Have just entered upon my new work. Filled first appointment second Sunday in December. While waiting a couple of weeks for my household goods I was entertained by the good people of High Point. When my goods arrived, Bro. W. M. Wilborn and J. D. Taylor soon had them in the parsonage, and several of the brethren and sisters were on hand ready to help arrange it in the parsonage and their help was very much appreciated.

Held our first quarterly conference on Friday before the third Sunday in Dec. The general business transacted in the spirit of love. Bro. T. H. Matthews was a visitor at Welch on the fifth Sunday and filled the pulpit for me at the morning service. We were glad to have him with us and his discourse was very instructive.

There is a great work for all and we are hoping and praying for a good year at Welch. D. R. Wlliams.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Last second Sunday Bro. Lowdermilk filled his first appointment for this Conference year; as usual, he preached a splendid sermon that was well received by the congregation. All were glad to welcome Bro. Lowdermilk back to be with us another year. I wish him a happy new year and a prosperous year's work, and I feel sure that if the membership of our church were as thoroughly consecrated to the service to God as I believe our pastor to be and would co-operate with him in the effort to build up the church, we would succeed in accomplishing some good. I am sorry to say that I fail to see anything very encouraging at present from the fact that there is neither prayermeeting nor Sunday school. We have not had any school for two months. There was no necessity for its stopping so early, but every body stopped coming, that's what did the work for the Sunday school. At the close of our special meeting a lady member came to me and said that we needed a prayer meeting, that we were not prepared for the meeting and asked me to help them out. So I agreed to do what I could and suggested that we have a prayer meeting first and third Sunday in each month at eleven o'clock, but that was the last of it, they would not come. It seems to me that a church that is contented with just a sermon or so a month is quite a distance from the line of a live church. May the Lord help every member of our church in the beginning of the year 1912 to pray to be filled with the Holy Spirit that we may become the consecrated servants of God and take the interest in our pastor and the church that I believe he has in the people and the church, that we may work together for the advancement of God's kingdom. I hope after the winter vacation is over and spring opens up that we will take on new life. Wishing the editor and the many readers of the Herald a happy New Year.

J. H. Gordon.

Pilot Church.

As the close of the year 1911 has come, I wish to say that I am surely glad that the Conference did so good as to send us our same good preacher, Bro. A. L. Hunter, as it seems to me the longer he stays the better we like him. And I truly hope that at the close of the coming year, 1912, that we may be far better than we are now.

We hope to have Brother Hunter preach for us next Sunday as it is his regular appointment.

I hope everyone spent Christmas in the way that they should and best knew how. Certainly hope they realize why the 25th of December is called Christmas day.

With much success to Editor in his work, I still remain,

Etta Whitaker.

Pinnacle, N. C., Dec. 28, 1911.

Burlington.

The unfavorable weather has decreased our Sunday school attendance very much for the past two Sundays. The secretary's report will show a total attendance for 1911 of 10,500, an average of 199. This is 256 more than the largest attendance for any other year in the church's history. We expect still greater things in 1912.

Bro. J. G. Rogers' service as superintendent expired on last Sunday. The new superintendent, Bro. R. M. Andrews, will assume his duties next Sunday. We hope the Sunday school will continue to grow under his leadership.

Our Christmas exercise and "Country Store" were successes. The exercise has been pronounced one of the best ever held here.

On the fourth Sunday in December, Bro. Davis was sick and unable to preach. We were glad to have Bro. Andrews preach for us. He gave us a good sermon.

Bro. Davis was able to be out last Sunday and gave us two of his fine sermons. Those who fail to attend the Sunday evening services of the church missed a rare treat last Sunday night.

A movement looking to the erection of S. S. rooms has been started and the following committee to investigate the matter has been elected bp the official board of the church: Rev. T. E. Davis. M. A. Coble, J. H. Boon, and J. G. Rogers. We expect to have them built by the time Conference comes, and we expect to show you the largest, best and livest S. S. in our church in the state.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Jan. 4th, 1912.

Baraca Report.

On last Sunday the class elected the following officers for the first six months of 1912: President, J. H. Boon; V. Pres., J. G. Rogers; Sec., T. T. Stafford; Asst. Sec., Dover G. Heritage; Treasurer, W. T. Way; Press Reporter, W. E. Crutchfield; Treasurer Class Room Fund, G. L. Amick; Teacher, Rev. T. E. Davis; Asst. Teacher, M. A. Coble.

The class had an attendance last year of 1532, an increase of 81 over 1910. We are going to "Do Things" on a larger scale this year. Secretary.

Forsyth Ct.

Rev. W. E. Swain, Dear Bro.:

We held our first quarterly meeting Saturday before the fifth Sunday at Pleasant Hill, but owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was small. But the business was transacted in the spirit of love.

Yours n the Work.

T. A. Williams.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Sunday school in good condition; to continue through winter.

Monday night, Dec. 25, our Christmas tree exercise was held. Really it was a success. The behavior exceptionally good.

Our Sunday school for the past year has been very interesing and beneficial, but let's try to exceed that this year. One word signifies the success of a Sunday school, that is, "interest." Without God, no interest, and without interest, no Sunday school. Polk Garrett.

Jan. 2, 1912.

Orange.

The people of this charge gave us a cordial welcome. A nice dinner was awaiting us at the parsonage when we came. Those present to receive us were Mrs. W. Hobbs, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Pender, Mr. T. P. Cheek, Miss Lillie Thompson, Misses Nancy and Annabell Pratt, also Mr. John Pender, who met us at the train and took us to parsonage. After the people had gone we found they had left us several good things to eat: fresh meat, canned fruit, dried fruit, flour, cakes and pies. These things always encourage the pastor and his wife, and we are truly thankful for the gifts and the thoughtfulness of the people.

R. C. Stubbins.

Died at His Home.

Joseph Absalom Scales was born January 25th, 1827, and departed this life Dec. 21st, 1911. He was married to Louisa Ann Swann Jan 9th, 1850. Their union was blessed with seven children. He leaves only one child to mourn his loss. His wife and children crossed over before him, all except Mrs. Mary A. Baxter. He leaves 17 grand children, and 46 great grand children.

Bro. Scales was a member of the M. P. Church at Tabernacle, and had been for 61 years. A good and noble man has gone. He loved to talk of heaven and what God had done for him. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

His body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Antioch M. E. Church, to await the resurrection morn. The funeral was conducted by the writer.

T. A. Williams.

Again the hearts of many were made sad when the death angel entered the home of Mr. J. H. Powell and claimed for its own his dearly beloved wife, Disa Jane Powell.

She was, before marriage, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bowman. She is survived by her husband, one son, Walter Powell, and four brothers, Mr. Joe Bowman of Yadkin County, Mr. Geo. and Rufus Bowman of near Pinnacle, Route No. 3, and one sister, Miss Sallie Bowman, of Pilot Mountain.

Mrs. Powell was a good Christian woman. She professed faith in Christ in early life and joined the M. P. Church from which she lived a consistent member till her death. All who knew her loved her. She told her husband that she was warned of her death and prepared her clothes for burial, and the day before she died she called her husband and son to her and told them not to grieve after her, that she was ready and willing to die, and told her son to be a good boy and stay with his father. She was born April 15, 1845, died Nov. 2, 1911, making her stay on earth 66 years, 6 mos. and 17 days.

Her body was laid to rest in the grave yard at Pilot church Saturday evening, November 5. Funeral services conducted by Rev. A. L. Hunter, of Pinnacle.

Grieve not, husband and son, brothers and sisters, after the body that sleeps beneath the sod, but rejoice to think of that pure immortal soul that is rejoicing with the angels of heaven. And may you so live that when the summons comes for you, you can say as she did, "I am ready." What great consolation this was to those that were left alone.

Etta Whitaker.

Pinnacle, N. C., Dec. 28, 1911.

Mrs. Hannah M. Scales died in Morganton at 3 o'clock A. M., Dec. 28th, in the 85th year of her age. The body was brought to Flat Rock and buried by the side of her father and mother. Mrs. Scales was a sister to Rev. T. J. Ogburn of Greensboro, N. S. Ogburn of Monroe,

W. C. Ogburn of Wadesboro, Alfred Ogburn of Asheville, and Mrs. Kate Brittian of Summerfield. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. C. Kennett, pastor.

Fletcher Wade Nelson was born in Orange County, February 20, 1869, and died at his home in the same county on Dec. 13, 1911.

Bro. Nelson was married to Miss Fannie Nicholson about fourteen years ago, and to ths union six children were born, all of whom survive him.

He was a successful business man and a partner in the firm in Mebane known as the Nelson-Cooper Lumber Company.

Bro. Nelson had been a sufferer for several years from lung trouble which resulted from an attack of pneumonia some years ago. He was treated in several sanitariums, but it seemed that health could not be regained. He bore his suffering patiently and with Christian fortitude. It seemed from his conversation with the writer from time to time that his greatest desire to live was that he might rear his six small children in the right way.

His faith in God was strong and his hopes were high, and often remarked that "I am only waiting for the time to come when my sufferings will end."

For a number of years he was a loyal member of Hebron Methodist Protestant Church, and on Dec. 15, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends he was laid to rest by the side of his mother in the church yard of which he was a member, to await the resurrection.

Chas. J. Edwards, Pastor.

MARRIED.

Griffin-Dixon.

Married at the M. P. parsonage in Reidsville on Thursday, Nov. 16th,. There were only a few friends present as they sprung a surprise on their many friends and their pastor was sometime getting his nerves steady, being so astonished. Mr. Griffin is a worthy young farmer, being a man of steady habits. He is industrious and is pushing right ahead. Miss Dixon is an accomplished young lady. She graduated last spring at Reidsville. She is not afraid of work and we bespeak for them a prosperous future. May our heavenly Father smile upon them.

C. E. M. Raper.

Jones- Thompson.

One of the most interesting marriages that has taken place in this community lately was solemnized at Chestnut Ridge Church Dec. 20, 1911, when Miss Effie, the popular and attractive daughter of Mr. Jno. A. Thompson, became the bride of Mr. Cicero H. Jones, one of Orange County's best known young citizens.

Ushers were Messrs. S. W. Crutchfield, Chester A. Sykes, Hon. Chester Turner, and Mr. Thomas P. Cheek. Attendants were Messrs. W. A. Davies and J. Elmore Thompson, Misses Lula Roberson and Floy Thompson. Ring bearers were Master J. Norman Crutchfield and little Miss Juanita Thompson. Best man was Mr. Thomas O. Pender. The bride's maid was Miss Fannie Thompson, sister of the bride.

Miss Agnes Hoffmaster, of Hagerstown, Md., beautifully sang "Love Never Dies." Miss Sophina Brown rendered the music. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was used. The bride and her attendants all wore white and carried white carnations. The gown of the bride was messaline imperial serge.

The church was beautifully decorated with clinging cedar, French ivy, holly and ferns, being artistically arranged, giving a natural effect.

The gift of the groom was a beatiful diamond ring. Other gifts were numerous and valuable, coming from this and other states.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left over the Southern for Knoxville, Nashville, and other points west.

Rev. R. C. Stubbins performed the ceremony.

A Double Wedding.

On December 24, there was a beautiful home wedding at the home of Mr. Joshua Morgan, that of his daughter, Miss Erma Morgan to Mr. Gurney Boyles, and that of Miss Sironey Morgan to Mr. Joseph McDowell. The parlor was beautifully decorated and paper chains were draped on every side which added much to its beauty. About twelve o'clock about 25 relatives and friends were invited in the parlor and in just a few minutes the cry came, Behold the brides and grooms come, and they were quickly ushered into the parlor by Mr. Ernest Ridge, while Miss Emma Ridge played the wedding march.

The writer first rendered the matrimony to Mr. Boyles and Miss Erma M., then to Mr. McDowell and Miss Sironey M. Miss Erma is one of our most accomplished young ladies and has many friends who regret for her to leave the community. The church at Piney Grove will miss her, but the family at home will miss her more than any one else, for tears they shed when she left showed she was loved very much. The writer was so sorry for her dear old grand mother, who is 90 years old, for it seemed it would break her heart to give up her grand daughter. I understand that Mr. Boyles is a young man of high standing. The writer wishes them much success in life.

Miss Sironey is a daughter of Mr. John Morgan. She was raised near Farmer, but has been in Asheboro of late and has many friends. Mr. McDowell is one of Asheboro's most promising young men and is highly esteemed. May the Lord bless their union with a long and happy life. They will make their home in Asheboro, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Boyles will make their home in Thomasville, N. C.

Joel Trogdon.

At six o'clock P. M., Dec. 20th, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Esther Williams, in Rockingham County, Miss Jewell, the only daughter of Sister Williams, was married to Mr. Carl Blackburn Hayes of Monroeton, N. C., Rev. W. F. Kennett officiating.

Miss Jewell has been one of Flat Rock's best and most faithful young women and as Mrs. Hayes she will be no less useful, we trust.

We are pleased to know that they will make their home with Sister Williams for the present at least.

We wish for these young people a very happy and useful life.

Professor Hugh Evander Willis of the Law College, University of Minnesota, sends this beautiful and inspiring New Year's greeting to the members of The Christian Herald Family Circle:

"A Happy New Year!

"You, who have tried to gain happiness outside of the Kingdom of Heaven, who have refused to take out its naturalization papers because you have thought it is what churches sing about or theologians quarrel about, read the Sermon on the Mount (that is the constitution of the Kingdom of Heaven!); and if you decide for yourself that you would like life under such a constitution—as I know you will—enter the rich land of service, live one year according to the principles of love, and then tell me whether or not one should be a citizen of the Kingdom of Heaven!"—Christian Herald.

—Daniel Millikan was buried in the family burying ground at Marlboro Church in Randolph County.

—Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, denies any knowledge of the McNamaras' dynamiting schemes at the time they were engaged in them.

—Bryan denies that he is a presidential candidate, but doesn't deny that he might become one.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Didn't you find the story of Ezra interesting, not withstanding the long list of names and numbers? What a great man Ezra was! We might compare him to Martin Luther, the German Reformer. Both acted under the influence of ancient writings, neglected or misinterpreted by their contemporaries.

A question or two:

94. What were the Nethinims?

95. How much time elapsed between Ezra's and Nehemiah's going to Jerusalem?

Question 94 is referred to Mrs. Swearingen; 95 to Miss Xannie Stowe.

No one has yet told what the most popular Jewish name was. We will give one more week on that.

Lesson for Next Week.

Nehemiah, first seven chapters.

PEACE MEETING ENDS IN UPROAR.

A mass meetng in support of the ratification of the general arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France was held in Carnegie Hall, December 12. Upwards of five thousand people, representing the brain, the culture, the refinement and, alas! as it ultimately proved, the hoodlum element, were in attendance. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Joseph Choate. Colonel Henry Watterson, Samuel J. Elder, counsel for the United States in the North Atlantic Fisheries Arbitration Treaties, 1910, Rr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia College, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Hon Richard Bartholdt and Dr. Stephen S. Wise were the scheduled speakers.

Mr. Choate, at the opening of the ceremonies, explained that the Citizens' National Committe, an organization consisting of prominent citizens from all States in the Union and represented by the committee and their guests, were gathered together for the single purpose of advocating the ratification of the arbitration treaties now before the Senate, and that the committee had arranged for similar gatherings in all the principal cities in the United States. Cheers greeted this announcement and the meeting from the outset promised to be a great public demonstration in favor of Peace.

Colonel Henry Watterson, in an eloquent speech which was a direct appeal to the American people to support the National Committee in its undertaking, reached climax after climax in storms of approval and applause. He said in brief that England and France, at the invitation of the United States, had called many mass meetings, and had, to a man, sustained the arbitration treaties. Already at our hands the ratification of these treaties has been delayed too long by the Senate. Public men in every party, leaders in political life, captains of industry and commerce, men of letters, ministers of the Gospel, representatives of national associations, boards of trade, commercial organizations throughout the length and breadth of our country have incessantly expressed hearty approval of the ratification of the treaties before the Senate. "It is the people who are delaying," the Colonel insisted, and directly appealed to the audience, by their co-operation and active interest, to make it impossible that our government should be left impotent or unwilling to move or that America's honor should be made synonymous with Punic faith. If the arbitration treaties are lost by senatorial quibbling, a great and bewildering obstruction will be thrown upon world-progress; and if the American people neglect to act, they invite the defeat of the most benign, humane, progressive and inspiried movement of modern times.

This final appeal drew forth a storm of applause from all parts of the vast hall, with tier after tier of stalls and boxes crowded with peace advocates and enthusiasts, and beantifully decorated with white and gold. The great semi-circle of the auditorium itself was emblazoned with parti-colored shields of nations and the stirring motto, "O Lord, Let Thy Kingdom Come," blazed in gigantic letters over the stage.

At the end of Colonel Watterson's speech—which was practically the only one of the evening—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia College, rose and made a motion that the enthusiasm be crystallized then and there into a definite resolution that should be carried by unanimous vote. Suddenly Alphonse B. Koelble, who claimed to represent the German-American Citizens' League, jumped upon a chair and denied the right to pass resolutions urging the Senate to ratify the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France. He claimed that the proposed treaties were breeders of war, not of peace. "We know England's plans," he declared. "She wants to go after Germany and lick her; but before she does it, she wants to tie the United States up, so that she cannot interfere. We won't stand for it! We won't!"

The words were evdently a prearranged signal, for instantly a terriffic uproar started in the top gallery—an uproar that continued in defiance of all measures taken to quell it.

The disturbance was evidently planned with utmost care. The disturbers doubtless knew that, immediately following Colonel Watterson's address, Dr. Butler was to present the resolution. For ten minutes the crowd in the galleries yelled, whistled, jeered, and stamped their feet. Bedlam had broken loose. One heard, above the din, the leader Koelble denounced as the instigator of the noisy demonstration. Various members of the committee vainly attempted to restore order. Most notable among these attempts was that of Rabbi Wise, who by appealing first to the Irish, then to the Roman Catholic, and lastly to the Jewish element, attempted to force reason upon the obstreperous hoodlums. Dr. Wise spoke straight to the gallery, ignoring the great body of the house, which was with him; but his was a hopeless task.

Mr. Choate again took the meeting in hand and after declaring to the rioters, in a voice that was a noble attempt to overreach the din, that their attempt to break up the meeting had done more for the cause of Peace and for the furtherance of the ratification of the treaties than they could ever have done by staying at home or remaining quiet, the meeting was adjourned.

No one even then could tell just what the riot had been all about. The great crowd of people made their way out into the streets in a kind of daze, vaguely realizing that, with an audacity which no one in the peace movement had been able to foresee, one man, by packing the audience with less than three hundred leather-lunged rioters armed with megaphones, had dared to ask the meeting to do exactly the opposite of what it had been assembled to do, and, by means of noise alone, had momentarily defeated the advocates of Peace in their purpose. The great mass meeting in favor of Peace among nations had been reduced to confusion. Mr. Carnegie, during the riotous outbreak, was speechless with amazement. He simply held up his hand with an expression of utter dismay when he saw how the meeting had been transformed into a bedlam.

Mr. Koelble, after the disturbance, denied any intention of starting the hostile demonstration. He claimed to have been as much surprised as anybody at the result of his interruption. He said in substance: "The purpose of our party is to thwart entangling alliances by this country with Great Britain and to frustrate anything that might ruin the friendship of this country with Germany. I regard as very significant the recent remark of Earl Grey, that the proposed treaty would insure England a food supply in case of continental war. It is strange that England should come to America looking for an arbitration treaty, when she knows there is no danger of war with America. Why does she not seek such a treaty with Germany, with which country a war is imminent?" Mr. Koelble was born in this country but his sympathies are all with the Fatherland.

"WOLF."

The mail-carrier of Rural Free Delivery Number Four stood with a number of letters and papers in his hand, looking perplexedly about him. This was certainly the end of his route; the road terminated in a mere track that ran up the long slope of the hill beyond, and down on the other side—so he had heard—into the gorge known as "Big Gap." The mail-carrier was a new man, obliged to learn the route by himself; his predecessor had quit the government service and that part of the country very suddenly. Near the distributing center the carrier got along very well; the farther he went out into the country the more inquiries he was obliged to make, and he welcomed the appearance of a youth, who came out of the house and opened the letter-box with an air of proprietorship.

"Here is some mail for Hevison," said the carrier. "But I was told that your house was the end of the route, and I haven't found any Hevisons on the way."

The youth, occupied in looking over his own mail, nodded absently over his shoulder. "He lives beyond the Gap a mile or more, but he gets his mail here. There's his box," indicating it by a nod.

"Oh!" said the carrier, and proceeded to drop the Hevison mail into its proper receptacle. Returning, he asked, "Is this the nearest place for them to get their mail?"

"Not the nearest, but the easiest for them to reach. There's no road at all on the other side—it's too steep. He's got a little timber land up there that he's trying to sell to a lumber company. It's an awful lonesome place."

"Should think it would be," said the carrier, measuring the slope with his eye. "Has he much of a family?"

"His wife and three kids; the oldest is only ten. But his father lives with them, and there's Wolf—he's most human."

"Wolf? Oh, the dog. What kind of a dog?"

"Why, no particular kind—just 'most anything in the way of a dog—but the smartest four-legged beast in the township. You ought to see him come down here all by himself and ask for the mail."

The carrier changed the conversation to a more personal subject. "I was told that I could probably make a bargain with you folks for dinner for me and my horse."

"I guess you can; the other man did. Come this way and I'll show you the stable."

When they returned, an elderly man was unlocking the box marked Hevison. A medium-sized black-and-white dog, as Charley Bailey said, of no particular kind, pranced about the old man, now springing up against him with an eager bark, now standing with wagging tail and expectant eyes at his side.

"He's saying that this is his business," said the old gentleman, nodding good-humoredly to the carrier, "and I'm willing enough to let him do it usually. But to-day I had a package to mail, and had to come myself. Here, Wolf, boy, you may take the papers; I'll carry the letters myself."

He untied a black bag from about the dog's neck, put the papers in and retied the bag, Wolf whining impatiently meanwhile, "There; home with you," and the dog darted off like a shot.

While the carrier weighed Mr. Hevison's package and stamped it, Mrs. Bailey came out and urged the old man to stay to dinner, or at least come in and rest.

"Thank you, Mrs. Bailey; not this time. Amos has gone to Miltonville to remain until the end of the week. Annie is in bed with what seems a bad cold, and I am housekeeper and chore boy both."

"I'll come up in the morning to see your daughter," said Mrs. Bailey instantly sympathetic. She stood watching the old man as he walked quite briskly away. "I wish he'd go slower," she said under her breath. "It makes him puff so and get so red in the face."

"Apopletic," nodded the carrier. "My father used to breathe like that, and he went out like you'd blow out a candle." He followed his hostess into the house shivering. "I'll wager we have a snow storm tomorrow."

He wagered aright. At sundown the wind blew furiously, the skies had grown leaden, and morning found the country in the grasp of a blizzard which lasted, with brief intervals for two days. On the first of these the carrier succeeded in completing his round, though at the risk of his life; on the second he did not even attempt it. The morning of the third, he started out in his little mail wagon, drawn by two horses; when one of these gave out he finished his route on the back of the other, and by the time they arrived at Mrs. Bailey's, man and beast were equally exhausted.

"I see neither old man Hevison nor his dog have been after the mail," he said, attempting to crowd documents into the box, which was apparently full.

The elder Bailey had come out to greet the messenger, and now turned an anxious face toward the long, white, unbroken slope of the hill. "No; and I don't see how anything short of a camel or a giraffe could cross through the Gap. It must be nearly banks even in spots."

Charley, who had followed his father out, added: "I wonder if Mr. Amos Hevison got back from Miltonville while it was storming?"

"Don't think so. He would know it was foolhardy to try to cross the Gap yesterday, or the day before. What's that on the hill yonder?" the speaker made a telescope of his hands—a black spot, bobbing up and down. "Get the spy-glass, Charley."

"It's Wolf," cried Charley excitedly, "and the poor fellow can hardly drag himself along. I'm going after him."

He dropped the glass into his father's hand and ran to the stable, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey and the carrier watched his labored progress through the unbroken waste of snow, and poor Wolfe's struggles that seemed to grow feebler.

"How on earth did the creature get through the Gap?" Mr. Bailey wondered There! Charley's got him."

When they put the dog down on the cleared path before the house he was trembling and could scarcely stand, but he gratefully licked the hands that petted him, and then tried to make his way to his master's letter-box, sinking down before he reached it. Once more Charley picked him up and tried to carry him inside the house; Wolfe struggled to free himself, feebly whining.

"If we give him the leters, he'll want to start right back; I'm afraid we can't do anything with him," the lad said hesitating. His mother suggested untying the black bag that was, as usual, tied about Wolf's neck. Inside they found a paper, on which was scrawled in a childish hand:

"Grandpa's asleep on the floor and we can't wake him up and mother's awful sick. Please sumbody cum quick."

A relief party was soon ploughing its way through the snow. Wolf could not be coaxed to remain behind; he whined until the bag with the mail was tied about his neck, and then seemed satisfied to lie on the sled that, drawn by four horses, headed the procession.

The party found the dead body of old Mr. Hevison lying on the kitchen floor; he had evidently fallen while bringing in an armful of wood. His little granddaughter told with frightened tears of seeing him fall with the wood tumbling about him, and when they ran to their mother she only moaned and cried.

It had happened on the previous day.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1912. NUMBER 8.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCullen, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—$1.00 a year, payable in advance.
Welcome Letters with Subscriptions. Papers are discontinued on expiration of the time for which subscription is paid. Subscribers who neglect it will not have their names booked as "no clear," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or have their subscriptions paid to persons who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot always supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

FOR THE NEW YEAR.

"Tell me, I pray thee, Angel fair and wise,
Who comest with the glad New Year to-day,
The secret of prevailing: how I may
Above the Past's low level daily rise
To Christ's own likeness." Then the Angel's eyes,
Serene and pure, searched me as if to slay
Whatever hindrances were hid away,
And held me back in striving toward the skies.
Then spake gently: "Dost thou not yet know
That every moment given thee to use
Brings with it still the godlike power to choose
With what to fill it? If thy choice be low,
How canst thou rise? If thou wouldst ever be blest, Choose now God's will, for that alone is best."
—M. C. K.

TO THE FRIENDS OF TEMPERANCE OVER THE STATE.

Anti-Saloon League Headquarters, Wilson, N. C.

It is the opinion of the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League that the time has come when it is wise for the friends of prohibition and temperance to again assemble in Convention at our State Capital and counsel together for the advancement of the cause that has proven such an unbounded blessing to our state and to the uplift of humanity.

The liquor interests are watching night and day for any signs of laxity of interest or effort on the part of the friends of temperance anywhere in the whole country. Wherever they find or imagine conditions to exist, they at once concentrate their strength to recapture that section for the exploitation of their hellish business. The first great battle for the cause of civic righteousness, the overthrow of the license system, has been won by a large majority in North Carolina and the voice of the people ought to be final.

Two objects now demand our attention. One is the growing evil of the interstate traffic. We are glad to see that the time is approaching when the National Congress is likely to take cognizance of this evil, and it is desired that we, with men of like faith all over the nation, take counsel together on this subject. In December a great National Conference met at Washington, D. C., to consider this evil, the influence of which has been very wholesome. The other object is the better enforcement of our State laws, along with the teaching and preaching of personal abstinence.

The Executive Committee at its meeting in Raleigh in Convention on January 4th, called a meeting of the temperance forces to assemble in Raleigh in Convention, Jan. 26, 27, 28. In the name of this committee, we therefore invite the friends of temperance throughout the State to be present on this occasion. Local Anti-Saloon Leagues, Law Enforcement Leagues, Churches, Sunday Schools, Boards of Trade, and in fact organizations of all kinds, are requested to send delegates.

Speakers of national and international reputation have already been secured; among them Hon. John G. Wooley, author, statesman and orator of international fame, at one time the nominee of the Prohibition party for President of the United States; Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, whose heroism displayed at Santiago Bay has been heralded around the world, now the distinguished Congressman from Alabama and a hero for temperance reform; Rev. P. A. Baker, D. D., General Superintendent of the Anti Saloon League of America, who knows the temperance situation throughout the nation as no other man.

Three grand rallies on Friday night, Saturday night, and Sunday afternoon at three o'clock will be held in the Auditorium, which is the finest in the State; and the other meetings will be held at the Tabernacle Baptist Church. The various pulpits of the city on Sunday, January 28th, either morning or night, will be filled by some noted temperance workers.

Issued by authority of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League.

R. F. BEASLEY,
Ch'mn Ex. Com.
R. L. DAVIS,
Superintendent.

—Rev. I. I. York writes: "I still enjoy the Christian religion, and preach wherever I go." Bro. York sends two dollars for Herald to himself away from home and to his family at home.

—A good sister writes from Climax asking us to suggest that people sprinkle chaff, straw, or other litter on slippery places. Others find hot ashes good. The heat melts a little of the ice which quickly freezes again, holding the ashes in place.

—How many painful falls this weather has occasioned! The editor went home and found his wife with one arm in a swing, and a wrist badly sprained and swollen and very painful. A neighbor woman fell and sprained both wrists. Another fell and broke off two front teeth and cut her lip through. (She went and got a needle and thread and sewed her lip up herself—amazing nerve!) An old lady in Burlington fell and broke her hip, and lay helpless on the ice till some one happened to come that way. A negro woman in Greensboro fell and broke her arm and a horse slipped and broke his leg. If we could give the whole list the country over, wouldn't it be a long one?

THE BENEFIT OF DAILY BIBLE STUDY.

One is always benefited by forming good habits. What we do is largely the result of habit, and the way to keep these habits from being bad is to form good ones. One of the first things daily Bible study does for us is it helps us to form a good habit, the habit of studying systematically the greatest Book ever written. And once this habit is formed the good will be so evident that it will continue throughout life.

This study also helps us to meet the temptations of the day. It isn't hard to overcome temptations if one is steeped in the atmosphere of the Bible. Christ answered every argument the devil put to him with a quotation from the Bible. If our Saviour needed the Scriptures to strengthen Him in the time of trial, we who are weak and prone to sin must need them a thousand times more to help us overcome the wiles of him who is ever trying to pull mankind down.

By it we become acquainted with the Scriptures and those great heroes who lived so close to God. We are told that character is not taught, but caught. By associating for some time with a man of a strong character one catches something of his spirit. How glorious it is to catch something of the character and inspiration of the great men of the Bible!

Again, it sets standards for men. One who is a consistent student of the Bible is one who has high ideals of life. It is almost impossible for a man who studies the Bible systematically with the right spirit to deal dishonestly with his fellow men. The student who is a systematic Bible student is never caught cheating on examination nor anything else which he would not like to be caught doing.

It brings individual consecration. The systematic Bible student is consecrated to God, and the building up of His cause and the promotion of what is good in his fellowmen. The life of him who lives daily in the atmosphere of the Bible is so consecrated to the service of God that the man of the world feels when coming into his presence that he is very close to God.

It helps to fight life's battles. The man who studies the Bible every day is strong enough to win in the conflicts which come to him. The men who lose in the great battles of life are the men who do not study the Bible systematically.

Above all, it gives us fellowship with God and Jesus Christ, our elder brother. We never really know and have fellowship with a person until we know something of what he believes and teaches. Neither can we really have fellowship with God until we are familiar with his word. Those great men like John Bunyan, Moody, and others who seem to carry the presence of God with them, were men whose lives were consecrated by diligent, earnest study of God's word.

Can we do anything for thirty minutes a day which will do more for us than this? What it has done and is doing for others it will do for you. All you have to do is to give it a fair trial. We have a few group Bible study classes here in Elon which are doing a great work, but still there are numbers of the young men who do not belong to any of them. We wish to organize more groups soon and enroll every young man in college in them. We can do this if we try hard enough. Get together and let's go forward to a more earnest, diligent and systematic study of the Bible. C. J. F.

A STARTLING QUESTION.

Although warned, Paul persists to enter Jerusalem. These verses are a vivid account of Paul's conversion which took place twenty-one years before this time. Read Acts 22:6-16, then compare Acts 9:1-20. A soul crisis came to Paul as he journeyed to Damascus. His attention to law failed to meet the demands of his spiritual nature. So it will with ours. Life was a mystery, he had not got hold of himself. The voice of conscience asserted itself, and communings strong and startling made a way for the revelation of Christ. More of light and peace to uplift Paul from the sad failure of the law to cure the evil of sin was essential for him, and is equally so with us. A man might be, as he was touching the righteousness which is in the law, found blameless, and yet conscious that he was an unforgiven sinner, and in the bond of iniquity. The wondrous revelation came and a new and blessed experience follows, and will do the same today to every individual who accepts the revelation. Every step of Paul's future career was aided by the impulse of his marked conversion, and so will ours. Notice all through this communication I am speaking of genuine conversion, not of pretension.

The startling question: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" One has said, "Canst thou give any good reason for it?" Must I afresh be crucified by thee? Those who persecute the saints, whether private or public member, either an official or minister, persecute Christ Himself, and He takes what is done against them as against Himself. How careful ought we to be when we talk about those who are God's children. See! it is difficult for the reader of his blind, erroneous zeal and oppressive acts, to realize he was a true worshiper of God, and a person of correct life. He thought all the time he was "doing God service;" and that the more he showed his hatred to Jesus and His people, God would love him the more. He honestly says, "I verily thought I ought (It was a false sense of duty) to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth," Acts 26:9. With all the ferocity of a wild heart he breathed out threatenings and slaughter. Upon that eventful journey to Damascus the startling question is heard. The Jew of Tarsus is lying speechless on the earth, but in his ear there sounds some strange and thrilling words. He lifts his eye toward the awful brightness. It is nothing else than the emblem of God's presence—the "shekinah," or glory, which he had often heard of as dwelling in the tabernacle of old, and in the holy of holies in the temple. But it is not mere light—no vision that he sees. There is a glorious Person also. It is Jesus of Nazareth whom he persecuted. Do you think it right to talk about your preacher and superintendents, teachers, etc.? Some seem to think they are doing God's service in persecuting them. They seem to actually enjoy it. Let us see what Christ said to Paul. In this glorious person Saul knew him at once. Jesus addresses him in the Hebrew tongue—the same language in which he had conversed with His twelve disciples. He names him, and in mingled tenderness and rebuke thus speaks: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" It is not my poor innocent people you are cruel to, but what you do to them. I feel as if you were doing it to me; in hurting them you are hurting me. What a gracious tender word of this gracious Savior! What a laying bare of His loving heart. The awestruck horseman, scarcely knowing what he says, replies, "Who art thou, Lord?" The answer comes from the same glorified lips, "I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest." When you are tempted to speak of God's saints, listen to Christ: "Thou persecutest me."

The Mighty Change.

After a few moments of terror, the brightness is past, the voice is hushed. He who fell a bigoted Pharisee, is now an humble and humbled follower of Jesus. A glorious light is shining in his soul, but the dazzling brightness has been too much for his bodily eyes. He rises blind.

The convert: See me, O see me, once a rebel, vanquished at the cross I lie; the cross that tames earth's proudest. Who has ever suffered as I? He convinced me. He renewed me. The nails that nailed and the spear that slew Him transfixed my heart and bound it to Him. Now see me, O! see me, once a rebel—vanquished at His cross I lie.

Grace came, omnipotent grace, and the rampart of that great soul fell like the walls of Jericho; the impregnable citadel was carried in an hour, and all its ample magazines were redeemed for the service of the Lord. So is every one that is born of the Spirit.

C. E. M. Raper.

Reidsville, N. C., Jan. 15, 1912.

"IF."

It is remarkable how many people come to grief from the constant use of this insignificant word, and how many times perfect failures in a pecuniary as well as a moral sense could "make good" by its use.

Our country people are undergoing almost a fuel famine with no reason in the world except they thought if the winter is like the last three or four, but little wood will be needed, and if it should be worse we can supply ourselves on short notice. For the last ten days it has been at a risk to take a horse from the stable, and like the five foolish virgins, great strong men essay to borrow wood from their neighbors. The long spell of perfect weather before the snow gave ample time for everyone to prepare for a rough winter. Now if they had done so, there would have been no loss, for fuel will keep for years if you do not burn it. There are two classes of people in the world—one does a thing when it ought to be done—the other does it when he is forced to do it, and it does not take a Solomon to decide which has the easier time.

Fifteen days of this 1912 have passed, and so much good time has been lost in discussing what great, good things, or bad thing will happen if a certain man is elected to rule (?) this nation. Now we hear not a word of this other if that is more important to us than all the civil laws that could be enacted in a century. If we do our duty as Christians, parents, brothers, sisters, farmers, hirelings, minor public men, officers of the law, and children of one common Father, we will succeed in every undertaking regardless of who may be chosen to rule at Washington. If we could impress the fact on this mighty nation that individuals are responsible for the weal, or woe, of any country they might cease trying to place the blame of maladministration on its so-called rulers.

If we abuse trusts and combines from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, we are equally guilty with them if we sell any poor man any article for more than it is worth because he is compelled to have it.

These wonderful twentieth century folks tell us if we try to mix religion and politics we will come to grief.

I tell you that we have come to grief because they were not mixed. A man's religion is his politics—his politics is his religion. When a man is dishonest in politics, religion pure and undefiled is as far from him as the east is from the west. There has never been room enough in any one's soul for Christ and any unclean thing.

Every man has a perfect right to an opinion until it clashes with God's commandments, but when they are ignored, don't believe for a moment that the perpetrator will get out of "paying the bills."

If we use our best efforts to promote peace and union, honesty and faithful discharge of every duty among individuals, we will be following the Master much more closely than the greatest political ruler that ever graced or disgraced a throne.

Ruth Fletcher.

ARE WE NOT BUILDING OUR CIVILIZATION ON A FALSE BASIS?

The bottom trouble of it all is, we have been trying to found a social order on selfishness. The word to be spoken to this industrial and social order of ours is the word that John the Baptist spoke, and that Jesus Christ caught from his lips and repeated: "Repent ye," etc. Change your minds, for we are building our whole civilization on a false basis. We imagine that human beings can live together usefully and happy when every man lives for himself! We cannot live together in that way! We will simply devour one another. The weak will always be the prey of the strong. We have been having strife, confusion and misery as our perpetual portion, and conditions will steadily get worse under our competitive system! Because God never intended that we should have a competitive system. We were made the share in one another's good and to "bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

We were made not to strive and fight, but we were made to co-operate. "As you would have others do unto you, do ye even so to them." "Love thy neighbor as thyself." "As I have loved you, so ought ye to love one another." To live up to the three quotations above would forever destroy the competitive system, and bring about co-operation and brotherly love. Who ever heard of a man competing against himself? Christ said: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, that ye love one another."

Under our present competitive system, do we show that we love one another, when nearly every man is trying to get the better of his neighbor? Most assuredly not. Whether we like it or not, we must recognize a rapidly growing tendency to separate our people into antagonistic classes.

The growth of plutocracy, the increasing power of the tremendous aggregations of capitol, must foster such antagonisms.

The growing resentment of the many whose industries are exploited for the aggrandizement of the few, is not a matter of wonder to thinking men.

Men with moderate capital can no longer compete with men who have their millions! Hence they are forced to become servants of the men of wealth. Competition was never right in the sight of God; for He says: "One is your master even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

The time was when competition was not so hurtful as now, i. e., when we had no millionaires, and when nearly all men were nearer on an equality. There was not then the partiality before the law that we find now.

It is said that during the last fiscal year, there were 10,396 persons killed on, or by, the American railroads, and over 150,000 injured. Much of this awful destruction of life may be attributed to competition, and the desire for greater dividends. Presdent Roosevelt said not long since that "Murder is murder!" But have any of those rich men been tried and convicted for murder? Yet if any nation on the globe were killing and maiming half as many annually as the railroads, Uncle Sam would declare war on them at once. But the railroads can kill on and nothing is done to stop them. Let us have co-operation in place of capitalism.

Geo. E. Hunt.

Busy all the Time.

Little Howard came in the other day, crying and rubbing several bumps caused by a series of "buts" administered by a pet sheep.

"Well, Howard," said his sympathetic auntie, "what did you do when the sheep knocked you down?"

"I didn't do anything. I was getting up all the time."—Delineator.

—A mass meeting was held on Jan. 10 in Carnegie Hall, New York, to arouse sentiment against Mormonism.

—Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman has returned to America from his nine weeks' evangelistic campaign in England and Ireland, and next month will sail for Australia.

COMING HOME TO HIM.

Newspaper readers well remember the part played in Tennessee politics in recent years by Gov. Malcolm R. Patterson. His relation to the liquor interest was much like that of Gov. O'Neal, of Alabama. He pardoned Duncan Cooper, convicted of the murder of Senator Carmack, the leading prohibitionist of that state.

All these reflections are brought vividly to mind upon reading in the daily press of the case of Malcolm Patterson, Jr., son of the former governor, who has been on trial lately in Seattle, Washington, for shooting and seriously wounding a man in that State. Gov. Patterson has been out there, at great expense, defending his son. The only plea that he could make was insanity, and the day after Christmas the commission appointed to investigate the young man's mental condition reported that when he did the shooting he was suffering from epilepsy as a result of continuous drinking, and that it was dangerous for him to be at large.

We do not know that the conduct and influence of the father is in any way responsible for this sad situation, but the thought naturally suggests itself to the mind. When any man, especially in high official position, deliberately lends or sells himself to the service of such an iron-hearted monster as the liquor traffic, he need not be surprised to reap in his own family, if not in his own body, the fruits of such an unholy alliance. This is no uncommon thing. It is the general rule. We do not have to go as far away as Washington to find an example of it.—Roanoke (Ala.) Leader.

An eminent English physician, Sir Jas. Sawyer, has given the following twenty rules for prolonging life for a century: "Eight hours' sleep. Sleep on your right side. Keep your bed-room windows open all night. Have your mat at your bedroom door. Do not have your bed against the wall. No cold tub in the morning, but a bath at the temperature of the body. Exercise before breakfast. Eat little meat, and see that it is well-cooked. For adult: Drink no milk. Eat plenty of fat to feed the cells which destroy disease germs. Avoid intoxicants, which destroy these cells. Daily exercise in the open air. Allow no pet animals in your living rooms. They are apt to carry about disease germs. Live in the country, if you can. Watch the three D's—drinking water, damp, and drains. Have a change of occupation. Take frequent and short holidays. Limit your ambition; and keep your temper."

GRIMPS OR GRUMPS.

It is better to be a Grimp than a Grump,
It is also more pleasant by far,
So, if you will listen, I'll tell you how you can Discover which species you are.
If you wake up in the morning and do not get up
Until after breakfast bell rings:
If you can't find your book or your gloves or your bag,
And someone has hidden your things:
If everyone's sober, and nobody smiles:
If the sun has gone under a cloud,
If no body pays much attention to you,
Although you may speak very loud:
In fact, if you find every one in the dumps,
You may be very sure you belong to the Grumps.

But if you get up with a smile on your face,
And whistle a tune as you dress,
Your hat or your gloves may not be in their place,
You're good humored, nevertheless;
If you look for the sunshine in others you meet,
And give it, unmeasured to all:
If you think that the world is as right as can be,
And that no one is petty or small:
If you conquer the Grumps and similar imps,
You may be pretty sure you belong to the Grimps.

There isn't much difference, really, you see,
In deciding the sort of person to be.
The only distinction you will find if you try,
Consists in the use of the U or the i.
And whether this letter is I or is U
Depends most of all on your point of view.
—Robert Seaver, in Youth's Companion.

CHRISTIAN UNITY AND MISSIONS.

Will the Church ever be united in one body until our Lord Himself returns to reign? Whether or not this is too much to expect, it is assuredly not too high an ideal for which to pray and work. The question of the relation of various divisions of the body of Christ will never be settled until they are settled right. No true disciple of Christ can doubt that it is the will of the Master that all His followers shall be one in spiritual unity and loyalty to Him and love to one another, and that all shall work together harmoniously and with the one common aim—the speedy evangelization of the world.

There may still be room for a difference of opinion as to the extent of outward union and the method of co-operation. Different branches of the Church, like different men, may be divinely impressed by various phases of the truth and diverse needs of the world. Personality, training, and locality enable different men to accomplish different results, but there should always be a united front against evil and error and a spirit of fellowship and love in the various ranks of the Great Commander.

The papers dealing with this question of Christian unity in its relation to world-wide missions will be read with interest. Representatives of various branches of the Church have been asked to give their views, and there is a general unanimity of opinion.

The great purpose of Christ is for the conversion of the world to God. This must be accomplished through the body of Christ acting under direction of the head. If there is disharmony in the members there must be somewhere disharmony with the head. Remove, first, the inconsistencies of Christians, and, second, the discords among Christians and the greatest obstacles to the progress of Christianity will be taken away.

In order to bring about real practical unity and co-operation among various Christian bodies there must be agreement on a few essentials and liberty in non-essentials. The Protestant Episcopal Church must give up emphasis on the essential distinction between clergy and laity and the unbroken apostolic succession through human agency. The Baptists must yield in the belief and practice that immersion is the only true form of baptism, and that only adult immersed believers are true members of the family of Christ. Presbyterians and Methodists must agree that while the decrees of God are absolute, man has been given freedom of choice and the decrees of God have not been fully revealed.

It may be difficult to agree on a definite doctrinal basis, but loyalty to God, as revealed in Jesus Christ, His son, is the basis of all Christian union. Matters of church government and worship, with minor interpretations, doctrines, rules and regulations, are not essential to salvation or service. It is time to emphasize points of agreement and to lose sight of the matters of difference. Bishop Doane, in a recent address, gives the following as a basis of doctrinal agreement:

"There are certain irresistible and unescapable truths: the Godliness of God, the Fatherhood of God, the creation of all things by God, the Incarnation of our Lord, His ministry, His death, His burial, His Resurrection, His Ascension into heaven and the coming of the Holy Spirit. No mind can empty itself, and have any mind left, of these fundamental facts. What is there for us to do? First of all, to give ourselves to prayer, and tion patiently to wait God's time and watch for God's way."—Missionary Review.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answer to Assigned Questions

It was a fulfillment of Jeremiah's prophecy that God should have the temple rebuilt, and restored to its former perfections. It seems that the faith of those Old Testament kings was largely traditional, and it took very small things to make them change their views. We read of so many of them that commenced to reign in the fear of God, and when He blessed them with every earthly good, they would fall into idolatry, and lead their whole kingdom to forsake the true God, and swear allegiance to the arch enemy. They would continue in this way until eternal destruction was at their very doors, and then they would promise entire amendment should the vengeance of God be stayed to return to their wickedness again as soon as prosperity returned to them. Yet, we cannot censure them when we see, in this day, after 19 centuries of gospel light almost the whole world following in their footsteps.

It is only Divine Wisdom that can decide how many people are following Christ in this day, for love, or are following Him "not for miracles that He did, but that they did eat of the loaves and were filled." T. F. W.

Lesson for Next Week.

Esther, first five chapters.

NOTES.

—Rev. Charles M. Sheldon has resigned the pastorate of Central Congregational Church, Topeka, Kans., where he has labored for the past twenty-three years. He will make a tour of the world, visiting the various mission fields.

—Before the close of 1911 the quarter-million-dollar fund for aged and disabled ministers of the Baptist Church (North) was completed. Two hundred thousand dollars was raised, thus meeting the condition on which fifty thousand additional dollars was left by a Baptist layman.

—Park Presbyterian Church, New York City, Dr. William P. Merrill, pastor, has inaugurated daily noonday services. This church is located in the heart of the city, and it is hoped by these services to reach some of the great crowds that throng the streets during the luncheon hour.

—The statistics of the Protestant Missionary societies of the world for 1911 published in the Missionary Review of the World for January, show that during the past year 152,216 members were received in the various foreign fields. The total foreign membership is 2,304,318, a net gain of 81,426 for the year.

—During the ten days' evangelistic campaign in Londonderry, Ireland, led by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, over one thousand persons definitely decided for Christ and ninety-seven young men announced their willingness to give their lives to the Christian ministry.

—At the meeting of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church a committee was appointed to prepare a memorial urging the General Conference to fix by legislation a minimum school training for admission on trial in the Annual Conferences.

—Mr. Geo. Hendricks, formerly of Asheboro, is moving from near Guilford College to Greensboro. We understand that he expects to conduct a roller mill business. His success in other enterprises makes his prospect good in this.

—Bro. G. O. Coble was in New York when the Equitable Building was burned, and saw the big fire.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills was missed in church last Sunday. He had gone North on business.

—Mr. Cook, of New York, who was long a member of Grace Church choir, surprised us by a visit last Sunday. He sang a solo in the morning service.

—Grace Church, of this city, was closed last Sunday night on account of the severe cold.

—Mrs. K. H. Kirk, of Burlington, is in Miami, Florida, for the health of a grandchild, the child of Mrs. Meadows.

—Mrs. W. C. Dennis died yesterday, 5 P. M., at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Boyles, in Thomasville. The funeral party pass through Greensboro today on the way to Pinnacle for burial tomorrow.

—Notice has been served on merchants having places of business outside the city limits of Greensboro, but selling and delivering goods to customers inside, that they must pay the regular merchants' license fee of ten dollars a year, or keep on the outside. This license, however does not permit the selling of fresh meat and sausage.

—The election held in Durham Jan. 16 on the question of a $50,000 bond issue for new school buildings carried by a majority of 72 votes. Out of a total of 670 registered voters 359 votes were cast for the bonds.

An Ohio man, writing of the intense cold there, speaks of the popping noise that the cold makes in the timbers of the house. We have heard the same sound, and it is quite startling sometimes in the still hours of night.

—How do you like zero weather?

—On the morning of Jan. 16, Charles H. Jacobson, a truck farmer living near New Bern, was struck by the incoming eastbound train on the Norfolk and Southern railway yards and received injuries from which he died soon after being carried to the Stewart sanitarium. Mr. Jacobson, who was about 65 years old, had left home that morning to go to New Bern on business. No one saw the accident, but it is supposed that the old man in getting out of the way of the train slipped on the ice-covered snow and fell under the wheels of the engine. His skull was crushed and one of his lower limbs broken.

—Four train men were killed and two severely injured in a wreck at Long Run, 18 miles east of Louisville, Ky., on the afternoon of Jan. 16. The incoming passenger train on the Louisville and Nashville railroad collided headon with a Chesapeake and Ohio train of empty cars. None of the passengers were killed, but all were more or less injured.

—Lee County has voted for a bond issue to the amount of $100,000 for good roads. The election was carried by a majority of nearly 400, in spite of the extreme cold weather and icy roads that made it difficult for the voters to reach the polling places.

—An attempt was made this week to kill Yuan Shi Kai, premier of China, by throwing a bomb at him while riding in a carriage along one of the streets of Peking. The premier escaped injury, but two soldiers were killed and 17 others were injured.

—A bill has been introduced into the Virginia legislature—now in session at Richmond—providing for a referendum on the subject of State-wide prohibition. If enacted, 25 per cent. of the electorate of that State can require the Governor to order an election to determine whether or not liquor shall be sold in Virginia.

—It is reported that 167,000,000 feet of dimension lumber, to say nothing of building material, furniture, etc., were shipped out of Western North Carolina in 1911 and that this brought to the producers $4,000,000. But my! what destruction, waste and consternation it brought to our fine forests in the West.

—The cold weather that prevailed all last week was general, wrought much damage and entailed no little suffering. It was the coldest since 1899, the Bureau says, and in many localities the mercury went lower than it has gone in a quarter of a century.

—The U. S. Supreme Court has given its unanimous verdict in upholding the employers' liability act enacted by Congress in 1908.

From Pastors and People.

Randleman Ct.

The first quarterly conference will me at New Lebanon on Saturday before t first Sunday in February at 3 o'cl P. M. A full attendance of the official members is desired.

J. B. O'Briant.

Jan. 13, 1912.

Welch Memorial, High Point.

On the evening of January 4th, we were very agreeably surprised by a visit from the people of South High Point, about 35 in number, bringing packages, consisting of 4 sacks of flour, 1 fresh ham, half a shoulder, several pounds of side meat, and sausage, sugar, coffee, soda, jellies, fruit, pickles, butter, cereals, pumpkin, one load of stovewood, and Capt. A. M. Rankin pounded us with a ton of coal; and in a few days, Sister Welch sent down backbone, spare-ribs, sausage, jellies, fruit, butter, and milk of both kinds. We wish to express our many thanks to each one. The kind and brotherly sentiment that prompted this party will always be held in grateful remembrance by us. May the great Giver of all good and perfect gifts protect and guide each member of this pounding party safely to the haven of eternal happiness and rest. D. R. Williams.

Orange.

We have filled two appointments on our work this year. Bad weather keeps us close at home. Glad to have Bro. D. R. Williams and family visit our community since Conference. Bro. Williams preached for us once, also assisted the writer in the Jones-Thompson marriage. We are enjoying country life and beginning to get used to red mud. Some of our members have been very thoughtful of us. Adelaide Jones, Mrs. Richard Sykes, Mrs. David Pender, Mrs. Mariah Snipes, "Aunt" Edith Thompson and Mrs. Richard Hayes, have given us some things to eat. Through the suggestions of Bro. John Pender several of our members are going to stock us with chickens. Bro. David and John Pender and Bro. Alex Smith have already given us several nice ones. We sincerely thank every one for their kind deeds.

R. C. Stubbins.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

Because of the extreme weather the attendance at both churches was not what it otherwise would have been, but, considering circumstances, the Sunday-schools were well attended. A small congregation attended preaching services at Haw River.

Quite a number of our people are sick. Among these are Mrs. Ben. Mills, of Graham, and Mrs. E. M. Coble, of Haw River.

Our quarterly conference convened on Saturday, December 30, 1911, and not Sunday, Dec. 31, as it appeared in the "Tidings" of last week.

Haw River deserves credit for at least half of the proceeds of the box recently sent to the Orphans' Home. Miss Auman will please pardon the correction.

Geo. L. Curry.

Brown Summit Church.

Our pastor met his regular appointment the fourth Sunday in last month. It was a very bad day, but Bro. Millaway preached us a good sermon from 1st John 3: 9. The weather has been so rough since Xmas we have had no Sunday school. The 1st Sunday we were snowed out, and last Sunday, frozen out, so we will start up again just as soon as the weather will admit. I would like to hear from our St. Paul reporter.

With best wishes to the Herald.

W. H. Chilcutt.

Fair View, Anderson Ct.

We people are highly pleased to have our former pastor, Rev. W. A. Lamar, to preach for us another year.

The foundation of a new church at Fair View is being laid. We hope to have it ready for service by May, 1912.

The Sunday school gave an entertainment during the holidays which was quite a success in spite of the severe weather. On Dec. 11, 1911, election of officers was held for the church and Sunday school, Mr. Luther White, superintendent; Miss Sue Wyatt, Sec. and Treas.; Messrs. S. E. Watson, J. A. Spicer, Mrs. H. A. Foster, Mrs. Walter White and Miss Ethel Foster, teachers. Church officers: Messrs. Robert F. Wyatt, J. W. Smith, W. T. Watson and Luther White were elected stewards; Miss Mary Hendrix was re-elected church treasurer.

Miss Estella Wyatt and Mr. Eugene Connelly were married Dec. 24, 1911. These young people are both of the Fair View Section, where they will make their home. We hope for them a happy journey through life.

Misses Sallie Geer and Maggie Smith, of Anderson, are visiting Misses Sue Wyatt and Mary Hendrix.

The people of Fair View and neighboring churches are looking forward to the Sunday school rally which will convene during January if the weather admits.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Mary Hendrix.

Jan. 22, 1912. Easley, S. C.

Thomasville Station.

We were very glad to have with us on last Sunday Rev. T. J. Ogburn, of Greensboro; he preached an excellent sermon at eleven o'clock in our church. In the evening at three o'clock he preached to men only in the M. E. Church. There was a very good crowd at each service. We have some members who will go to church in most any kind of weather while some are afraid of bad weather.

We are having a good Sunday school. Bro. E. F. Seagraves is our Sunday school superintendent. We all like him very much.

On next Sunday at half past two o'clock we will have a teacher's meeting. We hope to have every teacher present and all others who expect to be a teacher in the near future.

Last week was a week of prayer; the weather was very rough, but a very good crowd attended each service. On last Friday night was our prayer meeting. Revs. Parker and Martin conducted the meeting. We all enjoyed it, and we are glad to say that we had the largest attendance of any church in town.

Mrs. Dennis, who was reported sick last week, does not get any better.

We hope to see a good crowd out at quarterly conference Thurslay night.

Jan. 16, 1912. A Reader.

Albemarle, Stanley Ct.

Dear Herald:

I was appointed reporter to the Herald, but have failed to report on account of sickness in our home.

Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Reynolds, preached an excellent sermon last Sunday night. We are all highly pleased with him.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We reorganized with Bro. John Snotherly, superintendent; J. E. Gantt, Asst.; Wade Lowder, Sec.! Chas. Hatley, asst.; Miss Grace Plyler, organist. We also have a new bell for the church.

My father hasn't been able to leave his room for two months or more. We think he is gradually improving. We extend our many thanks to the good neighbors and friends for their kindness. We especially thank Bro. Jno. Snotherly for a nice four horse load of wood during the snow. Bro. John Garmond, of Harrisburg, came down last week and left a token of love. Maude Plyler.

Albemarle, N. C., Jan 14, 1912.

Burlington.

The severe weather continues, and has reduced the attendance at all our services very much. Had 87 present in S. S. last Sunday, and the offering was $2.55. We are longing for pretty weather again, so that we may have more of our folks out.

Although the attendance at preaching service was very small, yet it was a good service. Bro. Davis gave us a good sermon, after which a committee was appointed to care for any who may be in needy circumstances. The following constitute the committee: Rev. R. M. Andrews, M. A. Coble, J. E. Moore, C. M. Coble, R. F. Williams, Misses Jessie Heritage and Mamie McPherson, Mrs. J. E. Moore, Mrs. J. G. Rodgers, and Mrs. Ollie Moser. This committee is already at work and we expect many to be helped as a result.

No service was held at night, owing to the extreme cold. Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Jan. 17, 1912.

Orphans' Home.

We failed to report last week two cakes given by Mrs. Tonkins, 1 box of doughnuts by Mrs. Robt. Russell, one sack of flour by Mrs. R. R. Ross. Also the box credited to Graham should have been Graham and Haw River.

Since Christmas we received a box of pants, sweaters, etc., from B. M. Williams, of Elise.

A box containing canned fruit, corn, beans, peas, hose, shoes, dry goods, etc., from Julian S. S.

Mrs. Surratt gave us some nice butter recently. Others have given us things that perhaps we have overlooked in our reports, but God never fails to give credit to whom credit is due.

Some time ago we credited Mrs. W. T. Capps with $5.00 when it should have been "Grandma" Capps. The good people of Denton have not failed to furnish us plenty of wood this cold weather.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Flat Rock Church, Flat Rock Ct.	$3.00
Piney Grove S. S.	2.14
H. L. Gibbs	1.00
Mt. Pleasant H. M. S. and S. S.	8.50
Haw River S. S.	1.75
Burlington S. S.	1.20
Concord S. S.	5.55
Tabernacle S. S.	2.28
Welch Memorial S. S.	1.47
Asheville S. S.	1.06
Graham Church	4.82
L. H. Coble	.25
Mrs. L. M. Jones	1.00
Total	$34.02

Criticisms and Sayings.

The weather has got cold since Mr. Frost Snow has come to town.

I guess the reporter at Shoals has been snowed under. Mr. W. H. Hauser, of Shoals church, was on our streets last week. He is a jolly good fellow.

I wish someone would report to Herald from Gray's Chapel. What about this, Bro. W. C. L.? I thought you had appointed a reporter.

Quit calling your children kids; you would not like to be called a goat.

They used to hobble sheep to keep them out of mischief. I wonder if this is the reason they hobble women.

It takes as many pieces to gear up a stylish woman as it does to harness up a horse—and costs a great deal more.

When you hear a man say that liquor is doing more harm now than it did before prohibition, ninety-nine times out of a hundred he wants liquor.

I wish Bro. W. F. A. or H. L. P. would come to Siloam and preach. They were raised up here. J. T. Jones.

Siloam, N. C., Jan. 15, 1912.

Yarboro and Anderson Notes.

We are beginning our second round since Conference. The weather all this year in S. C. makes one think of sleets, rain and snow in the mountains. We have been greeted with very good congregations at most all the churches considering indifference and weather mixed up. Weather don't interfere as much as the indifference.

Did you ever notice staying away from church seems to be prevalent in some communities? Some people seem to think it is a day off to go elsewhere. Other communities go right on regardless of showers. I don't see how God can run his church with dry weather Christians. No wonder people's religious experience leaks out.

On January 2nd, we laid to rest the oldest man in this country, Mr. Mordecai Taylor, 96 years old, member of no church.

On December 28th, we laid to rest Mrs. Bartheny Lawsin, 82 year old, member of the church 50 years.

Mr. Lafette Yarborough after spending several days in a Charlotte hospital has returned much improved in health.

Bro. John Watson, who has been ill for a long time, is able to be walking some.

Mrs. L. H. Wilson has remembered us as usual, sending us fresh meats.

Fair View S. S. presented us with a beautiful Waltham watch. We appreciate the gift very much.

Miss Stella Wyatt, one of our faithful girls of Fair View Church, was married to Mr. Conley, Dec. 24th.

Three of our faithful ones of Harmony Church were not able to attend services the fourth Sunday.

Miss Kate Medlock presented us with a nice present.

We hope to be a blessing to this kind people. Yours sincerely,

W. A. Lamar.

From Roanoke Rapids to Randleman.

On Saturday before New Year day, my wife, myself, and Maud (the horse) started on our journey to our home and work in Randolph County. We found both good and bad roads on our way as might be expected at this season of the year. On first day we passed Bro. Fishel at Vaughn who would gladly have taken us in, but we thought we must go further on, so we drove on to Macon and not knowing anyone there we lodged with a hotel man. The next day was Sunday and as we were not on a business trip, except "the business for my King," and (shortness of time, too) we thought it no harm to drive on Sunday and drove through Henderson on to Dabney and stopped with Mr. E. S. Glover, whom afterward, we found to be our brother in the M. P. Church of Vance Circuit. We were well cared for by Bro. Glover and his family. They were so nice and kind to us that we shall long remember them for their hospitality. Young Mr. Glover showed us his "mink farm"—something new to us.

Monday we drove to Stagville where we were taken in and cared for by Mr. N. H. Fleming, a brother of the M. E. Church, South, who was a stranger to us, but was not a stranger long. They were hospitable and made us enjoy a good night's rest, and next morning bid us God speed on our journey by wrapping up for us a substantial lunch for our dinner on the way. To say that we appreciate such kindness does not half say it. At this place we were told of a farm there containing 5900 acres of land. It seems to us like a man ought to have a garden and peanut patch both on this much land.

Soon we were in Durham, but time would not permit our stopping in the city and we drove through, seeing the sights, and admiring the beautiful buildings and streets of the city. Night found shelter with Mrs. Forest, a very nice lady and a member of our church in Efland. Here we met Bro. Casto, who, having learned that we were in town, came to see us. We were glad to meet Bro. Casto as he was the second brother preacher we had met on the road. Wednesday finds us on the road through Alamance County and we were having rain and snow most of the day and we did not stop long anywhere and we drove hard, expecting to reach my brethren in Guilford County, but night overtook us at Whitsetts' and our friend, Mr. Quince Boon, kindly took us in for the night and we fared well. We are now in Guilford County and after spending about two days with mother and friends we started again for Randolph. We arrived in Julian Friday evening and Bro. Harris Hardin took us in out of the cold and lodged us for the night. We had known Bro. Hardin during our school days at Tabernacle and it was indeed a treat for us to have this opportunity to spend the night with him and his family. They were so nice and kind to us.

We drove to Randleman next day and it was cold and, being strangers, in Randleman we went to Hotel Randleman until we could find our people Sunday morning the hills about Randleman were wrapped in a white blanket of snow. We traveled through Halifax, Warren, Vance, Orange, Alamance, and Guilford Counties into Randolph and paid $2.00 for lodging on our way. We traveled some nights until after dark, not knowing where we were going to stay, but the good Lord had a place for us when we stopped.

Jan. 13, 1912. J. B. O'Briant.

Union Grove, Efland Charge.

This church lost one of its oldest and most devoted members in the death of Mrs. Margaret Davies, which occurred last Saturday. The funeral was at Union Grove church Monday, the 1st, conducted by the pastor. An obituary will appear later.

The work of the church here has started off well for the year. At the first quarterly conference, one third of the year's salary was paid. We are also planning to repair the church property this year and hope to make this a neat and attractive house of worship.

Pastor.

Albemarle.

The first quarterly conference of Albemarle Circuit will be held at Woodley's Chapel on Saturday, Feb. 3rd, 1912, at 3 o'clock P. M.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who can make it convenient to be present. All official members are earnestly requested to attend, and to be prepared to report according to the requirement of the discipline.

Albert H. Bryans, Pastor.

Mecklenburg Ct.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Antioch on Saturday before the second Sunday in February at 11 a. m, and conference after dinner. All officials are asked to be present.

W. P. Martin.

Mocksville Circuit.

The first quarterly meeting for this charge has been postponed to Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in February at Bethel Church. Preaching at 11 A. M., Saturday and Sunday.

D. A. H., Pastor.

Holmes-Dodson.

Mr. Alson Holmes and Miss Nettie Dodson, both of Orange County, were married on the afternoon of Dec. 24th by Rev. R. C. Stubbins at the Methodist Protestant parsonage, Orange Ct. Mr. Holmes is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Holmes is a loyal member of Chestnut Ridge M. P. Church. We wish for them a happy future. R. C. S.

The criticism is not altogether without point that the reason why there is not more religion in business is that there is so little business in religion.

"O keep me innocent; make others great!" Those words were written by Queen Caroline Mathilda, of Denmark, with a diamond on her window in the castle of Frendsburg. The jewel of innocence is more than a crown.

—"Grandma" Gordon—the aged mother of Bro. N. W. Gordon, died this morning. She was in her 87th year. Funeral at Bethel, 1:30 P. M., tomorrow. She was a remarkably good woman and has entered in rest and a good reward. Sister Gordon was the widow of Rev. Jno. Gordon, who died in August, 1862.

W. F. Kennett.

—Poor, pitiable, death-doomed Richeson regrets it all now and has suffered, but as many thousands have done and as many thousands will, his day of regret and as he says "the tortures of the damned," repentance comes too late, too late.

—Fifteen thousands operatives in the Lawrence cotton and woolen mills of Lawrence, Mass., went out on strike and rev lt Monday, 15th, and the militia had to quell the riot with bayonets.

—Fire destroyed the magnificent stone sky scraper, the Equitable building, in New York the other day, but her vaults held good and sound and from them were removed after the fire, nearly four hundred million dollars in cash and securities. Which reminds us to say that there is a place of safety and security for all our dearest treasure, namely, in the heart: and though destructive elements from without sweep over and envelop us, the heart treasure which is the richest and best, need not be hurt or harmed.

—We have seen it stated in several places of late that Dr. Sen Yat Sen, President of the Chinese republic is a convert of the Christan faith and is a member of the Episcopal church. If this be true, and if the Republic succeeds, as now seems probable, this will mean much for the furtherance of the Christian religion in China. Missionaries have wrought long and hard in China and converts have not been numerous there, but the fruits of their faithful labors are beginning to appear in many ways and places. We may often grow impatient of seeing God make good His promises, but from everlasting till now God has never failed in a single promise made—and He never will. "To Him every knee shall bow and every tongue His name confess." And He will bring it to pass. What part will you have you, reader, in this glad, grand consummation?

—It is reported that 10,000 Manchus (royalists) were massacred by the revolutionists in China recently and that the province of Shen Si is in a state of turmoil and bloodshed—this province being the hot bed of a revolution.

—Postmaster General Hitchcock has proposed to recommend to Congress that the Government acquire and operate all telegraph lines as an adjunct of our postoffice department. Congress is to consider the matter.

—"There is nothing more shameful than to have all things and to render thanks for nothing and yet that is the special evil in prosperous American life today, where multitudes, profiting immensely by the increasing arts and inventions of a world they never once give a thought as to their duty to the One who has stocked and stored the world with the potentialities of all these conveniences and luxuries or as to the proper use of the things which they and others respectively to an unknown and holy destiny. From such a thoughtless and thankless life may we be delivered!"

LETTER FROM MR. HEININGER.

Kalgan, China, Dec. 9, 1911.

Dear Friends:

We are realizing more than ever that there is a Revolution in China. During the first few days, it seemed so far off. Then, when another province was revolting each day, it looked as if it would reach us. But that wave of success was only temporary. Now we have the two sides settling down to what may be a long, hard struggle and in this stage of it the revolution is at our doors. There has been no uprising here at Kalgan yet and I have reason to believe that we may not have any here, though it is not certain. Mrs. Heininger and the baby have gone to Peking as a week ago the outlook was rather gloomy and all those upon whom we could depend to help by escorting her down to Peking had already left. So the safest policy seemed to be here for them to go to Peking prepared to stay in case of real trouble. However, I am hoping in another week to have wife and baby back again and this cruel separation over. But the situation is too uncertain to tell anything in advance.

The nearest trouble of any proportions has been at Ta-t'ung-fu, a city of considerable importance southwest of us in Shansi, about 120 miles. The local troops at that place have rebelled and taken charge of the city. They probably have had some help from the troops at T'ai-yuan-fu, the capitol of Shansi who rebelled a month ago. Every day large numbers of troops are passing through into Shansi. From here they take the newly built railway over half way to Ta-t'ung-fu. Perhaps seven thousand soldiers from Peking have been moved up there in the last week. In addition to this there have been numerous local disturbances to the north and west of us. Most of these are led by bandits and robbers and cannot be said to be connected with the revolution. The revolution simply furnishes them a good opportunity. Detachments of local troops have been sent to several places from thirty to sixty miles distant from here. Our dispensary may have some Red Cross work to do in a short time.

This has been a rather trying period upon the missionaries. No one could or can tell what course is best to follow. This problem comes up especially in regard to our schools. There are a number of pupils whose homes are in villages more or less distant. Even those whose parents live here have been a problem for perhaps the parents were anxious to return to their old home where their relatives were numerous. Then some of the teachers and preachers have been wondering about returning to their old homes or at least taking the women and children. Of course a very little of that would simply mean panic and it certainly would mean the stopping of practically all mission work for the year, or maybe, for while the war lasts, which may be more than the few weeks or months we have thought. The whole problem is not one of the unsafety of one place or safety of another as is illustrated by my problem last night. Dr. Fan came to me with a letter from his father ordering him to return to T'ung Chow with his family because Kalgan was so unsafe. One of our girls from here is in school at T'ung Chow and her people have long been asking for her return because T'ung Chow perchance was so unsafe. The whole situation for us is summed up very nicely in the advice Mrs. Heininger received from two very able and very well informed missionaries given her about coming back to Kalgan. The one said after careful inquiries he had found out that there would be no fighting in the vicinity of Kalgan this winter, and the other told how she had been informed that the rebels were soon to take over the Peking-Kalgan Railway and that in a month the city of Peking would be in a state of siege. And the information both had was quite as reliable as can be obtained. The truth is, probably, in the middle. So far we are sticking to our posts. The schools are open, though not crowded. The usual services are held here and at the street chapel. The book-seller goes about his work as usual, save like the rest of us, he is a little more cautious how far he goes and how late he stays out.

The arrest of a few local "bad" men probably nipped a plan to overthrow the local government here in Kalgan, though the character of its leaders forbids our identifying it with the revolutionary movement.

The whole country side is full of rumors. A special messenger came one night before last from the church at Ch'ng-Ho-To with letters from the local Christians asking for anything from an American flag to guns or foreign soldiers that they might protect themselves. All the humor is taken out of such requests by the seriousness of the situation, and the fact that the people do not know where to turn in this time of revolt and lawlessness for protection. We are unable to help them, either, though I have tried to do what I could to ensure my own safety and that of the people about us. A watchman keeps guard all night and I have bought my first ammunition to use in a borrowed gun. I do not believe in taking up arms unless necessary, but with so many bandits around, it is wisest to be partly prepared for the worst. But my pony is my main reliance in case of serious trouble. Our work for the protection of women and children and for care of the wounded has been hampered by the lack of cooperation between local business men and the officials and by the change of the chief officials here. Yet it has brought us into close touch with some of the leading men of the city and over $1,200 is secured for Red Cross work, for which we are preparing. Under the circumstances here we have decided not to push the work for the women at present. If the need of it becomes apparent later, it will be taken up. God is with us and we rejoice in it all. Congregations are good and some new people are attending. Pray for us.

Sincerely,

C. S. Heininger.

SOME CHINESE PROVERBS.

If you know how, a thing is not hard, if it is hard, then you don't know how.

One hand cannot make a clap.

To a full man even money is not sweet.

On the jail gate are four words: "You repent too late."

The money maker is never weary; the weary man never makes money.

Blame yourself first, then others.

If the farmer is diligent, the soil will not be lazy.

If there are three roads, keep in the middle one.

If you have money, any place is Yang-chow.

Heaven is the lid of the coffin, earth is the bottom of the coffin; men may rush to and fro, but they are in the coffin all the same.

To converse with a superior man for one night is better than studying books for 10 years.

Hold your temper for a moment and avoid 100 days of sorrow.

If you have money, the devil will grind for you.

You can substitute a turnip for an egg only once.

A small stone can break a large jar.

If you never go uphill you will never see a plain.

A clever man understands a nod.

The stupid thief stops his ears when stealing a bell.

When you are very angry, don't go to law; when you are very hungry, don't make verses.

You can crush people with the weight of the tongue.

Peace in a thatched hut—that is happiness.

A fat cat is surely a thief.

TO TEMPERANCE WORKERS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 9., 1912.

The plan to hold a Convention in Raleigh, January 26, 27 and 28, 1912, for the purpose of quickening the temperance sentiment of our people, and to stimulate to a better enforcement of the laws, has been proposed to us by the Executive Committee of the State Anti-Saloon League. And it bespeaks our hearty support.

Distinguished speakers are expected to be present; among them will be Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, an earnest advocate of the cause and very forceful speaker; Rev. P. A. Barker, D. D., General Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, and who knows the situation over the nation as no other does; Hon. Jno. G. Wooley, author, statesman, and orator of international fame. Many prominent men of the State will also be present.

All citzens of the State having this cause at heart are invited to participate. All organizations working for this cause should be represented.

We, ministers of Raleigh, whose names are appended, cordially approve the proposed Convention. We believe it is a timely effort, a needed effort. and have good hope that it will prove of great benefit to the cause that so nearly concerns us all. And we unite in extending an earnest invitation to our fellow-citizens all over the State to be in attendance upon this Convention.

(Signed)—W. McC. White, T. W. O'-Kelly, C. E. Maddry, C. J. Harrell, A. D. Wilcox, H. M. North, L. F. Johnson, I. McK. Pittenger, L. S. Massey, Hight C. Moore, J. N. Cole, Livingston Johnson, J. S. Farmer, R. T. Vann.

In Memoriam.

Jeremiah Highfill, the subject of this memoir, was born near Summerfield, Guilford County, N. C., on July 7th, 1826. He was converted at old Double Springs Camp ground in 1844, and soon thereafter joined Flat Rock Methodist Protestant Church, on what is now Flat Rock Circuit. and remained a member of this old historic church until the day of his death, which occurred at his home near Summerfield at 3 o'clock, A. M., January 5th, 1912, at the age of 85 years, 5 months and 28 days.

For 67 years he was a faithful, loyal member of the church. On July 7th, 1846 he was happily married to Minerva P. Moore and for more than 65 years they walked "Arm in arm down life's pathway, sometimes to the banquet—sometimes to the grave."

To them were born 19 children, eight of whom had passed on before him. Eleven children, together with the aged wife yet survive. The children living are Rev. D. A. Highfill, of the North Carolina Conference; A. B. Highfill; Patrick H. Highfill; Wm. S. Highfill, Persis Highfill,Mrs. Martha F. Johnson, Mrs. Callie M. Lashley, Mrs. Minnie L. Byrd, Mrs. Susan R. Wilson, Mrs. Fanny Fox and Miss Emma Highfill.

Bro. Highfill was from his childhood blameless in his moral character. He never sowed any "wild oats," and therefore never had any to reap, and so far as the writer knows, all his children have followed his example in this particular, and all of those who are living, except one, have been members of Flat Rock Church, and that one is a member of the M. E. Church, South.

He was a very industrious man and a successful farmer and while he did not grow rich, he always had about him a bountiful supply of the necessaries and comforts of life and left those who were dependent upon him—an aged wife and an afflicted daughter, well provided for. His chief regret in going was the leaving here, in loneliness and sorrow, the wife and daughter.

Bro. Highfill was a very prudent and cautious man. He did not like to take unnecessary risks. He always wished to be sure of his ground. This characteristic manifested itself in spiritual matters as well as in material things and the writer will not soon forget the last long conversation which he had with him as his pastor. What a long life of usefulness was his! For three-fourths of a century he was a toiler—a tiller of the soil—"in copartnership with God." Into his life and the life of Sister Highfill there came much of joy and much of sorrow as well, but now for him the toil, the sorrow, the fears and doubts have all ended and he has entered upon the years that have no end and into life eternal. Sister Highfill, in her sadness and in her feebleness, only awaits the glad summons to join him in the "Father's house of many mansions." May God's richest blessings come upon her and upon Miss Emma. who is constantly with her. and upon all the children who have gone out from this home into homes of their own.

The funeral of Bro. Highfill was held in the M. E. Church, South, at Summerfield, the sermon being preacher by his pastor. and his body was laid to rest to await the resurrection morn.

W. F. Kennett, Pastor.

Stokesdale, N. C., Jan. 15th, 1912.

APPRECIATED WORDS OF KINDNESS.

I for one am so glad we have such a clean paper, free from all manner of ad matter, all good reading matter to come into our homes from week to week. I believe we have as clean a church paper as can be shown in the state and I feel proud of it. If we are small in number, (as is often flung at the M. P.s') let us be pure and clean. Hoping for you all concerned a blessed and prosperous year. I am, very truly,

(Mrs.) Esther Kivett.

High Point, N. C., Route No. 2.

Enclosed find check for $1.00 for Methodist Protestant Herald. It is a great pleasure to me to read our church paper and to know what our church is doing in North Carolina. We have no Methodist Protestant church in Spray and I haven't heard an M. P. preach in over twevle months. Therefore it is a greater pleasure to me to read our Church paper. I hope to live again where I can attend our Church services.

May God bless you and the Herald and the Methodist Protestant Church.

Spray, N. C. R. C. Hunter.

I expect to take the Herald as long as I live. Thanking you for all the good things we have read the past year and hoping it may have many new subscribers this year. I am very truly a lover of the Herald.

Mrs. Mattie Mitchell

Jamestown, N. C., R. F. D. No. 1.

—We have printed one or two communications from good brethren who have evidently been reading socialistic papers. We wish it understood that we wish the Herald to advocate following the truth. wherever the truth may lead. That there is truth in some of the claims of some socialistic writers, we are convinced. That some of the men who advocate socialism are among the sorriest specimens of mankind we are also convinced Men who won't work seem naturally to fall in with the Socialist party. This should make us cautious. We should have very clear views and evidence on which to ground them before we launch out into a tirade against other men and against the existing social order. There is a cry against "capitalism." What does this mean? Does it mean that every man who has more money or more property than the average man has is a thief. Surely, no one would make such a claim. But what does it mean—this cry against capitalism? We would like to understand it. It may be that we would join in the cry if we saw what it means and the grounds for it. We would like to know now precisely what it means. Who will tell us?

HAVE YOU CONSUMPTION.

Early Stages are Easily Cured. How to Detect it Early.

It is usually easy to tell a case of late or advanced consumption, but at this stage the disease is rarely curable. What we want, is to be able to detect, if possible, the early or the very early stages of the disease as it is then that consumption is most curable. A case of very early consumption my generally be cured after two to three months of rest, fresh air and suitable feeding, while an ordinary early case will require perhaps six months About 80 per cent of the early cases are readily curable with proper treatment. As a case develops however, the chances of a cure decrease, until in the more advanced cases only 25 percent. or less of the cases can be cured.

It is difficult to discover early consumption. The cases that have fever, night sweats, persistent coughing and spitting are late cases and are easily detected. During the first stages of consumption the patient may not notice that he has any very serious physical disorder.

The best indication of consumption are:

1. The actual finding of the germs in the spit or matter coughed up. This may be done by means of the microscope. But since it is seldom possible to find these germs in the early stages even if the disease does exist, a failure to find the germs is not a positive proof that consumption does not exist.

2. This positive reaction of tuberculin. This test however should be used only as a last resort and then only upon the advice of a competent physician.

3. Physical changes in the lungs as indicated by a painstaking examination of the chest.

While these methods con only be applied by a physician, the average man should become suspicious after one or more of the following symptoms are noticed.

1. Loss of weight without apparent cause.

2. Lack or loss of general physical vigor, especially a depressed feeling before eight in the morning and after three in the evening.

3. A temperature of less than 98 in the forenoon or more than 99 in the evening should be regarded with suspicion.

4. Catching one cold on top of, or immediately following another.

4. Coughing for two weeks or longer without apparent cause.

6. Close association with a cougher, or careless consumptive within six months or a year.

Any one having one of these symptoms or conditions should regard himself with suspicion. He should also consult a reputable physician for an examination at once. A few weeks later may be too late.

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 29,—With thirteen agricultural experts in the field to advise farmers as to the best methods of increasing the yield of cotton per acre and growing it in spite of the Mexican cotton boll weevil, the Southern Railway Company and affiliated lines through their Cotton Culture Department propose to carry on a vigorous campaign against the spread of the pest during 1912. The work of the department is to be carried on, not only in localities where the weevil has been found, but in territory to which it has not spread in order that if it should spread further Eastward the farmers may be prepared for its coming.

The Cotton Culture Department, which is under the direction of Mr. T. O. Plunkett, a highly qualified expert, whose headquarters are at Chattanooga, has recently been strengthened by the addition of new men and the whole organization is better prepared to lend valuable assistance to the farmers of the South in combating the weevil.

THE FEVERISH HAND.

It was a Monday morning, and a rainy one at that. "Mother" was busy from the moment she sprang out of bed at the first sound of the rising bell. Others besides children get out of bed "on the wrong side," as this mother can testify. She began by thinking over all that lay before her. It made her "feel like flying." Bridget would be cross; as it was rainy, there would be a chance of company for lunch, so the parlor must be tidied, as well as the dining-room swept, dishes washed, lamps trimmed, beds made, and children started for school. Her hands grew hot as she buttered bread for luncheon, waited on those who had to start early, and tried to pacify the little ones and Bridget.

"My dear, you're feverish," said her husband, as he held her busy hands a moment. "Let your work go, and rest yourself—you'll find it pays."

"Just like a man!" thought the mother. "Why, I haven't time even for my prayers!" But the little woman had resolved that she would read a few verses in her Bible before 10 o'clock each day; so, standing by her bureau, she opened to the eighth chapter of Matthew, and read these words: "And he touched her hand, and the fever left her; and she arose, and ministered unto them."

It seemed to that busy wife as if Jesus himself stood ready to heal her—to take the fever out of her hands, that she might minister wisely to her dear ones. The beds could wait till later in the day—the parlor might be a little disordered—she must feel His touch! She knelt, and He whispered: "My strength, not yours, child, is sufficient. "As thy days so shall thy strength be." "My yoke is easy. This yoke you have been galled by is the world's yoke, the yoke of public opinion or housewifely ambition; 'take my yoke upon you, and learn of me . . . ye shall find rest.' "

The day was no brighter, the work had still to be done; but the fever had left her, and all day she sang: "This God is our God, my Lord and my God."

It is true that, when friends came to lunch, no fancy dishes had been prepared for the table, but the hostess' heart was filled with love for them as members, with her, of Christ, and they went away hungering for such a realization of Him as they saw she had.

"Ah!" said her husband, when he held her hands once more, "I see you took my advice, dear; the fever is quite gone."

The wife hesitated—could she tell her secret? Was it not almost too sacred? Yet—it was "the secret of the Lord," not hers, and would glorify Him. Later on, when the two sat together, she told him who had cured her fever, and said quietly: "I see that there is a more important ministry than the housekeeping, t' ough I don't mean to neglect that."

"Let us ask the Lord to keep hold of our hands," said her husband. "Mine grow feverish in eager money making, as yours in too eager housekeeping."

This is no fancy sketch. Dear mothers, busy, anxious housekeepers, let us go again and again to Him that He may touch our hands, in the highest sense, to prepare us to minister to those about us.—J. E. Jewett.

—Dr. Bernard Hollander, one of the best-known European specialists on mental diseases, says that his investigations have shown him many patients who have become insane on the subject of Christian Science.

—The statistics of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in the United States at the close of 1911 show that there were 574 Churches and 19,121 members as compared with 571 Church and 19.178 members one year ago. They contributed for missions, home and foreign, almost one dollar per member, or a total of $18,336.-91.

THE BEST PICTURE.

Julia Marr's May.

"I want to be a painter."
I heard a sweet child cry,
"For I could take my brushes
And help God paint the sky.
"When, with His holy fingers,
He touched the morning's brim,
I'd take my brightest colors
And paint the clouds with Him."
Ah! gentle little maiden,
Your wish may not come true;
To be a skillful artist
Might not be best for you.
You may not be a painter,
A Raphael or a Corot,
To gild the golden sunset,
Or curve the shining bow,—
But you can have a palette
Of helpful deeds and love,
And dip your brush in colors
Mixed by our God above:
Can paint a rosy sunset
Before the eyes that weep,
And paint with Christ forever
The pictures that will keep.
Ah! who would not the rather
Try this kind of art to be,
And tell the world His story
Who died for you and me?

THE BEST PICTURE SCHOOL-HOUSE.

"You are going to go to be held in the most remarkable school house in the United States," [illegible] Uncle Rob to [illegible] Mildred on the little horse that was to carry her to Uncle and Aunt Wilson's school. It was only four months before that Mildred had come to New Mexico and [illegible] on a funny little horse that she had to be able to see [illegible] and cattle dogs on the way. She asked Uncle Rob if he meant that but he only shook his head and laughed.

"You'll have to find out for yourself," he finally replied. "Ask Miss Wilson if she knows why the school house is the most remarkable one in the United States."

Miss Wilson, when Mildred reached the small frame building and told what Uncle Rob had said, was as much mystified as Mildred had been.

"The most remarkable in the United States," she repeated, puzzled. "Why it [illegible] because we have so many little boys and girls from all parts of the country?"

When Mildred came home she asked Uncle Rob if that were the reason for her [illegible] and she shook her head.

[illegible] end of the town. I will give the school a fine new map of the United States to hang on the wall."

"We must set our wits to work," Miss Wilson said when she heard that. "We [illegible] a new map badly."

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of Enfield, N. C.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

BETTER METHODS IN THE SCHOOL.

By Charles A. Hines.

There is no reason why the country Sunday school should not be well organized and have every advantage that the city school has. If the country school can be well organized, the one in a village can do so equally well. What may be said in this department from time to time upon the matters of better organization is intended to apply both to city and country schools.

The place to begin is with the superintendent. He should be a man who can and will do something more than announce the hymns and lead in prayer. It is a sad fact that many people and not a few superintendents believe that is all they should do. The effective and successful superintendent must be an executive, and he can acquire this ability only by learning how to do and what other schools are doing. Literature for him is cheap, and if he does not feel inclined to buy books and subscribe for papers the school should do so for him. There is no reason why the school should not pay for them. If he gives his time to study them and works hard for the school he ought not to have expenses to bear.

The teachers should be furnished with something more than the same quarterly that is given to every member of the class. Buy commentaries and monthlies for them. There are so many of these published, and at such a small cost, it makes me sad every time I think of the many good things our teachers and classes are missing by not using them.

Not only should adult classes be organized, but the school should be well organized. The superintendent ought to have a good secretary, an assistant secretary who will look after supplies. A committee on plans and methods is a good thing.

The superintendent might use the card index system to advantage in keeping track of members and classes. There would always be a list of prospective members to work upon. A good way to get the list of people to work upon is to get the church roll, copy it and check off the families that are attending or that that are too far away or so situated they cannot attend. Add to those that are left the names of other members of their familes. Add the names of those in reach of the church who are not church members or members of some church too for away for them to attend. Pick out every Sunday a few of these names and give them to such classes as they would be assigned to if they come in; set the class members to work to build up their class by working on a few at the time.

This would be a work that would never end, for while some would come in immediately it would take time to reach others; new names would be added and there will be those who drop out and must be reclaimed. Opportunity for great work is here suggested. Not a small feature of this is the reflex influence it has upon those already in—it builds them up in faith and interest.

The Sunday school should do things. It should attract people for the reason it is doing things. Nobody likes a dull time. People are not coming to your Sunday school for the reason you are not making it worth while. You are not in business solely to save yourselves. Remember "the other fellow."

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR JAN. 28.

Subject: "The Foreign Missionary Whose Life Has Most Inspired Me." 2 Cor. 5: 14-20.

Daily Readings.

M. One that inspires. Isa. 32: 1-8.
T. Some traits. Jas 5: 10, 11.
W. Men that did things. Heb. 11: 32-40.
T. The first missionaries. Acts 8: 4-8.
F. The missionary spirit. Isa. 50: 4-9.
S. The man in bonds. Rev. 1: 9-11, 17, 18.

Sunday, January 28. The Topic.

The Heroes of Missions.

Missionaries represent the heroic element in Christianity. Boniface was slain by pagans in Friesland; Adalbert and Bruno shared the same fate in Prussia; Raimund Lull was stoned in North Africa; John Williams was clubbed to death and eaten in Erromanga; Bishop Hanington was slain by the savage, King Usanda. Many have not been called to die for the sake of the Name but their lives have been quite as heroic as those who have. To all the words of the text are applicable: "They hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

When William Carey began to urge that it was the duty of the church to attempt to send the gospel to the heathen, he was laughed to scorn. His wife thought he was going to India on a fool's errand, and declared that she would never consent to go with him. After seven years of toil and self-sacrifice he baptized one convert. This one was soon followed by others. While serving the society as a missionary, he earned in the employment of the British government $200,000. He lived on a dollar a week, and sent another dollar a week to some needy relative at home; the rest of this magnificent sum he gave to carry on the work of the mission.

Robert Morrison was the first Protestant missionary to enter China. It was his sense of duty that made him a missionary. Duty was his pole-star. He expended his strength in translating the scriptures and in preparing a dictionary of the language. It took him twelve years to complete this task. Morrison was a wise master-builder, and laid the foundation upon which his successors have built. He lived to see only three or four converts, but his faith was not shaken. In his last letter he said, "The Lord reigneth."

When Mackay was leaving for Uganda, Africa, he said it was likely that some of them might die before six months. He might be the first to fall. When the news came they were not to be cast down, but send some one else immediately to take his place. This was the man of whom it was said that he built, cut type, translated, printed, engineered, navigated, diplomatized, denounced evil, preached the gospel, acted school-master and doctor, befriended Emin, Junker, and Stanley, protected the brave Christian boys, and won a church in the wilderness, through baptism of blood and fire. He lived to say "I eat the rice and fruits cultivated by Christian hands, look on the fields of Christians, and see no dwellings but those of Christian families."

David Livingstone was the child of poor and pious parents. When he gave himself to the Lord he felt that the salvation of men ought to be his chief concern. He resolved to give all his earnings to the cause of missions beyond his necessary living expenses. Soon after he gave himself. When his strength was exhausted, he said to his servants, "Build me a hut." They did so. He retired for the night. The next morning they found him dead. He had died on his knees, pouring out his soul to God in the fervor and passion of prayer for that dark land. David Livingstone was the bravest and noblest spirit of the age in which he lived. At one time Stanley was as much opposed to missions as the biggest atheist in London. After he knew Livingstone his desire was to take up his work of redeeming Africa from the forlornness and squalid poverty, initiating true missionary enterprise.

John Patterson was born to honor and affluence. He turned his back upon the most flattering prospects at home, and went to the South Sea Islands. This brilliant genius gave his life to Christianize and civilize savages. On the spot where he fell there now stands a house of worship. The very men that took his life are believers.

While Alexander Duff lay sleeping—he was only a boy at the time—on the bank of a Scottish stream, he dreamed that he saw above him a glorious light, and out of

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

3:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 a. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
E. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

the light came a chariot studded with gems and drawn by horsees of fire. Then he heard a voice say, "Come up hither; I have a work for thee to do." These words and his dream remained with him all his long life. "He was literally cast like seaweed upon the shores of India. He had already been shipwrecked at the Cape and had lost his valuable library." The only things saved were his Bible and his Psalter. The spirit of the man may be seen from his words: "Having set my hand to the plough, my resolution was premptorily taken, the Lord helping me, never to look back anymore, and never to make a half-hearted work of it. Having chosen missionary labor in India, I gave myself up wholly to it. I united or wedded myself to it in a covenant, the bonds of which should be severed only by death."

Think of Robert Moffat working for thirty years on the translation of the Bible into an African dialect. He was used to hard tasks. As a boy he worked for a gardener in Scotland, rising at four o'clock on cold winter mornings, and knocking his knuckles against the handle of the spade to keep them warm. He reached Cape Town in 1817 and at once began his journey into the interior. On the way, conducting worship in the home of a Boer, he asked that the Hottentots be brought in. "Hottentots!" the man roared, "I will bring in my dogs and you may preach to them." Moffat began to expound the story of the Syrophenician woman, with her saying, "Even the dogs eat the crumbs that fall from their master's table." "Hold" cried the Boer, "you shall have your Hottentots." Moffat was preacher, carpenter, miller, baker and housekeeper; but first of all he was a Christian.

One of the greatest names in the history of Chinese missions is that of HudsonTaylor. He was a child of faith. While his mother, eighty miles distant, was praying for her boy, Hudson Taylor was impelled to take up a tract and read. This resulted in his conversion. In China he endured unspeakable hardships. More than once people in his company were shot, but he remained unharmed. Often he was mobbed by furious Chinese, but ever and always he was delivered. Believing that God can supply all our needs, he gave up his salary as a missionary, but continued on the mission field. God never failed him. Up to his day Chinese missions were almost entirely confined to coast cities. Hudson Taylor determined to take the gospel inland, and thus the China Inland Mission was organized. The key-note of this man's life was unfaltering faith, and from that faith comes inspiration to us.

John Hunt was the apostle of the Fifi islands. On his arrival he found that two-thirds of the children born were killed in infancy to save their parents the trouble of rearing them. Every village had an officer whose duty it was to dispatch the innocents. He preached the Christ to them, and gave them the Scriptures in their own language.

At the Jubilee of the mission, James Calvert said: "Fifty years previously in all Fifi there was not a single Christian: now there is not an avowed heathen left." Cannibalism has for some years been wholly extinct, and the memorable customs of barbarity and cruelty have disappeared.

Allen Gardner, of South America, is one of the best examples of persistence in all history. He spent his year in the arduous attempt to quicken men's consciences regarding the Neglected Continent, and at last accomplished his purpose only by his own death through starvation.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The Fall term was the best in the history of the College; the Spring Term, which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to be better still.

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for their sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young men and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible education at the lowest reasonable cost.

THE BEST NORMAL COURSE...

The Course for teachers opens April 1st, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to make the greatest success possible in their chosen work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

Consumption is curable. This does not mean that every case of consumption can be cured. Advanced cases yield very slowly to treatment if at all. It does not mean that anyone having consumption will get well without making the supreme effort of his life. Merely hoping to get well will avail little. To cure even an early case of consumption requires an unyielding determination on the part of the patient that he will live according to a well defined sanitary and hygienic laws.

The first step in the cure of the disease is to recognize that the disease exists. Once established, make no effort to dodge the fact: Then away with the idea that the illness is "only a deep seated cold," or "simply a bad case of stomach trouble." The issue must be squarely met. Remember that early stages of consumption are frequently diagnosed as malaria, dyspepsia, etc. Better far, to take the view that the trouble is consumption and find out later that it is malaria or something else, than to underestimate the importance of the trouble.

The second step is to provide a place for living and sleeping in the open air. By all means live out of doors in the open air and sunshine whenever the weather permits. If you can't camp out, put up a tent in your door yard or back yard, build a sun parlor on the south side of your house, or enclose a porch as a sleeping apartment. Don't permit the sides of the tent to be down, or the windows of your sun parlor, porch, or sleeping apartments to be closed except, to exclude rain or snow.

Proper diet is of the greatest importance in the treatment of consumption. Consumption is a wasting disease. To counteract this tendency and to build up the body it is absolutely necessary that the consumptive be given nourishing foods in abundance. Milk and raw eggs are perhaps the best articles of diet known for this purpose. Individual cases will differ greatly, but in general, a consumptive will need approximately the following daily allowance of food: two to three quarts of milk, three to eight eggs, four to eight ounces of meat, six to eight ounces of bread, two ounces of butter, one helping each of cereal, potatoes, and pudding, two to four apples and the juice of a lemon. Some patients will be able to increase this allowance 50 per cent. or even more, while others will do better on perhaps 25 percent. less.

Plenty of rest is absolutely necessary. Keep a careful tab on the body temperature and if the evening temperature runs as high as 100, decrease the amount of physical exertion to half.

Above all things, avoid patent medicines, cough cures, "consumption cures," and whiskey and other alcoholic drinks. Be cheerful, keep clean. Bathe daily, follow the instructions of a competent physician, and your chances for recovery will be excellent.

For further information on this important subject write to the State Board of Health at Raleigh, or to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, at New York City. N. C. State Bd. of Health.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 10, 1912.

Some people are afraid they will give; others fear that an opportunity for giving will slip by unimproved, as illustrated by the following example: Ten dollars was sent in to one board by a man in Florida for Bibles in Korea. He says: "I've just lost my job, so this may be my last chance for a good while, as I am in my 70th year."—Zion's Watchword.

A very suggestive incident is related by a pastor of a western church. Shortly after the new financial plan, endorsed by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, had been introduced into his church, the pastor called on the wife of the church treasurer, whereupon he imparted this interesting bit of information: "John used to keep the money upstairs in a tea cup but now he has to keep it in the bank and pay by check."—Se!

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1912. NUMBER 9.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. M Culloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE ROAD TO HAPPINESS.

This is the road to happiness:
Start Now, from Where You Are;
"Turn to the Right and Keep straight on,"
And you'll not find it far.

Along the Path of Willing Feet
And over Heartsease Hill,
Across the fields of sweet content,
The stream of Glad Good Will;
Then through the lane of Loving Heart,
The gate that's called Today,
And down the steps of Little Things
Into the Common Way.

And take the Cloak of Charity,
The staff of Wise Employ,
A loaf of Bread of Daily Grace,
A flask well filled with Joy;
A word of cheer, a helping hand,
Some good to give or share,
A bit of song, a high resolve,
A hope, a smile, a prayer.

And in the Place of Duty Done,
Beside the Door of Home,
You'll find the House of Happiness—
For Happiness does not roam.
—Annie J. Flint, in S. S. Times.

—An unusal throng of hindrances have made it very difficult to issue the Herald this week. Sickness is one of the causes. We hope for better things next week.

TO THE PASTORS.

Last year the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society sent out Thank offering programs and asked each pastor to hold a Thank-offering service in each of his churches and take an offering, or appoint women in each one of his churches to take up this matter in the church and so have each church in the Conference do something for the Thank-offering of our W. F. M. S.

This worked so nicely and the response was so good and so encouraging that our Thank-offering was larger by far than it has ever been before. The hearts of the praise the Lord for the splendid co-oper women who are struggling to carry this work on were made to rejoice, and to ation of the pastors in this great work.

This year we are again sending out the programs and again asking our ministers to co-operate with us in getting an offering from each church.

In so many places it is impracticable to have an auxiliary missionary society and where such is the case the Thank-offering service comes as an opportunity for those churches to help this great work. The program can be rendered and an offering taken and forwarded to Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C. This service and offering should be held as nearly the 14th of February as practicable, as that is the anniversary date of the organization of the W. F. M. S. The Society will be thirty-three years old February 14th, 1912.

No human tongue can tell the good that has been done by this organization since it has been in existence. No tongue tell the struggles, the sacrifices and the tears it hast cost to carry this work on, but the more the hands that help to lift now the lighter will be the burden on the hearts of those who have labored during the heat of the day when the laborers were fewer than today.

May God bless every church in the Conference, and make each one a blessing. The W. F. M. S.

—Miss Forrest secured pledges for $73.-55 in Kernersville, $10.68 at Piny Grove, $46.50 at Oak Ridge, $13.61 at Ai Church.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Forsyth, Jan. 27 to Feb. 2.
Pinnacle, Feb. 3-5.
Flat Rock, Feb. 6-9.
Greensboro, Feb. 10-12.
St. Paul & B. Summit Feb. 10-12.
LaGrange, Feb. 13-15.
Rocky Mount, Feb. 16.
Roanoke, Feb. 17-21.
Halifax, Feb. 22-26.
Spring Church & Greenville, Feb. 27-March 4.
Littleton, March 4-8.
Henderson and Vance, March 9-13.

—Miss Forrest's plan of appointments was made out for her by some one more familiar with the territory, and she requests that pastors make the best arangement possible for her work. We trust they will also look after the matters of her entertainment, and transportation where trains do not run.

There appeared recently in the Catholic Word (New York) the following:

"The Roman Catholic is to wield his vote for the purpose of securing Catholic ascendency in the country (United States). All legislation must be governed by the will of God, unerringly indicated by the Pope. Education must be controlled by the Catholic authorities; and under education, the opinions of the individual, and the utterances of the press, are included. Many opinions are to be forbidden by the secular arm, under the authority of the church, even to war and bloodshed."

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The membership statistics table is correct excepting that 130 must be added to the total of column for Members last year, making total 20,862. The other table, financial, needs various corrections to be given later. T. J. Ogburn.

—Some doctors say a regular diet of beef makes people ill-tempered and cross.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn addressed a mass meeting of men in the M. E. Church in Thomasville on the afternoon of the second Sunday. Subject, "Manliness."

A SHORT SERMON ON FIRST SUNDAY IN JANUARY, 1912.

Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Psa. 51-7.

The day was cloudless and perfectly splendid. The evergreen leaves, the pine, the spruce, the glossy leaves of the magnolia, the fir, the cedar, the juniper, and the holly bending so gracefully under the beautiful white snow with their incomparable attractiveness, glittering in the sunlight, all conspire to make this Sabbath day a lovely one, and the matchless scenery gives an inexpressible charm to the quiet, sweet day of rest. Oh! how much beauty our Father has placed before our admiring gaze, even in these frozen, mid winter days! The purity and whiteness of the snow will teach us many beautiful and useful lessons, if we will but study and learn them. The snow makes an impression, but leaves no stain wherever it falls. The snow, upon yonder craggy mountain peak, looking lonely with forgotten years, lies in its purity blushing with the first kiss of the rising sun. How surpassingly pure and lovely it appears as we look upon its spotless whiteness in the golden sunlight of a new-born morning! But down low on the earth the snow is soiled with dirt, and black with coal dust all cut up and mixed together with the iron bound hoof of the horse and the cutting rims of the wheels. With its beauty departed and its usefulness destroyed, it is unpleasant to see, and unfit for use. The thought is get away up high from the contending and contaminating influences of the world and life in the upper realms of purity with God. So we see at once the difference between a pure, beautiful life, and one that is impure and unholy. Oh, Lord, we poor wretched, sinful, weak souls with all our imperfections look up to Thee this day while the earth is covered with snow and the sky is so blue, so clear, and the sun shines down in his brightest winter splendor, we desire the fullness of the spirit and the great joy of Thy salvaton! Never have we seen a more beautiful snow crowned Sunday than is this day. This day is absolutely cloudless and perfectly splendid. This glad bright day has cheered many hearts on the way and made bright and happy so many tired travelers. Let your soul be full of joy, joy, joy today. Away up high was the blue arched dome of the world overlooking the white carpet decorating the earth, while the sun beamed profusion of light, blending these colors into a scene of perfect beauty. What are these thing but the images of Him who is full of boundless goodness and perfect love! What is whiter than snow? Nothing in the material world, it is white in the highest degree. Place the whitest things you have beside it and you will notice more than ever before the great contrast. To be made whiter than snow is a lovely, precious thought. The most poluted by the blackness of sin, the deepest stained by all manner of wretchedness and guilt may be washed by Jesus, the Friend of the sinner, and be made whiter than snow. Oh, that all the unclean, diseased, dying ones, just as they are, would come to Him today! If they would come and be washed in His blood, there would be a great, grand throng of white pilgrims with pure lives marching to the kingdom, and looking for the fadeless crown.

These sweet words suit the feelings so well, but they are just what was wanted and needed, and if I were an artist I would take a brush dipped in the most beautiful coloring and paint them with golden letters brighter than the sun-light, and if my pen were gifted with the soft touch of an angel's fiingers I would write round and round them words that would live forever.

The sun draws up the impure, dirty water, from the mud puddle and purifies it, then it falls to the earth again congealed into pure white snow. How changed the condition, and how different the effect and appearance! So Jesus takes up the sinner in his impurity and unclean position and bathes him in the water of life until he is made writer than snow.

J. T. Kitchen.

FINANCE AND THE PASTOR'S WIFE

Mrs. W. G. Atkinson has an article on the aspects of church work for the pastor's wife in Zion's Herald. We note the portion on church finances:

"None of our husbands receive large salaries, but many of us could live on less than we do, if it only came to us regularly and in full. I shall never forget an experience I had when a bride of a few months. We received our salary on Sunday afternoons, and it came to us just as the treasurer received it, all in very small coin. We did not receive on an average more than one half the amount due each week, and I found it very hard to make both ends meet. One week I was to entertain my father and mother in my own home for the first time. How I did anticipate that visit, and how I thought of all the good things I would make that week that I knew they would like! The Sunday before they came it stormed a little, but I knew they would come, rain or shine, next day, so I did not worry; but in afternoon when we received our envelope, it contained just 81 cents! You can imagine my feeling better than I can tell them to you. I never was so disappointed in my life—but I have had many similar experiences since.

"I often wonder just how many wives other than ministers' wives would allow their husbands to work on and on if they did not receive their full pay every pay day; yet the minister's wife must never complain—and she seldom does—but she is capable of feeling and suffering. There are so many demands upon a minister's purse all the time, that often a week end would find us without a cent for our church obligations, were it not for the fact that we save that out first. Do you? We pay regular dues to all the different organizations of our church—the W. F. M. S., the W. M. H. S., the L. A. S., the Standard Bearers, the King's Heralds, the organized Bible classes, the Epworth League, and often other things. True, you all have them in the church, but very few of you pay dues to them all.

"Certain it is, too, that never a child has anything to sell, or is getting up a soap order, but that he comes first to the parsonage, and if be one of our Sunday-school boys or Junior Leagues or not, he expects an order, and is disappointed if the minister's wife doesn't give him one. And she just loves to do it, and usually does do it, although she well knows that some more necessary thing cannot be bought that week. Then there are Sunday School conventions, conferences, ministers' meetings, etc., which we really need to attend for the help and inspiration we can get to give back to our church work, but often are not able to go because we cannot afford the carfare.

"At the end of the year the salary is, of course, made up, but nearly every bit of it has to go to pay bills it was impossible to avoid when so small a proportion of the salary was paid. As a rule a minister's wife is invited to the nice social functions which occur in the community, and just how often she cannot accept because she hasn't the clothes or the money to go, she doesn't tell you.—Ex.

—Mrs. J. R. Ball is with her daughter in Kansas City, Mo.

—Mr. G. W. Hayworth, of Asheboro, lately a student in Guilford College, has taken a position in the Greensboro ticket office of the Southern Railway Company.

—"The first city in the world to license cats," says an exchange, "is Munich." Gracious, brother, we thought the cat had license and liberty, too, in every city in the world, especially at night.

THE SARDIS EXCAVATIONS.

The ancient city of Sardis is one of the few sites remaining in Asia Minor which past researches have left sufficiently untouched still to promise rich finds for the enterprising archaeologist. Advantageously situated in a broad and fertile plain on what was then the great trade and military route of Asia Minor, Sardis was a centre of civilization in the days of that race which is referred to in the Bible as the Hittites. Later it became the capital of the Phrygians, whose kings were the subjects of Greek fable. The last of them, Midas, it will be remembered, requested a friendly god to give him a touch which should turn everything to gold. He thought less of the gift when he found that his food also turned golden. Another less friendly god, annoyed at his unfavorable decision as umpire in a flute contest, endowed the poor man with donkey's ears, which he strove to conceal under a Phrygian bonnet. The same monarch, when his kingdom was destroyed by a barbarian horde a little after 700 B. C., is said to have committed suicide by drinking the blood of a bull.

Later Sardis was the metropolis of the Lydian kingdom, whose last king, Croesus, a byword for his riches, was conquered by the Persians, who made it the seat of a satrap. Under the denomination of Greek and Roman civilization it continued to flourish, though its relative importance declined owing to a change in the trade route. It was one of the seven churches mentioned in Revelation, and its existence continued until late in the Middle Ages.

The sifting of these layers of past civilization is at present a purely American affair, certain Baltimoreans in particular being active in the work. The energies of the excavations have been focused upon a relatively small portion of the area of ruins—namely, that part which is believed to have been the site of the Lydian town. The remains of a large Greek temple have been nearly laid bare by removing the tons of earth which have fallen upon it from the citadel which was largely carried away by an earthquake in the days of the Romans. Underneath the temple lies a Lydian stratum still largely unexplored in which have been found sundry inscriptions in that as yet illegible language. Owing to the depth to which the earthquake overlaid the temple the excavations have been very costly, necessitating the employment of large numbers of workmen, and the energetic archaeologists have even introduced a small steam engine to help make the dust of ages "fly."

Besides the temple several large tombs have been opened which have yielded a rich harvest of pottery, together with gold and silver ornaments, seals and other objects, the property of persons who breathed their last more than 2,000 years ago.

"OTHERS."

"Lord help me live from day to day,
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayer shall be for—Others.

Help me in all the work I do,
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you,
Must need be done for—Others.

Let "self" be crucified and slain,
And buried deep and all in vain.
May efforts be to rise again,
Unless to live for—Others.

And when my work on earth is done,
And my new work in heaven's begun,
May I forget the crown I've won,
While thinking still of—Others.

Others, Lord, yes, others;
Let this my motto be,
"Help me to live for others,
That I may live like Thee."

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY—THE FIRST AID TO THE PASTOR.

By H. C. Buchholz.

When Paul in his letter to the Philippians enjoined Epaphroditus to help those women who had labored with him in the gospel, he suggested an attitude towards woman's work which must remain a model to every minister for all time to come. To give encouragement and assistance to the women who, more than all others, strive with him for the futherance of the gospel of Christ, ought to be regarded as a blessed privilege by every pastor who has in his church a missionary society. Of special application, too, so far as woman's work is concerned, are the words of John to Gaius, "We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth." It is to be feared, however, that some ministers, instead of being helpers with these women, are hinderers. Strange as it may seem, some pastors not only give no encouragement to the woman's missionary society, but seem actually opposed to the organization and would not lift a finger to save it from death. But why this indifference and antagonism to a work which God is using so mightily for the world's evangelization? Why refuse woman her place in the world-wide evangelism which, by reason of her sagacity, intelligence and spiritual culture, she is especially fitted to fill? The New Testament everywhere commends woman for the part she had had in the promotion of the interests of God's kingdom. Think of the glowing reference to Elizabeth, the mother of the forerunner; to Mary, the mother of Jesus; to the women who ministered to Jesus of their substance during His earthly ministry; to Anna the prophetness; to Phoebe the deaconess; to Priscilla, the expounder of the way of life; to Euodia and Syntiche, skillful soul-winners; to Lois, grandmother and instructor of Timothy; and to the elect lady of John's epistle, and you have a galaxy of names which shine as the brightness of the firmament and as the stars for ever and ever. Then in Ps. 68:11 may be found the divine authority for this great work and the inspiration of it: "The Lord giveth the word; the women that publish the tidings are a great host" (R. V.). With all my heart do I believe that the woman's missionary society is the pastor's greatest aid in his life-work, and that minister who, through lukewarmness or hostility, permits this splendid organization to decline, is guilty of a folly which will leave him no place of repentance, though he may seek it carefully by intense devotion to other departments of church activity. —Missionary Messenger.

RESPONSIBILITY.

God has crammed both thy palms with living seed:
Let not a miser's clutch keep both hands tight,
But scatter on the desert's barren need
That fragrant blossoms may reward
God's sight.

God has dipped deep thy cup into his spring,
Which drippeth over, it is so well filled;
Lend it to some parched life, and let it bring
Laughter and song to voices drought has stilled.

God gave to thee his only well-loved
Christ,
Whose steps have smoothed the road
that leads thee home:
Tell those whose road is rough, whose way is missed
That he has called all weary ones to come.

So shall thy giving set for thee God's smile,
And thine own soul drink deep
draughts of his love;
Earth's shadows shall grow bright as heaven the while
A web of glory round thy life is wove.
—The Britist Congregationalist.

THE POSTAL CARD.
W. F. Kennett, Editor.

We held our first quarterly conference on Jan 11th, during the extreme cold weather. It was a "man's job" to go, and eleven of them, not counting the pastor, were present. The business was transacted in a good spirit. The dinner was most excellent and abundant. Bad roads and severe weather have greatly hindered all work for some time. As the roads and weather improve we hope for b tter congregations and better work.

Mrs. Sarah J. Pegram died last Friday A. M. Funeral at Gideon's Grove Saturday at one-thirty P. M.

Mrs. Rebecca Young has been sick for some time and does not improve.

We thank Mrs. R. S. Ogburn, Mrs. N W. Gordon, Mrs. B. W. Johnson, and Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Wilson for generous contributions of good things. Our people do not pound on the heroic style, but keep constantly at it, which is better.

LOYAL SUPPORT OF ORPHANS' HOME BY MANY CHURCHES—UNUSUAL INTEREST; RESOLUTIONS.

At Conference in Henderson efforts were made to increase interest in the Orphans' Home, the consequence is that more food, more clothes and more money have come than ever before. It is useless to go into detail as lists of donations have been printed in the Herald from time to time, but it is not useless to say that this is most gratifying to those in closest touch with the work. There is no doubt but that He who number the sparrows is putting it into the minds and hearts of the Methodist Protestans in Norh Carolina to care for the needy ones at the Orphans' Home. It seems that the time has come when we must have a permanent location and more room. A large number of children have already been turned away on account of room. Shall we as a denomination allow this? Think about it, pray about it. This Orphans' Home is not only an undertaking of the Woman's Home Mission Society, but of the Methodist Protestant Church. There have been no stones left unturned as to endeavoring to act wisely and well—for instance, the ladies of the Executive Committee felt incompetent to decide upon a permanent location for the Home and appointed a committee of three good business men, with power to act. They are Messrs. J. M. Millikan, Greensboro, A. M. Rankin, High Point, and R. R. Ross, Asheboro. The ladies also made a request that an advisory committee be appointed by Conference, with whom they might advise. The Orphans' Home is worthy of support—all of the paths have not led in pleasant places, faith and works and prayer have been used in carrying on the work and must continue. The children are obedient and grateful. On Thanksgiving day (after several had recuperated suffciently from fever to gather around the dining table) on being asked to give reasons for gratitude several responded, some grateful for health, some food, and many for a home. Shall we not see to it that not only these eighteen are well provided for, but many others? Conference ordered that the following portion of report of Ways and Means Committee be published in January and May:

After investigating we find that the work being done at the Orphans' Home belongs to the Methodist Protestant denomination, especially the North Carolina Conference, therefore, be it resolved:

(1) That we recommend that each pas tor see to it that an "Orphans' Home Day" be observed in each church at which time a program suggested by the Executive Committee of the Woman's Home Mission Society may be used, the claims of the Orphans' Home presented and an offering taken. The time for holding the day being left to the quarterly conference.

(2) Believing that it is most important that the children of the church and the Sunday school be interested in the Orphans' Home, we recommend that collection be taken once a month in each Sunday school for the benefit of the Orphans' Home.

(3) We recommend that a committee of one to three ladies be appointed by the pastor at each church whose duty shall be to solicit offerings in cash and supplies, such as clothing, food, and such other things as can be profitably used by the Home. The pastor to report the names of said committee as soon as appointed to the chairman of the Executive Committee, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C.

(4) That this report be published in the Methodist Protestant Herald in the months of January and May, accompanied by one or more articles under the supervision of the chairman of the Executive Committee.

(5) That all money and supplies be sent to Miss Etta Auman, Denton, N. C.

A great number of the ministers and laymen pledged themselves that they would carry out the resolutions. A large number have already begun work, for which we are most grateful with every assurance that co-operation is urgently requested and gratefully received, I am

Most truly,
Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer,
Pres. Br. W. H. M. S.

Asheboro, N. C., Jan. 20, 1912.

EVIL SPEAKING AND MISQUOTING.

Much hindrance in the Lord's work is occasioned by the evil tongue, and the misquoted remarks. So many never wait to hear the other side; a judge and a jury must hear both sides. One day a lady asked her pastor if he had heard a certain scandal that was told on a minister. Her pastor remarked, "I do not believe it." If this action were always taken until both sides were heard, what a world of evil would be avoided. It did that pastor no harm to suspend judgment and it would be infinite comfort to one falsely accused and to gentle, timid ones who have no spirit to defend themselves. Then the Word says, "Take heed how you hear" and "take heed what you hear." This may not have a direct reference to the thought here involved, but the thought arises, If your preacher actually says something you do not hold to or understand, by no means start on a round talking against him. Let him have the opportunity to explain. When the disciples did not understand Christ's teachings, and many times they did not, they went to him and said, What means this parable? He would explain and they were benefited and satisfied. Sometimes good friends have been alienated by a misquoted remark. The one, A, hears something the other, B, has said; A begins to get angry, then to speak, then to spit fire, and when they meet, A, is in no fit mood even to talk the matter over, and probably takes B by surprise and quite likely enemies are made of the warmest friends, and when facts are established and B explains, it was simply a misquotation. How often do you hear the other fellow evil spoken of? How many crowds, not necessarily large either, have you been in lately that you have heard some one evil spoken of or some minister misquoted, or if there is any flaw in his sermon,—air it, send it our on the whirlpool of gossip, and let it whirl around and around till accidentally after months, he gets it. Until you have torn to pieces the low-ground "Flag-Tail" and scattered to the four winds, and regathered them, can you stop the damage done. Many times your very aim is thwarted, you meant to hurt, at least did not care if you did hurt the preacher and instead some loved one may be many believed your report and was at last lost in hell—traceable to that report. You just take notice to the proneness to these facts above mentioned, and how carelessly the minister's reputation is handled. I have for some years made the following rules my rules:

1st To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.

2nd To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely obliged to.

3rd Never to drink in the spirit of evil reports.

4th Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed toward others.

5th Always to believe that if the other side were heard a very different account would be given the matter.

To all the accusations brought against Christ, He made no reply. "I held my tongue, and spake nothing, I kept my silence." Christ is our ideal. When the woman was accused it is said He "wrote upon the ground." One of late has suggested that he wrote the sins of the accusers. He knew both sides. I close with an admonition. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead. C. E. M. Raper.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answer to Assigned Questions

Zechariah is the Bible name applied to the greatest number of individuals.

The Nethinims were those set apart to do the menial work of the sanctuary for the Levites.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of both Jewish tradition and the most competent Jewish commentators that the Nethinims were the Gibeonites who deceived and made a league with Joshua for which they were made "hewers of wood and drawers of water."

Mrs. R. A. Swaringen.

Lesson for Next Week.

Concluding chapters of Esther.

Questions.

97. Why was all mention of the name of God avoided by the writer of Esther? Assigned to all the class. Let us have your opinions.

THE WORDS OF CHRIST.

There is a strange quality about the words of Christ that belongs to no other words that were ever spoken. They arrest the attention, they penetrate the heart, they abide in the memory as no other words do. They carry with them finality that hushes argument. They are living words. Planted in the heart, they constantly exercise a restraining and transforming power. Issuing from the lips, they seem to bear with them the balms of paradise. Read in hours of sorrow or despondency, they revive hope and dissolve doubts and fears. What wonder that Mary sat at his feet to listen; and that the officers sent to arrest, returning empty-handed, reported, "Never man spake like this man." His words are a comfort, a joy, and a defense to all who heed them.—Selected.

MY PRAYER.

Let me do my work each day; and if the darkened hours of despair overcome me, may I not forget the strength that comforted me in the desolation of other times.

May I still remember the bright hours that found me walking over the silent hills of my childhood, or dreaming on the margin of the quiet river, when a ligt glowed within me, and I promised my early God to have courage amid the tempests of the changing years. Spare me from bitterness and from the sharp passions of unguarded moments. May I not forget that poverty and riches are of the spirit. Though the world know me not, may my thoughts and actions be such as shall keep me friendly with myself.

Lift my eyes from the earth, and let me not forget the uses of the stars. Forbid that I should judge others lest I condemn myself. Let me not follow the clamor of the world, but walk calmly in my path.

Give me a few friends who will love me for what I am; and keep burning before my vagrant steps the kindly light of hope. And though age and infirmity overtake me, and I come not within sight of the castle of my dreams, teach me, Thou Blessed One, still to be thankful to Thee for olden memories that are good and sweet; and may the evening's twilight find me gentle still and very close to Thee.—Ex.

—Last Friday, January 19, was generally observed in many Southern States as Lee's birthday. Had Robert E. Lee lived, he would have been 105 years old, having been born Jan. 19, 1800. But he died Oct. 12, 1870, and it may be truly said of him that few men of any time or country packed as much life, usefulness and greatness into 63 years, eight months and 23 days as did General Robert Edward Lee, the man who knew how to be humble and generous in victory, brave and courageous and courtly in defeat.

—Anent the Cook lectures recently delivered in North Carolina, this conversation was heard: "I do not believe Dr. Cook ever reached the Pole." "No," replied no. 2. "nor do I believe Peary reached there either." "Well, if he did," replied no. 1, "he should have at least submitted his proofs to Copenhagen." "Copenhagen, nothing," replied no. 2, "I do not believe Copenhagen has been there yet.

APART FROM CHRIST.

A great many christian people do not understand the true meaning of spiritual death. It is because they have a wrong definition of death. The true definition is separation. And this is the meaning which is constantly employed in the Bible. To be spiritualy dead is to be separated from God from Christ, from theHoly Spirit there is no vital union between the dead soul and God. Christ had that thought in mind when he said, apart from me ye can do nothing." Apart from him there is no spiritual life. in any person.It is the life of Christ in a believer which constitutes him a genuine Christian. An unbeliever is dominated by his natural passions and tendencies.He is led by his natural desires and cultivated habits and the fallen are always in harmony with his tastes, passions, and preferences,

Dr. Maclaren, of Scotland, said: "Apart from Christ,tis not conscience that rules our lives; apart from Christ 'tis not sense of duty that is strongest, apart from Christ, the real controling impulse to wnich the inward proclivities, if not natural activities do yield in the main and on the whole, is the thing that we like, the passionate desire of nature, the sensuous and godless heart." This is a true representation of all unregenerated persons, whether they belong to churches or are outside of them. And one great source of trouble in many churches lies in the fact that they are spiritually apart from Christ. They are still governed by the same impulses. Their spiritual deadness does more to block the power and progress of the church than anything else.

Church quarrels and divisions would be almost unknown if Christian churches were wholly managed by those who are fully united in Christ. One of the geartest curses that afflict many a church today is that of keeping in membership spiritually dead persons and especialy those in prominent offices. The revival most needed is that of purging the churches of those who are widely apart from Christ.—C. H. Wetherbe.

Surely it is no accidental thing that practically all the starving die in the lands where the Christ's influence has not gone. We have looked out on great Hindu famines, we have looked out on great Buddhist famines, we have looked out on great Confucian famines, we have looked out on great Mohammedan famines; we have not looked out on any great Christian famines; for wherever His influence has gone, even on the plane of the common necessities of human life, Jesus Christ is sufficient for the needs of all men.—Robert E. Speer.

From Pastors and People.

FROM THE PRESIDENT.

Jan. 6 and 7 was spent with the people and pastor of Rockingham charge. Bro. Dozier, the pastor, and his family were there. He is casting about to get his bearings, as the seamen would say, before undertaking the pushing of anything.

He has made quite a favorable impression upon his people and they regard his excellent wife very highly also. The train on Saturday, the 6th,, was very late, the weather rough, and just recovering from sickness, and thus not able to push through such rough weather, I did not see and talk with the people I would like to have seen. However, those whom I saw led me to think there would be some systematic steps taken that will doubtless be for the good of the cause. The weather has been so inclement since my visit there that possibly the people have not been able to do all that had been planned. Notwithstanding this temporary drawback it is hoped the plans discussed will be thoroughly tested. It was the purpose to one at Denton Jan. 20 and 21, but conditions made this impossible. I wish here to thank the brethren of the ministry and the reporters also for making last week's issue of The Methodist Protestant Herald so full of real interesting reports. Some reports coming to me through the mail by private letters, have been very full of hope. Let us pray for each other and adopt the suggestions of Bro. T. T. Hicks published in the Herald some time ago. Somehow I feel that during this Conference year something will happen of more than ordinary importance. "There's a knocking at the gate," and it is hoped that it augurs well for the North Carolina Conference, Methodist Protestant Church. Let me suggest to the stewards of all the charges the importance of beginning early the collection of your pastor's salary. When an itinerant gets through Conference he is generally pretty light of cash and if he has to move—well, you know what that means. Again permit me to urge the early collection of General Conference Fund, and also the Church Extension. One brother is sustaining a loss of a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars whereas if the Board had the money that loss could be avoided. I know the weather has been bad and people could or would not go to church much, but now let everybody, ministry and laity, get to moving, not along the line of least resistance but along the road to higher ground.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

Julian, Tabernacle Ct.

Although we have had the snow, the extremely cold weather, the mercury almost at zero, and as we had not had either in several years, we, to a certain extent, could not but feel glad. But then we were shut in for many days and the second Sunday did not have any Sunday school, yet we were glad indeed again last Sunday morning when we found that the day was so fair and the sun was shining with all of its brightness and ten o'clock found us at Sunday school with many bright faces, eager to know more of the birth of Jesus.

And Bro. Cecil was there, too, shaking hands with all. and every one looked as if they were glad that they were permitted to be in the house of the Lord.

Bro. Cecil delivered a helpful and inspiring sermon which is one of the many he has delivered.

We are glad to have several from other churches worship with us, and hope they may find it convenient to come real often as Bro. Cecil always tells us something that is elevating and good to hear.

On account of inclement weather, the Ladies' Aid Society postponed their meet- until the next regular appointment.

We were glad to see Mrs. George Garrett out again after being confined to her room for several days.

Miss Lizzie Cameron has returned to her home at Liberty after spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Walter Hardin.

Ernest Hardin and daughter, of Greensboro, spent Sunday with his parents here.

Mrs. Martha J. Freeman is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. I. Offman, at China Grove.

Mrs. Walter Hardin, Rep.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle & Mt. Zion Charge.

We were glad that the Conference sent our good pastor back. He, Rev. A. L. Hunter, preached a good sermon for us last Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Barber, of Mt. Airy, were visiting his parents Sunday.

We are glad to see good reports in the Herald from other fields and trust that they may continue to come throughout the year.

Reporter.

Thomasville Station.

Dear Herald Readers:

We were glad to see the sun shining at last. Despite the mud there was a large congregation at church both services. Bro. Suits preached a fine sermon from Mat. 16: 24—"Then said Jesus unto His disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." I thank the Lord for such a good preacher.

We are very sorry to note that Mr. Henry Dickens, a nearby neighbor, is very ill at present. We hope for him a speedy recovery if in accord with the Lord's will.

Pray for us, Christians, we have not yet gone so far that we do not need the prayers of Christians to sustain us.

Thomasville.

Dear Readers:

We neglected to report any last year of our little "Busy Bee Society," so I will send in a little report.

We organized our society in June, 1911, under Ada Wood as president, Nannie Dickens, vice-president, Myrtle Perry secretary, Bulah Harris assistant secretary, Ruby Jones treasurer. The members entered into a contest, one side under the name of Bees, and the other under the name of Ants. The Ants beat and the Bees had to entertain them. The leader of the Bees was Ada Wood, of the Ants Myrtle Perry. They were given little money kegs and put out to begging. In July, the 4th Sunday, the kegs were opened, and the money counted. There was about $30 collected. The society agreed to pay that on the church debt. It also paid $3 on general interests last year.

Our society met Sunday, January 14, and elected new officers as follows: Bulah Harris president, Ruby Jones vice president, Vetra Carmichael, secretary, Ada Wood assistant, Myrtle Perry treasurer. We have about thirty members on roll, although there have not been many attending on account of the severe weather. Our society meets once a month. We hope to have a large attendance at next meeting. There are no members of our society over 16 years of age, therefore the children's society deserves the name it bears. If I am not mistaken there is about $1.00 in the treasury now.

Pardon me, but I left out a little incident I wish to relate. Mrs. J. W. Boyles offered a prize to the child that begged the most money Viola Suits, daughter of Rev. Edward Suits, won the prize; it was a nice S. S. pin.

A Member.

Gideon's Grove, Flat Rock Ct.

On Jan. 19, the summons came to one of our flock from the Father who knows just when to call; Sister Sarah Pegram born Dec 1, 1838. Sister Pegram was 73 years, one month and 18 days old, was married Oct. 10, 1871, to Wm. A. Pegram. To this union were born three sons and two daughters of which the three sons and one daughter survive. The husband and daughter preceded her to the portals of the spirit world. She was a good wife, patient in all things, a loving mother and charitable neighbor, ever ready to help when she could and, as Paul of old, was faithful until death. She was laid to rest at Gideon Grove Church of which she was a member. Bro. W. F. Kennett, pastor, conducted the funeral services from the text, Hebrews 1: 9, "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God," which was appropriate on this occasion, for truly we believe the deceased did labor that she might enter into that rest. She had been living for some time with her son-in-law, Bro. D. P. Lemons, at Stokesdale, who married her youngest daughter. R.

Stanley and Mt. Hermon Cts.

Again we wish to thank the good people of Stanly for their kindness, including those who conveyed our property to the railroad at Albemarle. May the richest blessings of God accompany both pastor and people of that charge this year.

Mt. Hermon Ct. We reached this work on the 9th of Dec. We were met by a sufficient number of wagons and teams at Burlington to convey all our property to the parsonage.

We wish to assure the people that this kindness was appreciated.

We were kindly entertained in the home of Brother and Sister James Sharp, spending also one night with Dr. Pickett and his kind family before we got ready to go to housekeeping at the parsonage.

I have been to each church, but on account of the weather have met but comparatively few members. Mt. Hermon Church is the only place that we have had anything like a full attendance, but the weather is now much improved and we are hoping for good things on this work. This is a good work, but there is room for improvement. We see no reason why this should not be one of the foremost circuits in the N. C. Conf.

It is near the center and our churches are well surrounded with our people, a people who have the means, and we believe a sufficient amount of intelligence to make it so.

I found one person at Friendship who did not hesitate to let me know that he was not pleased with the change of pastors.

That person was the little two-year old son of Brother Washington Johnson, who was intimidated by the loud, harsh voice of the present pastor. His mother carried him to the back end of the church, but that did not satisfy him, so he was carried outside before he could be quieted, but I hope before the year is out to be able to win little Norman and any others, if there be any, who are displeased with the change of pastors.

A nice entertainment was held at Bellemont on Saturday night before Christmas. They had two trees and they were well filled with presents. Each member of the Sunday school received a nice treat, besides the number of presents others of the large congregation received.

Among the much appreciated presents that the occupants of the parsonage received was a nice beautiful rug. We have also been remembered by our kind neighbors in the way of fresh meat, milk, butter, and vegetables, for all of which they have our many thanks.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Mt. Hermon on Saturday, Jan. 20th. The attendance was not large, but I am glad to say that each church was represented. Brother Gilbert Holt who is an apt man for the place was elected secretary. The conference was not without interest. Among other things that were done, the conference voted to finish ceiling the pantry and closets at the parsonage.

The people at Friendship are building a church at that place made of concrete. This is an evidence that the people of that place and the former pastor have some church pride, and in addition to this also "a mind to work."

The rafters are now on and we hope to see this beautiful church completed in the near future. The writer has collected and paid to the contractor $246 since he came to this field of work.

Now in conclusion we wish to say to the members of this work that we have come to this field in the very best of faith and hope to accomplish much good among you all, but in order to accomplish the greatest amount of good we need the full co-operation of every member. It was once said by a commander or ruler that "England expects every man to do his duty." If such is expected in state and national affairs, then surely it is not too much for a pastor to expect the full co-operation of those who profess to be of the Kingdom of God.

E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

P. S. The people of Mt. Hermon Church had a Christmas tree and entertainment, but on account of the inclement weather the writer did not get there, but some of the people remembered the writer with presents.

High Point.

The exceedingly rough weather of this winter has interfered, quite a deal, with our attendance at church and Sunday school, but last Sunday showed that we will soon get back to our normal if the weather will only keep open.

The attendance at Sunday school for the three Sundays in January have been 152, 111, and 190.

The election of officers for the year resulted in the election of our same superintendent, Mr. A. M. Idol. This will make ten years consecutively that he has served in that capacity. Mr. S. C. Bristow is assistant superintendent, Mr. Homer E. Montsinger, Sec., and Mr. V. W. Idol, Treas.

The same teachers who served last year were re-elected to their respective places.

We believe the Conference Sunday school banner is going to serve as a stimulus to our school, and if there is another Sunday school that is going to compete for it this year, you would better begin early. Conditions for the contest will be found on page 31 of 1910 minutes.

A. G. Dixon, pastor.

High Point, Jan. 23, 1912.

Guilford Ct.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Pleasant Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January, Jan. 27,

Mrs. Plyler's condition is still very serious. Pray for us. T. A. Plyler.

Asheboro.

An interesting fact in this community is the celebration by "Grandma McCulloch" of her eighty-ninth birthday. This was done in a unique way, her children and grand children writing her. It was a shower of letters and cards.

Our work here has been interrupted by the weather. But the people have remembered the pastor and his family from Conference on in a continuous pounding, consisting of a purse of interesting size, and of such other substantial things as are usually brought into service on such occasions, also pleasing, appropriate remembrances at Christmas time. For all this the entire parsonage household is very grateful. T. M. Johnson.

Uwharrie Circuit.

The first quarterly meeting will convene at Jerusalem on Saturday before the second Sunday in February. I trust we may have a good attendance as it is important that you be there. Come, and look after the interests of your church.

As the weather has been so bad, things look somewhat discouraging, but I trust when the weather opens up we may take new life and make this year the best y ar in the history of the Uwharrie Ct. Pray for us. Yours for Christ,

Joel Trogdon, Pastor.

Denton Items.

Mr. J. J. Siler, of N. Y., is paying us a visit. We are always glad to have him with us.

Messrs. I. R. Black, A. D. Shelton and others, have returned after spending a few days with home folks, for the spring school session.

The Denton High School is progressing nicely under management of Prof. Pender. The school roll is increasing daily and we think that by the time the ice and snow subside we'll have something near a hundred students. A Member.

Flat Rock Letter.

To her sister church, Bethel, this church sends condolence in the death of her aged and honored member, Mrs Gordon, the saintly widow of one of our strong ministers. To the family of Mr. Necie Gordon, deep and heartfelt sympathy. To this man, of whom one of our most useful preachers said, "He's one of the best men on earth; he's just as good as he knows how to be." Surely upon the heads of this entire family will rest the benediction of heaven for their affectionate reverence for, and the service to her, the fragrance of which has gone abroad.

Topographically, without the skirts of the beautiful little villa, Summerfield, lived, for eighty-five years, Mr. Jere Highfill, or to a host of us, Cousin Jere. Resourceful and frugal, his farm yielded a competence that debarred anxiety of serfdom and condemned him not to servitude. Rev. Alson Gray, who spent weeks at intervals there, remarking on the family of almost incredible size, said there never seemed a lack of anything on their table. Born and reared here, his early manhood must have had a gray dawning, as he seemed often blue, sometimes despondent. A son killed instantly; brought home a corpse. His wife, for a whole year, never smiled. But somehow (was it listening to the music of the spheres?) from this voluntary seclusion or seeming exile, his life took on a new meaning, and his last days were characterized by unfailing vivacity and freshness. Here, among the flowers of the springtime, was born and grew to manhood that devout man of God, Rev. D. A. Highfill, who, prattling, lisped from three year old, "Me going to peach, me going to peach." Though no stoic, he hated all pomp and pride, loathing arbitrary rule. When party spirit grew strong, holding to the allied forces of democracy he maligned not his opponents, nor used violent invectives. Materially he seemed to have had no misdirected energies, and has bequeathed to his posterity a clean record. But, dear friends and family, you who have shared with me the joys and hospitality of this home, when in our childhood, with him and them, these walls echoed with peals of mirth, from blind man's buff, etc., there is sorrow here. This aged mother's heart seems breaking. It's up to us to pour the balm of comfort. Though the cloud is black, they have discovered its silver fringe. For with long illness came ample time for preparation. An angel form in white apparel carried him in a dream up, up beyond the spheres. Relating this to his companion, he said 'twas death, and patiently awaited the end. Immortal readers, in view of all this and the possibilities of your end, does there not flow from your souls thoughts like these, thoughts to the incarnate Christ who made it possible:

"More love to thee, O Christ,
More love to thee,
Hear thou the prayer we make,
On bended knee;
This be our earnest plea,
More love, O Christ, to thee,
More love to thee,"

To his scattered family, grandchildren, and the faithful elder daughter, and wife, Flat Rock extends condolence, and would place upon the commemorative monument at his grave. "Joyous old age ended in eternal dawn." Reporter.

Haw River Ct.

Rev. W. E. Swain; Dear Bro:—We had a beautiful day overhead last Saturday, but I do not remember but once before in my life when I ever rode over rougher roads. There were 19 official members present. It certainly meant much for the brethren and sisters to brave the roads and weather. The business of the quarterly conference transacted, and plans looking for advance steps in the life of the church were formulated. There was a resolution introduced, unanimously adopted, that if the Reidsville people will take the lead and by word and deed will say, Come on, and let us build and dedicate our church in Reidsville this year, Haw River Ct. stands ready in sympathy, in heart and in money to push it through to completion. The entire circuit, I feel I can say, is anxious for a church in Reidsville of the M. P. denomination. The Church extension board, I feel, stands in the same attitude. Now if Reidsville will take the lead, the long needed and looked for church will be a reality in 1912. I hope every member in Reidsville will appreciate the situation, and I believe they do. Now let us go forward. When the subject of apportioning the pastor's salary came up there was a right warm discussion. I do not mean there was any ill feelings, but some earnest remarks. I will say just here, Haw River Circuit and the Reidsville enterprise do not realize their strength nor power. We have some, and not a few, of whole-soul and Christian men and women. One man once asked God that the rain be withheld, and it rained not for the space of three years and six months. One other man once took five loaves and two fishes and fed 5,000 men besides women and children, and notice—12 baskets full were taken up. If we only would put our trust in the Lord, then do our duty, He would take our little and bless it, and we would have more than we began with in happiness, a good conscience, a better title to our eternal home, a happy experience on our death bed, and more means, (money) than we began with. Now I believe these things! Do you? "Lord, I want more religion," etc.

The next quarterly conference to be at Mizpah. Bro. R. A. Hopkins was re-elected secretary. C. E. M. R.

Paint Fork, Ivy Circuit.

Our new pastor, Rev. S. B. Stephens, filled his first appointment here on the third Sunday in December with a very able sermon. His theme was, "A Practical Life." On the 7th of this month he began a revival meeting at our church, continuing three weeks. A number of our best citizens were added to the church. His sermons were of unusual directness of power, by the outpouring of the Spirit of God, through fervent prayer and full consecration for service. They deepen conviction, make clear the apprehension of duty and privilege, aroused a more earnest purpose to measure up to the discipline of the Methodist Church. Every member of the Methodist Protestant Church should be present at every sermon. You will be richly blessed, be inspired for the deeper things of Christian experience, and the larger things of Christian service. To miss one means loss to you. To be present means the enlargement of your ideas, enrichment in spiritual things, and incitement to greater service. He makes a more earnest plea to that than of any other, urging upon the rules of the church being carried out. Never before have we had them so ably explained to us.

We are very much pleased with Bro. Stephens' work. His sermons are such a great inspiration, no intelligent Christian can reasonably afford to miss them. Life is made fuller and more worth living by the influence generated by such an earnest man.

Pray for the success of our work this year.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Pansy Anderson, Reporter.

Buncombe.

We arrived in Weaverville Dec. 12, 1911, and were conveyed to the hospitable home of Bro. G. A. Webster where we were made to feel at home. We remained in this home until the parsonage underwent some needed repairs. I have been at, and preached in, each church on the charge, and have found some as loyal and true people as are to be found anywhere.

The first quarterly conference was held at Clark's Chapel on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in January with a good attendance and a good conference. I was greatly pleased with the good spirit that prevailed, and am looking forward to good things.

We have started a mid-week prayer-meeting at Clark's Chapel, and will start one at Weaverville now that the winter king seems to have abdicated. I have been in thirty-six homes and secured ten subscriptions for the M. P. Herald and one for the Methodist Protestant. I am encouraged, and with an abiding faith in Him who has never failed us, press onward in our task.

Will write of Asheville later.

W. D. Fogleman.

Weaverville, N. C., Jan. 23, 1912.

Spring Hill.

It seems that the reporters on Guilford Circuit have been meager, and especially Spring Hill. I presume the brethren think there is nothing of interest to write about. Well, we wish to say that the church is alive and just much interested in building a parsonage for our preacher's home on a site near the church, donated for the purpose, and a well of water in the yard on the side of public road.

Our pastor and family are domiciled in a fairly good old home between Canaan and Spring Hill. The writer visited them yesterday for the first time. I found them fairly well and hopeful; the preacher has been quite busy during the sleek days just past, and like many others he slipped up and found himself flat on the snow and ice.

Mrs. Plyler is doing fairly well under the circumstances. She laughed and talked lively and I do hope the brethren and sisters all along our lines pray for her recovery. I noticed also while I was there that Bro. Wm. Tice drove up with a fine load of wood and that the preacher has 50 bushels good corn and some rough food for the clay-bank pony. I have been many times in worse shape while traveling than he is today, and I thank the Blessed Lord for his goodness. I am still living and on the hopeful side of things. Bro. Plyler has the confidence of all his people and we expect to take care of our preacher.

The Sunday school at Spring Hill was moving steadily along until roads became impassable. Our church wants more life and a larger conception of things, but a smaller circuit and pay the preacher more.

Brother Plyler did not ask me to write a word, but I wanted to say some things.

Much love to all the readers of our beloved church paper, Methodist Protestant Herald, and its noble editor.

Ike I. York.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 159 in S. S., and our offering amounted to $3.80. Bro. Andrews is making us an excellent superintendent and our school will grow under his lead rship. He does not let the school drag, and you never know what he is going to have the school doing next. Last Sunday he had the secretary count those who were present at the opening of the school, and that number compared with the number that came in late will make some of our folks hurry a little on Sunday morning, we suspect.

The preaching services were well attended last Sunday and we had two good sermons. Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Jan. 24, 1912.

Burlington Baraca Report.

Attendance last Sunday, 33; offering, $1.82. Secretary.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.

Rev. J. A. Burgess filled his appointment Sunday A. M., this being his second round on his work. We are learning to appreciate him more and more each time he comes. Now that he has preached at all his churches, hope he has met all the people and begins to feel more at home, though guess it will take some little time to become accustomed to city life. Our congregation was not as large as it should have been Sunday A. M. Oh, that we were as reluctant in going to places of worldly amusement as we are in going to church! How much better off we would be! It seems when we only have services once a month our churches might be full to overflowing, but there are so many people who will say, I don't think I shall go out to church this morning. Others will say, I don't feel like going, or The roads are too bad, and will put up every excuse imaginable, yet in the week they can go to all kinds of worldly amusements regardless of rain, snow, or mud. I often think if people were as eager to go to church as they are to theaters, how much better our influence in our communities would be. People who persist in moving pictures, and etc., Saturday night till a late hour no wonder a sermon is dull and uninteresting to such hearers. The next thing to be impressed upon our people is getting to church on time. I fear if our pastor had been a minute man Sunday A. M. he would not have had more than a dozen to have heard his text, which is the most important feature for if you do not get the subject the sermon will not interest you much and, too, it interrupts not only the preacher to have people come in after he begins preaching, but it disturbs the whole congregation. Now that the new year has dawned upon us let us make new year resolutions and "let getting to church" on time be one of them, and see how much more you will get out of the sermons. It is a beautiful thing to make new year resolutions and resolve to carry them out; resolve to give up some of our worldly pleasures if they mar our Christian life and make Christ our first object in life.

Miss Annie Forrest, a return missionary from Japan, will lecture at Flat Rock second Sunday in March at 3:30 o'clock. Miss Forrest is an interesting speaker and she will not come among us as a stranger and we hope the people will come out to hear her.

Owing to the extreme cold weather the quarterly meeting was not held at Dabney the second Sunday, but will be held Saturday before the second Sunday.

Wishing the Herald much success.

Josie Reavis, Rep.

Henderson, N. C., Route 3.

MARRIED.

Leonhardt-Bingham.

At the home of the bride's father, Samuel Bingham, on the 17 of January, Miss Lillie Bingham and Robert Leonhardt were made one by the writer. Miss Lillie is one of Friendship's most faithful members—an excellent young lady; and the fact that Mr. Leonhardt won her heart tells that he is above the ordinary. May their lives ever be happy.

W. D. R.

DIED.

Davies.

Mrs. Margaret Davies was born September 26, 1836, and passed to her reward January 13, 1912, in the seventy-sixth year of her age. In early life she was converted and joined the Union Grove church and remained a member here until her death. She was devoted to her church and when she moved from the old homestead, it was with the understanding that she was to attend divine services at her home church; and this she did, though living six miles distant. She was also devoted to home and children, and she leaves to them that priceless legacy, the influence of a good mother.

Mr. W. A. Davies, the son, and Mrs Cecil, wife of Rev. C. A. Cecil of High Point, are the only children. They tenderly ministered to her in the last illness until she was called away. Her body was buried from Union Grove church Monday, January 15, to await the resurrection morning. H. C.

Emely E. Simpson.

The subject of this sketch, who passed from earth to heaven recently in her eighty-first year, was the oldest of eight children of Peter and Martha Simpson. Of these, Elizabeth, William, and James died while young. Two of the sisters, Mrs. Telitha Smith and Mrs. Margaret Suits, died a few years ago. Two sisters, Mrs B. F. White and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Sr., of Asheboro, still survive. The grandfather on the mother's side was Rev. Daniel Deans, who doubtless is remembered by some of the older readers of the Herald. An uncle was th Rev. Jas. Deans, of our Conference until his death.

Emily E. was born July 2, 1831, and died Jan. 7, 1912, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Hammer, in Asheboro, where she has lived for a number of years. The devotion of these two sisters to each other was beautiful, though Miss Simpson was the oldest and Mrs. Hammer the youngest of the family. When the mother's health failed and especially after her death the younger children naturally turned to the oldest to be to them at once an elder sister and mother. She performed her part so well that they all were endeared to her. As other loved ones went one after another into the other world the bond that bound the three remaining sisters seemed to grow stronger, Mrs. White coming also to minister during the last days on earth of the oldest sister.

The subject of this sketch in 1853 professed faith in Christ and joined the church at Fair Grove, Haw River Circuit, near which church the family lived. When she came to Asheboro to live she brought her membership to our church here.

Her physical strength would not admit of her attending the church services very often, but she was faithful in the Christian life, each year contributing of her means to the support of the Gospel. The last church service she attended was one for the aged people, one of the best services our church here has held since I became pastor.

The Christian graces were well developed in her character. She was devout, gentle, grateful for any kindness, patient. Her devoutness was especially noticeable. With her a visit in the home by her pastor was not complete unless he read and prayed with them. During her last illness when she had become so weak that it seemed not prudent to conduct this devotion in her room, she requested that it be done in the room across the hallway. Her suffering, though severe at times, was borne without murmuring. Expressed a willingness to go when the messenger should come.

The funeral service was conducted in the home by the writer. The interment was at Hickory Grove Church, Guilford Circuit. T. M. Johnson.

Asheboro, Jan. 22.

MARRIED

The Nethinims were those set apart to do the menial work of the sanctuary for the Levites.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of both Jewish tradition and the most competent Jewish commentators that the Nethinims were the Gibeonites who deceived and made a league with Joshua for which they were made "hewers of wood and drawers of water."

Mrs. R. A. Swaringen.

At the parsonage of Mt. Hermon Ct., on Dec. 23, 1911, Mr. Junius Lee Euliss and Miss Sallie C. Garrett were united in marriage by the writer. Both of Alamance Co., Methodist Protestant Church.

At the parsonage on Dec. 31, 1911, Thomas F. Harmon and Ella Glennie Overman were made husband and wife, the writer performing the ceremony. Both of Alamance County.

E. G. Lowdermilk.

—Bro. Joel Trogdon changes his address from Asheboro to Farmers, N. C.

—Honorable Richard Pearson Hobson, representative in Congress from the Sixth Alabama District, has introduced in Congress a resolution proposing the following amendment to the Constitution: "1. The sale, manufacture for sale, and importation for sale of beverages containing alcohol are forever prohibited in the United States and in all territory under its jurisdiction. 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provision of this article." It will be a long time, we fancy, before Congressman Hobson gets his resolution and the amendment through, but the hero of Havanna harbor shows by the resolution what he stands for.

—The Anti-Saloon League and other temperances workers in this good State are to hold a State Temperance Convention in Raleigh Friday, Saturday and Sunday, 26-28. Speakers of national reputation are to be present and a great gathering is promised.

—California has 87,000 more women voters than men, and enjoys woman suffrage; which means that the women can and will elect a woman governor of the State if they get together and desire —West Market Street M. E. Church, Greensboro, is to begin a series of meeting shortly to be conducted by Rev. Mr. Booth, son of the founder and leader of the Salvation Army, who is to do the preaching; and by the son of Gypsy Smith, who is to lead the singing. If their sons are as great in pulpit and platform as their fathers, Greensboro has a great treat in store.

—The State Anti-Saloon League will meet in Raleigh Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Among the speakers who will make addresses Judge Pritchard and Congressman Hobson are mentioned.

A Bible Parade.

The dispatches tell us that ten thousand men, each one carrying a Bible, marched through the streets of San Francisco on a recent Sunday afternoon, and that heading the parade was the great Bible teacher, preacher and evangelist, Gypsy Smith. That the whole city saw the parade and gave respectful heed to what was transpiring before their eyes. A mighty gospel wave hac swept over wicked and law defying San Francisco, and the people are turning to the Book for knowledge and the story of the Cross for light in the day of their sin and need.

This was indeed the tribute of a great city to a great Book, and if the citizens of San Francisco shall read the Book they have thus honored, and carry into their daily lives its teaching, it will not be long before that city will not be counted among the most wicked and sinful of all this American continent.

DO FOREIGN MISSIONS PAY?

How often this question is raised. Sometimes it comes from the Church member who tries to find in it a reason for diminishing or withholding his missionary contribution. Sometimes it is introduced by the man who finds exercise for his peculiar bent of mind in the statistics of the missionary boards. He takes the amount of money contributed and divides it by the number of converts or members, and then can tell you to a decimal point just how much it costs to secure a convert or member. And when he finds that the result does not quite tally with his lofty and judicial notion of a proper dividend upon the investment, he rises upon the high platform of his superior knowledge and unquestioned wisdom and asks, "Do foreign missions pay?"

Now, no person who is not on the way of being bereft of his senses ever puts the financial aspects of the foreign missionary situation to the fore. The financial basis is only incidental. It is completely overshadowed by larger and more vital considerations.

Nevertheless the financial or commercial relations of foreign missions cannot be ignored. Millions have been, and are being, invested in the vast undertaking of the world's evangelization. What is the result? Has the investment been justified? Has the missionary made good from a commercial point of consideration?

Well, here is what the New York Mail says on this head:

"The commercial results of foreign missionary work are most impressive. Every foreign mission established for the spread of Christianity may be said to have slipped a new belt on every factory pulley in England and America.

"The missionary carpets his house, and the Oriental, never needing to be exhorted to buy a carpet, saves his money and buys one. The entire simple furnishing of the missionaries' houses is copied. The evident comfort and health of the chair, the bed, the cooking stove and kitchen utensils have been telling their story for seventy-five years. The entire Oriental trade of civilized lands has grown up, in these articles, during that period. Sailors did not show the object lesson, for natives did not visit the foreign ships. Traveling salesmen did not produce the demand, for they did not visit the countless dwellings with samples. Printed advertisements were never sent among people who have almost no newspapers, and who, for the most part, could not read. Tales of travelers were not brought back to the millions, for only recently have Orientals traveled or sent a few of their aristocratic class abroad to our schools. What other source is left, except the missionary, who has penetrated all China, India, Burma, and far islands?

"Let it be frankly acknowledged that it is the object lesson of the missionary's home, his clothes, his buildings for a hospital and school, that has inflamed the desire for doors, hardware, shoes, coats, and about everything that commerce is now sending to these awakening markets.

"The missionaries have talked railroads, telephones, carts with spoked wheels. They have indeed given the wheels of trade such a speeding twirl as they never will lose. They are doing it every day. They are about the sole creators of the demand, that irresistible postulate of sales."—The Epworth Herald.

A VICEROY'S TRIBUTE.

Among the victims of the plague in Manchuria was Dr. Arthur C. Jackson, a distinguished graduate of Cambridge University, who went out early in the fall of 1910 as a medical missionary of the United Free Church of Scotland, and was attached to its large hospital at Mukd n. When the plague broke out in January, the government called upon the physicians of the hospital for their aid, and Dr. Jackson promptly volunteered for work at quarantine quarters of the Chinese railway station. There for a week he was in close and unremitting contact with the plague in all its virulence, doing admirable work in bringing order out of chaos and terror and in staying the spread of the pest, till suddenly. in spite of vaccination and all proper safeguards, he caught the infection, sank rapidly, and died. The going out of this strong, eager, attractive life on the very threshold of a career of exceptional promise made a profound impression on all his associates. At the memorial service held in the Presbyterian chapel at Mukden, Manchuria, His Excellency Hsi Liang, Viceroy of the Three Eastern Provinces, made the following striking address:

We have shown ourselves unworthy of the trust laid upon us by our emperor; we have allowed a dire pestilence to overrun the sacred capital.

His Majesty the King of Great Britain shows sympathy with every country when calamity overtakes it. His subject, Dr. Jackson. moved by his sovereign's spirit, and with the heart of Christ, who died to save the world, responded nobly when we asked him to help our country in its time of need.

He went forth to help us in our fight daily where the pest lay thickest. In the midst of the groans of the dying, he struggled to cure the stricken, to find medicine to stay the evil.

Worn by his efforts, the pest siezed upon him and took him from us long before his time. Our sorrow is beyond all measure, our grief too deep for words.

Dr. Jackson was a young man of high education and great natural ability. He came to Manchuria with the intention of spreading medical knowledge and thus conveying untold blessing on the Eastern people. In pursuit of his ideal he was cut down. The Presbyterian Mission has lost a recruit of great promise, the Chinese government a man who gave his life in his desire to help them.

O spirit of Dr. Jackson, we pray you intercede for the 20,000,000 people of Manchuria and ask the Lord of Heaven to take away this pest so we may once more lay our heads in peace upon our pillows!

In life you were brave; now you are a spirit. Noble spirit, who sacrificed your life for us, help us still and look down in kindness upon us all.—Missionary Herald.

At the cost of His own physical weariness and hunger, He gave to that woman at Samaria's well sweet rest of heart and quenched her spiritual thirst. When the woman with an issue of blood stole to His side and touching the hem of His garment "straightway felt in her body that she was healed," we read that Jesus "immediately knew that virtue had gone out of Him." She was quickened and strengthened, but He was thereby made the weaker. These instances are not accidental cases in the life of Chrst. They are but illustrations of the great law and principle of His entire life—self-sacrifice. As he incessantly "went about doing good," ministering physical and spiritual healing to thousands. He little by little poured out His own life and strength, spending and being spent for others. In life. in death, He saved men at the cost of Himself. "He saved others, Himself He cannot save."—Sel.

"Our interest in Missions is a mark of our Christian character."

"Our knowledge of Missions is the measure of our Christian attainment."

"Our participation in Missions is the measure of our Christian efficiency."

—H. C. Mabie.

THE TRAIN JUMPER.

Havey Andrews sat at the breakfast table frowning into his coffee cup. "Everything's going up, mother," he remarked dismally; and then, after a pause, "except my salary."

Mrs. Andrews, who was clearing the things from the table, paused in her rounds There are all osrts of plans of living Har- to pat her son's shoulder. "O that's all right. There are all sorts of plans of living, Harvey, and when you get settled in any of them, you are quite contented. If we have to climb down a bit from where we are now, we can do it gracefully, can't we, boy?"

The lad rose up and smiled at his mother. "I declare, he cried admiringly, "you do look at things the brightest way. I suppose you are right, though. I know old Parker, janitor, seems quite as happy as I do. Parker cleans up the depot for fifteen dollars a month, I believe, while I operate the telegraph for fifty. I have one little mother to support, while Parker—goodness knows how many Parker has!"

"Mothers?" cried Mrs. Andrews, jokingly. "Not all of them." And her son hurried out the door for the office.

Mrs. Andrews' cheerfulness had brightened up the whole morning for her son. He went to the depot whistling snatches oftunes from half a dozen songs. He called 'good morning" to any one he saw on the front porches, for in the village everybody knows everybody else.

He entered the depot when Parker was just finishing sweeping. The old negro pulled off his old slouch hat. "Mawnin', boss." He made a profounnd bow, because Parker thought it took an intellectual giant to find out "what dat little tick-tick telegraph wus talkin' bout."

"Fine morning, Parker."

"Ya-as, suh, boss. Ef yoo's got time. Mistah Andrews, I wush you'd gimme a lettle advice."

"What's the trouble?" smiled the boy.

"O, no trouble, suh; but me an' my fambly has been scrimpin' and savin' fur a long time now, an' we's got thirty-two dollars ahead. Now what would you do with it?

Harvey puzzled over this financial problem.The pathos of the old man's long and patient saving and the humor of his great concern over such a small amount came home to the boy. "Well, Parker, you might —"

His financial advice was cut short, however, by an abrupt voice: "Are you agent here?" Harvey entered the little railed-off office where the telegraph was stuttering out its tireless characters. "Yes, sir. Anything I can do?" "When does the train leave for Pittsbuurg?"

There was a placard on the wall giving this information, but the lad went through the day's list to the man.

"Is the nine-thirty on time?"

"Haven't heard yet. I'll telegraph."

"Telegrapher too?" from the man in his brusque fashion. Harvey smiled. "I'm everything here except baggage master. The two of us run the thing." The man, who was a well-dressed fellow, with a mouth that clamped firm under a bristling mustache, laid his hand on the railing gate and was about to enter. Andrews reached over and laid a hand on his shoulder. "Can't do it, sir," he remarked good naturedly Rules don't allow strangers on the inside. Mighty sorry." The gentleman stared at Harvey with a peculiar alertness "That's that's all right," he stammered "I just wanted to see that railroad guide."

"Certainly;" and the boy handed him the big book. But that one act engrossed the boy's attention. What should this man have wanted in the office? He was surely not a man who should not know better. He had the marks of a man of experience The telegrapher now regarded him curiously.

The telegraph [illegible] sending a message for Harvey, stating that the pay train would be through his station in ten minutes.

"O" remarked the man who still stood leaning against the rail. "So nine-thirty is not really the first."

"The first passenger," responded Harvey noting the fact that the man knew telegraphy.The man pulled out his watch and looked at it. "Pay train, I believe."

Harvey looked him full in the fface. you will pardon me again," he said, "but that is also office information."

The man snapped his watch, shut and walked out into the general waiting room. Other passengers began to arrive for the nine-thirty—a country man, who was going to a fair; a boy and a girl; an old woman, who came beat over and rubbing her thin hands, finding the spring day too chilly for her thin blood.

They all asked about the same questions. which some of them varied by wanting to know if the depot clock was right. When the old woman bought her ticket, the boy asked her if she was cold,and had Parker make her a kindling fire in the waiting-room stove, where she sat in the sunshine that streamed through the window, holding her skinny hands over the flame

The gentleman wandered about the room for a bit, and then returned to the inner railing and began a long string of questions about how much freight this depot handled. the messages the lad sent and received,the work of the local freights, and other similar topics. He became quite genial, and at last touched on the approaching pay train and the amounts of money it carried.

"I'm merely a telegrapher," replied Harvey, "and am not supposed to know these things," although he had been answering easily enough previously; for he had been studying the tonnage of the road and its traed, because he was interested in the big machine of which he was a part.

The man's question again roused and strengthened the boy's very faint suspicions. He decided to keep an eye on the fellow, at least. Just then he heard the far-away whistle of the coming pay train. Then Harvey smiled at himself. How could this lone man harm a train in broad, spring daylight? He couldn't harm it at all. The boy laughed at his own idea, although the man acted queerly.

The oncoming train whistled again, now quite close. Harvey ran out to hand it a message that had been received for the engineer. The train thundered up to the boy as he stood on the long platform holding a little yellow slip of paper in his hand for the engineer to reach. The passengers, who invariably mistake every train for their own came running out. The guards came near the engine, shouting that this was not a passenger, and for everybody to keep off. The travelers moved back reluctantly, as though they were not sure but that it might turn out to be the passenger after all.

Just as the boy handed up the telegram he had a view of the whole length of the train and observed this same man step on the rear coach of the line of cars.

The engineer had pulled open his throttle, and the engine sent out a shrieking cry of warning. Harvey cried again to the guards as the train banged past, but they had turned into the coach. Before he could think what really to do, the pay train was well away, gliding down the track under a long train of smoke.

The boy considered a moment. There was but one thing left to do—to telegraph ahead to the nearest station, and hope that the train would make it through all right to that point. He acted on the idea, and sent the following:

"Conductor Pay Train: Suspicious character boarded your train at Whitely Junction. Climbed in rear coach. May be hid in there." No reply came within fifteen minutes the time the pay train should have reached the next station. The boy wondered what could have happened. Half an hour later, however, a message did arrive. It read:

"Mr. Harvey Andrews, Whitely Junction: Suspicious character discovered. Thanks for information. The president also sends his compliments for your faithfulness and courtesy. This last line puzzled the boy, until nearly two mounths later he received a pass to report to the company's office in Pittsburgh. He was ushered into an office by a blue-coated lad, who ceremoniously motioned him to a gentleman in a pivot chair at a big desk. The man turned on him abruptly and gave him that same quick, alert glance, a smile flickering for an instant under the bristling moustache.

"We needed a young fellow we could trust, Andrews," said the president quickly, "who was well posted, and knew telegraphy. I thought yon'd do, if you didn't mind associating with suspicious characters."

"I suppose you are all right," grinned Harvey; "you didn't rob the train, and you had a chance."—T. S. Stribling, in Kind Words.

ANOTHER WORD-MAKING CONTEST.

See how many four letter words you can find such that the letters can be transposed into three other words. Time is an example. From it you can make item, mite, and emit. The list should be mailed on or before Feb. 5. A prize will be given for the longest correct list.

PRIZE WINNER.

Raymond McCulloch, of Pleasant Garden, walks off with the prize this week. He has sent us a long list of numbers in sets of three having the property that the square of the one equals the sum of the squares of the other two.

HONOR ROLL.

Miss Jennie Kelly, of East Bend, and F D. Culler, of Pinnacle, construct the Scripture verses as follows:

1. Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.
2. Thou shalt not kill.
3. Jesus wept.
4. Let brotherly love continue.
5. Pray without ceasing.

Two Kinds of Socialists.

The Reverend Archibald D. Pinkerton, the well-known Christian socialist of Duluth, said in a recent address:

"I asked a crusty old millionaire the other day to contribute to our book fund. He frowned and said:

"'So you're a socialist, eh?'

"'Yes, sir,' said I.

"'Well, tell me what socialist is,' said he.

"'But you must tell me first,' said I, 'what sort of socialist you mean—a political socialist or a Christian socialist. For there is a vast difference. The political socialist says 'What's yours is mine.'' But the Christian socialist says, 'What's mine is yours.'"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Shocked the Superintendent.

He entered the superintendent's office in a kind of bashful, well-I-got-no-business-here sort of manner and quietly asked the busy man if the superintendent was in.

"I am he," replied that official without raising his eyes from the desk—"what do you want?"

"One of your trains killed my dog a few days ago and I thought I would step in and——"

"Well, he had no business on our tracks; you should have kept him tied."

"Yes, I know," meekly responded the caller, "but I didn't and he got on the track and was killed, and I thought you ought to——"

"But we won't! We don't pay for killing dogs on this road."

"Who said anything about pay?" replied the ex-dog owner. "I'd been trying for a month to get some one to drown that measly cur, and as the railroad has killed him for me, I thought you ought to be paid for the job. Here's $2."—Railroad Employe.

—The commission having in charge the distribution of the Carnegie hero fund made their report for the year 1911 in Pittsburg, Jan. 17. In recognition of acts of heroism 37 persons were found worthy of awards, which were in most cases both medals and money, the gifts in money ranged from one to three thousand dollars each. In the cases in which the hero lost life the awards were made to the parents or near relatives. Most of the acts of heroism were rescues from drowning. Three of the number were women. Mrs. Delia R. Powers, received a bronze medal and $1,000 for saving a child of three years from being run over by the cars. Another, Miss Clara Hogstad, received a silver medal and $1,000 for an attempt to save an old man of 70 years from being killed by a train. In her attempt to save the man the train struck him, and both were thrown fifteen feet away. The man was killed, and Miss Hogstad badly injured. The third woman was Mrs. Cauzada M. Owen, who lost her life while trying to stop a team of runaway mules hitched to a wagon containing two women and a child. Her husband received a silver medal. Several of the heroes were boys under sixteen, one, a lad of twelve lost his life while trying to save a younger boy from drowning. One was a negro, an oil tank cleaner, who lost his life while trying to save another negro, a fellow workman, from suffocation.

Dr. Lee G. Broughton, a Wake County, North Carolina man, has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist Tabernacle, Atlanta, Ga., the first institutional church to be founded in the South, to become pastor of Christ church, London, succeeding Dr. F. B. Meyer, a well-known minister.

WHICH WILL YOU TAKE?

When James A. Garfield, who afterwards became President of the United States, was President of Oberlin College, in Ohio, a man brought his son for entrance as a student, for whom he desired a shorter course than the regular one. "The boy will never take all that in," the father said. He wants to get through by a shorter route. Can you arrange for it?" O,yes," replied the President of Oberlin College, I can arrange for it. Your son can take the shorter course. It all depends on what you want to make of him. When God wants to make an oak, he takes a hundred years; but when he wants to make a squash, he requires only two months."—Ex.

A New Year's Message.

General Booth, founder and leader of the Salvation Army, who, though well past eighty, is strong of body and vigorous of mind, sends this New Year's message to all his army posts: "I am more interested than ever in social work of all kinds, but let it be borne in mind that every cure for the world's woes, whether concocted by philanthropy, political, socialistic, or parliamentary combinations, that seeks to change the hearts and lives of men without the recognition or intervention of God is a mockery, a delusion and a snare." And therein General Booth is exceedingly right. Philanthropy and benevolence and sociology may go a long way in alleviating the world's suffering and bettering the world's condition, but the recognition and the intervention of God, and redemption through Jesus the Christ the Son of God can save men from their sins and bring the world at last to safety and security.

JESUS LEADS THE WAY.

They tell me there is danger
In the path my feet must tread;
But they cannot see the glory
That is shining 'round my head.

They tell me life has trials,
And the fairest hopes will flee;
But I trust my all in Jesus.
And I know He cares for me.

I know I'm weak and helpless,
My lot seems oh, so small;
But with Jesus' arm around me,
I shall win and conquer all.

It is Jesus leads my footsteps,
He has made my life his own,
I would not dare to journey
Through the wide, wide world, alone.

—Mrs. Stein.

—Be thankful and hopeful.

ENDEAVOR'S 31ST BIRTHDAY.

By Charles A. Hines.

One need not be old to recall the time when there was no such a thing as a young people's organization in the church. Religion was something entirely above and beyond young people and children. They could not understand God, the church, religion, redemption or anything of the kind. To allow them a prominent part in a church service would be sacrilegious. It is true they were permitted to attend Sunday school, but in this they could do nothing more than sit quietly on uncomfortable benches and listen to the supposed profound discussion of the lesson. There was then none of the attractive Sunday school literature of today. To the average boy or girl, as well church was a place they were bound to attend but, its work was not for them. They could sight the promised land, but must keep quiet until of such age that their judgment could be considered sound.

The time came when God put it into the heart of Francis E. Clark to change these conditions and 31 years ago he gathered in the parsonage at Williston, Me., a group of boys and girls who organized into the first C. E. Society. The readers know something of the wonderful growth of the organization. Today there are nearly five million members of the society. They are scattered throughout the entire world—on land and at sea. Thousands of young men and young women have been brought to Christ through the organization. Its influence is incalcuable. Many have predicted that the growth has been too rapid and that would not last, but today the structure stands firm upon solid foundations, and it continues to grow in numbers and multiply in influence.

For the society birthday meeting this year a special program has been arranged by the United Society which may be obtained for 5 cents for a single copy, or $1.50 a hundred.

The meeting should be one looking to better and more effective service for the Master. In considering the topic, "Christian Endeavor Ideals," try to get something that will remain and build up your society. Make better plans for another year. Be more courageous and resolute in carrying out those plans.

THE CLASS SUNDAY SERVICE.

It is becoming increasingly popular for the organized class to take charge of an occasional church service and conduct it in every part. Several advantages will readily suggest themselves. In the first place, it provides a unique service, entirely different from the ordinary one, and gives a note of variety that is not altogether to be ignored.

It also gives the class or classes taking part a chance to show what they can do when such a task is given them. It further gives opportunities to those taking part for self-development, and finally, such a plan enables the Bible class movement to be made known to many who are in ignorance of its importance and growth.

It affords, in a word, a demonstration of the new adult force in the modern church, and cannot fail to impress all who are present.

A men's class in a large Canadian city recently took chage of the evening service in their church. Three members dealt with themes of the young man in relation to his church, his country and to Christ. The plan proved to be highly successful, and it will probably be made an annual event.

In another church of the same city, the young ladies' Bible class helped to conduct the services both morning and evening, the entire day being utilized as a rally day for the class mentioned and other classes in the same church. Speakers from four different denominations addressed the congregation, dealing chiefly with the subject of Women's Organized Bible Classes, their importance and work.

An attractive feature of one of the services was a young ladies' choir, assisted by soloists and a male quartet. There is a splendid field of this kind for very effective service on the part of organized classes.—Selected.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, FEB. 4, 1912.

Subject—"Christian Endeavor Ideals." (Christian Endeavor Day)—John 15: 1-8.

Christian Endeavor is a branch of the vine—it is not the trunk. It is an auxiliary. The church is the vine and individuals and all auxiliaries are branches. When we come to compare the importance of one branch with another we find Endeavor a limb of no small proportions. The Sunday school alone is greater among all the church organizations. Being a branch, the society must look to the church and the great head of the church for both its power and its inspiration. It cannot be an ideal organization if it does not followe the ideal of our faith

If we accept the test prescribed by verse 5 we must bear much fruit. A little will not be sufficient. The fruit of the work of Christian Endeavor cannot always be estimated but the Lord of the Harvest knows just how much fruit the society and the life of each member bears. There will certainly not be a large harvest if the laborers are few and the work of that few indifferent. But a few may accomplish much if we abide in Christ and He in us, as enjoined by verse 7.

Christian Endeavor ideals cover not only the work of the society, but the entire life. They aim at a perfect, well-balanced manhood. In the language of another, "They are ideals of love, knowledge, service."

As Endeavorers we have pledged ourselves to "strive to do whatever Christ would like to have" us do. This gives us a broad field for study and discussion. Our ideals should be those things we think Christ would have us do and be, considering our field and opportunity for service. Christ would want us to read the Bible and study it thoroughly. It is a good plan to read the Holy Book straight through. Study and think as you go along, mark passages that interest you. Memorize others. The ideal Endeavorer must be a Bible student.

Christ also would have us brave, true, considerate and charitable. Can you not think of many other things he would have us be—many other things that are necessary to make us ideal men? With a big membership, scores of things for the ideal life might be suggested and yet no two would use the same word. There are so many things that are becoming and essential in the Christian man or woman.

The ideal Endeavorer does not rest upon past work, nor can we do our best in the present alone. The future must allure us if the present is to be its best. We ought to set some marks, some standards, some goals for another year, why not?

Sometimes we are disappointed and discouraged and say we will begin over again. We cannot begin anew but we may take a fresh start and make the future better than the past. The ideal Endeavorer looks to the future. It is the forward look and step which alone means hope. Our destiny and victory lie in front of us.

Suggestive Thoughts.

1. The Christian Endeavor ideal includes an ideal prayer meeting, which is one in which all in the room take some part commensurate with their growing abilities and experiences.

2. The Christian Endeavor ideal includes ideal committee work, which is so extensive, continued, and varied as to train all the members for efficient service.

3. The Christian Endeavor ideal includes ideal union work; that is, the Christians of a place joining together to do the things that cannot be so well done by the churches separated.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:22 a. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

S. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

4. The Christian Endeavor ideal includes ideal private devotions, which will include prayer and Bible reading; and will be sincere, full and regular.

For Answer in the Meeting.

What is an ideal? Give an example.

Name one great man that had a big ideal. (Give this to several.)

Name one Christian Endeavor ideal and tell how it helps you. (Give this to many).

How can we realize our ideals?

What was Paul's ideal?

Where does Christian Endeavor get its ideals? Tell how.

Name one ideal in efficiency that Christian Endeavor aims at. (Give this to several.)

What ideals of service has our society?

What ideal of society work might we set up?

How do ideals help us to do better?

For Daily Reading.

Mon. Personal purity, 1 John 3: 3-10.
Tues. Full consecration, Rom. 12: 1-2.
Wed. Training in service, Rom. 12: 3-8.
Thurs. Christian fellowship, Mal. 3: 16-18.
Fri. Christian patriotism, Rom. 13: 6-10.
Sat. Christian homes, Tit. 2: 1-8.
Sunday, Feb. 4,—Topic.

A Recitation:

Good, Better, Best.

Lord of workers, endless wise,
It would be a wondrous prize
If our work so firmly stood
Thou couldst praise and call it good.
Lord of workers, whose design
Finer grows and yet more fine,
All our work with purpose fill:
Help us make it better still.
Lord of workers, pointing far
To ideal's perfect star,
Leave us no ignoble rest;
Lift our better up to best.
Lord of workers, joined with Thee
In Endeavor's ecstacy,
Let Thy words that cheer and bless
Be our goal and our success.

—Amos R. Wells.

A SONG SPARROW IN WINTER.

Snow and sleet and a frozen field,
And a desolate winter sky,
When suddenly in yon bare tree
A little bird sings hopefully;
He sings and sings
Of flowers and things,
And sunshine bye and bye.

Desolation in my heart,
Gloom around me spread;
Yet somehow hidden out of sight,
My soul keeps singing through the night,
It sings and sings,
Of joy that springs
From ground that seemed quite dead.

Alice M. Clark, in N. Y. Advocate.

—The government's cotton-ginning report show 14,332,756 bales of cotton ginned to January 1, 1912, as compared with 11,084,515 bales last year. And there is much cotton in the fields not picked, and never will be. That is far and away the biggest cotton crop ever produced in this country

DIED.

Ingle.

Sister Rachel L. Ingle departed this life Jan. 16th, 1912, age, 63 years. Sister Ingle was in her usual health at the time of her death. She fell dead while at work in her room, having not a moment's warning. She leaves a husband and four children and many friends. She was a faithful member of the Methodist Church. Her funeral was preached by her pastor, S. B. Stephens, at Terry's Fork Church from Rev. 3: 2—"Behold, I come quickly"—after which her remains were laid to rest in the family graveyard to await the resurrection morn.

—Prof. J. M. Foust should be addressed R. F. D. 1, Snow Camp, N. C.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn carries a bandaged left hand. He fell on the ice and cut a great gash on the inside of his hand. A surgeon removed part of the lacerated flesh and closed the wound and bound his hand up.

—Mr. J. A. Odell because of advancing age retires from the presidency of the Odell Hardware Co. Mr. Chas. H. Ireland becomes president, Bro. R. H. Brooks, vice president, and Bro. J. Norman Wills secretary and treasurer.

—Mrs. J. A. Stout, near Climax, had a dreadful fall on the ice. Her head struck a door step, and her condition has been critical.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills, when in New York on the second Sunday went to hear Jowett preach. He also heard a Sunday-school talk by Dr. Shauffler.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil's daughter, Alma, has been ill for a long time, and is now in a seemingly critical condition.

—Mrs. T. F. McCulloch has been confined for some weeks with an affection of the ear that does not yield to treatment. A perforation of the bone may be necessary to a cure.

—The census report for the cotton crop of 1911 shows that on January 16, 14,510,576 bales of cotton had been ginned. During the period from January 1 to 15, inclusive, 193,674 bales were ginned. A considerable quantity still remains to be ginned. The final report will be given out by the census bureau, March 20. The department of agriculture estimated the total out put for the year 1911 would be 14,885,000 bales of 500 pounds each.

—Six months ago the Durham Hosiery Mills inaugurated a plan by which a sum was set aside from the earnings of the mill to be distributed among the employes making any suggestions leading to economy of operation in any department. During the six months, $1,172 have been distributed according to the provisions of the plan.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The Fall term was the best in the hisle better still.
which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to tory of the College; the Spring Term,

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for heir sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young ment and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible advantages at the lowest reasonable cost.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE...

This course for teaches opens April 9, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to male the greatest success possible in their chosen work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

—"The wicked stand where it is slippery," soliloquizes a contemporary. Not long. They do fall.

—Polk Miller, the Richmond lecturer in the negro dialect and droll yarns, announces that he has quit the stage, the platform and the public gaze forever and has disbanded his famous negro quartet. Old age is assigned as the cause.

—The Duke of Connnaught, who is now Governor General of Canada and uncle of George V of England, is on a visit to Ambassador Whitelaw Reid of New York this week.

—President William H. Taft, on Jan. 18, commuted to expire at once the 15 year sentence imposed upon Charles W. Morse, the New York Banker, and "ice king," who has served two years of his sentence for violation of the national banking laws. Morse is represented to be dying with consumption and it is not believed he could survive in prison a month longer.

—Realizing the need of the South for more and better dairies and the large profits which can be made in that favorable region by dairymen who will fill the great demand of the cities for dairy products, President Finley of the Southern Railway Company, following the custom of that company in furthering in every way the growth and development of its territory, has equipped a Special Dairy Car, which, beginning the first of February, 1912, will be run over the length and breadth of the great system, spreading the doctrine of more and better cows and, by means of lectures, demonstrations and exhibits, doing everything possible to develop and improve the dairy industry along its lines in the Southeastern States.

—Long hatpins, the unprotected points of which project beyond the wearer's head, are no longer fashionable. There are, indeed, indications that hatpins may be wholly discarded. Queen Mary, just before she sailed for India, gave orders that all her hats should be fitted with the old-fashioned elastic cord. None of her hatpins were invited to the durbar.—Ex. Amen.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1912. NUMBER 10.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diectly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE GOOD OF ONE PASTORAL CALL.

It was early in the morning that Pastor Barton was making a round of visitation among the sick. He had to pass Bro. Jones's house, and it occurred to him to run in for a minute or two.

"Bro. Jones, I was passing and I thought I would come in and see how you all are, and have a word of prayer with all before you begin your day's work. I'm glad to know you are all well. I see so many sick and suffering that when I find a family all well I feel that there is something to be especially thankful for. I see it is almost time for the young folks to start to school, and I know that your business is calling you, Bro. Jones, but let me read a little from the Good Book and have a word of prayer with you. I always feel that the day goes better if I begin it with prayer and thanksgiving to God for His guidance and blessing."

Pastor Barton's reading and prayer were both very brief; in fact, his call did not last over ten minutes, but how timely it was, and what an immense amount of good it did!—more than Pastor Barton ever realized.

The fact was, Brother Jones was in a state of perplexity as to his business, his affairs having become tangled, and he was on the point of desperation. Pastor Barton's prayer that the Lord would guide him in his business made him realize that he had not committed his business unto the Lord as he should have done, and he resolved to begin at once to make his business part of his religion. The result was that his mind became calm and he began to see a way out of the tangled maze of business obligations. He went home that night with his heart so lightened that Mrs. Jones and all the family at once noted the change, though they did not know exactly what was the load "Father" had been carrying.

Mrs. Jones, too, found a blessing through the morning prayer. The care of the household and the anxiety she felt about the young people were telling on her, and she came to see as never before that the Lord was interested with her in bringing her children to their best, and she rejoiced to think that the Lord was watching over her loved ones when they were out of her sight.

Tom, eighteen years of age, also received timely help. He was growing restless and seriously thinking of running away from home. Somehow the minister's spirit of submission affected him and he became more resigned and actually resolved to help father and mother with their growing burdens.

Kate, too, found a boon in the pastor's call. She had the day before received an invitation from a young man of questionable character but attractive personality, asking her to accompany him in a buggy ride to an evening party. She was tempted to accept it, though she felt she ought not. After the pastor's call and prayer, she found it easier to say no.

Little Frank also had his blessing. The day before a boy in school had done him an injury, and he was trying to think how to even up with him. When the preacher prayed: "Lord, forgive us our sins as we forgive those who sin against us," Frank came to see how small his own hurt was in comparison with a sin against God, and he resolved to forgive his schoolmate for his thoughtless deed.

Just a few words by a man of God—but how fraught with blessing they were to an entire family.

—A flock of robins appeared in Burlington two days during the intense cold weather.

YOU'RE NEXT.

An eccentric man who was a barbar by trade is said to have had engraved on his coffin plate the words, "You're next." As his friends came to look upon his face for the last time, they would read the words and be startled. The barber intended it as a joke, but it is too serious a matter of jest.

Every one of us is in the line of succession. If not the very next, we are the next to some one whose time will soon be me. Do you realize that you are being swiftly carried forward to the last hour of earth and the first hour of the world beyond?

A Handy Man Without Hands.—Leon McCulloch, with the Westinghouse Electric Co., Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "There is a man working in the office here who has no hands at all, but only two hooks to take their place, or a pen which can be inserted in place of one of the hooks. He can handle books and papers, button his clothes and do other remarkable things with those two hooks, however. He is also lame in one foot. He was injured so while trying to free another man from an electric wire." That man is doing better than many who have two hands and feet. He has the willing spirit which is far more than the whole body.

BOY SCOUTS.

The scout movement is one that people have looked upon with suspicion. Is it good for the boys or is it bad for them? Some think it is intended to develop the war spirit. One of the best expositions of what it is and is intended to accomplish for the boy is given in an entertaining illustrated story book published by the Messrs. George H. Doran Company, New York, and entitled "From Tenderfoot to Scout.." It is a book that men and women as well as boys will enjoy reading. Price, $1.20, net.

—One of our preachers writes that his wife can beat him and intimates that she has done so. But it didn't sound quite so lamentable to us when he explained that she could beat him in getting new subscribers for the Herald. We could wish that every one of our preachers had such a wife as that.

THE PASTOR'S SALARY.

I note that President Swain in last week's issue of the Herald calls attention to the importance of making prompt collections on pastor's salary. This is a timely subject. As he says, when the average pastor "gets through Conference he is pretty short of cash" and then the present winter so far has been characterized by unusually inclement weather and this has not only increased expenses, but it has caused congregations to be small and in many instances no congregation at all. Cosequently the stewards have failed to see the members and collections on pastor's salaries have not come in as freely as usual—which has never been very freely in the early part of the year on most charges. The winter months are most expensive, as every one knows, and hence the importance of heeding the President's admonition that the stewards should make early collections. The faithful pastor hesitates to call attention to his needs and often suffers rather than do so. One pastor states that for every dollar he has received on salary up to the present he has paid out five dollars in defraying actual and necessary living expenses.

This is not due to meanness on the part of his people—it is not due to their lack of ability—it is not due to their lack of love for him—it is due wholly to lack of thoughtfulness. He has not felt that he could tell them how matters stand and they have not thought to ask him. I wonder how many pastors are in the same boat with this one gliding down through the Conference year of 1912—two months of which have already passed. Is it not time to think and to heed the exhortation of the President "to make early collections of pastor's salary?"

Respectfully submitted, William.

EXCELSIOR! EXCELSIOR!

Our pastor preached a splendid new year sermon on the duty of "fighting it out." The next morning at breakfast our little boy, Benjamin, asked if I knew why that boy was so anxious to go on up the mountain though they were all trying to stop him? I asked him what he knew about it, and he said his teacher said he had promised his folks to get home by Christmas. Then we looked up the poem and read it over and over, and I had the boy to learn it "by heart." It seemed more beautiful and impressive than ever. In the shades of night he bore mid snow and ice the banner with the strange device, "Excelsior." The old man cautioned him against the tempest and roaring torrent; but his clarion voice replied, "Excelsior!" The maiden bade him "stay and rest his weary head upon her breast. A tear stood in his bright blue eye, but still he answered with a sigh, Excelsior!" The lights that shone in happy homes and the spectral glaciers far above glittering in the twilight above the clouds racked him with contending passions. "From his lips escaped the groan: Excelsior!" Danger and death threatened, "Bemare the pine trees withered branch; beware the dreadful avalanche. This was the peasant's last good-night—His voice replied far up the height: Excelsior!"

The pious monks of St. Bernard at break of day sent heavenward their oft-repeated prayer and heard upon the shattered air: "Excelsior!" Then the traveler was found by the faithful dog, half buried in the snow—but "still grasping in his had of ice the banner with the strange device, Excelsior! And from the sky, serene and far, a voice fell like a falling star: "Excelsior!" As I walked down town that morning to begin the work of the new year, for, as I was past middle age, the thought of the preacher's sermon—mingled with the poet's description of the boy who could not be turned aside from his purpose to go higher, by the comforts of life, the dangers of the journey, the appetites and passions, nor the fear of death; and his heroic climb through all the cold, weary, dangerous hours of the night—his cry at break of day, his "clasping in his hand of ice" after death the banner with the strange device, and his clarion cry after death penetrating the empyrium, gave me such a thrill of courage and enthusiasm that I have had new life and resolution ever since. I wish every boy and girl and grown person, too, in our church would learn the poem and feel its force and meaning and catch and carry its inspiration.

I was impressed with the lack of care of many people by the remarks made to me by friends who read my "good resolutions" card. Nearly all who spoke to me about it, and many did with fine appreciation, were under the impression that I wrote the sentiments myself. It was plainly embraced in quotation marks on the card. My chief reason for printing and circulating it was that it mentioned so many points in which I was deficient. And I hoped that calling it to the attention of others might impress it on my mind and enable me to live up to it. One much loved brother wrote a splendid letter of appreciation in which he expressed for me a wish in a certain Bible verse. I looked it up and read: ""The Lord fulfil all thy petitions." That was David's wish for his chief musician. David must have known him well. I began to think what a dangerous thing it might be for this old world and its people if the Lord should fulfil all my petitions. If I knew He would, I doubt whether I would ever pray again, in such danger would I be, with my limited powers, of making mistakes. T. T. Hicks.

Jan. 26, 1912.

TO THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The Washington Convention. .Report to Conference.

Acting in obedience to the action of our Henderson Conference and responding to a request from some of the citizens of Asheboro made it my good fortune to attend in Washington City, Dec. 11-14 the biennial convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, also the Conference of temperance workers on the night of the 14th and the day following.

Any one who has tried it knows the utter impossibility of reporting in any satisfactory way a great convention. The most you can do is to say some things about the Convention.

Who Was There.

To start with, there were 172 accredited, voting delegates, from 39 states, representing 26 religious and temperance organizations. However, there were 240 who signed the enrollment cards and were registered as having attended, but only 172 of this number were entitled to vote in the convention. While there were flashes of wit along all along and at times the audience roared with laughter, yet I have never seen a more serious, more determined, more hopeful, more powerful body of men assembled. There was brought together such an accumulation of combined brain and spiritual power as to make the temperance cause appear hopeful and the liquor traffic hopelessly doomed.

The Complexion of It.

The organization, the program, the discussion, and even the men while there, were non-partisan, non-denominational. The evil of the liquor traffic and how to get rid of it, not how to regulate it, was the burden of every address and of every utterance. The traffic is an uncommon common enemy, hence it must be treated and we must conduct ourselves accordingly. United we stand and it falls; otherwise, it stands and we continue to suffer.

The Bane of All Prohibitionary Effort.

Temperance and the prohibition of the liquor traffic was discussed from almost every point of view, but the phase mentioned and oftenest discussed most was the shipping across state lines into dry territory under protection of inter-state commerce. The conference following the convention was given entirely to this phase of the subject. All were agreed that this is the preponderating question now before the temperance people, but to know how to deal with it is not so easy. If we were to ask Congress to pass a law putting an object of inter-state commerce under the control of state law when it crossed a state line into any given state, Congress would decline to do this on the ground that such a law would be unconstitutional since it delegates to a state the control of inter-state commerce, which control belongs by the constitution exclusively to the Federal Government. On the other hand it was claimed by some that the most effective measure we could hope to get through Congress and to stand the test of the highest court would be a law enacted by Congress to the effect that any article when shipped from one state to another with intent to violate the laws of the state into which it was shipped should not be recognized as an object of inter-state commerce, hence not protected by the Federal Government. The difficulty in getting the desired relief from this kind of law would be in making the state lay stringent enough so that the shipment of liquor from another state into n. C., say, could scarcely be made without intent to violate our state laws. As our state laws now stand the numerous shipments into our state are not made with intent to violate our state laws when the consignee is getting it to drink and to treat his friends or customers. Our state law, roughly speaking, prohibits the manufacture or sale of liquor, not the possessions or the drinking of it. So that to get relief through this last named measure would require very, very stringent state laws. Yet it is thought that Congress would give this kind of law if the people ask for it really to get it and that such a law would stand the test of the supreme court of the United States.

A committee was finally appointed to consider the matter and decide what kind of law it is wisest to ask Congress to give us, then call upon all the temperance forces to get behind it and push it until it goes through. T. M. Johnson.

Asheboro, N. C.

Character is caught, not taught.—Selected.

Blushing is the color of virtue.—Matthew Henry.

Virtue is bold and goodness never fearing.—Shakespeare.

TWO SERMONS WE HAVE HEARD.

It was more than sixty years ago when this writer had the privilege of hearing two sermons, one a few weeks after the other. The two sermons were widely diverse as to the effect they had and the lasting impression they made on our young mind which at that time was keenly alive to every influence that tended to a life of godliness. It was a balmy summer eve and in the center of a grove of tall trees a large brush arbor had been erected and a grand stand where a vast audience has assembled to hear a sermon from Rev. Thomas Lowe whose fame as anorator had spread far and wide. It was an inspiring scene as the gentle breezes played softly and birds warbled sweetly as that man of God took his position on the stand facing that intelligent throng of eager listeners as he appealed so eloquently to all that was noble and godlike in the hearts of his hearers. His subject, (we cannot recall his text) was the shortness of time and the length of eternity. He went on to state that if a bird were to go to the sea shore and take one grain of sand and bear it away; in one thousand years to return and get another, until this whole earth was carried away at that rate that eternity would only be just begun. How it staggered our reason to contemplate such a period of time. He then spoke of the lost soul writhing in the torments of the lost world. and that at some time that soul might be thrown up upon some dark billow of damnation and see in the distance the Holy City of God where saints and angels were shouting and singing praises and their harps resounding and the poor lost soul cried out as he saw standing looking towards him an angel of serene yet majestic mien. Oh, watchman, watchman. what of the night? and the angel with a voice that echoed and re-echoed through all the vast domains of God's universe replied, "Eternity, Eternity;" and as the words were ringing and reverberating through the worlds until that soul so hopeless and helpless would sink back unto that dark abode of woe never more to rise while the voice of the angel still echoed in whispers low, "Eternity, Eternity, Eternity!"

The remainder of this excellent, yet eloquent and awful sermon we fail to recall, but we well remember the depressing effect it had upon us as we determined that we would so live that we would not have to endure anything so superlatively awful, yet we mourned to think that any human being made in the image and likeness of God should ever attain to a doom so terrible.

The Other Sermon.

It was only a few days after hearing the above that we attended another camp meeting at old Union Chapel on Granville Circuit. The circumstances were nearly the same: a beautiful evening, everything auspicious and Rev. J. L. Michaux, at that time pastor of the circuit, was to preach to an audience of perhaps four thousand or more persons. When the hour arrived for service a train of passenger cars came thundering by and slowed up just enough to let a number of persons get off. Among the number was gentleman somewhat past middle age, fine looking, handsomely dressed, and exceedingly attractive in appearance and manner. He came toward the stand which at that time was occupied by several of our ministers. Bro. Michaux went to meet him promptly, greeted him cordially, and ascertained that he was a Presbyterian minister. He invited him to a seat on the stand and in a short time had gained his consent to preach for us. There was on the face of the stranger otherwise so pleasant, an expression of intense sorrow, but it was controlled by a beautiful resignation. He came forward and after reading a brief scripture lesson he announced his text: "Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him; for he shall eat the fruit of his doings;" and for about thirty minutes he held that vast audience spell-bound, as he talked of the beauty of holiness, of the joy that ever attends the true servants of God; of the certainty of the atonement made on the cross availing for every soul that would humbly and sincerely seek Jesus, the great reward that awaits those who walk with God through this vale of tears, of the angels that keep watch and ward over His true servants. He spoke of the audience before him and said, I see faces here I have never seen before, but I expect to meet and recognize them upon the shores of eternal deliverance. He spoke, oh, so eloquently of the joy and everlasting peace and rest that remains for all God's children and the solemn stillness of the audience was frequently broken by some one who would cry out, "Glory to God." We wish it were in our power to recall some of his sublime flights of eloquence, but we are still under the impression that many, very many more souls would be saved by such a sermon as this than the first where the fearful doom of those out of Christ was so clearly set forth. It may be that some souls require such extreme measures to arouse themselves from their lethargy. E. A. N.

We learned afterwards that the Presbyterian minister in question had but recently buried the last of his family; a fond wife and several children had passed away in quick succession, leaving him alone in the world, and when he preached for us, he was traveling about distributing Bibles among the poor and destitute. He left his home in Memphis, Tennessee, after death had robbed him of his loved ones. A few days after preaching that memorable sermon, he went to Oxford, N. C., and got a horse and buggy to travel about in order to leave Bibles wherever needed. He left Oxford one evening, and about three o'clock some one found him sitting in his buggy a mile or two from town. The horse was straggling about, and he was sitting there dead. His name was Deruwell. His remains were sent to Tennessee.

BIBLE STUDY CLASS.

Lesson for Next Week.

Job, first seven chapters.

Answer to Assigned Questions

ESTHER.

I read the book of Esther on Sunday, and Monday, 21 and 22—and will try in concert with the Bible class to respond to the question extended by our leader. The righteous Jewish people at that time "called upon the name of the Lord," of course, and we know that God answered the prayers of the faithful—and that He answered in his own way. The book of Esther is a peculiar history of the affairs of men. The over ruling hand of God was in that great event of giving deliverance to a class of oppressed people who were fearfully exposed to the blood-thirsty schemers of tyranny. The people, the Jews, did acknowledge God, as we know, and called upon God for deliverance, and protection but the writer as we see, left out the name of God in his report.

If the one man (Mordecai, perhaps) had been the author of the whole Bible, we would feel (as we must anyhow) that he had done respect to the name of God. Our respect and reverence for our superiors often cause us to feel reverence when we call their names. The author (whatever the name of the author) might have had such a great respect for the name of the great I Am that he did not feel to call his name.

Some preachers are so gifted that they are far better able to expound the scriptures than are others who are called to preach. It is a great gift to some men that they can preach so very well by just chaining the connecting scriptures together like "clock work"—and thus go through a sermon a whole hour at a time.

Others of the high calling are able to preach the gospel and to show the way of salvation, having the witness of the Spirit, but are not called "able expounders of the Scriptures." The God of system loves variety, and while our "persuasion" could not afford to serve or worship in our church without certain of the sacraments, there are other "persuasions" that serve God and call on His name without them. We know that the life of the Spirit is essential—however the "calling."

Some of the good people call the name of God at every breath, or right often, while others of the true worshippers, are able, by the grace of God to pray in an acceptable manner without the expression of God's name so often. We must believe that the Jews, in their struggle for life and liberty, on that very eventful occasion, called mightily upon the name of the Lord. When I first started on this article I purposed to make it very short, but since the object in view has started up the question, it has stirred up various thoughts that seem to come in for notice in connection with the main topic. Twelve or fifteen years ago, or near those days, I heard one of our M. P. ministers preach at Crooked Run on one of the leading Bible subjects—and the subject by my request. He noted out short scriptures, only short text, bearing directly on the subject. He proceeded systematically from passage of scripture to others and so on—and linked all firmly together. After he got through, I felt to say that all in the neighborhood ought to have heard. He preached an hour and ten minutes, and left off before he got to the end of that complete chain. I did not ask him how much he had left of the chain. Such are the connecting interests that we get from the great and wonderful Book, the Word of God. The above is ventured on without the help of the open pages of books or papers—and if used, the editor will please correct closely. An humble, Mordecai, and a simple hearted, beautiful woman are the representative characters before our view. Such are the representative characters given to us by the Word of God. W. F. Grabs.

WESTMINSTER SEMINARY NOTES.

The second semester began January 3. Not many of the students were on hand, but lessons were assigned and the work started at once. Within a few days, however all had returned and one new member was added to the student body in the person of Mr. Edw. Kirkly, of Baltimore.

After an absence of over two months, Mr. A. J. Torrey was able to resume his studies January 15. All were glad to have him return and hope that now he will be able to continue his work without further interruption. F. W. Stephenson has been supplying for him on his charge part of the time.

The two weeks Dr. Forlines passed in the hospital during the holidays proved of great benefit to him. When the semester opened he was able to take up his work with renewed vigor. He has had one slight relapse, however, and was confined to his bed one day and to the house three days. When he is not able to go up to the Seminary the classes meet at his home. But on the whole, he is gradually regain his health in spite of the occasional setbacks.

The other members of the faculty, Dr. Elderdice and Professors Douglas and Feeman, passed the holidays at their homes.

The new officers of Stockton Literary Society for this term are: J. Pritchard, President; W. S. Harper, Vice-President; R. Stanten, Sec.; W. L. Heitz, Treasurer; and F. W. Stephenson, Critic.

Dr. J. M. Sheridan, President of the Maryland Conference, visited the Seminary, January 11, and delivered a lecture on, "Why I Am a Methodist Protestant."

Messrs. Corn, Ewell, Harper and Marcus have preached their senior sermons. The class is so large that it is almost necessary to have one sermon each week.

Before the close of the first semester the students held a mass meeting in the chapel and organized a Singing Society. Ray Stanten being elected President. A permanent executive committee was chosen and instructed to formulate a constitution and by-laws. They did so and it was presented and adopted at the first meeting this semester. W. H. Mikesell was elected chorister. He is pursuing a course of instruction which should be a great benefit to every member of the society. Mr. Mikesell is doing this work gratuitously and his help is much appreciated.

Early in October the wives of a number of the Seminary students organized a Mission study class. They met every Monday evening at the homes of the members. The course proved interesting and very profitable. It was finished early in January, when with the assistance of the wives of the Seminary faculty, a new organization was formed with Mrs. H. L. Elderdice as President; Mrs. C. C. Douglas, Vice-President; and Mrs. A. R. Corn, Secretary. The officers, together with Mrs. F. W. Stephenson, constitute the program committee. The name of the new organization is, "The Seminary Woman's Club." It meets every Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Elderdice. At present they are making a special study of Charles Dickens' works, interspersing each program with current events, art news and other special features.

A number of valuable volumes have been added to the Seminary library so far this year. Among them are the following: "The Historian's History of the World," the gift of Miss Annie Kinzer; "Echoes from Einburgh," "Verbeck of Japan," and "The World's Missionary Conference," in nine volumes, all the gift of Dr. J. C. Broomfield; "Winning the Boy," "The Making of a Teacher," and "Getting and Holding." the three secured by A. R. Corn as premiums for a club of the Sunday School Times.

Mr. Kerlin's father died January 1. The entire Seminary community sympathize with him in his loss. There was some doubt about his being able to return to the Seminary on account of his father's death, but he did so, January 16.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Brown have taken up residence with Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Corn for the balance of the year.

At a recent meeting of the senior class, Ronalds Taylor was elected class orator.

Messrs. Shimp and Pritchard have been on the sick list this semester.

During the holidays a number of the young men held special services upon their charges and all met with splendid results. Geo. Foltz assisted W. S. Harper at Alexandria in a week's effort and although total strangers to the field had two conversions. Mr. Ledford assisted by Mr. Peterson had twenty conversions; Mr. Enfield and Mr. McGarrety had over forty; Messrs. Day and Stanten, twenty-two. So far this year the students having charges have had over one hundred and ten conversions since the opening of school.

Rev. B. W. Kindley, of Baltimore and Secretary of the Maryland Sunday School Association, recently visited the Seminary by invitation of Dr. Feeman. and addressed the Senior class in Practical. That class has been conducting a Sunday school conference, which is proving of great interest and help.

HAVE YOU A BLIND BABY?

Until a few years ago there was no institution fully equipped for the care, maintenance and education of the baby blind. But now there is an exceptionally fine one, known as the Arthur Home for Blind Babies, on Pinegrove Avenue, Summit, N. J. It is a large stone building, with Nursery, Hospital, Home and Kindergarten departments.

There are 25 children there already. The Kindergarten teachers are graduates. The Hospital Department is headed with one of the best graduate nurses to be found. with trained nurses; the Hospital staff is composed of the best surgeons and doctors of the country.

The Institution is maintained by the International Sunshine Siciety, the largest philanthropic newspaper club in the world. Headquarters, 96 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y. Originally all the members were newspaper writers, but since the dues are only kind deeds, the ranks have been joined by good people from all parts of the country. These newspaper workers discovered there was no provision for blind babies; that they were put in the Poor Houses of the different counties, or sent to the Idiot Departments or Institutions for Feeble Minded.

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, a newspaper writer and editor, is the President of this Society. and rightfully maintains that we have no right to assume that a child has no brains because it is blind. The Society has proven that if proper care and training is given, the baby will grow up into a beautiful normal health-loving child, with the exception that it has no eyesight. The Society took the so-branded idiots and feeble minded from the different states, put them in the Institution and gave them the best care and training that could be secured, and has proved the tr th of Mrs. Alden's statement, for out of eighty-two children supposed to be beyond all help, only two failed to respond to the training.

It has also been discovered that the mortality among the blind babies is something alarming. The light hunger is greater than that of food. and the blind babies, instead of sucking their thumbs, dig their little fingers into the eyes and rub for the light (that never comes) until the eye is injured, and as a result often blood poisoning sets in and the baby dies.

When the Summit Home was opened, of the thirty-one children on the list when the workers began to prepare the Home, only one could be found.

Not one of the children now in the Home was on the list for admission when the Home was opened.

Love and money will not save a blind baby's mind. The very mother-love that hugs the baby closer and closer to her, is the greatest enemy the child can have. Daily. the mother will see her baby grow more feeble right under her eyes. It takes a graduate nurse to carry out the doctor's orders as to its physical care, and it takes a graduate kindergartener to train the mind that should be trained daily, yes, hourly. The mother can no more save her blind baby from becoming feeble in mind than she can give it a college education and do her other duties at the same time.

If you know of a blind baby, tell the parents of this institution, where it can be sent and be saved from growing up feeble in mind and crippled physically.

Letters directed to Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, 96 Fifth Avenue, New York City, President-General, International Sunshine Society, or to Mrs. Kate Coleman, Superintendent of the grove Avenue, Summit, N. J., will receive prompt attention.

TWO ROADS TO HOPE.

Paul knew the value of hope to the Christian. In his Epistles he makes hope the keystone of the arch of the three graces—Faith, Hope, Charity—was as desirous that the saints should have hope as that they possess faith or charity. In the fifth of Romans he points out two ways to hope. First, he starts with justification by faith, then peace with God. then grace wherein we stand. At the end of this delightful way hope springs up with rejoicing. Blessed is he who travels to the mountain of hope on this road. But Paul knew that there were many in Rome who were strangers to such a road. Their faith trembled under sore trials. Peace they did not know, and it was hard to be steadfast. They were not traveling on the beautiful road of peace and rejoicing. Yet none needed hope more. There is a road to Hope through the valley. The gateway is Tribulation. Lift up your eyes you who are under the rod. Walk on through the trying and burning sands of Patience, then climb on over the rough rocks of Experience. In one you are weary and tried; in the other there are wounds and bruises; but keep to the path, there is Hope at the end. What matters it which way we take so we reach the hills of Hope? How often may we sing, with the change of a word, the old Scotch song:

"O, ye'll take the high road and I'll take the low road,
And I'll be in (Scotland) Hope-land a fore ye."

—Alexander Blackburn.

—Bro. Jones, of Chestnut Ridge. passed through today, returning from his wedding tour, which occupied about six weeks. He spent much of the time in Tennessee, and speaks highly of the productiveness of the farm lands he saw there, but also mentions the excessive adhesiveness of the mud found there.

—Bro. E. S. Wills left home Friday night to spend a few days in Baltimore.

—Bro. E. F. Caudle, of Randleman, is traveling and selling cash registers.

—Mrs. J. H. Stowe has been confined to her room since Dec. 24. We are glad to know that she is now better and hopes soon to be able to go about.

—Bro. S. E. Leonard is now in Elizabeth City, where we believe he is a teacher in the public schools.

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Littleton Ct., Feb. 25-27.
Halifax Ct., Feb. 29 to Mar. 3.
Roanoke Ct., Mar. 5-7.
Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Jan. 28 was spent in High Point. Sunday morning at 11 I met a good sized congregation at Welch Memorial church in South High Point. Bro. D. R. Williams, the pastor, is rapidly getting hold of the work there and is planning for aggressive work There were one hundred and four in Sunday school. This is an improvement and it is believed that the outlook is bright for many more to be brought in. The people are pleased with the pastor and speak in complimentary terms of his sermons and work.

Sunday night I was with Brother Dixon and his people at North Main, High Point. Here another attentive congregation was present. The rough weather has somewhat interfered with the Sunday school attendance, but the number present Sunday was encouraging. Monday morning it was my privilege to go out to see the Lebanon Methodist Protestant Church in North High Point. I am sure that if the people throughout the district knew just what a splendid church these people are building there would be general rejoicing. I do not want to anticipate what may be in the mind of some of them to say as to its size, material of which it is built, finish, and the like, hence I decline to say more. It is indeed an honor to those who are making it possible and a credit to that part of the town. Bro. Moton, the pastor, was not well, but his enthusiasm was not enfeebled by that. You will hear from them later.

W. E. Swain.

Rockingham.

We arrived at Rockingham on the 22nd of December, 1911, after a trip of 270 miles from Creswell, N. C., occupying 24 hours. Bro. W. T. Collins met us at the depot and carried us to his home, giving us entertainment for 11 days, until our household goods arrived and we could move into our own "hired house." We are also indebted to him for procuring wagons and teams to move our goods from the depot, and to Brother John Lassiter and two other brethren whose names we cannot recall, for help in moving.

Night of the 20th of January, while we were at another point, quite a number of the brethren and sisters visited the pastor's house, bringing quite a number of things in the way of flour, meat, sugar, canned goods, and other things, all of which we fully appreciate. They said that it was not generally known that the "pounding" was to take place, and that the thing is to be repeated—done over. We are also indebted to Brother W. T. Collins and wife for milk since we have been here and also some gifts in the way of vegetables and butter. These things we also appreciate. We also are indebted to Mr. Whitley for meal, from his mill. Also to Bro. Collins for a load of light-wood ("ligtard").

The people have been kind and appreciative, so far as we have seen. Quite a number seem to be much interested in the church, showing a devotion not often seen.

The extreme weather has hindered in the work. We have been to each point. Had two services at McFarlan, in Anson Co., 33 miles away, 14 miles South of Wadesboro, in sight of S. C. Two services at Pee Dee, and yesterday, at St. Johns, with a good congregation.

J. F. Dosier.

Denton Mission.

Dear Brother McCulloch:—We held our first quarterly conference at Denton on Saturday evening before the third Sunday in January. The attendance was small, but the interest seemed to be very good. Denton and Pleasant Grove were represented. Southmont was not represented. They were kept back by the cold weather and bad roads. The usual business was transacted in a spirit of love and interest. Our Christmas treat for the Sunday school children was very good, and every body present seemed to enjoy the service very much. Our services since Conference have been good and well attended considering the cold weather and bad roads. The pastor has had a long attack of cold and neuralgia which was brought on by being out in the snow and sleet canvassing for the Denton church. He has not had much rest night or day for about three weeks. Will not all who read this that have the means send us a donation at once to help us pay off the debt on the Denton church which is over twelve hundred dollars. We have other things that we want to do as soon as we get this debt paid off. My dear brethren and sisters, if you could hear the children at the Orphans' Home saying, Bro. Braswell, when will we get into our new church? I feel sure that you all would want to help finish the church at once and see those dear little ones happy in our new church. Oh, just think of those dear little children saying, "Our new church." Dear Brothers and sisters, please help us what you can, and God will pay you all back some time in some way. We thank all that have contributed any amount in the past. We are sending a list of the names and amounts of those that have given and subscribed in the past. The total for the Denton Mission is not $2,577.39 as is shown in the Conference Minutes. The total paid by the Denton Mission is $4,110.38, not including a number of things that might go into the report.

God bless the entire Conference. Brethren and sisters, pray for us.

Fraternally, D. A. Braswell.

The following is a list of the names and amounts paid and subscribed to buy a lot and build a Methodist Protestant church at Denton, N. C.:

Paid.

J. M. Danieles	$100.00
A. G. Morris	110.00
W. E. Hill	50.00
J. T. Sexton	60.00
J. C. Morris	50.00
C. W. Morris	8.00
A. A. Hill	75.00
Daniel Surratt, Jr.	15.00
M. K. Surratt	12.00
J. Workman	10.00
W. J. Frank	20.00
Savanah Sexton	67.00
P. M. Parks	10.00
Sarah A. Morris	5.00
C. A. Hoover	15.00
C. C. Chandler	20.00
C. H. Surratt	50.00
W. F. Wells	50.00
N. M. Jones	5.00
J. R. Peace	75.00
L. T. Ross	5.00
Mrs. W. C. Hammer	10.00
J. B. Jones	5.00
C. C. Shaw	5.00
R. E. Peace	2.50
P. O. Shaw	5.00
H. P. Sexton	5.00
L. E. Workman	5.00
J. C. Lanier	1.00
Sank Walls	10.00
J. F. Cameron	10.00
B. I. Harrison	5.00

Fosco Walls	5.00
Chapel Hill Church	18.00
Mt. Ebal Church	1.00
Piney Grove Church	2.51
B. Peacock	5.00
J. J. Welch	5.00
T. T. Hicks	3.00
A. R. Hill	1.00
Rev. John Hulin	15.00
C. A. Mogehee	1.00
Rev. L. H. Hatley	5.00
Rev. W. E. Swain	3.00
T. A. Hunter	5.00
J. B. Ogburn	5.00
Rev. A. L. Hunter	1.00
Mr. Powell	1.00
Rev. N. G. Bethea	1.00
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk	1.00
A. J. Harris	10.00
Rev. T. M. Johnson	1.00
A. M. Rankin	5.00
W. P. Pickett	5.00
L. Thompson	5.00
Q. E. Bundy	1.00
Edgar Goodman	1.00
C. T. Allred	.50
D. L. Parker	1.00
Dr. Anderson	75.00
Mr. Fagett	10.00
..Total paid	$1,069.00

Subscribed.

J. T. Sexton	40.00
C. W. Morris	17.00
A. G. Surratt	50.00
Coy Surratt	25.00
J. E. Varner	5.00
A. M. Hamilton	5.00
W. L. G. Bingham	15.00
W. B. Thompson	2.00
Hayden Sexton	1.00
M. G. Frank	1.00
G. W. Lainer	1.00
W. A. Davis	1.00
W. M. Lefler	2.50
W. T. Dennis	5.00
Piney Grove Church	1.25
R. L. Wellon	1.00
J. F. Miller	1.00
J. W. Lassiter	1.00
J. E. Floyd	1.00
W. O. Westmoreland	1.00
T. W. Harris	.50
J. R. Lainer	.50
Wilson Williams	1.00
W. C. Fine	1.00
T. A. Calemore	.25
C. A. Cook	.25
Pearl Elliott	.50
D. B. F. Snider	1.00
Rev. J. R. Hutton	5.00
Rev. Edward Suits	1.00
Rev. R. C. Stubbins	1.50
R. C. Rigan	1.00
H. A. Finch	1.00
John Surratt	25.00
Total subscribed	$216.25

Some names and amounts may have been overlooked, if so, please notify me.

D. A. Braswell.

Siler City Circuit.

The month of January has been unusually rough weather that has greatly hindered church work. Yet we have held several interesting services. Several things seem to be developing that are indeed very encouraging. We will not speak further of these things now, but hope to soon see the result and then we can speak again.

As far as we are able to judge, each church seems to be hopeful of doing greater things. The Circuit has been exceedingly kind to the pastor. May this encourage him to do greater things and by the combined efforts of pastor and people may great things be accomplished this year.

I had the privilege of spending last Sunday night with old Brother Page near Springfield church. Bro. Page is in his 86th year and perhaps the oldest member on Siler City circuit. He delights to talk about the old preachers that have long passed over the river. Brother Page used to travel considerably and talks of many cities he used to visit, and though very pert for his age, he says there is only one city that he ever expects to see, the heavenly.

J. H. Bowman.

Concord.

Hands are at work extending the street car line. It will pass in a few yards of our church; and the cars will soon be running past us.

We held our first quarterly conference on last Saturday night. Business was transacted in harmony. Bro. Samuel Nash was elected secretary of the conference.

The next conference will be held at Fair View.

Our congregation on Sunday morning was encouraging. At night, because of unfavorable weather the congregation was not quite as large as usual. I trust that when the winter's storms are past, we shall be found at the post of duty making good progress on our way.

A Oscar Lindley.

Guilford Ct.

Dear Brother Swain:

The first quarterly conference was held at Mt. Pleasant church on Saturday Jan. 27, 1912. Owing to the bad weather and lack of interest in church work and also sickness, the attendance was rather small. The business was transacted in the spirit of harmony; the reports were very good, but not what they should have been. Our faithful secretary, Bro. J. A. Gray, could not be with us on account of sickness. We are hoping and praying that he may be restored to health again. Brother Gray was elected secretary again and Bro. J. M. Davis, assistant. The financial report was very good. When will the time come when all of our churches will pay the interests quarterly. Some of our Sunday schools have gone into winter quarters which ought not to be so.

On January 17, 1912, at the home of the writer, Mr. Fred Green and Miss Lou Payne were united in marriage. These are among our best young people of Mt. Pleasant church and we wish for them a happy life. Bro. J. R. Stone was re-elected reporter of Mt. Pleasant. Bro. Motsinger of Canaan. Bro. J. M. Davis was re-elected circuit steward to visit all the churches on the work and stir the people up on finance which is badly needed. Bro. G. A. Berrier was elected circuit Sunday school superintendent to visit all the churches and talk Sunday school. We are praying that this may be the best year of our lives. Of course Mrs. Plyler's condition is still very serious, and our chances are poor for attending to the work as we would like, but we are praying that she may be soon restored. Pray for us. Success to all,

T. A. Plyler.

Dear Brother Swain and Herald readers:

As I have not seen anything from Guilford Circuit this year, I will try and write a few lines. Since Conference I have been trying to fill all my appointments although the weather has been very bad and the congregations have been rather small. Most all of the churches had Christmas trees and treats for the children. Hickory Grove had a nice tree and splendid exercise by the children. Red Hill and Shady Grove had nice treats for the Sunday schools.

Fairfield had a nice tree. The children, under the training of Miss Ida Davis did splendidly. Mrs. Pearl Marsh had charge of the music, which was fine. It was our pleasure to be with the people at Canaan and Mt. Pleasant. The trees were very beautiful and costly. The exercises were fine, the music was inspiring. We want to thank the people for the presents to pastor and family, also the ladies for a nice cake. At Mt. Pleasant, while the exercises were going on old Santa was busy outside the church loading the preacher's buggy and when the service was over we went out and could scarcely find any place to ride. We found sugar, coffee, butter, fruit, sausage, flour, etc. Among the names on the various packages we found Mr. and Mrs. Frank Green, Mr. and Mrs. G. W.

Hayworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Green, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Murphy, Mrs. Osborn, Miss Amy Osborn, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Green, Mr. and Mrs. Shoaf, P. L. Ledford, and others too numerous to mention. May God bless these good people in their gifts to us and may God help us to be a blessing to them.

Mrs. Plyler, myself, and little May, spent Xmas week in the homes of Bro. W. W. Tise, D. E. Hilton, and G. W. Hayworth, which was a great pleasure indeed. May the Lord bless them for their kindness to us while in their pleasant homes.

On New Year's day Bro. Hayworth, Bro. Gambol, Bro. Tise, Bro. Craven, and Bro. Green sent their teams down near Fairfield and moved us up near Spring Hill Church. Since we have been up here many of these good people have been in our home. Thanks to Bro. Tise and Hayworth and Boggs for several loads of wood, also Mrs. Tise for birds, fresh meat and sausage; Mrs. Hayworth, for milk, butter, potatoes, etc.; Brother D. E. Hilton, for eggs, etc.; the many good ladies for many good things for Mrs. Plyler. I cannot name them all, but the Lord knows who they are and He will bless them every one.

We are hoping and praying that this may be the best year of our lives.

Mrs. Plyler's condition is unchanged. Pray for us that God may restore her to health again.

Yours in His name, T. A. Plyler.

Stanley.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Love's Grove on Saturday before second Sunday in February. Preaching at 11 a. m., and the business of the conference afterwards. G. L. Reynolds, Pastor.

Friendship, Yadkin College Ct.

As I have been re-elected reporter to the Herald. I will make a short report. We are very much pleased to have our former pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, with us another year. He filled his regular appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock; his subject, The Christian Path. It is needless to say it was good, as all of his sermons are good. The election of the officers of the church was also held; the old board was re-elected. We are sorry so few were out at church, but the day was very cold and cloudy. We have not had any preaching since conference, as the weather has been so bad. May we all work with our pastor and each other and so make this the best year of all, 1912. Success to the Herald and its readers. Reporter.

Monroe Circuit.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Rose Hill on Saturday before the third Sunday in February at 11 a. m. All officials are asked to be present.

J. W. Self, Pastor.

Lincolton.

We had present in our Sunday school today, 40, notwithstanding the weather was unfavorable. Our collection was $3.42. Our new and beautiful church seems to be on the upward go just now. We have just planted some shade trees which will add much to the church property's appearance when they grow larger.

Jan. 28. X.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Ct.

Dear Herald:

We have many things to encourage us in the beginning of the new year. Are glad to have our former pastor back with us for another year and glad to see him putting forth new energy to build up the circuit, setting new plans to raise the general interest and to build a parsonage. I think if we as a church will do our part there will be much good done on this work.

Brother Plyler has filled all the appointments at this place; his sermon Sunday was grand.

We are sorry to know that Sister Plyler is not so well; hope for her recovery soon.

Our Sunday school is taking on new life. The following officers were elected for the year: J. F. Hassell, Supt.; Nora Jones, Sec., E. S. Jones, Teacher for the Bible class, A. L. Jones, for the second Class; Mrs. Emma Borum, for the third; J. O. Leonard, for the fourth; J. B. Hassell, the fifth. We have on roll sixty; average attendance, forty-three.

May the good Lord bless our Sunday school and help us to do a good year's work this year, and may the harvest be great. I am, yours for Christ.

E. S. Jones.

Thomasville Station.

Dear Herald Readers:

There was a very nice congregation at church last Sunday night. Bro. Suits preached two excellent sermons. Sunday morning he preached on the "Ministry of Music;" Sunday night he took for his text from I Chronicles 11:22: "Benaiah, the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts; he slew two lion-like men of Moab; also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day."

The Sunday school elected Mr. Gilbert Miller as Secretary and Treasurer.

The Teacher's Training Class which was organized the third Sunday in January will meet next Sunday. Rev. Edward Suits is the teacher.

The Ladies' Aid Society met last Thursday, had a nice time.

We are sorry that Bro. Henry Dickens, who is sick, does not seem to be improving very fast.

Wishing success to the Herald and its readers. (Mrs.) Laura Dickens.

East Winston Church.

Dear Editor:

The exceedingly rough weather of this winter has interrupted, quite a good deal, with attendance at our S. S. and we have been unable to have any preaching until last Sunday evening the pastor, Rev. S. M. Needham, preached his first sermon at our church. He had a very good congregation considering the rough weather, and the people were pleased with his preaching.

Last Thursday evening, Miss Annie Forrest, a return missionary from Japan, gave a lecture in our church. She told many very interesting things about Japan. Pledges were made for $25.00 for Miss Forrest's work in Japan.

The Sunday school would like to enter the contest for the banner offered by Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, of High Point. The attendance at Sunday school for three Sundays in January has been, 56, 55, 64, and one Sunday it was so cold we could not have any Sunday school on account of heaters.

Next Thursday evening pictures will be shown by W. A. Speer illustrating "Ten Nights in a Bar Room."

Mr. J. F. Snyder, assistant superintendent, has been very successful in carrying the Sunday school work on since the superintendent, W. A. Speer, has been confined with another spell of heart trouble for the past three weeks. Mr. Speer is able to sit up and expects to be out by Thursday evening. Reporter.

Bethel, Randolph Circuit.

The first quarterly conference was held at this place Saturday, Jan. 20, at which all the churches were represented and the usual business transacted. Probably the most noted move of the conference was that of re-establishing class meeting with Joe Fields and A. O. Adams leaders. Our first class meeting will be at our next regular appointment—third Sunday at eleven—with our pastor, Rev. W. C. Lassiter, as leader. We trust this will be a source of much strength to the church and enable us to go forward in greater usefulness for our Master.

The church has authorized the pastor to buy a new pulpit Bible.

Several of our people have suffered from accidents on the ice. All are recovering now, we are glad to note.

M. K. Swaim and Roe Garner are on the sick list.

The Bethel people sent our pastor some "eatables" Saturday.

Wishing for the Herald its best year yet. Mrs. A. O. Adams, Reporter.

Jan. 29, 1912.

Asheville.

Dear Editor:

The old year with the Christmas holidays has passed away, and we have entered into the new year. We believe the future has great thing in store for us, if we will accept them.

Our prayer is that this will be a most successful year, and many souls be brough. to Christ.

Our Sunday school is still living, our average attendance being seventy-five. Our entertainment Christmas was a success.

The Junior Christian Endeavor is doing splendid work, their attendance being twelve. Also the Ladies' Aid Society is doing fine work, their attendance is fifteen.

Our new pastor, Rev. W. D. Fogleman, gives us some most inspiring sermons. We feel sure that Bro. Fogleman is the right man in the right place.

We also pray that our former pastor, Rev. J. S. Williams, will succeed in his noble mission in visiting the sick people of Asheville. And there is always a welcome for him in our services.

Our prayer meetings are being held in different homes. Effie Barrett,
Reporter.

Caroleen Circuit.

We are getting on fine with our work considering the bad weather. We have three as live Sunday schools as can be found anywhere. We have our school right on through the bad weather, and we hope when the good weather comes to increase our attendance. The Church work is in fine shape. We have had preaching service right on in worst of the weather. I want to say that we have two town churches that have no equal in Conference so far. They have been started and run so far without any help from any board. All the town churches I have known anything about have had help to start from the Board of Church Extension or from the board of Home Missions, and in several cases, both, and there is not one of them that has a record that is as favorable as either of these churches for the time they have been opened. Our aim is to try to pay for these churches this year or get it so that there will be no trouble with what remains. We have one of them in B. L. for $400.00 and they are carrying that all right. Now if there is any one that wants to help on either of these churches, we will thank them for it. We want to thank Bro. Geo. B. Harris for $5.00 on the Shelby church, and Bro. Cutchin for $1.00. Is there anyone else that wants to help us? If so, you can send it to me at Shelby and we will report it through the Herald. Dr. G. E. Matthews also gave $3.00 on the Shelby church. Yours fraternally,
H. W. Braswell.

Spring Church.

I am surely glad that the Conference sent us our same pastor, Bro. W. F. Ashburn, as it seems to me the longer he stays the better we like him. Brother Ashburn was with us last Sunday and preached for the first time this year, using as a text Psalms 19:12-13. There was a very small congregation present, owing to a cold, disagreeable day.

He will preach for us twice a month this year. Second Sunday at 3 o'clock, P. M., and fourth Sunday at 11 A. M.

The quarterly conference was held here last Saturday. Business was all transacted. The unfavorable weather has decreased our Sunday school attendance very much. In fact it has been frozen for about a month. But we hope as soon as the bright spring days arrive, it will spring up and be as live as ever. Our school has been re-organized for this year with Brother E. C. Dimick Supt.: R. M Robinson, assistant; Miss Nannie Massey, Secretary and Treasurer; Mr. G. F. Robinson teacher for class No. 1; Mrs. C. A. Floyd, for class No. 2; and Mrs. H. E. Vassar for class No. 3. Mrs. C. E. Dimick, organist. We hope our Sunday-school will continue to grow under our new superintendent's leadership.

Yours for Christ, Nannie Massey,
Reporter.

January 30th, 1912.

Randolph Circuit.

Dear Herald:

Last Saturday, January 27, Messrs. W. A. Kanoy and J. L. Pugh unloaded at the parsonage a genuine pounding from the brethren and sisters of Bethel. These tokens of kindness consisted of pickels, beans, canned fruit, preserves, butter, sugar, coffee, molasses, apples, corn, wheat, flour, and a fine ham of meat. This pounding would amount in cash to several dollars. Dear brethren and sisters, we appreciate these things very much, but still higher do we value the good will and sweet assurance of co-operation in the Master's cause around Bethel. May the Lord bless you all spiritually, temporally, and so direct the humble writer that he may be also a blessing in proclaiming the word of Life and Truth.

W. C. L.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 185 in Sunday-school and the offering was $3.96. This was a good increase over the previous Sunday and we believe we are going to increase very, very much more as the weather improves. There were several more present at the opening of the school than on the Sunday before.

The teachers are now meeting for the study of the lessons every Thursday evening at the home of Brother Andrews, and we are sure they and the school will be much benefitted by the study of the lessons in this way.

Mrs. T. E. Davis has been elected teacher of the Philatheas, and Bro. J. G. Rogers, assistant. We do not know the other officers, as the girls have stopped telling the Baracas anything about their class work.

At the morning preaching service last Sunday we had the largest congregation we have had in a good while. Mrs. J. B. Cheek was received into the church by letter from Saxapahaw Circuit. After the service, the committee appointed by the official board of the church to look into the matter of Sunday school rooms presented some plans for the building, which were approved by the church and the pastor was authorized to call a meeting of the church four weeks from next Sunday at which time a vote will be taken as required by the church law. The pastor was also authorized to appoint a committee to solicit funds with which to do the work. If the motion passes by a two-thirds vote, four weeks from next Sunday, we hope to be able to begin work at once. We feel that this is a great step forward for our church, and we are longing for these rooms with which we believe we can do so much more good.

On last Wednesday evening we had about twenty-five at the prayer-meeting service. The pastor had previously requested all to memorize and repeat some verse on the Love of God at this meeting, and several did so. For tonight we are to study the Promises of God. The prayer meetings are always so helpful we fail to see why more of our people do not attend. Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Jan. 23rd, 1912.

Burlington Baraca Report.

Present last Sunday, 32; offering, $1.70.

Present during January, 121; offering for January, $6.50 Secretary,

THE GROWTH OF A HOME.

At this season comes the acute epidemic of the bargain sale—on the whole a pleasurable disease, and regrettable only because if you are a victim you inevitably accumulate a mass of needless purchases. The smaller things that you buy do not matter so much; you can hoard them, give them away, save them for future exigencies of present-making; but the big things that you buy—the rugs and the furniture, the objects that go to make up a part of your daily background—are likely to be fatal mistakes. You should choose your furnishings with the care with which you choose your friends; both should wear well, and neither should be undesirable or disturbing. Bargain heat is not a safe temperature at which to select friends or furniture.

The day of the woman with the moderate income has arrived. Any one who commands a fortune can summon a decorator and create, not a home, but a house full of the ample magnificence of a first-class hotel. That, however, is not decoration at its best; it is decoration at its easiest. The woman of moderate means should make the harmony of a room her end, choose patiently, and never buy, merely because it is a bargain, a chair, a table or a rug that she will later long to throw away. She should make haste slowly, and to that end should buy those things only that long consideration has taught her are necessary and beautiful. One of the compensations for her narrow means is that she must think twice, and so has the better chance of thinking wisely.

She should remember that to watch a home grow in beauty is hardly less enjoyable than to see children grow in perfection. Why hurry either the home or the children? The growth of each is a slow process, but in both cases the resuult, if successful, is to soften the deeper satisfactions of the heart.—Youth's Companion.

A GOD OF WRATH.

In these days of religious mildness and sentimental sweetness, the majority of people will not consent to hearing anything about the wrath of God. Such a thing is very unpleasant to them. They want to have it appear that God is never really angry with anybody. It may be that they are willing that God should hate the devil, for that would not affect themselves. Such ones have a very different opinion of God from that which is presented in the Bible. They will admit that the Bible speaks of the wrath of God, but they say that though He may have been wrathful in very ancient times. he is not so in these days, for He is now a God of love. But was He ever a different being from what He is now? Was He not always a God of love? He certainly was, for he is an unchangeable God. He himself says that He never changes. And because He is absolutely changeless, and also absolutely perfect in love, he must hate that which is evil, and that which attacks and injures love. He so loves the truth that He is angry with those who would destroy the truth. The Bible says that God hates iniquity. It says that He hates unrighteousness. It speaks repeatedly of the wrath of God. Very strong language is used to give the Bible readers some idea of the greatness of that wrath, and of its consequences. It is certain that God manifested great wrath toward the rebellions and profane Israelites. It was a fierce wrath. These words of love availed nothing with them. God lovingly entreated them to cease their wickedness. He graciously implored them to comply with his laws and commands, but there were times when they utterly refused to do so. Was God so loving and merciful that He would allow them to continually defy His authority and revel in their willfulness? Surely not. He would not be ruled by them. He would never submit to their own terms. When mild measures failed to keep them in subjection to His authority, then God used the severest of means to bring them to His terms of righteousness. In the days of Ezekiel, the people were in a very rebellious and haughty state, and God's wrath displayed itself. Here is a sentence: "Their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord." Here is another sentence: "I will send mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy ways." Not only in the Old Testament is God's wrath spoken of, but also in the New, as follows: "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness." Make your peace with such a God. Take no risks on the future.

C. H. Wetherbe.

FIRST INTERNATIONAL MISSION STUDY COUNCIL.

For some years the officers of the Missionary Education Movement and leading religious workers in other countries have been active in trying to promote plans looking to the increase of missionary education in the Church. During the Edinburgh Conference last June, Mr. H. W. Hicks, General Secretary of the Missionary Education Movement, called a meeting of twenty mission study leaders from different countries. The outcome of this meeting was a call for an international mission study council to be held in Lunteren, Holland. The time set for the gathering was Sept. 5-11. Thirteen countries were represented by delegates, as follows: The Netherlands, 14; Germany, 9; England, 9; Denmark, 5; Sweden, 5; the United States, 4; Switzerland, 4; France, 3; Norway, 3; Scotland, 2; Ireland, 1; India, 1; Australia, 1 Total, 61. The conference resulted in the organization of the International Mission Study Council composed of eleven representatives from the countries having organized Mission Study Movements. The program, principles, and purpose of the Council are given in a bulletin sent out by the Missionary Education Movement as follows:

Program.

The program covered the following subjects: The general objectives of missionary education; the history and problems of national mission study movements; the direct aims of mission study; the pedagogical conditions of mission study among adults and children; the preparation of text-books; the preparation of helps to leaders; the training of leaders; the opportunity of childhood; the principles and methods of graded missionary instruction; the purpose, organization and programs of summer schools; a diagnosis of missionary indifference; international relations; the spiritual side of mission study, and Missionary Education and the prayer life. In several periods devoted to sectional meetings, the leading printed papers which were discussed in general conference, were further considered in closer detail for purposes of adaptation.

Principles.

The principles in use recognize primarily that missionary education is essential to religious education, that all ages and grades require continuous instruction, that methods and literature must be adapted according to scientific principles of general education to each age, ency. That the established denominational missionary societies are primarily responsible for the education of the Christians of their respective denominations, that federation of societies and denominations in common missionary educational endeavor is essential for economy, efficiency and the unity of the Church, and that all missionary effort, whether to secure funds or enlist missionaries, must be characterized by a deep spiritual purpose in order to come to full fruition.

Purpose.

The purpose of the International Council is to foster the interchange between the nations of literature, methods, experience and visits of leaders in the work of missionary education, and to exalt and promote mission study through the established denominational agencies, assisted by the various National Mission Study Councils. A bulletin containing news will be published twice annually. A report of the Lunteren Conference will be published in book form, which can be secured in the United States and Canada, by writing to the Missionary Education Movement.

SACRIFICE IN MISSIONS.

I believe there is need to-day to re-emphasize this principle of sacrifice in missions as one that is fundamental, essential, vital.

We live in an age in which self-sacrifice is by no means popular. The aim and effort are to eliminate sacrifice and to indulge ease and selfish comfort. This same tendancy is creeping into Christian churches and homes, and producing a spirit of complacency instead of concern with regard to missions. I suppose there is hardly a church or a Christian anywhere that is not perfectly agreeable to voting the heathen evangelized if a mere resolution will suffice. If individuals are not seriously disturbed or inconvenienced, can wear as good clothes, live in as comfortable homes and spend as much for pleasure or the whims of fashion; if home churches can still be as imposing and as luxuriously furnished, and as well equipped with musical talent; and if denominationalism can still be everywhere maintained, and every small town and many a mere village can have its three or four churches, albeit each with only a handful of worshippers and dependent still upon the general funds of its denomination;—I say if all these interests can be assured and the pittance that is over, both of men and of money will suffice to break the Bread of Life to a thousand millions for whom nothing is prepared, then the missionary project will receive a unanimous vote of approval. In a word, if we could save the heathen without any appreciable sacrifice, without its seriously costing us, we would. But the hard fact which we have to face is that we can't. Not merely is this clearly demonstrated by the actual facts of the missionary enterprise today—its insufficient forces, its embarrassed treasuries, its inability to overtake the needs and opportunities abroad—but it is equally plain for the reason that the conditions which we have just presumed are contrary to the very law, the Divine law, of missions—the law of sacrifice. "He saved others, Himself He cannot save." No more can we. God never intended we should. It would be to leave out of the missionary enterprise that which is its very essence and glory. God laid the foundation of this work of world redemption in sacrifice when it cost Him His only begotten Son, and He will finish it in no less worthy a spirit or costly a means.—Extract from an address by Dr. Robert H. Glover, Alliance Weekly.

WOMEN PEARL-DIVERS.

The pearl-divers of Japan are all—or nearly all—women. Along the shores of the Bay of Ago and the Bay of Kokasho, says the Oriental Review, the thirteen and fourteen-year-old girls, after they have finished their primary school work, go to sea and learn to dive.

They are in the water and learn to swim almost from babyhood, and spend most of their time in the water, except in the coldest season, from the end of December to the beginning of February. Even during the most inclement of seasons they sometimes dive for pearls. They wear a special dress, white underwear, and the hair twisted up into a hard knot. The eyes are protected by glasses to prevent the entrance of water. Tubs are suspended from the waist.

A boat in command of a man is assigned to every five or ten women divers to carry them to and from the fishing-grounds. When the divers arrive on the grounds they leap into the water at once, and begin to gather oysters at the bottom. The oysters are dropped into the tubs hung from their waists.

When these vessels are filled, the divers are raised to the surface and jump into the boats. They dive to a depth of from five to thirty fathoms without any special apparatus, and retain their breath from one to three minutes. Their ages vary from thirteen to forty years, and between twenty-five and thirty-five they are in their prime.—Youth's Companion.

REAL POSSESSIONS NOT MATERIAL

"After all, our real possessions are not material things, but the immaterial. The things usually called possessions belong to God, and some day will be passed on to others. We cannot take any material thing with us out of this life. Our real possessions are such immaterial things as love, goodness, meekness, virtue, godliness, self-control, or hate, meanness, avarice, etc., all qualities that go to make up our character. Material things must all be left behind, unless we send them ahead by giving them back to the Lord, thus making them secure to us in the life to come. 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth,—but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.' 'What I gave, I have; What I kept, I lost.' "—Sel.

OBSERVATIONS.

1—God needs men to propagate his Kingdom. He has saved them for this purpose.

2—This is an age of wonderful material development, prosperity and increase in wealth. Most of this wealth is in the possession of God's people.

3—God needs money to finance the Kingdom. He has put it in the hands of his people for this purpose.

4—There was never so much money in the world. There was never such pressing need for money. It is no accident that the two are co-existent.

—There never were so many or so great and wonderful opportunities for the investment of money, time, influence and life as now.

Oh, that the eyes of the men of God might be opened to see these opportunities, and their ears opened to hear the call of his Providence!"—Sel.

STEWARDSHIP.

"Stewardship not only embraces money, but time, talents, influence and life. Money is the easiest thing to give. The question about money is not how much of my money shall I give to the Lord, but how much of the Lord's money temporarily in my possession should I keep for myself? I am the custodian, not the owner. Likewise as a steward of time or talents or life, how much should I use in pleasure or recreation, or business or self-seeking? It is all his. How shall it be employed or divided, and where? Certainly not as I may prefer, but as he shall indicate. The capability and wisdom and skill of the steward is shown in settlement of these questions, and determines the reward."—Sel.

—We wonder if the conditions found to be true of this New Englad town are not spreading to other sections of our country? The account is from The Biblical Recorder:

"Some one finds that of 129 men in a typical New England village, only seventeen go to church regularly, thirteen go occasionally, and over ninety never go at all. A generation or so ago no New England gentleman would think of staying away from church. This change has been accounted for by the lack of parental authority requiring church attendance when these men were young; by the Sunday newspapers which have been called "the non-church-goers' Gospel;" by the automobile rage which on the day of rest sends thousands whizzing to the country; and by Sunday visiting which keeps both guests and hosts away from the sanctuary."

FATHER'S PITY.

As the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. Ps. ciii. 11-13.

Of all things far, I love the best
The distance from the east to west;
For by that space, and all within,
God's mercy parts me from my sin.

And best I love, of all things high,
The space between the earth and sky;
For by that height beyond all ken
God's love exceeds the love of men.

I love, of deep things undefiled,
A father's pity for his child:
For by that depth so far, so clear,
God pities all that faint and fear.

—Amos R. Wells.

WHOM SATAN HATES MOST.

Satan hates most those in whom Christ wins oftenest. That is part of the penalty we gladly pay for real oneness with Christ. Every time we let Jesus win an overwhelming victory in our life, or, better even than victory, every time he liberates us gloriously from even the appeal of a temptation, Satan, routed and discomfited, marks us for an attack the like of which he never would have honored us with but for this closer union with Christ. As Christ's victories multiply, Satan's subtleties grow more refined and hateful. And with every fresh gain that Christ makes in the occupancy of our life, the disaster of any failure in conscious sin grows the greater, and Satan's determination that we shall sin grows the more relentless. What an awful, yet joyous conflict it is! How must we watch and pray! Yet Christ's word is pledged to us in his blood that against the supremest onslaughts of hell we shall be more than conquerors.—S. S. Times.

GOD'S UNASKED GIFTS.

God's best gifts come to us unsought. That is because God knows how to lavish his love upon us better than we know how to ask for it. What man could have thought of, or would have dared to ask for, the Gift of God's only Son, Jesus Christ? Nothing but God's unthinkable love, which passeth knowledge, could conceive and bestow this unspeakable Gift. And so of all the other lesser but infinitely rich things that he "also with him freely" gives us. We ask for much, and we receive much; but how often do we receive that for which we not only never thought to ask, but could not possibly have thought to ask! God does not leave us to our own little prayers and petitions, great and daring though they may be. He first loved us. He plans for us and achieves for us incessantly. How we should rejoice when he withholds what we ask, knowing as we do that this is only that he may give us better than we ask.—S. S. Times.

APPEAL TO THE CHRISTIAN MEN OF NORTH AMERICA BY THE GENERAL COMMITTEE OF THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

After five years of experimental work and constructive work among the Protestant churches of the United States and Canada, during which it has had the co-operation of the leaders of all those churches, the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, assembled in annual session, sends out this appeal to the Christian men of North America:

About two out of three people in the United States and Canada are outside the membership of all Christian churches. Two out of three people in the world live in non-Christian nations. Two out of three people in these non-Christian nations are beyond the reach of the present combined missionary agencies of Christendom. And, in spite of these appalling needs, about two out of three of the church members of North America are contributing nothing toward the aggressive missionary work of the Church at home and abroad.

Manifestly our first business is the enlistment of the other two-thirds of the members of the Church as intelligent, systematic missionary supporters and workers. And this can be done. Experience in all denominations, and in every section of the United States and Canada, makes us confident that in most cases thorough-going methods of missionary education and finance, backed by prayerful and persistent work, would result in a doubling of the number of systematic missionary supporters during the first year, and in the enlistment of practically the whole membership within a few years. These results have been so uniformly secured where methods have been used, that we believe the time has come to call upon the Christian men of North America to adopt and work these methods in all their churches. In briefest summary, the essential points are these:

1. A missionary committee in every church to work with the pastor in enlisting the entire church membership.

2. A period of intensive missionary information and education in each church once each year, continuing through at least two or three weeks, preparatory to an every-member canvass for missions. This should be in addition to general missionary education throughout the year.

3. The adoption of the weekly basis for missionary offerings,—instead of an annual, simple, effective collecting device such as the Duplex envelope.

4. An organization and complete personal canvass of every member of the church and congregation once each year by groups of two men each, after proper preparation for their work.

We appeal to Christian men everywhere to put these plans into operation in their own churches. Enlarged missionary interest and contributions will not decrease, but will materially increase the offerings to the support of the local church. This has been proved to the point of absolute demonstration. The surest and speediest way to solve any local financial problem of the Church is the generation of a healthy missionary spirit.

For the sake of co-operative action between the church of any city or county we recommend the appointment of a city or county committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, where such committees are not already in existence, to promote the adoption of these principles and methods among all the churches within their reach. The majority of the members of these committees should be laymen, but some of their members should be successful missionary pastors. The whole machinery of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, with twenty secretaries now giving their entire time to the work, is at the disposal of such committees in the prosecution of their efforffts. The full available resources of the various Mission Boards and other missionary agencies of the Church would also, without question, be at their command in carrying out the program. But the whole of the United States and Canada, with more than 200,000 Protestant churches can only be adequately reached by an army of volunteer workers. Detailed suggestions for city of county committees have been prepared, and are gladly furnished free to anyone desiring to share in the work.

To all these committees these two features of work are cordially commended:

1. The holding of an interdenominational meeting of men at stated times for a brief, strong, timely missionary address, followed by a period of intercession.

2. The holding of a large annual men's missionary supper, with one or two of the strongest missionary speakers obtainable, when reports of progress can be made and plans for the future work may be approved, and a committee appointed for the coming year.

This effort is for World-wide Missions. "The field is the world." The Laymen's Missionary Movement stands for an aggressive and confident Christianity that dares to undertake the program of Christ for meeting the spiritual needs of mankind. We also believe that the laymen of the churches, according to their ability and opportunity, are equally responsible with the ordained ministry, to pray and to plan, to work and to give, for the world-wide extension of the Kingdom of God.

The Church faces oportunity today, both at home and abroad, that should challenge the co-operation, devotion and sacrifice of its entire membership. Our watch-cry is, The whole Church enlisted in behalf of the whole world.

On behalf of the General Committee,
Samuel B. Capen, Ch'n,
Mornay Williams, V. Ch'n,
E. W. Halford, V. Ch'n,
Eben E. Olcott, Treas.,
J. Campbell White,
William B. Millar,
General Secretaries.

THE DEW DROPS.

(Among waste papers of N. Summerbell I find the following couplets, evidently written for his own recreation:)

A million dew-drop diamonds
Twinkled on the trees.
A million little maidens said
A jewel, if you please.

And while they reached their little hands
To catch the diamonds gay,
A million little sunbeams came
And stole them all away.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

No man can see his shadow when he faces the sun. —Today's.

Any fool can make trouble, but it takes a good quality of brains to straighten

ANOTHER PRIZE.

To the one under eighteen who makes and sends us the longest list of three-letter words each of which can be transposing into two other words, we will give a prize. Rat, tar, art is an example. The list should be mailed by Feb. 12th.

DID YOU READ IT?

Have you complied?

Did you read Mrs. W. C. Hammer's article, and that part of report of committee on ways and means relative to the Orphans' Home in last week's issue of the Methodist Protestant Herald? Mrs. Hammer is very anxious that the provisions of this report be complied with at our very earliest convenience. Espe- ions of this report be complied with at have not appointed this committee yet she is anxious that you do so right away cially provided for in section 3. If you ded for. Brethren, this is important for the success of this splendid undertaking that is already accomplishing great things and bids fair to do great things for our church, as well as that of taking care of the orphans. Let us give this matter our early attention.

J. H. Bowman, Chmn.,
Com. Ways & Means.

Mural, Tabernacle Ct.

Brother Cecil delivered to us another one of his good and practical sermons Sunday, after which we had the administration of the Lord's Supper. I am sure that every one went home with the determination of magnifying the Lord in the future. This was only the second time Bro. Cecil has preached to us as it was decided at quarterly conference each church on the circuit to have preaching once a month during winter months. But, oh, we get so hungry for spiritual food.

It was voted that we should pay the preacher and general interest quarterly and adopt the envelope system.

Miss Gertie Sharp was elected organist and Miss Herath Coe, assistant.

Although we have had snow, sleet and mud our Sunday school has been progressing nicely. Bro. Whitely is making us an excellent superintendent and meets us with a smile, after which come interesting words concerning our Saviour. We are glad so many of our students have received their silver pins. We hope they will be faithful, not only till they get the gold one, but that their lives will be stamped for the future. Our Orphanage collection last Sunday amounted to over five dollars. Our Sunday school has decided to enter the contest for the banner this year.

Mr. Robert Kirkman, who has been in school at Guilford, is at home recovering from a severe attack of measles. We are sorry to hear that he will not be able to return for a while on account of weak eyes. With much love to readers of the Herald. Reporter.

TO THE S. S. TEACHERS.

The Sunday school lesson for January 28 is The Presentation in the Temple, but they failed to print the 39th verse of the lesson, which says they returned from the Temple to their own city, Nazareth, in Galilee and the next time St. Luke writes about Jesus he is twelve years old, with doctors in the Temple; I don't think there is any account of His ever being taken back to Bethlehem. So is it not strange that the Sunday school lesson of February 4th says the wise men worshiped Him in Bethlehem, when He was in Nazareth. In the study of the Sunday school lessons last year about the return of the captive Jews to rebuild the temple and later to rebuild the walls. It took them about four months to go from Persia to Jerusalem, and as it is thought the wise men came from Persia, it must have taken them just as long, and Jesus only remained in Bethlehem forty days. I would be glad if some one would tell us when He was carried back there. If you can't do that, quit teaching that the wise men went there.

Yours for the truth, T. L. Whitaker.
Enfield, N. C., Jan. 27, 1911.

Garmon-Caskey.

In Concord, N. C., Jan. 13th, 1912, at seven o'clock P. M., Miss Bertha Caskey, of Mooresville, N. C., to Mr. C. F. Garmon, of Concord, N. C. The groom is a son of Brother M. C. Garmon of Mill Grove church, Stanley Ct.

We wish for them a long and peaceful journey on the pathway of life.

Carter-Blackwelder.

On Jan. 25, 1912, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Blackwelder, about four miles from Concord, there was a beautiful home wedding. The parlor was beautifully and tastily decorated. About forty of the friends of both bride and groom were present to hear Mr. Asa Carter and Miss Clara Blackwelder pronounced husband and wife.

The bride is our reporter from Fair View church. We trust she will still find time to write to the Herald; and that joy shall crown each passing day.

A Oscar Lindley.

—The papers far and near, in their news and editorial columns, are telling of the fine task accomplished, in raising so readily and quickly the special fund of $50,000 for Elon College. It was a vast undertaking, but was quickly and easily done, thanks to wisdom and good work of former President Moffitt and President Harper each of whom took the field and wrought nobly in the great and good task.

GENEROSITY VS. GIVING.

By Charles A. Hines.

Notes on the Christian Endeavor Topic for Feb. 11: "The Christian Virtues. ..11. Generosity," 2 Cor. 9:6-15.

Too often we measure the generosity of a man by the size of his gifts and the amount of publicity that is given them. It is not for us to say that the gifts of our latter day millionaires are not made out of the goodness of their hearts and minds; but this we do know, that they see that all possible notoriety is given to such acts of liberality upon their part. One cannot but wonder if after all it is not a matter of purchasing advertising for themselves.

The man who heads the list of subscriptions for a new church, college, Y. M. C. A. building, or other philanthropic or religious enterprise may after all be the smallest giver. The widow's contribution in the temple was meager indeed, but the Master declared that she had given more than all the others. Men who have served on finance committees and as treasurers of churches know that the backbone of the church's finances is not the spasmodic gifts of the men of most wealth but the regular, systematic giving of the poorer members. The writer knows men who give every year one-tenth of their income; they are poor, but they never rob the Lord, nor do they suffer for lack of life's needs.

A pastor of a Greensboro church told the writer a few days ago as he made a bank deposit it was the last of money received from sale of lands that he had bought on shares with the Lord. A few years ago he purchased a lot of land on a fine residence street in Greensboro; when he did so he decided to give one-half of the profit from the investment to the Lord. So-called business men told him it was a poor investment. In less than five years he sold the property at nearly three times its cost, and there was a profit, after interest and taxes were discounted, of more than $2500—one half of which went to the Master. The business man would have given $100 to the church and then would have done it in such a way that his name would have gone in the paper. Probably this minister's name will never be printed in connection with this story. I would gladly give it, but I feel that he would prefer that it not be done. May the illustration persuade others to become partners with God.

William Colgate is a millionaire. He is a member of the biggest soap manufacturing concern in the world. He has given hundreds of thousands of dollars to charity and the church, yet you have never seen his gifts in the newspaper headlines. He has given systematically and yet cheerfully. When a boy about to start out in the world, an old friend asked him if he could do anything well. He replied, "I can make good soap." The friend told him, "Then let me tell you how to succeed. Make good soap, sell full measure, and always give one-tenth of your income to the Lord." This injunction has been complied with, except that Mr. Colgate in a few years increased it to two-tenths and later to three tenths. That man will never decrease his gifts; it will always be more. And yet he has never sought publicity.

When we come to life's closing hours and we lay aside forever the working tools of life, we shall not be remembered by what the world has done for us, but by what we have done for the world. How true is the song, "Only remembered by what we have done." One may read the histories of the world and the men whose names are remembered and honored and cherished are those who have laid down their lives in the service of others. Such men had their faults but their great service gives them a place in the hearts of men in spite of these.

Illustrations.

1. The natives of some of the South Sea Islands are so generous that the missionaries do not dare to take up a collection oftener than once a year. Stingy Christians will want to go there.

2. The small boy got his hand into an expensive vase, and all the family tried in vain to extricate it. When they were on the point of breaking the vase the father made one more attempt. "Straighten out your fingers." "I can't, papa; if I did. I should drop my penny!"

3. "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth," unless it is for the purpose of stirring up the other right hands! My little girl debated long which penny to put into the collection-box. I noticed that at last the bright penny went, and her face was the brighter for the decision. Learn from nature, which pushes out the best fruit and flowers for all to take.—Amos R. Wells.

Electric Sparks.

The golden moments cannot be redeemed with gold.

One never climbs the mountain with his face to the valley.

Harmony is a good thing, provided it has the proper keynote.

Foolishness is not the lack of brains, but is the silly use of them.

The road by which one runs away from duty is an air-line to trouble.

A sacrifice that is still regretted has not yet found its way to the altar.

Losing the spirit of youth, and not the passing of the years, brings age.

Satan never cares how many resolutions you make to reform tomorrow.—C. H.

Daily Readings.

M. Generous gifts, Ex. 35:4, 5, 21-25.
T. Gifts that grow, Prov. 3: 9, 10.
W. Generous service, 2 Cor. 12:12-17.
T. Generous hospitality, Heb. 13:1-3.
F. Generous in thought, Phil. 2:2-9.
S. The tithe, Mal. 3:8-12.
Sunday, 11th, The Topic—

HE REMEMBERS LITTLE THINGS.

"Our Sunday-school superintendent has the best memory I ever saw," laughed Tim James as a gentleman walked down the street after a few moments' chat with him. "Did you hear him ask how Fido was? Well, he got hurt more'n two weeks ago. Most men wouldn't have thought of it again, but Mr. Barnes never forgets anything.

"And he called last night to ask why sister Janet hadn't been out to school lately, he said he missed her voice in the singing," added Will Niles.

"And he sent for me to come up and see his typewriter work. He had found out, some way, that I got an old one and couldn't make it go, so he showed me how."

"That is the secret of Mr. Barnes' success and power," remarked Mr. Moyer to his friend as they came up. "He is a wonderful man, has three hundred in his school and it's growing every month. He never forgets a face and seems to pick up in some way, something of the home life of every member of his school. He never meets one of them that he can't call by name and he always has something to say that shows he knows all about him."—Willametta Preston.

TO YOUNG MEN.

Men love the Bible because it is the book of Christ and the immortal hope. Who is this that cometh from Edom with his crimson robes? He enters life at the lowest possible door, toils at the carpenter's bench, has no patronage, wealth, or power, is denied lecture-hall and library, goes about doing good, is the friend of the publican, the sinner, and the child, flings himself against hypocrisy and conventionalism, is hated, derided, and lifted to the piteous tragedy of the cross, but rises victorious above all the besetments of sin, and forgives his enemies. This is the star that rides triumphant over earth's low-browed hills! To men defeated and despoiled he whispers the words of hope and on his

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed.

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

3:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:20 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car. Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

2:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 42 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

cross redeem asnd forgives them, and then points the sufferer to a realm beyond the stars. Oh, wonderful book of God and Christ! Young man, reopen your mother's Bible, and this page, worn with your revered father's much reading. Here is a chart that will guide you through life's wilderness and a compass that will guide you safely across the sea of time.—Ex.

They are never alone who are accompanied by noble thoughts.—Sir Philip Sidney.

ASHAMED OF THEIR PROPERTY.

The churches of New York have started a movement in favor of a law to compel every house owner to put his name conspicuously upon every houuse owned by him. This movement is directed against the numerous dens of vice scattered through the city and is bitterly opposed by a large number of wealthy men having extensive real estate holdigns in that city. The reason is, of course, quite plain. Many wealthy and highly respected men and women own houses which are used for immoral purposes and otherwise improper purposes, with the full knowledge and connivance of the owners. The secret of the ownership is well guarded by the agents of the owners. It would be quite a shock to the community to learn—as would be unavoidable under such a law as planned by the promoters of the publicity movement, that Mr.s X or Mr. Y, both members of the most aristocratic society circles and standing high in their respective churches, own a number of notorious houses in the Tenderloin district or that the Z estate, adminitesred by a man of undoubted piety, Sunday school superintendent and leading member of a number of religious and reform organizations, has leased a number of houses to notorious gambling house keepers of houses of ill repute.—Concord. Times.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Pellagra caused 368 deaths in the census bureau's death regisitration area during 1910, of which 263 of the victims, or 71.5 per cent., were females.

Of all the deaths from this cause returned for the registration area of the United States for 1910, three tenths occurred in North Carolina municipalities of 1,000 population. The largest numbers of deaths registered were in Raleigh, 23; Durham, 17; Charlotte, 16, and Wilmington, 8. The city with the highest mortality from this cause within the registration area was Atlanta, Ga., with 69 deaths reported.

—Added to China's troubles from the destructions of a civil war are the ravages of a destructive famine that obtain in many districts of the great empire.

—William H. Doane, Sunday-school superintendent and musician who wrote the tunes "Rescue the Perishing," "Pass Me Not," "More Love O Christ to Thee," "Near the Cross," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "I Am Thine, O Lord," "Hide Me," "Tell Me the Old, Old Story," "To the Work," etc., will be eighty years old Feb. 3rd. Surely has this man's soul wrought to give the world more melody and joy and gladness.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Forsyth, Jan. 27 to Feb. 2.
Pinnacle, Feb. 3-5.
Flat Rock, Feb. 6-9.
Greensboro, Feb. 10-12.
St. Paul & B. Summit Feb. 10-12.
LaGrange, Feb. 13-15.
Rocky Mount, Feb. 16.
Roanoke Feb. 17-21.
Halifax, Feb. 22-26.
Spring Church & Greenville, Feb. 27-March 4.
Littleton, March 4-8.
Henderson and Vance, March 9-13.

Monroe Ct.

Dear Bro. Swain and Herald:

I am now at my new home in Pageland, S. C. We have found everything pleasant. I began my work at New Hope the first Sunday in January. I see no reason why this charge should not be one of the best charges in the State. We have the means if we had the will. God help us to have the will.

I went up to Cleveland County and spent the Christmas holidays with my father and mother. I am so glad that I have a father and mother living. I love to please them in the declining years. Nothing is so dear to me in this world as mother. It was a pleasant trip indeed. I had the privilege of meeting so many of my friends. My time that I had to stay was gone and I had to leave for home, and it seemed that the time went away so quickly, but I left my father's on Saturday before the fifth Sunday. I went to Fallston, stopped with Bro. Reed, and I enjoyed his hospitality so much. Bro. Reed is a big-hearted fellow, always in good heart. I tried to preach for him at Friendship on the 5th Sunday in January I was glad to see so many of the brethren still holding on to the cross of Christ; but some have gone, I know not where; but we miss them. It seemed so natural to see Brother Noah Wright, Brother Hays and Brother P. Glenn, and perhaps others at their respective places in the church and Sunday school. Those brethren have been so much help to me in my early Christian life, and even today, I miss them. May the Lord bless those friends with many happy years yet.

Leaving Fallston next stop was at Boiling Springs. There I was met by Brother Lovejoy and a number of friends. Nothing would do but for me to try to preach for them. It was so rainy that but few came out. We had a good service. Brother Joy was in good heart and his people seemed happy.

But the saddest one I saw was old Uncle Joe Sills. He was a veteran, having served throughout the war, and since that time, a veteran for Christ and one that I esteem as highly as anyone of his capacity. He, while perhaps like many old people, somewhat despondent, feeling much discouraged, and some times feel that they are not appreciated like they should be, and perhaps have reasons to think so, but was very pleasantly surprised when he saws the people of his town and church coming in with cakes, fruits, meats, candy, and other nice things for Christmas. Uncle Joe was so pleased that he could not help but rejoice.

I spent the night with him, and he was was so thankful and happy that he could not talk for rejoicing. He said that he was so glad that the people of his town and church loved him, and would make such a sacrifice for him that he could not help but to praise God, for such a gift.

How easy it is for us to bless some one. Lord help us to see, that we may not be blind. When there is so much that God wants us to behold, men dying for the want of sympathy and encouragement.

With best wishes to all. J. W. Self.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The Fall term was the best in the history of the College; the Spring Term, which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to be better still.

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for their sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young ment and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible advantages at the lowest reasonable cost.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE...

This course for teaches opens April 9, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to make the greatest success possible in their chosen work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

—Mrs. Margaret S. Ray, our good sister in Oregon, has changed her address to Troy, Oregon. She recently made a visit to her nephew on the Pacific coast.

—J. Pierpont Morgan who possesses probably more art treasures than any individual living and who has spent untold time and treasure in collecting valuable pieces of art, is to transfer his collections from London, Paris, and other European countries, to New York. The collection is thought to be worth a hundred million dollars.

PROVERBS AND PHRASES.

A willing mind make a hard journey easy.—Massinger.

Men would live exceedingly quiet if those two words, "Mine" and "Thine" were taken away.—Anaxagoras.

God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb.—Lawrence Stearn.

Men do best and women know it well Preeminence in each and all is yours—Yet grant some small acknowledgemen of ours.—Anne Bradstreet.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1912. NUMBER 11.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

LONDON EVANGELISTS IN GREENSBORO.

A few years ago it would have seemed very improbable that Greensboro would be visited by English preachers for the purpose of holding evangelistic services. Nobody in Greensboro would have thought of inviting them, and everybody in Greensboro would have said that it would be impossible to raise the money to bring them. But the last two weeks Greensboro has actually been the mission field of two no less distinguished English evangelistic workers than Rev. Herbert Booth, son of General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, and Rodney Smith, son of Gypsy Smith, the famous evangelist. Mr. Booth has preached and Mr. Smith has sung and led in song. Their meetings were held in West Market Street M. E. Church, and the congegations were immense. Mr. Booth is a popular preacher. He has a vivacious manner and is dramatic at times, and is a good impersonator. In form of features, he somewhat resembles Rev. J. H. Stowe, of our Conference. In figure, he is more like Rev. R. C. Stubbins. Mr. Smith is not dark, as you might expect a Gypsy's son to be, but has light hair and ruddy countenance.

A large number of persons made profession of faith during their meetings.

In the last two services, pictures were used—some of them moving pictures. In one of the latter, Paul was shown as he was let down in a basket over the wall of Damascus. In another, a burial scene in the catacombs at Rome was shown. The opening in the wall, the body wrapped for burial, lifting and placing of this in its receptacle, and the covering of the opening with a stone—all were distinctly shown.

The money necessary was raised so easily that nobody felt it. Free will offering were taken at several services, and on the next to the last night there was an admission charge of 35 cents, but this did not interfere with the attendance. The house was packed as at other times.

Such workers have their place, but the kind of preachers that the world will never get tired of are the plain and simple kind who constantly keep "hidden behind the Cross."

EXPENSES OF DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The editor of this paper was appointed by the Annual Conference to receive money raised for this purpose. We will asknowledge all receipts in Herald instead of sending receipts by letter.

High Point .....$$11.00

J. F. McCulloch.

BIG PI LAST WEEK.

Just as we were going to press last week, we had the most dreadful accident we have ever had of the kind. Both chases, containing half the Herald of last week, were violently thrown from the press, and the contents jumbled. We worked for nine hours trying to straighten out, and thought we had succeeded, though we did not have time to read all over. We find that we did not get Bro. Bowman's article quite straight. We hope that the brethren caught his meaning—he wants all to do as the members of the Annual Conference agreed regarding the Orphans' Home. His manuscript is gone, or we would publish his article this week as he wrote it.

—Rev. T. A. Plyler was in Greensboro yesterday. He reports that his wife has not regained her health.

AN APPEAL.

Please do not fail to read all of this carefully, thoughtfully, and prayerfully.

We have a substantial house of worship, known as St. Johns, located in a cotton bill suburb of the town of Rockingham, N. C. The size of the house is 56 x 24 feet, with recess pulpit and vestibule, bell tower and bell.

There are three large cotton mills within easy reach of this church—ours being centrally located. There is an opportunity here. There are people here and the community is not over-churched. At one extreme the Baptists, Presbyterians, and M. E.'s each have a church. In the middle there is none but ours, and at the other extreme, no church at all. So the situation is not like some attempts that we have made in old fossilized towns where nearly every one was already in the church. But this is virgin soil. One mill having been built only about two years.

This church was built in 1907, and was doing well, it seems, until the dull times came on the cotton mills. During this time the mills have been shut down much of the time, and one of them, the one nearest our church has been closed for about two years. So this demoralized things, causing a number of the people to move away, and quite a number of our own members moved also. So this has put our church in a condition needing help. There is a debt of $425 upon the house, and some of this debt must be provided for soon. Our membership here is not able to meet it. We must have outside help in some way, or fail. Will not each one who reads this, come to our rescue in this crisis? We appeal to you in the name of Christianity and the M. P. Church to come to our relief. Will you not do so?

A failure here will not only damage our cause in this particular community, but in this whole section. We are being watched. We are being weighed. If a hundred persons would send me $5.00 each, this would cancel the debt and pay some accrued interest also. Will you not do it? Surely there are a hundred persons in the N. C. District who can do this. Or, 500 persons sending us a dollar each, would cancel the debt. If you cannot be

Continued on page 5.

TWO TYPES OF TEMPERAMENT.

Recently, in conversation with us, a lady whose "house is perfection," remarked that Christ's rebuke of Martha seemed unjust, and that at least Mary should have been censured for not doing her part of the housework. Probably many others think with her; and on the face of it the reproof seems undeserved. Even from this small notice of her there is much to be said for Martha.

She believed in Christ and was ready to endure the odium and take the risk of inviting Him into her house; and Christ believed in her, or He would not have been her guest in such circumstances. She wished to place before Him the best entertainment she could prepare. Her sense of fitness was correct, for if ever any one deserved such hospitality He did; also her reputation for good house-keeping depended upon it. Being a Jewess, she had been taught at all times to be ready for hospitality. Those lessons are still taught by pious Jewish parents. She knew her work and had the will and force of the spirit to perform it.

Most persons would think Martha an industrious woman, and not one of those who have an idea that "a woman is a fragile flower to be kept in a hothouse and exhibited as a thing of beauty."

Yet she did something which called for reproof. She undertook more than there was time for; it was too great a slavery and bustle for the visitor or the occasion. This, however, was a mere error of judgment, and if there were nothing more, she deserved only a look. But she lost the control of her temper and had a fit of impatience which caused her to make a sudden remark in the presence of Christ which implied that the guest and her sister were to blame. She allowed improper feelings to arise toward her sister.

In many circumstances her indignation might have been quite proper. If an ordinary guest had arrived, and there was a disposition in one of the family to neglect her duty and overwork, naturally the latter would be chagrined. Still in many instances wisdom and courtesy would lead one to entertain, while the other was preparing the repast.

Martha misunderstood the kind of courtesy that the occasion required. She did not consider which was the finer courtesy, to feed Jesus, the Son of God, or to hear Him. She could have reasoned in this way: "I have the privilege of hearing the Messiah; I must, indeed, treat Him hospitably and am most glad to do so; but I must hear every word that He utters, for He only has the words of Eternal Life." But into the midst of the conversation she hurled a two-edged sword adapted to cut both her Master and her sister to the quick: "Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? Bid her therefore that she help me."

The answer of Jesus did not show impatience or authority, or, as some say, a half jesting mood; but He spoke as a calm, loving father would speak to a child was was generally obedient and affectionate, but who was suddenly angered without reason, and needed to be pacified. Christ's words were not "Martha!! Martha!!" but "Martha? Martha? You are careful and troubled about many things;" that is, your mind is disturbed and you are over-solicitous; a little preparation will suffice. "Mary has chosen that good part. She listens to me rather than enter into discursive conversation over a board laden with various edibles." Christ regarded Mary's temperament when He taught her, and when He taught Martha, He considered her temperament also.

It is not well in reading the Scriptures to form an opinion of a subject from one or two sentences only.

Saint John gives an account that reveals the situation more closely:

Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus. * * * Now Bethany (the town of Mary and her sister Martha) was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off. * * * Then Martha as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?

She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.

This illustrates her temperament as more vigorous than that of her sister, and she continued so to the end.

And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

Six days before the Passover Jesus came to Bethany and they made him a supper: and Martha served. * * * Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her fair: and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment.

To the last Martha is pre-eminently practical, but not destitute of the spiritual; and Mary is pre-eminently spiritual, but not wholly destitute of a sense of the value of things material. These two temperaments exist in men as truly as in women. They are necessary. If the human race consisted exclusively of either type without the other, mankind would not "use the world as not abusing it," nor would the things of the spirit be duly regarded. The effect of each temperament upon the other produces fitness for "the life that now is and that which is to come."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

MORAL AGENCY.

By Rev. Thomas Holmes, D. D.

Of all the powers with which God has endowed the human soul, Moral Agency is the highest. In the creation of man, when God had "formed man of the dust of the ground"—in His own image; and endowed him, in finite measure, with all the intellectual faculties that He Himself possessed, that is, made him "in His own likeness," He finished His creative work by making him a Moral Agent, that is, capable of discriminating between the right and the wrong, and choosing between them. This was effected by the gift of the spirit—not the Spirit of God, but the human spirit. Without this spirit man would be only an animal, a brute. With it he is the child of "the Father of spirits. "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."

The brute has a body made of the dust of the ground, and a limited degree of intelligence, but he has no idea of right and wrong. It is the spirit in man that places him upon a higher plane—the highest plane indeed of all created beings. In the grade of created things man stands at the summit. "Thou hast made him but little lower than God." (Ps. 8:5). This is the ground of that intimate and inseparable relationship—parent and child. Jesus taught all men to say, "Our Father."

In support of these statements respecting the spirit and its functions let us consult "the law and the testimony. If they speak not according to this word, there is no morning for them." Zech. 12: 1, "Jehovah * * * formeth the spirit of man within him." Num. 16: 12 and 27: 16, "The God of the spirits of all flesh." Heb. 12: 9, "The Father of our spirits." Eccl. 12: 7, "The dust returneth to the earth as it was, and the spirit returneth to God who gave it." Man's "likeness" to his Father is now complete. He is in

His image; and in His "likeness" intellectually and morally; capable of choosing between the right and the wrong, and entirely acountable for his choices that determine his moral character and destiny.

Thus constituted the alternative that is necessary to a moral choice is in his constitution. "The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh," (Gal. 5: 17), and the soul, which is the personality, the man himself, chooses to which it will be subject. "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh: but they that are after the spirit, the things of he spirit."—spiritual things. "For the mind of the flesh is death, but the mind of the spirit is life and peace." Minding the things of the flesh is self-indulgence; minding the demands of the spirit, through which the Spirit of God speaks to the soul of man, requires self-denial, and obedience to the will of God, which is our reasonable and spiritual service. It is thus, and thus only, that we can "present our bodies a living sacrifice., holy and acceptable to God." (Rom. 12: 1).

This freedom of choice—the absolute sovereignty of the Will is the indisputable and inalienable possession and power of every human soul—is the basis of individual accountability. It is because the individual choice cannot be coerced, that "every man must give account of himself to God."

In the light of this analysis we discover clearly just what it is to be "delivered out of the power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom of the Son of His love." It is to be made free from every sinful habit—self-indulgence in every form, and brought into "the glorious liberty of the children of God."

This doctrine of Moral Agency should be thoroughly studied, psycholigically and Biblically, by every student of the nature and accountability of the human soul; that they may know just what it is to be a sinner, and what it is to be a Christian. It is also wonderfully useful in answering many puzzling questions as to why God did or did not certain things, that most people reckon as "past finding out."

Lakemont, N. Y.

DWARFING THE EMOTIONS.

Curious indeed is the suspicion many persons seem to entertain of the things that appeal to their emotions.

They may show an admirable hospitality to knowledge, and devote themselves unreservedly to study, in order to develop their minds. Toward the physical side of life they maintain a similar attitude, and by using care in the matter of diet and exercise, do everything possible to make their bodies strong and to keep them healthy. Their emotions, on the other hand, they seem willing to leave entirely uncultivated, or to trust to such chance training as comes from the ordinary intercouurseof life.

The position is strangely inconsistent. Even those who assume it never carry it to its logical conclusion. If they did they would stifle all their emotions, and this, of course, they cannot do. They listen with pleasure to a brass band because it stirs their military ardor or rouses their spirit of patriotism. They enjoy the excitement of a football game because it awakens their college feeling or fires their love of combat. Why, then, should they give it as a reason for remaining away from church that "so much of the service is an appeal to the emotions"? Or why should they feel ashamed when they shed a tear over Little Nell or Philip Nolan?

Are the ordinary emotions to be trusted and the higher and finer ones repressed? That, obviously, would be absurd.

The contrary is true. The nobler the feeling, the more need there is that it have full play, and that it be cultivated, not by chance, but consciously and steadily. There is a trinity of the human as there is of the Divine, and to neglect one person of it is to condemn ourselves to needless incompleteness.

Even if the church service appeals only to your emotions, do not therefore remain away, but go and give play to the emotions. If you cannot read the "Christmas Carol" without crying, read it all the oftener, and cry harder, and take no shame to yourself for your tears. They water seeds meant to flower in beauty and adorn your life.

"As he thinketh in his heart, so is he," said Solomon. Not in his head, but in his heart—the immemorial figure of speech for the emotions.—Youth's Companion.

OURSELVES.

How often is it that we stop to consider what we are making of ourselves and what advantage we are taking of time, opportunity and life? It seems, however that some of us, or most of us, just simply drag along through life as one would through a wilderness, that is the easiest way is what we are looking for. But that is not it whatever. The easiest way is not always the best way. It is interesting, and sad too, to look at some men (and women also) and think what possibilities lie within them that are not developed and without great change will never be. It is easy to see and think after making that if we had just taken the other side how much better it would have been for us. So it is in life. After we have used our best days in what we term "having a good time," when truly there is no good about it, and when we begin to think back, sad it is to see and know what we could have easily accomplished had it not been for the lack of effort and the overpowering of evil. Let us begin today considering what changes we might make and what steps we might take that would be beneficial to us and to our age. Easy it is for us to think "Well, I'll go in the same old way today and tomorrow I'll change," but have we any tomorrow promised us? Glad to know that it is not with us as it was in Egypt, that is the rank in which a child was born was the rank in which he was to be reared, possibly some few exceptions. It is not this with us. Each of us has a chance at the tip-top. Think where some of our greatest men came from. It is not always or perhaps ever money that makes the man, but self-confidence, self-instruction, self-control and Divine help.

Henderson, N. C. .. Polk Garrett.

RAILWAY SCHOLARSHIPS.

Washington, Feb. 1.—President Finley, of the Southern Railway Company, announced today that, as a means of supplementing the extensive work being done by the company for the advancement of agriculture in the territory traversed by its lines south of the Potomac and Ohio Rivers and East of the Mississippi, it has been decided to inaugurate Southern Railways Scholarships in the State Agricultural College in each State traversed by the lines of the Company.

Mr. Finley will take this matter up at once with the president of each agricultural college concerned, asking him to permit the Company to pay for the scholarships and to select the young men to be benefited by them. The scholarships, which are to cover the full four-year course in agriculture, are to be awarded in accordance with plans to be agreed upon between the presidents of the colleges and the Railway Company and are to be given to young men residing in counties traversed by the lines of the Company, and who would otherwise be financially unable to avail themselves of an agricultural college training.

As soon as arrangements have been definitely perfected, full details as to the scholarship or scholarships to be awarded in each State, will be announced.

—There is retribution in history. And times change. In 1560 a Waldension preacher, Paschale, was burned in the presence of the papal court, for preaching against Catholicism, near the vatican in Rome, Italy. Now a $200,000 Waldension church is being erected almost on the same spot.

INVADERS OF A GREAT ENTERPRISE IN THREE ASSEMBLIES.

Representatives of the Foreign Mission Boards of North America operating in Japan held a conference in the Assembly rooms of the Presbyterian building in New York, January 9th, to discuss principles and policies adapted to the conditions and needs of that strategic field.

Secretaries, leaders of great movements, missionaries just from the field, and latest word from workers abroad gave weight and authority to the day's discussion of the six subjects presented.

If any one doubted the place Japan occupies in Asia and Far Eastern affairs it was dispelled by Dr. John R. Mott's cumulative evidence presented in a masterly outline of growing power and influence in all spheres where the genius, enterprise and success of a nation find expression.

Dr. T. S. Barbour in his discriminating and informing paper upon the "Attitude and responsiveness of Japan to intellectual and Spiritual Ideals" did not minimize the difficulties of winning the nation to Christ by reason of racial characteristics, peculiar environment and training, and the limited corps of workers maintained there, but he brought hope and inspiration by the growing consciousness of their needs on the part of the Japanese, and the ascendency of Christian thought, and influence and activities.

"Christian Education" was assigned to Dr. J. L. Goucher, but his illness prevented his attendance. Dr. W. I. Chamberlain took his place.This department of missionary work has bequeathed to Japan her best leaders and workers and much else nowconserving the life and interests of her churches, and its consideration was of special interest in view of the call to coordinate the forces at work, and complete the entire system by establishing a great Christian University.

Of great interest was the Survey of Present Missionary Occupation of Japan and Distribution of Forces" by Rev. T. E. Shore of Canada. These are some of the startling facts it revealed. There are 66 cities of 25,000 inhabitants, 306 of 10,000, and 400 of 5,000 inhabitants, and among these 772 centers only one is occupied by one missionary. There are 572 important centers without a missionary or a Japanese worker.

There are only 1473 ordained and unordained male workers for the whole Empire, or one male worker to 34,700 persons, while here it is one to 400.

There are 404 theological students in the seminaries.

"The relation of Japanese Churches to Missionary Organizations at Home" was forcefully presented by Dr. James J. Barton. He indicated the various conditions, plans and developments from data secured from the Boards, and while there is considerable difference in the relations sustained for obvious reasons, the trend is towards self-support of the Japanese churches in which greater progress has been made than in other foreign fields, although their united strength is inadequate for the speedy evangelization of the nation, and aid from North America is imperatively needed.

Dr. Robert E. Speer. delivered the last address, and showed the great need of "Missionary Reinforcements", because the missionaries call for them, and the Japanese that once deemed themselves able to assume independence, and to evangelize the nation unaided, save by foreign contributions, also join in the call, and for other reasons.

So profitable was this Conference that it was agreed to recommend similar ones to deal with the different fields.

The treasurers of the different Boards were called to a special conference in Garden City, L. I., to consider subjects pertaining exclusively to their department. Financial affairs, improvement of systems in vogue, methods of raising money and of book keeping, forwarding of appropriations, cooperation in handling resources abroad, and kindred matters were discussed with interest and profit.

It was resolved to meet annually, and steps were taken to insure ample time for full consideration of vital questions.

3. The Annual Conference of Foreign Missions Boards of North America was held in Garden City, L. I., free from the bustle and distractions of a great city, and being in the large hotel the delegates became better acquainted, business was expeditiously transacted, and other desirable results were secured.

The spiritual uplift, the unity of purpose, the broadening vision, the clearer knowedge of world conditions and needs, and the wise statesmanship displayed in plans for conserving resources and marshaling forces for a determined advance for the conquest of non-Christian nations which characterized the proceedings of the conference were to be expected, since its foremost members are the recognized leaders of the Protestant denominations on this continent, and are experts on conditions abroad and in administration at home.

Having no legislative function, the conference is nevertheless, recognized as the one organization through which Protestantism in North America voices its conviction and purpose concerning world-wide extension of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and raises its voice in behalf of needy peoples, hence it considers "Opium Reform," "Liquor Traffic with native Races", and other great questions.

All phases of the missionary enterprise come under its survey, and the papers and discussions are upon the outstanding questions in which all Boards have a common interest, and these are put into permanent form in the published proceedings.

Denominational affiliations, policies of the Boards, and similar matters are fully respected, but the trend is towards uniformity of practice in the conduct of the great enterprise, mutual helpfulness, guarding against overlapping and friction abroad, and striving for uniformity and cooperation at home in general plans, publications,etc.

This is expressed in the "Board of Missionary Studies" which has to do with the preparation of missionaries for their work, and for their mission field, since these differ greatly.

Also the "Committee of Reference and Counsel" whose province is to offer suggestions as to unoccupied fields, carry on negotiations with governments, consider questions between Boards on mission fields, represent in the greeting of distinguiushed visitors of nonChristian lands, deal with the larger questions of the enterprise which could not be done as well by a single Board, and keep the Conference informed upon conditions as changing under the varied influnces at work throughout the world.

This is further shown by the Conference endorsing the plan to publish a popular Missionary Magazine to reach all the churches, and a "Unified Plan of Missionary Education and Giving" for use among the constituencies of all the Boards.

Most significant was the recognition by the Conference of the overshadowing need of prayer as the essential, constant and ruling factor in awakening and sustaining any and all missionary effort. The supreme need of our time is a wider and deeper life of prayer"—" as the chief means of missionary power"— "We must commune with Him in order to communicate Him." Him."

4. The Conference was followed by a joint conference with the general Committee of the laymen's Missionary Movement for the consideration of plans to conserve the agencies now employed, and to further enlist the men of the churches in the supreme work of the kingdom of Christ.

No one, it seems to me, could go through these three days of privilege and blessing, receive such information and impressions, enjoy such fellowship with the church's leaders and workers abroad without feeling profoundly his responsibility, and being inspired to do his utmost to enlist his denomination more fully in the great Foreign Missionary enterprise.

BIBLE STUDY CLASS.

Lesson for Next Week.

Job, chapters 8-14.

RECOLLECTIONS OF REV. W. LATT HARRIS.

In May, 1891, for reasons then satisfactory to myself, I left the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on a regular transfer, given at my request by Rev.Benj. H. Hall, pastor of the church at Goldsboro, N. C. to the Methodist Protestant Church. I went to the town of Lagrange and located. This was a beautiful town of about 1,200. inhabitants on Pamlico Sound. The Methodist Protestant Church which I then joined was built in 1888 by Dr. J. T. Hadley, a prominent physician; D. C. Murchison, a prominent merchant; some of the Suttons and Wootens, then living in town and some others. Dr. Hadley donated the acre lot, and paid about $1,500, and the others mentioned contributed the balance. in all about $10,000. At the time of which I am writing, Rev. W. Latt. Harris was pastor of Lagrange Circuit, which included Lagrange, Oak Grove, Hickory Grove and Tabernacle. In August, 1891, while sitting as juror in Wayne County Court, Judge Gunter presiding, I received a letter from Brother Harris, inviting me to come at once to the parsonage, asking me to help him in the revival work on his entire circuit, and stating that the revival would open at Oak Grove Church on the following Sunday. This letter came to me on Friday morning, as I recollect, soon after court convened. I was in the jury box at the time it was handed to me. I arose and addressed the judge in these words: "Judge, I have just received a letter from a preacher asking me him in revival work." The judge repiled: Brother Wright (we were brothers of the to come immediately to Lagrange to help (Mystic Tie), read the letter," which I did He immediately replied: Brother Wright. you are excused, for you had better go out into the Lord's vineyard fighting the world and the flesh and the Devil, than to be sitting in that jury box trying men and women for violating the criminal law many of whom were not brought up under proper religous training, for the good book says, bring up a child in the way it should go, and when he is old he will not depart there from.'" I went immedately to my home and made all necessary preparation, and then took the train for Lagrange. Spending the night with the pastor, we set out the next morning for Oak Grove. On Sunday morning we went to the church and were greeted by a large intelligent and interesting congregation. I could safely say five hundred were present. Brother Harris preached the opening sermon from the text,"In the name of the Lord of hosts we raise our banners." At night I preached from the text, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God," Thus the revival commenced, and thus it continued for two weeks, night and morning, Brother Harras preaching in the morning and I in the evening service untill the close. We had as many as twenty conversions. We emphasized the essentiality of regeneration, conversion, or the new birth, which ever you choose to call it. There was an organ in the church and a well-trained band of singers. These were all reilgious and mostly young people and sang with the spirit and the understanding. Every now and then Brother Harris would say, "You singers close for a while I will lead the song ," and then with his welltuned tongue, and touched with a divine afflatus he would sing, Come, humble, sinner, in whose breast a thousand thoughts revolve," and the sinners would come, flocking to the mercy seat where Jesus anwsers prayer. At the close of this meeting all of the converts united with the church. —E. A. Wright. in Methodist Protestant.

The Salvation Army.

Very few persons really comprehend the magnitude of the Salvation Army or the importance, the comparative value of its work. Beginning its history in Philadelphia in 1880 in an old building where furniture had been repaired, it has advanced in extent and dignity wonderfully in the past thirty years.

Out doors last year it is stated that 173-000 meetings were held, attended by 15,000,-000 persons. In halls the meetings numbered 215,000, and 8,000,000 adults and 1-500,000 children came to them. The number of converts claimed to have deen made by the Army last year was 46,554. A few years ago Army hotels were started to take the place of the mean and poor ones often maintained for private profit last year no fewer than 1,961,677 lodgings were provided. The poverty problem was entered upon the Army but with work to do which wages are paid. last year the Army gave 2,156,155 meals to poor men in return for work, and gave them in wages $325,-000. Employment was found for more than 70,000 persons of whom more than 60,000 were men. In the training colleges, of which there are four, 200 to 300 young men and women are graduated each year all of whom engage in Army work in the large cities. During the last five years property held by the Army is claimed to have increased in amount by $2,500,000.

Like most religious movements ever be gun in the history of the Church, the Army was greeted with much of ridicule and even of contumely in its beginning; but evidencing its orthodoxy by laboring among the poor and wretched, it has steadily won upon the respect and confidence of the world until it has become a power almost throughout the habitable world. It is simple and direct, and its converts, almost without staying to bid adieu to father andmother,accept their marching orders and set out for the uttermost parts of the earth. If the war drum of Great Britian throbs around the world yet more can the Salvation Army claim, for its war drum is heard where British authority is unknown.

It has a distict mission to the lowly, and to the lowly it ministers without salary or stipend, accepting with thankfulness the pittance dropped into the tambourine and living in the most inexpensive and meager way that it may dispense the bread of life to those that are dying in sin as well as the bread of this world to those that are dying with hunger.

All honor to the Army! Rather would we have a son carry a banner in its lowly procession than to minister under the high steeple with the same spirit which characterizes some of these exalted incumbents.— St. Iouis. Christin. Advocate.

Begun on page 1.

one of the hundred, will you not be one of the 500? Please do not put down the paper without deciding to help, and to help now, if possible, for some of this debt must be met soon, or disaster will follow. Please send us $5.00, more if you can, less, if you must, but send something. Any amount will be gratefully received.

And as quite a number of our people do not read the "Herald," will not each pastor call the attention of his people to this matter publicly, and take a contribution in cash or subscriptions? I know, brethren, your hands are full, and we have many calls, but this is a crisis, and help must come, and come soon, or disaster is near. I am sure if all who read this could be made to see and feel the situation as it is, the response would be prompt and liberal. Remit to J. F. Dosier, Rockingham, N. C., and all amounts will be duly acknowledged in the M. P. Herald. J. F. Dosier.

P. S. The mills are running now, and the people are returning, so do not think there are no people to preach to. But the situation is such that the help needed must come, or we will fail, as it is impossible to add to the church in the given time so as to meet the situation; but there is an opportunity for the future.

J. F. D.

THE PRIZE WINNER.

Miss Garnett Michaux, of Liberty, wins again this week. She found seventeen sets of words of four letters each having the property of being convertible into each other by transposition of letters,

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Littleton Ct., Feb. 25-27.
Halifax Ct., Feb. 29 to Mar. 3.
Roanoke Ct., Mar. 5-7.
Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Randleman Circuit.

Dear Brother Swain:

We held our first quarterly conference February 3rd, 1912, at Mt. Lebanon. All the churches were represented and the business was transacted in harmony. We came to the work late and bad weather met us on our first round, and we didn't preach at Bethany and Worthville. We held services at these churches on second round. We were convinced before we had been here long that the good Lord had set us down among good people, for while we were snow and ice bound, we were well cared for. Bros. W. A. Wood and W. M. Julian deserve special mention for this as we spent more than a week with these brethren. January 16, Bros. Ernest Farlow, Chas. Pugh and Homer Trogdon hauled our household goods from the station and placed them in our house. Sister Wood remembered us with a new broom. Brother Farlow with a load of wood, and Sister Farlow with butter and milk. Since then we have been remembered by Bro. J. H. Skeen with sweet potatoes and butter, and Miss Lue Fogleman with milk, also a little sack of walnuts for the pastor's wife to while away the time with. These were all helpful in any family, more especially a preacher's and they were so much appreciated.

We are getting among our people and we are meeting friends. We have found some good old brethren and sisters too, who have been servants of our Master for many years. Their testimony is an inspiration to any preacher. We are expecting great things of the Lord. Brethren, remember us when you are talking with the Lord. J. B. O'Briant.

Feb. 5th, 1912.

Albemarle Circuit.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

We have been living here since the 8th day of December, 1911, but owing to the severity of the weather, we have not been able to preach at all the appointments.

On arrival here we were received very graciously and the people have not ceased to manifest a spirit of kindness and friendship.

We have not been "pounded" in the customary way, but we have been the recipients, from time to time, of numerous gifts, such as preserves, chicken, meat, eggs, flour, lard, sausage, potatoes, ham, peaches, apples, a pair of slippers, handkerchief, etc., for which we tender our sincere thanks to the following friends: Mr. and Mrs. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Callie Tarkington, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Cutrill, Mrs. C. H. Davenport, Mrs. Guilford Davenport, and Mr. Phelps.

After looking over the work, we find the task before us is a great one.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Woodley's Chapel on Saturday last. There were ten official members present, and we had a very pleasant time together. The reports were fairly good. The pastor has received twenty-five dollars and ninety cents, ($25.90). The assessment on Pastor's Salary was raised ten dollars, making a total of $385.00. We decided to give Mt. Elma church a Sunday appointment, subject to the approval of Creswell Church, who, in so doing, will sacrifice one Sunday service. The people generally seem to be encouraged and are hopeful of a good year.

We have changed our time of service at Edenton from 11 o'clock to 3 P. M. We have only had one service but we felt amply repaid for the change, by a congregation 100 per cent. larger than usual.

We hope to remodel our church at Rehoboth in the near future.

Wishing all our brethren a successful year, and requesting your earnest prayers for success at this place, I remain

Your brother in Him,

Albert H. Bryans.

Concord, Saxapahaw Ct.

February 4th, a bitter cold day, not many at Sunday school Not withstanding the severe weather did not back out our faithful pastor. He was on hand after a ten-mile drive with a good message for us. Congregation small. Some live in half mile of church excused themselves, members at that. One of our oldest members, Bro. Geo McBane, is right feeble now. Another brother, A. L. Lewis, is lying in nursing a cut foot.

I close with best wishes to the Herald and its Editor, and the cause of Christ.

A. N. Roberson.

Liberty Circuit.

On Jan. 25th, Mrs. Troxler and I reached the parsonage; we found it in good style, and taking a look into the kitchen, we saw that the good people of this community had paid us a visit, and had left so many good things to eat. We found six pounds of sugar, three pounds of coffee, three pounds of lard, two pounds of butter, four pounds of salt, five pounds of soda, one sack of flour, three pecks potatoes, fifteen cans of fruit, one can of sausage, two cans of corn, one package of Quaker oats, one peck of meal, one can of tomatoes, one axe handle, one pie pan, one gallon oil, one cake of soap, one dipper, one cake plate, pepper and spice and flavoring; also eight chickens, horse feed, and fire wood.

And these good people have not forgotten us since we came, for they have been bringing us such things as are useful ever since. For all this we are very grateful, and wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Bennett, Mrs. Otin Smith, Mrs. D. S. Shoffner. Miss Maud Holt, "Grandma Colley," Mrs. R. B. Causey, Mrs. J. H. Bowman, Miss Millie L. Bowman, Mr. W. A. Bowman, Mrs. F. H. Bowman, Miss Ada Amick, Mrs. Mary Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Stafford, Mrs. Will Hanner, Miss Zona Troxler, Mr. T. Troxler, Miss Johnsie Smith, Mrs. S. E. Shepherd, Mrs. S. A. Amick, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Amick, Mr. Walter Causey, Mrs. Suits, and Miss Mannie Patrum, for their kindness shown us; and hope to give to them in return and all other good people on this work our best service.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Mt. Pleasant on Saturday, Jan. the 20th. The attendance was not large, but the conference was interesting.

The people of Pleasant Union are working faithfully on their new church, which will be completed soon, they have "a mind to work."

The work in general is in a very good condition. I have found some loyal Methodists Protestants here, who are trying to advance His kingdom among men.

Sunday school at Mt. Pleasant is good cosidering the bad weather.

Pleasant Union Sunday school has been reorganized, and Bro. W. A. Bowman was elected Superintendent. Liberty school is in a growing condition.

Let us pray that God may give us a great victory over sin this year.

Robert S. Troxler, Pastor.

Liberty, N. C., Route 2.

Richland Ct.

In spite of the biting cold and snow of last Sunday about twenty-five persons met at Charlotte to hear the Word. This is the second time this year that it has snowed on Saturday night before the appointment at that place.

The work seems to be starting offvery well and we do not intend to admit discouragements. Look out for good reports from Richland. Pastor.

Feb. 6.

A Gathering of People At The Parsonage.

Which parsonage? The parsonage of Mt. Hermon Circuit. When did it happen? Last Thursday night. What was the object of the gathering? It was to take the occupants of the parsonage something good to eat and to let them know that they are in the midst of a people who have a good will toward them. What were the good things taken to the parsonage? Apples, butter, a willow basket, corn in the ear, canned corn, coffee, chickens, flour, meat, sweet potatoes, mixed pickles, pepper, a pitcher containing preserves, sugar, 29 pounds, salt, soda, syrup, canned peaches and tomatoes. Among above mentioned articles was some dried apples pealed by Aunt Tempa Sharp, who is eighty-four years old and has been blind several years.

Before the people left we had some singing, a portion of scripture was read, followed by prayer, after which a short talk was made by the writer. To the abovenamed gifts, Brother Henry Nicholson added a load of good stove wood the next day. Thank you, Brother Nicholson, such comes in so nice this cold weather. This gathering was composed in the main of Bellemont people, however, there were other good people among them.

For such kindness I wish to say that Mrs. Lowdermilk joins the writer in expressing our heart-felt thanks to every giver for every gift bestowed upon us. We trust that in some way that we will be able to repay these good people while we make our stay in their midst. May the rich blessings of God ever attend them. E. G. Lowdermilk.

R. 7, Burlington, N. C., Feb. 5th, 1912.

Harmony.

The first quarterly conference was held at this church on Saturday, the 27th. Bro. Lamar preached at eleven o'clock, after which the business of the conference was transacted in the usual way. Mr. Hipp was elected secretary for the year.

Almost a third of pastor's salary for this year has been paid.

A move was made in conference to enclose the cemetery at this church which has been badly neglected for many years. A committee was appointed to solicit funds for this purpose.

Mr. Hipp was the only official present from Yarboro's Chapel. We were glad to have him with us, and hope he will come again and bring other of the officials with him.

Bro. Lamar filled his regular appointment on Sunday, delivering two practical discourses which were enjoyed by all those who attended the services for good.

We feel sure our pastor is doing some of his best work and we believe if the people co-operate with him there is no reason why this should not be one of the most sucessful year's work for our church.

Mr. J. C. Cluck, one of our members who lives quite a distance from the church, has been visiting relatives in the community and worshipped at Harmony last Sunday.

Mrs. Kate Reeves, one of our faithful ones, was not able to attend service last Sunday.

Mr. C. A. Moore, who has been in declining health for some time, has gone to Greenwood Hospital for treatment. We hope for him a speedy recovery. We missed him in our service last Sunday.

Several new members joined the Sunday school last Sunday. N. M. B.

Jan. 31, 1912.

E. G. Lowdermilk.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Bro. Lowdermilk failed to fill his appointment second Sunday in January on account of severe cold weather; he has not been able to fill near all of his appointments, yet he has not been idle. He has raised about $300 in cash and subscriptions since Conference, if I remember correctly, on the parsonage that was bought recently joining the church lot, and it is going to be very convenient for the pastor. Bro. Lowdermilk has managed well, has got the interior of the building plastered and beautifully finished. If I mstake not, the Ladies' Aid Society took it upon themselves to do the plastering I fell sure that we have a splendid bargain and I think that the Oak Ridge Circuit was exceedingly fortunate in securing that piece of property. When we get it repaired we will have a splendid house. The present parsonage not sold yet; any one desiring a home in a small town like Kernersville would do well to go and see the house and lot. I feel that we as a circuit should be very thankful that God has given us such an earnest worker as Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk and that we should appreciate the untiring efforts that he has put forth to build up the circuit. He not only works, but takes money out of his pocket and helps with that, too. It seems that even under unfavorable circumstances he never becomes discouraged, but goes right ahead and is always cheerful and lively. He seems always to be hopeful; the real worth of such a man would be hard to estimate. It seems to me that some of us are not worthy of so good a pastor.

The first quarterly conference convened with Sandy Ridge Church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January. Brother Lowdermilk gave us a short, but splendid, sermon. Then an intermission of thirty minutes, then reassembled to transact the business of the quarterly conference. It was done in a spirit of brotherly love. Each church was represented. Reports showed finances rather slim at some of the churches. Some good suggestions were offered by Prof. M. H. Holt, of Oak Ridge, and W. S. Linville, of Kernersville. The question was asked, What ought to be done with the church member that will not pay his assessment? It seems to be a hard problem to solve; one suggested that the pastor go and board it out. Another thought that if we had the stewards all together and had Miss Forrest to lecture to them it would help to solve the problem. I think that thorough conversion would help to solve it.

Success to the readers of the Herald.

J. H. Gordon.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Ct.

We are pleased to have Brother Hulin back to preach for us another year. We think he has done good and think he can do more. Hope there may be many souls gathered in this year.

He preached for us the third Sunday. Those who did not come missed a good sermon. I would be glad to see people take more interest. It seems to me that church members would think about going to meeting and they may think, but they don't come. Oh, may those that claim to be Christians get on a high plane of life. May we be alive to God and get to work. May we see something to do.

We have no Sunday school this winter, but hope we will have a good one when spring comes and hope our people will be interested enough to all come to preaching and Sunday school. I would be glad to hear from more of our churches on this circuit. Please let us hear from you.

I like to read the paper.

Lizzie Cranford.

ON HONOR ROLL.

Albemarle Church, of Stanly Circuit, is entitled to a place among the churches that are on the Honor Roll.

Littleton Circuit.

Dear Editor:

I arrived here for services the third Sunday in December. All appointments have been met except one, but few people were able to meet me at the churches. Cold weather, bad roads, have hindered much in the work this winter; however we are making some progress. The stewards have done very well so far, and the women who do not stop on account of the weather, have been very busy doing things that tell.

At my first appointment at Vaughn the cheerful workers' society handed me $61.61 to deposit in the Bank of Littleton, as a fund toward the building of a new church at that place. The Ladies' Aid Society, of Littleton, have put in some nice furnishing in the parsonage: cook stove, druggets, rugs, chairs, etc. But probably best of all, creating a present joy in our family, has been the kindness of the people who have remembered us with so many things for the table: sugar, coffee, butter, flour, canned fruit from the people of Littleton.

The people of Corinth have also been sending things too! Sugar, coffee, potatoes, butter, ham, flour, etc.

A nice ham from a brother at Vaughn that will fairly make you taste ham gravy when you think about it. Considering all things, we are hoping for a good year on Littleton Circuit. Dr. Swain will visit this work the 25th to 27th of the month as follows: Vaughn, 25th, at 7:30, P. M.; Weaver's Chapel, 26th, 3 P. M.; Littleton, 7:30 P. M.; Corinth, 27th, 11:00 A. M.; Hawkins' Chapel, 3 P. M.

We are beginning a campaign for new subscribers for the M. P. Herald. Miss Fannie Barnes, our efficient reporter from Corinth, has already secured several.

Littleton Circuit has suffered much because of certain actions by the Conference, but I think all these will soon be forgotten when spring opens. Pray for us. Yours in His name.

J. A. Ledbetter, Pastor.

Littleton Ct.

We held our first quarterly conference last Saturday. All the churches represented but one. Business transacted in a very satisfactory manner; members present were earnest and hopeful. There are so many encouraging things already that we have not the time to write about all them now. J.

Siler City Circuit.

The first quarterly conference met with the church at Piney Grove Saturday, February 3. It was one of the best attended conferences we have had in quite a while. After devotional exercises, led by the pastor, J. H. Bowman, the business of the conference was transacted. Bro. L. L. Wrenn was re-elected secretary. Advisory Committee elected as follows: O. A. Hanner, J. H. Siler, W. H. Andrews, G. E. Matthews, J. R. Siler.

Pastor's report was very hopeful and encouraging along all lines. Repair, painting, etc., to be done at some of the churches. Sunday schools report good attendance. All the churches have Sunday schools but two, and one of them, Piney Grove, has just gone into winter quarters; will begin again when the weather gets better.

The conference adjourned to meet next time with the church at Siler City. Best wishes for the Herald. G. E. M.

Siler City Circuit.

The first quarterly conference met at Piny Grove, February 3rd, 1912. The attendance was the best that has been since I have been on the circuit. The conference was unusually pleasant and, we believe, a profitable one. The reports were all encouraging and there seemed to be a desire on the part of the brethren to push forward to greater attainments. We hope to be able to do a good year's work and that much may be accomplished in the name of the Lord.

J. H. Bowman.

Hawkin's Chapel, Littleton Ct.

Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Ledbetter, met his appointment at this place on the second Sunday in January, but owing to the very rough weather very few people were at church that day. Really, we had no idea that the minister himself could get there as the roads were very slippery. We will not mind the weather next time, however. The faithful few who did attend speak very complimentarily of our new pastor.

While we regret the removal of our beloved Bro. Taylor to another charge, we will trust that God in His wisdom has given us another leader who will show us the way clearly, and meet every emergency as faithfully as our former pastor.

On Christmas day, there was an observance in a small way of a Christmas tree for the pleasure of the Sunday school children. While not so elaborate as we would have wished, it was heartily enjoyed, and all were well pleased with the arrangements. However, before the people had left the church, and just about sunset, the most shocking accident occurred at the home of our dear brother, Capt. Hawkins, nearby. His people were all at church except himself and wife and two small children, the youngest an infant about 16 months old. And while the mother was at the well, preparatory to getting supper, this little child caught fire from the stove and was burned to death. The terrified mother reached it too late to save even its clothing. Little Richard lived until four o'clock next morning, while every effort to save its life was in vain. Brother Hawkins was himself at the time in such serious ill health, that he was not told of the occurrence until the doctor arrived, but when informed, he bore it with fortitude befitting a true Christian. Christians everywhere are asked to pray for this distressed family.

During the holidays two marriages have taken place in our community. On the 5th Sunday in December Mr. Thomas Smith and Mrs. Mary Collier, an aged couple, were married at the home of the bride, and on Jan. 14th, Mr. Waverly Pepper and Miss Carrie Brooks were united in marriage. We wish for each couple a happy voyage on the sea of life.

The writer returned home from a pleasant trip to Rocky Mount, on Friday, last, accompanied by her sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gaither, who will visit relatives in this vicinity for a while Vannah Shearin, Reporter.

Caroleen Circuit.

We will give our Sunday school attendance: on January 14th, 45; on the 21st, 117; on the 28th, 110. Our number on roll is 135. Bro. Braswell gave a circuit banner to the school that made the best increase and average attendance for the last year and we got it at Caroleen. It is a nice one. We want to keep it next year, as it will go the same way next year. H. E. Waldrop.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.

The first quarterly conference met with this church last Saturday. All the churches represented but two. Our pastor says it was the largest crowd he has ever had at conference since he has been on this charge. So I presume we are growing better. All the business transacted harmoniously. Next conference to be held at Siler City.

Bro. Bowman preached one among his best sermons Sunday at eleven o'clock to a small, but attentive, congregation. I suppose 'most every one think, "We have the best pastor," anyway, we are all satisfied.

We intend painting our church between this and spring. J. A. Cooper has been appointed to collect money to buy the paint; he already has a nice sum pledged, and has hardly made a start yet. We thank Bro. Bowman for his nice contribution.

Mrs. Frank Smith is able to sit up some after an illness of several weeks.

Our pastor has appointed Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. W. B. Cooper, and Mrs. J. A. Cooper, at this place, to look after the orphanage interests. This is a great work and we should do all we can for this cause.

We have had some really cold, bad weather for the past six weeks, but our good pastor has not missed one single appointment at this place. I wonder if all pastors are that faithful.

I close with many good wishes to the Editor and all the Herald readers.

Mrs. J. A. C., Reporter.

Feb. 5, 1912.

Thomasville Station.

There was not a very large congregation at church either service on account of the severe weather. Brother Suits preached two fine sermons Sunday and Sunday night. We had communion at the 11 o'clock service. The teachers' training class which was to have met last Sunday was postponed on account of the bad weather. The books have arrived and the class is ready to go to work. They will have their first lesson next Sunday.

We are sorry to note that one of our near neighbor's children have been sick and that the family have been deprived of the privilege of going to church. However, we are very glad to say that he is improving rapidly.

Mrs. Laura Dickens.

BRO. BROWN EXPLAINS CAPITALISM.

Dear Brother McCulloch:

I notice in the Herald under date of January 18, that you ask for the information in regard to the socialist cry against capitalism. I take pleasure in explaining to you what I understand it to mean. It means the man or the company of men who rob the laboring men, women and children out of what they justly earn. Suppose I hire you to work for me when you can't get work anywhere else and are in need of food and clothing, and I pay you one dollar per day, and you earn for me two dollars, but I keep the extra dollar that you earned. Brother, I'm a robber in the sight of man and God, but the Wall street capitalists own the president and law-making bodies, and so it's all right to rob the poor of their labor, because the rich must be made richer and the laboring man may have just enough to live on provided he keeps still and don't groan too loud. Brother, I believe you wish the Herald to advocate following the truth. You say that some of the men that advocate socialism are among the sorriest specimens of mankind, and that men who won't work seem naturally to fall in with the socialist party. Why should this make you cautious? If you will only take the trouble to look around, you will find all the characters you have mentioned as being in the socialist party, in the Democratic party and in the Republican party, and in all political parties that have ever been known. My brother, we can find them or their names on the church register of the M. P. Church. The god of greed and the love of money is what is sapping the life out of the church. We laymen should be paying our earnings to the support of the Gospel instead of letting the idle rich rob us and the Gospel. You may say, how do they rob you? In every way. When we want to sell our cotton, we have to take what the capitalists say it is worth, and when we want to buy cloth, we pay what the capitalists say. The capitalists are the government's favorite moneyed men. They never work, they don't even look at the cotton, but they have it figured out how much to pay the producer and what it will cost him to hire men to handle the cotton for him and what to sell the finished product for in order to make fifty or one hundred per cent. clear profit, and all the other farm products are handled in the same way. This is Capitalism robbing labor. Now, brother, I trust that this will give you at least an idea of what capitalism is and that you will publish it for the benefit of those who saw your request in the Herald.

Yours for the cause of the Master,

J. M. Brown.

The editor thanks Bro. Brown for his exposition of "capitalism." We see the evil in the things referred to by Bro. Brown. But how are these evils to be ended? Shall we cut down all the corn in order that we may destroy the weeds? Shall we root up the wheat and the tares together? Bad men will do wrong under any system that can be devised. The world is much better than it is pictured by many writers on Socialism. Many of them leave God out of consideration. most of them, I believe, magnify the importance of material possessions and minify the value of spiritual acquisitions. How different their teaching from that of Christ who urged men to seek most earnestly the kingdom of God and His righteousness and take no anxious thought about food and clothing. God rules the world—not Wall Street. It is true that gamblers and speculators may influence markets to some extent, but not, we think, to the degree imagined by Bro. Brown. People ought to put an end to gambling and to all practices by which men defraud their fellowmen; but it is a very difficult thing to do. Under Socialism the same class of men would find ways to cheat their fellowmen. The only sure remedy is to convert the men who engage in such practices to honest and honorable manhood. When Christ and the Socialists separate, we prefer to go with Christ. We believe that He is wise and good. Socialists write as though the distribution of wealth were the great problem. Christ did not so treat it. When a man came to Him saying, "Teacher, bid my brother divide the inheritance with me," Jesus replied: "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" Turning to the congregation about Him, Jesus said: "Take heed, and keep yourselves from all covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." He then told the story of a rich farmer and drew the moral and went on to speak much that the discontented of our day would do well to heed. See Luke, chapter 12. There are today many violators of the 8th commandment (Thou shalt not steal), but what a multitude are violating the 10th (Thou shalt not covet)!

But forgetting higher things for the moment, the production of wealth is quite as important as the distribution of it. Suppose the State should confiscate your farm, Bro. Brown, and take all you produce except what is necessary for your own support, do you think you would work as hard as you do now, unless you had a task-master over you to compel you to work? And if you had a task-master, would you enjoy work as well? And would not more have to be produced to support the task-master?

—We congratulate our Christian brethren on the completion of the task of raising $50,000 to pay the debt incurred in building needed buildings at Elon College. President Moffitt began the canvass, and President Harper has completed it by a vigorous effort of a few months. The college will now feel freer to go forward hopefully with the good work for which it exists.

—We were pleased to have a call this morning from two Brown Summit ladies —Miss Hopkins and Mrs. Lomax.

—Miss Myrtle Blaylock, daughter of Bro. S. G. Blaylock, was this week married to Dr. Spicer Granger, of Goldsboro.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson's report of the Washington meeting in which he represented our Conference appeared last week. Look it up, if you overlooked it. It is encouraging in that it shows something of the strength of the forces against rum. At the same time it reveals something of the greatness of the obstacles.

THE NEW "UNIVERSITY" CAR LINE

It has been a long, hard fight, but we have won.

This is the way of it. For fifteen years, ever since the Kansas City University was established, we have been trying to have the street railway system of the two Kansas Cities extended out to the institution. Every effort, however, has been of no avail until recently. It is true we have had the benefit of the inter-urban electric line running from Kansas City to Leavenworth, but these cars pass the University only hourly, and it takes two car fares to go to Kansas City, Mo.

But today, Febuary 1st, 1912, is a red-letter day in our history. We are celebrating the completion of the Metropolitan Railway system to the University campus, and the inauguration of cars that run every ten minutes from the University to Kansas City, Mo., connecting with lines to all parts of both Kansas cities for one five-cent fare.

Our friends at a distance can have no idea how much this means to us.

In the first place, it means more students. Our transportation facilities, heretofore, have been so meagre that students have found difficulty in reaching us—especially from the more distant parts of the Missouri city. Then, too, the fare has been double that which is required to reach points touched by the Metropolitan system. These difficulties have lost to us several students who actually began work with us, but found the obstacles in the way of reaching us too great.

In the second place, it means a rapid increase of population in the vicinity of the University. Everybody knows that the people in cities follow the street railways. Quick and direct transportation facilities will build up a suburb more readily than anything else. The university neighborhood now has the best street railway facilities of any suburb in the two Kansas cities.

In the third place, it will financially mean much to the University. The new line passes near much of the University property. This is sure to enhance its value. It is difficult to say how much we may profit in this way from the new car line. Undoubtedly it will immensely be to our advantage in the way of increased property values.

But, in the next place, it will be the greatest thing in the way of advertising the institution that has ever happened to us. And thereby hangs a story. When the new line was promised, we at once endeavored to have it named the "University" line. The car line of which this is an extension, was known previously as the "Chelsea" line. A number of people wanted to keep the old name. We appealed to the City Commissioners to pass an ordinance, requiring the line to be known as the "University' line. They referred us to President Eagan, of the Metropolitan Railway system. Mr. Eagan referred us back to the Commissioners, saying he did not want to take the responsibility of making the change.

This morning, while we were celebrating the opening of the new road with appropriate exercises in the University chapel, Professor Stotler and Mr. C. H. Chapin appeared before the Commissioners of Kansas City, Kansas, and delivered to them the message from President Eagan. The Commissioners promptly took the bull by the horns and passed an ordinance declaring that hereafter the cars on this line should be labelled "University," and the line be known as "The University Line."

This is the longest car line, I believe, in the two cities. It runs from the extreme western limit of Kansas City, Kansas, to the extreme south-eastern limit of Kansas City, Mo. The round trip is twenty-five miles. Think of what it means to us to have cars every ten minutes, advertising the existence and location of the University over this long route through both cities.

Our friends have sometimes complained to us that when they inquired about the location of the University—especially in the Missouri city,—they have often been met with the reply that there was no such institution. This ignorance can no longer continue. In a month from now, thousands of people will know about the University, who scarcely have heard of it before.

There is still one more benefit that the new line will be to us. It is a long story, and I can not give it in full now. I will just give the skeleton of it. A few months ago, a movement was started in Kansas City, Mo., to establish a university on the Missouri side. The movement was started by a Medical College, which is a rival of the Medical College affiliated with us. They proposed to call the new institution, "The Kansas City University of Kansas City, Mo.," thus practically stealing our name from us. When the movement became public, we invited the Medical College that started it, to become affiliated with us and help to build up one great university for a "Greater Kansas City," instead of duplicating expense by building up two rival universities in what is really but one community. The rivalry between the two medical colleges was too great, however, and our invitation was not accepted. But we did not propose to be deprived of the goal toward which we have been working for fifteen years, in this way. We quietly went to work and took out a charter in the State of Missouri for an institution, to be known as "The Kansas City University, of Kansas City, Mo." Our plan is, and always has been, to build up a university that shall meet the educational needs of both cities. Our institution on the Kansas side of the State line we have anticipated would sometime become the collegiate or academic department of a great university, that would have its other departments scattered through both cities.

Well, the name of the new car line will go a long way toward spiking the guns of those who have contemplated starting a new university in Kansas City, Mo. It would be poor encouragement to such an enterprise to consider that the only car line that bore the title "University" directed attention to an institution on the Kansas side. And they would not be able to have the name of this line changed, because they would have to appeal to City Commissioners, of Kansas City, Kansas, to have the change made.

From all these considerations you can see why this has been a day of great rejoicing for us. We simply had to suspend our regular work to give opportunity for the effervescing enthusiasm to escape. We had a number of addresses in the University chapel before noon, from students and citizens, and then all took a free ride over the twenty-five miles of "The University Line," in cars gaily decorated with the University colors of purple and gold. The staid citizens of Kansas City, Mo., were surprised to see the brightly festooned cars, filled with yelling collegians, passing through their streets. Professor H. T. Stephens had prepared some catching college songs, appropriate to the occasion. The students sang them with a zest that kindled enthusiasm in the few gray-headed and bald-headed, elderly men and women that participated in the trip.

It was a great day, and will not soon be forgotten!

D. S. Stephens.

—Post office inspectors were busy last year and did much to put the schemers and fraudulent operators out of business. Promoters and schemers who had used the mails to filch $77,000,000 out of a gullible public were estopped, and many of them put away. During the year 529 individuals were charged with using the mails fraudulently. Of this number 196 were tried and 184 convicted. During the year 429 post office burglars were arrested—post masters, postal clerks, city and rural carriers, and railway clerks. All of which indicates that though many are busy violating law, others are equally busy enforcing it.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Martha A. Gordon was born June the second, 1825, and died January 17th, 1912, at the age of 86 years, 7 months and 15 days.

She was married in the winter of 1852 to Rev. John Gordon, of the Methodist Protestant ministry. They lived happily together for more than ten years when, on August 23rd, 1862, he died of typhoid fever. This was during the troublous times of the Civil War—a time that "tried men's souls," and that tried the souls of women even more than the souls of men. When he saw that he could not live he said to his wife who was grief stricken, "The Lord will take care of you and the children—the Psalmaist declares I was young, now I am old, yet have I never seen the rigteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

To them had been born five children, three of whom are still living, viz.: Chas. Wesley Gordon, of Mullins, S. C.; Nereus W. Gordon, of Stokesdale, N. C.; Mrs. James Angel, of Price, Va. Mrs. A. R. Morgan, who died July 23rd, 1883, and "little Jimmie," who died in infancy.

Sister Gordon was converted in childhood and joined Bethel M. P. Church, of which she was a life long member. She was one of the most faithful church members and one of the most consecrated Christians I have ever known. I do not suppose that she ever for one moment doubted Jesus Christ, and she trusted Him implicitly as her personal Saviour. For some years she had not been able to attend church. Prior to that time she was a regular attendant and when called upon would lead the congregation in prayer and her voice was sometimes heard in praise to God. She was one of the old-fashioned shouting Methodists—she enjoyed the "old time religion" and there has never and never will be a better kind of religion. She loved her church with a devotion that was only surpassed by her devotion to the Master. She relied upon the promises of God and in her case the comforting declaration of her dying husband was fulfilled She was never forsaken of the Lord, neither have her children ever had to beg bread. The devotion of her children in her last days was beautiful. Her son came from S. C. and her daughter from Virginia, to be with her.

She died at the home of Brother N. W. Gordon (at the old Gordon place) with whom she had made her home for many years. I think no man was ever truer, kinder and more faithful to an aged mother that Brother Gordon was to her. Sister Gordon was a remarkably good woman. She was a good neighbor, always ready to help; sympathetic in time of sickness and trouble. She had the love and confidence of all who knew her. Not only did her children "rise up and call her blessed," but all who knew her joined with them in calling her blessed.

Her funeral was preached in Bethel Church by the writer from 2 Timothy 1: 5, in the presence of a large number of friend and relatives, and her body was laid to rest by the side of her husband from whom she had been parted for so many years.

How happy she must be in the Father's house of many mansions where she no doubt found more of those whom she had known and loved than she left behind in this world. I believe that in heaven we shall see more sweet faced mothers than of any other class of people save of the little children.

May we all meet them there.

W. F. Kennet, Pastor.

Stokesdale, N. C., Feb. 6, 1912.

Mrs. Judie Phelps, wife of Joshua B. Phelps, deceased, passed away on Saturday morning, February 3 d, 1912.

Sister Phelps was 64 years old. Her health had been failing for about three years. During that time she received three strokes of paralysis. The third stroke came about two weeks ago, and was so severe as to render her speechless and helpless, and to make it impossible for her to take food or drink.

Sister Phelps joined the M. P. Church at Rehoboth, Albemarle Circuit, twenty-five years ago, and retained her membership there until she died.

Her body was laid to rest in the family graveyard near Beasley Station, on Sunday afternoon, last.

Of her near relatives, one sister only is left to mourn her loss. May God comfort and sustain her sister, Mrs. Lucas, in this hour of bereavement. Pastor.

Birthday.

Mr. William Carter celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday dinner February 1, 1912, at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Sue Carter, at the M. P. Parsonage in Weaverville. The affair was very enjoyable.

Among the guests were Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Fogleman, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Webster, Mrs. Smathers, Mrs. Kincaid and Mrs. Phillips.

The meeting was very pleasant; but the most pleasant time was when they entered the dining room. The table was very prettily arranged with fruits in the center.

Every one seemed to have a real good appetite for the good things among which was chicken, ham, beef, peafowl, celery, prunes, cranberries, jellies, preserves, pickles, pies, custards and cakes.

The waiters were Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Phillips, Misses Hattie Roberts, Thelma and Pauline Smathers.

After every one had eaten to their appetite's content, they spent the rest of the afternoon in a jolly good time.

This will be long remembered by all, even by the aged man, Mr. Carter, who seemed to be so happy.

A Friend.

Weaverville, N. C., Feb. 6, 1912.

WESTERN MARYLAND LETTER.

Although we have not been heard from through the Herald for some time, the North Carolina delegation is still doing things. A meeting of the N. C. Club was called some time ago and a pleasant social hour was spent. By means of these social hours we learn to know each other better.

A splendid addition to the N. C. delegation this year is Mr. R. A. Swearingen, who graduated at Lenoir College, Hickory, N. C., last year. Mr. Swearingen is a man who "does" things and gives promise of a successful career. Mrs. Swearingen and the six boys are with him here in Westminster.

We are very glad to say that Dr. Forlines, who was quite ill last week, seems to be better now. He was able to meet some of his classes in his home today.

"Have you had a kindness shown? Pass it on." I was so lifted up by the thought of the poem to which Bro. Hicks referred in last week's Herald that I looked it up and read it and re-read it. Before many more days go by, I expect to commit it to memory. I wonder if there are not a number of people in N. C. who would like to store the mind with such a good motto? I suggest that as many of our people as have the poem memorize it and those who do not have it, get it and do likewise. It can befound in a book of Longfellow's Poems and is entitled Excelsior. Perhaps our young people would enjoy memorizing if they would form the habit. The writer tries to memorize a new poem or prose story every few weeks and gets a great deal of pleasure out of it.

Whether the N. C. students here take first rank in scholarship or not, they do get into all kinds of innocent sports, whether it is a game of tennis, "Jenkins up," or what ever else is played for pastime, the North Carolinians are always to be found on hand.

It is useless for us to say that we are always glad to get the Herald. The reports from the different fields read like a letter from home. J. E. Pritchard.

AN EDUCATIONAL TEST.

A lecturer at the University Club in Chicago recently handed out one hundred typewritten sheets to as many men in the audience. On each of these sheets were twenty questions and the lecturer told his auditors that if they could answer all of these they could be considered educated. Otherwise he declared that they ought to go back and take a post graduate course.

The questions were:

1. Name the vice president of the United States.
2. Name the treasurer of the United States.
3. Name the conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra.
4. Name the leader of Tammany Hall.
5. Name your congressman.
6. Who is Hugo Munsterburg?
7. Who was Sir Christopher Wren?
8. Who is Ali Baba?
9. What is the Pentateuch?
10. What is seismograph?
11. What is a clevis?
12. How man justices are there on the bench of the supreme court of the United States?
13. Name five of them.
14. Who said "The child is father of the man?"
15. Who said "The groves were God's first temples?"
16. Who said "Once more unto the breach, dear friend, once more?"
17. Who was Mommsen?
18. Who is president of the Lake Shore railroad?
19. What is the fourth city in size in the United States?
20. What is a preposition?

It's anticipation that renders the actual possession most enjoyable.—American.

Honesty is a good thing, not because it may insure one a berth in the skies, but because it insures a better chance of success in today's business.—Caxton.

INFLUENCE OF BAD BOOKS.

We forbid the salve of opium, but allow an unrestricted trade in blood-curdling outlaw stories, in which the law nearly always is depicted as an oppressive institution to be defied or evaded, and where those who break the law are extolled as heroes. In a recent bank robbery the president and cashier were shot down, and the youthful robber, unable to escape, committed suicide. His companion of fifteen years related how the dead young robber never was without a robber story, and that "Tracy the Bandit" was his idol. The same enthusiasm diverted into a more worthy channel might have made a hero out of him who now fills a felon's grave.

Many parents who would be horrified to see their boys associate at all with persons of low character allow them to associate with such characters under the cover of books. Parents forget that from the perverted admiration of such heroes to the emulation of their deeds is but a step. Since so many parents neglect the supervision of their children in this respect, and the public is the sufferer in the end, it devolves upon society as a matter of self-protection to suppress the sale of such pernicious literature. It seems inconsistent to hang a body of men for preaching anarchy to adults who are supposed to know better, and, on the other hand, to allow the broadest dissemination of similar ideas stupefying the moral perception of our youth. It is a noteworthy fact that most of the murders, highway robberies and other atrocious crimes the relating which fills the newspapers are committed by persons of youth and vigor.—Chicago News.

SHE LEFT HER FEET BEHIND.

A good old Scotch minister, calling unexpectedly on a widow who lives in a cottage on the outskirts of the village, surprised her in the midst of washing a lot of clothes hurriedly hid behind a clotheshorse and told her little boy to say that she was out.

The visitor knocked at the door. "Well, Jamie," he said, "and where is your mother?" "My mother's not in; she's down street on a message," promptly replied the lad.

Indeed," replied the minister, with a glance at the bottom of the screen. "Well tell her I called, and say that the next time she goes down to the village she should take her feet with her." —Ladies' Home Journal.

The governor of Maine was at the school and was telling the pupils what the people of different states were called.

"Now," he said, "the people from Indiana are called Hoosiers; the people from North Carolina 'Tar Heels;' the people from Michigan we know as 'Michiganders.' Now, what little boy or girl can tell me what the people of Maine are called?"

"I know," said a little girl.

"Well, what are we called?" asked the governor.

"Maniacs."—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

—Bro. S. V. Pickens writes from St. Petersburg, Florida: "It is verm warm here." We can hardly imagine that. Bro. Pickens. We've been saying here that it is "very cold." Bro. Pickens has been fishing in the Gulf.

PRAYER ASKED.

Dear Herald Readers:

Although I have not been for the last year in communication with the dear M. P.'s, I have not forgotten them. I have been attending the M. E. Church and like it fairly well. I do enjoy reading the Herald, and would like to see something in it from my old home church, Union Grove, Gastonia, N. C. My mother is very ill. I ask all of you to pray for her recovery. Rosa Stacy.

Dennis.

Mrs. Ruth Dennis was born July 27, 1855; departed this life at the home of her daughter on Wednesday, Jan. 17, 1912, age, 56 years, 5 months, and twenty days; was converted and joined the M. P. Church at Mt. Zion at the age of 16 years. She often spoke of her conversion and of the sermon and prayer Rev. George Hunt was offering up when she received the blessed Saviour.

On the night of November 3rd she suffered a stroke of paralysis and gradually grew worse until the last week of life when she couldn't speak a word nor swallow scarcely anything, so just weakened away till the end came. For some time she seemed to realize that she could not get well and often talked to the little grand children in the home telling them to be good and she wanted to live to see her youngest son, Cletis, whom she had not seen since he had enlisted in the Navy 'most two years ago. She never ceased to grieve over his being away from her, and it was so sad he couldn't come or attend her funeral as he was out at sea and couldn't get there. Besides this son and seven grand children, she leaves another son, Dr. G. E. Dennis, of Charlotte; one daughter, Mrs. J. W. Boyles, of Thomasville, and her husband, Mr. W. C. Dennis. All were with her and did all that loving hands could do during the last days of her life. One great consolation her loved ones had when they knew that earthly help had failed was to know the good Lord was with her and would go with her down through the dark valley and shadow of death.

For a few days before she died her daughter saw she was failing fast and asked, "Mama, do you feel the Lord is with you now and taking care of you?" In answer she could only nod her head and smile. So they gave her up to God, who doeth all things well, and in whom she had believed and for forty years had "Simply trusted every day,

Trusted through a stormy way,
Singing if her way was clear,
Praying when her path was drear;
When in trouble, on Him she'd call."

Yes, she trusted Him till life was past and safe within the jasper wall.

She was carried to Pinnacle, her home, and buried in the cemetery by the church she loved so well.

REV. DAVID F. JONES.

Our First Missionary to Japan.

Doubtless many would like to have further news about Bro. D. F. Jones since he left our mission. In passing through Shanghai, I had the opportunity of meeting Dr. Hykes of the American Bible Society, in whose employ Bro. Jones worked while he was in China.

According to Dr. Hykes, Bro. Jones, because of his funny cockney dialect, could never get the pronunciation of the difficult Chinese sounds. But in China there are so many dialects that the Chinese themselves find it difficult to understand one another. One time when I was in the mixed court of Shanghai, the judge, who was a Chinaman, had no less than five Chinese interpreters from different parts of China to explain to him what the Chinese witnesses were saying. As Bro. Jones was rather swarthy complexioned, his dialect did not matter very much, because if the Chinese did not understand what he said, they said he was a Ningpo man, meaning that he had come from a place where the dialect is unspeakable. Nevertheless, Bro. Jones was the best colporteur in all China and actually sold more Bibles than anybody else. In China as in Japan, he was an indefatigable worker, busy day and night.

Herald readers have read how Sister Jones got sick in China and had to return to America for her health. She did not improve much, but at last she felt that she must go to her husband. She was very poorly, but she set out on her long journey by sea never to return. She got worse on the voyage and arrived in Shanghai only to find her husband absent, and there, in a few days, her brave and consecrated life went out from earthly pain to heavenly glory.

The next chapter is not so pleasant. Bro. Jones was far out in the country when his wife died, and he did not know of her death until three weeks after her burial.

Now come in a peculiar religious phase of the situation. It was known at Shanghai that Bro. Jones had allied himself with the Plymouth Brethren, whose chief tenet was that they were the only ones elected to be saved and all the rest would be lost. Bro. and Sister Jones lived in the house of a man named Evans, who, in the absence of Bro. Jones, tried to arrange for the funeral. In the city of Shanghai lived a Plymouth Brother. Mr. Evans went to this brother and asked him to conduct the funeral services. But he said Sister Jones did not belong to the elect and, therefore, he could not conscientiously do it. However, at the hands of other Christians of Shanghai the tempest tossed and weary body was laid away in its final resting-place.

The next chapter, too, has its sad side. Whatever else Bro. Jones could, or could not do, Mr. Hykes knew he could sell Bibles and desired to keep him at it. Bro. Jones wanted to resign; but Dr. Hykes, on the plea that he could not spare him, kept him on for a year. The next year this episode was repeated, and the third year it was repeated again. Then it was that the Plymouth Brethren began to insist that if Bro. Jones continued to work for that ungodly Bible house, he would lose his own soul. Bro. Jones, with all his zeal and energy, is at heart one of the most simple hearted of men; and, believing their story, he resigned in earnest and burned the bridges behind him. Mr. Hykes had warned him that he would not find the Brethren quite perfect saints, and so it proved. When Bro. Jones got among them, he found they were engaged in a warfare not only against the rest of the world, but especially against one another. Bro. Jones is one of the meekest of men and, of course, could not, and would not, fight. In less than three months the situation became unbearable and he left and returned to America.

A little more than a year ago I had the pleasure of meeting him at San Francisco, where he is engaged in sweeping and cleaning one of the docks. In addition to this, he has charge of some sort of religious organization. I judge it is somewhat peculiar because he was afraid to have me address it, lest I should say omsething which the brethren would think unorthodox.

There is some talk of trying to get him to come back to either China or Japan and engage in the colporteur work. In either field there are unlimited opportunities to exercise his special talent.

He is married again, having married his first wife's younger sister. He has a nice little home on Wisconsin Street. I visited his daughter also in her home. His son Alexander has grown into a fine Christian young man. Whatever the peculiarities of the religion of Bro. Jones, no one has ever questioneed his conscientiousness or the sterling worth of his character.—A. D. Woodworth in Herald of Gospel Liberty.

—By the use of typhoid fever serum the United States Army is being rendered immune to typhoid fever, there haveing been only 39 cases during the year 1911 among 45,000 regular troops. Army officers believe that the ravages of typhoid may be easily reduced throughout the entire country by at least 75 per cent. if the serum is used.

NOTICE!

Minutes have all been sold and I have a few orders that I cannot supply. It may be that some persons have received more copies than they have been able to dispose of. If so, I hope it may be made known through the Herald, so that those who want minutes may be able to get them.

There are some ommissions from the minutes and errors too, that I regret. The report of the Conference Steward is omitted, also the address of Bro. Reed. The name of Bro. Millaway is omitted in the recapitulation of the ministers elected to the General Conference. His name appears, though, in the record above. I was very careful that nothing be left out and that everything be accurately reported. These omissions and errors have not occurred for the lack of carefulness, but in spite of it. S. W. Taylor.

Feb. 1, 1912.

—"Billy" Sunday, once a base ball player of national reputation, and converted while playing on a League, but now one of the world's greatest evangelists, has recently closed a series of meetings in Wichita, Kansas, from which 3,500 members were added to the various churches of that city.

—Shall this country be Christianized or Buddhaized? The conflict is already on. There are already thirteen Buddhist temples in California alone and Buddhist priests and propagandists are exceedingly active and energetic in their effort to establish their religion in this country.

—Rev. Mark A. Matthews, D. D., in a pastorate of ten years has seen the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, Wash., increase from a membership of 431 to 4,576, which church is now said to have the largest membership of any Presbyterian church in the world.

Kind Lady—"Base impostor! The idea of you, a bald-headed man, trying to tell me you were once a celebrated pianist. Why don't you know all great pianists are noted for their long hair?"

Rambling Robert—"Ah, yes, madam. But you see I was so popular that the ladies took my hair away, lock by lock, until now there is nothing left."—Musical Messenger.

'Tis not the lip nor eye we beauty call,
But the joint force and full result of all.
—Pope.

Pleasure that comes unlooked for is thrice welcome.—Rogers.

'Tis what I love, determines how I love.—George Eliot.

THE TEACHER PROBLEM.

By Charles A. Hines.

Superintendents everywhere will tell you that their greatest difficulty is getting enough able, energetic and enthusiastic teachers. It will probably be so in most schools for years to come. No one can deny that the position of teacher is the most arduous and trying of any in the school. It is no easy matter to provide entertainment and mental food for half an hour in a class of ten to fifty people of varying tastes and opinions. No Sunday school will ever attain the ideal in a set of teachers; the hope lies in moving somewhat nearer the ideal.

The first remedy I wish to suggest is the establishment of a teacher training class in the school. This class should be organized by the superintendent, who should not call for volunteers to join the class but pick out ten people that he thinks have in them the requisites of good teachers. Do not take those at present teaching unless you can have the teacher training class meeting at a different hour from the school. Let this class go on with its work until the course is completed. Out of the ten the superintendent should be able to get two or three who will agree to become teachers permanently in the school. It will then be time to suggest to other teachers taking the course and give the places of the less successful teachers to those who have taken the course and found to be worthy.

The second suggestion is to furnish the teacher with better working tools. In country schools there is usually no accessible library for Sunday school teachers and in towns and cities it may not be convenient for the teachers to attend the libraries. The school at least owes to teachers to provide with some of the many commentaries and teacher's monthlies that are published. Our own publishing house gets out a very valuable teachers' monthly. The David C. Cook Pub. Company, Elgin, Ill., has a fine line of teachers' monthlies for all grades. Do not give the teacher of the Beginners' department Peloubet's notes, but get helps especially designed for that department.

The next thing I would insist upon is probably as important as any other; that is, do not change teachers every year. If a teacher is making even a moderate degree of success let him keep the class until you are positive you have a better man. It is the duty of the superintendent to know at all times how each class is progressing and he ought to be able by the exercise of a little oversight to learn this. Frequently enquire of pupils how they like a teachers, and if so, why they like him. Tell other teachers of the things that attract.

Finally, seek to devolop the class spirit. Let the member and teacher feel it is their class. Let the teacher who starts in with a class of beginners carry that particular class on for years. Change literature when the occasion demands, but do not change teachers unless there is a good reason. Many a class has been ruined because a teacher the pupils loved was taken away from that class and some one of different temperament was substituted.

Encourage regularity of attendance among teachers. Require teachers to notify the superintendent when they are to be absent. This discourages irregular attendance. Have the teachers frequently entertain their classes. Insist that the teacher know the every-day life of the pupils, their homes, their conditions, their hopes and ambitions. Especially is this necessary among the boys and girls in their "teens."

NOTES ON THE C. E. TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 18.

Subject: "Yes" and "No;" When to Say Them. Psalms 57: 1-11. (Led by Lookout Committee).

When the "Sweet Singer of Israel" composed the chapter that forms the lesson he had in mind both life's temptations and the way of escape. We are told that he was a man of unusual conscientiousness. He never committed a sin but what he afterwards suffered untold hours of remorse. It is a higher trait of Christian character to realize one's sins and regret them than it is to go on in stolid indifference to our faults and shortcomings.

Both "Yes" and "No" are small words, but great questions have been decided by the use of them. Wars have been averted or hastened by them. Great moral questions and little matters of every day life are decided by them. Lives have been set on the upward way by the resolution expressed in one of the words or turned into the other way that is led by despair by the failure to say Yes or No at the right time

In our legislative bodies speeches upon speeches are made for or against a new law correcting some evil in our civic relations, but it is ever the final "Aye" or "Nay" that decides whether or not the bill shall become a law.

It is "Yes" or "No" that decides when you are asked to help in the work of the Society, the Sunday school or the church. Small words indeed. but so much depends upon them. If you say yes you may help the pastor, the superintendent and the cause of the Master. Say no and the cause will lack your support, however small, and to that extent both you and the work of Christ will be losers.

Study to learn the words and when to use them; then have the courage to use them. Samuel, Daniel, Christ and many others used them under more trying circumstances than yours.

Short Addresses for the Young Members.

1. To find in Christ, the swordless founder of a mightier empire than those wonder compelling creations of Alexander, Caesar, and Charlemagne, may lend inspiration to an orator or historian to embellish a peroration or a page, but this discovery will never enable the world to contemplate the future with such tranquil assurance nor to approach Jordan's chill tides with such fearlessness as to find in him one who receiveth sinners, who is full of mercy and love and is intercessor and a Savior.

2. Finding Jesus to be Christ changes our lives through recognition of new and imperial relationships we sustain to him. He is our King and we must obey him rather than ourselves or all others; our judge, and his favor means more than man's; our Resurrection, and, if we wear immortelle, he bestows the wreath; our Glory, and if our eternity be among the blest hosts of heaven rather than amidst lurid destruction from the presence of God and the angels, it is through the disciples of his word. Therefore in all things we give him pre-eminence and bring our lives into conformity to his will.

3. Most Christians are so poorly educated on the subject of giving that the dollars they contribute assume twice their size. If he has given five dollars in dimes and quarters without keeping account of the amount, he is quite likely to believe that he has given ten.

M. "No" when tempted, Matt. 4:1-11.

T. "Yes," when God speaks, 1 Sam. 3: 2:10.

W. The hardest "no," Matt. 16:24-26.

T.The hardest "yes," Matt. 26:37-42.

F. The loudest "no," Tit. 1: 15, 16.

S. Peter's "no" and "yes," Acts 10: 14, 34, 47.

S. Topic.

Topical Analysis.

1. Say "No," when—
Satan asks you to do nothing.
Asked to kick about everything.
The Devil asks you to stay at home.

11. Say "Yes" when—
Christ asks you to believe and obey.
You hear the invitation.
You receive the vision of service.
Christ says into all the World.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

2:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:25 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.
WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

3. Examples of wrong: when—
Judas said "no" at Jesus' trial.
Felix said "no" to Paul.
Adam and Eve when they said "Yes" to the serpent.

4. Examples of Right: when—
Jailer said yes to Paul at midnight.
Samuel's yes to the Master's call.
Moses' "no" to the Egyptian throne.

5. Are You Saying "Yes" when—
Christ calls you to service.
The society calls upon you to work.

NORTH CAROLINA CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE.

The following gentlemen make up the North Carolina Child Labor Committee:

Chas. B. Aycock, Raleigh; J. W. Bailey, Raleigh; Jos. Blount Cheshire, Raleigh; Robert F. Campbell, Asheville; J. J. Hall, Fayetteville; Thos. J. Jarvis, Greenville; Julian S. Carr, Jr., Durham; Henry A. Page, Aberdeen; William L. Poteat, Wake Forest; Hubert A. Royster, Raleigh; A. M. Scales, Greensboro; W. E. Stone, Raleigh; R. T. Vann, Raleigh; Heriot Clarkson, Charlotte; Julius I. Foust, Greensboro; Robert Strange, Wilmington.

These names, within themselves, give assurance that the Committee is engaged in work that is not only good, but needful. It may be well, however, to explain to the State at large just what this Committee feels should be done.

The Committee is a sort of self-constituted guardian of the childhood of the State. There are defects in the present child labor law which permit the employment in factories of children at ages when they should be either in school or out in the open air, and which also permits the employment of children at night. The North Carolina Child Labor Committee believes that the time has come when the State should say that her innocent children should not be employed at work which will be hurtful on the one hand to their physical growth and which will prevent their mental and spiritual development on the other; and especially that children should not be made or allowed to work during the night hours at the very time that nature has provided for their rest and growth.

The ChildI abor Committee further believes that in addition to placing upon the statute books the proper sort of laws for the protection of children, machinery should be created for the inspection and for seeing that the law is obeyed.

(Signed) W. H. Swift, Field Secretary.

—Superintendent R. L. Davis, of the N. C. Anti-Saloon League, after addressing a Charlotte audience last Sunday afternoon, displayed eight pint bottle of whiskey, all purchased the day before in Charlotte, three from as many drug stores, and five from different clubs, all of this whiskey being sold in violation of the law; and the policemen were doing nothing, as they were in Raleigh, to enforce the law.

From out my narrow sphere and dearth,
While others chant sublime,
In cloud in shine, while on this earth
I'll sound my lowly chime.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Greensboro, Feb. 10-12.
St. Paul & B. Summit Feb. 10-12.
LaGrange, Feb. 13-15.
Rocky Mount, Feb. 16.
Roanoke, Feb. 17-21.
Halifax, Feb. 22-26.
Spring Church & Greenville, Feb. 27-March 4.
Littleton, March 4-8.
Henderson and Vance, March 9-13.

A WISH.

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do;
Set a watch upon your actions,
Keep them always straight and true;
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thoughts be clean and high,
You can make a little Eden
Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser?
Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrapbook of your heart;
Do not waste one page on folly;
Live to learn and learn to live.
If you want to give men knowledge,
You must get it ere you give.

Do you wish the world were happy?
Then remember day by day
Just to scatter seeds of kindness
As you pass along the way:
For the pleasure of the many
May be oft-times traced to one,
As the hand that plants the acorn
Shelters armies from the sun —Ex.

PROVERBS AND PHRASES.

It is in our faults and failings, not in our virtues that we touch one another and find sympathy.—Chesterfield.

Ambition is only vanity ennobled.—Chesterfield.

'Tis not the beauty of the morn that proves the evening shall be clear.—American.

'Tis not the many vows that makes the Truth,
But the plain, single vow that is vowed truly.—Shakespeare.

Conceit is to beauty what pain it to beauty: it is needless, but improves what it would improve.—Pope.

GREAT AMERICA.

It might be interesting to note that our own United States of America has a smaller national debt than any of the leading powers of the world. The indebtedness of the six great nations is as follows: United States, $1,023,861,531; interest, $21,803,836.

United Kingdom, $3,669,931,350; interest, $152,759,411.

France, $5,898,675,451; interest, $186,802,380.

Germany, (1909-10) $1,094,790,575; interesht, $46,836,044.

Prussia (1908) $4,558,152,565; interest, $204,766.421.

Austria-Hungary, $1,063,725,105; interest, $69,476,407.

The editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says:

"No institution of the Church is more vitally related to all of the work and movement of the Church than is the religious press. It is a necessary part of our machinery—not unlike the turbine wheel—making all the other parts more efficient in their motion, really giving to all of the other whatever of motion they have."

And yet, even though this statement will be admitted as fact, many pastors, deacons and other loyal and influential servants in the church will not speak once in a year a good word for their church paper, or ask members and friends who do not subscribe to do so. This is queer, but it is truth., There is no better way whereby one can help all the enterprises of his church than by helping to increase the circulation of his church paper.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The Fall term was the best in the history of the College; the Spring Term, which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to be better still.

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for their sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young ment and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible advantages at the lowest reasonable cost.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE...

This course for teaches opens April 9, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to make the greatest success possible in their chosen work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY

White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons.

May be a little higher in price, but they are superior in QUALITY. Where they are exhibited they win more prizes and, I honestly believe, lay more eggs than any other strain. Satisfaction is guaranteed whether its eggs or stock you buy.

WAVELAND FARM, ASHEBORO, N. C.

Life Member A. P. A. and Member American White Orpington Club.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1912 NUMBER 12.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

NOT A NOBLER, BUT THE NOBLE LIFE.

We are sometimes exhorted to live a nobler life. At first view, this advice may seem good. But it is a case in which the good is an enemy of the best. We do not recall anything in the Bible that would justify our advising people simply to be more noble, to do better, to be better. It may be gratifying to our fellowmen to see us doing better, living more nobly. But it is not satisfying to ourselves. We know that we have no right to stop short of full surrender and complete consecration to God, and when we have reached that point, there is nothing more nole, there is nothing better. The greatest thing, the noblest thing any man can do is the thing God would have him do. There are degrees of skill in doing work. In that respect we may learn to do better, but when we are living unto God and not unto ourselves, we are living the noble life, and none can point us to a nobler.

An Interesting Question.—Bro. J. P. Tucker tells the following: When Miss Forrest, returned missionary, spoke at Ai, a Baptist brother of the vicinity went to hear her, saying he wouldn't miss hearing her for five dollars. He paid excellent attention and seemed much interested in what she told of Japan and the Japanese and our mission work there. After the meeting was over, and he was going home in a buggy with Bro. Tucker, he said there was one question he wanted to ask Miss Forrest. Bro. Tucker replied: "She is coming now with Bro. Lowdermilk; you can ask her yet." So the buggy was stopped until Brother Lowdermilk drove up. "Miss Forrest, there is one question I wanted to ask you." "Very well, what is it?" said the missionary. "I wanted to know what-aged lady you are." She laughed in her hearty way. Bro. Lowdermilk began to excuse her from answering, but she told him the number of her years, and he seemed perfectly satisfied.

A Correction.—In the "Appeal" last week in reference to St. John's Church, the width should have been 34 feet instead of "24." J. F. Dosier.

THEN KINDLY THINK.

Thou dwellest in a warm and cheerful home;
Thy roof in vain the winter tempest lashes,
While houseless wretches round thy mansion roam,
On whose unsheltered heads the torrent splashes.
Thy board is loaded with the richest meats
O'er which thine eyes in sated langor wander.
Many might live on what thy mastiff eats,
Or feast on fragments that thy servants squander
Thy limbs are muffled from the piercing blast
When from thy fireside corner thou dost sally—
Many have scarce a rag about them cast
With which the frosted breezes toy and dally,
Thou hast soft smiles to greet the kiss of love
When thy light step resounds within the portal—
Some have no friend save Him who dwells above,
No sweet communion with a fellow mortal.
Thou sleepest soundly on thy costly bed,
Lulled by the power of luxuries unnumbered,
Some pillow on a stone an aching head,
Never again to wake when they have slumbered.
Then kindly think of those who, formed of clay,
Depend upon the doles thy bounty scatters—
And God will hear them for thy welfare pray;
They are His children—though in rags and tatters.

—Charles Dickens.

—The United Staaes government arrested forty labor leaders charged with being in a conspiracy to dynamite property in complicity with the McNamara brohers. The official saaff of the Iron Workers' Union are included. This is doubtless what Darrow referred to in speaking of the danger of involving those "higher up."

—Rev. S. B. Klapp, Christian minister, has just met with a heavy loss by fire in Virgilina. His insurance policy had expired, and the agent, by reason of ill health, had failed to notify him. The greater part of the savings of a life-time was thus swept away in a day.

—Rev, T. J. Ogburn will speak on Missions before the Y. M. C. A. of Guilford College on Thursday night of next weekt.

THE UNAPPRECIATED.

They are everywhere. They are toiling in obscurity—"faithful over a few things" while doing a great work. Many of them laying foundations of character, and in what better work can anyone be engaged? Some are mothers, often weary and discouraged at the depravity in their children. Let me ask you, Are you one that is causing the aching heart of some lonely mother? She worked and worked, and still she works and wearies, not from "dawn to dewy eve," but from before dawn to late at night, and all from pure love. How greatly would she be cheered if her children would show an appreciation or her husband would speak an appreciative word! But she toils, many times unnoticed, till her constitution gives away and with a troubled heart she droops, weakens, and prematurely—mother's funeral. Then there is poor old father; his youthful wife in some churchyard lies, and the most of his former acquaintances on the other shore, he almost unnoticed bears his burdens alone. Me thinks I see him some still night as the hands of the clock are about to strike the midnight hour on bended knees, asking his blessed Saviour to come and help him, and almost ready to ask admission to that heavenly home. He has lived a noble life, and many have been the times when his head and back ached and his nerves have had as many points as a chestnut burr. Once more, speak a kindly word and push back his silver locks as he has done yours a thousand times, with "Dear Lord, bless my child."

Another class, the teachers of our common schools—what a task to govern, and answer a thousand questions and watch an unruly and mischievous boy, How she straighens many a snarl while hearing her class recite.

Who appreciates the conscientious toilers who "are teaching the young idea how to shoot," and preparing our children for a noble manhood or womanhood? What vexations and annoyances she has, and yet keeps cool and calm, and teaches by example as well as by precept? She is doing a work for which money is not the consideration, supplementing to that of the parent. Does she not need appreciation? But instead so many times bitterly accused and that too, before the children she is doing her best to train to a noble life. How many times you hear the teacher evil spoken of when if you only knew the situation you would sympathize, if you had any heart in you. I have heard them bitterly condemned before they ever taught a day. Give them your sympathy and never say a word against them in the presence of your children. You may ruin your child, instead of the teacher.

Shall I speak of one more class who need the reward of an approving word—the preacher? When he has studied long and hard to bring forth from the treasury of God's Word truths for instruction in righteousness for the comfort of saints, for doctrine, for reproof, for conviction, or to soothe the afflicted or persuade the erring. When he has visited the sick, attended funerals, listened to grievances, counselled the weak and performed multitudinous tasks, how few realize what patience and wisdom and long suffering it costs! And yet many blame when they should praise and find fault when he needs and even deserves favor.

" 'Tis not a work of small import
The pastor's care demands,
But what might fill an angel's heart—
It filled a Saviour's hands."

Oh, the words of appreciation we might have given and there-by lightened his burden! What a stimulus to harder work and better study! Why not speak a word to this and that weary and discouraged one now, rather than wait and let it be spoken at the funeral? A little well-deserved praise "is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Try it and noaice the smile.

Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

ANOTHER VIEW.

It is passing strange that so many people refuse to accept the stubborn fact that there are two sides to all questions. In strict justice to all we will have to agree that men think they are right when they seek to stir up strife between so-called labor and capital. How can anyone believe that any civil laws that could be framed by any set of men would do away with greed and oppression, and how can any well meaning man seek to teach that capital is not just as necessary to labor as labor is to capital. The heterogeneous mass of conflicting elements in this nation precludes the possibility of any law being made that will put money in every man's pocket, but there is one little law in our guide Book that fills the bill exactly: "Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Now it goes without saying that you cannot serve Him if you are lazy or shiftless or extravagent or covetous. Now some one will say, "It is not coveteousness to want what belongs to you." We grant this, but if we put ourselves in a position to be imposed on, who is to blame?

Our correspondent says, "When we sell our cotton we have to take what the capitalists say it is worth." But do we have to do this? The only thing in this world that makes money crops cheap is their being forced on the market when farmers' creditors will not wait any longer for their money. We might have made 20,000,000 bales of cotton and if every man had held it long enough the price might have gone to 50 cents per pound, and every law under the sun would have been powerless to move a bale provided the holder was in no one's debt. But some one will say, "They cannot hold, for they owe money, and are compelled to sell." Now while that is true, it is more their misfortune than the fault of the government. We hear a lot about prosperous farmers, and their name is legion. They have everything that they need and money in the bank, and they do not work any harder than the poor "imposed on" fellow that hardly could tell a dollar from a hole in the ground. There is no complaint coming from them. They do not feel the least bit oppressed. How comes this difference? Why, he plans for every thing he will need for home supplies for man and beast and then for market crop. He cuts down all expenses until he can buy goods for cash, and then he can hold any commodity he has to sell till it will pay a living profit.

Since the day that Adam said, "The woman thou gavest me, she gave to me and I did eat," humanity has been blaming some one else for their failures, but from an unprejudiced standpoint, men who spend their substance before it is made and are extravagant to the limit, wiah no asset but the strength in their right arm, and are forever complaining about greed and oppression, need only to stand before a mirror to see the men who are oppressing them.

People who advocate a general confiscation of all property, and an equal division show a colossal greed that lays every act of government in the shade. In their blind egotism they do not stop to think what would happen to this nation before such a law could be enforced, even should such laws ever be enacted. If farmers were allowed to set the price on their productions regardless of circumstances, they would out-Herod Herod in oppression, for greed is by no means confined to the "Capitalist." It is excruciatingly funny to hear a farmer (?) spouting about "farmers feeding the world," and what consideration they deserve for this fact, when this brand would starve to death in two months if transportation of food stuffs from other sections should cease.

My friends, if you are expecting any civil law to right wrongs in this world you will go to your graves still looking for them. If you have more money than some of your neieghbors, according to some people's views you have no right to it, so divide up at once.

This government is composed of individuals and if all of us keep one individual with clean hands, there will be no one unclean. We cannot imagine what we will do when that long,long, long division is made, for no one will have money enough to run these large manufacturing plants that are so necessary to our well-being.

The great good that comes to common people through the capitalist is lost sight of by our would-be teachers, but it exists just the same and they can do a great deal better without us than we can do without them. They do not always do right, but neither do we.

Manson, N. C. Ruth Fletcher.

IS THERE A HELL?

By Rev. S. B. Stephens, Pastor Ivy Ct.

Bro Editor: I have since Conference found some people that don't believe the Bible, and say there is no hell. I therefore feel that I cannot forbear writing on this subject.

Hear Him who has power to cast both soul and body into hell. There is only one road to Heaven, but there are many roads to hell. No man can go to heaven unless he wants to go. But some people have to go to hell whether they want to or not. And it is not the man who is going at a break-neck speed who is descending into the pit. If a man is on top of a ten story building and there were three ways by which he could get down: he can go to the edge of the roof and jump down; that is the break-neck speed of a fellow who goes all the gaits. He can come down the stairway—that is, step by step—but slowly. He can get into the elevator, close his eyes, fold his arms and do nothing. That is the moralist who says, I am not doing anything very bad, but each will reach the bottom just as certainly as the others, it matters not how he descends, the gravity of sin pulls downward. I know I have an unpopular subject to write upon, for many people do not like to hear about hell, and that class of people are not only found on the mountains of North Carolina, Ivy Circuit, where the writer is pastor, but are being found everywhere. They try to say, there used to be a hell, but there is none now. Our fathers had no better sense than to preach it, but we live in the rapid twentieth Century, and with Doctor Russell's teaching; he knows more than Christ and the Apostles did away back in those dark days. We've turned our hose on hell and put out the fire, and we have put a sign over the door of hell: To Let. But not so. I know one thing, our forefathers who preached over this country, who preached the Bible and organized the M. P. Church, they dealt out damnation in great big doses, much larger than I ever dealt out quinine when I was in the actice practice of medicine, and when they preached it, sinners were saved by the hundreds. Peter's one Pentecost sermon was full of it and three thousand souls were saved. Now it takes nearly three thousand sermons to save one soul. Who are these who try to make believe that they do not believe in a hell? They are those who never shed a tear over the lost. They would not lift their little finger to save an immortal soul from ruin. They make good proselyters, but they make poor soul savers. There is a devil reigning over the regions of the lost is clear from the Scriptures, and humanity's experience. He is called a personal devil sixteen times in the old Bible, and thirty-five times in the New Testament. He is called Serpent five times in the old and five times in the New Testament. He is called an evil spirit one hundrede and seventy-four times in the whole Bible. This I have told to my people that I have preached to on Ivy Circuit inside the last three months who want to believe there is no hell. If there be no devil and no hell, what does God mean by these frequent terms in the Bible? Now I wish to speak of the sub- from three argumentative standpoints: Hell a place, definite and fixed. It is not a condition, but if it were, there would be needed a place to put the condition in, would there not? First as a place, hell is not as old as heaven. In Matt. 25, Jesus says: "Inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (heaven). Long before Adam sinned, God knew who would believe on his name. Hell had no existence then, nor was it needed. Second, hell as a place was never intended for man though the wicked are assigned there. In this same 25 Chapter of Matthew Jesus says: "Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." When Satan fell and his rebellious followers, God assigned them to the pit he prepared for them. To this place he assigns the wicked, though it was not intended for man's abode. It is due the wicked that there is a hell.

Omnipotent as God is (and as I have told you in the many sermons I have preached) there are some things God can not do: He can't lie; he can't contradict Himself. He cannot let his word fail. Now, then, among the most precious promises God has made his people, is this one: That in heaven nothing sinful, and nothing that will disturb the joy of his heaven saved people, shall enter there.

This assurance God has given His people; without that assurance there would be trouble there for there are people (even some church members that claim sanctification or are rather crankified) that if they could have their way in heaven, they would kick up a fuss before they had been there one hour; but they are sinners, nevertheless, church members. God won't allow sinners in heaven, unsaved in Christ's blood is an unregenerated person, and such a one cannot enter heaven. Such a one would not be satisfied if he were set down in the middle of heaven. There was war in heaven once and Heb. teaches us that Christ is now in heaven cleansing it of stain Satan put upon it. There never will be war again in heaven; for no one enters there who has not learned to say: "Thy will, not mine, be done." That is the first and the last great lesson we have to learn and when we do say it, we say it forever. When God cast Satan out of heaven, he provided a new and living way, and said, "Whosoever will may come;" but the man who does come must start right and come right, and you dear people who always want so many changes and take up with every whim and doctrine that comes along, always wanting a change. Better ask God to give you a change of heart once and you will be then satisfied, and you will be prepared to enter heaven. Now summon a jury; here is a man who violated your law. What do you do with him? Why you send him to penitentiary. Why? To reform him? No. The prison walls never reformed anybody. What for then? You say a man of that kind must not be turned loose among us; neither our property, our liberty or our lives are safe. If he will not obey our laws we will shut him up where he can't get out. The people of God in heaven shall not have their peace or joy disturbed any more. Hell as a place is eternal in its duration. This is true because God says so. When God says to representative devils: "Between you and Lazarus is a gulf fixed," He meant fixed. When he says: "The smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever," He meant forever. If even everlasting destruction means as some say, eternal annihilation, it is still a long way from purgatorial refinement. This, dear reader, is true. Second, because of the very nature of the condition of salvation. Salvation is predicated upon faith in Jesus Christ. He who does not believe is not saved, nor can he be. The counterpart of faith is doubt. He who cannot doubt, cannot believe. Faith is not a mathematical certainty like two plus two equals four. Faith is believing that a thing is true. He who cannot doubt, cannot believe, and he who cannot believe cannot be saved. Ask the unfortunate lost soul in hell today if there be a judgment, or a hell, or an omnipotent judge? Sir, you would find that from the dark caves of despair would come ringing back their sad replies: "We can't doubt these things; we have heard Christ's awful words, 'Depart from me;' and we can't doubt a hell, for we are here." Over the prison door of every lost soul in hell is written that sad word, "Forever, forever, forever." God forbid that a single one to whom I have preached may make his or her bed in hell. Dear reader, if you are a sinner unconverted while reading this, my article, please flee to Christ who holds the keys. If you do He will save you now. If you do not, He will look you up when you die and write over your cell door that awful word, "Forever in hell." Now, dear reader, (in brief conclusion) if there be no hell, why did Christ die on the Cross? Answer that and God will turn the light on your inquiring soul, and will hear that sweet voice, "Enter into the joys of thy Lord." Converted, saved, escaped hell, entered heaven.

Trusting my article may save a soul from an endless hell, and save it in an endless heaven, I will now forbear until the dear Editor or some of my fraternal brethren tell me to come again.

DIVISIONS IN CHURCHES.

The history of such divisions is a long and very painful one. Only God himself is able to estimate the harm that has resulted from them. There are churches which, to this very day, are sadly suffering from divisions among them that occurred many years ago. A large variety of things have been causes of such affairs. In many instances, doctrinal differences, between members of the same church have led to most serious divisions. In other instances, a division has been caused by the obstinate and evil leadership of a few men in a church.

One or two officials, destitute of vital piety, have so conducted themselves as to lead to a bad breach in a church. Men of this type are very likely to have the support of other unconverted members, for such ones draw together. A deceased writer has said: "The quarrels which rend churches are generally the work of two or three stiff-necked, wrong-headed men, who make up in will and won't what they lack in grace. These men, by crafty scheming, draw others to their side. There is, probably, hardly a church quarrel that might not, at one time, have been averted by the absence of a very few worldly-minded and self-willed men, who instigated and accomplished the mischief of which others bear the shame and blame. Sometimes one or two first class funerals will settle a church quarrel that has embroiled the community for years." It is evident from Paul's letters that he had a great dread of divisions in churches. He did everything in his power to prevent them. He most earnestly sought to have the members of churches avoid even the smallest beginning of a division among them. He told them to allow no roots of bitterness to grow in their midst. He was totally against having unconverted people in the membership, not only because they were not Christians, but because they would be likely to create disturbances and divisions. He knew that there was no real unity between such ones and true believers. He urged fervent unity between all true Christians, but was positively against a union of believers with unbelievers. And such should be the case in these days. The very great mistake which many Christian churches are making is that of receiving unconverted ones into membership. They are taking among them the very elements which are apt to cause division and damage to them. Keep your church pure.

C. H. Wetherbe.

"IS MY NAME WRITTEN THERE?"

This is an important and personal question. When a Christian congregation sings this song, each singer should put to his own soul this searching inquiry. Each may judge himself. No one may judge his neighbor, or say to his brother, "Your name is written on the fair page of the book of God's kingdom." But he may say, "My name is written there." Can we say this honestly, intelligently, confidently? What assurance may we have that our own names are in the book of life?

"Is my name written there?" No one can answer this question affirmatively who does not earnestly desire to have his name inscribed among those who are being saved. No man ever entered into the kingdom of heaven against his will. No one ever stumbled through the narrow gate by accident. There is a way, a narrow but plain way. It is the King's highway. The very first thing to be noted in this inquiry about the way of life is an earnest desire. Do I long to be saved? This is a hopeful sign, for all such longings are the work of the Spirit of God. "It is God that worketh in you." "Wilt thou be made whole?" "How answereth thou?"

If your name is written there you have surrendered your life to God. So long as we continue to resist the Spirit of God and fight against Him, it is vain to hope. No one can be saved so long as he is set on having his own way. "We have turned every one to his own way." This is the charge in the indictment. It may not be the way of the drunkard or the thief or the murderer or the prodigal. It may not be what the world would call a base, low, beastly way. It may be quite respectable and fashionable and decent. It is not God's way. It is our own way. We never can walk with God until we give up our own way and choose His way. "As high as the heaven is above the earth, so high are my ways above your ways, saith the Lord." He cannot come down to our way. It is too low for Him. He has sent His own Son to lift us up to His way. "Let the wicked forsake his way." Give up your way. Surrender your life to God. Follow where He leads.

All those who make this definite and full surrender to God may claim their inheritance among the saints in light. It is their right in Jesus Christ. He is the way. The man whose life is fully surrendered to God may come boldly into the Kingdom without the slightest fear of being cast out on any account. He may be as sure that his name is written there as if he had seen it with his own eyes. Let him believe it with his whole heart without other evidence than the Word of God. "By grace ye are saved through faith."

Then shall the believer realize that it is indeed God that worketh in him. He shall be conscious of God. "Hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost." If the love of God is shed abroad in my heart, I know that my name is written there.

Faith and assurance are constant companions. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Faith does not always spring up in the soul suddenly and full grown. The disciples, conscious of their infirmity, prayed their Master, saying, "Lord, increase our faith." A certain poet, describing the development of faith in some believers, at one stage of the process, breaks forth with this trembling note, "I then began hoping that Jesus was mine." The darkness had passed. The sun began to shine, but not in its full glory. It was not noonday but morning twilight. The soul began with a wish and proceeded as far as a faint hope. Another step and he sings more clearly, more sweetly, more confidently:

O mercy surprising, he saves even me;
Thy portion forever, he says, I will be.
On His promise I'm resting, assurance divine,
I'm hoping no longer, I know he is mine.

"The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."—N. Y. Advocate.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Job, chapters 15-21.

AN OBJECT LESSON ON THE VALUE OF THE DENOMINATIONAL PAPER.

The Western Christian Advocate of Janrary 31, 1912, contained an article written by a Methodist pastor which illustrated so clearly and forcibly the value to the church of the denominational organ that we surrender to it some of our editorial space. It is better than any editorial we can write on the subject. Here it is:

"In the winter of 1885, while pastor in one of the county capitals of Ohio, a sweeping revival broke out in my church. Among the converts was a young man of more than ordinary ability, and a son of one of the families of the church. As the meetings progressed the church doors were opened from time to time, and for some time after the meetings closed. But while others came and joined, this young man held back. I asked him why he did so. He answered that he was not yet ready. I told him I had expected him to be one of the first to come, judging from his natural good sense and honesty as a convert. He smiled and thanked me for my estimate of him, and assured me that he had no intention of staying out of the church. I gave an opportunity to join the next Sunday; and while several came forward, this young man was not even at the service. The thing worried me, and I went the next day to the office where he was employed to have it out with him and find out the why of the delay. He was in the employ of an insurance agent, who was a member of the English Luthern Church, who always kept his church paper in his office, where at leisure moments he might pick it up and post himself on the doings of his church or peruse it for other religious information. And this young man had been reading the same paper. So when I put the matter squarely to him about joining the church, he gave me a jolting surprise by saying: 'I have concluded to go into the English Lutheran Church. I have been reading about it, and I see as a Church it is doing great things for the Lord, and that is the kind of church I want to join.' So the secret was out. He had been reading an English Luthern Church paper, but had not seen a Methodist periodical for the reason that the family of which he was a worthy son never had taken one of the church papers. Isaid to him: 'F—, have you pledged yourself to join that church yet?' 'No,' said he; 'but I attended the serviee last Sunday.' Then I said to him: 'Well, if you have not committed yourself yet, just hold off until you learn something of the church in which you were converted.' And he said he would. I then went home and gathered up an armful of the New York, the Northern, and the Western Christian Advocates, with several copies of Zion's Herald and the 'Methodist Yearbook.' I carried them to him. I told him that he need not return them, for they were all his to keep and study at his leisure. I then told him that I left it all with him now, and that after he had carefully canvassed the matter it was for him to decide where he would mke his church home.

"About a week or ten days after we met on the street. As he approached me he said: 'Are you going to open the doors of the church next Sunday?' I said I would. 'Well,' said he, 'I'll be there to join. And put my name down for the Advocate.' I said: 'Good!' 'Why,' he said, 'the Methodist Church is the biggest and most active religious institution under the sun, and I'm going to be in it.' He came unto the church the following Sunday, and was soon put into the official ranks, where he proved to be a most capable and useful brother. For most of the time he managed the finances of the church, and every service found him presnt unless sick or absent from the city. He lived a useful, happy Christian life, and was a brother beloved by all. He remained a reader of the Advocate until he died. His may be one case out of many where the church is in danger of losing the children of its own households because the parents do not supply the family with the literature of their church. A very little self-denial along the line of some unnecessary extravagance will make the Advocate a weekly visitor in the home."

On one hand, a religious newspaper came very near to making one a Lutheran who was naturally expected to be a Methodist. On the other hand, it did make a Methodist of one who had already determined to be a Lutheran. In either case the unique power of th newspaper was shown. It is a solemn lesson here for the pastor and Christian parents.—Nashville Advocate.

PERSONAL QUALITIES HAVING ECONOMIC VALUE.

1. Initiative, energy, agressiveness, force, ambition, persistence, decision.

2. Tact, discretion, tolerance, co-operation, courtesy, power to suggest, persuade, control

3. Independence, originality, responsibility, self-possession, poise, control of nerves.

4. Honesty, fairness, loyalty.

5. Cheerfulness, sympathy, hope, vivacity, enthusiasm, humor.

6. Faith, courage.

7. Imagination, alertness, resourcefulness, memory, judgment.

8. Power to tell a good story. Conversation, personal interview.

9. Voice: pleasant, clear, smooth, musical, decisive, modulated, cultivated.

10. Manners: Conventional, graceful, natural, quiet, free from peculiarity or eccentricity.

11. Smiles: pleasant, cheery, attractive, antural, genuine.

12. Handshake: Warm, cordial, not clammy, listless, uncertain.

13. Postures: Erect, refined, graceful, never lounging, dignified.

14. Dress: conventional, not showy, neat.

PROVERBS AND PHRASES.

There is in the worst misfortune the best of a chance for a happy change.—Euripides.

Nature is in earnest when she makes a woman.—Holmes.

The last and greatest art, the art of blot.—Pope.

What's done we partly can compute,
But know not what's resisted.—Burns.

A fool must now and then be right by chance.—Cowper.

O! square thyself for use; a stone that may
Fit in the wall is not left in the way.—Sel.

God's on His throne
All's right with the world.
—Browning.

'Tis expectation makes a blessing dear
Heaven were no heaven if we knew what it were.—Sir John Suckling.

Woman is seldom merciful to the man who is timid.—Edward Bulwer Lytton.

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Littleton Ct., Feb. 25-27.
Halifax Ct., Feb. 29 to Mar. 3.
Roanoke Ct., Mar. 5-7.
Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Winston.

On last Friday night (Jan. 26), our people gave us a very pleasant surprise. We were expecting a call from Mrs. W. B. Speas to discuss electric lights for the parsonage, but when she came she brought a large delegation with her, and what we thought was to be a call from Mrs. Speas turned out to be a pounding. It was a surprise, but a very delightful one. We were glad for three reasons: first, to have them with us at the parsonage; second, to know that they were thoughtful of our needs; third, for the good things they brought us to eat.

Electric lights for the parsonage were discussed too, and steps taken toward having the parsonage lighted. This is being done by the Ladies' Aid. They have already added a number of improvements to the parsonage and now are planning this one. The church has no more ready supporters than the Ladies' Aid. May the Lord bless and guide them in their work.

A number of the trustees of the church were present and spent some time considering plans drawn by Brother Martin for our new church. No definite decision was reached, but we are hoping to agree on plans soon and begin work in the spring. A new church is absolutely essential to our work here. Our present building is antiquated and besides is inadequate for our work. If we hold our own people and gather others we must build. May the blessings of the Father rest richly upon all who were in the "pounding" and upon the entire church.

S. W. Taylor, Pastor.

Feb. 1st, 1912.

New Salem, Randleman Circuit.

Dear Editor:

When I wrote last I did not know I was to write again so soon. To begin with, last Saturday evening the clouds looked like we might have a snow storm an this preacher was cutting some wood, some that Bro. Farlow had sent us for a pound. We were thinking how we appreciated such a pound as we were out of wood before it came. When we looked toward the road and sow Bros. W. A. Wood and David Fogleman driving up to our house, and as we greeted them, we looked again toward the road and we saw women and children coming towards us, well armed. We thought it no use to resist, and we surrendered right then, and they marched into the dining room and stacked their arms, and we soon made peace. The load of wood was a big pound, but that was just a beginning, for pounding had set in now in earnest. We cannot say that we were surprised, for these good people have a record of doing things like this, but we must confess that they slipped up on us, and as we are not used to being pounded and are like children too, we hardly knew how to behave. However, we regained presence of mind enough to say we would read and have prayer before they left, and so did. After our friends were gone we of course must see what we had, ond we found meal, flour, butter, sugar, salt, canned fruits, berries,peaches and pears, canned pork and beans, pickles, soap, crackers, jelly, eggs, 1 chicken, and cracklings, milk, soda, and baking powder to make our bread good. Those that had a hand in this are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Caudle, Mr. Geo. Wall, Miss Virgie Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Farlow, Misses Nellie and Dellie Caudle, Mr. David Fogleman, Mr. Roseo Kirkman, Miss Lue Fogleman, and children, Clarence Farlow, Paul and Clayton Fogleman. To say that we appreciate these substantial gifts from these kind people does not express it and we can only pray that the good Lord may richly reward them and that He may use us in rightly dividing the truth unto them. J. B. O'Brient.

Feb. 13, 1912.

P. S. I forgot to report last week that Mt. Lebanon Sunday school voted to give their collections for first Sabbath in each month to the Denton Orphanage.

J. B. O'B.

Love's Grove, Stanley Circuit.

Our new pastor, Broy Reynolds, held the 1st quarterly meeting at Love's Grove on Saturday the 10th. He preached a good sermon at 11, then the good sisters set a nice dinner in the church. Quarterly meeting at 1. Business transacted in harmony. It was so cold and cloudy that only Mill Grove and Albemarle were represented. The stewards' meeting will be held at Love's Grove next Saturday at 1 o'clock. Everybody invited to come.

Bro. R. D. Little's and W. C. Whitley's wives are sick; hope they will soon get better. We want the prayers of the Christian people and may the love of God be with us all.

With best wishes for the Herald.

Daniel Little, Rep.

Burlington.

I have in my possession thirty copies of the Conference Journal which I shall be glad to dispose of to anyone who desires them.

Many of the members of the church were at the depot the day we arrived in Burlington to welcome us, and we have been made to feel at home by many tokens and kindnesses ever since.

T. E. Davis.

Feb. 14, 1912.

Stanly.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Love's Grove on Saturday before second Sunday. The attendance was very good, all churches being represented except Friendship and Simpson's Grove.

The usual order of business was gone through with very harmoniously. It was decided to have the Lord's Supper administered three times in each church during the year. It was also decided to wire in the parsonage and the greater part of the money was paid in before we left the church. The parsonage is entirely too small. We are forced to use one room for general living room, parlor and pastor's study. This does not work well, and I feel sure these people will not allow it to remain thus when they see the necessity of adding more room . A pastor with no children and without books could get along very well, but there are no such pastors in our Conference. Yet with the house small as it is, we enjoy our home and appreciate the good people around us.

Since last report we have been very kindly remembered by the following persons who have brought or sent substantial gifts to the parsonage, viz: Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Lowder, Mrs. Louis Mason, Mrs. Philmore Hatley, Mrs. Shoe, Mrs. Eudy and Miss May Hatley. The Plyler Telephone Company has also given us the free use of their wires so that the parsonage household now enjoys the convenience of a phone.

Albemarle church deserves special mention for her interest and the way she is doing things. This church has as good if not the best Sunday school on the work. Through the efforts of Mrs. Hatley, who makes a model steward, over half pastor's salary has been paid. No wonder some churches do not meet financial obligations. There are members on this charge who had money in their pockets last year for the church, but no steward ever mentioned money to them, so they kept it.

Bro. Plyler is able to be out some, but has not yet regained his health. Please do not forget to remember him.

Mrs. Martin Furr, sister of Rev. W. D. Reed, is very low and seems to be gradually sinking. G. L. Reynolds.

Feb. 13, 1912.

Mebane Charge.

On the evening of Feb. 2, while Mrs. Edwards was out waiting on one of our neighbor's children that was very sick, a procession came to the parsonage and took complete possession for a while.

The procession that took possession was composed of men, women and children of the Hebron and Mebane churches and some who were not connected with the Methodist Protestant church at all.

In the absence of Mrs. Edwards, I was perfectly willing to let the procession take possession as they every one seemed to be almost loaded down, and I felt sure thaa they could not carry off much more than they were bringing in if they should desire to do so.

The names of those present and those who were represented I am unable to give, but this I know, they were wise people for they left for us the very things that the minister's family needs most, (money and provisions) enough to last for weeks. For lack of space, I shall not attempt to enumerate the articles given.

About the time the last loads were being delivered, Mrs. Edwards came in, surprised, perhaps, more than the writer. Before our friends left we had prayer together, and every one seemed glad of the opportunity to do someething for the pastor and family.

After they had left us our little boy wanted to know what the people meant by leaving us so many things. I tried to explain to him that it was a pounding from the people of our charge. He looked up into my face and said: "Daddy, me wants 'em to do it adin."

Our thanks go out to each of you for your kind remembrance and we pray God that we may be used to strengthen and help you into the higher life.

Chas. J. Edwards.

Feb. 6, 1912.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.

There has not been a report from this place in sometime, owing to the fact that our reporter (Sister Brona Apple) is away from home. By her request I will write a short report.

We are not dead, but owing to the severity of the weather we have not done much this year, and I fear a good number of us have stayed at home until we are a little careless. As yesterday was our regular prayermeeting day and the day was beautiful, but there were but few out. What was the matter? Guess it was too cold for the old people, and the young people must have felt bad. Surely none was so careless as to forget to come! We had prayer-services conducted by Brother L. R. Dixon.

We are pleased to have Bro. Raper back to preach for us another year. He preached the fourth Sunday in January and as usual his sermon was good. We are always so glad when the day comes for him to be with us.

Our Sunday school closed Christmas for three months. As our superintendent lives so far from church and the weather is so bad. We hope to start again the first of April with larger attendance and more interest.

We are glad to report that Mrs. G. S. Kernodle, whose health failed last fall, is improving some, and we hope by spring she will be able to fill her place in church and Sunday school. We miss her so much. She is one of our faithful few.

Brother, sister, pray that she may be restored to her usual health.

I close with many good wishes to the Editor and all the Herald readers.

Ella V. Apple.

Feb. 12, 1912.

Fair View, Anderson Ct.

The young ladies have organized a social circle in this vicinity, which has proved to be quite successful in bringing young people together. It has been organized about three months. Our next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Ethel Lesley on Feb. 16, at 3 P. M. Rev. Lamar has been invited to meet with us for the purpose of giving us an address, which I am sure will be helpful to the society.

Mr. J. R. Hawkins who has been quite ill for sometime, we are sorry to say, has not improved any.

Miss Mary Leslie, who is teaching the Liberty Hill school, near Greer, came home last Friday, February 9, to spend the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Lesley, near Easley.

The first quarterly conference was held at Fair View on Jan. 20. The weather was quite favorable, but the attendance was not very good.

Rev. W. A. Lamar will preach to the Three and Twenty Camp of W. O. W. and neighboring camps on his next appointment at Fairview, which will be next Sunday, February 18, 1912.

Yours sincerely, Mary Hendrix.

Easley, S. C., Feb. 12, 1912.

A Correction.

The minutes for this year have a mistake in the total for Granville Circuit. The amount raised for all purposes was $1,896.50 and the printer has it $869.50, a shortage of $972.50 which would make a considerable shortage in the grand total for all charges. If there are many mistakes like that the grand total is far from being correct. N. G. Bethea.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Bro. Raper filled his regular appointment Sunday. Preached a good sermon. His text being Matthew 24: 12, 13: And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold; but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

Our Sunday school has suspended until spring. We hope to open with a good lively Sunday school.

Blanche Weatherly, Rep.

Mt. Pleasant, Guilford Ct.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment on the last fourth Sunday. First quarterly conference on Saturday before at Mt. Pleasant. In Brother Plyler's report of same I see that I was re-elected reporter. Of course Bro. Plyler did not really mean that, but just merely made a mistake. I want to say that this is my first epistle as reporter, but have written several letters to our church paper. I think that the church members ought to assert themselves and make a strong campaign this year to increase the circulation of our church organ, one of the best agencies to educate and bring our people closer together and cause a deeper love for our church. This is a campaign year and the two great political parties will see to it that every son of Adam will be provided with literature claiming each to show that they advocate the best policy. Let the church strive to do a little more to show the policy they advocate and we will then strengthen our cause for Christ.

Brother Plyler is getting along nicely with his work considering the affliction in his family. If he was not one of our best men in the M. P. Church he could not do as well as he does. This writer visited their home and spent two hours very pleasantly with Mrs. Plyler last Monday evening, and hence we did not get to talk much with him. Sister Plyler was very cheerful and was hopeful that she would get well (and I was also hopeful) and do much more to help Bro. Plyler in his work, but now I hear that she is worse again and no doubt gloom has come over their fond hopes.

Pray for us all. Yours in Christ,

J. R. Stone, Rep.

Uwharrie Ct.

Dear Editor:

As the people have not been saying much this year, I would like to have space in the columns of the Herald to say a few things. Perhaps some have been looking for an obituary for the death of this work, but as we saw indications Saturday for the better, we have hope now that it will revive and come to the front. Dear Bro. Swain: We held our first quarterly meeting February 10, at Jerusalem, with good interest. Those that were present seemed much interested in the work; only four of the churches represented. Those present were very anxious that new plans be devised for raising the finances. Bro. Moses Morgan was elected as circuit steward to canvass the circuit and help the local stewards to stir up the people to do their duty as to finance. Bro. N. W. Lanier and Bro. Carl Wright and others have been working on church at Cid during the bad weather and have added much to its appearance by ceiling up the pulpit and that entire end, and doing much to the front of the church. We are weak at this church, but we have some who have a mind to work like Nehemiah in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem.

Of course as the weather has been so bad we have had a poor showing, but I think the work in very good condition. I would be glad to take you over the work any time you could reach it.

I am sorry to note thatBro. J. F. Cameron has had to undergo an operation and is now in the Memorial Hospital in Virginia, but am glad to say he is getting along finely from report.

I can not close without expressing my heart felt thanks to Bros. C. . H. Hill, Moses Morgan, Joseph Hoover, for coming to our home and moving us to where we now live. Mrs. Trogdon and children join me with many thanks to them for their kindness and pray that the Lord may bless them an hundred fold. We are all so very thankful to Dr. C. C. Hubbard for the many kindnesses he has shown us since we have been at Farmer. He is one of our best physicians and may the richest blessings of heaven rest upon him and family. We are very thankful for the many friends we feel like we have around our new home. Asking all who read this to pray for us this year. Yours for Christ,

Joel Trogdon, Pastor.

Feb. 12, 1912.

Cid, Uwharrie Ct.

The first quarterly conference convened at Jerusalem Saturday. There was a right good attendance, and the regular business was attended to. There were four churches represented. The minister's salary was apportioned. The good people around Jerusalem had a nice dinner at the church. We are hoping for a great work this year.

Messrs. Carl Wright and Author Wright and N. W. Lanier have done some work on Cid church recently.

Mr. Jeff Ward got his house burned up last Thursday. They saved part of the contents. We extend our sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Crutchfield, of Greensboro, accompanied by Mr. Henry Hunt, are visiting at N. W. Lanier's this week. Bro. Trogdon filled his regular appointment at Cid Sunday evening, although the weather was very rough and not many out. But he made an excellent talk, as he always does.

We are always glad to hear from Mrs. T. A. Plyler through the Herald, but sorry to hear she improves slowly. We hope and pray for a speedy recovery.

Mr. Eugene Hill has moved back from Thomasville in our midst. Messrs. Callie and Grady Grubb have moved to the C. A. McGehee place.

There was a four-inch snow fell here Saturday night.

A well wisher to the Herald and its many readers. Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 150 in S. S. and our offering amounted to $3.32. We still have very inclement weather, and somehow some of our people are afraid of the weather. We are looking forward to better weather though, and are sure our attendance will increase greatly.

On the first Sunday in March we vote on the question of building S. S. rooms to the church. The committee appointed to solicit funds is making arrangements for the campaign, and expect to have a good amount pledged by the time the vote is taken.

The Philathea class gave a Valentine Social last night at the parsonage. About fifty were present, and all enjoyed the occasion immensely. Songs, games, etc., were indulged in, after which refreshments were served. At a late hour all departed hoping there would be another soon.

Our former pastor, Rev. J. D. Williams, was in our city the first of the week. We were certainly glad to see him again, but were very sorry he could stay but such a short while. Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Feb. 14th, 1912.

Burlington Baraca Report.

Attendance, 32; collection, $1.56.

Secretary.

Grace Auxiliary, Greensboro.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Grace Church held its Annual Thank-offering service on Sunday, the 11th of February.

Miss Annie L. Forrest, one of our missionaries from Japan, was present, and gave to the congregation a splendid word-picture of the true condition in the Orient.

Miss Maye Bain read a very interesting paper on Mr. Heininger's work. An offering was taken, which was the largest collection ever received by the Society at these anniversary exercises.

Then on Monday afternoon the Society met with our President, Mrs. J. Norman Wills, at her lovely home on West Gaston Street.

Miss Forrest was the honor guest at this meeting also, which had an unusually large attendance.

After the devotional service led by Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, a solo was charmingly rendered by Mrs. Ernest Teague.

Then Miss Forresa gave the ladies a heart to heart talk, picturing vividly the needs of the heathen women and children, and appealing to each heart to do more to aid in lifting our poor sisters of Japan into the light of Chrisaianity.

As Miss Forrest has been working in the "Sunrise Kingdom" most of the time for twenty-two years, she has had such a varied experience that after listening to her, one feels as if they, too, had a glimpse of the far East. She was there during the War with China and also the Russian War; and aside from her daily evangelistic work, Miss Forrest aided in nursing the wounded soldiers so that for one whole month she never slept over three hours each day. Think of the sacrifice abat she and many others make while we, taking our ease, pass on just a few dollars to help; shame on our Christian nation that such is true!

Grace Auxiliary has done well in helping to send the gospel, but since Miss Forrest talked of the many urgent needs, the society felt that it should do more.

Mrs. T. A. Hunter and Mrs. Henry Hunter were made life members. The Society voted unanimously to make our b loved pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Ogburn, Life Members too.

The ladies very quickly donated the amount necessary—ten dollars for each. With the aid of our good men of the church, the Society raised nearly two hundred dollars. All who have ever met Miss Forrest will know she was very happy at the response to her appeal.

The Auxiliary never spent a more pleasant and profitable afternoon.

Our gracious hostess served dainty refreshments; sandwiches, wafers, coffee, chocolate and mints. Every member went away from this meeting feeling that her life had been blessed by having been in touch with Miss Forrest.

Mrs. J. M. Stone.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Whatever may be said or thought of the wisdom of the course pursued by the striking operatives in Lawrence, Mass., there is no denying the fact that they are desperately in earnest and are willing to contend heroically. Last week they sent 119 of their children to New York to be taken care of by sympathizers. There was no difficulty in finding homes for the children, either. There were more than 700 homes opened to them. It is painful to read that misunderstanding between men should lead to such grievous results as to break up homes, even temporarily.

—Mitchell, labor leader, was before Judge Wright again last week for contempt of court. He would not admit his guilt, but stated that he had obeyed the injunction. He is quoted as saying:

"I want everyone to understand me to advise obedience to the law and to court orders. I want the right to contend for such political reforms and changes in judicial procedure, however, as would secure the rights guaranteed by the constitution. I cannot separate the guaranty of free speech and free press from the guaranty of a free conscience. If a court should attempt to enjoin my freedom of conscience, I should continue to worship according to my conscience."

Before leaving the witness stand Mr. Mitchell obtained permission to set forth his views on the subject in wriaing.

—The Lutherans held a laymen's convention in Salisbury last week. J. Campbell White and Robert E. Speer, of New York, were among th speakers.

—Raleigh is forming a law and order league. Davis's revelation of the fact that the prohibition law is being violated under the eyes of the police is having its effect.

—Continued trouble in Mexico may cause President Taft to send troops to the border to protect American interests.

—The time set for the third peace conference of the nations at The Hague is 1915. The Carnegie Palace of Peace will be ready long before that time, it is said.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn officiated in the marriage of Mr. B. A. Neese and Miss Margaret Leona Greeson, which occurred last Thursday in Greensboro.

—George Cox, of Asheboro, shot and seriously if not fatally wounded A. W. Lathcock.

—The Lutherans are looking for a site for a new college for women. Salisbury is one of the points visited.

—High Point has another tragedy. Dan Hill was trying to make peace between two of his sons when one of them shot him and killed him. Drink the cause of the quarrel. The son claims that the killing was accidental.

—The ladies' hats for this year are to be smaller and less expensive. This is good news.

—Fifty-one candidates for the law were examined by our Supreme Court recently. Forty-one passed, including four minors.

—Mrs. Henry W. Taft, sister-in-law of the President, has left the Episcopalians and joined the Catholics.

—The quest for the presidency both among Republicans and Democrats strikes us as all out of order. Let the office seek the man.

—G. A. Gray, pioneer cotton manufacturer of the South, died suddenly in Gastonia last week. The following given in the daily papers concerning his life is interesting:

"Starting life as a doffer boy at a wage of 30 cents a day, unable to read or write, he had built and owned the controlling interest in 14 cotton mills at the time of his death, several of them being numbered among the most successful plants in the South.

"The little education he received he owed to an accident. When working as a doffer boy he had an arm crushed in his machine, and while recuperating from this injury he applied himself to the task of learning to read and write, with such signal success that his latent ability was recognized by the late Capt. R. C. G. Love, a Gastonia financier, and together theiy built the first cotton mill erected in the piedmont Carolinas. Of recent years he had become indentified with the banking and commercial interests of the section and had amassed a considerable fortune. He was 61 years old and is survived by a widow and eight children."

—The Gunters arrested in Greensboro last summer for the murder of Will Frazier several years ago, have been set free. The widow failed to appear against them, and the case was dismissed. The widow has married and is living in South Carlina, it is said.

—The State University announces a summer school for teachers to begin June 11 and continue for six weeks. Last year there were 225 teachers in attendance.

—Joseph W. Folk, of Mo., retires from the race for the presidency and will support Champ Clark, it is said.

—Secretary Knox, by direction of President Taft, is to visit South America to obtain information needed in the settlement of certain questions of diplomacy.

—Dr. J. H. Jowett drives to the point in this fashion "some people confuse the number of appeals they hear with the number of times they give. The very mention of an appeal makes them sweat with rememberance—of their own generosity." Ever see people like that?

—Prof. W. P. Lawrence of the Chair of English in Elon College delivered a thoughtful, discriminating and comprehensive lecture in thee College chapel Monday evening on the "Short Story," as represented by the writings of O. Henry." The lecture was heard by an appreciative audience and was much enjoyed.

—What do you think of a business man who gives, not a tenth, but nine tenths of all he makes to church and charity? The New York Observer tells of such a business man in Chicago who makes $100,000 a year, but $90,000 of it he gives to the Lord's cause. The man is happy and prosperous of course. Another man in the same city is told of who gives all his time, but two and a half hours a day, to charitable and benevolent work.

—Perseverance in Christion service ultimately wins out and victory comes. The Biblical Recorder gives a case in point. "Mr. W. C. Pearce tells of a Christian woman who a few years ago tried to start a Bible class in a rough Colorado town. But the cowboys rode in, firing their revolvers and terrorizing all present, Satan's minions seeking to block the Saviour's work. However, the brave woman held on and now in that class she has sixty-seven cowboys, some of whom come on horseback eight miles every Sunday."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Some people think a pain's a pain'
But Mother's sure it isn't;
And Grandma smiles and says her aches
Must be the rheumatism't.

—January Woman's Home Companion.

DIED.

Kelley.

Mrs. Sarah Kelley, of Cross Anchor, was born Sept. 17, 1858. Died Jan. 20, 1912.

My acquaintance with sister Kelley was limited to a few weeks; but her life speaks more than any praise I might now bestow on her history. She had belonged to the church since she was a girl, and has been a member of Yarborough's Chapel twenty years. She was a faithful Christian mother, loved by those who knew her.

She had been a sufferer for some time. On the twentieth of January relief came to her; God called her spirit home.

A large concourse of people gathered at Yarboro Chapel where she was laid to rest.

In the pastor's absence, Rev. Hair conducted the funeral.

May the grace of God that sustained this dear mother in sickness and in death sustain the loved ones that are to follow her; for we all will some day go to the silent city of the dead never to return. May the family find in the grace of God strength to submit. Her pastor,

W. A. Lamar.

Eulogy of Bro. J. D. Newell.

Bro. John D. Newell was born in Guilford County, N. C., on the 24th of February, 1862. He came to this city to live about 22 years ago. He was united in marriage twenty years ago to Miss Mattie Belle Lee. He professed conversion during the Fife meeting which was conducted in this city soon after his marraige, and he with his wife joined our Methodist Protestant church here at once. He remained with us and faithfully discharged every known duty until death set his ransomed spirit free that he might go to join the church triumphant.

He has for years been a member of the choir and his fine tenor will be sadly missed by those who loved to hear him sing the praises of his Redeemer he loved and his fervent prayers will long be remembered as he poured out his soul in humble supplication when his pastor would call on him for the closing prayer.

During his protracted illness he suffered untold agonies, but how meekly and patiently he bore them all; and while he was anxious to get well for the sake of his beloved family, yet he was fully and entirely resigned to death. His wife and five children will mourn for the tender ministrations of the husband and father who was so untiring in his devotion to his loved ones and as long as his health permitted he tried to anticipate every wish of his fond wife. He was a man of most genial temperament; there seemed to be nothing unkind or severe in his nature and he was universally beloved, but now he is at home, forever with the Lord.

"There is one less in the old church choir
Where holy songs ascend,
And one less form in the house of prayer
When at the cross we bend."

Then peaceful be thy rest, loving spirit, sleep on until that bright and radiant morning of the Resurrection when the voice of Jesus shall summon us to meet thee again.

As we stood by the form of our departed brother and looked into the face so still in death, there was such a look of tranquil peace and joy that death seemed robbed of its terror, and we felt no bitterness as we turned away, feeling that with him all is well, throughout the endless ages of all Eternity, all is well.

Mrs. B. F. Norman.

Feb. 13, 1912.

In Memory of Mr. Fred Leonard.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber, Gentle as the summer's breeze; Peaceful as the air of evening, When it floats among the trees. Death in a white foamed angel in its cold embrace borne away on seraph wings to the bright beyond the precious and priceless soul of Mr. Fred Leonard. but we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we know he is safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on his gentle breast.

Mr. Leonard was a promising young man of high Christian character. He often spoke of wanting to get well, but was ready when the summons came. He was a great sufferer for some time, but bore it all patiently and we know he has gone where affliction and death are no more and all is serene. All that loving hands of nurses and skilled physicians could do, and for the last year every desire of human hands that could be granted for his recovery was done, but to no avail; the Lord hath need of him elsewhere. Fred was loved by all who knew him and has numberless friends. He will be sadly missed in his community and more especially in his home. We can't understand why he was taken away just in the prime of such a useful life. But some day, we'll understand. He was a devoted son and brother and a loyal member of the church and S. S. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved family and relatives in their sad hour of trial, but every cloud has a silver lining.

Asleep in Jesus, Blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep.

Bert Delap.

ORPHANS' HOME.

Since our last report C. G. Loftin remembered us with some pork, and Miss Pratt, of Raleigh, with a box containing 70 yards of remnants which will serve to good purpose in making clothes for our little folks.

Denton High School is doing nicely with Prof. T. O. Pender principal.

We were glad to have Dr. Swain with us Sunday. He gave us one of his best Sunday morning. Dr. Hoenshel of Dayton, Va., lectured Saturday night on "The Passion Play of Oberammergau," and again Sunday night on Palestine or, "Where the Master Trod." Both of these lectures were very interesting and instructive.

Let is not forget to pray for the Orphans' Home. Etta Auman.

Treas. Report.

Mrs. Lottie Brown	$5.00
R. A. McGraw	1.00
Mebane S. S.	2.50
Denton S. S.	1.47
Fair Grove	.46
Henderson H. M. S.	4.80
Miss Annie Satterwhite	1.00
Spring Church	2.19
Giles' Chapel	2.00
Total	$20.42

New Sunday School.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

We organized Sabbath school at New Salem in January with the following teachers and officers: Superintendent, J. M. Brown; Secretary, Miss Josie Knight; teacher for first class, Miss Annie Stafford; for Junior Quarterly, Mr. W. B. Patterson; for intermediate quarterly, Miss Viola Brown; advanced quarterly, O. N. Knight, J. M. Brown, assistant. Attendance for Jan., first Sabbath, 35; second, 18; third, 38; fourth, 50. We use the Methodist Protestant publications. All seem to be interested in the work. Pray for us.

Yours in His service,

Guilford College, R. 1. J. M. Brown.

—W. C. Russell, of Franklinsville, is dead.

—There is talk of moving Rutherford College to Statesville, Charlotte, or Winston.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett, of Stokesdale, was in Greensboro on business last Monday.

—Schwab opposes reduction of duty in steel rails. He says foreign manufacturers can manufacture at less cost than American. He buys pig iron in China for use in California. Germany is feared as a competitor in the steel business.

MRS. SPENCER FEELS THE CONTAGION.

By Hazel Banks Northrop.

Events had conspired, as they sometimes do, to knock at the soul of Mrs. Warrington Spencer. Three events there were, and they attacked the lady in her one vulnerable spot.

Mrs. Spencer was an efficient member of the Ashland Avenue Church. Most people liked her. A few, who did not, spoke of her as bristling with executive ability. The minister, they said, would as soon dare undertake a social or church reception without Mrs. Spencer's chairmanship as to tell the moon to stand still.

The first of the three events came in the guise of a Sunday-school convention in another city. Mrs. Spencer went as delegate. Nobody else was spoken of. Warrington told his wife he guessed she could give pointers to the best speakers there. Mrs. Warrington patted his shoulder and looked conscious.

"The best speaker there," was a brisk young man seemingly the age of Mrs. Spencer's Sunday-school class of young people. "Is he twenty?" she asked herself. He had made perhaps a dozen remarks, when she said: "He is older than he looks. He must be thirty." As the minutes slipped by she forgot his age. A new prophet of the Lord was speaking. She twisted her muff cord uneasily. He hammered the desk and waved his arms, and Mrs. Warrington Spencer forgot how capable she was.

"Have we the right"—and the young man pounded the desk—"to leave missions out of the Sunday school?"

Mrs. Spencer could see no connection.

"Do we not wrongly consider them as an appeal from the Board? as an artificial graft? an optional of our religion!"

An optional? The lady looked at the man. Everybody she knew either said: "Yes. I do believe in missions," or, "No, I don't believe in missions." Mrs. Spencer often attended missionary meetings, gave her dollar each year, and went her way.

"If we think closely," the young man seemed whispering to Mrs. Spencer's very soul, "we see that the missionary spirit goes back of the church, back of the Bible, back of the Christian life, to Christ's very heart. Missions is our religion!"

Mrs. Spencer leaned back, and wished she might fan herself. She thought she had come to a Sunday-school convention. But the young man kept on.

"We must become exposed to missions as to the contagion of smallpox. No one will ever become interested when the subject is being treated in another room!" And Mrs. Spencer, having been exposed, went home. There she was overtaken by the second of the three events.

The Ashland Avenue Church saw fit, now and then, to adorn its services with some out-of-town celebrity. And the Warrington Spencers invariably threw open their doors in entertainment of that person. One month later a missionary from Africa put in an appearance.

"A delightful man," said Mrs. Spencer, "for a missionary." Warrington Spencer thought otherwise. He had been showing the delightful missionary his local pump factory.

"I shouldn't wonder if you've met a Spencer pump or two, even in Africa!" and Warrington unconsciously inflated his chest. "You know we ship them to every country in the world!"

"Do you believe in foreign missions?" asked the man.

"Well, I can't say I don't believe in them," explained Mr Spencer, guilelessly, "but as my wife says, there's enough to give to right here in the city!"

The missionary coughed peculiarly. Warrington looked at him, and inquired of his spirit wherein he had blundered.

"If your business were the size of your religion," said the delightful missionary, "you would confine your pump industry to this city alone."

Warrington Spencer gasped, poked about for a fitting retort, and found nothing.

That evening the church was crowded. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer sat well forward. The missionary told the Ashland Avenue congregation about Africa. He described the lions and the jungles and the people,—ah, the poor, wild creatures, descendants and comrades of the lions and the jungles. Yet in the crude, vile bodies dwelt a flicker of the soul of God, ready,—so desperately ready,—for his call.

"Do you not believe it?" asked the jungle preacher. "Why, I have seen poor, black, tattooed, hairy fellows; women, their faces distorted with great, wooden nose rings; children, clothed in strings of beads, come walking—walking—walking, for twenty miles, over the trails and through the bush, to pick up the crumbs civilization lets fall from the table, to hear 'The Words' of the Book of God, to give, when they have nothing. And in the last day will you have Christ turn his face from you saying, 'I was an hungered and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.'"

Mr. Warrington Spencer looked at his wife. She was looking into the missionary's face as if she had seen a great light.

And now came the third event.

The Ladies' Missionary Society was to occur the day after New Year's. Mrs. Owen Wendell, who had been appointed to "give Turkey," and who had a house full of guests, five children, and one maid, besought the committee to put some one in her place. Mrs. Warrington Spencer was known as a wonder in emergencies.

"What shall we do?" the committee asked. "Shall we postpone it, or appoint some one else? Nobody but Mrs. Wendell would have thought of writing her paper New Year's week!"

"I'll take it," said Mrs. Spencer, and the committee knew the meeting was in capable hands. But they did not dream how gladly and joyously those hands were held up for the first time to touch the Master's! She began to look over some of her old missionary magazines, those she had always subscribed for, but somehow failed to read. How alive they were, these messages from the field—from Christ's fighting ground. How real! How worth while!

"Do you believe in foreign missions?" asked Mrs. Spencer of the Ladies' Missionary Society the day after New Year's. The ladies politely raised their eyebrows and waited for Turkey. They were not disappointed. She began very softly to tell them of the Adana women during the massacres, of their great desire to raise money enough for their new church. Like sheep without a fold they gathered about their shepherd, bringing their little bits of finery, their poor pieces of jewelry, even their wedding rings,—for they had little else,—and asked the missionary to sell them in America when she went "home," for only so could they hope to have a share in giving for the new church. When Mrs. Spencer added that the exorbitant charge on the poor little trinkets at the Custom House had been far above their intrinsic value, the ladies began to feel that Turkey might have a personal meaning for them.

Then she spoke of the Bible woman who had come into a poor village of Armenia and had gathered about her the ignorant Christian women and told them of the darkness of the heathen world, giving them the story of unsaved Africa. "Ah," had said the women, "we must pray for these wretched creatures,—so much worse off than we are." But one poor widow had spoken, "If we pray, we must give," and the others had said, "Yes, we must give." It had meant starving themselves but they gave two dollars for the African women, that they too might share in the light of the World!

Mrs Spencer's voice had broken here. "Ladies," she implored, "don't you see that foreign missions began when Christ left the right hand of the Father, and came to this world? During this year may not a single day pass when I shall not pray for all these "daughters of sorrow.' Who will join me in praying? 'And if I pray I must give.'" She did not even hear the closing hymn. She only knew that she had felt the divine contagion of love for all the sinning, suffering, shameful womanhood and girlhood of this wide world, and that just so far as in her lay she would day by day through the new year expose the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Ashland Avenue Church to the same influences. Sh hoped as she sat there that by and by missions would mean no longer "an artificial graft" upon their church life, but the natural, inevitable, beautiful fruit of their love to Christ.

And the evening and the morning were the second day of the happiest new year that Mrs. Warrington Spencer had ever known.—Life and Light.

MARY'S COLD.

A Washington educator has been circulating this adaptation of a well-known poem about the schools of the city. It is part of the campaign literature against the danger of catching cold by infection. The rhyme runs thus:

Mary had a little cold
That started in her head,
And everywhere that Mary went
That cold was sure to spread.
It followed her to school one day
(There wasn't any rule);
It made the children cough and sneeze
To have that cold in school.
The teacher tried to drive it out;
She tried hard, but—kerchoo!
It didn't do a bit of good,
For teacher caught it, too.

CLASS A'S VALENTINE BOX.

The most abject gloom hovered over A. Even Bobbie Benson hadn't smiled for ten whole minutes, and that meant trouble, and serious trouble at that.

Now, the cause of the gloom was this. It was February 12, and class A wasn't going to have a Valantine box on the morrow. Perhaps you don't believe it—Class A didn't at first either. Perhaps it seems too dire a calamity to be true—so it seemed to Class A at first. But as day after day had passed, and no mention had been made of Valentine boxes in general, and Class A's Valentine box in particular, Class A had begun to lose hope. And now Miss Macon had dismissed them for the day, and the last chance was gone.

It wasn't as if Miss Macon were a hard-visaged spinster school teacher, either. You couldn't expect any more from such an one. But Miss Macon's cheeks were like apple blossoms; her hair broke into little ripply curls all over her head, and little roguish twinkles lurked in the corners of her eyes.

"She looks just as if she had come out of a Valentine box herself," Bobbie Benson had puzzled.

Only of late the twinkles had disappeared, and once Class A had caught its teacher furtively wiping away a tear. And now she had forgotten the Valentine box! Something surely was wrong.

Class A gathered in the cloak room after dismissal, to sympathize and compare notes.

"It isn't a bit like her," Mildred Carson mourned. "At Christmas time we had the best time in our room of any in the whole school."

"And at Halloween and Thanksgiving, too," added another disconsolate voice..

Then shy little Dora spoke up from the very edge of the group.

"I know what's the trouble! Her dearest sister died the day after Christmas, and she told my auntie she can hardly teach school at all since then."

Bobbie Benson gasped.

"Why didn't you tell us sooner if you knew it all this time?"

"You didn't ask me." And little Dora drew back into her shell again.

There was a moment of silence and then Bobbie spoke once more.

"I'll tell you what let's do. Let's get up a Valentine box all our own selves and give it to her to show her—well, that we think she's all right," he ended awkwardly.

"What would we put in it?"

"Well," explained Bobbie, "we might get some flowers or something and put in a note about her being O. K., you know."

The plan took at once. Class A was all enthusiasm. They retired enmasse to the nearby greenhouse where the friendly florist agreed to trust them until some future day, and after much deliberation they chose their valentine—a bunch of voilets.

"Just like her eyes," announced Bobbie, waxing suddenly poetic, and immediately afterward ashamed of such a display of sentiment.

Dora was to write the note and call for the flowers on her way to school in the morning. After many warnings to her not to forget either part of this commission, Class A took its way home for the night—individually and collectively highly pleased with itself.

It was not until next morning that Miss Macon awoke to the significance of the date. She was almost late, and as she hurried past Class B's open door, she caught a glimpse of Class B's box, gayly decorated with hearts and Cupid's arrows.

I've been so wrapped up in my own trouble that I've forgoten all about Valentine Day," she thought, remorsefully.

"My boys and girls will be so disappointed and they are such dear, thougthful boys and girls, too! How selfish I've been!"

But what was this? On her desk was a purple box tied with purple ribbons. And inside, nestling in the folds of tissue paper, were violets and violets and violets. In their midst was a tiny note in Dora's precise handwriting.

"For our dear teacher, because we love her and she is our valentine—Class A."

Miss Macon turned white, and then pink, and then she cried a little. But there were smiles back of the tears now, so Class A didn't mind.

"We've had the best Valentine's Day of all the rooms, too," agreed Class A at recess.—Deaconess Advocate.

HOW IT FEELS.

"Sing! Sing!" coaxed Margaret Dear, but the little fellow in the pretty gilded cage only sat lumpily on the perch and seemed to wilt right before Margaret Dear's face and eyes.

"You make me provoked! In that nice, pretty little gold house, with plenty of seeds to eat and water to drink, and a cuttle-fish to sharpen yourself on! You don't show much gratitude. You can sing, only you just won't. I know now what I am going to name you—Stubbie. Because you are a stubborn little bird."

Margaret Dear had discovered the little fellow in dreadful peril of his life from Cataline's claws; instead of carrying him, away and setting him free, she had decided to make a canary bird of him, and have him for a cunning little pet. Nothing was easier

There was Mike's old cage up in the attic just waiting for some one to move in. She got it down and carefully cleaned it for the ffuttering little new tenant. He had not seemed from the very first to appreciate his luxurious rent, and not a single sweet note of music had escaped his little throat. Margaret Dear had coaxed and petted, but now, very soon—in about another minute—she was going to scold.

"When I went an' saved your life, Stubbie!" she cried. "You ought to sit right up straight on that perch an dsing to pieces to thank folks!" But still the stubborn little bird drooped and wilted.

"Margarat Dear," called grandmother from her room across the hall. "While you were at school this morning another bird came to the window and called on your 'canary.' I was in the sitting room, dusting and saw it—they did try so hard to get at each other. Do you supose it could have been your little bird's mother, Margaret Dear?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," returned Margaret Dear, indifferently. She wandered to grandmother's door and stood looking in

"I'm his mother now, anyway he does'nt need two mothers. I've named him Stubbie, grandmother! He's such a stubbie birdie!

"Yes?" Grandmother's voice had an upward inflection. "Is it stubbie to want your own mother."

"I'm his own mother. It's stubbie not to sing one speck of a note. He just sits there in his lovely house and sulks to pieces." all day long and several days long Stubbie "sulked" to pieces. He made only faint-hearted little pecks at his generous dinners and suppers, and never a single time did he sharpen himself on the big new cuttlefish.

Not once did he flutter up into his tree in his lovely house and sulks to pieces. swing and sway back and forth joyously as Mike had done.

"You see, dear, he is a little wild bird—Mike was a tame one," grandmother explained, with gentle sympathy in her voice for poor Stubbie. "You are a wild little girl, and you would not like to be in a cage even if it were solid gold with diamond window panes.

Margaret Dear laughed but refused still to pity Stubbie bird. It took something more than grandmother's gentle words to make her. It took the Dreadful Time.

One night it was so warm that Margaret Dear could not sleep in her usual sound and dreamless way. She tossed and rolled on her little bed and grew warmer and more uncomfortable. It was in the middle of the night that she found herself trying to get out of a little gold house with diamond windows, to go to her mother and grandmother.

The Dreadful Time had come.

Let me out! Let me out!" Margaret Dear [illegible] sudden fright. "I want to go to my mother, I tell you!"

"Sh! it will do no good to try. You are in a lovely little house with plenty of nice singing sound like a bird's. Margaret could things to eat" — The voice had a sweet, not see where it came from, but it went on soothingly and coaxingly in her ears.

"Sing! Sing!" it said. "Why don't you sit up and sing to pieces?"

But she only struggled fiercely to get out. She could hear her mother crooning to the baby, and grandmother's rocking-chair creaking somewhere, and the boys shouting to her to come out and play. It was dreadful not to be able to get out of the little golden house. She began to scream with fright. She must get out!

Mother came and talked to her through the little diamond window panes. They held out their arms to each other, but it was no use—the golden bars were between them.

"I can't get in—you can't get out," mother said, sadly. She held the baby up to comfort Margaret Dear, but the little fat hands could not reach far enough.

Oh, the Dreadful Time!

"Let me out! Let me go to my mother!" Margaret Dear pleaded piteously; and then the silver sweet, singing voice said a strange thing in her ears: I am your mother now,' it said; "you don't need two mothers."

"Oh!" Margaret Dear sat straight up in bed. It was early morning, and a faint pink color was in the east. She had dreamed the Dreadful Time!

She sat for a moment reviewing the dream, and a little shudder shook her shoulders. Suddenly it seemed to her that she could never get to her mother and grandmother quick enough. She wanted to run—run! She wanted to get to the baby and kiss his little dimply hands.

But there was something to be done first. Margaret Dear knew what that thing was; she must hurry—hurry—hurry—to do it! She slid her feet over the side of the bed and went pad-padding away on her little bare feet.

"I'm comin' Stubbie, I'm comin'! she called softly, as she ran. "Here I come to let you out! Little Stubbie—you poor little —Oh, please don't wilt any more! You are goin' right to your mother and—and your grand mother—right straight! You shall be a little wild birdie again. I'll put the gold house away in the attic."

She was in the sitting room beside Stubbie's window. Her voice trembled with eagerness; her hands trembled over the "latch" of the tiny golden door.

"O Stubbie, I know how it feels! I've been in a cage!

The tiny door flew open. Margaret Dear watched the little fellow fly away toward the pink east. Somewhere off there she hoped he would find his little bird mother waiting for him.

Then Margaret Dear went scurrying away to find her own mother. It felt so good to be free!—Constantia Knox. in Zion's Herald.

Mrs. Adam's husband was often obliged to make long journers on business, and frequently did not reach home till after midnight. His wife had usually slept peacefully at these times, but a number of burglaries in the neighborhood during one of Mr. Adam's trips had disturbed her calm. One night Mr. Adams was stealing carefully up the stairs, so that his wife should not be awakened, when he heard her voice, high and strained.

"I don't know whether you are my husband or a burglar," she called; "but I am going to shoot so if you are Henry you'd better get out of the way."

WHY TAKE THE CHURCH PAPER?

The primary reason for taking a church paper is the same as for reading general literature—it is for information, but for in formation of a special kind. Reading general literature or secular papers or magazines, however, will not take the place of reading a religious paper or papers. General literature is designed only for general information and culture; but there is a spiritual side, or part, to our nature, and this can be met only by a direct appeal to it through literature prepared especially for it. This is the special function of the religious journal, and no other kind can do its work. A man should take his church paper or papers—in fact, he must take them all, in order to understand his church and its work fully. Our interest goes with our intelligence; and unless we know what is being done by our church benevolent boards, what our churches are doing in the way of building operations, what our people and pastors are doing in the way of evangelization, we cannot have an intelligent interest in our denomination. In a very real sense, the very existence of the denomination depends, in part, upon the circulation of the church papers.—The Methodist Recorder.

WILL YOU TRY AGAIN?

Our three-word contest seems to have been misunderstood. We want words of three letters that can be converted into other three-letter words merely by re-arranging the letters. From r a t, you can make t a r and a r t. There are other words of this class. Let us see who can find the longest number by Feb. 26th.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Greensboro, Feb. 10-12.
St. Paul & B. Summit Feb. 10-12.
LaGrange, Feb. 13-15.
Rocky Mount, Feb. 16.
Roanoke, Feb. 17-21.
Halifax, Feb. 22-26.
Spring Church & Greenville, Feb. 27-March 4.
Littleton, March 4-8.
Henderson and Vance, March 9-13.

WHY NOT A SOCIETY?

Some Arguments for Christian Endeavor vor Organizations.

By Charles A. Hines.

Is there a church in the denomination too small for a Christian Endeavor Society? Frankly, I do not believe there is. The best work is not always accomplished in the largest societies, and just as much good proportionate to the number of members may be done in a small organization as a large one.

Many are filled with a desire to do good in the world and to help others but fail to realize that the way to do this is to begin at home. If a young man or young woman has an aspiration for service, he or she can do no better than organize the young people of the community into a band whose purpose will be to save themselves and to save others.

There is work for a society in every community. If you do not believe this, put on your thinking cap and go over some of the needs of the community. Are there no neighbors who do not attend Sunday school and the church; do none of your neighbors ever get sick and if so appreciate flowers and good things to eat? Is there not work needed on the cemetery fence, the church yard or the interior of the church? Above all this is not there a general need of training and devoloping young men into workers for the Church, the Sunday school and the cause of missions?

If any of the above conditions exist in a community, a Society ought to be instrumental in providing for those things. Then, too, a well conducted Society will give the young people some outlet for their energies. In no other feature of church work is there such an opportunity for young people learning to do the Master's work. Many a young man has offered his first prayer in a Christian Endeavor Society; many a woman can point it out as the place where she sang her first solo.

There will never bo a society in your church, if there is none now, until some one starts a movement for one. The one who first suggests it will find that other young people have been thinking of the same thing. Nobody has made a move. There will be no society in the church until some one does make the move. Will you be the one? If a meeting is announced, you will find lots of young people ready to help. It is something they need.

After the society is organized, the work must not be permitted to suffer. Some definite work must be given each to do. Some earnest young man will be glad to build the fires. Another will order the literature. Several will keep the church grounds in order. The girls will provide flowers for every service. Some will lead the meetings. Others will provide special music. A library might be started. Members could buy books and these be put in and exchanged from one to another. Write prominent men and ask them for a book for your library.

Truly you are missing a great deal and losing much opportunity for service if you do not have a society.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, FEB 25.

Subject: The Home Missionary Whose Life Has Most Inspired Me. Acts 15: 23-35.

Not enough has been said and written of the pioneers of the Cross in America. We have done honor to those men who blazed the trails for gold-seekers and land-seekers, but many of the names that have figured in the onward march of Christianity have not been handed down to posterity crowned with the glory that is theirs. Truly we may expect that many men and women whose names are unknown to us now are on the honor roll in heaven, and some day we shall hear of their service, sacrifice, toils, sufferings and victories. It will be sweet indeed to hear the Master say to them, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." The wives of these men in many instances, have borne just as heroic a part in the struggle for Christ's kingdom and they too, shall reap with them the crowns of glory.

The Christian Endeavor World has collected some notes on the soldiers of the Cross in America, wrich are appended:

John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, was driven from England under the rule of Archbishop Laud, and settled at Roxbury, Mass. His spirit was stirred by seeing the ignorance of the Indians, and he devoted himself to their uplift. He established among the people the arts of peace. In his tours he endured many hardships. "I have not been dry," he says, "night or day from the third day of the week until the sixth, but have traveled from place to place in that condition; and at night I pull off my boots, wring my stockings and on with them again, and so continue."

David Brainerd, born at Haddam, Conn., in 1718, lost his father and mother in childhood. At an early age he became concerned, he tells us, about his soul, which destroyed his eagerness for play. With rare courage and marvelous consecration he devoted his life to the Indians. His bed at times was a bundle of straw placed on boards. He had to send ten or fifteen miles for the bread he ate, and then it was often mouldy and sour. Pastorates were offered him, but he clung to the Indians. There he saw the greater need. His life illustrates, among other virtues, the love that a white man can have for races of another color.

The story of a number of Indians coming to St. Louis to ask for the white man's Book stirred the conscience of the East in the early years of last century. Leaders of thought determined that gospel should be sent to those Indian tribes; but who should carry it? To undertake sch a mission required no ordinary courage. Jason Lee was ready, however, to respond to the call. Accompanied by his nephew he went west to what at that time was no man's land. In 1834 the two men crossed the Alleghanies. On July 27, 1834, Lee preached the first sermon ever preached west of the Rocky Mountains. He pushed on to Vancouver, settling finally, however, in Oregon, a pioneer of the cross, ready to suffer all to carry the white man's Book to needy people.

The story of Marcus Whitman, which every schoolboy knows, inspires with its lesson of dogged determination to achieve the impossible. On this journey to the unknown West he was accompanied by his bride, making the trip one of the strangest honeymoons on record. On July 4, 1836, the travelers had crossed the last crest of the Rockies. They unfurled the American flag, knelt in prayer, and dedicated to God the vast Oregon country. Whitman's famous ride eastward, across the continent, is in keeping with the character of the man; a soul undismayed at difficulties, a soul burning to do good in his field, for his country.

President Roosevelt speaks of Samuel Doak in his "Winning of the West." Doak came from New Jersey. He was educated at Princeton. Filled with the pioineer spirit, he walked through Maryland and Virginia, driving before him an old flea-bitten horse loaded with a sackful of books. He crossed the Alleghenies and came down along blazed trails to the Holston settlements. He founded the first church in that cradle-spot of Tennessee, a log house built near Jonesboro in 1777. He built the first log high school, which developed into Washington College, the first educational institution in the Southwest. Doak is only a type. Many others like him put their courage and valor and learning and consecration into the building of our nation.

Aratus Kent was a successful pastor in the East, but the apostolic spirt which long for new fields to conquer stirred

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:20 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

within him. He heard the cry of the West. When the need of thousands of miners and merchants living on the shores of the Upper Mississippi, without church or school, were put before him, he responded, "I go." Twenty-seven days after leaving New York he landed at Galena. The following day being Sunday, he gathered a congregation in the dining-room of the hotel, and there began the first preaching of the gospel in northern Illinois. The nearest church was two hundred miles distant. He visited every village and settlement for hundreds of miles around Galena. He laid the foundation of three colleges and two ladies' seminaries, which exist today. The conquest of the land for Christ would not be far distant if all Christians possessed the spirit of Aratus Kent.

The study of heroic lives will enable us to live nobler and not to yield to what is low and selfish in our own natures. It is a great encouragement to any struggling soul that others have passed through the same firey trials and come out victorious in the end.

Faith is the victory that overcomes the world. The strength of temptation is in the lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life, and because all these are so attractive, millions yield to their blandishments, but faith discovers for us the highest good, the beauty and strength of spiritual life and so we endure as seeing the invisible.

America—all America. Is there a fairer field? Is there a broader field, where prospects of success are more favorable? Is there a field more providentially located than this one today? Can we be saved, if we fail to recognize our opportunity, and hence, our obligation, in this matter? Can the world be saved, and the reat commission be fulfilled, if America is not Christianized? There are many within this territory who are not Christians, and there are many who, though they hold church membership, nevertheless need Christianizing.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY OFFERS GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO CHARLESTON, S. C., ON ACCOUNT OF MEETING CAMPAIGN OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT.

CHARLESTON, S. C., FEBRUARY 11-18, 1912.

The reduced rate tickets for this occasion will be on sale February 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14th, with final return limit February 20th.

The following low round trip rates will apply from stations named:

Charlotte, N. C.	$ 8.95
Salisbury, N. C.	10.75
Greensboro, N. C.	10.90
Winston-Salem, N. C.	12.00
High Point, N. C.	10.00

Low rates on same basis will be sold from all other points on Southern Railway in North and South Carolina.

For further schedules, etc., apply to the nearest agent, or write,

R. H. DEBUTTS,
Traveling Pas. Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

—Paul Kennett has been elected president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Guilford College.

—Presbyterians held a laymen's meeting in Chattanooga last week.

THOSE WHO GUARD THE POPE.

The most singular and striking body of trained soldiers serving under any potentate is that which garrisons the pope's palace in Rome. From the silver-casqued Noble Guards, the Swiss Halbordiers in doublet and ruff, down to the Palatine Guards in shako and the Pontifical Gendarmes in bearskin, they form a distinctive feature of the papal court and a befitting setting to a mediaeval picture. Their gorgeous or quaint uniforms, glancing helmets, flashing arms, glittering breastplates—like the black velvet doublets, ruffs and repiers of the gentlemen-in-waiting—are in perfect artistic harmony with their surroundings, from which they receive and on which they bestow that correlative fitness of the Vatican, although the presence of these troopers and foreign mercenaries, morally speaking, is an anomaly and an anachronism.

This singular little army of spiritual potentate consists of noble Roman volunteers, burgher civic guards and Italian or foreign mercenaries, and comprises four companies, differently armed, uniformed and officered, and each possessing a distinct history of its own and a separate organization.

First in dignity and antiquity come the Noble Guards, in their scarlet tunics, golden epaulets and silver helmets. Raised in 1485 under the name of Light Horsemen, they were formed into two squadrons; many years later, in 1555, their strength was increased by the addition of 100 free lances, chosen exclusively from the scions of noble houses who could show a sufficient number of quarterings. The two corps were re-organized and united into one by Pope Pius VII in 1801, when, after the stress and storm of the great French revolution, he had righted the ship of St. Peter. These noble guardsmen mount guard in the antechamber of his holiness' private apartment, and escort the pope when he drives out. They now number 69 all told, under the command of a lieutenant-general.

The Swiss Guards, who rank next in precedence, were first enrolled by the fighting Pope Julius II and subsequently, during the 17th and 18th centuries, three companies were added to the original one. After many vicissitudes, they were finally reduced to one company, which musters 122 men of all ranks, commanded by a captain ranking as colonel. The other two corps of household troops—namely the Palatine or Palace Guards and Pontifical Gendarmes—are far more modern, and do not possess the same stirring traditions. They are chiefly employed in church ceremonies, conjointly with the gendarmes, to maintain order among the crowds who throng St. Peter's on such an occasion; and they are called out about once a month to drill or to mount guard. They number 170 men of all ranks, and are all volunteers, providing their own uniform and receiving a small annual allowance for incidental expenses.

The Pontifical Gendarmes—though last in precedence, by no means the least in appearance of the four pontifical corps—were raised in 1816 to replace the French military police instituted by Napoleon I and, like the Irish military constabulary, were charged with the protection of persons and property throughout the whole papal states. Reduced in numbers and duties, they now muster but 96 men and officers, and perform police duties within the Vatican at state ceremonies, as on the occasion of the present Pope's jubilee, and act in conjunction with the Palatine Guards in keeping order within St. Peter's—Ex. The head of a church guarded in a fashion like this?

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENBOR, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational)

The Fall term was the best in the hisbe better still.
which opens Jan. 3rd, 1912, promises to tory of the College; the Spring Term,

Parents who wish the best possible moral and spiritual surroundings and the highest type of intellectual training for heir sons and daughters should confer with the College for terms, etc.

Young ment and women going away to school will find that Elon College offers the best possible advantages at the lowest reasonable cost.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE...

This course for teaches opens April 9, 1912, and closes on the fifth of the following June. The College Bulletin describing and outlining the courses offered will be sent to all teachers who apply.

Ideal courses are offered for teachers, and work that will enable them to make the greatest success possible in their cho n work.

For all information apply to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

—Dr. J. D. McAllister, general Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of the State of Virginia, says that whether the present Legislature shall pass a prohibition law for the State or not, the liquor traffic in that State is doomed and that another two years will suffice to close up every saloon in the State. Let us hope that Dr. McAlister is a true prophet.

No man who is down need fear a fall.

Striving to do better, oft we mar what's well.—Shakespeare.

Tempers are the devil's gilt edged securities.

True friends visit us in prosperity only when invited, but in adversity they come without invitation.

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love; pleasure bestowed upon a grateful mind was never sterile, but generally gratitude begs to reward.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 1912. NUMBER 14.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

REV. E. A. PLYLER DEAD.

A note from Rev. G. L. Reynolds reports the death of Rev. E. A. Plyler on February 24th, and of Mrs. M. F. Furr on the 14th. Bro. Plyler was one of our elderly ministers, well-known and much beloved, and the news of his death will carry pain to many hearts. Mrs. Furr was a sisters of Rev. W. D. Reed. Bro. Plyler's funeral was conducted by Bro. Reynolds, assisted by Revs. Messrs. Rogers and Tucker. The interment was in the Albemarle cemetery. Mrs. Furr was buried at Friendship. We did not know her. We expect obituary notices of both these departed ones.

FEELING AFTER METHODIST PROTESTANTISM.

The battle over mutual rights is still on in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Zion's Herald has numerous articles proposing changes in the present form of government of that church, nearly all of them signed with assumed names, such as "Challenger," "Truth," "Layman." There seems to be a fear to fight openly as there was back in 1828. The goal of most of this contention is simply that reached by the organizers of the Methodist Protestant Church—a polity founded on principles announced by Christ. Read the following article on "Some Needed Legislation," signed "Layman," which we find in Zion's Herald of Feb. 14, 1912:

"The Correspondents' Forum of Zion's Herald is affording some interesting reading in these days of agitation and suggestion. General Conference rapidly approaches, and such is the apparent unrest in Methodism that it is entirely possible our beloved church may enter upon another quadrennium with radical changes in her government. However, in all the questions taken up and discussed, the writer has yet failed to see any reference to one vital point of our system—the assignment of pastors to their respective fields of labor.

"A common item in our church papers about this time reads something like this: 'The ——— Church of ———— has unanimously invited Rev. Dr. So and So to become the next pastor, and he has accepted, subject to the approval of the Bishop.' In other words, certain wealthy and influential churches are permitted to decide for themselves who their next pastor is to be, and it is not at all difficult for them to obtain their desire, even though the man thus called, as is usually the case, is a member of another Conference. But what would happen if a little country church, paying a few hundred dollars' salary, should attempt any such method of pastoral selection? The writer can answer this question from his own experience, for upon more than one occasion he has learned that the peculiar needs of his church were not taken into consideration by the appointing powers, when it became necessary to administer a rebuke to regularly appointed committees, who foolishly had an idea that they knew better the needs of the field than the men who had spent a few hours on the ground three times a year. Upon each occasion a man was found who was entirely willing to come, even upon a small salary, and the men thus selected by the committee have later achieved marked success in their ministry in each case getting fully twice the salary within a few years. It may be also added that the appointments made on these particular occasions proved far from satisfactory, and the work suffered as a consequence.

"The church in question has been strong in its day, and has sent from its altars ministers, Sunday school superintendents, and workers innumerable—a record of which any church might be proud. During the past quarter of a century, however, there has been a steady decline, except that occasionally a pastor has been sent who has accomplished aggressive, substantial work, and has turned the tide the other way during his stay. But for the greater part of this period the pastors have utterly lacked success, until, at the present time, there exists a serious doubt in the minds of those who are laboring under the burdens as to the wisdom of longer keeping up the struggle to make Methodism live in that particular town. Had the peculiar needs of this field been taken into consideration by the appointing powers, especially upon the occasion cited above, there would have been a far different story to tell today.

"If the large and influential church is allowed to select its coming pastor, why should not the same privilege be extended to the little charge in the country that is constantly being depleted of its bright and promising young people by the steady influx to the city, where the countrybred boys and girls in time become the backbone and sinew of the city church? On the other hand, if the small, unimportant congregation must take without murmuring whoever is sent to them, why should not the same treatment be accorded to the larger churches, and every appointment be absolutely made by the bishop and his cabinet, without permitting any official board to enter into negotiations with any preacher?

"Presuming that the larger churches would never consent to surrender their so-called rights and privileges, and believing that the people who bear the financial burdens and carry on the work of any church are better fitted to know their own needs than the official who divides his time among several score of charges, or the bishop who is likely to be an entire stranger to the whole situation, the writer has become fully convinced that the time is ripe for the General Conference at Minneapolis to enact some legislation to legalize the methods

Continued on page 4.

APPEAL TO THE CHRISTIAN MEN OF AMERICA.

After five years of experimental and constructive work among the Protestant churches of the United States and Canada, during which it has had the hearty support and co-operation of the leaders of all those churches, the General Committee of the Layman's Missionary Movement, assembled in annual session, sends out this appeal to the Christian men of North America:—

About two or three people in the United states and Canada are outside the membership of all Christian churches. two out of three people in the world live in non-Christian nations. Two out of three people in these non-Christian nations are beyond the reach of the present combined missionary agencies of Christiandom. And in spite of these appaling needs, about two out of three of the church members of North America are contributing nothing toward the aggressive missionary work of the Church at home and abroad.

Manifestly our first business is the enlistment of the other two-thirds of the members of the Church as intelligent, systematic missionary supporters and workers And this can be done. Experience in all denominations, and in every section of the United States and Canada, makes us confident that in most cases thorough-going methods of missionary education and finance, backed by prayerful and persistent work, would result in a doubling of the number of systematic missionary supporters during the first year, and in the enlistment of practically the whole membership within a few years. These results have been so uniformly secured and indicated wherever proper methods have been used, that we believe the time has come to call upon the Christian men of North America to adopt and work these methods in all their churches. In briefest summary, the essential points are these:

1. A missionary committee in every church to work with the pastor in enlitsing the entire membership.
2. A period of intensive missionary infomation and education in each church once each year, continuing through at least two or three weeks, preparatory to an every member canvass for mis- This should be in addition to general missionary education throughout theyear.
3. The adoption of the weekly basis for missionary offerings,— instead of an annual or occasional collection,— with a sions, simple and effective collecting device such as the Duplex envelope.
4. An organized and complete personal canvass of every member of the church and congregation once each year by groups of two men each, after proper preparation for their work.

We appeal to Christian men everywhere to put these plans into operation in their own churches. Enlarged missionary interest and contributions will not decrease,but will materially increase the offerings to the support of the local church. This has been proved to the point of absolute demonstration. The surest and speediest way to solve any local financial problem of the Church is the generation of a healthy missionary spirit.

For the sake of co-operative action between the churches of any city or country we recommend the appointment of a city or county committee of the Laymen's Missionaryy Movement, where such committees are not already in existence, to promote the adoption of these principles and methods among all the churches within their reach. The majority of the members of these committees should be laymen, but some of their members should be successful missionary pastors. The whole machinery of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, with twenty secretaries now giving their entire time to the work, is at the disposal of such committees in the prosecution of their efforts. The full available resources of the various Mission Boards and other missionary agencies of the Church would also, without question, be at their command in carrying out the program. But the whole of the United States and Canada, with more than 200,000 Protestant churches, can only be adequately reached by an army of volunteer workers. Detailed suggestions for city or county committees have been prepared, and are gladly furnished free to anyone desiring to share in the work.

To all these committees tnese two features o. work are cordially commended:

1. The holding of an interdenominational meeting of men at stated times for addresses, followed by a period of intercession.
2. The holding of a large annual men's missionary supper, with one or two of the strongest missionary speakers obtainable, when reports of progress can be made and plans for futurework may be approved, and a committee appointed for the coming year.

This effort is for World-wide Missions. "The field is the world." The Laymen's Missionary Movement stands for an aggressive and confident Christianity that dares to undertake the program of Christ for meeting the spiritual needs of mankind. We also believe that the laymen of the churches, according to their ability and opportunity, and equally responsible with the ordained ministry, to pray and to plan, to work and give, for the world-wide extension of the Kingdom of God.

The Church faces opportunities to-day both at home and abroad, that should challenge the co-operation, devotion and sacrifice of its entire membership. Our watch-cry is, The whole Church enlisted in behalf of the whole world.

On behalf of the General Committee.
Samuel B. Capen, Chairman.
Mornay Williams, Vice-Chairman.
Elijah W. Halford, Vice-Chairman.
Eben E. Olcott, Treasurer.
J. Campbell White,
William B. Millar,
General Secretaries.

MISSION STUDY IN THE CHURCHES.

One of the finest signs of progress in modern Church life is the increasing interest in missions manifested among the young people. If there was ever a day when the work of the missionary was spoken of with a sneer that day has gone by. In these days the missionary is held in deserved honor, and his work takes rank among the great civilizing agencies.

Missions in these days means life. The nation that opens its doors to the gospel enters upon a new life. The home church that supports the distant missionary enterprise also renews and enlarges its vigor. Devotion to the unconverted in the far-away places will increase devotion to the unconverted near at hand.

The work of world evangelization has become a business. It is not mere sentiment. It is deeper and more serious than that. It is a business proposition that involves the sentiment, the conscience, the very life. The commission to Jesus meant business. And because men and women have regarded it as such the kingdom has been extended and established in the earth.

All thegreat enterprises of Godare worthy of study. And among them all none is more fascinating than the work of imssions. Each of the main divisions of the work—foreign and domestic—has its peculiar attractions to the student. History, economic life, language, tradition, literature, customs, the student will find quite enough in any field to engage his attention.

It is one thing to read a book on missions.It is quite another thing to study that book. The one is likely to be for entertainment and at best superficial. The other is based upon a serious purpose, and, of course, yields results that are more satisfactory.

To have thousands of young people in our churches engaged in the serious business of studying missions means much for the cause of missions, as well as for the development of the efficiency of the Church itself. For out of these study classes are to come many men and women who, in a few years, will be bearing testimony for Christ in various lands, and of those who will not go forth in specific missionary work will be many who at home will become enthusiastic and intelligent supporters of the missionary enterprise.

In the mission-study class, then, we have an agency through which the Church is reaping rich and permanent benefit. It would be an undisguised blessing if a mission-study class were organized in every one of our churches. For as a result, not only would interest in our home and foreign missionary work be greatly increased, but the churches themselves would receive a quickening in all their activities that would yield to them as great a blessing as a deep and gracious revival of religion.

Selected by C. H. Beck.

THE FADING OF THE FUTURE FROM MODERN THOUGHT.

Quite recently the professor of divinity of the University of Cambridge put himself on record as follows; "Among all the changes which have come over religious and theological teaching within living memory, none seems to me so momentous as the acute secularizing of the Christian hope, as shown by the practical disapperance of the other world from the sermons and writings of those who are most in touch with the thoughts and aspirations of our contemporaries."

This tallies with my own observation. The present day literature of Christianity —our religous magazines and papers and the deliverances of the pulpit—are singularly empty of the "other-worldly." The emphasis is upon the here and now. What lies within the veil is to a large extent ignored, or if touched on at all, is touched very lightly. The gravity of this condition deserves attention, for just as certainly as the future fades out of our thinking and out of the thinkiug of people in general, there will come a corresponding laxity in moral life.

We have heard infidels and secularists talk "ad nauseam" about taking one world at a time and leaving the future to take care of itself; but we had not expected to find allies of these outsiders in the ranks of the Christian faith. Let him who rejects the cross be provincial in his thinking, if he will; let him circumscribe himself by the boundaries of earth and time, if he chooses; let him have no sky and no stars in his philosophy; let him sing his song or dirge within the narrow cage of the present, if he prefers. But the Christian may not join him unless he fails utterly to appreciate the meaning and the breadth and sweep of his religion. The Christian must be cosmopolitan; he must have room for flight; he must draw inspiration and power from beyond the sunset.

One world at a time is not enough for him who has caught the spirit of Jesus Christ. Such a one looks over the horizon. He sees the land that is far off, and what he sees makes him a bigger and better and stronger man in the land of his present pilgrimage. All the great prophets and apostles, all the great martyrs and missionaries, all the great heroes and heroines of the church, in every age, were braced and nerved and made invincible by the intoxication of the future. They drank the wine of the great tomorrow, and it put iron into their blood and fire into their hearts and a deathless hope into their souls. In the midst of persecution, in the face of the most bitter and awful opposition, shot at by all the archers of the Devil, they bore up and held on and purified and sweetened society around them because they looked for a city with foundations whose builder and maker is God.

How little those who talk about getting on well enough with one world at a time think of what they are saying! The tiniest flower that grows must have the sun and the moon and all the stars of heaven to minister to it; and if a daisy needs so much how much more does a man need? Cut off the influences and helps of other worlds and our earth would be a Sahara. Not a shower would ever fall or a stream ever flow. And if it is nonsense to talk about one world at a time in the material universe, in the light of history and of Scripture and of the practical effects of this kind of talk upon men, it is even greater nonsense to talk about one world at a time in the universe of morals. As the attractive power of the sun and the moon produces the tides and helps to sweeten and purify the sea and makes it a great reservoir of health for the globe, so it is the pull and the spell of the other-worldly, of the unseen and the eternal, that save society from moral anarchy and ruin.

No one familiar with the Scriptures can fail to note the practical use that is made in the Word of God of this teaching about the future life. Nowhere is it dealtwith as a theory, or a conjecture, or a speculation or something merely of academic interest, but always as intended to bear with solemn and unescapable force upon the life that now is. Wherever it is referred to it is meant to relate to conduct— to warn men against vicious living by holding up before them the inevitable harvest, or to inspire them to struggle on in face of a thousand difficulties by assuring them of the rewards of victory.—The Interior.

NEIGHBORS.

Lois Sweetser lay dack in her chair, every line of her slender figure betraying her weakness. The doctor looked at her keenly.

"Lois," he said, suddenly, "you are not playing fair."

The girl's heavy eyes widened. "I have done everything you told me to." she answered.

"You can see for yourself"—

"With your body, yes; but you haven't done it with your mind. You haven't put yourself into it for one moment. you're a deserter.

"You can't make yourself care when there's nothing left to live for," the girl replied.

"That's a coward s answer," the doctor retorted, brusquely. "I know it sounds brutal. We doctors have to hurt terribly sometimes. But it's true. Nobody has a right to be a coward when the battle needs every man.Child, child, the things that are needing you this moment!"

"If you'd tell me." Lois said with an effort.

"Imight tell you wrong. You must find out for yourself. Hunt round among your neighbors. You won't have to look long if you are in earnest. There, I must run. Out of doors every day, rain, wind or shine, remember."

Lois lay still for one hour—two; then slowly she rose and dressed for her walk. How she hated that walk! Drearily she trailed through one street after another. Suddenly she stopped, her heart beating heavily.

For one wild moment she hardly knew what she thought, so vividly did the soft musical Italian bring back the past year, when she and Roger had studied it together in preparation for their trip to Italy. The next moment she realized the situation— the little cobbler pleading hopelessly with his bewildered American customer.

Moved by a sudden impulse, Lois stepped forward, and in careful Italian asked what the trouble was. The little man flashed about, his face transfigured, as, with eager gestures and adoring looks, he explained to the angelic young lady the trouble. She in turn explained to the customer. In three minutes it was straitened out.

The next day Lois went to the little ttreet again. The cobbler was watching. He poured out a torrent of supplication of which Lois caught almost nothing, except bambino, but the little man's eager face told the rest. She followed him to a back room where the girl mother was. Above the tiny darkhead on her arm the eyes of the two women met and found each other.

A month later the doctor looked at his patient beamingly.

"Teaching dago women English! he said, pretending to scoff.

"Not dagoes—neighbors."—Youth's Companion.

Begun on page 1.

now pursued by the larger churches, and to give to those more unimportant the same privilege when they desire to exercise their choice. Possibly such action would be rare, but when the right to select a pastor is needful, it should be granted.

"To present this subject to the readers of Zion's Herald is the desire of the writer, and it seems to him that it is a matter to be freely and fully discussed. This layman has no particular plan to suggest, but believes that some legislation should be enacted this year permitting any church, by unanimous action of its official board or quarterly conference, to call a pastor and to obtain their desire if the one so called is desirous of accepting the invitation. It will be noticed that this plan calls for unanimous action on the part of the church, and a free and full consent upon the part of the preacher. In this way there could never be a clash over any particular man, for he could accept but one invitation.

"This article is written from the point of view of a lay member. What is the opinion of other laymen and of the pastors upon the matter?"

VALUE OF LITERATURE.

Do we Methodist Protestants appreciate the value of literature in spreading and impressing truth? Others do, if we do not. A Greensboro postman told me that the mails are flooded with publications of the Seventh Day Adventists. See how Russell is using the papers to spread his pernicious doctrines! Victor Berger, the Socialist member of Congress, in answer to the quesetion, "Why is it that Socliaism is so strong in Milwaukee?" said:

"We put nine-tenths of our income into literature, and every Sunday morning, 52 times a year, there are 300 of our men out at 5 o'clock putting polyglot pamphlets into the homes of the people. for the Poles we have Polish literature, for the Germans, German pamphlets, and so for all the races that make up the population of our city. The devotion of the persons who prepare and distribute this literature rivals that shown by the early Christians when the church was on the way to the conquest of the Roman Empire."

If it is true that "people are physically what they eat," it is also true that people intellectually and morally are largely what they read. We Methodist Protestants should regard that which we stand for valuable enough to justify our producing and distributing a literature that will make known to the peoeple the good thing we have found.

"EPISCOPITIS."

A writer in the Northwestern Christian Advocate describes a rather current epidemic among Methodist ministers as "Episcopitis." It's a dangerous and very contagious disease, and sometimes brings on Peritonitis of Piety. Unfortunately surgery has not been able to cope with it successfully as with appendicitis, and no serum has yet been discovered which will render the ministers immune or kill off the microbes after they have once found lodgment in the system. Those who have studied the alarming situation believe that the time has come for forming everywhere Anti-Episcopitis Leagues, to stamp out the contagion and for building sanitariums for the afflicted.—Western Christian Advocate.

A PROPOSITION.

By Bro. Spencer, of Why Not Circuit.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

I notice in the Herald of February 8 Bro. Dosier's earnest appeal for help to cancel the debt on the Rockingham Church. I see no response as yet. I think the call should have our prayerful consideration.

I will says that I will vouch for ten dollars for this circuit if 29 more vouchers for that amount can be gotten up in the N. C. Conference, and surely can. That would raise $300.00 which I think would enable them to cancel the debt. This is on condition that the whole $300.00 is vouched for.

J. H. Spencer.

Roosevelt's Great Mistake.—The papers report that Colonel Roosevelt has allowed himself to be drawn into an announcement of himself as a candidate for the presidency at next election. Is not the Colonel making the mistake of his political life? His friend, Mr. Taft, had already announced his candidacy. In view of this fact, how could the Colonel consent to the course he has pursued? He may be nominated in place of Taft: he may be elected, if nominated—we cannot tell. But that matters not. We believe that in coming years Mr. Roosevelt will see as the American people will see that he took a great step downward when he yielded to the temptation to seek the presidency this year.

NOTES.

—President Swain started to the Eastern part of the State last Friday on his official round among the churches. He expected to visit the aged father of Bro. A. B. Kimball.

—Rev. S. B. Stephens, is holding a revival at Democrat Church. He reports large congregations every night, notwithstanding cold weather, rain and mud. 14 have already joined the church and many still at the altar every night.

—Rev. G. G. Westfall, an aged minister of the Pittsburg Conference, died recently.

—Dr. Andrew Fairbairn is dead. He was one of the foremost theologians of Great Britain.

—Abbe Charles Loyson, known as "Pere Hyachinthe," is dead as the age of 85. He was not in agreement with the Church of Rome of which he was formerly a member. His life was an interesting one.

—Our citizens of socialistic ideas moved our city to a nelection over a municipal meat market. The election came on Tuesday. The proposition for such a market was overwhelmingly defeated. In a mass meeting, one speaker said: "I am in favor of government control of public utilities, but not of commodities."

—They are learning to plow on a great scale out in Indiana. At a demonstration given at Purdue University, fifty plows combined into one were hitched to three traction engines and put to work. They turned over a stubble field at the rate of an acre every four and a quarter minutes. The great plow cuts a strip nearly sixty feet wide. The plows are so connected that each one rises and falls independently following the unevenness of the ground.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson For Next Week.

Job, chapters 29-35.

Answer to Assigned Questions

The book of Job is a part of the Word of God, given by inspiration. The Jews always retained it as a part of the sacred canon. It is referred to in the New Testament (James 5: 11) and one passage (Ch. 5-13) is quoted by another apostle (1 Cor. 3-19).

In style it is an epic poem and is based on history. The book is also doctrinal and Job is a type of Christ—in his suffering—his complete loss of all his wealth—in patience and in the glory of his latter days. The doctrine of the resurrection of the human body is clearly taught in it. It is a great book—one of the most ancient books of the Bible, and one of the most interesting.

W. F. Kennett.

— Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon one day remarked to one of his sons, "Can you tell me why the lions did not eat Daniel!" "No,sir, why was it?" "Because the most of him was back bone and the rest was grit."—Youth's Companion.

THE PROBLEM BEHIND THE PULPIT

I consider this the most serious problem confronting the Christian people of today. I have no disposition to unkindly criticise the ministry. I would myself be the subject of the severest crtiicism in doing so, for much of the blessing of my own life has come to me through association with the ministers of various denominations, and the assurances given to me by them that in my work I have their sincerest sympathy and their constant prayers.

I am quite inclined to think that if there is a sagging of spiritual interest in the church at the present time, much of the responsibility for this must lie at the door of those of us who stand behind the sacred desk and who have been called of God to preach the unsearchable riches of the gospel of his grace. I am persuaded that many sincere, devoted, faithful imnisters of the Gospel are hampered in their work by the spirit of the churches they serve. I was told only a day or so ago of one church where ninety percent. of the church membership are in sympathy with the pastor's work. The other ten per cent. represent a coterie of somewhat worldly men who rented the pews, contributed generously to the general expenses of the church, and therefore felt that they had the right to criticise the pastor, to make his stay with them unbearable, and by their attiude at last compel him to resign his charge, and go forth after fifty years of age an almost broken-hearted man.

And there are many ministers in the church who labor under the severest constraint because of the attitude of some members of their church. They are unable to preach as they wish to preach, or to work as they would like to work, because they must consult this little company of people and feel that they must yield to their direction and control.

I am quite confidont, also that many ministers are hindered in their work by the atmosphere with which they are surrounded. Not infrequently the choir is the cause of the difficulty. The singing is not satisfactory to the spiritually minded preacher, and when he rises to preach, ten minutes of his time is required at least to overcome the depressing effect of the singing of his choir employed in many instances at a cost as great as the pastor's own salary. Some times the atmosphere of the church is wrong because the people themselves have not entered the house of worship in the proper spirit. They do not realize that the way they sit in the pews, sing the hymns, look up into the minister's face,and have a general spirit of helpfulness, makes it possible for him to preach. Many a man has gone into his pulpit with a burning message and delivered it with icy coldness because of the condition of the people who occupied the pews in front of him. I have the sincerest sympathy for the minister who would preach with a passion if he could, who would denounce sin if he dared who would bid the unsaved turn to Christ if he felt that it could be done without criticism; and in failing to act along this line, he is not cowardly, he simply understands that-he is obliged to be careful, and that he cannot do the thing that would bring down upon him the spirit of criticism, which might ultimately grow into a church quarrel, which he feels would be dishonoring to the Christ whom he serves.

While all that has been said is true—and I could cite the names of ministers who are thus hampered today if it were wise to do so—still there is another side to the subject which should be considered.

The spiritual life of some churches sags today not because the minister has a poor method of work, but because he has no positive message for the people who sit in the pews. Men have doubts enough of their own without having them presented by the minister; and the average man of affairs today will not attend the church when he realizes that the mininter himself is without convictions and is not absolutely sure of the position which he has taken. Sometimes it is true that the spiritual life of the church has suffered because, consciously, or unconsciously, the minister has failed to preach with the note of authority regarding the Scriptures as the inspired Word of God and Jesus as the very Son ofGod. I am more fully persuaded today than ever before in my ministry that the only message that can interest the people and persuade them to right living is that which has for its foundatoin the inspired Word of God, for its theme the curcified Savior, and for its illustrations the lives of the countless number of people who have by the way of this cross and because of confidence inthe One who hangs upon it, passed from darkness into light and from bondage to freedom. I am myself longing for the return of the pulpit to the old time way of preaching. Under the power of such messages the greatest men and women of the church came into possesion of a strength which made their lives beautiful. Under the spell of such preaching churches were inspired to service, the general spiritual tone of the church was good, homes were more as they should be, men feared God, they hated sin, they loved to hear of Christ, and they tried to serve their fellowmen.

I believe that it is possible for the ministers of the country to turn the tide of the spiritual life of the curch in a very short space of time; but if this is to be accomplished, these ministers must have the support of their people and the sympathy of their hearers.They must be told by their church members that whatever they do within the bounds of reason will have their heartiest support, if only men and women can be made to realize their need of Christ and told that they may turn to Him.

It is a great thing to preach the Gospel. Each day I live I consider it more wonderful; and yet, when I think of the power that we ministers have at our disposal, I tremble lest we fail, and thereby be called to account at the judgment seat of Christ.

I would suggest, in closing, that before we begin to criticise the ministers for the smallness of the congregation, for the few evidences of spiritual blessing, that we try to find out whether or not they are not seriously handicapped, and that instead of criticising the preachers today we begin to pray for them. It is in the atmosphere of prayer that the greatest sermons are preached.—J. Wilbur Chapman, in Zion's Herald.

A Korean woman was being examined for baptism. Her husband was a leper and totally blind; her oldest son, on whom she depended for support, broke his hip joint and became a cripple for life; her youngest son contracted leprosy. When her examiner asked her if in spite of all her troubles she could still believe in Jesus, she made answer, "Who else is there to go to?"

"Woman's Work" tells of a Korean woman sixty-five years old who walked about forty-five miles over a hard mountain road to attend a Bible class. She got such a thirst for knowledge that she soon after walked over fifty miles to attend another class meeting, and a few months later took the same journey again to attend a Normal class meeting. At one time she said to the missionary in charge, "All the people in America are Christians, aren't they?"

—To eke out his salary, the people of a small country church gave their pastor a donation party, among the presents being a fine new dress coat for the pastor and a pretty bonnet for his wife. On the following Sunday as they walked up the aisle in their new habiliments the choir inadvertently struck out with the voluntary—much to the discomfiture of the sensitive clergyman and his wife—"Who are these in bright array?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

— On the occasion of a presentation a worthy alderman delivered himself with great pomposity of the graceful remark that he was not there to pour forth a paregoric on the recipient. Somebody whispered to him, "panegyric" Whereupon the alderman continued gayly: "My friend says 'panygyric,' but as the two words are anonymous it cannot matter very much!"—Continent.

WHEN CHANG PRAYED.

Chang Fang Uan would not be called a handsome man. He is minus his front teeth; is stoop-shouldered, deaf, halting in gait and speech. He is uneducated, and poorer than many Americans can sense. But there is a smile on his face and a gleam in his eye that at once arrests the beholder and makes him look twice.

This man learned the gospel when Miss Vaughan came to his village. She was accompanied by several of the women of a BibleWomen's school which is under the management of some of the Chinese leaders of our field, and is largely supported by our Chinese Christians.

Chang hung on the edge of the crowd of curious women, and learned some new things that he could not get away from. And the more he pondered this "Jesus Doctrine," the more he believed it. His family and neighbors ridiculed and abused him for his faith. But a great peace had come to him, and "the heavenly light" that now filled his soul he wanted them to experience. So he began to pray for this.

To his mind it was important to get to the village various leaders who could more fully explain the teaching. He had no money, no name, no influence—not even a cart or barrow on which to bring foreign guests, even if they could spend the time to come. So he prayed, in faith, steadily, for a year.

He prayed that on a given date Miss Vaughan with a band of Bible Women might return; also that the foreign pastor and several native evangelists might come. Without collusion all came.

He prayed for a crowd of heathen to leave their spring plowing and dragging and sowing to come and listen. And they came.

No house or yard in the big market town was big enough to hold the crowd he wanted to see gathered; so he prayed that a large "revival tent" might come; and it appeared at the proper time and was set up.

He could not furnish the tent with seats, and convention accessories; and so he prayed for them and the people of his and a neighboring village brought all that were needed and put them at his disposal,—even foreign lamps for the evening sesions.

At the meetings it was soon realized that the preachers, because of the uncomfortable jam, would have to divide forces. So Miss Vaughan took the tent, which daily from early till late, was packed with women—and babies. SomeBible women taught others who thronged the yard of Chang's mother. We men talked to companies on the street and to the constantly shifting throngs who came to the yards which were in friendliness loaned for our various headquarters.

Some results: there was a large company of women inquirers—some thirty. More than 3,000 men had heard the gospel, and the people themselves had provided the money for the expenses of the meeting.

After we left, Chang was smitten with the need of a Christian school. He prayed for it and a teacher, and got both.

Then his old mother, in answer to his prayer of faith, accepted Christ.

A few months later his flaming zeal brought to his village a second series of meetings, in which many of us were greatly blessed. It was remarked by many, as a curious fact, that just before and after each of these two series of meetings, the weather was cold and windy and dusty. But later they learned that it was Chang who had especially prayed the Lord for the perfect weather that obtained during the meetings.

I have since baptized a number of those for whom Chang especially prayed. All his family are now Christians or inquirers, and many outsiders are interested. Good days are ahead of that village and that region.

And all because one humble man has tried to live up to the light he had.

Do not forget to pray for Chang.

—Rev. Charles E. Scott. in S. C. Times.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMITTEE.

If an American citizen were asked to outline the government of the United States, he would undoubtedly say, "We are governed by Congress, the Supreme Court, and the President—Congress to make the laws, the Supreme Court to interpret them, the President to execute them."

That answer is lamentably incorrect.

We are not governed by Cingress, the Supreme Court, and the President; we are governed by the committees if Congress.

Every measure introduced by a Representative or Senator is referred at once to a committee of the House or Senate. Every Rpresentative serves on some one committee, every Senator on several committees. The committees are so numerous and comprehensive that every possible subject of legislation may be referred to some committee, though the appropriateness of the reference is often more than questionable.

These committees have each its own meeting-room, which serves also as a sort of club-room for the members of the committee. In connection with these committees most of the work of Congress is done.

When a bill is referred to a committee it drops out of public view as completely as if it were tied to a stone and thrown into the Potomac.

Thousands may be interested in the bill, but its course is a mystery to them. They do not know the name of the committee to which the project is referred. If they know that, they have absolutely no means of knowing the attitude of the committee toward the measure, or whether it is even considered by the committee.

Weeks and months drag along and nothing is held from the bill. If inquiry is made by some interested person, he is told that "the bill is in committee." If the end of the session is reached and the bill happens to be remembered by any inquirer, he is informed that "the bill was killed in committee." That is what happens to the large—the very large—majority of all the bills introduced in Congress.

We grant at once that it is the deserved of most of them. Far too many bills are introduced. In most cases the statesman introducing the bill does so only at the request of some pertinacious constituent or organization, and does not care if it meets a natural and painless death. But, also, most of the deserving measures find the same untimely fate.

This is conspicuously true of reform measures, of measures disturbing vested interests, of bills leading to decided innovations, matters like the popular election of Senators, international arbitration, the parcels post, the postal savings-banks, ship subsidy, the protection of prohibition States against the importation of liquor. The easiest way to deal with such disturbing plans is to kill them in committee, and this is invaribly done for session after session, unless an irresistible popular demand arises. Thus Congress is led by the people, and is often for behind them; it does not lead.

Our national legislature is supreme among the world's parliaments in regard to the number of bills introduced; it is famous for the scarcity of first-class legislation.

The worst feature of this government by committee is its irresponsible character. Members of committees know that they may, save in very exceptional cases, take any course they please with reference to a bill referred to them, and they will not be called to account individually. Nor will their party be charged with their action or their failure to act. The committees are masters of the situation, and they know it.

Any kind of irresponsible government is bad government. Whatever influence is brought to bear on Congress by selfish and designing interests is easily exercised in the small committee-rooms; it would be quite ineffective if it reached the entire Senate or House. Committee government is government by lobby, by intrigue; it is not government in the open.

There is only one remedy, and that is publicity.

It is impossible to abolish the committees, or even reduce their number. The system is a necessity, if the many bills introduced are to be studied at all, and passed upon. But they should be studied, and passed upon.

Of course, Congress may at any time order a committee to report concerning a bill referred to it; but this is seldom done. That comparatively rare occurence should become the unvarying rule. A reasonable time should be fixed within which every bill referred to a committee should be reported back to the House or Senate, with the recommendation, "It ought to pass," or "It ought not to pass."

Such a practice would be a salutary check on the introduction of bills merely to please some individual or individuals. It would enable readers of The Congressional Record, at least, to follow the fate of a bill. It would force Congress to pass on the proposals submitted to it. It would be a great stimulus to constructive legislation. And it would enable American citizens to place responsibility just where it belongs.

Government by committee should cease and it will cease just as soon as the people of the Unitede States want it to cease.—C. E. World.

ONE WE ALL LIKE TO MEET.

"If ever there was a person good to meet it is Jane Gray," said Mrs. ——s, as she put down her sleeves and washed her hands at the sink. "It is better than seeing the doctor any time, if the soul needs medicine. Here I was yesterday so downhearted that I scarcely knew how to brace up: everything I did was a task, and my spirits were all out of sorts.

"Then Jane came in like a bit of sunshine and saved me from myself.

"She didn't go about it by giving me advice, or anything of that sort. She saved me by kind words and friendly interest.

"I guess she saw by my eyes that I had been crying, but she took no more notice of it than if my face had been wreathed in smiles.

"'O Mollie,' she said, 'I'm glad to see you. You will know how glad when I tell you I walked all the way over from Gray's Ferry for that very purpose.'

"'Gray's Ferry is seven miles away, and a rough, hilly road at that.'

"'You dear little woman,' I cried, smiling in spite of myself.

"'Yes, I did,' she laughed, laying aside wraps and taking up the dish towel.

"'All I need is plenty to do, and I'm happy,' she cotninued, 'I had just about run out of work at home, when something seemed to tell me I would find some here.'

"'That's right,' I sighed. "The work fairly piles up in this house.'

"And, thank the Lord, you have the strength to do it. You are one of the richest women I know, Mrs. Ellis. With Tom for a husband and three bright, healthy, growing boys, you are really to be envied, dear.'

"I had not looked at it in that light before, although Iknew Tom was the best husband living, and that our boys were beyond compare.

"Sit down and count your blessings, Mrs. Ellis, and you will find you would not exchange lots with any one.'

"'I am sure of that,' I cried, 'and you must not think me ungrateful, but sometimes the sun hides itself a bit behind the clouds.'

"'Then look for the silver lining: it is sure to be there. There was no cloud ever so dense that it did not eventually yield to the sun's rays. It is never wise to give up to discouragement, for it is always better farther on.'

"Well, those kind words saved me, and made me see things as they really were."—Philadelpnia Ledger

THE TIME FOR TENDERNESS.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them: the kind things you mean to say when they are gone say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins send to brighten, cheer and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.—Hon. Tom Ochiltree of Texas.

CONTINUE STEADFAST.

Let no inference from the blessed truth of Christ's "ability to keep" beguile us into slackness in watching, praying, adoring, reading, thinking, believing in secret. Rather let us all the more practice diligence over the secret means of grace, because of a joyful recognition of the mighty present reality of grace—that is to say, of "God working in us."—Handley C. G. Moule.

THEORY OF SERVICE.

The path of obedience to an ideal is ever the path of the highest joy. Life then becomes an open road. It is taking its travelers somewhere. The call of undiscovered continents, of uninvented appliances of life, of unrevealed secrets in earth, sea and sky, and of unchampioned reform in behalf of brotherhood, have startled innumerable hosts of men out of common-placeness into a thrilling and sublime realization of life. We lead such common lives. Created in the image of God, vast multitudes live like beasts. They take no distant views. They have no stirring sense of a mission. No clear call of duty arouses them from the lethargy of trivial pleasurs. No great theory of life summons them from the mean and little search after position and wealth.

The closed doors of a selfish life shut out the hopeless cry of despondent men for a Savior. They see no cross to be carried, no crown to be achieved, no battle to be fought, and no race to be won. There is not one among you who is not capable of vast enterprises. The soul was fashioned for divine tasks. It lives upon grand enthusiasms. It is awakened into song by world-themes and roused to battle by race-conflicts. No matter how small your life may seem or how shut in from great living you fee. yourselves to be, there are heroic enterprises at your door which can kindle sublime enthusiasms in your soul and lift you out of commonness into fellowship with the princes of the world. At your very door to day the world's greatest enthusiasms, its purest satisactions, its most sublime heroisms, and it brightest coronations are begging for your notice and appreciation; for there is no career open to any person in the world more exalted, more rich in joy, more sublime in enterprise, or more brilliant in reward than to be a sevrant in the kingdom of God.—J. B. Ascham.

BIRDS AS SHEPHERDS.

Few know of the shepherd birds of South America. They belong to the crane family and are known as yakamiks. These curious birds take care of large flocks of sheep, leading them to pasture early in the morning, and caring for them all day unaided. If any stray animals approach the flock the yakamik attacks them with beak and wings. They are said to be much stronger than dogs.

God can do His best when you do your best.

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Halifax Ct., Feb. 29 to Mar. 3.
Roanoke Ct., Mar. 5-7.
Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Davidson Ct.

We held our quarterly meeting on Saturday before the third Sunday in January. There was a very good turnout of the members. The financial report was not what it might have been. We are getting ready to repair three of our churches. We are looking for a good year's work. Brethren, pray for us; there have been a great many deaths in the bounds of our work. The writer has held eight funeral since Conference. Brother John Sexton is in a very low state. We ask the readers of the Herald to pray for him; he is one of our strongest financial men on the Davidson Circuit. Success to the Herald.

J. W. Hulin.

Lincolnton.

The attendance in our Sunday school for the month of February has not been so good, but the collections have been very good. I will give the attendance and collection for the month of February: 1st Sunday, Pres., 46; Col., $2.38; 2nd. Pres., 49; Col. $3.62; 3rd Sunday, Pres., 28; Col., $1.69; 4th Sunday, Pres., 51; Col. $4.14. We are expecting to do better when the weather gets better.

We will have our examination on Teacher Training this week. We are just completing our second 10 lessons which are taken from theNew Testament. Will give the results later.

Success to the Herald and its many readers. X.

Asheville.

Dear Editor:

Our people here are surely getting anxious to get to work on our church. We feel sure that we will have a home in which to worship God in the near future.

Our Sunday school is growing and taking on more interest.

Bro. Casto gave us a splendid sermon at the morning service. His text was taken from Matt. 16: 24—Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him take up his cross and follow me.

Bro. Fogleman always give us a good sermon. He will preach for us next Sunday at both morning evening services.

Our prayer meetings are very helpful.

We ask the prayers of all Christians for the work here. Effie Barrett,

Reporter.

Giles' Chapel S. S.

Dear Editor:

I have been thinking of writing to the Herald for some time, but have been waiting for the reporter to do the reporting, but reporters on Richland Circuit have not been very busy in 1912.

Our new pastor has been active and has filled every appointment at Giles Chapel and gave us a grand sermon 5th Sunday in January. I think he has made good impressions on the people. All seem to be highly pleased. I regret to say the attendance has not been large. There has not been a favorable Sunday in 1912 for a large congregation. We do not complain about the severe winter—it is God's work; but we can look backward a few years when nearly every Sunday was favorable for church worship.

The thought comes to our mind, did we make good those golden opportunities as we should while God smiled on us with the mild winter breezes? No, we have no room to complain.

We elected our Sunday school officers for 1912 for an evergreen Sunday school and we are not willing to concede that it is not, notwithstanding our reporter of February 19th in last week's Herald said we had gone into winter quarters—like Washington at Valley Forge. He went into winter quarters because it was not profitable to keep up a campaign in the winter. Not so with us. We have met together every Sunday that it has been fit to go, and today, 25th, we held school with fifteen scholars, and will every Sunday that we can get enough out. Our people, generally speaking, are not willing to be idle, and I feel like saying we have done about the best we could. If it is raining or too cold or muddy to go to Sunday school we can pray, "and we need to." I expect good results this year. There is nothing discouraging except the average attendance; it will not be as high as last year unless we run above Bro. Stephenson's normal, 40 or 50. We did that list summer and there is no reason why we should not again, and we will if we try. Everyone doing their part in using their influence for the Sunday school. Everyone brought into the Sunday school is a recruit in one of the largest Christian organizations in the world. We cannot estimate the value of one soul brought into the great army of Sunday school workers, what it may accomplish in a lifetime.

Dear Sunday schol workers everywhere, think on these things. May we put forth every effort to make the year 1912 the best year that has ever been.

Yours for success, J. C. Allred.

Giles Chapel, Feb. 26, 1912.

East Winston M. P. Church.

Dear Herald:

Our Sunday school attendance was very encouraging last Sunday; we had 62 present and it was very bad weather, although the rain has not held the attendance very much. We have had present this month (February) the following number: 43, 47, 57, 62 and have on roll 69 members.

Rev. S. M. Needham filled his regular appointment the second Sunday evening in February. He preached a good sermon, bringing out many helpful points. Last Sunday Mr. Needham was sick and we could not have any service. We hope he will soon be able to be with us again.

On Thursday evening, three weeks ago, the Sunday school and congregation were given an illustrated lecture on "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." The house was crowded and several were turned away for lack of room. Mr. W. A. Speer was unable to attend and the lecture was given in by his daughter in his absence. Mr. Henry Martin rendered a solo at the close of the lecture "Where is My Wandering Boy To-night," which was illustrated with the pictures. Several songs were sung by the school.

Mr. W. A. Speer, our Superintendent who has been at his home sick for the past eight weeks, was able to be with us last Sunday again. Mrs. R. L. Jordan, one of our members, has been very sick. Reporter.

Gray's Chapel.

On account of sickness our pastor, Mr. Lassiter, failed to fill his appointment last fourth Sunday. The church and his many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

We have had no Sunday school this winter on account of rough weather, but we hope we will have a good one when spring comes. We hope our people all will be interested enough to come regularly to Sunday school and preaching.

Miss Corna Lineberry and Mr. Erastus Routh were happily married on last Sunday, February 25, 1912. They both are popular young people of this section. Church and neighborhood wish for them a long and happy journey through life.

F. Routh, Reporter.

Feb. 26, 1912.

Lincoln Circuit.

DearBro. McCulloch:

We arrived at our new home on December 12, 1911. We have met many friends since we have been here. Why do I say friends? Because they have manifested the fact by the many nice things they have presented to us. We have received from the people at Bess' Chapel: flour, meat, sugar, coffee, chickens, eggs, butter, milk and sausage. From Hebron: flour, meat, canned fruit, dried fruit, canned beans, berries and honey; Laurel Hill: corn, meat canned goods, corn and fodder for the horse from Pleasant Hill and Hebron. Laurel Hill, Macedonia sends corn and wheat. We can't find words to express our gratitude to those friends for their kindness. but there is something behind all this that we prize more highly—that noble spirit that prompts men and women to do those deeds of kindness. May the Lord bless those people for their many favors and give them a harvest of plenty.

We have filled all appointments on the work since Dec. 12, 1911. Congregations have been good considering the bad weather.

One the morning of February 18, at 8:30 A. M., Mr. Floyd Childers and Miss Flossie Houser were happily united in matrimony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Houser, by their pastor. These young people are very popular and are of the first families of this community, and we wish for them a life of happiness and prosperity.

On the morning of February 22, while standing near fire that had been placed around wash-pot, the clothes of Miss Cassie Hoyle, the 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pinkney Hoyle, caught fire, causing death in about 18 hours. Her mother was near her when her clothes caught fire, and burned her hands severely in trying to put out the fire. She was laid to rest in the Bess' Chapel cemetery February 25, 1912. She was an obedient, kind and lovable girl.

Fraternally, L. H. Hatley.

February 27, 1912.

Cleveland Ct.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Kistlers, Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January. The business was attended to. The conference, by a standing vote, expressed their appreciation of what pastor had done to route whiskey dealers from the mountain district of the circuit, also pledging him their hearty co-operation in money or whatever else might be necessary. As a result of this effort quite a number of the men and their families have fled to Virginia to evade the law.

Rev. H. W. Braswell ran over from Shelby and helped us much in the business of conference, preaching us a good sermon on Saturday on the grace of liberality. Another on Sunday that inspired our confidence is the Master and His willingness and ability to do for us. Conference was an enthusiastic one.

Friendship is now cutting logs to build new and more comfortable seats. This is a very important improvement—it helps the people to hear if they are comfortable. Many have been the expressions of kindness received from this kind people since our return for the fourth year. Those remembering us very recently are: Mrs. John Kistler, Mrs. Clestie Biggerstaff, Bro. Kendrie, furnishing us free of charge wood for the entire year, and also, we were kindly remembered by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stout of Siler City, with a large assortment of valuable California extracts. These good people were our props in other days and we are delighted to know that we are still remembered.

W. D. R.

Brown Summit Church.

Bro. Millaway filled his appointment last Sunday and preached an excellent sermon. We had a very congregation considering the bad roads. We are hoping to have better attendance when the weather opens up.

This church has always had evening services, but now we have morning service and I think this charge will help to build up our church. We are looking forward to that end.

Our Sunday school has been progressing very slowly for the past month on a count of bad weather.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers W. H. Chilcutt, Rep.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Sunday school becoming alive again. An interesting number present last Sunday. Names taken for membership to the H. O. society of this place for the purpose of reorganizing same next Sunday. Work to begin immediately.

W. Polk Garrett.

Feb. 27, 1912.

Bartee-Apple.

Last Wednesday night about the time the wind was blowing a 40-mile gale and right about 8 P. M., in the home of bride's parents and in the midst of several friends, I performed the solemn rite of matrimony that united Mr. John Bartee and J. Bettie Apple in holy wedlock. The parlor was beautifully arranged for the happy occasion. Mr. Bartee is one of our successful young farmers of the Midway community and his bride is one of our most accomplished young ladies. They anticipate building near Brother Bartee's father's. O how good it is for the son to take a hold in an agreeable fashion and move the business on with great respect to the parents! We bespeak a good voyage for them across the sea of life and wishing for them success.

C. E. M. Raper.

Thompson.

Blanche V. Thompson, daughter of John and Eliza Coble, and wife of Frank Thompson, was born March 21st, 1883, died February 25, 1912. Aged 28 years, 11 months and 4 days. She was married Dec. 24th, 1902. To this union were born five children, four of which are living, two little boys and two little girls. The youngest is but about three weeks old.

The subject of this sketch was converted in early life and joined the M. P. church at Mt. Hermon. The writer has been informed that she lived a consistent member until death. The funeral was conducted by the writer at the church, of which she was a member, February 26th, after which, in the presence of a host of friends and relatives, her remains were laid to await the resurrection morn.

The church has lost a good member, the Sunday school a friend, the community a kind neighbor, the children a loving mother, and the husband a true wife. May God greatly bless the husband, the four little children and all other bereaved friends and relatives.

E. G. Lowdermilk.

EXPENSES OF DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The editor of this paper was appointed by the Annual Conference to receive money raised for this purpose. We will asknowledge all receipts in Herald instead of sending receipts by letter.

High Point .....$$11.00
Rev. S. M. Needham 1.00

J. F. McCulloch.

—Three cheers for Rev. W. D. Reed! He has driven whiskey sellers out of North Carolina into Virginia. Now let the Virginia people take up the good work and let others follow, and let these enemies of the people be kept on the move till they are driven beyond the limits of human habitation.

PASS THE WEBB BILL.

That the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association is fighting the passage by Congress of the Webb bill which is to end the interstate commerce character of intoxicating liquors is a thing which was of course to be expected. In this fight the Liquor Dealers Association is maintaining a publicity department, and is scattering broadcast over the country from Cincinnati, but under the Chicago date line, articles boosting the interstate traffic and condemning the Webb Bill. In blackletters on the envelopes containing the articles sent to newspapers throughout the country there is "Rush! News Matter."

In an alleged news article under date of Febuary 7 is the protest of President Dennehy of the National Liquor Dealers Association, and the gist of it is that such a measure as the Web bill would prove injurious to druggists in "dry" territory,and that the individual purchaser of liquor for his own use might find himself charged with "intent" to dispose of some of it illegally, that such a charge would cost him much in the courts in defending his case.

The argument is a specious one, and is advanced only to catch the ear of the public with a complaint. States which by statutes or in the constitution have prohibited the sale or manufacture of liquor are entitled to make their laws effective, and they can never fully attain this till there is an end of the evil of allowing one State, to over-ride the laws of another State, and to debauch its people who have outlawed liquor. The Webb bill, or one which carries its provisions, should be enacted into law. The forces which stand for law , order and prohibition in States in which liquor has been barred should become active, and petitions to pass the Web bill should be sent in increasing numbers to the Congress of the United States.

The Web bill, which embodies the views of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, the AntiSaloon League of America, and allied forces is now before tne Judiciary Committee of Congress. Its purpose is to prevent the shipment of intoxiccating liquors from any State into another when such shipment is intended to be used in violation of the prohibition law of the State into which it is shipped, and that contracts based on such shipments shall be null and void. It is a law that is needed, it ought to be passed. As it is now before Congress the issue raised is as to whether that body will give more heed to the call of the liquor interests to defeat it, or to the forces standing for the best interest of the people of this country. The manufacturers and vendors of intoxicating liquors base their proteste on the basis of the dollar. The advocates of the measure base theirs upon the conservation of manhood and womanhood. Which ought to prevail? Which will prevail? The States in which prohibition is the law are entitled to protection, and it is that which is being demanded. There should be no doubt as to the issue, if the Congress of the United States will do that which is just and right. —News and Observer.

WALKING THE DECK WITH THE DOCTOR.

The ship's doctor is a busy man, inasmuch as he is at the constant call of anybody who needs his help day or night, and can hardly say that his time is his own. Nevertheless, he leads a rather inactive life. So it was no surprise to me to see the ship surgeon trudging manfully around the deck an hour before breakfaast taking exercise.

Having the honor of his aquantaince through sitting at his table, and needing a little exercise myself, I asked him if I might join him. We walked and talked until the signal for breakfast came, and it was a good long walk too. Ten times around the ship's deck make a mile, and there certainly were several miles of it.

After dinner, the conversation having been pleasurable, I asked the doctor if he would take another walk. He bristled up with indignation. "What! take exercise after eating? You, publisher of a health paper and don't know better than that? even the cows and the dogs know enough to lie down and rest after a full meal. Take your exercise before eating and rest after it. No, sir! I keep as still as I can after dinner and let my food digest."

The reply set me to thinking. Was the doctor right? At the Battle Creek sanitarium, exercises are taken both before and after breakfast, after dinner, and after supper in the evening, and are especially designed to aid digestion by promoting the movement of blood through the abdominal region. This does not quite coincide with the ship doctor's idea of keeping still after eating.

So when doctors disagree, who shall decide? Here perhaps lies the truth: Like the men who read inscriptions on the opposite side of the same shield, both are right. Severe exercise after eating is unhygienic. No one should eat who has not taken exercise of some form; for he will not be in a condition to digest his food properly. Work or exercise of some sort should come before the meal. If, as often happens, there has been little or no physical activity before eating; a little gentle exercise after it may favor digestion, instead of hindering it. The child who goes home to dinner in a hurry, and hurries back, is getting his meal under very injurious conditions. But the child who has a short, brisk walk before dinner,and time enough for a leisurely return to school after it, is taking exercise in the way which is calculated to promote perfect digestion. —Selected.

That which makes this world seem solid is not the rocks and mountains in it, but the love in it, Tthe longer we live on in love, the more beautiful the world becomes, the more rich and precious life seems. As we live on we seem to grow younger, not older. It is the young who are oftenest tired of life; the good old man wonders that he could ever have been weary of life. H feeels th einfinite riches of the universe and thanks God in the depths of a happy heart for the gift of life.—James Freeman Clarke.

The Korean not only memorizes Scripture: he puts it into practice. One day there came to a mission station a sturdy Christian from the north. After the usual greetings he was asked the purpose of his visit. His reply was: "I have been memorizing some verses in t e Bible and have come to recite them." He lived a hundred miles away and had walked all that distance, traveling four nights—a long stroll—to recite some verses of Scripture to his pastor, but he was listened to as he recited in Korean, without a verbal error, the entire Sermon on the Mount. He was told that if he simply memorized it, it would be a feat of memory and nothing more; he must practice its teachings. His face lighted up with a smile as he replied: "That is the way I learned it. I tried to memorize it, but it wouldn't stick, so I hit on this plan: I would memorize a verse, and then find a heathen neighbor of mine and practise the verse on him. Then I found it would stick."

There is no doubt that the character of preaching has undergone a great change, and I do not know that I recall a singleinstance during the year when I heard a sermon which in any way reminded me of John the Baptist's warning cry: "Flee from the wrath to come." In my boyhood, that was the note that brought about my conversion. IIt is the decay of the emphasisupon the exceeding sinfulness of sin that I deplore.

I rejoice in the gospel of salvation to eternal life, but I wish that hearers were reminded more frequntly of sin and its wages—eternal death—that they need to be saved from.

This aspect of the gospel is largely missing from modern preaching. As Dr. Hale once said:' ' No one fears God now." Exactly! I think we have got too flabby through emphasizing the fatherhood of God while losing sight of His holiness. We seem to speak as if God will always look with complacency on human sin. The absence of the harder note in preaching is not all gain. —Mortgay Holmes.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

"Have you and I today
Stood silent as with Christ, apart from joy or fray
Of life, to see by faith His face;
To look, if but a moment, at Its grace,
And grow, by brief companionship, more true,
More nerved to lead, to dare, to do,
For Him, at any cost? Have we today
Found time, in thought, our hands to lay
In His and thus compare
His with ours, and wear
The impress of His wish? Be sure
Such contact will endure
Throughout the day; will help us to walk erect
Through storm and flood; detect
Within the hidden life, sin's dross, its stain;
Revive a thought of love for Him again;
Steady the steps which waver; help us see
The footpath meant for you and me."

A CALL FOR MISSIONARIES.

Twenty-five of the principal Foreign Missionary Societies of the United States and Canada have sent us urgent calls for several hundred qualified men and women whom they wish to send to the mission field this year. A summary of these lists shows the following:

Men.—
Agricultural Teachers	2
Builders	7
Business Agents & commercial teach..	4
Engineer (mechanical)	1
Institutional worker	1
Mechanic (practical)	1
Printer	1
Student Christian As. workers	2
Ordained & evangelistic workers	244
Physicians	48
Teachers (college or normal trained	50
Total	361
Women—
Domestic Science teacher	1
Kindergartners	14
Music teachers	6
Nurses	22
Orphanage Mothers & Director of Boys' Home	3
Physicians	26
Teachers: (college or normal trained	82
Evangelistic workers & Bible teach.	114
Total	268
Grand total	629

Sincerely yours,
Wilbur B. Smith,
Candidate Secretary.

COURAGE IN THE PULPIT.

The charge is made by some ministers that there are many pastors who do not feel free to preach all that they believe. It is asserted that those men do not dare to proclaim certain things which they regard as being true and necessary. Such a statement seems to mean that those preachers are moral cowards. This is the meaning which many people give to such an assertion. But the idea is hotly resented by a large number of ministers. One of these, who says that he has been a pastor for twenty-six years, in replying to a ministerial writer, who had stated that many a pastor was not free to preach all of the truth, says: "I have never hesitated to preach the truth as I see it, whether the subject be theology, Biblical interpretation and criticism, or public and private morality, and I have yet to find any real criticism of my straightforwardness in dealing with truth. These men who talk about a minister not being allowed to be a man, or regarded as a man, who protest that he is fettered and bound in the pulpit and dares to preach only what he knows the pews will like, make me very weary. Their complaints are a tremendous indictment of their own competency. The pulpit of today is the freest platform on earth to a man who has the saving grace of common sense, and who has earned the confidence of his people by a life of genuine piety and real service among them." All this may be true of this man, and many others like him; and yet there is reason to believe that some liberal preachers, occupying the pulpits of evangelical churches, do not regard it as being good policy to openly declare all that they believe. This is the testimony of a considerable number of "liberal" preachers. They say that, "for certain reasons," they think it best to continue to privately hold to their real views on certain questions or subjects. This may not be owing to a lack of courage, but as a matter of selfish policy. Perhaps there is a fear of their losing a desirable pastorate. At any rate, there is a lack of downright honesty in the man who acts thus. If a liberal preacher be occupying a conservative pulpit, or one which is reputed to be such, he should have principle enough to depart and go where he really belongs. Then, too, some preachers have too much courage of the wrong kind. They boldly proclaim a false gospel, and by such means they lead weak ones into eternal destruction. The true minister is courageous in his loyalty to Christ.

C. H. Wetherbe.

THE TWENTY-NINTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE N. C. SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION, ASHEVILLE, APRIL 23-25.

Among the speakers will be Rev. Frank lin McElfresh, D. D., Teacher Training Superintendent of the International Sunday School Association.

Each County is entitled to as many delegates as there are townships in the County.

Delegates shall be chosen by the county officers or Executive Committee. Those desiring to be appointed should send their names to their County Sunday School Secretary or to J. Van Carter, Raleigh.

Free entertainment will be proviedd for delegates by the citizens of Asheville.

Every delegate will pay a registration fee of $1.00. This will be paid at Asheville, when assignment to home is made. All registered delegates will receive: Entertainment during the convention, a convention badge, a convention program, a right to a voice and vote in all deliberations of the body.

The railroads will grant reduced rates. These will be announced later.

WHAT JOHNNY GAVE.

Johnny gave a cent to missions—
One whole cent—how large it seemed!
Johnny felt himself a giver
As upon the plate it gleamed.
One bright cent from Johnny's pocket,
Where a nickel and a dime
And three other duller pennies
Were reposing at the time.
"I should like to go for missions,"
Said the nickel, looking glum;
"But I know too well I'm booked for Cigarettes or chewing gum!"
"I would love to help the heathen,"
Cried the dime; "but then, you see,
Johnny wants a new dime novel
That he's going to buy with me."
"Well, we wish," the three cents murmured,
"Johnny would have let us go;
But for marbles, cakes, or taffy
We'll be quickly spent, we know."
So they sighed and wished; but Johnny,
Wrapped in generous self-content,
Felt himself a Christian truly,
Since he'd freely given a cent!
—Priscilla Leonard, in Sabbath School Visitor.

It is said that the flag of the new Republic of China has a white ground with a yellow disc in the center surrounded by eighteen stars representing the eighteen provinces of China. Exit the old dragon! May idolatry and superstition go with him!

WHEN I'M GROWN UP.

These are things I'll never do
When I'm all grown up like you:
Send my little girl to bed
When her story-book's half read;
Call her in to practice scales
When she's hunting Indian trails;
Make her keep her apron on
When she wears her best pink gown;
Give her just oatmeal and bread
When the rest have cakes instead;
Comb the snarls out twice a day
When her hair gets rough in play—
Was your hair so hard to curl
When you were a little girl?

Lucy Heald, in Kindergarten Review.

A PACKAGE OF MIXED SEED.

"Have you any seeds of kindness for sale?" a little boy asked at a seed store.

"Seeds of kindness? what are they?" asked the seedsman.

"Why, in our Bible school we sing:

"Then scatter seeds of kindness
For our reaping by and by.

"I have a little garden, and I want to plant some kindness seeds."

"O, they come in a mixed package," said the seeds man as he took a big book from the shelf.

"That looks like a Bible," the little boy thought, and sure enough, it was.

"Let me see; I think I will find that package of seeds in the first chapter of second Peter," said the man. "Yes, there it is See if you can read it for me, beginning with the fifth verse."

So the boy read: "And besides this, giving all dilligence, add to your faith virtue: and to virtue knowledge and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity."

"Eight kinds of seeds in this package you see," said the man.

"But aren't there any real seed?" asked the boy. "Does it just mean that you are to be kind to folks?"

"Yes, that is what it means," said the man. "But kindness and charity and faith are real things; and if you plant them in your heart, they will live and grow, just as seeds grow in the garden."

"What is reaping by and by?" said the boy

"It means that if you are kind, people will be kind to you," said the man. "Better than all, it means that God, who is kind to the unthankful and evil, will be pleased with you."

"I shall find that package of mixed seeds in my Bible when I get home," said the boy, "and it may help me to remember to be kind all the time."—Classmate.

PLURAL AND SINGULAR.

We'll begin with a box, and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes;
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of mouse should never be meese;
You may find a lone mouse or a whole lot of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not hice;
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be called cows or kine,
But if bow is repeated it is never called bine.
And the plural of vow is vows, not vine.
And if I speak of a foot you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth, and whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that, and three would be those,
Yet the plural of hat would never be hose,
And the plural of cat is cats, not cose.
We speak of a brother and also of brethren,
But though we say mother, we never say methren,
Then masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine, she, shis and shim.
So the English, I think, you all will agree
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see. —Ex.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Some of us are born foolish and never outgrow it.

Many people suffer intensly over imaginary injuries.

All things come more quickly to him who tips the waiter.

It is better to appreciate wisdom than to be appreiated by fools.

It sometimes happens that a man who talks like a book is plagiarist.

An engaged couple prefer a lip to lip silence rather than a heart to heart talk.

—Little girl, four years old, was saying her prayers. She had heard auntie say during the day that she wished it would get hot again as her rheumatism did not bother so much then. After little girlie had remembered all the rest of the family in her prayers there was a long pause, and then she said: "And please make it hot for auntie."

There was once a man named Costello,
Who was a most stingy old fello;
To church he oft went,
Donated a cent,
And brought home a fine silk umbrello.
— Woman's Home Companion.

SOME QUESTIONS.

If you had as many feet as a centipede has, how long would it take you to put on your shoes and stockings and lace and tie all your shoes?

If you had a mouth as small as a chigger has, how long would it take you to eat your breakfast?

If you had as long a neck as a giraffe has, what would you have to pay for your standing collars?

If you couldn't travel any faster than a snail does, what time would you have to start to school to be there for the opening?

ORPHANS' HOME.

The Mocksville people remembered us kindly with a box containing canned fruit, tea, soda, soap, meat, dry goods, etc. We would like to thank each one that helped in any way—especially Mrs. J. B. Robertson for her interest and efforts. The children are all well in the Home regardless of the disagreeable weather. In our devotional services tonight one little boys prayed that we might have sunshine in our hearts if we didn't have it out doors. I thought what a privilege is ours to have sunshine in our hearts, even if dark clouds are overhead.

Pray for us that we may provide the children entrusted to our care with spiritual food as well as temporal.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Moriah S. S.	$6.00
Friendship Council No. 82, Jr. O. U. A. M.	5.00
Friendship S. S., Stanley Ct.	1.03
D. S. Leonard	1.00
R. E. Leonard	1.00
S. E. Leonard	5.00
Mrs. Martha Leonard	.50
Spring Valley S. S.	3.04
Asheville S. S.	1.00
Pinnacle and Mt. Zion	2.62
Henderson S. S.	23.70
Henderson Boys' Mission Band	3.00
Total	$52.89

IN MEMORIAM.

In Memory of our Baby, Paul Jones Deviney.

While all was hushed in darkness on the morning of February 17th, about 4 o'clock, the death angel came and claimed our dear baby boy, Paul Jones Deviney, to go live with Jesus. He had only been with us fifteen months and nineteen days. How hard it was to give up our baby; he was just the right age to be so cute in his ways. Papa, mama, and little brothers all loved him so dearly. But we must be submissive and not grieve over the baby, for we already realize he is much better off than we. And now we have a precious jewel in heaven only waiting and beckoning papa, mama, brothers and loved ones to come be with him some sweet day—and there will be no more parting, no more tears.

All that was possible was done for little Paul by kind friends and attentive physician, but God needed him to make up his jewels in heaven. His life was only budded on earth to bloom in heaven. We do so much thank our kind neighbors and friends for their untiring help rendered us during the four weeks' sickness of our baby. Everybody was a friend to the baby, and the baby was a friend to everybody while well. He was so loving, always ready to go to anybody, therefore he had many friends.

Dear Little Paul has left us,
Gone just on before,
Waiting and watching to meet us
Over on the other shore.

Lovingly, Mama.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE.

A famous British theologian recently visited America, and traveleled across the continent delivering lectures, and everywhere receiving honor and gathering impressions of the New World. He met with ardor the strange experiences, and accepted gladly the unaccustomed situations in which he found himself. He came to learn, as well as to teach, he said, and was open-minded, generous and heartily apreciative.

One of the most interesting experiences which came to him, as he declared at the time, and has since writen was in witnessing a great work in one of the large cities on the Pacific coast. A high hill which rose in the path of the growth off the city was cut down a hundred and fifty feet, ond the earth so removed was used to fill in a strip along the water-front, for the purpose of gaining available building-space both on the hilltop and adding it on the bay—two valuable parts of the city.

The power used for this work was water, forced up by mighty pumps through re-enforced mains a foot and a half in diameter. The stream elevated was forced out of a five-inch nozzle, and hurled with tremendous velocity against the face of the hill, tearing out earth and gravel, which the decending waters bore with them, through sluiceways, to the harbor, and deposited in the space assigned.

The theologian rode in a motor-car round the works, saw the plan and method, and then climbed the steep way up to where the great nozzle was at work. He wished to handle this, and was permited to do so.

The old placer-miner who directed the nozzle showed him how to work the lever and direct the stream. This nozzle was called "the giant," to distinguish it from a number of smaller nozzles which did lighter work. It was as large as a cannon, and capable of moving a ton of earth in a minute.

The eminent scholar took the lever in the hand that had writen many books, and for an hour directed the stream. It was difficult to get him away to meet another engagement. A camera was brought, and later he was surprised to get a photograph of himself at this strange work. He said he prized it as he prized nothing else that he could take back with him from America.

"What fascinati n!" he cried. "I shouted with the joy of achievement. Wherever I directed the stream, earth and stones flew to right and left, and the decending stream bore it all down to the harbor. What poetry of accomplishment! What glory of the sense of power under control!

"But the best of it was a certain spiritual ecstasy. For every such achievement has its spiritual side. We ought never to think of any such thing solely in terms of the material. The prophets of old rejoiced when the valleys were exalted and the mountains and the hills laid low for moral ends, for the bettering of human life. Why should not we?

"Such things are not to be estimated merely in tons or cubic yards or dollars. These are but the physical expression of man's mastery over the forces of nature for moral ends.

"For myself, I felt a thrill of the Omnipotent in this conscious power over land and water. Reverently I can declare that, having had faith, I was able to say to this mountain, 'Be thou removed and be thou cast into the sea.' That is not merely a physical triumph. No man who does any great work like this can afford to do it other than reverently. It is a masterpiece of faith.—Youth's Companion.

WHY THE KING'S BUSINESS REQUIRES HASTE.

We have grown somewhat accustomed to the statement that nearly every non-Christian land today is in a state of crisis touching religious matters. Indeed it may be that we have occosionally grown a little weary of the constant reiteration of this thought. And yet more than likely we have never quite realized it with the emphasis that we should, or understood as fully as we might why it was so. The Right Honorable James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, writing in the first number of the new International Review of Missions, will help us both to appreciate the fact and understand more fully the reason of it. In an article of unusual interest and strength he put the matter in this waty, and knowing him as we do we must admit that he speaks with authority;

"The age in which we are now living is a critical time. It is perhaps, the most critical moment there has ever been in the history of the non-Christian nations, a moment most significant in its bearing upon their future. . . . Our material civilization is permeating every part of the earth, and telling, as it never told before, upon every one of the non-Christian peoples. In another fifty years that which we call our civilization will have overspread the earth and extinguished the native customs and organizations of the savege and semi-civilized peoples. They are being exploited as they never were before, and the means of transportation by land and sea which have penetrated among them have brought foreigners everywhere, and are completly breaking up and destroying not only the materterial conditions of their life, but also their ideas and beliefs and worships, their ancient customs and all that is associated with these customs and beliefs. Their morality, such as it was, with all its tolerance of vices and all its degrading practices, was nevertheless, for for some purposes sanction which elevated their notions and directed their actions for some good purposes All of this is crumbling away and disappearing, pershing under the shock and impact of the stronger civilization which the European peoples have brought with them. Unless the backward races receive some new moral basis of life, some beliefs and precepts by which they can live, something to control their bad impulses and help them to form worthy conceptions of life and work, their last state will be worse than the first."

Surely now is the accepted time in mission work, and a little later will only make the task harder and more taxing, as well as more hopeless.—Christian Gaurdian.

—Obliging Clerk: "Well little girl, what can I do fo yrou today?"

Little girl: "I'd like a quart of molakek. I can't say molakek, so I have to say molakek."—Lippincott's.

ABOUT SMALLPOX.

It is Not a Scourge to All Mankind—It is Only a Punishment Threatening the Unvaccinated.

Smallpox is a deadly, disgraceful, disfiguring disease. It is largely a disease of apathy, ignorance and heathendom. It rarely occurs in a modern, progressive, intelligent community. It never attacks vaccinated people. In certain parts of the United States it is so rare that whole States go for years without a single death from that disease. In 1909 such States as Pennslyvania, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Maine did not have a single death from smallpox. Many physicians in such States have never even seen the disease. Why? Because vaccination is so general there.

A century and a quarter ago, however, things were different. That was before the days of vaccination. Then not less than 10 per cent of all deaths were due to smallpox. In Europe 400,000 lives were annually lost from this disease.

In Germany, Sweden, Denmark, and even Cuba and the Philippines epidemics of smallpox are unknown. Why? Because there, everybody is vaccinated; there they have compulsory vaccination laws. But we live in a free country. Here a man may be vaccinated or take his chance with the disease. Smallpox is no longer a scourge. It is only a dreadful punishment which threatens the unvaccinated. But the vaccinated need have no fear of the disease. They are positively protected. To which class do you belong?—N. C. Board of Health.

DO YOU NEED A TYPEWRITER?

The editor of the Herald will be glad to put you on track of a new typewriter that is as good, so far as he can see, as the machines that sell for $100. It looks well, works well, doing all the variety of work the other machines do, and I see no reason why it should not last as long as others, and it sells in this introductory period for only $50. One dollar sent to the manufacturers with the necessary character testimonials, will cause them to send you a machine for a trial of five days. If you buy, you can pay $3 a month until the machine is paid for. Let me hear from any one interested, and I will send more information.

J. F. McCulloch.

Greensboro, N. C.

At Rest.

The remains of the infant child of the Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Williams was placed beneath the sod in the cemetery at Pleasant Hill Church, Feb. 24. It is not necessary for us to multiply words concerning the death of a little child, because God hath need of such in glory.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer. May God bless the father and mother in their bereavement.

S. M. Needham.

—"Father," inquired the small boy, making his first visit to the army post, "What house is that over there?"

"That's the Government Headquarters, Jimmy."

A long puzzled silence, then: "Father, where are its hindquarters?" —Ibid.

—A Reidsville paper reports that Rev. C. E. M. Rayer received a pounding —of the sort that does not hurt much.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Spring Church & Greenville, Feb. 27 March 4.
Littleton, March 4-8.
Henderson and Vance, Mar. 9-13.
Granville, March 14-18.
Efland, March 20-21.
Orange, March 22.
Mebane, March 23-25.
Fairview, March 26-27.
Glen Raven and Carolina, Mar. 28-29.
Burlington, March 30-31, A. M.
Graham and Haw River, March 30-31, P. M.
Mt. Hermon, April 2-5.
Saxapahaw, April 6-9.
Alamance, April 10-15.
Siler City, April 16-22.

THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1912. NUMBER 15.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

WHAT WAIT I FOR?

I am in the heavenly places now. I look down and see the mud, the frost, the dark. This fair earth is at the end of her ministry; she has waited upon me with fruit, flowers and song. She waits to serve me to the end. I do not wait for peace, adornment, distinction; these are my heritage, my dignity, my sure possession. I have garments to adorn, bread to sustain, company to cheer, employment to gratify.

I do not wait for heaven. Heaven waits for me. I postpone my procession, I postdate my entrance; to the waiting plaudits I cry, "Hush." Why? Because there's work to do here, which I cannot do there, tears to wipe away, hearts to cheer, hands to lift up. I do not wait for correspondence to begin; if life is correspondence with our environment then I correspond. I have done this the best part of my life. I drew strength from outside, from above, cargoes of consolation come to me. I am not a stranger to the fruits, the songs, the triumphs.

The men of grace have found
Glory begun below,
Celestial fruit in earthly ground
From faith and hope do grow.

This world is good, but I have found a better, found it long ago. O, the ever-increasing, incipient glory. I have strength and mildness; if I have resignation, it is not stupid. I stoop to drink consoling joy. Grace is better than pride, and sufferings bring a charm. Armed with courage, adorned with humility, erect before men, on my knees before God, I answer the question: What wait I for?

—The Rev. H. T. Miller, in New York Observer, on entering his 85th year.

THE GREAT FAMINE IN CHINA.

Statement by the China Famine Relief Committee Co-operating with the American Red Cross.

Three millions of people in Central China are on the verge of starvation. Last summer the worst floods in forty years destroyed the crops in an area of 50,000 square miles. Many have already died of hunger and unless prompt relief is given, multitudes of men, women and children must perish.

During the last few weeks the political and military news from China has absorbed the attention and interest of the world to the exclusion of the needs of the hungry millions. No harvest can be expected until May. Until then the famine will be growing daily more acute. The people to be relieved are chiefly hard-working and honest farmers.

There is a strong Famine Relief Committee in Shanghai composed of both foreigners and Chinese of all faiths. Bishop Graves, of the Episcopal Church, is Chairman; Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former minister to the United States, Vice-Chairman; Rev. E. C. Lobenstine, of the Presbyterion Church, Secretary, and Mr. H. C. Gulland, Manager International Banking Corporation, Treasurer. This Committee will employ as many as possible of those able to labor in building dikes and in such other work as will help to prevent the recurrence of flood and famine. This work is in line with the recomendations of Mr. C. D. Jameson, an engineer sent to China by the American Red Cross. All labor is to be paid for in grain, and not in money.

As President of the American Red Cross, President Taft has issued a proclamation asking the people of the United States to help the people of China. He has joined with other officers of the Red Cross in requesting this Citizens' Committee to make known the facts. The Chinese Government and people are doing what they can to relieve the situation, but they can meet only a fraction of the need.

This is one of the greatest famines of modern times. Six hundred thousand families are without food or means of support. Fifteen dollars will save a whole family from starvation. Fifteen hundred dollars will save one hundred families. Fifteen thousand dollars will provide for one thousand families. Hundreds of thousands of lives can thus be saved if sufficiently prompt and generous contributions are made.

Remittances should be sent to Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, 1 Madison Avenue, New York. All funds received will be forwarded by cable, without any deduction whatever for expenses, to the Famine Relief Committee in China, through the Department of State at Washington.

In this time of national crisis and reconstruction in China, and in her hour of dire physical distress and suffering, may America prove a friend indeed, because a friend in time of need.

—Rev. W. C. Kennett was in our office Tuesday, in his usual bouyant state of health and spirits. He says he is now industriously engaged in doing nothing, and is making a great success of it.

—Rioting and burning and looting in China are reported.

PURPOSE IN LIFE.

Several year ago while walking along the streets of a large northern city, with the purpose of viewing its splendor and magnificance, I came by chance to a beautiful park. Eager to see the attractive scenery, I went into the park and presently came to a tall observatory from whose summit I viewed a scene which has, ever and anon, impressed me with the fact that there are men and women living purposeless lives.

Look south from the observatory's lofty summit I saw a number of little skiffs play, as it seemed, on the placid lake. Apparently they carried no cargo, nor had any purpose save that of mere play—just skimming over the surface.

This illustration reminds us of many young people—both young men and young women—who are sailing on life's sea without any purpose save that of gratifying their selfish desires, and extracting the sweets from earth's sordid and sinful pleasures. They seem to have no conception of the responsibilities and obligations that have been placed upon them with reference to themselves, their home, their fellowmen, their church and their eternal God.

As sure as the little skiff, without cargo or destination drifting in mid-ocean, will be wrecked when the first gale sweeps mercilessly across the mighty deep, so sure and swift will be the wreck and irreparable ruin of that young man or that young woman whom God places in the world to live for, and to aspire to reach a grand, a noble, a high purpose; so sure is he of swift destruction who fails to realize his possibilities, and carelessly neglects to assume his god-given responsibilities. Then, in the language of the poet:

"Live for something, have a purpose,
And that purpose ever keep in view;
Drifting like a helpless vessel,
Thou can'st ne'er to life be true."

"Half the wrecks that strew life's ocean,
If some star had been their guide,
Would have long since rode in safely,
But they drifted with the tide."

Quite a comparison is noticed when the little skiff is placed side by side in comparison wth the great ocean steamer which has a purpose and a destination in view, and carries a cargo of thousands of tons of freight. As she leaves the harbor, loaded to the maximum limit of her capacity, and manned by men who have no fear, we watch her with admiration as she plows her way through the great deeps. Finally, beyond the distant horizon she encounters a terrific gale; but having been designed and constructed for the traffic of the seas and to withstand the terrors and destructive forces of the same, she anchors safely unharmed in the harbor at the distant shore.

The foregoing illustration applies to that man or woman who, not content to live on the placid, purposeless plane of the worldly indifferent, hears the voice of the Divine as He silently, though unmistakably speaks to him, and impels him with a conscious sense of duty which inspires him to loftier efforts which qualify and equip him for a life of purpose, a life of usefulness, a life of godly service, and the goal of eternal life.

The man who succeeds in this life is the man with some fixed or definite goal in view. Man should make some distant star his goal. By God's help he finds out what He wants him to do, and then bends every fiber of his soul toward the mark set before him, and seeks to acquire such virtues, and such qualities, such training and development, as will enable him to measure up to the requirements of his Creator.

Man may be like the skiffs on the sea—driven by the wind and tossed—swayed to and fro by the storms of trials and difficulties that beset him here; or he may be like the great ocean steamers which are guided by their rudders through calm and storm alike.

Imagine two men who were rocked in the cradle of, and brought up in, the same environment. One fails, the other succeeds; one rises, the other falls; one attains to honor, the other to dishonor; the one merits heaven, the other merits hell. Why this difference? "It is the set of the soul."

"One ship driven east and another west,
With the self-same winds that blow,
'Tis the set of the sails and not of the gales
Which tell us the way they go."

"Like the winds of the sea are the winds of fate,
As we voyage along through life;
'Tis the set of the soul that decides the goal,
And not the calm or the strife."

Will H. Neese.

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 12, 1912.

BRO. BROWN WRITES AGAIN.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

I have read your comment on my communication in regard to "capitalism," in which you ask some questions which I will try to answer in my humble way. First, let me say that I believe you want the truth. Now, brother, everything from the largest animal to the smallest insect stries to maintain the life God gave it. In regard to mankind, four things are necessary: food, clothing, shelter and knowledge. And any man or set of men who robs any one of God's children of any or all of these things is an enemy of the human race. This you will readily admit. Yet forty per cent. of the people of the U. S. are within thirty days of starvation, and twenty-five per cent. never have a decent suit of clothes or a full meal. And yet the U. S. can produce enough to feed and clothe the world. The State of Texas properly farmed can feed all the people of the U. S.; yet this wealth is owned by a few. Correctly speaking, ten percent of the people own ninety per cent. of the wealth of the country, and sad to say, the wealth is owned by those who produce no wealth, and those who produce the wealth by their labor live in shacks and go ragged and hungry. Why is this my brother? Let me tell you, laws of our country are made in the interest of the capitalist. Not one law has been passed by Congress in the last twenty-five years that was in the interest of the laboring class. Is this Christ-like? Can you, my brother, uphold a system that robs the laborer of his reward in order that a few who worship at mammon's shrine may live in luxury at the expense of the many? Surely not. Why, brother, you know that poverty is the cause of most of the crime in all countries, and just as long as we continue the present profit system we will have tramps, criminals, prostitutes and drunkards. When wages are too small to sustain life men and women will seek a living in some other way. Today, women, the motherhood of our race and little children, are having their life blood carried into dollars to feed and clothe those who do no honest toil; is that Christ-like? Poverty has made 600,000 prostitutes in this country and as it takes twenty men to support one fallen woman, there must be 12,000,000 fallen men in the United States. What kind of a system are we living under? Twenty thousand people in the city of Chicago engaged in the white slave trade from which a revenue of $20,000,000 was collected in 1910, and the laws don't stop it. No, but if some thief steals ten dollars from some government office the law will get him sure. The difference is, the one is a business and the other is theft, but both unlawful. Now, brother, not to be tedious, I will agree with you as to the scripture that we should first seek the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and his righteousness means right living and I am glad that the Socialist party are in favor of every body living right and not using their talents to gouge his neighbor. You say that when Christ and the Socialists separate you prefer to go with Christ.

Thank God for that, for the ethics of Socialism are the ethics of Christianity and Christ and the two old parties have been separated so long they know not Christ. As to the Scriptures, "Take heed and keep yourselves from covetousness" would certainly sound good to Rockefeller who has just given $500,000,000 to charity the whole of which he filched from the laboring people. Again you quote. "Thou shalt not steal." I say, Amen, but there is not a millionaire to-day but who stole the greater part of his money from the common people and are paying millions today on railroad stock that is two-thirds water: is that stealing? No, we ought not to covet and the Socialists do not advocate it—only wants what he produces without giving three fourths to some one who produces nothing. My brother, you might sling the sin of covetousness to the two old parties with telling effect. Yes, I know that the production of wealth is as important as the distribution and we favor the production, transportation and distribution to be in the hands of those who produce the wealth and not in the hands of a few human hogs. Your supposition that the Government take my farm and part of my produce is a supposition the Socialist party objects to.

. The fact is, the present system takes three fourths of my produce. Now they do it when I go to buy the necessaries of life. Why, brother, I can demonstrate by the U. S. census that there is not a pair of shoes in Greensboro that cost over one dollar to make, yet I pay five or six dollars for them. Now, brother, let me suggest that you and I lay aside our prejudice and study the Socialist question like men and Christians. You know the Lord said, "Thou shalt not kill." Why spend millions on one battle ship to make an engine to destroy life. The railroads kill on an average of twelve every day in the United States. Shall we Christians endorse by our votes such a system?

Socialism opposes war, it is founded on the golden rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." It proposes to give every one all the wealth he produces by his own individual effort, no more, no less. It promises to abolish the present system of covetousness, robbery and establish a co-operative government founded on brotherly love. Yes, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and we do most sincerely hope that all Christians and especially ministers will lend us a helping hand and if the church will not help us establish a government here on earth founded on the teachings of Christ, then we who are awake must do it without them. A man may be a Socialist and not be a Christian, but I can't see how any one can be a true Christian and not be a Socialist, if he knows what Socialism is, for the one is the basis of the other.

Yours for the cause of the Master,
J. M. Brown.

Guilford College, N. C., R. D. 1.

(We fear that Bro. Brown has not carefully considered his grounds. He charges Congress with legislating for the few and against the many. Are not Congressmen elected by the many? If the people under the present system do not have the wisdom to choose men that will faithfully serve them, what assurance have we that they would do so under any other system? We are satisfied, Bro. Brown, that the main thing that is wrong at present is the character of the individual. There is where the great reform must take place. I was once walking with a gentleman among cottages occupied by coal miners. They looked more like pens for lower animals than homes for human beings. I was deploring the fact that people had to live nder such conditions. But the gentleman with me was older and wiser than I, and he opened my eyes by remarking: "These homes are as good as these people want. If you should move them into neat, clean homes, they would soon be like this."

One great fallacy of the Socialists is in their view that surroundings make the man, and not man his surroundings. Bro. Brown says that poverty is the cause of most of the crime of all countries. Poverty brings its peculiar temptations; so does wealth, and so does competency: but neither poverty nor wealth nor competency can cause crime.

And as to the temptation they bring, did not Paul write: "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation make also the way of escape, that ye may be able to endure it."

Instead of the Socialistic movement as it is now conducted being a Christian movement, it seems to us to lead away from Christianity toward materialism and atheism. By a mixing of some truth with its errors, it tries to make the latter plausible and succeeds in deceiving the unwary. There are isolated Socialists here and there, made so by Socialistic literature, who if they should come in contact with the leaders of the movement and know their personal lives, would be mortified and greatly ashamed of the company in which they find themselves. There is a great difference between the character of the God-fearing, liberty-loving men who came from Europe a few centuries ago and inspired their sons to establish the American republic and the character of the atheistic, materialistic agitators that are coming to us from the crowded centers of Europe today. We should be careful whom we follow.—The Editor).

KEEPING THE HEART ALIVE.

"Isn't it dreadful to have to be associated with people who are having so much trouble!" exclaimed a listener and onlooker at the last of a long room, empty but for the secretary of the Charitable Association and her visitor. The secretary took a moment or two to answer. "Don't you think," she said at last, "that maybe we get as much as we give? I mean, isn't it a way of keeping one's heart alive?"

Often the thoughtful answer has come back in memory. The speaker was one who had never allowed her work to become perfunctory or official. A discerning sympathy always shone in her face and spoke in the tones of her voice; and while these only increased the number of those who found their way within the door for comfort and counsel, they greatly served to lessen the misery which brought them. Because of the constant outgo the well was always filling up for the next comer. It was a living fountian.

Not only is it a spurious delicacy and sensitiveness that shrinks from the wretched and grief stricken, but to avoid them habitually is a suicidal instinct. We need them more than they need us. Every outgoing of tenderness is returned a hundred fold into our own heart—not, indeed, always at their hands, but through them, nevertheless. Love cannot waste itself. If ever it seems not to accompilsh that thing whereunto it was sent, it turns home blessing-laden.—The Congregationalist.

THE CROSS.

Nothing has ever convinced the world of forgiveness like the Cross of Christ. Nothing has so melted the hard unbelief with which fear and sin have surrounded our nature, as this sweet message of God's redemption, in giving up His only son for us all. Like the ice upon some Alpine peak that has resisted the stormy winds of winter, but flows down in sparkling rivulets when the warm breezes of spring blow, so hearts long congealed with fear and remorse will melt and flow down in gentle grief and holy aspiration as we hear of the transaction of infinite pity revealed in the Savior's eadth. This Cross proclaims the release,. which all who heve fallen under the bondage of sin require. And there can be no more peaceful, no more stimulating message than that which the church is emboldened to give because of the Cross, "I believe in the forgiveness of sins."—Falconer.

THE MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The quarterly meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions was held in the Baltimore Book Concern Building on Thursday, February 29th, 1912, with the President, Rev. F. T. Tagg, D. D., in the chair. All the members were present. Prayer was offered by the Corresponding Secretary.

The reports from the four sub-districts of the Japan Mission Conference,, the Nagoya College and the Yokahama School, and the Japan treasurer, were submitted, those of the sub-districts were approved, and the other referred to the auditing committee, Rev. J. C. Broomfield and Mr. J. H. Baker.

The former reports show that during the quarter there were 57 baptisms, and also 62 applications for the ordinance. 65 church members were received, the number of full members on roll was 1197, probationers, 223, absent members, 459, enquirers enrolled, 361, a total of 2240.

There were 2774 Sunday school scholars. 121 teachers and officers. a total of 2896. There were six C. E. Societies. 4621 tracts were distributed.

The year's enrollment at the Nagoya College was 330 young men, and the Yokohama school, 204, besides 35 in the girls' afternoon department. 7 young men of the senior class of the Yokohama school. and six others were baptized on Christmas Sunday, making it "the grandest Christmas I ever witnessed in Japan," wrote Principal Layman. When he wrote the interest had not abated. and others were expected to make decision for Christ. Our Yokohama Night School "affords a wonderful opportunity for instilling the principles of Christianity into the minds of the coming business men of Japan, especially of Yokohama."

The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to express to the Missionaries the gratification of the Board over the continual growth of the work under their care.

Treasurer Klein's report was read and referred to the auditing committee, and they later reproted that they had evamined the books. and found them audited and certified to by Mr. Staley, the auditor approved by the Board, for the quarter ending February 1, 1912.

The financial reports from Japan were also approved.

The Board evinced much interest in the financial plan submitted by the Corresponding Secretary, and he was instructed to work out the details for putting it into operation, and report to the Board at the next meeting.

The Corresponding Secretary's report was read, and showed that he had sent packages of the leaflet "Do You Know" with subscription blanks and a special letter to the pastors throughout the church in an effort to raise an Emergency Fund, that he had appealed to the C. E. Societies for funds to support their Missionaries. and return Rev. E. I. Obee from Japan, that he had sent special letters to a number of individuals asking for special contributions. and had written to pastors in a number of Conferences urging them to send the Assessment for Foreign Missions, but despite all the efforts put forth, sufficient funds had not been received to meet the regular obligations of the Board to the work in Japan. He reported the Children's Day Service nearly ready for the press, and showed the beautiful design of the front cover of this year's Service. He explained his further activities since the last meeting of the Board, and the report was approved.

The President of the Board was instructed to express to Mrs. W. L. Slack, the artist who has designed the front cov of the Children's Day Service during this quardennial, the Board's hearty appreciation of her valuable assistance so generously rendered.

The Missionary Exposition, "The World in Baltimore," was given the official endorsement of the Board, and the Corresponding Secretary and others of our church were authorized to give it as great recognition as possible.

The committee to engage a missionary reported progress, and hoped to have the matter settled by the next Board meeting.

The communication from the Foreign Missions Conference of North America concerning the proposed international Centennial Celebration of the birth of David Livingstone was referred to the President and Corresponding Secretary, as was the letter from Bishop Graves of China referring to the China Famine Relief Committee's work, for proper action. Communications dealing with union educational work in Japan were referred to the committee appointed some time ago consisting of Revs. Drs. Lewis, Beck and Broomfield.

The Minutes of the Mission meeting were read and considered, but most of the actions accorded called for action by the Board.

In view of the departure in April of Rev. E. I. Obee upon his well earned furlough after more than seven years of faithful service in Japan, and in the event of the Board being unable to send a missionary there by that time, Mission request authority to employ a qualified American minister residing in Nagoya as teacher in the Nagoya College. The request was granted. The proposed transfer of a night school at Yokkaichi to our Mission was left with the Mission to determine.

The Budget, submitted by the Financial committee in Japan, of the expected expenses, not including Missionaries' salaries, for the fiscal year April 1, 1912, to May 1st, 1913, was finally approved, as the committee gave assurances that they were asking for only the actual needs of the work to insure its maintenance and steady development. It, however, represents an increase for the year of $1,589.-50. and to this must be added the expense connected with the movement of missionaries. The church cannot refuse to support a work of such vast proportions at the command of Christ. and it has ability to do much more than is asked.

Rev. E. H. Van Dyke, D. D., was appointed President of the Conference, and President of Nagoya College. Rev. I. Layman was appointed Principal of the Yokohama School.

It was decided to hold the next meeting in the Baltimore Book Concern Building on Thursday, May 16th, 1912, at 10 A. M. Fred C. Klein. Cor. Sec.

FITHY POINTS FROM OUR HOME MISSION FIELDS.

Sunday schools throughout the church will please notice that the largest offering made by any school to the Board of Home Missions, on Easter, has been made by the first Church Sunday Scholl, Seattle, Wash., for two years in succesion. This Home Mission Sunday School holds the Gold Medal. If they hold it next Easter, it becomes theirs by reason of having held it three years in succession. This church is having the fine, efficient leadership of Rev. J. M. Gill, D. D. Dr. Gill is proving himself to be the right man in the right place. This church is now entirely self-supporting.

The Gold medal for the largest per capita offering, is held by one of our small country Sunday schools that at Fordyce, Pa. This medal now belongs to them, but a new one will be provided for the school making the largest per capita offering next Easter. It is not too soon to begin to plan for your Easter service. A splendid program is now in the hands of the printers, and samples will be sent to any who may desire them, as soon as they are ready for distribution. Make this closing Easter service of the Quadrennium the most successful one of the term. The real mission of the church is Missions.

The readers of this paper will remember that the Ravenna Church, Seattle, Wash., was destroyed by fire early in February, last. It was thought best to change to a location nearer the center of the residence community, and a very neat church has been erected on a beautiful lot secured about five squares from the old location. The necessity of building a new church at this place placed a new responsibility upon your Board of Home Missions and involved them in additional expense, but we believe that this work will care for the expense incurred. There has been a net gain of ten in membership. The average attendance at preaching service has increased. Large contributions are being raised for the pastor's salary from the congregation, and we expect the local people to become responsible for all their expense, except the salary of the pastor, after Jan. 1, 1912.

The Ravenna Sunday School now has an enrollment of 106, with an average attendance for the month of December of 110.

The Chicago work under the direction of Rev. G. O. Harvey seems to be making satisfactory development. A social, which took the form of a reception to the new pastor and his wife, was recently held in the church, and was a very pleasant occasion.

The Sunday school, while not large, is well organized, and is a very interesting school, and gives promise of growth. The school at Cornell Ave., which has had an uncertain existence, seems to be doing well at this time. We shall hope for good reports from our Chicago work.

The work at Paris, Texas, is starting up well under the leadership of its new pastor, Rev. W. B. Sanders, B. D. We have a fine location for our church in Paris on one of the best streets in the city, and have a neat parsonage property, but our church should be rebuilt or repaired by a new structure. This is one of the plans for the future.

They recently suffered a very sad loss, in the death of the daughter of Rev. F. M. Anderson, President of the Texas Conference. She was a very lovable girl, and an enthusiastic church worker.

The work at San Angelo, Texas, continues to prosper under the direction of Rev. O. W. Millburn. Brother Millburn has made a place for himself, not only in the church, but in the city. We received assurance upon the occasion of a recent visit to that work, not only of his personal popularity, but of his peculiar fitness for the work required in that city. San Angelo is one of the important centers of Southwest Texas, and is becoming increasingly popular, not only as a business center, but as a health resort, being located in the high, dry section of Southwest Texas. The Board of Home Missions has given assistance to a number of other places in Texas, but is now giving direct support to only these two. Roxton, Corsicana, Stevenville, and other places have at different times received help. There are a number of applications on file in the office now for help in developing our work in Texas, and some of these if granted, would help to open up a very important work in that great southwestern state.

In Oklahoma we have a fine prospect for a strong Conference. The Home Board is assisting in the work at Comanche, Hugo, and Lawton. Rev. C. T. Simmons, the new pastor at Comanche, has been kindly received, and is very hopeful concerning his work. We have the best church building in the city, nicely located, and we see no reason why our church should not be the leading church, with proper administration.

Rev. J. T. Phipps, the President of the Oklahoma Conference, is now in charge of our work at Hugo. The railroad cut this city almost in two, dividing it into two sections. With the location of our church, if our work is properly managed, we believe that we shall have the best church on the west side. Our church has suffered in pastors, somewhat, because of the restlessness of the men who have been placed in charge of the work, and we hope soon to have matter so adjusted that we can place a permanent pastor in Hugo. This little city, nine years old, has nearly 9,000 people, and is rapidly adding to its population. We must make good in Hugo.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson For Next Week.

Remaining chapters of Job.

Questions.

We find when we direct questions to all the class, all wait (from modesty, we presume) for somebody else to reply. We would like to hear from all the class in answer to the following, but as we wish to be sure of at least one good answer, we will name especially Mrs. Curry:

98. What do you understand to be the moral or chief lesson to be gathered from the Book of Job?

PRIZE OFFERED.

To the boy or girl under sixteen who first sends us the correct answer to the following question, we will give a prize:

When will the fifth Sunday in February come next time?

—A bill providing for parcels post is before Congress. It would permit sending mail packages up to 11 pounds, ranging from five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound.

—Congress is investigating the strike at Lawrence, Mass.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO 12.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church of the death of Rev. E. A. Plyler. Bro. Plyler was a member of the Brotherhood in full standing, having responded to every call of the Brotherhood. Beneficiary members are due three dollars each, non-beneficiary members one dollar each. These amounts are due not later than sixty days after date of this notice. Money should be sent to the Treasurer, J. A. Burgess, Henderson, Andrew's Ave., No. 343, N. C. If convenient, please remit by check.

J. A. Burgess.

Mar. 5, 1912.

TRUSTEES TO MEET.

Notice is hereby given that the Trustees of Denton High School will meet in First M. P. Church, High Point, March 19, at 2 P. M. This will be a very important meeting and a full attendance of the Board is much desired. We also invite any friends of the school who can to meet with the Board. There will be a new Principal to elect and business of importance to transact.

Geo. L. Reynolds, Sec'y. Bd.

Received for St. John's Church.

Rev. J. B. O'Briant	$1.00
Rev. L. R. Hughes	1.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	2.95
A Friend	5.00
Total	$9.95

Many thanks. Who will be next?

J. F. Dosier.

This span of life was lent for lofty duties, not for selfishness; not to be whiled away in aimless dreams, but to improve ourselves and serve mankind. -DeVere.

There is no mean work save that which is sordidly selfish; no irreligious work save that which is morally wrong; in every sphere of life the post of honor is the post of duty.—Chapin.

Some people get closer to God by getting closer to their fellowmen. They do not believe that God is up above the clouds, nor that He is shut in by all the doors and windows of all the churches. They think that whosoever wants to find God will find Him quickest where He has set His image and breathed His breath, in the midst of the great family of His human children.—Dean Hodges.

—The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is moving mightily to build a house of worship in Washington, D. C. Gen. J. S. Carr of Durham has given $5,000 and contributions are being made from many directions.

CONTRASTING EXPRESSIONS.

Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him: he shall eat the fruit of his doings. Woe to the wicked, it shall be ill with him: he shall be rewarded according to the fruit of his doings. Who is it believes in a future reward that does not prefer a good to a bad reward? Evidently God has given all sane people the privilege of choosing. Reader, which have you chosen? Have you made choice? If not, why not? Do you believe that you will be rewarded according to your doings? Are you whiling away your time, not thinking about what awaits you in the future? Do you think that God requires nothing more at your hands than he does of the brute?

If you think He does, is it not time that you were thinking about what awaits you in the future? Are your thoughts so much encumbered about the perishing things of earth that you do not take time to think of the future life? Oh, how dark this would be, to have no Christ, no Savior to pilot you over the cold stream of death. That hour is coming, and you know not how soon. It has come to many when they were thinking very little if any thing about it. Why postpone making preparation for the soul that never dies?

Why spend all your time and energies in making preparation for the body that must soon lie mouldering in the dust? What profit will it be to you to gather so much of these perishing things of earth and make no preparation for your soul? Would it not be better to cease to do evil and learn to do well before it is too late? Some one may be ready to say, I have not done so wickedly. You may not have gone so far into sin as some have. Have you not gone far enough to keep you out of heaven? Have you not and are you not yet refusing to confess and forsake all sin? And by faith accept Christ as your personal Savior?

What are you doing to commend you to God's favor? What is and what has been your influence among your associates? You have been exerting an influence for evil and will continue to do so as long as you continue in sin.

A sad picture it is indeed to see a young man or woman of good form and nice features on the road to hell. But it does not stop there; they are leading someone else on with them.

No one ever got so low down in the scale of virtue as not to exert an influence over some one else: nor did one ever get so high on the scale of so-called honor or fame as not to exert an influence for weal or woe. And so often the case some of the highest as the world calls high are the most abased when measured by God's straight edge.

Now, reader, if you are one of those that are on the broad road to hell will you not stop and think a little while on the past of your life, and ask yourself the question what awaits you in the future.

Reader, let me ask you a few more questions: What is the thing that you seek for most diligently and carefully; what engages your most earnest thoughts night and day? Upon what are your affections most firmly set; on the things of this earth or on things above?

If not on things above, can you not decide what your reward will be? If you continue to spend the future as you have the past, you shall eat the fruit of your doings.

Now, reader, do you believe there is any truth in what I have said? If you do will you not accept it, heed it, and from this time forth try to conform your life to the will and Word of God?

If you will do so then you will have a foundation upon which to base your hopes of hearing it said to you, Say ye to the righteous it shall be well with him, he shall eat the fruit of his doings. Oh, think of the peace, joy and happiness that await the true child of God, of meeting his dear Savior face to face. Think of those that were so near and dear to us in ministrations to us when they were here among us toiling, laboring and praying for us that we might be saved from sin and gathered to that Home to enter which they desired and tried to be prepared through and by Christ. Many of them have been gathered from among us. Oh, the glorious thought of some day meeting them around God's throne to part no more!

Death at the farthest can't be far. Oh, think before you die of reaping the reward of the righteous! T. R. T.

WESTMINSTER SEMINARY NOTES.

Of late the weather in this locality has been much milder which is a great relief from the unusually severe winter. A few weeks more and we shall be able to engage in our favorite pastime and means of getting some exercise—playing tennis.

There has been talk of building another court as the two we now have hardly furnish room enough for all who wish to play.

We are glad to report that Dr. Forlines is now improving rapidly. The first of the month he had another set-back—the second since the holidays. He was confined to the house for over a week and awhile it was feared that another operation would be necessary, but as the result of careful nursing and the prayers of himself and his many friends a change for the better took place and he has been gaining ever since.

At a recent meeting of the faculty, Prof. Douglas was elected to represent the Seminary at Princeton on the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of Princeton Theological Seminary to be held May 5-7.

Prof. Feeman spent Sunday, February 5, with Mr. Kerlin at Alexandria, Va., addressing a men's meeting and preaching at the regular services. He also preached for Mr. Snyder in Baltimore Sunday evening, Feb. 18.

The Seminary Forward Movement is meeting with a most hearty and generous response from the churches. And not only from them but it seems to have taken hold of the student body too, for at a recent meeting a committee was appointed to make arrangements with the faculty for a "Seminary Day." Mr. Pritchard is chairman of the committee and a splendid program has been arranged. March 21 has been chosen as the day. The program will be published later.

The severe winter weather hindered a number of the men from making their regular week-end visits to their appointments. Mr. Bates was not able to visit his work for several weeks on account of the freezing over of Chesapeake Bay.

Since sending in the last notes we have learned of still more conversions resulting from the work of the students since the opening of school. Messrs. Dudley, Wright, Snyder and others have all held successful meetings resulting in about 60 conversions. That makes nearly one hundred and sixty for the year.

Rev. J. E. McCain, of Keokuk, Iowa, and Rev. C. E. Shepherd, D. D., of Washington, Pa., were the February lecturers, each lecturing twice.

Messrs Kerlin, Morton, and Mikesell are the only seniors who have delivered their sermons this month.

A number of the men were able to attend the Men and Religion Forward Movement during the campaign in Baltimore and all speak in the highest terms of those engaged in the movement and of the vital character of their messages.

During Rev. McCain's visit to the Seminary the students from the Indiana Conference met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Corn for an hour of social and spiritual refreshment. A few days later they were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harper and plans were adopted whereby it is hoped to interest more of the young men of the Indiana Conference in the Seminary.

Thursday evening, February 22nd, the "Old Adrian" students met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Morton. A pot-luck supper and a pleasant social time was the program after which adjournment was taken to Alumni Hall where one of the literary societies of the College gave an entertainment.

Mr. Pritchard recently assisted Mr. Torrey in a recital at Linthicum Heights. Mr. Pritchard is a well-trained elocutionist and always delights his audiences.

Mr. Morton has been elected class orator by the seniors in the place of Mr. Taylor who resigned on account of too much other work.

Wednesday evening, February 21, the Middlers were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Heitz. A very pleasant hour was enjoyed by all. In the business meeting the following officers were elected: L. W. Gerringer, Pres.; F. W. Stephenson, Sec.-Treas.

The new officers for the third and last term of the Literary Society are as follows: J. A. Dudley Pres.; A. R. Corn Vice President; C. J. Kerlin, Rec. Sec.; W. F. Bauscher, Cor.-Sec.; W. L. Heitz, Treas.; V. H. Mikesell, Critic; W. S. Harper, Chaplain and G. H. Enfield, Marshall.

The pastor of Union Ridge having resigned, W. S. Harper is filling out the conference year.

Messrs. Bates, Swaringen and Shimp have been on the sick list lately.

Since the organization of the Singing Class an octette has been organized with W. H. Mikesell as leader. They are doing some faithful practicing and will soon be able to furnish a program. The members are Messrs. Stanton, Kerlin, Hunter, Gerringer, Shimp, Foltz, Snyder and Mikesell.

DIED.

Sorrow.

Dear Editor:

The death angel visited the home of Mr. S. T. Sorrow and took from him his beloved daughter, Rosabell Sorrow, who departed this life October 10, 1911. Her stay on earth was three years, four months and twenty-eight days. She was ill just a short time. How great her suffering was we can not tell. We mourn her departure. She leaves a father and mother, two sisters and one brother, and an aged grandmother, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. She was loved by all who knew her. It is sad to part from those we love, but the Lord knows best. His will must be done.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we love is still,
A vacant place in our home
Which never can be filled.
We hope to meet her in heaven.
Written by her loving friend,
Flossie Spikes.

Davis.

"Be ye also ready for at such an hour as ye think not the son of man cometh."

The death of Mrs. J. W. Davis Saturday, March 2nd, was unexpected. What a horrible death—caused by fire! Saturday morning, while Mrs. Davis was cleaning the house, the broom caught fire and she, trying to extinguish the flames with her foot, caught fire. There was no one present but little seven-year-old Leah, so she ran over to a neighbor's about four hundred yards away. She was met by a neighbor with a blanket, but even this did not put out the flames and the next thing thought of was water. She lived about ten hours. The readers of the Herald will remember Mrs. Davis as the very efficient reporter from Rehoboth, Granville Circuit. We shall miss her in many ways. Her S. S. teacher will miss her, for she was a Bible student, and at times she taught a class. She was a help in the music. Often she assisted the organist and her voice was appreciated. Mrs. Davis was a member at Union Chapel, but she attended S. S. at Rehoboth, since it was near by. She was the daughter of the late Dr. C. J. Hester, of Vance Co. Her father was well-known as a great Sunday school worker and she took up his work. Truly we think she was ready to die, for she tried to live right at home. We heard her say in a testimony meeting that her greatest desire was to live right everyday and teach her children the right way. She leaves a husband, a fourteen-year-old son, who is secretary of our S. S., and a little seven-year-old daughter.

"O, happy, happy soul!
In ecstasies of praise,
Long as eternal ages roll
Thou seest thy Saviour's face."

Hattie Harris.

Welborn.

Brother Arthur W. Welborn was born May 15, 1873, departed this life February 27, 1912, 1912. Age, 38 years, 9 months, 12 days. He was married to Miss Nannie Bingham March 26, 1896. Their parents are both of the highest type of moral and Christian characters. To this union were born five children, one of whom preceded him to the glory world. Bro. Welborn professed faith in Christ when seven years old and joined the M. E. Church at Mt. Gilead and lived a life worthy of example till death. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Mt. Gilead where he was a member. Funeral service conducted by the writer in the presence of the largest congregation that I have met in quite a while, which showed that his friends were many. Bro. Welborn was one of the kindest men I ever knew. He was of the highest type of Christian character. While Bro. Welborn did not belong to our church, he was always there at preaching and Sunday School, and was always ready for service at any time. The church at Mt. Pleasant as well as his own church has met with a great loss; but blessed thought to me, is heaven's gain. He has an aged father, two sisters, two brothers, a dear companion and four children to mourn his departure and many friends who will ever cherish his memory in their hearts. He has left to his dear wife and children the greatest estate that any mortal being could leave—a life spent in the service of God. And when he was verging upon the eternal shores and his eyes were dimmed with the veil of death, he did not forget to instruct his children to be good and obey mama and meet him in heaven. He told little Joe, the baby, to go on and make a great singer here and come and join all the redeemed singers in heaven; and to his dear companion he said: We have lived together here and have had many pleasant hours, but I must go. Be faithful until death and meet me in heaven where parting will be no more. Sister Welborn has our greatest sympathy in her sore bereavement and may father's God be their God until they may meet in that family reunion on the golden shores of heaven. Dear wife and children, papa is gone, his voice is hushed and still; and you strive to live a life as he has lived, and do your Master's will.

Joel Trogdon.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Henderson and Vance, Mar. 9-13.
Granville, March 14-18.
Efland, March 20-21.
Orange, March 22.
Mebane, March 23-25.
Fairview, March 26-27.
Glen Raven and Carolina, Mar. 28-29
Burlington, March 30-31, A. M.
Graham and Haw River, March 30-31, P. M.
Mt. Hermon, April 2-5.
Sanapahaw, April 6-9.
Alamance, April 10-15.
Siler City, April 16-22.

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Roanoke Ct., Mar. 5-7.
Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Grace Church, Greensboro.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Grace Church held its annual meeting in the Philathea room of the church Monday, March 4th, the president, Mrs. Wills, presiding.

Considering the very inclement weather outside there was a good attendance of the members present, and the cozy room with its feeling of warmth—bright open fire—and cheerful voices, made the contrast with the dark, deary day outside very marked.

It being the last meeting of the missionary year the president called for reports from the officers.

Miss May Bain, the Recording Secretary, reported good attendance throughout the year and the general participation of the members in the programs as arranged for each meeting. The programs have been varied and interesting and helpful to all. Every meeting throughout the year was held (notwithstanding very inclement weather at times), also the average attendance was good. Miss Bain reported ten dollars raised by the members Christmas for a present for Miss Mallet.

Miss Annie L. Forrest visited friends in Greensboro, February 18th and conducted the Thank Offering service at the church in the place of the regular preaching service. Miss Forrest made a most helpful, instructive and inspiring address on Missions at this service, and her visit was a great blessing. The report of the Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Garrett will appear elsewhere.

It being the regular day for the Mite Box opening the missionary "savings" of the year were turned over to the Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, who announced $35.50 turned in. Sickness and inclement weather had kept twelve or fourteen members away from the meeting whose collections when turned in, it is hoped, will exceed the fifty- dollar mark which the society strives to reach each year.

After the further business of the afternoon was disposed of, Mrs. Glascock moved a rising vote of thanks be extended the officers of the past year for their untiring efforts in behalf of the work. The society responded with a rising vote. The Nominating Committee presented the names of the folowing persons who were afterward elected officers for the ensuing year:

Mrs. Norman Wills, President; Miss Frances Sutton, 1st Vice President; Mrs. H. P. Bowman, 2nd Vice President; Mrs. Carl Jones, Recording Secretary; Mrs. A. B. Kimball, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Treasurer; Dr. Glascock, Record Agent; Mrs. J. F. Williams, Secretary Mite Boxes; Mrs. John Stone; Secretary Juvenile Work.

At the conclusion of the service Mrs. Luther Coble and Mrs. Denny served refreshments.

Treasurer's Annual Report of W. F. M. S. of Greensboro Grace Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Am't. in Treas. April 1, 1911
Mite Box		$33.82
Receipts—
Gold Pags	$15.42
Mite Boxes	33.00
Thank Offering	105.25
From Pledges	179.95
Gift for Miss Mallett	10.00
Dues	34.00	377.62
Total		$411.44
Disbursements—
To State Treas.		$384.94
Bal. on hand, Mar. 5, 1912		$26.50

Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Treas.

Miss Forrest's Appointments for Granville Circuit.

Mt. Carmel, Friday, March 15, 7:30, P. M. Rehoboth, Saturday, March 16, 2:30 P. M. Antioch, Sunday, March 17, 11 A. M. Union Chapel, March 17, 3:30 P. M.

These appointments have not been given out publicly since finding out the time on account of the weather preventing appointments being filled.

S. S. Superintendents and others who read this will please make it known as much as possible. N. G. Bethea.

Mt. Hermon Circuit.

Sunday school talks by the pastor. Beginning at Belmont at 10 A. M., Sunday, March 24—Subject: Better Sunday schools and the Need of Them. Sunday, March 31st, 10 A. M., At Mt. Hermon—Subject: The Worth of a Sunday school. Friendship, Sunday, April 7th, 10 A. M.—Subject: Who Should be Interested in Sunday schools. Cedar Cliff, Sunday, April 14th, 10 A. M.—More Life in the Sunday school and How to Have It.

Everybody in reach of these churches who is now interested or who even hopes to become interested is respectfully invited.

Miss Forrest's appointments: Belmont, at night, Tuesday, April 2nd. Friendship, 11 A. M., Wednesday, April 3rd. Alamance at night. Mt. Hermon, Thursday, April 4th, 11 A. M. Same day at 3 P. M. at Cedar Cliff

Two services with dinner on the ground at each church during the month of May. Hoping that these appointments will be of much interest to the good people of this circuit and that I may be permitted to see many faces soon that I have not yet seen on this work, I am,

Your pastor, E. G. Lowdermilk.

Henderson.

We have had more bad weather Sundays this Conference year than ever within our memory—yet we preserve our hope of sunshine and summer.

Last Friday night Dr. Broomfield came to see us on his way from a meeting of the Foreign Mission Board, and lectured to a very large audience on the Passion Play that he witnessed in Oberamergau in 1910. I was out of town, but various accounts say it was very interesting and instructive.

We hear with regret of the continued illness of our long-time dear friend, Rev. S. Simpson, of Westminster. We long for his recovery. He spent a week with friends here two months ago returning from a health hunting trip in Florida.

I read a literal story: A man was standing in a lane with a cane in his hand. A flock of a hundred sheep came along. He held out his cane and the leader jumped over it; then the next one jumped. The man then took down the can, but each of the other 98 jumped over the place just as if the stick were there. I told the story to a man, who said he was carrying some sheep across a narrow plantation bridge in very cold weather; one fell off and in the water. Then all the others that followed also jumped into the creek. The writer of the first story used it to explain the origin of the custom of men and especially of women to follow the fashions. He thought it was a proof of our animal origin—and that the jumping sheep would make a more appropriate national emblem for America than the Eagle who acts and flies as if he did his own thinking. Most of us act as if we were following the thinking of others. I regard debt as a form more or less mild, of slavery; and I have often noticed how delighted negroes are to go in debt. They are so recently removed from slavery that the habit still clings to them. Racial habits and instincts are truly difficult to eradicate. This must be the reason why the progress of the race is so slow.

We are as the poet says, trying to "unlock future's portal with past's blood-rusted key." O that we could "ring out" much of the old and "ring in" much of the new. T. T. Hicks.

March 4, 1912.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was a very bad day for us as far as the weather went. It snowed all day and far into the night. However, we had 116 in S. S., and a good offering. It seems that we cannot increase our attendance very much until the weather gets better.

The preaching service on Sunday morning was also very well attended. This was the time set for the vote on whether we would build the S. S. addition to the church. This matter was postponed, however, on account of the very inclement weather, until next Sunday. The matter of securing subscriptions toward the building of S. S. rooms is going on nicely, and a goodly amount has been subscribed.

The preaching service on Sunday evening was called in on account of the bad weather.

Snow began to fall again yesterday afternoon at five o'clock and is still coming down hard this morning. The ground is covered to a depth of six inches.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Mar. 6, 1912.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit.

Dear Herald:

Rev. Mr. Reynolds preached an excellent sermon for us yesterday.

We reorganized Sunday school yesterday with Mr. J. H. Snotherly, Supt.; Mr. Martin Furr, asst.; Mr. W. A. Hatley, Sec; Teachers—Mrs. W. J. Mason, Class No. 1; Mr. D. W. Sides, Class No. 2; Mrs. D. W. Sides, Class No. 3; Mrs. Reynolds, Class No. 4; Mr. Dave Harwood, No. 5. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely.

Mr. Martin Furr has moved back to his old home.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Miss Maie Hatley, Rep.

Albemarle, N. C., R. F. D. No. 3.

Concord.

On last Sunday night, because of unfavorable weather, we held no service. This is something unusual, for our services are regular, and even if the weather be rough, there is nearly always a service held at the appointed time.

Brick have been ordered with which we purpose to build two S. S. rooms and veneer our church.

At Fairview, a small congregation greeted the pastor on last Sunday morning, notwithstanding the storm. It was at this church where two members were received on the 3rd Sunday of last month; and eight children were baptized.

Brother John Foster, who has been seriously ill, is now convalescing, we are glad to say.

A. O. Lindley.

Anderson and Yarborough Notes.

Some things have been overlooked that ought to have appeared before now. Sister Sopheric Pool of Liberty Hill Church, has been called to the unknown. Age, 83 years; had been a member of M. P. Church 27 years. She was devoted to her church—always loving her pastors. She was faithful to her family. The latter part of her life was spent with her grandson, Joe Pool, her husband having preceded her to the silent city. Her pastor and friends will miss her. While she was a dear mother and grandmother on earth, she has gained a crown that never fadeth.

Sister Jane Wood has also answered the call and has passed out of this world. Age, 53 years. My acquaintance with her was very limited. May the Lord bless the husband and children left behind to prepare to meet her in a world of peace.

Miss Mary Lesley's school at Liberty Hill presented us with a purse of $7.00; we are very grateful to the little folks and their teacher.

We organized a Ladies' Aid Society at Fairview Church with a good membership.

Most all the churches in the country have abandoned S. S. work most of the winter. That church called Harmony has not missed a Sunday. Liberty Hill has been going on, too, I understond.

A number of our older people have been kept away from church this winter; we miss them so much. The prayer service which started at M. P. parsonage a few weeks ago is taking on life. Will meet with us Thursday night, conducted by Mr. M. C. Pool. We have been kindly remembered by the following sisters: Mary Hipp, Kate Medlock, Dan Yarborough and L. H. Wilson. We appreciate their gifts very much. W. A. Lamar.

Zion, Siler City Circuit.

Dear Herald:

As I was appointed reporter to the Herald, I thought I would begin my report by letting you know that our church is not dead yet, but it is progressing nicely considering the cold, rough weather. Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, filled his regular appointment the 1st Sunday in March from the text 1 John 4: 19. He preached an excellent sermon as he always does. We like him fine. We are thankful the Conference sent us such a good preacher on our circuit. I think he is doing lots of good and is liked all over the circuit. We have a very interesting Sunday school at Zion. We have a most wonderful superintendent, Bro. J. H. Siler, and we have some good teachers: Bro. A. E. Pike, J. C. Teague and G. W. Stout. I think they are doing fine. Brother Stout has charge of the children. He is the man for them; he makes it so interesting for them. We are planning for a Sunday school rally at Zion. Hope we will have a success. Pray for us.

Miss Lizzie Bowman was with us Sunday. We were glad to have her with us.

With best wishes for the Herald and its many readers. Mrs. M. M. Lowe.

Staley, N. C., March 5, 1912.

Haw River.

Dear Brother McCulloch:

Our hearts were made sad when we picked up the church paper last week and saw on its pages the death of dear Brother Plyler. In his death I feel like Conference has lost one of its best preachers. It was my happy privilege to know Bro. Plyler. He served this charge as pastor for two years and on account of his health he was compelled to give up the work and go back to his home. But his labors here will be long remembered. I don't think that I ever knew a more consecrated Christian than he was and his labors here will long be remembered by those who learned to love him while on this charge. While Brother Plyler is with us no more in body his influence will live on and will be the means of leading many into the fold. Yes, Brother Plyler has answered to the last roll call at the Annual Conference here on earth and has gone home to reap his eternal reward; and when that great day shall come, methinks that many will rise up and call him blessed for having led them to the Saviour. T. S. Coble.

March 3rd, 1912.

Caroleen Circuit.

Will let you hear from Caroleen again. Our Sunday school is holding up well for it to be such cold and and snowy weather. Our attendance for the past three Sundays has been as follows: Feb. 18, 89 scholars; Feb. 25, 101 and March 3rd, 84 present. This is the highest our school ever has run here, but we are sure it will be better after warm weather opens up.

Our special meeting commenced last Thursday night; good interest has been manifested so far. We hope for a great revival here. Ask every one who has interest in this church to pray for the meeting. Bro. Braswell is doing his own preaching and doing it well too. The church seems to be in very good spiritual condition. Pray for us here at Caroleen. H. E. Waldrop.

Piney Grove, Siler City Circuit.

Dear Herald Readers:

Though the snow fell fast yesterday evening, yet our pastor came through it all and filled his appointment. The few that had braved the cold wind and snow were assembled at W. B. Coopers, right near the church, when Bro. Bowman came, so he held the services at that place. Bro. Bowman's daughter accompanied him on this round. We hope she will come again when it is not snowing.

Death has again visited us and taken one of our number. Sarah Martha Siler Lane was born Jan. 29, 1849, died March 1, 1912. She was married to Abram S. Lane, May 3rd, 1870. To them were born four children—3 boys and 1 girl—all of which are now living.

She was buried at Bear Creek Baptist church, services conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman.

She professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Piney Grove Church, of which she has always been a member. Her mother, Mrs. Sallie Siler, was the first female member to join Piney Grove Church. Sister Lane lived some distance from her church so that she did not get to attend as often as she would like, but she was always ready and willing to help in the financial part.

She was sick only a short time, but was ready when the summons came for her to come up higher. She said "If my life has been such as to lead my children to Christ, I am satisfied." One son said, "I never saw mother mad." How many children can truthfully say that after mother is gone?

May the blessed Saviour comfort the bereaved husband and children and two lonely sisters and help them to feel that this parting will be only for a short time, but they will one day meet her,

"On that happy, golden shore,
Where the faithful part no more."

"Blessed are those who die in the Lord." Mrs. J. A. Cooper.

A Trip to Denton.

It was the privilege of the writer to visit some of our people at Denton on last Friday evening; and speak to the congregation, which listened attentively.

I had heard of the new M. P. church which is yet incomplete, as one of beauty; but did not expect to see one so beautiful as I found. The pastor and people are to be congratulated for their work and sacrifices. But I was told that if it were not for the indebtedness of about twelve hundred dollars yet "not vouched for," or which is not covered by subscription, which is now upon them, that our people would go ahead and complete the building. When this church is completed, it will be one of our most beautiful churches in the State. I trust it will soon be finished.

It seems to me that this is an important field. Since our Denton High School is here, and our Orphans' Home, and also the majority of the best citizens are M. P.'s, to me it appears as a strategic point If our people could only complete the church at an early date, it would give us the advantage of leadership in that vicinity, and the influence of our church would be extended. Am sure that if our people knew the situation throughout the bounds of the N. C. Conference, many would gladly help our people at Denton—who not only so recently sacrificed toward building a church; but also in buying land for the Orphans' Home.

It was of much pleasure to learn that Prof. Pender was getting along so nicely with the Denton High School.

But the last of all, to visit the Orphans' Home, where the children all seemed happy; and then to think of so many who had been turned away for lack of room, and were thrown on the "cold charities of the world" made the visitor sad. I trust that soon a better and larger Home for our orphans will be built. A. Oscar Lindley.

Allred-Ridenhour.

At Concord, N. C., on Feb. 24, Miss Annie Ridenhour was pronounced the wife of Mr. C. T. Allred, in the presence of quite a number of friends of the contracting parties, by the writer.

The bride is a member of our church in Concord and the daughter of Rev. J. M. Ridenhour of the M. E. Church, South. We wish for them a long, peaceful voyage down life's stream.

A. O. Lindley.

—President Taft has appointed Mahlon Pitney of New Jersey to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed the late lamented Justice Harlan.

A Tibute of Love to Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Holt.

If you will allow me space, I want to say a few words of praise and love of my best friends on earth—Edwin M. Holt and Elizabeth Holt. You all will perhaps think it very strange and odd that I write this while they are both living, but I don't want to wait till they are dead and then heap flowers on their graves when it will do them no good. I want them and every one to know how I love, honor, and thank them for their care of me. When I was a little homeless girl they took me in and gave me a home, and when I say they were as good as my mother and father could have been, I know I am not wrong, for mother will always seem like my own. She taught me when I was only a child to love God and keep His commandments and go to church, she tried to teach me what was right and by God's grace I aim to try to live right and go the way she taught me.

I often think how sad, oh! how sad, it would be if I could not go back home to mother and talk with her. Sometimes when the way seems dark and gloomy I go and talk with her and father and their words cheer me up, and I do pray that the dear Lord will spare them for many years yet. Mother is now in her 82nd year and sometimes is quite feeble, and at the present time is feeble but she bears her suffering with Christian faith in God, knowing that all is right with Him. I want you all to pray that she may speedily recover her full health.

And now a few words about "father." I remember when I saw him for the first time, how proud I was to follow him to my new home, and how glad I was to play around them and their daughter, now the wife of Rev. J. A. Burgess.

I know sometimes I was not dutiful to them like I should have been, but I know they have forgiven me, and I pray that God will bless them for being so good to me and starting my feet in the right way, and by God's help I aim to try to live so that when mother and father and I are done on earth we will all meet in that glory world.

Now once again I pray God to bless and take care of them for being so kind and good to me. Their Ward,

L. I.

—Many soldiers in and about Peking, China, mutinied last week and there was much pillage, fire and bloodshed. The new president, Yuan Shi Kai, is said to be unable to control his soldiers and hold his own against the many odds which threaten to disturb. China is still in a turbulent and an unsettled condition.

IN MEMORIAM.

Gone, But Not Forgotten.

Mrs. J. H. Durham departed this life February 15th, 1912, at 10:40 o'clock. She was 46 years of age and she professed faith in Christ when 16 years old and joined Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, (about three miles southeast of Chapel Hill) and lived a consistent member thereof until God called her home.

Mrs. Durham had been in feeble health for more than a year previous to her death and the end came not unexpected to her and her people, and during that time every attention was given her that kind hands and anxious hearts could give. But all of this availed nothing, for God in His wisdom saw best to call her from earth to glory. She was cheerful amid her afflictions and looked forward to her departure with a submissiveness that characterizes the true follower of Christ. Oh! it is sad to us, especially was the blow a heavy one to her companion, but they all are bearing it bravely and with Christian fortitude, knowing that their loved one is far better off than she could ever have been here.

She was a faithful and sincere Christian, a kind and benevolent neighbor, a true and devoted wife and a loving mother. She was always cheerful and hopeful, looking on the brightest and best side of things. Her devotion to her family was beautiful, being at all times exceedingly kind and thoughtful and considerate of her husband and children, she was firm yet gentle with her children, and with the aid of her husband gave them that early training, which if they will not depart from will make them noble and useful men and women. I repeat that one prominent feature of her character was her love for her children.

She is not dead but is really more alive now than ever before. On February 15th, she launched out upon a broader and more beautiful life than this, could she have been permitted to speak to loved ones as the end came she no doubt would have expressed the sentiment found in the language of St. Paul: "The time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give to me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing. Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me."

Mrs. Durham is survived by her husband, 6 daughters, 1 son, 1 grandson, an aged mother, 2 brothers, 4 sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss but our loss is her eternal gain. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. F. McDuffie in her home at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of February 17th, in the presence of a large number of friends and loved ones, after which the remains were carried to Maplewood Cemetery and laid beneath the cold, cold clay until the resurrection of the dead. May the Lord of all grace bless the bereaved ones. I know your hearts are grieved, but they should not be for "Sometime you'll understand" why Jesus took your loved one from you.

"Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the missive of our tears,
And there, sometime, we'll understand.
"God knows the way, He holds the key,
He guides us with unerring hand;
Sometime with tearless eyes we'll see;
Yes, there, up there, we'll understand."

Alice G. Thompson.

Durham, N. C., Feb. 27, 1912.

A Tribute of Respect.

Mr. S. F. Johnson departed this life February 18, 1912, after an illness of about two months. At an early age he gave his heart to God, and united with Hickory Chapel Missionary Baptist Church, of which Church he remained a loyal member until after he was married. On October 14, 1873, he was united in marriage to Miss Rowan Cutchin. Later he moved his membership to the Temple Methodist Protestant Church to be with her. And a few years later, he, with his wife, cast their lot with the Enfield M. P. Church, of which church he remained a true member until death. He was a good Christian, and was generally beloved by all who knew him. One of his greatest desires was to be pure in heart. He loved his church and always gave liberally of his means for the support of the Gospel. It was one of his greatest enjoyments to have his pastor or any other minister to visit his some. He was a good neighbor, and was always willing to aid his friends in any possible way. He leaves a devoted wife, and a host of friends to mourn his death. On February 20, amidst a gathering of friends his remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground near his home. The burial service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. L. Whitaker.

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is run,
And thou art crowned at last.

A Friend.

Williams.

A black cloud overhangs us, for the soul of our sweet friend and sister, Mrs. Mary Winnie Williams, wife of our beloved pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, has gone to shine in glory. She peacefully breathed her last on March 4th, 1912, at 2 o'clock P. M., aged 40 years, 11 months and 18 day. She was married to Rev. T. A. Williams on November 16, 1909. Their union was blessed with one child, a little daughter, who preceded her ten days. Sister Williams was ill only ten days, suffered intensely. But through it all showed great Christian fortitude, was conscious until the end, was ready and willing to go, told her husband she wished to be layed to rest in the Ringwood Cemetery at her home church, near Littleton, N. C. Watching by her bedside were husband with little step-daughter on his knee, Rev. D. R. Williams, of High Point, N. C., and her only sister, Mrs. Maggie Threewits, and her only living brother, Mr. W. N. Thornton, both of Littleton, N. C. During the fifteen months Sister Williams was among us we learned to love her, and hoped to keep her longer. But God sent a holy band of angels with the message to "come up higher and enjoy the rest prepared for the children of the King."

To the bereaved husband, relatives and friends I would say, Weep not, nor mourn, for although the vacant chair in the home can never be filled, the silvery voice never heard again, yet God's grace is sufficient to heal the broken hearts, his arms strong enough to lift the heavy burden and disclose the silver lining to this black cloud that is now crushing us. To His will we humbly bow, knowing that all is well.

Mrs. R. P. Petree.

Tobaccoville, N. C., March 5, 1912.

Sisk.

Aunt Nellie Sisk was born October 6th, 1829, died February 17, 1912, aged 82 years, four months and eleven days. She leaves a nephew and niece and other relatives to mourn their loss. Her father, mother, brother and sister preceded her to the Heavenly Home.

She has been a faithful member of Mt. Moriah M. P. Church for about fifty years.

The burial service was conducted by Rev. A. P. Ivester. Her remains were laid to await the resurrection morn.

But 'tis sweet to know that she dwells
With the loved ones gone on before,
In a land where there are no sad farewells,
And she waits for us on the golden shore.

Written by her loving niece,

Janie Sisk.

THE COID AIR FAMILY

We are s s sleeping on the roof,
  We are b b bathing on the stoop,
We are d d dining on the lid
  Of a b b backyard chicken coop.

We have t t taken up the rugs
  And the m m matting on the floors;
We have knocked the w w windows out—
  We are l l living out of-doors.

In the snow upon the l. l lawn
  Sits the bubbubbaby fat and cool,
And the older cnuchuchildren go
  To the Fresh Air Public School..

We are fufufull of b b-bounding health
  Every momomoment of the d d doy.
Aad the bubublizzards from the north
  Find us sh-sh-shivering but g g-gay.

And the neighbors envy us
  As we gugguggather round the light
Of the street lamp out in front,
  Reading in the air at night. —

—Selected.

SPECKLE'S BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

The sun was late in waking up, for it was December. But Dick woke early.

"Happy birthday," said mother softly. She was awake too. So Dick climbed out of his crib, and mother gave eight birthday kisses.

"One thing makes me sorry," said mother. "I can't get any eggs to make you a birthday cake, little boy. I went to every store in town yesterday afternoon, but I couldn't find a single egg."

"Never mind, Dick said cheerfuly. Maybe we can get some to-day, mother."

Just then there was a noise in the yard under mother's window.

"Listen, mother," Dick cried excitedly. "I b'lieve it's Speckle."

A hen was cackling.

The early sunbeams were peeping through the hall windows when Dick ran downstairs a little later. Out of doors it was cold—so cold that the little boy's fingers ached. But he stuck them deep into his pockets. A gray hen was standing near the back door.

"Was that you cackling, Speckle?" asked Dick. "Have you laid an egg this morning?"

But Speckle did not look up from the bit of turnip she had found.

"I wish she could talk," sighed Dick. "Then she could tell me where to look."

"Dick, would you mind bringing me a few sticks of wood?" called Aunt Polly from the kitchen door.

"I'll do it," said Dick.

It was dark in the wood house. But just as the little boy leaned over to pull a stick out from the pile of wood in the corner he saw something that made him drop what he held in his arms.

"Mother, mother, mother!" called an excited voice. "Come downstairs quick! I've got a surprise for you," Dick cried, leading mother out to the woodhouse.

"Dear old Speckle," exclaimeed mother, "to have a birthday gift ready for my boy."

Under the wood in the dark woodhouse were five smooth white eggs.

"I can have a birthday cake, after all, laughed Dick. "And now I 'speck I'd better carry some wood in for Aunt Polly."—Ethel Taylor Crittenden, in Sunday School Times.

THE NEW NEIGHBOR.

"Mama," cried Louise, running in from play one day, "some one is moving into the big house."

"Is that so? said Mama Baker, smiling.

"Yes, and they have a little girl about my size, and I saw her sitting on the porch."

"Well, that is nice. You will have a little girl to play with now."

"Yes, but they are rich, and have such nice things, and the little girl has such a nice dress. I don't think she will want to play with me. I 'spect she's stuck-up."

"You must not say that, dear. You must not judge too soon," said mama, gently. Mrs. Baker turned to her sewing and Louise ran out to watch the little girl at the big house.

Every day she had something to say of the new girl, but she did not like her any better than at first.

"Mama, I just can't stand that girl," she would say. "She is so proud of her nice dresses and pretty playthings."

"You do not know her well yet. You will like her better when you know her," her mother would say.

"No, I won't. I don't think I will ever like her."

One day about a week later it had been raining all morning, and Louise had to stay indoors. But it stopped about noon, and she went out to see the pretty rainbow that spanned the western skies Directly she came running in, carrying a pretty white kitten which was very wet.

"Oh, mama," she cried, "look at this pretty kitten! Isn't it pretty? may I have it for my own, mama?"

"Yes, dear, if you cannot find the owner. It may be some one's pet you know, who wants it as much as you do." Louise's face fell.

"I want to keep it," she pouted.

"Well, at any rate," said mama, cheerfully, "you may keep it until it is dry, and then you had better take it to the big house. I expect it belongs to that little girl."

Louise had thought of that, too, but she would not say so, for she wanted to keep it. She made a nice warm bed for it by the stove, and every little while she would run back to look at it. Every time she looked at it she wanted to keep it that much more. But she knew she must obey her mama,and so, when it was quite dry, she put on her cloak, and taking it in her arms, walked slowly and sorrowfully toward the big house.

An hour later she ran in, hair flying and cheeks glowing. "Oh, mama, I have had the loveliest time! The kitty was Mary's, and she was so glad to get it. She said it had been gone all morning and she just cried and cried because she could not find it. And, mama, she is crippled andcan't run and play, but has to sit in a chair all day. But she is just as sweet as can be and has so many pretty things, but she is not one bit stuck up."

"What did I tell you?" said mama, smiling. "Did I not tell you, you would like her when you knew her?"

"Yes, mama; and she said her uncle has some kitties just like hers and she is going to get me one, and she wants me to come to see her every day. Mama, I will never call anybody 'stuck up' again.—Dixie Girl.

HOW MARBIES ARE MADE

All boys like marbles; but who knows how they are made or where they come from? "Marbles," says the Chicago Herald," are made in great quantities in Saxony for export to India, China, and the United States. A hard, calcareous stone is used. This is broken into square blocks, and about one hundred and fifty of these blocks are thrown into a mill, in which is a flat slab of stone with numerous concentric furrows on its face. A block of oak of the same diameter as the stone, is made to revolve on the slab, while water flows upon it. The whole process requires but a quarter of an hour, and one mill can turn out twenty thousand marbles a week. The mills at Oberstein, on the Nahe, in Germany, manufacture marbles and agates especially for the American market."

So marbles are made by going thru the mill and getting the rough corners rubbed off, the edges smoothed down, and the mass ground into a globular form. And boys are made into men in much the same way, by being run through life's school, which is their "mill until their rough corners and edges disappear and they become rounded and smoother and fit for use in the world. Poverty, adversity, hard times, and hard fare—all have their uses in this world to round men and smooth them and polish them and fit them for usefulness here and for glory hereafter.—New York Observer.

A GOOD ANSWER

"O, my! Some folks think they are fine in their new red coat." Mamie threw up her head and strutted along the sidewalk in a very disagreable manner. As for the child in the new red coat, her cheeks grew as red as the garment which had attracted Mamie's attention.

She might have stopped and told Mamie some plain truths. She might have passed with a scornful glance. But instead she said pleasantly: "O, hello, Mamie! I didn't see it was you at first.'

Then she walked on and Mamie stood staring after her.

"I wouldn't have spoken so pleasantly like that" cried another girl who had seen it all. "What made you when she was so mean and horrid."

And the girl in the red coat answered: "I want to be more polite than she was.

A good answer, was'nt it, girls?—Selected

WHERE GAMBLERS ARE MADE.

At a mass meeting in the Second Presbyterian Church, of this city (Portsmouth, Ohio), on a recent Sabbath afternoon, in the presence of over two hundred men, a converted gambler and an ex-saloon keeper made the following statement, which has created a profound impression, and I herewith transmit it to your paper that it may do good in a wider sphere:

"I have been in the saloon business with a gambling room attached for the last four years, and claim to know something about what I am now going to tell you. I do not believe that the gambling den is near so dangerous, nor does it do anything like the same amount of harm, as the social card party in the home. I give this as my reason; In the gambling room the windows are closed tight, the curtains are pulled down; everything is conducted secretly for fear of detection, and none but gamblers, as a rule, enter there. While in the parlor all have access to the game, children are permitted to watch it, young people are invited to partake in it. It is made attractive and alluring by giving prizes, serving refreshments and adding high social enjoyments. For my part, I never could see the difference betwen a piece of silver moulded in the shape of a cup or thimble. The principle is the same, and whenever property changes hands over the luck of cards, no matter how small is the value of the prize, I believe it is gambling.

"Perhaps you have never thought of it but where do all the gamblers come from? They are not taught in the gambling dens. A 'greener' unless he is a fool, never enters a gambling hell, because he knows he will be fleeced out of everything he posesses in less than fifteen minutes. He has learned somewhere else before he sets his foot inside of such a place.

When he played in the parlor in the social game of the home, and has become proficient enough to win prizes among his friends, then the next step with him is to seek out the gambling room for he has learned and counts upon his efficiency to hold his own. The saloon men and gamblers chuckle and smile when they read in the papers of the parlor games given by the ladies, for they know that after a while those same men will become patrons of their business. I say, then, the parlor game is the college where gamblers are made and educated. In the name of God, men, stop this business in your homes. Burn up your deck and wash your hands.

"The other day I overheard two ladies talking on the street. One said 'I am going togive a card party, and I am going to the store to buy a pack of cards. Which are the best kind to get?' The other replied: 'Get the Angel Card. It has an angel on the back.'

Think," said he, "of dragging the pure angels of Heaven into this infernal business."

After he had taken his seat another converted ex-gambler, who led the men's meeting in the Second Presbyterian Church the following Sabbath, arose and said: "I endorse every word which the brother before me has just uttered. I was a gambler. I learned to play cards, not in the saloon, not not in my own home, but in the homes of my friends who invited me to play with them and taught me how."—Gospel Messenger.

SECOND WORLD'S CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP CONFERENCE.

By J. F. Martin, D. D.

Prominent among the many modern movements for the uplifting of humanity, is that which is to culminate in the World's Christian Citizenship Conference, Portland Oregon, June 29 to July 6, 1913. This Conference is no experiment, as a very successful similar Confernce, the first of its kind in the history of the world, was held in the city of Philadelphia in the month of November, 1910. Furthermore, the Commercial Club of the city of Portland, through its Convention Bureau, has entered into an agreement with the National Reform Association, which is arranging for this Second World's Christian Citizenship Conference, to pay into its treasury the sum of $15, 000 within the year 1912 to aid in the work of preparation for it and has also granted other valuable concessions to the amount of several thousand dollars. The railroad and steamship companies are heartily cooperating, having given assurence of very low rates.

Numerous mission boards, many church courts and various Christian civic organizations are also cooperating. Of the thousands expected to be in attendence, five hundred and more delegates have already been appointed.

On the program of this conference it is proposed to have from seventy-five to a hundred leading representative Christian statesmen from pratcically all the great countries of the world a score and more of whom have already been definitely engaged, including such men as Sir Andrew Fraser, for thirty-seven years Governor of Bengal Inida, Ng Poon Chew, Canton, China. Monsieur Charles-Lucien Gautier, Geneva, Switzerland, Dr. Armenag Haigazion Konia, Asia Minor, Turkey, and Charles Merle D'Aubigne, son of the famous French historian D' Aubigne, from abroad. Also Governors Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Chase S. Osborn of Michigan, and Dr. Samuel Zane Batten, Professor of Sociology in Desmoines, Iowa, College—from our own country. At this Conference it is proposed to have thoroughly discussed by these men and others of their type not only the great moral problems which are indeed world problems and with which government necessarily has to do—such as the weekly rest day, capital and labor, laws affecting family life, public education in its relation to morality and religion, vice and crime and the best means of their suppression, political corruption and its cure, etc.—but also and especially the great fundamental Bible or Christian principles of civil government in their application to these problems, which application we believe to be the one and only hope of their solution.

The immediate result to be sought through this Conference and through all the work of preparation for it is the revival and diffusion of national religion; a deeper and more general sense of the accountability of nations and governments to God and their dependence on him. Held, as it is to be, in our own country it cannot well fail to make a deep impression upon it and at the same time furnish a great arsenal, from which the friends of our national Christianity will be able to draw weapons for years to come with which to ward off the numerous and seemingly ever-increasing foes of all that is Christian in our national life and character.

World wide publicitity is now being given the Conference and will doubtless be given the proceedings of the same. All Churches, either local or general, all Missionary Societies and Boards, Young People's Societies of the different denominations, Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, Temperance Societies and other organizations having both a Christian and patriotic purpose, are particularly and specifically invited to appoint delegates to the National Reform Association, 603 Publication Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa. All inquiries concerning it should be sent to the same address, care of the General Superintendent,

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC. MARCH 17.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Success Worth Having and Not Worth Having." Dan. 4: 28-37.

In an age that is so thoroughly commercial, it is not unnatural that wrong ideals have been set up and encouraged in our country, even though it be the land of free and brave and notwithstanding our boasted motto that all men are created equal.

It has been truly said that too many men spell the goal of every man's ambition with the language that God recognizes such characters are unknown. Dollars' may be incident to success in many cases, but it is never the end or aim of him who desires the largest accomplishment.

It is said that in central Australia there grows what is known as the Nardoo plant, which although it satisfies hunger is destitute of nutritious substances. Men have been known to feast upon,satisfy their hunger and yet starve to death.So it is with money getting or pleasure seeking. Men may satisfy their selfish desires and passions in the business and social spheres of life and yet starve to death their souls and all that is highest and best in them. To the man that seeks money or pleasure there can be no success—he never has enough of either—it only increases and makes insatiable a desire that he has nurtured.Millions of people are starving their inner lives and are allowing their souls and better selves to become shrivelled and parched in a senseless quest for pleasure and wealth.

It is not success to have your name onevery tongue. It is not success to have more money than any one else in your town or country. It is not success to own an automobile. It is not success to hold office or have power. True success consists not in what you accomplish for yourself but what you do for others. No man is remembered or honored by what he has done for himself but what he has done for others. Some people picture as a sucess the man who gathers all to himself; God's idea is the man who gathers only to pass what he gets on to others more needy. The life that receives all and gives nothing may be likened to the Dead sea, which receives from a hundred pure streams yet is nothing more than a stagnant, death-dealing lake. The mountain spring has not more than a gallon of water in it at the time, but this is always fresh and pure. what it receives it rapidly gives again to the waiting world that streches away. It feeds with other springs the brook, the creek, the river. Fertile fields lie on either side, cattle are given drink, commerce is borne upon the bosom of the river—all because the springs have given together to make the big stream.

Such is charity. The pennies, like the spring, seem to be small; the nickels, like the branch, are not much within themselves, yet these make up the river upon which we can send to the foreign field the missionary whose message will carry refreshing drink to a thirsting people.

I fancy that when the great day of days comes' and we stand to see the judgment of our King, there will be many surprises for us. The names that have figured in our daily papers will not be the ones applauded in Heaven, but we shall find that our successful contemporaries are those who have worked to lift up fallen brothers and to make a little more smooth the path of their fellowmen. God will say "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me.

Thoughts On The Topic.

Believe me, the talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame.—Longfellow.

"Do you know, sir, that I am worth a million sterling?" a man once asked of John Bright. "I do." was the reply and I know that is all you are worth. "—Marden.

He hah achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express ti; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory is a benedicttion.—R. A. Stanley.

In a colored congregation objections had been made to the frequency of appeals for money. But the preacher said, "Breddern I nebber knew a church to die of too much gibben, and when I find such a one I 'low to climb ober the moss-cobbered roof and by de pale light of de moon I will write on de top-most shingle, Bressed am de dead dat die in de Lord.—Denton.

Daily Readings.

M. Was Lot a success?_____Gen. 19:15, 30
T. Dangerous success__ _1Kings 11: 9-14
W. Our danger _ _____Deut. 32: 9-14
T. Consecrated success _ _Gen. 41: 37-46
F. Successful against self ____Rom. __: 1-3
S. Success in failure _ _John 2: 18-22
S. Topic.

"The one motive that makes any other effective, and endures where others grow weak, is love for the Lord Jesus Christ and the loving purpose to obey his word of commission Nothing less than this is sufficient to sustain for long periods the Christian's missionary enthusiasm. The enthusiasm generated in a great convention, or by striking and thrilling address, often prompts generous giving. But the glow of it fades, and steady principles must be relied upon to keep in action the impulses started in enthusiasm."

WHEN REWARDS ARE GIVEN.

There is a great difference in Sunday-school in the success of methods for awakening interest, increasing and holding attendence, prizes for various kinds of work and progress. This is partly due to the fact that not all leaders realize that these plans are useful according to the genuine earnest effort that is put into them. They will soon fail of themselves like a perpetual-motion machine. For instance, where there is a "banner class" scheme, it arouses little attention, and no enthusiasm, to announce amid a dozen other notices that "class No. 1* has the banner today." Here is a superintendent who makes the whole school stop and listen when he announces the banner class. If it is a boy's class he sometimes has them march out to the platform to the music of the piano, presents them the banner with a half-minute speech on the value of punctuality and faithfulness, and then they march back again. So when badges or prizes are given, put into the symbol as much as possible of the thing which is symbolized. Symbols considered by themselves either become worthless, or else they become idols. Let the school see that you believe in the things that banners, badges and prizes stand for; use them as if they had a meaning, and the school will come to see thet meaning also.

Mr Lawrence has asked the Sunday-school workers of North America to aim at a 100 per cent. increase all round in the next three years, and he has the faith to believe that they willl accomplish this object.

His sevenfold proposal includes a complete organization of the field; a gain of a million scholars a year; the organization of 3,333 new mission schools a year; the formation of 50,000 adult Bible classes; the enrollment of 300,000 teachers in training classes; the contribution to the International Association of a sum equal to one-tenth of the local budget; and lastly, the conversion of a million persons a year for the next three years. "Every sixteen officers, teachers, and schoolars," said Mr. Lawrence," ought to be able to win one soul for Christ in twelve months,and this would reach the goal."

—Reports are that the Chinese have murdered eight missionaries and possibly more. Many have been endangered.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SC[redacted]daily for Atlanta. Pull-

N. B.—The following schedule[redacted]nd coaches to Atlanta published only as information [redacted]38 daily, New York, At-[redacted]Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:00 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman parlor car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 131 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

—There was a shooting, and at this writing likely a killing, of one citizen by Concord, March 4th, over a small account, or more specifically, the small interest on a small account, due the one to the other, the whole amount being a very few dollars at most. Such tragedies bring to mind the ancient, and the modern proverb, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

No man was ever forced to sin. No man can be compelled to sin. Sin can only be voluntary. The utmost any one, even Satan, can do, is to present strong inducements. But every man is at heart conscious that he has no need to accept the inducements and sin against God. Sin and righteousness must both be voluntary or they do not exist. Neither rewards for virtue nor punishment for vice would be possible if compulsion controlled the act.

THE SENSATIONAL MINISTER.

The Boston Herald, thus sanely and pertinently decsribes and interprets the sensational minister:

"Roughly, all clergymen may be divided into the sane and the sensational. First of all, the latter is likely not to be sure of his facts, however well informed he may be in theology. Secondly, he has a partiality for discussing things from the pulpit which might be turned over much better in private—his taste, perhaps, is not what it should be. Again, the sensational minister is over anxious to be talked about and written about, to be buttonholed on the street corner, to be a polite specimen of the man of the world. He wishes to be up to date. He would settle offhand, problems which balk much abler men than he. He seems unable at times to differentiate between the stump and the pulpit. He would be in touch with all public activities—and he tries so hard to be in touch with them that he gets out of touch with his real mission. We have all seen him, in other cities than in Boston, and his influnce is in inverse ratio as the noise he makes."

UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS' REUNION, MACON, GEORGIA, May 7th, 8th, 9th, 1912.

VERY LOW ROUND TRIP FARES, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Account the above accasion the Southern Raliway will sell very low round trip tickets to MACON, GA., and return as follows:

FROM	ROUND TRIP.
Goldsboro	$9.25
Selma	8.75
Raleigh,	8.50
Durham,	8.50
Henderson	9.35
Oxford	9.15
Chapel Hill	8.50
Burlington	8.50

Rates in same proportion from all other stations.

Tickets will be on sale May 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. with final return limit May 15, or if you prefer to stay longer, by depositing your ticket and paying a fee of fifty cents you can have final limit extended until June 5th, 1912.

Liberal stop-overs will also be permitted on these tickets.

For detailed information apply to any Southern Railway Agent or the undersigned.

J. O. Jones,
Trav. Pas. Agent,
Raleigh, N. C.

FROM A [illegible]AN MAIL BAG.

Broken Earthenware.''

Recently the writer read a book by one Harold Bigbie called ''Broken Earthenware.'' It is an interesting and startling statement of how the most unsavory odds and ends of that used to be men can be gathered together and made to live and be glad. * * * If the miner's method of extracting wealth from heaps of rubbish be worth study, and if superfine stationery born of rags and garbage heaps can delight and surprise us, what shall we say of a science that takes fag ends from the gutter and makes out of them good men and women?

This is by way of introduction.

At the corner of the street just under the hill lives Cheung. He is a thatch vendor, which occupation has rendered him two benefits; one money to buy drink with and the other, rest and refreshment when he is heavily laden.

Cheung was no common drinker with only a red nose and bleared eye to show for it; not he. He was known to the world and all of Seoul as a man who could terrify invisible spirits by the awful manner of his spree.

A hard, rancous voice he had and a pair of fog horn lungs, a willowy kind of body too, loosely hung together, that would wave to and fro, double up and recover. go all ways at once and yet never lose its footing. Its exercises were preliminary out-with-it-all in the middle of the street. Cheung took a few days to work up to his best pitch. He accosted every man that went by. If no reply was forthcoming he would swing off after the passer with blue curses and threatenings. Each retreating footstep added to the general weight of aggravation. Something had gone wrong with the entire universe in the mind of Cheung. He talked to himself, kicked high at the stone wall in front, flung odds and ends, cast dust in the air, roared and burst and blew. In the knowledge of the writer, this lasted for ten years and more.

Certainly English ''punchers'' may be deeper in black kinds of devilment, but as a demon of diabolic uproars. none ever surpassed Cheung. The police, like the other side and the street periodically yielded up the ghost and lay prone while Cheung had his innings.

Suddenly a day came when it ceased. Cheung was gone. Some one looking a bit like him was seen going repeatedly with quiet step and softened manner to a neighboring meeting house. He carried a New Testament and was seen often with his face to the floor praying. The date arrived for the returning rampage, but it did not materialize. Month followed month and the old demon of confusion was evidently dead. Cheung is a quiet oldish man now who frequently says that God has been good to him. How came it about? A little daughter of his was sent to the Mission School.

She learned her lessons and drank deep the teaching, learned to pray and read and to tell others what she had found of interest. How she approached that wild father of hers, what she said, how her little-girl faith grappled on to his untamed soul, with what soft influences she wooed him away from his world of wild devils and landed him safe in a region of eternal calm, I know not.

She is but a plain, low class little girl with poor ancestry and homely face, but like Daniel of old the spirit of the eternal God is in her and she is in touch personally with that great and wondrous Mystery who deals with Broken Earthenware. Spectator.

''Ten cleansed lepers should mean ten adoring worshipers; and a nation benefited ought to mean a nation blessing the Lord for His loving-kindness and His preserving care. Yet it is only too true of large classes of Americans that the more God does for them the less they think of Him, and the more they have the more they consume upon their own lusts—not necessarily in vice, but in vanities, laboring for that which is not bread, and exhibiting a supreme disinterest in spiritual relationships and experiences. Where are the nine?''

[redacted]ES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee of the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 21, 1912. ..NUMBER 17

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

EMANCIPATION.

Why be afraid of death as though your life were breath?
Death but anoints your eyes with clay, O glad surprise!

Why should you be forlorn? Death only husks the corn.
Why should you fear to meet the Thresher of the wheat?

Is sleep a thing to dread? Yet, sleeping, you are dead
Till you awake and rise, here or beyond the skies.

Why should it be a wrench to leave your wooden bench?
Why not, with happy shout, run home when school is out?

The dear ones left behind! O foolish one and blind.
A day, and you will meet; a night, and you will greet!

This is the death of Death: to breathe away a breath,
And know the end of strife, and taste the deathless life;

And joy without a fear, and smile without a tear,
And work, not care nor rest, and find the last the best.

—Maltbie D. Babcock.

AN INSPIRING THOUGHT.

A recent book has this paragraph:

"My dear, each man and woman is born with an aptitude to do something impossible to any other. You have an aptitude that the world has no match for. It is your aptitude for your own peculiar and immediate duty."

We have long believed that men are individually called to service, but this goes farther back, and declares that men are each peculiarly endowed for peculiar service, so that no two human beings are exactly interchangeable in the service of the world. The more we think of it, the more probable it appears. It implies that ahe social organism is a great machine planned by God in which individual men are the parts each specially designed for a special place. All men are alike, and yet all men are diff rent. All are variations of one general type, varied for a purpose. The thought of God is in our peculiar aptitudes, and this fact should constantly inspire us to an effort to be true to function. The foot has no right to try to usurp the place of the eye, and no aptitude for success, hould it try: but in its place it ie highly important. No other member of the body can exactly fill the place of the foot. However humble the service we are called to perform, it is rendered highly honorable by the fact that we are appointed thereto and designed therefor by our great Creator. Loyalty to Him requires that we render a prompt and willing service, yea, a cheerful and eager service. The man whose duty it is to dig coal may and should enter into his labors with a sense of responsibility to God for the manner of his service as truly as he who governs a state or instructs a nation.

Many of the distinctions that men make would disappear if we would see that human life in its entirety is according to a divine plan. Pride and vainglory cannot be felt by any who sees aright, and contempt for our fellowmen becomes impossible when we see that all are specially fashioned by God and that all who are true to their Creator are as they are because God has entered into the planning of their lives. Labor, instead of being looked upon as "dishonorable," would be seen to be the only honorable mode of spending our days, and the man who does not work because he is not compelled to would be regarded as recreant to duty.

"Our own peculiar and immediate duty:" what a blessed thing it is that we never need feel that we are useless, but that God ever opens before us the shining path of duty, and we may walk therein with constant joy.

REGARDING THE COLLECTION FOR EXPENSES OF DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

A pastor who has a fine record for collecting church moneys makes this suggestion as to the collection for delegate's expenses to General Conference: Let the amount assessed the charge be equitably apportioned to the churches. When a collection is taken at any church, let the amount be stated, and if the whole amount is not realized in the first effort, let the effort be repeated later until the whole amount is raised.

We believe the suggestion a good one. It is a small collection, but it ought to be raised. It is a hardship to require men to leave their work and go at their own expense to represent the church in General Conference. By some plan the amount should be secured. General Conference will soon be here.

GREENSBORO NOT ONLY BIGGER, BUT BETTER.

A Social Service Survey.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the social service committee of the men and religion forward movement will begin a preliminary survey of this city.

At 3:30 o'clock all managers or superintendents of factories, laundries, etc., are asked to blow their factory whistles, thus notifying these workers that in 30 minutes their work is to begin. Promptly at 4 o'clock this loyal band of manly Christians will go out over Greensboro and make a thorough canvass, which will serve as the basis of their betterment plans for social service, for the field must be known before effective work can be done.

This social service has been sectioned off under 28 captains, two from each church, and each church is allowed to contribute a certain number of workers. For example, the West Market Street Methodist church sends out 40 men and the First Presbyterian sends out 35.

The workers will go into every home in Greensboro and there learn the names of the members of those homes, their age, occupation and church and Sunday school affiliations or preferences. Every person seen will be interviewed. These workers will not interview the negro people, who will be seen by the workers of their own race.

Immediately upon covering the territory assigned to them, the workers will return to the Y. M. C. A. After all have gathered, they will go in a body to the West Market Street church Sunday-school room, where a "feed" will be awaiting them. Those to serve the supper are preparing for as hungry a bunch of men as ever gathered into one room. After supper, each worker will be given an opportunity to relate anything of interest that occurred during his canvass, whether it be of a serious or humorous nature.

Greensboo is one of the few cities in the United States in which such an undertaking has been launched. The other cities are Chicago, Philadelphia, Buffalo, and Pittsburgh.

That such a survey, followed by a thorough crusade, will make Greensboro a better place to live in, will not be denied by any thinking man. Social conditions in the city need attention, and need it badly. Right now, for the first time, the proper attention will be given to the social conditions and given in the proper manner. The social service committee is a body of manly Christians plunged into a noble and common task, knowing no church and caring for no creed. Thus, it is a work that must appeal to the manly man. Its song is not the "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," but "Greensboro Here and Now—Not Only Bigger, but Better." —Greensboro Daily News.

THE LAY EVANGELIST AND LOCAL PREACHER.

We find in the Bible, authority for the lay evangelist or the local preacher, in the example given us in the case of Phillip. He was not set apart as an elder or pastor, but as a Deacon, nor was he sent out as an evangelist, but as soon as he was set apart as a Deacon by the prayers of the apostles and their laying on of hands, he immediately gives us an example of special evangelism and of lay evangelism. To my mind this forever removes the band of ecclesiastical authority, put upon men who have been called and spiritually equipped to do the work of lay-evangelists, though they may never have been ordained to the office of the ministry. The churches that hold to the belief that only those in the line of apostolic succession should preach the gospel are responsible, in a large part, for the prohibition of the lay evangelist. And churches which do not believe in apostolic succession are equally censurable for placing the bond upon laymen when the Spirit of God has called to do the work of a lay evangelist. And I suspect if it were not for church pride we would be more liberal in this respect. The fact of a man or woman not being clothed in ecclesiastical robes does not prove that the call of God is not given him to do the work of a lay evangelist, and that he has not given them the gift of such evangelism. We find that the early Methodist Church and Baptist also, had great profit from having a local ministry, while many of them, yea, almost all of them, continued in secular pursuits, yet they gave the church efficient service in preaching the Gospel, in promoting revivals, in getting souls saved, in going in to destitute places where the Gospel is needed. Where the regular pastors havn't time to go, and in building up the kingdom of God along spiritual lines.

Dwight L. Moody is a good example of the lay evangelist in these latter days. Gypsy Smith is another wonderful lay example, and the miner boy who came up out of the mines of Wales and led twenty-thousand souls to Christ in a very short time. None of these had ever been set apart to the ministry by any ecclesiastical body, but felt called of God and they obeyed at once, and were not hindered by men. Moody, especially, despite strong opposition, much adverse criticism, and discouragements of various kinds, such as were calculated to insure failure to one less persevering than himself, pushed his way onward until, under God, he became the most famous and successful lay evangelist of his time. He was only one of many whom God has been pleased to call from the ranks of the laymen to lay evangelism and thereby has been made a blessing to the church and world. The rightfulness of the call of the lay evangelist is manifest in the fact that God has called some to that work who are so by Providence, that it would be impossible for them to fill the office of the pastor; and many called to this line of work are not qualified for the pastorate. Again, it is in favor of the lay evangelist that, because that he has a comfortable support, often through some other avocation, he can carry the Gospel to people in rural and out of the way places, who are not able to support a pastor. Shall they perish for the lack of a local preacher, or a lay evangelist? And if they perish, where will the responsibility fall? We pity the church, or board, or individual, who in any way should hinder any one man or woman whom God's spirit has called to the local preachers of lay evangelist's work, simply because he or she is a lay member. I do hope the Southern Christian Convention in its coming session will take the matter up and provide for us to have a local ministry. We have men who could do good service if they had the liberty. I heartily agree with Bro. H. C. Simpson that we ought to bring something before the convention, to make it tell for the greatest amount of good. Let us all pray for a real baptism of the Holy Spirit that we may be the better prepared for the work of the Convention and for the work that will await us after the Convention has closed. I feel that there is nothing that we need so much as we need to be endued with power from on high. This was a command of our Lord and Master that we tarry at Jerusalem until we receive this enduement. Luke 24:49, but have we obeyed this command? Many are anxious for College enduement. Which is all right provided it is made subject to the enduement of the Holy Spirit. The fields are write unto the harvest, hence let us pray the Father to send forth more laborers and if he sends them let us not hinder them.

P. T. Klapp.

China became a republic on Abraham Lincoln's birthday, and historian's may be able to trace the one to the other.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

AS ITHERS SEE US.

A Chinese Student On American College Life.

In a recent number of The Dartmouth Alumni Magazine, a Chinese alumnus of the college, Mr. Lin-Yi Ho, of the class of '11, gives his views of undergraduate life in a typical New England college which was founded by a great evangelist and educator of the eighteenth century largely to fit young men for the gospel ministry.

It is interesting to look with the eyes of a student from a non-Christian land upon the students of a famous American Christian College.

Many things about Dartmouth he praises unstintedly; her beautiful, isolated environment, so favorable to study! the intensely loyal Dartmouth spirit of both students and alumni; the democratic character of the students and the absence of snobbery; but he finds some flies in the ointment.

His criticisms are interesting because they might be made, probably, of almost every American college and some of them with much greater intensity.

First he deplores the overemphasis on athletics. "In view of the fact that so much handicap has been placed on academic efficiency," he says, "so much interest aroused in athletics, so much more winsome is the football hero in the eyes of college boys, and so unpleasant, if not disgusting, is the studious 'grind,' it seems that too much sacrifice in education has been made, and for such a too great price has been paid."

Again says the Chinese student, "A large proportion of college boys lack a serious purpose of mind."

Lastly he says: "It is difficult to conceive of the present status of the Christian religion among college communities... When morning chapel is looked upon as a drudgery, and when religious observance is openly neglected, the religious problem has not received sufficient weight. Several hours may be profitably spent in fanning a baseball game, but a sermon of a little over ten minutes seems to be regarded as a culpable waste of time. Personally I do not overlook the importance of religion, even in an enlightened college community."

The significance of these extracts lies in their authorship. They are not written by a stait-laced Puritan, by a "back-number" parson, by a sour critic of American colleges, but by a sympathetic, open-minded Chinaman, who, after being well educated in his native land, has already studied in three of our leading American institutions. He implies that his criticisms apply to all the colleges he has seen. He knows what he is talking about. It is worth while not only for college boys, but for all Americans, to sit at the feet of this Chinamen, as he writes:

"When the sense of individuality has become so emphasized, when serious-mindedness has largely disappeared, when family prayers have been abandoned through economic pressure, the church falls into the background, and spiritual teaching loses its once tight grip in favor of some thing more tangible and more material."

America has been sending missionaries to China for a good many years. It looks as if the time might come when China would send some needed missionaries to America.—F. E. C., in C. E. World.

A LIVING WITNESS.

From Missionary Review of the World.

When Bishop Weeks, of Africa—at that time not having been promoted to wear the mitre—was traveling in England, a gentleman who was in the same railway carriage with him began to attack him as a friend of missions.

"What," said he, "are missionaries doing abroad. We do not hear much about their movements. We pay them pretty well, but hear nothing from them. I suppose they are sitting down quietly and making themselves comfortable."

Beside Mr. Weeks sat another traveler, as black as any of the natives of the Dark Continent, and himself an unmistakable negro. He quietly waited until the stranger had exhausted his tirade against missions, and then making a sign of silence to Mr. Weeks, begged to be permitted to reply to the critic.

"Sir," he said, "allow me to present myself to you as a result of the labor of the missionaries whose work you have been depreciating." Pointing to Mr. Weeks he continued, "I am an African, and this man is the means of my having become a Christian, and of my coming to this country in the capacity of a Christian minister."

The man who had assaulted Christian missions looked upon the black man beside him with a look of mingled embarrassment. He could not be mistaken; there was a genuine, typical African, flat-nosed, thick-lipped, with retreating forehead, and short, curly hair; yet that negro addressed him in the elegant language of an educated and accomplished Englishman. He had felt all the refining power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and there were in the very tones of his voice and his whole manner the unmistakable signs of a Christian gentleman.

The accuser of missions sank into a reverie. He had no more to say as an objector. That one man was both a compensation for, and a vindication of, Christian missions. And soon he resumed the conversation, but in a different tone; he began to talk with Mr. Weeks upon missionary topics as an interested and engrossed listener.

That black man was none other than Samuel Adjai Crowther, afterwards consecrated as the first native bishop of the Niger.

Trust in the Dark.

I was awakened the other morning about four o'clock in my room by a little voice just beside my bed in the dark asking for a drink. I got the little lad a drink and he lay quiet a moment, and then he said: "Father, may I sing myself to sleep?" And I said, "Yes, dear; go ahead." But he soon got up so much enthusiasm that I told him he would better stop, or none of the rest of us could sleep. Then he was quiet for a while, but soon I heard his tiny little voice again in the perfect stillness of the night, "Father, have you got your face turned toward me?" And I said, "Yes, little boy," and the darkness was as the light of day to him.

"We older children grope our way
From dark behind to dark before,
And only when our hands we lay,
Dear Lord in Thine, the night is day,
And there is darkness never more.
"Reach downward to our sunless days
Wherin our guides are blind as we,
Where faith is small and hope delays,
Take Thou the hands of prayer we raise,
And let us feel the light of Thee."

—Robert E. Speer.

Henry M. Stanley has said: "When oft-repeated instances of the efficacy of prayer were remembered, I have marvelled at the mysterious subtleness with which the answer has been delivered." Then there is an illustration from his own experience: "Constrained at the darkest hour to humbly confess that without God's help I was helpless, I vowed a vow in the forest solitudes that I would confess His aid before men. A silence, as of death, was round about me; it was midnight; I was weakened by illness, prostrated by fatigue, and worn with anxiety for my white and black companions whose fate was a mystery. In this physical and mental distress I besought God to give me back my people. * * * Nine hours later we were exulting with a rapturous joy. In full view of all was the crimson flag with the crescent, and beneath its waving folds was the long lost rear column."

HOW TO STOP THE EVILS COMPLAINED OF.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

In our Methodist Protestant Herald, of Feb. 22, 1912, you refer to a communication from me, published in that issue, and, as I conceive, virtually admit that the evils I refer to in said communication are not imaginary, but really well-founded. Then you say, "If. Bro. Hunt will tell how to put a stop to evils of this sort, and to make right the wrongs already done in the way referred to, I will thank him."

While I do not profess to be wise enough for the task, yet I thank you for extending to me that courtesy to express my humble views upon such important matters, that really underly the welfare of the church and the destiny of our nation.

How to stop and remove the evils referred to in my former letter will require more than a few lines and more space in our Herald than you will be able to give. But suffer me to say, I am not satisfied with things as they are. And there will be no material change in the condition of the laboring people until you and I and all of us collectively own those things that we collectively need and use. This is evident from the fact as long as relatively few men own the railroads, the telegraph, the telephone, the oil fields and the gas fields and the steel mills, and the sugar refineries, the leather tanneries: own, in short the sources and means of life, they will corrupt politics, they will enslave the working class, they will impoverish and debase society, they will do all things that are needful to perpetuate their power as the economic masters and the political rulers of the people. Not until these great agencies are owned and operated by the people, can the people hope for any material improvement in their social condition.

If there is a man on this earth who is entitled to all the comforts and luxuries of his life in abundance, it is the man whose labor produces them. If he is not, pray tell me who is?

Does he get them under our present system? Answer, No. A thousand times, no! What is this but a "muzzling the ox that treadeth out the corn," and stuffing the one that did not tread? Let us see if this true. Turn to the case of Mr. Rockefeller who testified before the court that he had nothing to do with the Standard Oil for eight long years; yet during that eight years he had drawn from it in profits $160,000,000. Think of that vast sum: one hundred and sixty million, that justly belonged to the people. God made the oil lands for all the people and the government should own them and operate them for the benefit of all the people. Don't you think so? But the capitalists will throw up their hands in perfect horror if we say anything about government ownership, and the operating these things in the interest of all the people, and say, "Oh, that would never do," and I am sorry to says some labor slaves are ready to believe what they say.

Now, my dear brother, a similar cry was heard sixty or seventy years ago, in reference to the post office department when managed by a private corporation. The capitalists said, It will never do for the government to undertake to manage the mail in the interest of all the people. But finally the government did take the matter in hand and what has been the result? I answer: Postage on a single letter has been reduced from 25 cents to 2 cents per letter. I know what I say to be true, for many times I went with my father to the post office and saw him pay 25 cents for a single letter! Just so, the government could take hold of many things and operate them in the interest of all the people and save to the people millions of dollars.

But some will say, Oh, that sounds like Socialism, etc. Well if it does, and benefits the great masses of the people, let it so sound, for I had rather hear that than to hear the sound of millions of hungry and helpless children crying for bread, as they are now doing in many of our large towns and cities.

Now let us compare some things that are socialized with other things that are not socialized and in that way see which are the better. Well, observe first the things that are socialistic: The Post Office, Public Schools, Public Roads, Public Streets, Public Sewers, Court House, State House, Libraries.

Not Socialistic: Express Companies, Railroads, Coal mines and bins, Oil Mills, Meat and Sugar, Banking Business.

Now let me ask every candid and thinking man and woman, from which are we suffering most, from the things that are Socialistic or from those that are not Socialistic? And to improve conditions, and right the wrongs in our government we must change our mode of electing men to office. No man should hold office unless elected by a direct vote of the people; and the people should have the right of recall. No man should be appointed to office for life! Make every man in office know that he is a servant of the people, and not a lord.

In my opinion there would be but little crime if society was on the right basis; for crime is mostly the result of ignorance, oppression and want. And it is admitted that half a dozen capitalists control the banking interests of this nation and can at their will precipitate a panic at any time. And don't they precipitate one every few years? Yes, just about as often as it will enable them to make millions of wealth at the ruin and downfall of thousands. It is estimated that there are now 3,000,000 men in the U. S., in enforced idleness and then think of the great host of hungry wives and children these men represent, and numbers of them not old enough to know their right hand from their left! Shame upon our so-called Christian land, when by a united effort on the part of all professing Christians this deplorable state could be changed. Capitalists know this and they will give you a few thousand to build or endow a college somewhere, to keep the church from interfering with their swindling machines. To show the power of capital, suppose I owned enough land to employ three men and their families, who gave me one third of what they produced as rent. I have the equivalent of one family of slaves to serve me all the time, who board and clothe themselves. Can't you see why capitalists are trying to get all the land? Why chattel slavery wasn't half as nice for the masters. This year, 1912, is going to be one long remembered because of industrial depression. The people will not be able with the wages they are receiving to buy back the goods they have produced. Hence many more factories and shops will have to close with the stale cry "over production." When the real fact is "Under consumption." If labor only gets one fourth of what he produces, as I showed in a former letter, then any one can see why we have what is called over production. Whenever the laboring class get the full value of what they produce, then they will be able to buy back every thing they have made and you will have no more of "over production," nor of "under consumption."

What a pity that our government can build warships, but not peace ships. That can distribute mail, but not express matter. Can run navy yards, but not stock yards. Can build canals, but not railways. Can give away valuable and large bodies of land, belonging to all the people, but never can get them back. That can make profits for capitalists, but not for the working class. Haven't we got a strange government any way?

I believe I can endorse these words spoken by Wendell Phillips, in a speech delivered in New York City December 7, 1871: "The biggest brains don't go to Congress. One-half of Christendom is starving men, bodily! Our hope for the future is in the education of the masses. Let the nation hear a demand from the laboring man's voice. I am ashamed of a civilization that makes 5,000 men dependent on one Give a man a chance to earn a good living and you can save his life! If I could I would abolish every moneyed corporation in the States! I says abolish the bank, and let the government loan the farmer money at 3 per cent. One fourth of the human race lives in ease, and the other three-fourths contribute to it, without sharing it." The banking business is one of the biggest swindles in the world! Why should they be allowed?

What I Would Like to See.

I would like to see a world where thrones have crumbled and where kings are dust. And the aristocracy of idleness had perished from the earth!

I would like to see a world without a slave, and man at last is free. I would like to see a world at peace, and all lips filled with words of love. I would like to see a world on which the gibbet's shadow does not fall. I would like to see a world where labor reaps its full reward and work and worth go hand in hand. I would like to see a world where the poor working girl is not driven to desperate choice of crime or suicide nor shame. I would like to see a world where all are willingly governed by the golden rule and not by the rule of gold. G. E. Hunt.

FROM BRO. N. F. MORGAN.

Mr. Editor M. P. Herald and dear readers:—There seems to be a spirit to use our valuable church paper to write subjects with a political bearing. I think the work of the Herald too great to come down to a discussion of those subjects. I see the editor has given some wise answers to some. One has said not one law has been passed by Congress in the last twenty-five years that was in the interest of the laboring class. We differ. The Pure Food and Drug Act and many others we think were in the interest of the laboring class. We need the capitalist and we have the poor with us always. It is required of us to do right by each other. There has been a difference in wealth since Abraham, yea, since Job, or the beginning of the history of the world. We cannot regulate by law to make equal. We might as well try to make all minds the same, all will power, all energy, and health and length of life the same. Yea, yea, all marriages to be at the same age. All be blessed with engual number of children. So we see we cannot have our way in some things, and do not see alike in all things. Let us strive to give others the rights that ourselves claim, and hold up the religion we profess and the right life above all, in the name of Christ Jesus our Lord. N. F. Morgan.

Handy, N. C., March 17, 1912.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

The interests of the whole people are to be considered before the interests of one person. One of the first things to be impressed is the matter of responsibility. Every child ought to be made to feel responsible. By feeling responsible we will do better. We find ourselves in existence, and we can't help it; we are here on the stage of action, and the matter of right and wrong is set before us and we have to choose for ourselves, and by choosing the right we can go in the way of righteaousness. "No man liveth to himself, and no man dieth unto himself." Rom. 14:7. The responsibility of every person widens out, and we must have a social responsibility in spite of our shrinking back. The longer we live, if we live right, the more deliberate we become about the part that we, as individuals, have in this responsible life. The intelligent sinner wants to share the responsibilities of life. We take pleasure in serving, and in helping, and this pleasure in the helpful is a "grace." However, the matter of helping is all done under the Providence of God. The human gifts and talents and the material helps all really belong to God—but, as it seems, most people lose sight of this fact, and refuse to be tithed according to the law of "Moses and the prophets." Yet this law is a degree of heaven. When I think of these vast social obligations, and wish that I could be able somehow, by some means to urge the matter—but, as I have been taught, "We can't rule the world." However, we all have influence and have a work to do—are responsible. By using the helps that God gives, He will help us more. A great help to responsibility and to making all feel responsible in the help of the law. The best people are most in favor of strict laws—in favor of having the laws enforced. Law belongs to system. All good rulers want to be well governed, by their "fellow citizens," and these facts help to prove up in favor of universal education. If there is a class on earth crying harder, and even groaning more than any other class for education, it is the poorest class in the world. Poor, suffering Israel was rescued and lifted up out of the "furnace" and were educated. W. F. Grabs.

—Some of our good citizens who last week were complaining of mud are now complaining of dust.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answer to Assigned Questions

I find Uz in the northern part of Arabia. (Mrs.) G. S. Kernodle.

Reidsville, N. C., R. F. D. No. 2.

Lesson For Next Week.

Psalms 13-23.

Miss Mabel Morgan, of Jackson's Creek, wins prize in answer to question of last week. The gist of the explanation is that 1900 was not a leap year.

—Experiments show that men have a biting force of 170 pounds on their back teeth; and about half as much on the front.

—The Democratic State Convention is to be in Raleigh this year—June 6th—May is the time set for county conventions. A senatorial primary is to be held.

—The state council of the N. C. Farmers' Union is in session here today, considering the location of a string of warehouses.

—Palm Beach, Frolida, has its dangers, too. A man from Buffalo, New York, while out bathing was attacked by a huge turtle and for fifteen minutes fought for his life. He was finally rescued by two Japanese who took a rope and lassoed the turtle, though they too were wounded by the turtle.

—The commerce court has ordered the L. & N. and the Southern Railways to haul coal from certain mines which they had refused to haul because of a disagreement as to who was to furnish cars. The court has said, You must agree or the court will settle the matter for you.

—We feel that the whole country will aplaud Congressman Dupre, of Louisana, for the resolution which he introduced last week to prohibit the printing of "applause," "great applause," and such like expressions of approval in the Congressional Record injected into speeches printed therein. Fact is, this applause is frequently manufactured for home consumption and often appears in speeches printed in the Record, but never delivered in Congress at all. Now if the Louisana Congressman will go one step further and get a resolution adopted preventing the distribution of free seeds his name will live forever, or will deserve to do so. The best use to be made of these seeds, anyway, we ar told, is to feed them to the birds, and there is other bird food cheaper and better than these.

OUR VETERANS.

Mr. Clement Lanier, Cid, N. C., aged 94.

Mrs. Martha Morgan, Jackson's Creek, aged, ... 90

A LETTER TO THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Even though I am on the other side of the earth, I've not forgotten the boys and girls in the homeland. Often your bright, sunny faces come before me as I saw them before I came to China, and I pray for you and am quite sure that you pray for me and the little yellow boys and girls here.

I have not been here very long, so cannot write you much about the little boys and girls, but I thought perhaps you'd be glad to know something about their language.

The Chinese is a baby language made up of short words of one syllable which sometimes have several meanings. Nouns do not have any plural, but when you want to speak of more than one of anything, a classifier is used. Instead of saying five spoons, the Chinese say "five sticks of spoon; or instead of four stars, they say "four balls of star."

Sometimes a language grows or changes, but the Chinese is just the same as it was a thousand years ago. Some clever men wrote the words years ago. Whenever they formed a new word, they would have to invent a new way to write it.

Chinese words were first written as pictures, then as the people learned to write faster the pictures changed and now they are called characters.

Sometimes two characters are put together to form one word.

"Sun and moon together mean—bright.

"A man (character) inside four walls means—prisoner.

"Two trees together mean—forest.

"Sun above ground means—morning."

Altogether there are supposed to be 50,000 characters, but most of them are very difficult. If one knows 4,000 "he can read most things and would be considered quite well educated."

The same book might be read and understood in each of the provinces and yet each character would have a different pronunciation in each province. This character for man would be the same everywhere, but in Peking the pronunciation would be "jin;" in Amoy "lang;" in Swatow, "niang;" in Ningpo "ning;" and in Canton "yan." The Cantonese is very complicated and it would baffle your ears to hear these strange sounds and note the "tiny difference between the high and low, quick and short, or slow and long sounds, rising and falling tones. Without these tone variations you would not be able to distinguish the meanings.

This morning I asked our woman whether she had bought us rice for today or not, and this is what I said: "Ni mai mai m mai ni?" "Mai" may mean "buy" or "sell" or "rice." A different word is used for rice in its different forms. In the field it is "wo;" before it is husked it is "kuk;" when ready to sell it is "mai;" when cooked dry it is "fan," and when cooked with water is "chuk." If you pronounce an English word in nine different ways and imagine a different meaning for each way, you'd have an idea of our language in southern China.

In school the children all study aloud, each shouting out his own lesson. "Imagine young John Chinaman starting off to school for the first time. He wears a long coat down to his ankles, and a round cap. Below this his glossy black hair is plaited in a queue, which is lengthened with red cord till it reaches his heels. His father takes him to the Master and tells him what a stupid boy his son is. You'd think the Master would find out soon enough; but John knows his father is only being polite—to the Master, not to him.

"He gets a school name such as 'Son of Learning,' or 'Heaven's Wisdom,' and usually drops the name by which he has been called at home. He may be glad to do so if it has been 'Black Snake,' 'Tiger Mane,' 'Number Two,' 'Puppy-dog,' 'Girl,' or such like. John must bow low, knocking his head on the ground before the tablet in the schoolroom, on which the name of Confucius is written.

"Turning around, he sees the other pupils, boys of all ages, sitting with their books before them. The room is small and rather dark and the noise is tremendous. You are amazed that the Master has not shouted 'Silence!' but he is quite pleased that John's father should see what fine, busy scholars he has and would be very angry if they were quiet.

"He hands the new pupil a little reader and pointing to the characters, tells him their names. John does not understand, but he repeats the sounds as he is told and goes to his seat and shouts them until he thinks he knows them. Then he takes the book to the Master and turning his back to him that he may not be supposed to be looking over, he repeats the passage, swaying to and fro as he says it. If it is said correctly, he will be set a few more lines; but it is only after the whole book is learned by rote that any explanation is given. If it is not said correctly, the Master will cane him, for he believes that nothing but a sound beating will give him a memory."

Perhaps you'd like to know something about our girls' school in Wuchow. About once a week the school-girls came up to the hill for exercise and sometimes I would play with them, for they are as fond of play as you are. I could not understand nor speak much of their language, but I motioned for them to follow me and when we reached the lawn I managed by signs and gestures to get them to form a circle. Then I started around the ring with a handkerchief, and dropped it behind a girl with sparkling black eyes and blacker hair, and motioned for her to run after me. It didn't take them long to see the point, and in a little while we were fully into the spirit of the game.

When we played "fox and geese" they played backwards just like they do everything in China. Instead of running in front of a girl as they should do, they ran behind. I couldn't make them understand, but they were having fun and so as long as they were happy I didn't care how they played.

When Jesus comes into their hearts, they are very happy and they love and serve Him just as you little boys and girls do at home. They love to read their Bibles and learn whole chapters by heart. We visited a Christian school for blind children this summer and saw a little girl who knew almost the entire New Testament from memory and if you asked her where a certain verse was she would tell you at once.

Perhaps some day you'll be coming here too, to tell the blessed story of Jesus and His love to these people. You will not forget to pray for me, will you? and for all these little boys and girls who do not know Jesus. Pray too, for those who do know Him and do not forget that.

Lovingly yours in Him,

Stella M. Rudy.

—In Alliance Weekly.

AMERICAN GIVING IN 1911

During 1911 the American people gave for philanthropic purposes $252,000,000, in addition to the many millions of unrecorded gifts. About $100,000,000 was given for religious causes, including charities that are supported bythe churches. Education received $8,000,000 less than this sum, and the gifts to other public purposes amounted to $60,000,000. $40,000,000 was given to Protestant home missions and $11,000,000 to Protestant foreign missions. Roman Catholics gave $13,000,000 for religious and philanthropic causes, including the maintenanc ofthe parochial schools. These are figures of the Associated Literary Pres.s

---

—Orange County, by a small majority, decides to borrow $250,000 and build roads.

PLAIN PEOPLE AND POWDER.

War is usually decreed by men that do not go to war.

If those that order nations to fight were required to lead the forces in person, we should need no arbitration treaties to bring about universal peace.

The expenses of war do not come out of the pockets of the man that make war. If they did, this very day would see the end of militarism.

The brunt of war, physical and financial, falls upon the plain people and not upon the diplomats and statesmen; and when the plain people rebel, war will be relegated to the barbarism of which it is the last outstanding remains.

Today the plain people of the world are ready, fully ready, for universal peace.

Of course, they are still foolish enough, here and there, to respond in the old way to appeals to national pride and national prejudice and national fear. But it is harder every year to obtain that response.

Of course, they will still pour out their hundreds of millions on useless and worse than useless armies and navies, guns and forts. But the money comes ever more grudgingly.

Of course, they still smile, here and there, at the outworn gibes concerning universal peace as the paradise of dreamers. But the smile fades swiftly, and is succeeded by a thoughtful frown.

Today, if the plain people of the world could have their way, it would be this:

"Throw your war budgets into the fire, and prepare a peace budget. We propose to spend our money, millions if necessary —in studies and negotiations and education promotive of peace.

"National honor and safety no more depend upon armies and navies and war than personal honor and safety depend on pistols and stilettos and the duel.

"This is the age of law and reason, and we propose that law and reason shall henceforth rule among nations as among men.

"We will hold a world election. We will send our best men, of all parties, to a world congress at the Hague.

"We will keep at home, as Presidents and Prime Ministers, as Members of Parliament and Members of Congress and Supreme Court judges, only the second-best men. The Hague, at this crisis, shall have our greatest leaders.

'We will send them there and tell them to remain till they have established a world government, agreed to by all the commissioners.

"The world government must have an executive, a legislative, a judiciary.

"It must have an international police force to compel obedience.

"To this force all the nations will contribute of their armies, and disband the rest; of their navies, and use the rest for commerce.

"The world government must have real and ample authority, an authority as ample over the lives of nations as national governments exercise over the lives of citizens.

"We commit ourselves to the world. We trust mankind. We will appeal no more to brute force, but to the organized justice of the human race."

That is why the plain people would say today, if they were not gagged by the timidity and the traditions of the ages.

To-morrow they will throw off the gag, and then they will speak.—C. E. World.

THE CHRISTIAN'S STATUS TO-DAY IN CHINA.

By the time this is printed old things will have passed away, and the Republic of China will be proclaimed! This is one of the most astounding revolutions in the history of the Empire, and fraught with far-reaching consequences both to our great missionary cause and to relations with all nations. Today scarcely a man in this most populous city in the Empire wears a queue. I saw crowds of men going about with scissors, seizing men and boys on the street and cutting of their queues, and no serious objection was made. China is undoubtedly looking prospectively towards a Republic. The soundest judgment and very best ability that the nation can command, will be needed to supply administrative, judicial and executive duties. I believe that the Chinese are abundantly able to meet these needs, if the other countries will give moral and sympathetic support and keep hands off their territory. Mistakes will be made in this transition period, but the hearts of the people are with the reformers, and with patience and tact, a new government will eliminate most of the old obstacles that stifled trade and intercourse both with other countries and among the different provinces.

Today no country is held in so high esteem as our own, and the Chinese would be greatly pleased if our country should be the first to acknowledge the new Republic. Mighty responsibilities are thrust upon us. Idolatry is absolutely doomed, and the millions of tracts that have been scattered, and millions more that will be given out, mean the death of idolatry. In this city some of the high official positions have been given to our Christians. The son of one of our old preachers, a graduate of Columbia Law School, is in high authority here. Another man, teacher in Fati school, is in permanent position over the revenues and has taken as his helper another of our Christian teachers. Other Christians are coming into places of power, and all this means mighty gains to Christianity.

A very evident feeling of friendliness towards Christianity greatly delights us. China is wide open. Bills are posted telling the soldiers of both parties to protect the foreigners. We must work as never before.

My own conviction is that we shall be most seriously pressed to take care of the converts who will certainly come with the disappearance of the old system of persecution for those who abandoned ancestral worship. What tremendous responsibilities we must now assume to meet the demands for instruction, and to prepare a body of native preachers adequate to take care of the mighty harvest that will surely come. Deeply thankful I am that I am alive and well, with thirty years of experience to guide and stimulate me. I expect to do the biggest work of my life in the next five years.

Not a chapel or church has been disturbed in this or any other province, except at Hankow, when the city was burned.—(Rev. Dr.) A. A. Fulton, in Woman's Work.

A missionary in Japan says, "A priest of the Ikko Shin sect of the Buddhists at Minabe came to me to know what book or books he ought to study in order to overthrow Christianity. I told him if he wanted to strike an enemy to kill him he must know his strong and weak points; that, if he truly wanted to strike Christianity to kill it, he had best first make a thorough study of it, and after he knew it, he would be able to know where and how to strike. He took my advice. After three years of honest study he gave up his temple, and asked to be baptized. I asked him how he came to wish for baptism. His reply was as follows: "I studied Christianity for the sake of finding fault with it. After a thorough study of Christ and His teaching I have not been able to find a single fault, but Christ pointed out a thousand faults in me, and now I want to dedicate myself to Him for my whole life."

—Mrs. Emma English, of Salisbury, died suddenly.

—We wonder what peculiar atmospheric conditions brought the great rainfall of last Friday. Will the time ever come when men can prevent floods by tapping the clouds?

From Pastors and People.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Albemarle Ct., Mar. 14-17.
LaGrange Ct., Mar. 21-24.

W. E. Swain.

Albemarle Ct.

Dear Herald:

When the new year dawned upon us, we, like many others, were planning for greater success, hoping realities would steadily follow. But, to our mind, many of those plans have proven to be "air castles" instead, as the severe winter has been such a hindrance it seems that we have been at a standstill so far as our own personal efforts are concerned.

But with such an enthusiastic, energetic pastor at the helm, who can see possibilities many had long ago discarded, we have reasons to believe that great work will be accomplished here this year. Many of his appointments were snowed out the first two months, but in the face of bitter cold he walked 12 miles only to be snowed out again. This did not hinder his visiting every home within his reach, and with his musical ability, he carries much cheer into the homes who seldom have the honor of such a guest, and they all leave the "latch-string outside," hoping he will soon return.

A man who is fast declining, and never has accepted Christ, said: "He just suits me." So help us pray that he may be won into the fold through his ministry.

We feel that we are far in arrears as a circuit, as severe weather has hindered us in meeting his material needs as promptly as should be, but with the reviving signs of live we think we will catch up with the spring time.

Bro. Bryans and family have suffered with severe colds and now little Mrytle has measles, which makes us anxious for her recovery. Measles and mumps have added to the discomfort of the people generally.

We are looking forward to President Swain's visit with much pleasure, this being his old home. Many of his old-time friends welcome him with increased pleasure, and always regret that his stay must be so short.

Rehoboth S. S. is preparing for the usual Faster service which we hope to observe the second Sunday in April.

Dear Friends, we ask your special prayers in behalf of this work that our pastor may be strengthened to meet the arduous task before him, and we may have the best year yet.

"It is easy enough to be pleasant when life goes by with a song,
But the man worth while is the man with a smile ("even") when everything goes wrong."

Trusting that the new reporter will have many good things to adorn the pages of the Herald.

Sincerely,
Callie W. Tarkington.

Julian, Tabernacle Circuit..

Bro. C. A. Cecil filled his regular appointment here last Sunday and preached an excellent sermon on the temptation of Jesus, to a large and appreciative audience. We were glad to have Mrs. Cecil with us also.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the management of our superintendent, J. E. Deviney.

On account of the inclement weather the attendance has not been very large, but now as spring has come we hope to have much larger attendance. For I am sure the Sunday school needs more people, and more people need the Sunday school.

I do hope that more children, who have been hindered by the various causes, may be able to enroll their names in some Sunday school this spring.

Each day they are building character of their own; with the help of the church and Sunday school, they may be assisted to pass over the great temptations of life and prove a blessing to their own people and friends, and can enjoy the spiritual blessings more fully which shall be bestowed upon them.

We were glad to see Clay Johnson out again after having been confined to his room for some time.

Mrs. Lassiter, who has been confined to her bed with La Grippe, is very much improved.

Jesse Lassiter, of the University, spent a few days last week with his parents h re.

Mrs. Walter Hardin, Rep.

Shiloh, Randolph Ct.

Dear Herald:

As I have been appointed reporter for this place I decided to write my first report.

Bro. Lassiter filled his regular appointment the 10th with a good sermon that we all enjoyed. Owing to the very rough winter our congregations have been small.

Our Sunday school reorganized yesterday, 17th, as follows:

Mr. M. Brown, Supt.; Mr. W. P. Pickett, assistant; Mr. J. M. Brown, Sec.; Miss Hester Patterson, assistant; Teacher Class No. 1, Mrs. J. A. Crowson; Mrs. W. P. Pickett, assistant; Class No. 2, Miss Ada Burrow, Miss Hester Patterson, assistant; Class No. 3, Mr. W. A. Deviney, Mrs. W. R. Pickett, assistant; Class No. 4, Mrs. W. C. Lassiter, and Mr. W. P. Pickett, assistant.

We hope as spring opens our school will increase in interest, and attendance.

The unusual bad weather has held on so long we will not hold our annual Easter service this year.

Success to all Herald readers,

Dollie Myres.

Julian, N. C., March 18th, 1912.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

Last year about this time a number of our Sunday school boys and little girls agreed to plant something to help pay for the organ. It's slow coming in, because so many of them had no encouragement from the "home folks." Twenty-three, I believe, were willing to work to help in this cause, so here are the names of some of the "Willing Workers." Of those who have paid:

Helen Morris	$1.00
Lena Morris	1.00
Mary Morris	1.00
Nora Morris	1.00
Eula Morris	1.00
Carrie Insco	.75
Draper Insco	.75
Sol Insco	.50
Hattie Brown	.55
Garrett Walker	.30
Jasper Walker	.30
Fannie Barnes	4.00

(Gave one, collected three.)

To day we gave out recitations for Easter service.

Fannie Barnes.

March 17, 1912.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.

Dear Herald:

As I have not seen tnything from here for some time I want you to allow me to tell the readers how we are getting along. Grandmother takes the Herald and we are all anxious to see it.

We think Mr. O'Briant is the right man in the right place. We all love him and Mrs. O'Briant, and are always glad to see them come.

Mr. O'Briant preached an excellent sermon March 17, on the subject of Prayer. We have had rain, snow and mud, but he has not missed an appointment since he came here.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely with Bro. C. Z. Lineberry superintendent; Bro. J. R. Lamb, Assistant, and Bro. W. F. Ivey, Secretary. We voted to give the collection one Sunday in each month to the Orphans' Home. Our first collection for the Orphans' Home was $2.62. We think this is a good work that our church has taken up.

We have ordered Easter Literature and expect to hold an Easter service. Our Sunday school expects to order new songbooks and thus build up the choir.

We hope to make 1912 the best year in the history of our church.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Aleen Lamb.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.

Bro. Hunter filled his appointment last Sunday. He preached a good sermon, bringing out many helpful points. We had a very good congregation considering the bad roads. We are hoping to have better attendance when the weather opens up. We have had no Sunday school since Christmas on account of bad weather, but we are going to organize the first Sunday in April. We hope our people all will be interested enough to attend regularly Sunday school and preaching.

Mr. W. N. Brown, who has been quite ill, seems to be improving some, we are glad to say.

May we put forth every effort to make the year, 1912, the best year that has ever been. Yours for success,

Hattie M. Wall, Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 218 in S. S., the largest attendance of the year. It was good to see so many of our folks out again. The weather seems to be going to stay good, and we shall expect to see our attendance increase rapidly from now on.

The Philathea and Baraca classes began a contest Sunday. The Baracas had 45 present, and the Philatheas, 42. These two classes are working hard, and the result is being seen. On the second Sunday morning the church voted to build an addition to the present building to be used as S. S. rooms. This addition is to cost about $3,000.00, and will make our church one of the prettiest in town. The trustees have appointed Bros. J. H. Boon, J. E. Moore, and J. C. Foster as a building committee. Work began yesterday, and will be pushed as rapidly as possible. This addition will accommodate nine classes including the Baraca Room, which is to be built so that it may be be used when the congregation overflows the present building. But we can't tell you all of it now. Be sure to come to the Annual Conference next November and see it.

Mr. James G. Workman was received into the church last Sunday morning on profession of faith. We are glad to have him.

On the second Sunday morning, Bro. R. M. Anrews preached for us. Our pastor has been meeting his appointments regularly, with the above exception, and giving us fine sermons every time. He is working hard at present to secure the necessary cash to make the addition to the church and is meeting with good success.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Mar. 19, 1912.

TO THE PASTORS OF OUR CONFERENCE.

The letter being sent out this week by the Woman's Home Mission Society has come into my hand. The word I want to say is to urge our pastors to give this letter prompt and careful attention. It is not composed of some idle words slung on paper, but brings to each a burning message, or to change the figure, a living message from those engaged in a great work for the Master and His little ones. May the message appeal to us pastors as strongly as it stirs the souls of those women deeply, and may we do our part as faithfully as they are theirs. Answer now. Act, act in the living present. T. M. Johnson.

Asheboro, N. C.

Program for S. S. and Old Folks' Rally At Zion M. P. Church, Second Sunday in April.

10 A. M. Opened by prayer and song service.

10:30. Study of the S. S. Lesson.

11:00. Songs by the children.

11:30. Old Folks' song service lined and interlined by G. W. Stout.

Song No. 1. Am I a Soldier of the Cross, sung to the music of Pilgrim.

Song No. 2. Amazing Grace, How Sweet the Sound, sung to the music of New Briton.

Comment.

Song No. 3. Father, I Stretch My Hands to Thee, music of Fairfield.

Song No. 4. Broad is the Road That Leads to Death, music, Windham.

Comment.

Song No. 5. When I Can Read My Title Clear, music, ninety-fifth.

Song No. 6. Children of the Heavenly King, music, King of Peace.

Song No. 7. I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord, music, Eduma.

Comment.

Recess.

1:30 P. M. Prayer and Song, All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name.

Subjects of Discussion:

1. What Relation Has S. S. To the Church? led by Rev. J. H. Bowman.

2. Is S. S. for Children Only? led by Rev. T. F. Andrews.

3. How Shall We Get The Parents To Become More Interested in S. S.? led by Rev. Mr. Suits.

4. What is our duty in regard to the S. S.? led by Rev. A. K. Scotten.

5. What kind of a person should the teacher of children be? led by W. C. Teague.

6. When are the fruits of S. S. reaped? led by J. H. Siler and G. W. Stout, closing song, God Be With You Till We Meet Again.

Zion S. S. Committee:

J. H. Siler,
W. L. Poe,
G. W. Stout,
M. M. Lowe,
A. E. Pike.

Grace Church.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace Church held its annual meeting at the parsonage, Monday, March 11th, the president, Mrs. Stone, presiding.

Although the weather was very disagreeable a large number of ladies braved the cold to enjoy the meeting with Mrs. Ogburn. For the past few months the Ladies' Aid meetings have been held the second Monday in each month instead of in connection with the Missionary meetings. The attendance has been good, and through the untiring efforts of the president, the meetings have been very interesting and helpful. A program of music and readings or topics for general discussion has been arranged for each meeting.

The treasurer's report was very encouraging, showing that about $100.00 had been raised by means of Larkin orders, contributions by members, and dues.

Our pastor was present and made a very helpful talk in which he suggested ways in which we could aid him in doing his work as pastor.

The nominating committee made the following report: Pres. Mrs. J. M. Stone; Vice Pres., Mrs. J. H. Denny; Sec. and treasurer, Mrs. T. A. Hunter. These being the former officers they were unanimously re-elected to serve for another year. We were glad to receive the following new members: Mesdames G. G. Hendrix, H. P. Bowman, and W. W. Hunter. At the conclusion of the service, refreshments were served.

Mrs. H. A. Garrett.

—A two-story brick building used as a drug store suddenly collapsed yesterday morning in Wadesboro, killing two ladies and a child and injuring others.

FLOATING.

Idling and dreaming, I lay on my oar
Listlessly watching the lights on the shore,
Gleaming, and twinkling, and trembling there
Miles away through the misty air.
Far in the front, with their silver capped crests
Rolling along from the star-jeweled west,
Tide-driven waves lap the ripple-kissed sand,
Seeking to rest on the breast of the land.
Far through the mist of the future, to me
Gleaming more brightly, it seems I can see,
Lining the shining and silvery strand,
Light on the shores of another land.

LOOKING TOWARD THE LIGHT.

The day was dark and clouds hung a threatening mood across the mountains and overhead; the storm hurled the snow against the sash; the blast swept past, and the roar of the forest told of conflict—the battle for man'sprotection; the battle of forest veterans with the wings of the wind.

It was a lonely strip of country where a weather-beaten home nestled low on the mountain side. The blast met wildly about the old gables and drilled in at many a chink in the smoke-stained kitchen, though it had been thought that every crack had been filled before the winter had ever set in, but the fireplace was wide and deep, and there was wood enough to burn.

Katrna stood by the hearth, her hands on her hips and her head thrown back a bit; she was alone in the midst of the storm and she was thinking.

If she forgot the pot hanging on the crane, and let the flame of the fagots fade out for a time there was yet blaze enough to light up the crimson of her pretty old bodice, and glint across the golden braids of her shining hair.

If she forgot, and stood statue-like, before the chimney place, who could wonder with the wind and stomr careering beyond; the snow hurling itself into impassable drifts; the ice-breath singing like a dirge, and Hans somewhere—who could know where—over the mountain?

"No," she said aloud; "it can not be; God has forgotten. If he remembered could it be like this with us? Hans would not let me say this; Hans is sure he keeps his hand over even such as Hans and I, but where is Hans now?—lost, oh! if he be lost on the way and there is nobody to help—and hungry he must be by this time, and if he comes, what is there for him? There is porridge in the pot anyway. God help Hans wherever he is!" and she stopped to throw some fagots on the fire.

Had it not been for the stirring of the wood she might have heard the sound of a footfall at the door, but she did not; she was stooping over the fire as the door was flung open; she thought it opened by the frozen blast, but from among the snow wreaths Hans swung in.

"Hans!" she cried, in springing toward him. "Hans!oh, the day has been long!"

But he spoke not a word, only casting off upon the floor the burden he had been battling to bear along, and stood, for a time, leaning against the wall.

"And you carried that through the storm? Oh, Hans, I thought you were lost on the mountain! No wonder you stayed when you were carrying this!"

"It is the gift of the God-mother," he said, taking her hand in his. "I could never have left it in the mountain."

"The day was long. I watched through the storm till I could look no more for the wild mists of snow. I watched till I could scarcely think; till it seemed to me I must go find you somewhere on the mountain, for what did I care what happened to me if only leave a track in the snow to lead you home? And then, Hans, I said God had forgotten."

"That is harder to bear than the storm, Katrina," he said as he allowed her to lead him toward the hearth. "Had I slept in the snow you would always have believed the hard words, and how then could you ever have been happy?"

"I never could have been when I had lost you."

"When you had lost God and me."

"But Hans, would it not have been so? Would he let you perish if he remembered? And, Hans, we have been so hungry, and there was no one anywhere to help."

"Is this the way it is to be with you, Katrina?" he said sadly; "and I have tried so hard to show the light that never goes out in the dark."

"O Hans!" was all she coould say, as the tears began to fall. "I love you, and I thought you were lost!"

"Do you not know that if he had let me fall asleep on the way he would have sent some one to you? It would only have meant that he wanted me for other service. Do you not see, Katrina, that we are yet but little children, whom he leaves here or calls to himself, and he is our Father who never forgets?"

"But we have no food, Hans; only the porridge—I will get some for you now," she said abashed, for she realized that she was not reaching up into the light that illumined Hans' life; that in spite of her love and his loving service, and words of every day she was far beneath him.

"Yes, I will be glad to give you the porridge, but wait a bit, Katrina."

"I know, I know, Hans, I do not keep up with you or mind your words as I ought, but we needed so much, and now even the porridge is almost gone"—here she lost words and sprung away to stoop low over the fire.

"Did I not tell you that somehow God would send help? I did not go to our God-mother and tell of our present lot of trouble, she sent for me, and gave without my telling. No storm will last as long as the fool will last that lies over by yonder door."

"God forgive me for the words!" she said.

"You know God uses our human hands to do his work—perhaps the God-mother never thought of that when she was sending for me, and yet he leads us by a thought. It will be only a few days now before I shall be able to earn more, and give you all you really need. I know it has been hard for you, but I knew that just for the coming days something would come, though I could not see ahead."

Then the tears vied with the dimples to make Katrina's face the sweetest in the world to Hans.

"I think God will never forget you, Hans but me? I seem to be so different; and yet I want to be just as you would have me—just like you."

"It is not I but Christ you would be like. Life lies all before you and me; the journey will be troubled always, as you have been today, if we have no light, but if we know that above us always is God's hand, we can learn to be content with whatever comes, be it life or death. We will do our best, our very best, and God will give us light to find the way."

"I will learn to look up to the light," she whispered to him as she turned to quickly get the porridge, to brush away the tears and to investigate the character of the treasures on the floor.

The day was dark without; hunger gaunt and harsh, had been standing by the door; a great dread had swept over the girl who had been so alone in the midst of fear and storm, but out of the darkness a new light sprung to being in a life.

Katrina paused before the treasure on the floor. In the attitude of a while ago, with hands on her hips, her head drawn back, for a moment of thought, she gazed out at the storm; she heard the blast sweep by, but to her it seemed to sing out the words of the dirge, but of triumph and power in the hand that could shield and guide.

As she stooped to the God-mother's gift she said: "I see at last why Hans i always glad; he does his best, his very best, and trusts our Father with the rest; in the future so will I."—George Ingle in New York Observer.

AMUNDSEN, NORWEGIAN, AT SOUTH POLE.

From Hobart, Tasmania, Capt. Roald Amundsen the famous Norwegian erplorer had discovered the south pole Dec.14, 1911. sent a cablegram telling the world that he The edge had been taken off popular interest in polar discoveries since the north pole was discovered Apil 6, 1909, and Amundsen's success has thus aroused less attention than it otherwise would. Peary's success at the north pole stimulated explorers in the quest of the other axis and there were no fewer than five expeditions in an international race for the goal as Amundsen reached it. The English people were very anxious to share in the honors and were confident that Capt. R. F. Scott, their countryman, would get there first. It may be recalled that Lieut. E. H. Shackleton, an Englishman, had made the hitherto farthest south three years ago, reaching within a degree and a half of the pole when his supplies gave out and he had to retreat.

As it turned out, Amundsen gained the pole with comparatively small difficulty, once he was well started on the way. Bear in mind that the conditions at the two poles are very different. The earth moves in an elliptical path about the sun and it is nearest to the sun in our winter season, which of course is the summer season in the southern hemisphere. This makes the climate different at the two poles. Then there is a large mass of high land at the south pole, so large that geographers have even named it the antarctic ontinent, while at the north pole there is water, covered by a huge ice-pack usually 20 to60 feet thick, which is constantly shifting and drifting. A north polar explorer finds that at the most he has but few months of the year for operations, as he must wait for the return of the sun in the spring and the beginning of the long arctic day, and yet he must be back before the ice breaks up with the summer heat. The south pole however lies on a huge solid plateau, which Amundsen named King Haakon VII. plateau, in honor of his sovereign. It is covered with the original glacial ice-cap, several thousand feet thick in places and which is practically stationary and permanent. As there is no fear of this ice breaking up, the explorer has about twice as long a season as he has at the north pole, and also a solid road.

Amundsen had already had much polar experience. In 1903 he fitted up a small 50-ton sloop, the Gjoa, and with only four men set out to explore the historic "northwest passage" which mariners had been seeking for centuries, from Europe to Asia direct, between the American continent and the north pole. He spent three years in this work and actually did negotiate the passage and come out at the western side. Of course for practical purposes this route has no value now, but some day it may be utilized. The chief value of his work there was his location of the north magnetic pole and his exhaustive scientific observations in that region. On his south polar trip he took the staunch litle Fram, the specially built ship which Nansen used when he made his "farthest north " trip in 1895. Thus the Fram holds the record for farthest north and farthest south both. The attainment of the south pole represents the culmination of a long series of brave efforts, dating back to Weddell's cruise of 1823. All such discoveries have to proceed step by step, and those who perform the pioneer work deserve as much credit as those that complete it, though usually they do not get it. Ross got within 830 miles of the pole in 1842, Borchgrevink within 780 miles in 1900, Scott within 540 miles in 1902 and Shackleton within 111 in 1909.

Amundsen made the point by profiting by the experience of his forerunners and making sure of supplies. He started in 1910 and spent the winter in the antarctic. With a select party he left his vessel Feb. 15, 1911 and started on the overland part of the journey. Large quantities of supplies were carried on dog-sledges and as each degree of latitude was reached, as indicated by their instruments, they established depots and stored reserve provisions there, marking these places with flags. Thus they with the assurance that they could make good their retreat any time. The weather and the going were excellent most of the time. They made 66 miles in one day once. The sun left them April 12 and they had to go into winter quarters. But they were snug as a bug in rug. They carved a house out of the very ice, so that they lived in a crystal palace, and no matter how cold it was outside they were comfortable. They kept their house at 68 degrees by an oil stove, and they even had such Luxuries as a steam bath. The lowest temperature was "only" 60 degrees below zero by the Celsius or centigrade thermometer, which is about 75 below, Fahrenheit. This was in August, when we get our hottest weather!

Leaving their winter quarters as the light returned in the spring, they set out Nov. 8 for the pole, with 900 miles of pathless but solid ice still before them. Their only difficulty was the crevices in the glaciers, which required them sometime to make detours. Dec. 12 they found they were in latitude 89 degrees 30 mniutes—only half degree or about 35 miles from their object. When they reached the point that they figured to be the exact pole they built a tiny hut and planted a silk Norwegian flag there. In order to head off the objections of critics they spent four days circling about the pole, taking numerous observations, as proois to be submitted to scientists. Then, Dec. 19, they started on the return journey, which was made without mishap. They found that the mountain range which Scott and others had seen extends well across the antarctic continent probably, being evidently a continuation of the great backbone of the western hemisphere, which takes the name of the Rockies in North America and the Andes in South. One glacier they surmounted rose to a height of 9,100 feet above the sea, so that these are good sized mountains. The new range was named Queen Maud's mountains, in honor of the queen of Norway.—The Pathfinder.

"I WILL NOT LEAVE YOU COMFORTLESS."

Hear the pledge of Jesus Christ; "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come unto you. Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." As long as God lives and our souls live, so long does this pledge stand. It is true, we cannot always feel this presence. But we can always know that it is there, always think of it, so long as thought endures, always rest upon it forever and forever; and the reason why this promise is given is that we may hold fast to the truth. There may be a moment in the very depth of sorrow and anguish when the presence is hidden from us. But is it not because we are stunned, unconscious?

It is like passing through a surgical operation. The time comes for the ordeal. The anaesthetic is ready. You stretch out your hand to your friend, "Don't leave me, don't forsake me." The last thing you feel is the clasp of that hand, the last thing you see is the face of that friend. Then a moment of darkness, a blank—and the first thing you see is the face of love again. So the angel of God's face stands by us, bends above us, and we may know that he will be there even when all fails - - - - Amid the mists that shroud the great ocean beyond the verge of mortal life, there is one sweet, mighty voice that says, "I will never leave thee. In all thy afflictions I will be with thee, and the angel of My face shall save thee."—Henry Van Dyke, D. D.

We should so live and labor in our time that what came to us as seed may go to the next generation as blossom, and what came to us blossom may go to them as fruit.—Beecher.

WESTERN MARYLAND BRIEFS.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we announce the continued improvement of Dr. Forlines. In fact, he has so nearly recovered that he looks like a well man once again. He preached in Baltimore yesterday, the first time this winter.

Miss Pearle Fishel, daughter of our esteemed Bro., Rev. D. A. Fishel, Vaughn, N. C., has been chosen as one of the contestants for the Philomathean Literary Society, of Western Md. College, for the Newell Trophy, next June. Miss Fishel won the Sophomore Elocution Medal last year, hence we are expecting good things from her this year.

We are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of Rev. N. G. Bethea to lecture Wednesday of this week and to remain over for the "Seminary Day" on Thursday.

Mr. J. M. Millikan, of Greensboro, visited his son, Roy, who is here in college, Friday night and Saturday. We who have known Mr. Millikan for a number of years were delighted to see him again and those who had not met him before were glad of the opportunity of making his acquaintance. He seemed highly pleased with the place here. We wish more of the people could visit us.

Rev. W. A. Ledford will apply for work in the Md. Conference for the summer. Rev. L. W. Gerringer will assist in revival meetings in N. C.

Mr. John Harrison, of Brinkleyville. N. C., visited his brother and sister a few weeks ago. We were glad to see him and will say to him that he will always be welcome by the N. C. delegation here.

J. E. Pritchard.

Mrs. Will Davis.

Our Sunday school and church mourns the loss of this good woman and we desire to record a tribute to her memory, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Sister Davis our S. S. has lost one of its best beloved and most faithful members, and the community a most useful woman.

2. That we tender to the family of our deceased sister our deepest sympathy and commend them to Him who doeth all things well. May He help them never to think of their loved one as being dead, but as an angel waiting and watching for them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Public Ledger, Gold Leaf, and our Methodist Protestant Herald.

Hattie Harris,
Crystal Bobbitt,
Nannie Cheatham,
Committee.

A shadow of gloom rests over our community on account of the death of two little girls, both aged seven years.

On Mar. 13th, little Ethel Pitts, daughter of Henry and Roberta Pitts, died in St. Leo's Hospital where she had been carried two weeks before for an operation. She rallied from the operation and at times it seemed that she would recover. Her father left her that day and came home hopeful that little Ethel would get well, only to receive the sad message that night that she was gone. She was buried at Hickory Grove on Saturday, but on account of the terrible rain the day before her funeral was not preached. She leaves a father, mother, three sisters and two brothers and many relatives and friends to mourn her death.

And just as we were starting to her burial we received the message that my brother, J. H. Gordon's, little Cassie, had caught on fire and was badly burned, and we hastened to their home, hoping she was not seriously burned, but when we looked at her poor little body, hope died within us, for we did not see how she could live. All that kind friends and loving hands could do was done, but to no avail, and at half-past four death released her from her suffering. She was laid to rest at Sandy Ridge on Monday, March 18, her funeral was preached by Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, of Oak Ridge Circuit. She leaves a father, mother, four brothers and one sister and many relatives and friends to mourn her death.

While the parents of both little ones are almost broken, yet they have the great consolation that they are forever at rest and can look up through their tears and say, Thy will be done.

Two more homes are sad and lonely,
Two more precious ones are gone,
Two more voices joined the chorus
Of the angels 'round the throne.
Oh, 'tis hard to yield our treasures
Up to earth's dark, cold embrace;
But they have gone to bask forever
'Neath a Savior's smiling face.
Farewell, Ethel! Farewell, Cassie!
We will see your face on earth no more,
But with joy we hope to greet you
When life's toilsome day is o'er.

(Written by a friend and aunt of the little ones.)

King.

Mrs. Jane King, wife of A. L. King, died at her home in Star Sunday morning, March 3rd, and her body was laid to rest the following day at Why Not. Funeral by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Stowe. She had been in declining health for six months, but was confined to her bed only three or four weeks. Everything that loving hands could do was done, but our heavenly Father knew best, and we would say to the bereaved husband and children to be ready to meet mama when the summons comes.

We suppose a piece will be written to her memory later.

AN IMPRESSIVE FACT.

During the month of Febuary, 1912, there were only TWENTY FOUR charges in the entire denomination that sent in anything on the assessment for FOREIGN MISSIONS, and they represent only NINE Annual Conferences, leaving TWENTY-FOUR contributing Conferences from whom nothing was received.

The Alabama, Ohio, Eastern, Muskingum, Texas and West Virginia Conferences are each credited with one charge that paid the assessment in February. The Indiana Conference is credited with two charges, the Pittsburgh with three charges, and the Maryland with thirteen charges that paid the assessmeent.

This is the period of the year when receipts are totally insufficient for the Board's needs, and emphasizes anew the need of having the assessment raised in the early part of the Conference year.

If pastors and members could understand that about $1800.00 must be sent to Japan every month to maintain the work, and that when it is not in hand a temporary loan must be negotiated, and interest paid, there would be more agressive steps taken ento supply promptly the money required.

I appeal to pastors to send me their assessment. It is needed now.

"Do You Know"

The leaflet published by the Board, and distributed in packages to the pastors of the denomination has awakened great interest.

It is hoped that the pastors have wisely distributed the copies among their people, and if they have not preached a special sermon on Foreign Missions, and given their members an opportunity to contribute to the Emergency Fund, I urgently plead that this be done without delay.

To put the leaflet in the hands of our people will accomplish much by informing them of the work, its success, cost and development fururewards, and with more knowledge will come greater interest and more generous giving.

DID YOU READ IT LAST WEEK?

The report of the Japan work presented to the Board February 29, I mean. Fifty seven baptisms and sixty-five members received, making 1197 full members, 225 probationers, 459 absent members 361 enquirers enrolled, total 2240. There were also 2775 Sunday school scholars, 121 teachers and officers, total 2896, and there were six C. E. Societies.

The year's enrollment at the Nagoya college was 3:0 young men, and at the Yokohama school 204, besides 35 in the girl's afternoon department.

Two theological students graduate and will unite with the Conference next month.

Provision is being made to accommodate 350 young men in attendance at the Nagoyo College next scholastic year begining next mounth. There has been steady growth in all departments o. the work in Japan, and of necessity it calls for more funds, and the Budget for next fiscal year, April 1 to March 31, 1913, shows an increase of $1,589. 50, and it does not include "urgent supplementary items" amounting to much more. ding up a denomination which we are doing ing in Japan all the kinds of work in building up a denomination whict we are doing in America, and that our special gifts, the assessment, the Children's Day offering, the Christmas offering should be made with that distinctly in mind.

This is the time to help this great work. Send me your special gift for the Emergency Fund, and aid us in solving our financial problem which is great at this juncture.

Fred C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.—Treas.

316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, filled his appointment at Flat Rock this morning at 11 o'clock. He gave us a fine sermon from the text: "What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward us?" It was beautifully illustrated and I wonder just how many will take it home with them and meditate on it. How can we ever renay our Sarior for all His loving kindness to us, surely we ought to give Him our best, for without Him our lives would be blank. Now, that the spring has opened up, let us start out with new vim and enthusiasm and as the year shall close let us not feel that our works have been in vain. The more we see of our pastor the more we realize his worth and our good fortune in having him with us. The weather has been unfavorable each time he has preached and the congregation was not as large as they should be; however, we hope he may not be discouraged.

Wishing the Herald success.

J. R., Rep.

Henderson, N. C.

Rockingham.

We have very little to report from this charge. The very bad weather has hindered in the size of congregations. We have had but one nice Sunday this year. Some services—preaching, S. S., and prayer meeting—have been either rained out, or frozen out. We have a few here who are true and faithful in attendance, requiring very extreme weather to keep them from church.

Some additional gifts since our last: canned peaches, from Sister Keith; meat, from Sister Whitly; and milk and butter from Bro. and Sister W. T. Collins.

We are hoping that everything will take on added life when the weather ameliorates. Some sickness prevailing. Mrs. J. C. Braswell is quite feeble, and has been for some time. Mr. Robert Little is suffering from white swelling of some years' standing. We had not been troubled for about five years until the last few weeks; and Bro. Hurst, one of our aged and faithful members at McFarlan was feeble and indisposed when we made our last visit there.

Rev. J. W. Willis has moved to Rockingham and is selling groceries.

Bro. N. B. Braswell is in the Eastern part of the State, traveling for a business house in Chicago.

J. F. Dosier.

Mecklenburg Ct.

Dear Herald Readers:

As I have been appointed reporter for Stallings' Sunday school I will say our S. S. is getting along fine. We have fifty on the roll; 30 were present yesterday although it was raining. I think we have some of the brightest children I have known. They have good lessons. We will have Easter service and look for a nice time. Our superintendent is sick. The pastor has been called to three burials. We have received many tokens of kindness from the people of Stallings. We aim to have a meeting beginning the fifth Sunday in March and want to ask the prayers of every reader. Let us all pray for the best year we have ever witnessed.

Mrs. Lillie Martin.

Caroleen Ct.

We are still alive up here. We have not gone into winter quarters as I see many have. All three of our churches have a good live S. S. We have two schools as good as there are in the State considering number. Rain and snow don't keep them away. Our Sunday school at Shelby has been hindered by the smallpox; they are about over it now and we are expecting to get right down to business. How does our S. S. at Lincolnton compare with other S. S.'s in collection? I have never seen a school make the record they have made in this respect. Right in the same town there is a church that has 400 members and our little church doubles them.

We are looking for great things from Lincolnton this year. They are carrying $4.0.00 in the Building and Loan like tops. All we need is $100.00 and we will be all right. We will get that in some way.

Our work at Caroleen is in fine shape. We have just closed a two weeks' meeting there. We had about 40 conversions; 14 accessions; this makes 20 since Conference. We had two snows and three rains in time of the meeting, but the people came. There was not room to seat all that came part of the time. Our S. S. has outgrown the church and we have got to build two Sunday school rooms. We will let the contract April 15. The rooms are to be 24 x 26, one on each side of the old church.

Our work in Shelby is well. Our plan is to pay for the church this year. We are planning to pay $200.00 on May 1st. We have got a good start on it now, but we are asking all who want to help us to do so by this time, as we want to stop the interest. Some have me write them when we're going to make a payment, so I take this method to let you know, and if we can make this, we won't be in a pinch any more.

I wish to say that this promises to be one of the best fields in the near future. They will pay me a living this year.

H. W. Braswell.

Shelby, N. C.

Caroleen.

Dear Bro. Swain and Readers:

Bro. H. W. Braswell has just closed a meeting here which was ran from the first of March until the 14th. The weather was cold and some rain, but with all this the meeting was a success. Somewhere about forty were saved and reclaimed; there were fourteen joined the church. Bro. Braswell did some of the best preaching that has been done here in many days. He preached until he couldn't talk without great effort, but God blessed the meeting, and our church is in good shape here now. Our attendance at S. S. on the 10th of March was 131 and on the 17th, 117. Our school is doing well. We hope to see this work increase as we go along. H. E. Waldrop.

Miss Emma J. Gallimore, daughter of Mr. George Gallimore, of this place, was born February 21st, 1887, and departed this life January 15, 1912. She professed Christ as her Savior and joined the M. P. Church when small, and up to her death she was a true and faithful member, was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a mother, father, brothers, sisters and a number of friends and relatives to mourn her loss.

Addie Easter.

Lexington, N. C.

FUNDAMENTAL LESSONS FOR ELEMENTARY GRADES.

By Mrs. J. J. Lincoln.

The necessity of fundamental S. S. lessons for small children is so conclusive at a glance that we think it must be and believe it is, without argument or reiteration a generally accepted idea; at the same time we know that it is a fearfully abused one.

Who would think of engaging a beginner in public school in an English lesson in composition,or an arithmetic lesson in percentage! Yet we take beginners in S. S. and do sometimes a worse thing, sometimes a better, but seldom the right thing. The worse thing may be pretty fairly illustrated by the regular S. S. lessons of last year, the better by those of this year,but the right thing is not reached in either case. The fundamental lesson is clearly a necessity that the International Uniform System does not supply. The International Graded System does supply it, but that, as I have hinted before and as can be readily shown, is far beyond the adaptability of the average school in that it covers too many years for general and practical use. The Christian denomination, to our knowledge, does not furnish this all-important type of S. S. lessons. That it should do so is even now apperant and will in time become a conclusion that must be met and provided for. That the S. S. board of the Southern Convention, the the Young Peoples Convention, or somebody, should make this provision for all S. schools at the earlist opportune time is a duty so stressed by our condition thatthat we are beginning right now and shall continue to labor for its accomplishment.

The E. Va. S. S. Convention, through its P. U. department has already made some effort in this direction.Fully conscious of the limitations and imperfections of the course sent outby this department ,the committee believes it will not be wholly without result even in its present feeble form; and we believe further that if this movement on the part of the Sunday school convention is to be firmly establised, grow and finally succeed, it must be by recognition and support of its own. It sometimes happens that our own receive us not. Jesus was rejected at Nazareth.

But this article is primarily a plea for fundamental lessons of some kind and the best kind rather than for the endorsement of the particular course referred to; that has been cited rather as explanatory and illustartive of the idea and principle of P. U. The course itself may be unsatisfactory; we know it is insufficient, but we believe it cannot be entirely unworthy because it is builded on the two foremost ideas of modern S. S. methods—viz.: better classification and more fundamental tearhing of God and His Word. Then let us, for the love of Jesus our Master teacher, who taught his little ones from the heart and bids us do likewise, not get too far away from the principle He gave us and the wisdom of his pure example; not despise too much the day of small things, not think too highly of our responsibility to provide the very best lessons for our children, but rather urge and stimulate all our own S. S. field, the idea of fundamental knowledge of God and His word until it shall lead to the preparation of a course of lessons as sufficient in every particular as the most effectual elementary teaching demands.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, MARCH 31.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"The Foreign Missions of My Denomination—A Bird's-eye View.—Matt. 28: 16-20.

Every denomination has its heroes of home and foreign missions. The most interesting part of any history is the story of men who have made some great sacrifice for a country or a cause. The heroes of the cross from the time of Christ down to the present day have given color and interest to the story of the growth and development of the religion that must sooner or later rule the entire world.

System is coming into foreign mission work. No one denomination is attempting to reach all the world itself. The heathen nations have been divided among the several regiments of God's great army and each is undertaking a definite task. The missionaries are learning to preach Christ and not creed and the natives in missionary lands may go to the meetings of any of the pioneers of the cross and he will hear practically the same truths. In early missionary days there was rivalry—the missionaries would talk of creeds and doctrines, with the result that natives would answer, "How do you expect us to accept your faith when you are not agreed among yourselves?"

Missions have done more for civilization than all other forces combined. Commerce, education, the printing press, science and invention have followed the cross and rarely have they gone before it. America and England have been many times repaid by commerce for what they have giving to missions. From a selfish standpoint, missions pay.

Suggestive Illustrations.

1. Henry Martyn, who preached and translated heroically though weighed down by physical weakness, and constantly fighting disease that carried him away while still a young man.—C. E. W.

2. "Judson Dwight Collins, pioneer Methodist missionary to China, begged to be sent out as a missionary, offering to go as a sailor before the mast. He had to live for months on an island near Foochow before he could gain a foot-hold in the city. His strength gave out after five years of work, and he died in his thirtieth year."

3. The missionary enterprise has made many advances since Carey's time, but it is doubtful if the spirit of the New Testament evangelism is as strong on the mission field now as it was in the heart of the consecrated cobbler. In reducing the missionary enterprise to a business, there is danger of losing the free and self-sacrificing spirit that most of all impresses aliens with the divine power and character of our holy religion.—Ex.

4. Carey, who is called the father of modern missions, was a humble cobbler, whose love for Christ and man led him into the religious work and to become a minister of the gospel. He said preaching was his business, but he cobbled shoes "to pay expenses." To equip himself for his chosen work, he learned five languages besides his mother tongue, three ancient and two modern, while he worked at his bench.—Ex.

5. "Organized foreign missionary work in America begins with the famous "Haystack prayer meeting," so called because of a meeting held during a thunder-storm under the shelter of a haystack at Williams College in Massachusetts. Six students, led by Samuel J. Mills, consecrated themselves to foreign missions, and from their earnest purpose sprang the first American foreign missionary society, the American Board, formed in 1810."

WHAT A CHINESE GENERAL SAYS.

Dr. Stuart quotes General Li, the leader of the revolutionary troops, as saying: "Oh, yes, missionaries are our friends. Jesus is we get to come to China the greater will in favor of foreign missionaries coming to China, teaching Christianity, and going into interior provinces. We shall do all we can to assist missionaries, and the more rest yoon more, physically, morally, intelec the republican government be pleased.

—With imposing ceremony all that remained of the ill-fated battleship Maine, which had been resurrected after fourteen years burial in Havana harbar, was piloted out to sea and sunk in 600 fathoms of water, March 16. Raising the Maine has required tact and skill and several hundred thousand dollars, but Uncle Sam set himself to the task manfully and has at last given the vessel decent burial in a watery grave.

—North Carolina has a post-office named Just. It is in Madison County.

—The parsonage of Ivy Ct. is being repaired at an expense of about $200.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 a. m., No. 42 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please
Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.
SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION
1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00
Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
185 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

—Thomasville loses and High Point gains Bro. E. F. Segraves—by his moving.

NEEDLESSLY BLIND.

There are estimated to be one hundred thousand blind persons, old and young, in this country. Not less than five hundred of these live in North Carolina. Had it ever occurred to you, gentle reader, that at least seventy-five to one hundred of these need not have been blind—ought not to have been, and would not have been if proper precaution and preventive measures had been employed immediately after their birth?

"What blindness means to an intelligent, capable man or woman, to quote the words of a blind man who has, in the face of heavy odds, taken his place in the world with signal success," is something which only the devil and those who endure it know any thing about; in their blackest nightmares, those with sight can not even imagine it." That it is possible to prevent much of such angulsh seems not to have dawned upon the average citizen. Is such ignorance and indifference not criminal, positively wicked? Then who is responsible?

From one-fourth to one-third of all blind children lose their sight from what is usually called "sore eyees" "inflamation,' etc. This is really "ophthalmia neonatorum," a germ disease,which can be cured if taken in time and the proper remedies used. these remedies should be applied as soon as the child is born, whether any signs of inflammation are discovered or not. The remedy will do no hurt; it may save your child's sight.

If the eyes, nose, mouth and ears of every new-born babe should be thoroughly washed immediately after its birth in a weak solution of boracic acid (borax water), one drop of a solution of nitrate of silver, *not stronger than one per cent.*put in the eyes and the child thereafter kept clean, blindness among children in our state would be reduced at least twenty-five per cent. Do you realize what that would mean to one hundred homes in North Carolina in which there are children "needlessly blind"?

And are you aware what it would save the State financially to thus preserve the sight of all such children? Not less than $20,000,00 a year. Is it not worth the effort? Then does it not behoove every one to do all in his power to spread the information and seek to bless the homes into which the little ones come? Let every mother heed this warning and preserve the sight of her child.

John E. Ray,
Principal State Cchool for the Blind,
Raleigh, N. C.

—The pastor of Ivy Ct. thinks the work moving on well there. Quite a number of new members have been added to the five churches, he says.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO 12.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church of the death of Rev. E. A. Plyler. Bro. Plyler was a member of the Brotherhood in full standing, having responded to every call of the Brotherhood. Beneficiary members are due three dollars each. These amounts are due not later than sixty days after date of this notice. Money should be sent to the Treasurer, J. A. Burgess, Henderson, Andrew's Ave., No. 343, N. C. If convenient, please remit by check.

J. A. Burgess.

Mar. 5, 1912.

A CORRECTION.

Something over a year ago the constitution of the Brotherhood was so amended as to do away with all non-beneficiary membership. So that there are no longer any non-beneficiary members and no one is due anything on the above call but beneficiary members. In sending the above notice to the Herald I overlooked this fact. However if there are those who feel disposed to contribute something to the widow and children of the deceased brother, it will be accepted and appreciated. J. A Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

NOTES.

—On account of complaints that the Herald fails to reach many before Sunday, we are striving to gain time enough to mail a day or at least several hours earlier. We hope to reach it in a week or two.

—Rev. T. H. Matthews is scattering light in another way: he is assisting a rural mail carrier. We thank him for some information he kindly sent regarding one or two strayed Heralds.

—We are glad to learn that Bro. W. N. Brown, who has been quite ill, is improving. He is one of our best men.

—The editor is grateful for an invitation to the S. S. and Old Folks' Rally at Zion Church, Siler City Ct. We print the program this week.

—Bro. J. C. Allred, of Central Falls, superintendent of the Giles' Chapel Sunday school, was in our office this week. He reports that Bro. Whitaker is well-liked and that the prospects for a good year's work on Richland Ct. are bright.

—Some of England's suffragettes have been sentenced to prison and "hard labor" for smashing windows. The women say they are going to bring on terrible times if they are not allowed to vote.

—A great strike of coal miners is threatened on April 1st, as the miners and mine-workers cannot agree as to the wage scale.

—It was not until yesterday that cars began to run over the Madison branch of the Southern since the big rain of last Friday. Of course this delay in the movement of trains has held back the mails.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

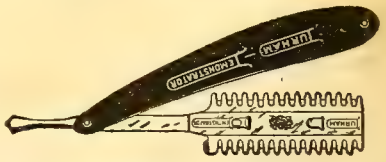
HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.
Greensboro, N. C.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th, or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist P

ONE IS YOUR MASTER

VOLUME XVIII. GRE

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE SPIRIT OF SATAN..

Whether there is a personal devil or not—and I see no reason to doubt that there is—certainly the spirit of the Devil is abroad in the land. What does the word "devil" mean? It means "slanderer," "accuser." Satan was an accuser of Job before God and he slandered God to our first parents. He seems to make it his business to misrepresent and deceive, to speak evil of, to defame, to malign.

And how many are the people that are engaged in the same bad business. How much of the world's common conversation is made up of defamatory talk about people—people who are absent and who may never have opportunity to clear themselves of the false charges that have been set up against them. How unfair it is, how absolutely mean it is, to speak evil of people in their absence, when the object is simply to lower them in the estimation of others. If those who engage in this sort of thing are not inspired by Satan, it must be because he sees their hearts are so corrupt that they do not need his suggestions.

A minister attending an annual conference in another State was compelled in his place of entertainment to overhear a conversation among several persons in the room below. He declared that it wholly consisted in vilifying talk. Were you never caught in such company? It is anything but delightful to one who wishes to think kindly and as favorably as possible of his fellowmen to be forced to hear the calumny that some people are in the habit of flinging at the absent and it may be the innocent.

And the case is not greatly altered if the people charged are really as bad as they are represented. There are times when it is necessary to expose the wickedness of people for the protection of others, but this does not justify the practice of holding up the faults of others when the only occasion is the gratification of some personal spite the speaker feels.

If you are ever tempted to speak of the absent in a way to lower them in the esteem of those to whom you talk, consider well before you speak. Be sure your motive is one of love and that what you say is absolutely true and that there is occasion then and there to tell the truth. If you get into a careless habit of talking about the faults and sins of others, you are sure to do some of the work of Satan.

—Stephenson, of Wisconsin, is allowed to retain his seat in the United States Senate by a vote of 40 to 34. His colleague, LaFollette, voted against and our Senator Overman voted for. Stephenson is an old man, over 80, and has had a good record, but it seems strange that so much money should be spent in a bad way to elect a good man. There is evidently something wrong in the case. If Stephenson is not a bad man, he has allowed himself to fall into the hands of bad men who hoped to use him as their tool, we suspect.

—The presidential primary in New York on Tuesday went for Taft as against Rosevelt about two to one, according to report sent out. The Roosevelt faction are declaring that the election was a farce and are asking that another election be held.

—The Allens involved in the Hillsville outrage have not all been caught as yet. Almost everyday we are told that they are cornered and will soon be taken, but thus far they have eluded their pursuers.

and keep th shall veritable under-he sus-
l truth lard of is adorality vorcee

d hon-
worse

urches not be y, but in the f this divor-

o say need

e rec-mis-
cent.
gone
, and from or dimoral
s. In eason,
s can craven us in-hed on n ounce

the heart. He intended for it to [illegible] forever for peace, and purity, for order, and sweetness, and joy, and comfort, and cheerful growth of character, and all that was splendid and uplifting in life. They were joined with this simple holy ceremony, "And the twain shall be one flesh." Where man or woman can find any grounds to claim superiority is one of the unsolved problems. Another reason that is assigned for divorce is that "we have fastened on society a double standard of morality." Now this may be a sufficient reason for divorce, but it is equally as strong a reason against remarriage.

Since it is said two-thirds of our divorces are obtained at the initiation of wives," let us look into the matter, and see where the blame lies for this double standard of morality.

There is not one man in a thousand that will bind himself in wedlock with an unchaste woman, but a large number of our girls will (in the face of the most violent protests) stand in the presence of God and men and angels, and take a

The selfish, lawless, Godless boy makes the libertine husband. The "independent" girl makes the vain, frivolous, fault-finding wife that will brook no criticism or censure, and their constant bickerings and recriminations end in the divorce court.

And now we come to the part where no light shines. The parents have found a way out of the difficulty, but what is the fate of the innocent little ones who owe their being to these perjured parents? They must, perforce, rest under the shadow of shame till life's latest day. May the dear Lord pity the little ones who are a thousand times worse than orphaned when father is another woman's husband and mother is another man's wife. The true independence of women dates back to the creation, and is backed up by Omnipotent Love.

A partnership with God is motherhood.
What strength, what purity, what self-control,
What love, what wisdom should belong to her
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul!

This boastful, arrogant, aggressive thing called twentieth- century independence, that even claims immunity from God's laws, originated from the same source with the insidious whisper, "thou shalt not surely die," that brought such woe into the world at the dawn of creation.

It is possible that such a thing may exist as justifiable divorce, but it is Satan's own trap to catch men's souls when they are led to believe that they can find true happiness in re-marriage when it failed to materialize in the first union.

It is the fashion in this grand age when a moral law interferes with our pet sins to put the blame on the law, and not on the sinner, "but know thou that for all these things God will bring us unto judgment." Ruth Fletcher.

THE SEMINARY CONFERENCE.

March 21 was a red-letter day at Westminster Theological Seminary. It will long be remembered by students and faculty as one of the most helpful and inspiring occasions in the history of the student life of the Seminary. The symposium on the subject, "More Men for the Ministry," began at 10:30 in the morning and was supposed to close with a layman's hour in the evening. The layman's service was held all right, but several numbers which should have come during the day were crowded out and postpone until the next day. In fact the greatness and importance of the questions being discussed seemed to grow upon all, the animated discussions revealing how seriously each had been thinking upon the various subjects. The truth is that the symposium was of such magnitude, as planned, that the time allowed was entirely insufficient. Several of the open parliaments had to be left out entirely while that which should have been the crowning event of all—the prayer meeting—had to be put off until next week.

"More Men for the Ministry" is a subject in which every true Christian is vitally interested and particularly the ministry itself. As considered in this conference it was divided into four parts; the Need, the Sources, the Agents, and the Place of Prayer.

Because of the unavoidable absence of Dr. Lewis, Secretary Klein discussed the word-wide need, particularly emphasizing the needs of the foreign field. "What the world needs most is the man who has God's message. It should be a passion with us to meet this need."

Prof. Douglas discussed the denominational need and presented some surprising statistics. Many charges are left unsupplied every year. Last year out of nineteen conferences 111 charges were left unsupplied. But this was offset by the fact that 113 ministers were left without appointment at their own request. He declared that it is not so much quantity that the church needs, but quality—not more men but better men. More could be accomplished with fewer men if they were of the right character and equipment.

An open parliament followed these addresses and it was spirited and full of practical suggestions.

The afternoon conference was opened by Dr. Greenfield of the Westminster Church. He discussed the Home as one of the sources of supply. He emphasized the need of more piety in the home and then the children will have higher regard for Christianity and a greater love for Christian service. The so-called self-made man and the one who has been lifted from the gutter are not the best fitted to carry the Gospel-message. If they were it would pay for all to pass through such experiences. "There was ne er a soil upon the Master and who would covet anything else? The best comes from the best."

Rev. L. B. Smith of Christ Church, Baltimore, next presented the Church as a source of supply. He mentioned how the various organizations or forms of church activity could be used to lead young people into Christian service in opposition to those of the world which are constantly bidding for them. We have a right to expect the church to furnish men to carry on her work.

Dr. Forlines' subject was the Schools as a source of supply. He insisted that as men need thorough training and equipment in other lines of work, so does the Christian minister. If he has not, he cannot expect to be a leader of those who have. The young man who goes thru the schools is in a position to understand, sympathize with, and help those who have done the same. He suggested the plan of holding conferences in the schools, high schools as well as colleges and universities, for the purpose of presenting the claims of the Gospel ministry. He gave a number of illustrations of great world-movements which originated in colleges and universities. The schools prove an effective place for presenting the claims of the ministry, for it is there most decisions for life-work are made.

The third division of the symposium related to the Agents employed for recruiting the ranks of the ministry. Dr. J. W. Kirk, of Baltimore, was the first speaker, and his earnest and enthusiastic words found their way to every heart. He gave many Bible illustrations of how God called different ones into his work. Church workers as well as pastors often have the opportunity of helping young men to articulate indefinable feelings through which God is calling them into the Christian ministry. But all must be careful not to make the call too alarming or spectacular. God calls in different ways.

Rev. N. G. Bethea of the North Carolina Conference then told of the opportunities which the pastor has of recruiting young men for the ministry. He should enter wisely into the social life of his young people, should cultivate their friendship, be companionable and in every way encourage them to take part in Christian service. He should make it the practice of his life to be on the lookout for young men who are contemplating the Gospel ministry as to their life work. He should, if so led, encourage them to preach the Gospel.

By this time it was getting so late in the afternoon that Dr. Elderdice deemed it best to postpone the other numbers until the next morning. In the evening the service was in charge of the laymen and it proved a delightful and profitable hour. Dr. Chas. Billingslea, of Westminster, conducted the devotional exercises. He was followed by Dr. Hering who, in a few introductory remarks, told how the layman could be of help to the young man who was perplexed as to whether or not he ought to enter the ministry.

Mr. Daniel Baker, of Baltimore, was the next speaker, but he had brought with him Mr. Morris, the General Secretary of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., and he introduced him for an address. Mr. Morris spoke of the various social problems which are demanding the attention of the church. Many conditions must be changed, but this is not so important as changed character. Change the character and the social and home conditions will change. Mr. Baker followed with a very practical discussion of the subject, The Pulpit and the Pew. He closed with an appeal to the students to cultivate the personal touch—to bring the claims of Christ home to others in personal work.

This session was followed by a social hour during which the Seminary Woman's Club served refreshments.

Friday morning, the conference was resumed and Dr. Elderdice was the first speaker. His subject was the Seminary as a recruiting agency. He said the Seminary as an agent presents a difficulty because of the desire to build up the student body and a danger of over-persuading young men to enter the ministry that this might be accomplished. But a Seminary is an agency and has two lines of activity. It is to be a bureau of information as to the needs, requirements and the elements which constitute the true call to the ministry. Then, too, the Seminary is to be a financial solicitor to aid needy students.

Considerable time was then given to an open parliament which proved even more helpful than the one the day before.

Dr. Feeman was the next speaker and his subject was, "The Place of Prayer." He declared that the one who leaves out prayer leaves out an important factor in Christian enterprise. Paryer is needed to find out God's will, to strengthen us for the task and to accomplish some things which are not and cannot be accomplished in any other way. Things come to pass through prayer.

The final address was given by Dr. Lewis. He spoke of some things which are needed in those who try to meet this great need of more men for the ministry. The great need of the world is redemption. It is a precious thing to meet this need. The one who does must have sympathy, the ability to lead; he must have common sense and the spirit of heroism. The minister must not be afraid of being unpopular. He should cultivate the heroic spirit and it will yield good dividends

Dr. Lewis closed his address by answering a question of the relative importance of the home and foreign work. He took the position that this is a distinction without a difference, and that if God really wants a young man to enter the foreign field he will make it clear. In his own experience he had found that the path of least resistance was the path which he should follow.

And so closed the conference on this important subject. It proved a great help and was a far greater success than had been anticipated. The suggestion originated with Mr. Pritchard of the senior class and he and his committee composed of Messrs. Corn and Gerringer deserve much credit for the success of the undertaking. When a Seminary Day was suggested to the faculty, they entered heartily into the plan and together with the committee formulated the program, but did not anticipate such an important or significant conference. Many questions came out in the discussion which it is hoped can later be discussed and more definite conclusions reached. It is also hoped that some of the papers can be secured and published.

—Trust in the Lord and do good.

PROGRAM OF BRANCH MEETING
Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Winston, April 17-18.

Wednesday Morning 10:30.

Consecration Service. Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point.
Address of Welcome. Mrs. W. B. Speas, Winston.
Response, Mrs. W. T. Hanner, Julian.
Business—appointment of committees etc.

Afternoon Session.

Devotional exercises. Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson.
Roll Call.
Reading of Minutes.
Address of President, Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
The Woman's Missionary Record (paper) Dr. Harris-Glascock, Greensboro.
Reports of Auxiliaries.
How to awaken interest in our State Work. Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, Greensboro.
Business.

Wednesday Evening.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. A. B. Kimball, Greensboro.
Address, Miss Annie L. Forrest, Field Secretary.

Thursday Morning, 10:30.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, High Point.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Report of Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro.
Report of Treasurer, Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro.
Our Work in China (Letter from Rev. C. S. Heininger), Mrs. H. L. Coble, Greensboro.
Business.

Thursday Afternoon.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. W. T. Hanner, Julian.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Reports of Committees.
Election of Officers.
Round Table, conducted by Miss Forrest.
Unfinished Business.
Adjournment.

HIS ONE SPEECH.

Bro. A. A. Hicks, of Oxford, at our request sends the following account of a speech made in our legislature during the agitation for a dispensary in Charlotte some years ago:

"Senator Osborn representing Mecklenburg County, was insisting that the Bill should not pass as the State had just gone through with the White Supremacy campaign and routed the opposing party, that being the main issue in the campaign and nothing having been said in his district about a dispensary. It was at night. Many speeches had been made pro and con when suddenly all eyes turned to the Senator from Lenoir who had not spoken during the session. I might add that he was a man between the ages of sixty and seventy and dignified in appearance. He said:

"'Mr. President: When I was a boy, whiskey was sold in small places called groggeries. Later on, the business seemed to thrive and it was sold in what were then called bar-rooms. Still later, more pretentious places were opened up for the sale of this commodity, with red lights and stained glasses, which were called saloons. But since the doctors of divinity have taken charge of this business, they have come to be called Dispensaries. For my part it takes a man with a finer sight and a sharper pair of metaphysical scissors than I have to clip between the north and northeast side of a hair.'"

This was his only speech. He died the last day of the session.

—A note from Mrs. Dr. Hubbard referring to Rev. Joel B. Trogdon's operation for appendicitis says: He has been troubled with attacks more or less severe for five years, and an attack more severe than usual coming on this week made an operation necessary. Dr. Hubbard, Dr. Austin, and Dr. Plummer did the work, and he is getting on very nicely this morning, and Dr. Hubbard is hopeful of an uninterrupted recovery. This was written March 23rd. A note from Mrs. Trogdon written two days later says: "On coming home from Asheboro last Wednesday evening about half way my dear husband was taken with appendicitis. He had to undergo an operation. I thought he was gone once: he stopped breathing three times. It was the saddest thing that ever came to our home. God has been mighty good to us since we were married, but the dark day must come to every home. This is the fourth day and he is getting along very well. I want to ask the people of Uwharrie circuit to remember him in their prayers that he may get able to go to his work again. And I want everybody who reads this to please remember him in their prayer and all the family, as we have seven little children to care for. I believe that the prayers of the righteous avail much. We long to see him well again, that we may hear his sweet voice in the family prayer again. I cannot help having good hope of him because I don't believe his work on this earth is finished. We have given up our home on earth that we may all have a home in Heaven. I want to say before I close that I thank the people of this place many, many times for the kindness they have shown to us. We also wish to thank Mr. Jasper Delk, as we could not get a trained nurse anywhere, for coming down and helping to wait on him."

Bro. Trogdon and his wife will have the sympathy and prayers of many of our readers in this ordeal. Few of us can realize how severe it is.

LORD LISTER.

If a man's greatness is measured by the good he does his fellows, few men have been greater than Joseph Lister, who died last month in London.

Half a century ago, Lord Lister, then plain Professor Lister of Glasgow, became convinced that blood-poisoning after surgical operations was caused by an "invading fungus;" that is to say, by microbes introduced into the wound from outside the patient. He said that he simply applied in his own field of surgery a certain discovery of Pasteur—the discovery, namely, that fermentation in liquor is caused by the introduction of foreign matter from the air. In giving so simple an account of his reasoning, Lister acted with characteristic modesty, but nevertheless the greatness of the achievement is obvious. "In the field of observation," said Pasteur, "chance favors those only who are prepared." Lister was prepared.

Working, then, on the theory that the source of the trouble was exterior to the patient, Lister not only insisted on a degree of cleanliness hitherto unknown; but, fighting the unseen germ as well as the visible dirt, he introduced and elaborated that aseptic and antiseptic treatment upon which rests the whole wonderul success of modern surgery.

The extent of the change that followed the introduction of the new methods is one to fill with thankfulness and awe those who can measure it intelligently. In the old days, gangrene, pyemia and all kinds of infection and blood-poisoning stood like the figure of death at every surgeon's elbow, and terror, like a pall, hung over every operating-table. The mortality was fearful. "My Lord," said a speaker at a banquet in Lord Lister's honor, "it is not a profession, it is not a nation, it is humanity itself that with uncovered head salutes you." He spoke the truth. It is computed that he has saved more lives than all the wars of the nineteenth century have sacrificed.

He was of course given the highest academic honors, but in his case those seemed not enough. Queen Victoria made him a peer—the first physician ever to be so honored. In doing so, she merely gave the gold the guinea's stamp: he was a great man not only in intellect, but in character. His generosity and modesty have been rarely equaled. The many tributes to his beautiful traits of character show that his heart was as great as his mind was powerful.—Youth's Companion

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson For Next Week.

Psalms 24-36.

We will next week print Mrs. Curry's answer to the question as to the main teaching of the Book of Job. She has gone into the subject carefully, as we believed she would do.

VALUE OF STRAIGHT LITERATURE

"Little cubes of metal, little tubes of ink, Brains and the printing press, make the millions think."

Think what? Many times they are made to think wrong as well as made to think right.

As truly as straight literature is a mighty factor in propagating truth, crooked literature is as potent in propagating error.

Since right or wrong in a man's life is so determinning and so much hinges upon it, then we cannot afford to run any risk in the kind of literature that comes to our homes. The world is sown down with both kinds, and we can have either at practically the same price. There is no law that compels a man to have either; consequently it is left to the man as to which kind he receives. Almost every body is awakened to the effects and consequences of sin, the danger of being lost, and the punishment that awaits the wicked in eternity; then every means of help that is available, that will enable us to steer clear from danger, along life's pathway should be procured, even at great cost.

There are men whose souls are burning with the love of God, and whose desire to help people shun eternal destruction and gain heaven is as great as that of a father towards his son. They have the welfare of souls at heart and their writings and teachings are safe, spiritual, and food to the soul.

Our lives and destiny are largely fashioned by what we read and learn; then how important it is that parents see that their children have the advantage of full salvation papers, good religious books and salvation songs, instead of papers containing love stories and fashion sheets, dime novels and worldly songs. The decorations of many homes mean destruction to the children of that home.

A mother had several sons, all of them became sailors, much to the sorrow of their mother. She visited her minister if he could tell her why all her boys chose to be sailors when she so much desired that they choose some other employment. The minister pointed to a large oil painting on the wall of a large ocean liner plowing its way through the water. He said "there is the cause."

Our homes should be supplied with that which will in line its inmates toward heaven, good literature will do it.—The Apostolic Messenger.

If ever the baptism of the Holy Spirit was needed it is needed to day. It is the crying want of the Church, and every earnest Christian soul is yearning for it and praying for it. It is so apparent that no one will undertake to deny that the spirit of worldliness has the upper hand not only in the market place, but to a disheartening extent, in the holy-place. The spirit of gain, which is pre-eminently the spirit of the world, is everywhere.

The only remedy for all this is a revival, not gotten up by men, but sent down by God; in other words, a revival "of pure and undefiled religion," the result of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, who "convinceth of sin and of righteousness and of judgment to come."

Undoubtedly, the great necessity which many Christians feel as a monstrous burden on their hearts is, that controlling, overpowering, everywhere-present worldiness be supplanted by spiritual-mindedness,by "the spirit of burning," as Spurgeon put it. The spirit of burning i imsposible without the Holy Spirit. It is the product of His gracious baptism. He comes into a man and influences his spirit, sets it on fire, but not without prayer, not being invited—even solicitied by earnest supplication—to come and dwell. Christ appealed to the instinct of fatherhood to illustrate the spontaneous, royal munificence of God. "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" It is plain, therefore, that the gift of the Holy Spirit is conditioned on askin , on prayer.

The first Pentecost came in answer to the united prayers of Christ's disciples; and, in like manner, have come all the Pentecosts since that first one in Jerusalem, which have awkened, blessed and energized the Church of Christ on earth. every outpouring of the Holy Spirit has commenced in prayer, continued in supplication and ended with thanksgiving. Prayer for His baptism, making effectual the Word of Salvation which is now proclaimed unto all the nations of the world is the one all-comprehensive theme that should fill the minds and hearts and desires of God's people, and find earnest expression in all their meetings for prayer, in every hymn, in every sermon, in every service—Salvation through the mercy of God, by the blood of Christ, through the power of the Holy spirit: then will men come into the Kingdom, not as hirelings, not from temporal inducements, but from a sense of sin, from a depth of conviction which produces a conscious need of salvation and a breadth of comprehension as to the way of salvation, which will lead to an intelligent confession and service in the Church of Christ.—Ex.

THE LINE THAT CAN REACH

Through the driving scud that whipped their cheeks and cut them as though with a lash, the life-savers on Peaked Hill, Cape Cod, on a recent January morning, looked off over the foaming waters at a sight which seemed to chill their very blood, for there in the draedful breakers, on a treacherous bar, were three motorless coal-barges, set adrift by the parting of the tug's cable, to the hulls and wreckage of which seventeen men were clinging, hoping against hope that from some source help would come. In desperation the life-savers, failing to launch their boat, fired all the ammunition of two stations in a mad effort to carry a lifeline over the hulls of the barges beating to pieces on Peak Hill bar. But all in vain—the line did not reach! One cord after another flew feebly into the air in the teeth of a fifty-mile gale, and when the last line fell aimlessly into the swelter just off shore, nowhere near where the men were ready to drop into the sea. The despair of an utter failure pierced to the hearts of the gallant life-savers—who in this case could not save.

Sin is a sea, and there are many struggling in it. The storm is at its height. A cry goes up for a life-line. Morality offers its aid, but it is found wholly insufficient. Philosophy throws out its theories, but these do not hold. Sentimentality cries, Just consider yourselves saved," but the dirge on the surge mocks its misplaced pleasantry. Man-made schemes of reform, dignified by the name of "salvation"cast their little lines into sin's swelter yet they fall far short of the case. But now One comes, who in figure, rides upon the storms. His arm is not shortened that it cannot save: the line of mercy which He throws out sweeps completely within grasp of the perishing; they lay hold on the strand of help, and are rescued, and give glory to God for their deliverance. The line that can reach is the gospel, and the availing Deliverer is Jesus Christ, who can save to the uttermost. Zion's Herald.

There is no great genius without the tincture of madness.—Seneca.

ROVER.

Rover is a big black Newfoundland dog, and he told us the other day which of four boys stoned him.

"Dogs can't talk," I think I hear you say. Can't they? The next time you see a dog watch his tail and his ears and his eyes, and I am sure you will know just what the fellow thinks.

Why our little dog Pink runs out on the porch every night at train time to watch for her master, who comes on the cars. The moment he is in sight, and long before I can see him, Pink tells me he is coming. How does she do it? She wags her bushy white tail with all her might and main. But Pink isn't Rover.

Rover lives in New Jersey. He is a very kind dog, and never runs at people passing on the road. But unkind boys often stone him, and he does not forget those who treat him badly.

His master's house stands near the public road, and in the front yard there is a well of pure, cool water. The kind master keeps a cup at the well so that thirsty travelers may help themselves. Rover generally lies under the front porch, but he never offers to touch the tramps who come to the well.

I sat on the porch the other day when four boys came into the yard to get some water. They were all strangers. Rover walked out from under the porch and sat down by the well. I was afraid he was going to be rude and bark, but he seemed to be pleased with the visitors.

One boy drank, then the second and the third. Rover wagged his tail and looked so kindly at them that I thought: What a polite dog you are! You treat guests as handsomely as your master.

Just then the fourth boy put out his hand to take the cup, when when Rover gave a savage bark, which frightened the boy so that he screamed and took to his heels. Rover followed him some way down the road, dismissed him with a parting bark, and then came slowly home, wagging his tail, as much as to say: "That's pretty well done. I think that boy won't bother me any more."

I haven't seen the boy since. But he was badly frightened, and I think he will be very careful how he stones any other dogs. —The Nursery.

A BATTLE WITH APOLLYON.

The reformed drunkard, John B. Gough, who became the great evangelist of temperance, kept his freedom from drink at the cost of continual torture. To its awful intensity an old friend, with whom he made his home whenever he visited Chicago, bears witness. The story contains not only a vivid warning against drink, but a hopeful illustration of the victories that, with God's help, a strong man can win.

"One day I found Mrs. Gough sitting by the window, holding her newspaper upside down. Mr. Gough was lying on the lounge on the other side of the room, with his face to the wall.

" 'What is the matter?' I asked, in alarm.

" 'What makes you think anything is the matter?' Mrs. Gough asked.

"With a gesture, I indicated her newspaper.

" 'Oh, there is matter!' she cried. 'Go to John!'

"I sat down by him and began to talk to him in a low voice, while I smoothed his hair, as he loved to have me do because it soothed him. I reminded him of the good that he was doing, of the thousands whom he had redeemed from drink, and of the families that he had made happy.

"All at once he turned over and looked at me. I hardly knew him. His eyes were sunken, his face was covered with little, fine wrinkles, his skin was ghastly gray. Then he said, with the deep voice that so thrilled his audiences:

" 'Do you believe I love that woman over there by the window?'

" 'I have never doubted it,' I answered.

" 'Do you believe I love you?' he asked.

" 'It is one of the chief joys of my life to know that you do,' I said, with a lump in my throat.

" 'Then if you want to know how I feel,' he cried, 'it is this way: as if I'd see you both in hell if it would only be right for me to take just one drink!'

"To such an extremity as this can the morbid craving for drink reduce even a

"To be sure you may;" said Hans, it's good man. That temptation came upon him now and then with awful force. It was heart breaking to see him. At such times he never dared to be left alone. Once when he was thus attacked by temptation at a hotel away from his friends,he locked the door of his room, and threw the key out over the transom.

" 'Once the devil gets a clutch on you he never lets go,' he said. God save our young men from thinking that the habit of drink is ever a little thing!' "—Youth's Companion.

DOING OUR BEST FOR GOD.

There is great danger, in the enthusiasm of public missionary gatherings with treir encouraging reports, of patting ourselves upon the back and going home with a profound self-complacency, when we ought to be humiliated before God in penitence and shame. It is an obvious and melancholy fact that the Church, at its best, has never yet done its utmost to help on the cause of Christ in the world—we ought to recognize the necessity of more thorough cooperation between the Church at home and the missionary work in all lands.

If the work of missions is ever to rise to its highest level, and to be prosecuted with a true aggresive spirit, we, in the Church at home, must make an entirely new be ginning. The ignorance that prevails, even among the more inteligent class of disciples concerning the cause and progress of missions is a shame to them and to us all. Ignorance and indolence are the handmaids of vice, as intelligence and industry are the handmaids of virtus. So, in all church life and church work, intelligence is the invariable companion of all true zeal, and ignorance, of all apathy and lethargy. Intelligence must awaken and nourish conviction, or there is no true starting-point in any self-denying and aggressive service for God or men. How little most Christians know of the wonderful history of missions, or even of the present progress of the kingdom. Let any child of God go systematically through the great fields of missions; read the story of James Chalmers in New Guinea, or that remarkable book of Army Carmichael Wilson, "Things as They Are in India," or Mrs. Howard Taylor's "Pastor Hsi," or "The Wonderful Story of Uganda"—books which are as fascinating as fiction. When we have intelligence and conviction, both as to the need of these peoples and as to the willingness of God to bless the work, then we will be more prepared to respond with our whole heart to the call of God.

How about giving? We are doing nothing, nothing! A mere pittance is bestowed upon this great world-wide work for God and humanity. There are at least sixty millions of Protestant communicants in America, Great Britain, and the continent of Europe. The average contribution last year towards the direct work of foreign missions was about 40 cents a year for every one of those sixty millions of Protentant Christian, or three cents a month! Could we not double, or, even without great self-denial, treble it! Of course, comparatively few of these sixty millions are givers;-but if one sixth of them contributed, it would still be a yearly average of only 20 cents a month! This is contemptible dealing with God!

We must read useless literature less, and the literature of Christ more; we must interest ourselves in the biography of heroic men and women who have gone to the field in the name of Jesus Christ, and in the whole history of this great world-wide campaign. Then our intelligence and conviction, stimulating sympathy and affection, will reach down to conscience and awaken a new sense of obligation and duty, unloosin our purse-strings and stimulating greater self-denial and far larger gifts--gifts that cost us something, and are the expression of self-denial, before Almighty God.

We must, also, engage in mighty praying as well as in self-denying giving, and thus keep up the line of communication between friends who go abroad and the Church that stays at home.

What would be thought of a strong nation that would send an army into the heart of an enemy's territory, and then lose the line of communication with the home base, or neglect sending supplies of men and the material of war to help them in their campaign? We who stay by the stuff must share the work with those at the front. When the Church, intelligent in her conviction, warm in her sympathetic affection, generous and self-denying in her giving, mighty and prevailing in her praying, shall thus keep in true and constant communication with God's missionaries in the field, we shall find there is no lack of response of men or of means to carry the Gospel to the ends of the earth!

When we inform ourselves of the history and progress, the plan and methods of God's missionary campaign, then intelligent information will incite us to sympathetic praying, to self-denying giving. Then when God calls us and our substance, we will be ready to surrender ourselves, as well as sending those who can go. We will be anxious to do our best in God's service by unstinted giving and whole-hearted praying.—Mis. Review of The World.

A HOSPITAL HYMN.

Father, who mak'st Thy suffering sons
Thy ministers to stronger ones,
To light love's holy flames within,
Deposing self, abasing sin,
O, teach my soul, confiding still,
To suffer or to do Thy will.

If in this world of mystery
Unequal favors fall on me,
While brothers, better far than I,
Are called to languish or to die,
Help me, in turn, their ills to share,
Their wounds to heal, their load to bear.

Blest is their task, 'mid human woe,
Thy gift on others to be stow;
For suffering lies at plenty's door,
And God appeals when cries the poor.
His law ordains, for all that live,
What sorrow lacks let mercy give.

The day shall come when veils remove
And all shall see that God is Love,
Then He Himself all tears shall dry,
And show plain the reason why;
And theirs shall be the great reward
Who in His poor beheld their Lord.

—Right Rev. A. C. Coxe, D. D.

THE GREAT FAILURE.

The Exodus was a wonderful event. It is difficult to grasp it in its full measure. A great body in bondage, wearied and worn by the cruel conditions under which they were compelled to serve, untrained in arms to be able to defend themselves, and unprovided with the proper equipment for so long and difficult a journey—in a night six hundred thousand men, besides women, children and a mixed multitude, left all and followed the leading by an unknown way. It was such a movement as the world has never seen. There was a single inspiration, and that was the unseen but mighty faith in God. To faith, intelligent faith, there is nothing impossible. Faith is not a blind impulse; it is not inconsiderate action, but a grasp of duty with reliance upon the clearly given promise of God. These sons of the promise, going out of bondage into a distant land as yet possessed by strong tribes of valiant men, believed the Word of God as spoken through Moses, the attested servant of God. Before such men what could stand? The mountains girt them, the sea was in front of them the chariots of Pharaoh followed after them. But the waters parted at the word of Moses as he swayed his rod over them. By faith they passed through the sea as by dry land. What could withstand such a body, led by the pillar of in a cloud and guarded by the pillar of fire

And yet there lay that six hundred thousand buried in the sands of the desert. When they came near to the promised land, their heart failed at the report of the dangers before them, and they refused to go forward as the promise was to them. They could not enter in because of unbeleif. It was simple unbelief, the failure to rely on the promised guidance and help of God. By faith they escaped from Egyptian tyranny; by the want of faith they failed to gain the land of promise. They lost Egypt and failed to gain Canaan, and died in the desert.

Unbelief is the deadly sin. It is so because it cuts us off from God. God gave his Son that whosoever believeth in him might not perish; but he that believeth not is condemned already. We see the fearful failure all about us. Multitudes believe and forsake the old life only they fail to increase in the life of the Spirit and fail of that success Christian service and holy enjoyment of God which they expected and which is the natural development of grace, the explanation is simple; they do not enter in because of unbelief. They live and die in the midway desert between the old bondage of sin and the blessedness of assurance of God's presence and love. Through simple unbelief they do not enjoy the rest which God has provided. United Presbyterian.

REST.

"You are too-tired to go to the church." That's sheer nonsense. There isn't a place on the continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day, snooze in a hammock, loll in a rocking chair, go to sleep over a book. That isn't resting, that's loafing. Tell yourself honestly—you like to think you are honest—did you ever, in all your life, see a loafer who looked rested? Did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time. The people who try to rest are always tired. Resting is the hardest work in the world, when you make work out of it.

About a year ago I stopped in a Boston street to watch a group of laborers. It was noon hour. They had been at work all the morning digging a sewer excavation. They had eaten their dinners from little tin pails and now they were "resting." Some of them were pitching quoits and others were putting the shot, with a great round boulder. They were workingmen "resting." And sitting on the curbstone watching them—too lazy even to stand up and look at them; their lazy chins resting on their lazy hands and their lazy elbows supported on their lazy knees were the loafers who had been watching them work all the morning. These fellows were too tired even to join the games by which the workers rested themselves.

You have no need to loaf all day Sunday Two hours in church; two hours of the quiet, the sermon and reading, the uplift which comes from the new channels into which your thought, your mind is led, will rest you more physically, morally, intellectually, than will all the day spent in trying to "rest."

"Ere you lay my form to rest,
Place a red rose on my breast,
If you love me." Thus said one
When his race was almost run.
Dear red rose! thou art to me
Type of immortality,
Pledge of that glad word which saith,
"And there shall be no more death;"
Pledge of love, for love alone
Knows it cannot lose its own.
Earthly roses soon shall fade,
Even as the earthly forms are laid
In the tomb, there to decay;
But love's rose shall bloom for aye,
And the deathless soul shall rise
Victor, to its native skies.

—The American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions has received announcement from the Republic of China that Christians are to enjoy the same liberty and freedom in China under the republic as other Chinese.

From Pastors and People.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Glen Raven and Carolina, Mar. 28-29.
Burlington, March 30-31, A. M.
Graham and Haw River, March 30-31, P. M.
Mt. Hermon, April 2-5.
Saxapahaw, April 6-9.
Alamance, April 10-15.
Siler City, April 16-22.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO 12.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church of the death of Rev. E. A. Plyler. Bro. Plyler was a member of the Brotherhood in full standing, having responded to every call of the Brotherhood. Beneficiary members are due three dollars each. These amounts are due not later than sixty days after date of this notice. They should be sent to the Treasurer, J. A. Burgess, Henderson, Andrew's Ave., No. 343, N. C. If convenient, please remit by check.

J. A. Burgess.

Mar. 5, 1912.

A CORRECTION.

Something over a year ago the constitution of the Brotherhood was so amended as to do away with all non-beneficiary membership. So that there are no longer any non-beneficiary members and no one is due anything on the above call but beneficiary members. In sending the above notice to the Herald I overlooked this fact. However if there are those who feel disposed to contribute something to the widow and children of the deceased brother, it will be accepted and appreciated. J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

Received on Brotherhood Call No. 12.

Three dollars each from Revs. J. F. Dosier, J. D. Williams, E. G. Lowdermilk, J. H. Stowe, J. H. Bowman.

One dollar each from Mlles. Mattie A. Whitaker, Sue Whitaker, Messrs. J. Norman Wills, W. C. Bain, R. H. Brooks, Mrs. J. Norman Wills.

Total to date, $21.00

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

DELEGATES' EXP. TO GEN. CONF.

Previously acknowledged	$14.75
Winston M. P. Church, ...	10.00

NOTICE.

On the 17th and 18th of April the Executive Board of the N. C. Branch W. F. M. S. will hold its annual business meeting in the WinstonM. P. Church. The meeting of the Home Board, N.C.Branch, will be held at the same place on the 19th, immediately following the close of the meeting of the Foreign Board. We are looking forward to these meetings with a great deal of pleasure. Entertainment will be provided for all persons attending and we shall be glad if the full membership of each Board is present.

S. W. Taylor, Pastor.

March 25, 1912.

Winston.

Dear Brother:

I send you this clipping relative to the Methodist Protestant Church in Winston-Salem. I hope you will publish in order to arouse the best interest of our most liberal Methodist Protestants everywhere. How very much we need a new church is known only to our own people here who are so often pained when prominent M. P.'s from some other point come to our progressive city to make their home and promptly go and join some other church rather than unite with an edifice so inferior to other city churches. It is frequently so, and as our membership has been canvassed and a few have subscribed liberally, and if an appeal is made to you, brother or sister, in the early spring, please don't turn a deaf ear to it, as we are very much in earnest and there is very little wealth among our people here. There has not been any canvass in the city among the populace yet and as our church occupies such a prominent place in the city, we hope to be very liberally aided by the people outside. Our pastor, Rev. S. W. Taylor, is exceedingly popular and we look forward anxiously for a great change in the near future.

Methodist Protestant.

The clipping referred to is from the Morning Journal and is as follows:

"If present plans are carried out, and everything looks very auspicious at present for their fulfillment, work will be commenced in the early spring on the construction of a handsome edifice at the corner of Liberty and Seventh streets, to take the place of the present First Methodist Protestant Church building. The new structure, when completed, will be an elegant house of worship in keeping with the growth and enterprise of the congregation that will build it and with the progress of Winston-Salem.

"For several months the members of the M. P. Church have been working quietly among themselves to raise money for the construction of this building, and it is learned that about $5,000 has been subscribed. It is the purpose to spend $10,000 in completely remodeling and enlarging the old building.

"It is understood that Rev. S. W. Taylor, the new pastor of the church, will bend every effort to finish raising the fund as soon as possible, and he hopes by all means to have the building work pushed to completion next summer.

"The plans for the addition and remodeling have not been drawn, but with $10,000 and the present building the members are assured that a handsome structure can be made."

Haw River Circuit.

I think we can safely say this has been the worst winter in 23 years, as I have been traveling that long and I never missed so many appointments in two years as I have in this one. We have done but little, as people could not get out when I went because of cold and mud. I went one Sunday and my horse's nose and eye got so cold it got frostbit and the skin came off My wife was pitying Nellie and I said, Well, I was not far behind Nellie when that happened. Then she laughed—it was all over then.

We have been kindly remembered by Bro. J. M. Weatherly and wife, a buggy packing full of corn and a nice ham; also Bro. Fletcher Stallings, a nice ham; Sister Mamie Griffin, milk and butter. We wish we could get them to understand how we appreciate this. "Sometime we will undersand: not now, but in the coming years; sometime we will understand."

C. E. M. Raper.

Rockingham.

Received on St. John Church since last writing, $4 from Haw River S. S. per T. S. Coble. Thanks, brethren. Are there not others to respond?

In last week's Herald, in a communication by this writer, the pronoun "We" occurs in the place of "he." The sentence, "He had not been troubled for about five years until the last few weeks referred to a gentleman with white swelling, and not to myself, as the "we" would leave the reader to infer. The error is misleading and ridiculous. The mistake would seem to indicate that the writer had had no trouble for about five years until the last few weeks-

J. F. Dosier.

Giles Chapel, Richland Ct.

Dear Herald:

As I have not seen a report from our reporter for some time, I will endeavor to write a short piece. Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, filled his regular appointment on third Sunday, the 17th. As the weather was very fine we had quite a good congregation. Had a very interesting sermon. We enjoy Bro. Whitaker's sermons very much. He also held communion service. There were quite a number who came forward and manifested a faithfulness to our Lord and Savior by partaking of the Lord's Supper.

Our Sunday school is rnning on nicely and we hope to have a large attendance when Spring fully opens.

Our reporter, Mr. Wm. M. Stevenson, has been indisposed for some time with a severe cough, but is very much improved at present.

This is my first attempt to write for the Herald, and if this escapes the waste basket I will try again. Best wishes for Herald and its readers.

Mrs. W. R. Hamlin.

Stanley.

I think we have so far recovered as to be able to express our appreciation of those who visited us on last Friday night. The writer was doing the work of a "cobbler" while other household work was being done in the sitting room. Between eight and nine o'clock a rap was heard at the door, and before we had time to think twice, Bro. Walter Sides walked in followed by quite a number of the good people of Friendship. They made no halt until they visited both kitchen and dining room, leaving there quite a number of things needed in a preacher's home. It would take too much space to give the names of all who came and the different things they brought, but God knows all and we pray the Lord's richest blessings upon them for this act of kindness. We were informed that quite a number were kept away because of the rough weather, yet we felt that the crowd was large enough to successfully pound a preacher no larger than their pastor, and this they did in a splendid manner. We have received so many here, that we did not expect this "combination treatment," yet it has had a wholesome effect and we feel better. After a pleasant conversation and prayer the crowd dispersed. May the Lord bless all and give us more love for Christ and the church. Geo. L. Reynolds.

Concord.

Our congregations on last Sunday were good for the weather. We have some new hymn books and therefore expect a greater interest in our music. This, of course, determines in a large measure the life of a service.

Miss Arabell Thomas, one of our most beautiful young ladies, was married to Mr. Cline Herrin, a young man of the Baptist Church of this place on March 21, 1912. They have our best wishes for a happy sail over life's ocean; and I trust they shall ever be as happy as on the evening when the writer pronounced them husband and wife.

The pastor failed to reach Fair View church on the 3rd Sunday becaus the bridge had been washed away by the flood, which was then subsiding.

A. Oscar Lindley.

Miss Forrest's Appointments for Alamance.

Fethel, April 11, 11 a. m.
Rock Creek, April 12, 11 a. m.
Flint Ridge, April 13, 11 a. m.
Center, April 14, 11 a. m.
Sapling Ridge, April 14, 3 p. m.

W. M. Pike.

March 26, 1912.

Pleasant Union, Liberty Ct.

Dear Herald:

Your pages have held no report from us in so long! I suppose we were waiting for something great to speak of.

We have a nice new church, but not complete. We are glad and thankful for what we have; hope soon to see it more beautiful, as it will be when the finish of paint etc. is given it. But while we are glad of the nice new building, we are sorry to have to say that so many seem indifferent to the welfare of the church and Sunday school, so few that feel the deep concern for the spiritual welfare of the people; but, thank the Lord- there are a faithful few.

We crave the prayers of all praying people who read this, that a great awakening and a great revival of true, genuine religion may be visited upon us early.

Our new pastor, Bro. Troxler, is proving himself faithful, we think we already have cause to say, bless the Lord for sending Bro. Troxler to us. We believe if our people will respond with proper co-operation, much good will be done.

Pleasant Union has lost in the last few years many of her oldest members; one after another has been called higher till few are left of all those who so short a time ago stood in the front ranks.

David Neese, a faithful member and constant attendant at church and Sunday school was called up yonder a few weeks ago. May his example remain in the minds of this people to urge them on to faithfulness also. We hope soon to see regular reports from this place, with items of interest of work in the church along many lines. Yours, M. L. B.

March 25, 1912.

NOTICE.

I will preach at Gray's Chapel next Sunday at 11 a. m., unless providentially hindered. Pastor.

NOTICE.

The second quarterly conference for Granville Circuit will convene at Mt. Carmel, Saturday, April 13, at 11 a. m. All officials are urged to be present. Ask your neighbor official to come.

N. G. Bethea.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.

Dear Herald: Bro. Cecil delivered to us another one of his good sermons today. Although it was a bad day, several of our good people came out to hear the good news which Bro. Cecil had for them. We hope as the weather clears up that all of our members and friends will be able to attend our services.

In spite of the bad weather our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the management of Mr. Witty, our superintendent, good teachers and faithful scholars. As you have read before, we decided to enter the contest for banner on the last Sun. in February. On this day we had 82 on roll but only 52 present. March 3, 30 present; March 10, 70; Mar. 17, 92; March 24, 51.

Average for the month, 59.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Tabernacle Saturday before 3rd Sunday in April.

We are expecting to hold an Easter service.

With much love to the readers of the Herald, Reporter.

March 24, 1912.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.

Dear Editor: As we have no reporter, I decided that I would write to the Herald. Our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, filled his regular appointment the third Sunday evening; he delivered an excellent sermon to a small but attentive congregation. We hope that spring will soon open up so some of our older "members as well as yung ones" can leave their winter quarters. The more we hear Mr. Trogdon preach, the more we love and appreciate him. And we all feel sure he is the man for this work.

On account of the inclement weather we haven't had any Sunday school since Christmas. We are going to start up next Sunday at 2 p. m. I think we will have a better tendance when the weather gets better. M. E. D.

Cox, N. C., March 18.

Another Report.

As I have not seen any report from our church this year I thought I would send a few lines to the kind editor and see if he would publish them. I do not know whether there has been any reporter at this place appointed for this year or not. If there has been, I beg pardon for writing. But there is room for all.

Our good pastor, Mr. Trogdon, has filled his appointments as far as possible this year, notwithstanding the mud and cold weather we have had, and every one was glad to see him every time he came. He always gives such good and helpful sermons. (Here follows an account of the operation for appendicitis told elsewhere.—Editor.) I kindly ask all the readers of this paper to join me in prayer that Bro. Trogdon may get well and have better health than before; for we are in great need of such a good man as he is all over our country, and his kind family need his assistance. They all have my heart-felt symuathy and kindest wishes. It seems hard to us, but we can't understand why such good people as he have to suffer so much, but we all have to do our suffering on earth, but that happy thought comes to us—no more suffering over yonder. May God help us to keep that aim in view.

I send best wishes to the Herald, for I do love to read its pages so well. It gives me consolation to read after so many good people, and there are a goodly number that I am acquinted with and it is like a letter from home to read of them and learn how they are getting along. I do enjoy it so much. I would be glad if all the church members would take the church paper. It is good reading matter for any one. Wishing much success to the Herald and its many readers, I close.

Minnie Hill.

—Rev. W. C. Lassiter came into our office for a minute as he was passing thru to-day. He seemed in good spirits, but says this has been the muddiest season for a long time. This has cut down church attendance in the country.

—Bro. J. W. Boyles, of Thomasville, is here on business to-day.

—Bro. T. R. Greeson favored us with a call today.

—Bro. S. A. Alexander is here to-day attending the Guilford County Sunday School Convention. He has long been a faithful and valuable worker in the Sunday-school at Mt. Pleasant M. P. Church.

ORPHANS' HOME.

Sunshine brings good cheer to all hearts, but it seems of all places where it is most needed and most welcome it is the Orphans' Home. Yet if we never had any clouds we could never fully appreciate sunshine. If it were all sunshine we would soon have a desert. During the winter we have all been shut in and inactive, more or less, but now we all want to follow the example set us by nature. Wake up—This especially to the Sunday schools. You will see by our reports that some of the schools have stood by us all the winter while others seem to have gone in to winter-quarters; but let me remind you that we are not hibernating animals at Our Home. We live by the same means when it snows as when the sun shines, and we need your support, your prayers. We thank all who have aided us in any way, and pray that God may abundantly bless you. Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Union Chapel S. S., Granville Ct.,	$3.58
Asheville S. S.,	1.00
Pensacola S. S.	2.25
Mt. Lebanon S. S., Rand. Ct.,	2.67
Giles Chapel S. S. Richland Ct.	3.60
Henderson S. S.,	5.38
Whitakers S. S.,	3.00
Winston S. S.,	3.75
Tabernacle S. S.,	.77
Rose Hill S. S., Monroe Ct.,	3.45
Julian Ladies' Aid	10.00
Mrs. Jesse Morris	.25
Miss Jennie Pickens	3.00
Total	$42.70

Birthday.

On March 23 a few invited guests spent a very happy afternoon in the pretty country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hunter of Tobaccoville, N. C., it being the anniversary of Mrs. Hunter's birthday. The dining table was lovely, decorated in native ferns and Easter lilies. In the center, a large snow-white cake, fringed with ferns, on top in pretty chocolate brown were the figures 1885 and 1912 neatly arranged, and from the center of this cake a pretty bouquet of ferns and narcissus held in position by a pretty glass, nodded and smiled back at the happy faces seated round the festal board. Fruits and candies, also pickles and jellies, were tastefully arranged, adding their beauty to the table. Such an array of good things to eat was passed around, from boiled ham, roast hen, dressing, slaw, pickles, and pies that just melted in your mouth, and five varieties of large cakes that were delicious. Peaches and whipped cream, tarts, and other dainties. In the parlor we were treated to some splendid instrumental music on piano, violin, and guitar. Mrs. Hunter received a lovely set of dinner plates, cake plate, pair of towels and some money, and perhaps other presents. The occasion was a pleasure never to be forgotten. Although the rain came down in torrents it did not dampen the cheerful spirits nor dull the appetites of the company.

The Sunday school at Pleasant Hill on Forsyth Ct. will hold an Easter service on Sunday night. Prof. C. F. Hauser is the new superintendent, and we are looking for him to introduce some new attractions this year and put so much vim and snap into the school that it will be recorded in history as the best ever conducted at Pleasant Hill.

Mrs. R. P. Petree.

DIED.

Mr. A. N. Routh and Mrs. Mary M. Routh had a long and prosperous journey through life, but the death angel came on March 10, 1912, and called for Sister Routh, thus making a separation in this life. God had blessed their home with eleven children, three of whom had preceded her to the glory world. The remaining eight, five boys and three girls, were with her when she passed away.

Sister Routh was 66 years, 2 mos. and 12 days old and had 25 grand-children.

She professed faith in Christ about 23 years ago. Her many friends say that she made a very bright profession and was so happy, and lived a consistent life from that time until death. The writer was present when she died and he can say that he had never before seen any one die so sweetly. She seemingly went to sleep and too with a pleasing countenance just as though she were having pleasant dreams. A few hours before, she was singing what was understood by her daughter to be the old familiar hymn, "I want to go there too," and then exclaimed, "Oh, beautiful home!" Jesus was with her and gave her rich experience of His love. She said often it was so beautiful where she was going. She loved to go to church so well and while she was sick she spoke of her former pastors, Bros. Millaway and Plyler. Bro. Plyler had already gone to the glory land but she did not know it.

She will be missed much in her home and by many of her friends. We laid her body to rest in the burying ground at Bethany, March 12th. It was raining and roads were almost impassable, but many people attended the funeral services. Her life was a beautiful life. And, dear bereaved ones, her God made her life so. Make her God your God.

J. B. O'Briant.

March 25, 1912.

William H. Jones.

William Henry Jones, the subject of this sketch, was born in South Carolina Oct. 2, 1856, and while quite young his parents moved back to Davie Co., N. C., and settled near Dulins church where he spent nearly all his life. He was converted when about 18 years of age at Dulins M. P. Church on Mocksville circuit and afterwards identified himself with that church and was a faithful member until death, which took place at his home Jan. 26, 1912, aged 55 years, 3 mos. and 24 days. He was married to Celia T. Howard about 31 years ago, who survives him, also one son and two daughters, to mourn his departure. Bro. Jones was one of the most useful and influential members of Dulins church, having held the offices of class leader and Sunday school superintendent for many years. He was faithful in the performance of his Christian duties, always attending church and quarterly meetings when he could. The family altar was erected in his home many years ago, and he continued to hold family worship until sickness compelled him to discontinue at the last. He will be very much missed in the home and in the church, and we know not who will take his place in the church. He always responded when called upon to lead the congregation in prayer. He had the confidence of his neighbors that he was a good man and a Christian at heart, as well as by profession. D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Mocksville, N. C.

Loco Ulysses Bingham was born Nov. 6, 1881, and departed this life Feb. 12, 1912. He was married to Miss Biner Wright Aug. 4, 1904. To this union were born five children, three of whom are living. The departed one leaves a wife and three dear little boys, a father, mother, and five brothers, four sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their great loss.

The wife has lost a kind and true husband, the little boys have lost their dear papa who loved them so well. The love and kindness with which he treated them was reflected in the little lives because wherever papa went they wanted to go too. He was held by his neighbors as a kind man. He always loved to help others along. He professed faith in Christ and joined this church when just a boy.

[redacted] been coming frequently, when one day she confided to Miss Neely that she was very lonely. She was a daughter of a doctor, well cared for, greatly loved in her home, and had, it seemed, everything heart could wish.

"Why are you lonely?" asked Miss Neely. "You have good, kind parents, and brothers and sisters to love you. Your father has given you a fine education, and he tries to satisfy every wish of yours. Why, do you think, are you lonely?"

"I don't know," the girl replied, "but I am. I never feel interested in doing any work or anything." Miss Neely herself had noted her listlessness.

Through this little confidence, Miss Neely found opportunity to point out to this lonely, unhappy girl how her trouble was in seeking satisfaction merely in externals, while what her heart craved was the love and companionship of Christ.

Another girl, also of the higher class in Japan, had been attending the mission school for several years, when Miss Neely was sent to work in another place. Sometime after she left, she received a letter from this girl begging for permission to come and live with her.

"O Miss Neely," she wrote, "I will gladly be your servant, do anything for you, if you will only let me come to you, and be free from the restraints of my home. My father is old timey, and not willing for me to go to the university, although that is one of the great ambitions of my life. I long to be a Christian, and be baptized; but he thinks it improper for a woman of my class to appear in so public an assembly as the church meetings, and will not allow me to go. I am so miserable here, do write me to come to you, where I can be free and happy."

Notwithstanding her sympathy for the girl, Miss Neely felt she must reply in a way somewhat like this:

"Even if it were possible, I could not write you to come; for one of the first commands of the Bible is, 'Children, obey your parents.' You know a good deal of what the Christian religion means; live it as best you can at home, asking God for strength and guidance, and, if you are sincere in your desires, God will some day open the way for them to be realized."

For two or three years, Miss Neely heard no more from her; but one day a letter came. She was so happy, she wrote. She had married a Christian; and, though her father had arranged the marriage for her, as the man was of good family and satisfactory in other ways, there had been no objection to his Christian views. Now she was a Christian herself, and had been baptized; and, as her husband believed in higher education for women, he had made it possible for her to go to the university.

The third and last case Miss Neely mentioned, was of a mother with five children. She had no servant, and was kept very busy with home duties. Her husband was a good sort of man, but not far above the average. She lived near the mission school, and her children often went there. As they kept telling her about what they learned, and asking her why she did not go as the other children's mothers did, she finally went to the school, and expressed her wish to be a Christian.

"It will take you a long time to do the necessary studying before you can be baptized," said Miss Neely, testing her sincerity. "As you know very little about reading, there will be much memory wor for you; and you are a busy woman."

"Yes, I am busy," she replied, "but I want to be a Christian."

For a whole year she attended the study class weekly, the church services, and all the special meetings for women.

"How do you manage to take so much time from your home work?" was asked her. "Don't you find it very inconvenient?"

"O no," she said, "I have more time than I had before. It just requires a little consideration, a little planning ahead; but that in itself helps me to do my work more readily, and gives me more time."

On Christmas day she was baptized; and Miss Neely invited her and several Bible women to have Christmas dinner with her. All day the new convert stayed with her friends, and was very happy. Toward evening, some one asked: "What has become of the children to-day?"

"Why, my husband said he would stay with them," she answered, with beaming face, "and do all that needed to be done. He said he wanted me to have to-day free."

Women and children enlightened and homes made happy! Even if these were the only results, how much of our time, energy, and money do we consider it worth?

(Miss) Margaret E. Brickhouse.

Norfolk, Va.

IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE

It is not yet too late to send in your Easter Service Order. we are receiving orders by telegraph, by special delivery letter, and by ordinary mail, and are shipping the orders as received.

The music is catchy, easy to learn, and inspiring. we are having words of commendation from every section of the church. Many have said "It is the best yet. The special Home Mission features seem to have struck a popular chord. Eleven pages of music, and five pages of literary material in "The Triumphant Life;" almost as much in "The Easter Message." Many schools which held no service last year are ordering the latter service. Take your choice. Both are here subject to your order, and will be shipped to you for the asking.

Your school needs the inspiration of the Easter service. Our Board needs the money which your school and church will be blessed in giving. It is not too late. Send the order to

Charles H. Beck, Secretary-Treasurer
West, Lafayette, Ohio.

It is an instinct, primeval it may be, to run from trouble.—Thompson.

ANOTHER ARITHMETICAL "NUT".

A hungry traveler in Africa came across three simple-minded saveges as they were about to sit down for their noon-day meal. He asked and received permission to share it with them, promising to pay them handsomely for the food.

Savage No. 1 contributed 6 cocoanuts to the meal; savage No. 2 contributed 10, while savage No. 3, a large man who was very hungry, added 14 to the pile, making 30 cocoanuts in all for the four men—three savages and the traveler.

The cocoanuts were shelled, and the savage hosts being courteous, each ate only his fair and equal share—the traveler, though still hungry, thus eating only his equal share. Rising after the meal and thanking his hosts, he handed them 30 coins to be divided among them as payment.

Immediately there arose a terrible wrangle as to the division of the money. The first savage who had contributed but 6 cocoanuts insisted on the coins being divided in three equal parts, because three people had supplied a meal for which the fourth paid—therefore an equal division in thirds, he contended, was the only logical one. The second savage said that as the first savage had eaten more than he had contributed, he had no share in the spoils at all, and that the third savage and he, the second, should divide the spoils equally between them, as they alone had given the traveler his meal.

The third man, who had contributed 14, said that the proper principle was obvious: As each had contributed cocoanuts to a total of 30, and that as there were 30 coins, each should receive a coin for each cocoanut contributed.

No decision being reached, they agreed to leave it to the stranger and abide by his decision, which he guaranteed to be a just one. And on his announcing it, so simple was his reasoning that all agreed, though none got what he had asked for.

What was the just decision?

This apparently simple problem was answered by the stranger in this way: The first savage was to receive nothing at all, the second savage 7 coins, and the third savage 23 coins. Immediately three swords were raised, two to run him through, and one to defend him. But there was no fight. His logic won him his life. He said:

"There were thirty nuts, of which four people ate equal shares, or 7 and 1-2 nuts(which is one fourth of 30. No.1 contributed 6 nuts or 24 fourths. yet he ate 30 fourths, thus going in debt 6 fourths. No. 2 contributed 10 nuts, or 40 fourths, ate 30 fourths, and thus contributed 10 fourths to the supply from which I ate. No. 3 contributed 14 nuts,

---

To apprehend contempt is to have deserved it already.—Pierre Loti.

Good maxims are germs of all good; finely impressed on the memory they nourish the will.—Anon.

A prosperous fool is a grievous burden. —Aeschylus.

Moderation is the noblest gift of heaven.—Euripides.

Let thy speech be better than thy silence, else keep silent.—Dionysius the Elder.

Every man has three masks, the first he puts on to face the world, the second he wears for his friends, and the third for himself.—Thompson.

Fate has mysterious signs that forewarn each mortal of some good or evil.—Elshemus.

Forest Preservation.

A decided awakening of public opinoin was manifested by the large attendance of interested delegates at the second annual Convention of the North Caorlina Forestry Association which was held in Raleigh N. C., on February 21. This Association, which was organized a year ago, with the object of promoting "the protection of the forests of North Carolina from fire and from destructive insects, and promoting their perpetuation by wise use and by the reforestation of cutover and abandoned lands," has' by the appointment of vice-presdents in nearly every senatorial district of the State, laid a foundation for forestry activity which has already brought far-reaching results. Delegates to this convention represented all classes of the population interested in the use of the forest, as well as in their æsthetic and general value as a State resource. The representation was composed largely of lumbermen, furniture manufacturers and others manufacturing wood products, educators, farmers and scientists, as well as an interested delagation from several women's clubs of the State.

The following resolutions which were passed embody the sentiments of the association and pretty well cover the subjects discussed at the two meetings:

Resolution No. 1.

Whereas The North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey has been commissioned by the Legislature to make investigations and recommend plans to the people and the Legislature for the improvement of the forest conditions of the State; and,

Whereas, The Survey has done and is doing as much as is possible in this way with the limited amount of money at its disposal: be it

Resolved, That the North Carolina Forestry Association do endorse the work of the survey, and do hereby show its appreciation of the assistance the Survey has given to this Association; and

Resolved further, that we hereby memorialize the next Legislature to liberally support this branch of the work of the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey.

Resolution No.2.

Whereas, The Weeks act provides an appropriation of $200,000, available till exhausted, to enable the United Statee Government to cooperate with States in protecting from fire the forested watersheds of navigable streams; and,

Whereas, No State can take advantageof this offer of cooperation unless it has some paid system of forest fire protection: therefore, be it

Resolved, That the North Carolina Forestry association urges upon the people of the State and upon their representatives to the General Assembly who are to be elected during the coming summer the necessity of North Carolina's passing legislation which will enable her to receive this assistance from the Federal Government for protection of her forests.

Resolution No. 3.

Whereas, We realize that a better understanding of the value of our forests and the need for more conservative methods in handling them has got to begin with the younger generation: therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby advocate the introduction into our schools and colleges of elementary courses in forestry, which will give the children of the State a better appreciation of the worth of these most valuable natural resources;.

Resolution No. 6.

Whereas, The indiscriminate ranging of stock through the open lands of both Eastern and Western North Carolina is a menace to the perpetuation of the forests of these regions through the destruction of the seed and young growth by stock, and because many of the forest fires indirectly result from this ranging: be it

Resolved, That the North Carolina Forestry Association heartily favors the extension of the stock law of those parts of the State which are now without this advantage

Resolution No.7.

Whereas, numerous fires are caused by sparks form locomotives; be it

Resolve,d That the Legislation Committee be instructed to prepare a bill to be presented to the next General Assembly, requiring railroads to place spark arresters on all locomotives within one year after such act is passed; and,

Resolved further, That this Association request all civic clubs and similar associations to hold meetings with this object in view and endeavor to pledge their member of the General Assembly to support such bill when introduced.

Resolution No. 8.

Whereas the pine timber in many of the counties of the State has suffered enormous injury from the attacks of the Southern Pine Beetle, to the serious loss of the farmers and other timber land owners of the State and,

Whereas, The United States Bureau of Entomology has studied this question thoroughly and worked out a method of control, which, if carried out, would free our State from this pest, and has advocated this plan both in the press and in public meetings in thi Sstate: be it

Resolved, That the North Carolina Forestry Association recognizes with appreciation the efforts of this Bureau to suppress this pest in North Caroilna; and,

Resolved further, That this Association pledge its support to the further efforts of the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey which is cooperating with this Bureau in this work; and,

Resolved further, That the question of more efficient cooperation through the Survey be brought to the attention of the next General Assembly, with the hope that an appropriation will be made to carry on this work more generally than they can now do.

In addition to these resolutions the Association asked for the appointment of a Legislation Committee, whis is to draw up a forestry bill for the consideration of the next Legslature. This committee will represent all phases of the forestry movement, and a bill endorsed by it and subsequently by the whole association, should stand a good chance of becoming law.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mr. E. B. Wright, President of the Butters Lumber Company, of Boardman, N. C. and Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. S. Holmes, Forester of the State Geological and Economic Survey, Chapel Hill, N. C.

It was Thomas Perry who wrote: "Be true to your own Church. Yes, and stand by it, though the heavens fall. It is yours and should receive your best. Give it a hearty and loyal support by word and deed. Remember that it belongs to you; that it is part of your religious life; that in it and by it you are being trained for usefulness here and immortality hereafter; that its honor is much in your keeping; that its growth and purtiy are affected to the extent of your influence by what you say and do; that the people who have faith in your word will look upon it largely according to your repersentation, and that with its good name and prosperty is bound up the glory of the blessed Jesus. Then do nothing to injure its reputation or to weaken its power for good or mar its fellowship.—Selected —The textile strike at Lawrence, Mass., which has been on for ten weeks, was declared off last Sunday, the leaders declaring their object obtained, the increase of wages and the shortening of the work day. It is announced that cotton goods have been advanced in prices and that consumers will have to pay the cost of the strike and the increase in wages.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

BETTER CLASSIFICATION.

By Mrs. J. J. Lincoln.

Classification of Sunday-school scholars is largely regulated by the kind of lessons in use. The more distinctly graded the lessons the better the classification. It might be said that the mixed condition of present-day elementary classes is the outcome of the Uniform Lesson System, since the only idea the system presents is uniformity of text. Or, to modify that statement, if the system is not responsible for the condition, it at least does nothing and can do nothing to correct it. When we come to have some system of lessons adaptable to the several stages of childhood, better classification will follow. Ideal grading is beyond us, 'a right far piece,' as we have heard some North Carolinians say. Ideal grading finds no place in the school that lacks thorough equipment and perfectly trained and informed teachers. Are our schools then, as a whole, even in sight of this much to be coveted position and possession? We think not. But because we cannot attain to lofty heights and ideal conditions in a day or a year, shall we be content not to be reaching out after them?

We disire not to be understood as deprecating the value of Uniform Lessons for higher classes. The fact is, we are not talking about higher classes. They are well provided for, and we certainly have nothing to suggest or offer for their betterment, since, in our opinion, nothing else could so well fill the the need of these classes as the lessons now in use. But Uniform Lessons are NOT the best lessons for elementary scholars. Why? One reason, not the only one, but the only one to be considered here, is because they do not classify. Is classification so important that special lessons must be provided to effect it? Yes, if it can be effected more naturally and more easily in that way; besides, by such arrangement two very desirable ends are reached by a single effort. This view is stated here because we well know that the assertion that better classification is needed, without the suggestion of some practical way to aequre it, would be almost worthless. Grading is a word that some of our schools do not like to hear, and in many instances it can be wisely attempted only through indirect means. Classification is a more acceptable term, meaning the same thing, and if it can be secured through the introduction of a type of lessons at once basic and essential, in a quiet, unobtrusive way, without even disclosing the effort to accomplish it, so much the better for those schools that think they do not want a better classification and think so merely because they do not understand its value and importance. An approach of this kind would likely overcome the most pronounced opposition against any change or re-arrangement of classes that have become fixed and set.

The kind and character of the lessons taught in our Sunday schools and the consecration and qualification of teachers are among first considerations; but not less important than either of these is the fact that no lesson can be successfully presented by any teacher to a class of children whose intellectual powers are widely different.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, APRIL 7.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"The Kind of Life We Shall Wish We had Lived." Luke 16: 19-31.

(Easter Lesson.)

How few men there are who can truly say when they come down to the evening of life that there is nothing in their lives they regret or can truthfully assert that nothing in their past would they have different. The regrets of men do not consist so much in what they have done as what they have neglected to do. I believe that in the great day of judgment more men will be condemned for sins of omission than for great wrongs committed. The greatest single trouble with the church and its members is their failure to rise to the opportunity that is theirs and go out and reach other men and women. There may be a star or two in our crown but how small and mean we shall feel in judgment when we see the settings for other stars which we might have filled but failed to do so.

At this glad Eastertide shall we not plan for more definite and aggressive service in the Master's cause? This is the only safe course. If one keeps busy in the church and stays away from evil influences, temptations lose their influence over him and he avoids even the appearance of evil. When we come to see our lives in retrospection we shall not be satisfied to find that we merely have lived clean lives and committed no grievous sins; if there are not lives we have made happier and souls we have turned toward the light our lives shall be a failure. Negative Christianity is nothing—the Bible says, "Cease to do evil;" but in the same sentence it says, "Learn to do well." One is as necessary to the fullest life as the other. Christianity consists in abstinence and not yielding to temptation and, secondly, in service. "Faith without works is dead." "By their fruits ye shall know them." The fig tree that cumbered the ground had done nothing wrong but Christ cursed it and took away the life that had been given it. Oh, how our world and our church books are cumbered with folks and names. How long we sometimes wonder will it be before men and women will awake to the opportunity and duty. How long before we shall realize that service is not avoiding evil simply but it is doing good to others.

The rich man is not condemned because he is rich. Abraham was probably richer than he. He is condemned because, being rich, he allowed abject poverty and suffering to lie festering at his gate unhelped and uncomforted. His sin lay in doing nothing when he had the power and opportunity to do something. He shut up his bowels of compassion against the misery of his fellow man, and what he failed to do angels did for Lazarus.

This lesson is forced upon us to-day with terrific meaning in view of the poverty, wretchedness, disease, and death dealt out in the industrial world to multitudes of Lazarus's brothers. What are we doing to help them?

The kind of life that we should lead will be modeled on lines laid down by Jesus in His life of service. We should seek to bring sunshine into cheerless days, to alleviate suffering, to visit the sick and feed the hungry, and—more far-reaching than all—to work with all good men for reforms that will drive poverty from the face of the earth and bring in the kingdom of righteousness.

Illustrations.

You will never be sorry for living a white life; for doing your level best; for being kind to the poor; for hearing before judging; for stopping your ears to gossip; for bridling a slanderous tongue; for being square in business deals; for the dollars you have given to missions.—Epworth Herald.

Something is wrong when we have done that through the day which we are ashamed to tell Christ about when we come home in the evening and bow at His feet, or when we have said that which we are not willing to repeat to Him in our prayers when we come to talk face to face with Him.—J. R. Miller.

We shall wish that we had made better use of our talents and opportunities; that we had been kinder, more sympathetic, more unselfish; that we had never harbored envy, suspicion, jealousy, hatred; that we had brought comfort to stricken hearts, bread to the hungry, clothing to the naked, help to the sinful; and that we had lived a pure, Christian life, filled with loving service.

Lyman Abbott, I believe, gives us the

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:25 p. m., No. 42 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Carr, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

Guaranteed to Please
SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION
1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00
Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1895 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

following story: "Scepticism, Dogmatism, Emotionalism, and Practice were talking together in a comfortable parlor when the door suddenly opened. A man drenched to the skin, staggered in, telling of a shipwreck close at hand. Scepticism questioned him, then ridiculed the idea of a wreck. Dogmatism told the frantic man to sit down quietly and consider the matter. Some scheme could be devised to save the perishing sailors. Emotionalish rushed about, tearing his hair and weeping. Practice meanwhile quietly slipped on his wraps and, taking ropes and life-preservers, hurried to the rescue. Shall we not all wish we had lived the practical life?

Daily Readings.

M. Balaam's wish. Num. 23: 10.
T. The life to live. Tit. 2: 11-15.
W. A well-built life. Prov. 4: 20-27.
T. The friendly life. Prov. 17: 17.
F. The helpful life. 1 Cor. 10: 32, 33.
S. The victorious life. Rev. 2: 7, 11, 17.

D. L. Moody went to England in 1872, and was determined, his son says, not to get into work, if he could help it. But at the close of a service in the Old Bailey prayer meeting, the Rev. Mr. Lessey, pastor of the church in the North of London, asked him to preach the next Sunday. He consented, and preached twice. At the close of the evening service he asked those who would like to become Christians to rise. The whole congregation seemed to rise. Mr. Moody was staggered, and thought he was not understood. The pastor of the church could afford no explanation for never before had he seen it on this wise. Then Mr. Moody invited all who wanted to become Christians to step into the inquiry room. The people went in, and crowded the room, so that extra chairs had to be taken in to seat them. Neither Moody nor the pastor had expected such a blessing. "They had not realized that God can save by hundreds and thousands as well as by ones and twos." Meetings were held for ten days and four hundred persons were received into the membership of that church.

Later the secret of this phenomenal success was discovered. There was a woman belonging to that church who was bed-ridden; but she had been earnestly praying that God would revive her church. When her sister told her, at the close of the morning service, the sick woman said: "I know what that means; God has answered my prayers!" Great was her faith, and many were blessed. Truly, in ways unnumbered and in such a manner as He sees best God answers prayers.—Selected.

MEASLES.

A Disease More Serious and Dangerous Than Smallpox and Harder to Prevent.

Measles is the most contagious eruptive disease of childhood. About 98 out of 100 people who have not already had the disease are susceptible to it. Measles is to be dreaded far more than smallpox. Smallpox can be absolutely prevented by vaccination. A vaccinated person may sleep with a smallpox patient in safety—not so with measles. There is no similar, simple, safe and certain preventive for this disease. If there were, all intelligent citizens would protect themselves, and then those contracting measles would no more deserve our sympathy than the man who now contracts smallpox.

Eleven times as many people in North Carolina die from measles as from smallpox. About 900 North Carolinians are seriously injured for life by the disease every year. Some of the more common resulting disease and ailments are abscesses in the ear, catarrh of the head or intestines, paralysis and broncho-pneumonia. Consumption itself frequently follows a case of measles. These are only a few of the facts which go to prove measles a dangerous disease. It should be feared and not trifled with. Everything possible should be done to prevent having it.

It is absolutely wrong to think that everybody must at some time have measles. People used to think that everybody should have scarlet fever. Now we have learned by experience and have stopped this wicked and foolish practice. It will be only a short time until we realize that careless exposure of one's children to measles is equally pernicious.

Measles is supposed to be caused by a minute animal (protozoan) which always comes from some other human being in whom it is growing. These germs are probably discharged into the air in the form of a fine spray or mist when the person having measles coughs or sneezes. These tiny droplets are then breathed in, or come into contact with other people by means of food, clothing and dust.

How to Prevent Measles.

Whenever a case of measles is discovered it is the legal duty of the doctor, if one is in charge—otherwise it is the duty of the householder—to immediately report the same to the nearest health officer or quarantine officer. This officer will then post a notice on the house in order to inform those who have not had the disease in regard to its presence. This officer will also give instructions to prevent the disease from spreading. The patient should be placed in a room by-mainder of the household. This room should first be cleared of carpets, curtains, clothing, etc., that might possibly carry infection.

Keep the sick room darkened, but always admit abundance of fresh air. The patient should be kept in bed for a few days after the fever goes down. The body should be oiled every morning and sponged in the afternoon. Carefully avoid colds and their resulting complications. No child disease should be more closely watched by the doctor and mother than measles in the "getting-well" stage.—N. C. State Board of Health.

—A recent survey of Boston revealed the fact that this "Hub" of intellectual and moral strength about which the rest of us are supposed to revolve has 324 churches and 671 saloons.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

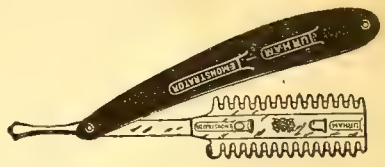
TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th, or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1912. NUMBER 19.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

SLANDERING A MINISTER.

We are in receipt of a letter telling of a minister whose feelings have been hurt and whose reputation has been injured by thoughtless and evil tongues. This is a grievous thing. Slander is criminal in any case, but it is worse in the case of the minister of the Gospel, because he is engaged in the Lord's work in a way depending for its success largely upon his good name. To cast suspicion upon his character is to lessen his influence for good, and hinder the Lord's work. It is therefore a crime not only against the minister, but also against God. The Lord says: "Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm." It is an atrocious crime to slander a minister of the Gospel.

—Bro. Bethea had a fine time in Westminster during the symposium. "Everything was at a high pitch," he says.

—The Convention of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Greensboro is April 14-16. A great time is expected.

—We ask our contributors not to paste or pin their sheets of paper together. Simply number the pages.

—Dr. J. R. Bridges is editor of the Presbyterian Standard in place of Dr. Law, deceased.

—Bro. T. A. Hunter is among those selected to represent Greensboro in the New York Convention of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews is to be one of the judges in the declaimers' contest at Elon College Friday evening.

—Such a scramble for the presidency makes one feel that it would be a fitting rebuke if all scrambling candidates were turned down, and some man of modest dignity found for the place.

—Mrs. J. A. Hanner and daughter, of Randleman, in our city on business last Saturday, gave the Herald office a brief call. Mrs. Hanner spoke highly of the work of Bro. O'Briant, our new preacher with the Irish name.

—The Greensboro Daily News will issue a Monday edition from this on. This pleases many, but how about violating the fourth commandment? Has any part of the Decalogue ever been suspended for printers or newspaper men?

—The ladies might have known this would come, when they began to wear big hats: a movement against their wearing any hats at all in church. This movement has already begun. Well, men take off their hats in church, and why shouldn't women do likewise?

—This is a week of prayer in our city. Men are praying for "Christian and nominally Christian men," for "unsaved men" of their acquaintance, for "the convention April 14-16," for "boys," for "the colored race," for the "New York Conservation Congress," "that the fruit of the Convention may abide." After the Convention of April 14-16 is over, the work will be committed to a "Conservation Committee" made up of men from all the churches. The movement aims to forward Bible study, social service, boys' work, evangelism, missions.

TO THE AUXILIARIES.

Dear Fellow-workers:

The Annual Branch Meeting of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held in Winston, April 17-19. We want your auxiliary to be represented in this meeting. Your president and secretary are your regular delagates. If for any reason these cannot come, please do send some one in their place. We need you to help do the work. Please be prompt in sending a report of your year's work to Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, that she may make a full report to the meeting of what North Carolina has done this year. Be sure to send a copy of this report with your delegate to Winston for her to read when your anxiliary is called. Be prompt also to send all the money you have in hand and a report of it to Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro, so that she may be able to tell us just what we have done financially this year. The above are three important things for your auxiliary to do right now. We want the Winston meeting to be the climax of all our Branch Meetings so far. Miss Forrest will be with us to give her report of churches visited, money collected and tell in her graphic way the story of our work in foreign field.

Sincerely for a good meeting,

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

NOTICE, MISSIONARY WORKERS! ANNUAL BRANCH MEETING OF FOREIGN AND HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETIES IN WINSTON, APR. 17-19, INCLUSIVE.

All ladies who are planning to attend either or both meetings should write Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Winston, at once and let her know when to expect them. The morning train from Greensboro arrives in Winston at 9.20 in time for the first meeting of foreign missionary society. The program of the foreign meeting begins at 10:30 on morning of 17th, and goes through Thursday, 18th, until the evening at which time the home mission meeting begins with an address on work at Orphans' Home by Miss Etta Auman, Matron. Friday, 19th, will be given over to business sessions of the Home Mission Society.

These meetings are important and should be well attended. The Winston people have extended a cordial invitation and are looking forward to meeting. Let us pray that God's hand may lead in the business of the meeting.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer.

Asheboro, N. C., Apr. 3, 1912.

"ALIVE UNTO GOD."

Rev. J. H. Jowett, M. A., D. D.

(An Easter Sermon.)

"Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead unto sin, but alive unto God in Christ Jesus." Rom. vi. II, R. V.

Surely this text unfolds to us the true significance of Easter-tide. The word is addressed to Christian believers, the believers in the Lord of the Eastern morning, who had emerged triumphantly from the grave. The letter is written to "all that are in Rome," living in that proud, materialized, petrified world; dwelling in that home of carnal power, carnal pomp, and carnal lust, moving amid wealth, and gaiety, and luxury, and cruelty, and death. This little church is set in the midst of that vicious city. And the majority of the members of the little church are probably slaves! Imagine New York denuded of every Chistian sanctuary; the name of Jesus unknown; the name scarcely registered in the criminal roll of the empire. And imagine that same New York drunk with lust of power, and rotting in luxury, enfeebled and broken by the pride and revel of the garish day. And further, imagine in New York a little handful of believers, many of them the poorest laborers, the drudges of the metropolis, meeting together as the disciples of One Who has just met His death upon the gallows. There you have it! "To all that are in Rome." To such as these were the words addressed. The letter taught how, in that seething, immoral, noisome city, it was possible to live a Chrstian life.

"Reckon ye.... yourselves ...." First of all, they were enjoined to regard themselves in a certain way. It is a very vital matter how we "reckon ourselves up." Our private thought about ourselves has very far-reaching issues. What am I? How do I reckon myself? That is a very crucial test. In my secret mind how do I regard myself? As what? As a muckrake? As a gourmand? As a sponge? As an animal? As a mere worm? Or as a man? It is not altogether a matter of indifference how other people reckon me up, but it is of infinitely greater moment how I reckon myself. And all this is as true of professed believers in Christ as it is of the man of the world. How do Christians reckon themselves up? When they stand before themselves and soberly salute themselves, what are they saluting? What is their highest thought about themselves? All this is very influential, because it is a law in life that our character never rises higher than our thought. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The thought that I make of myself is the thought that makes me, and therefore it is a good thing, nay, an imperative thing, to give consideration to our reckonngs. How then does the Apostle counsel us to reckon?

"Reckon ye .... yourselves to be .... alive unto God." Make that the beginning of all your thinking. Make it one of your basal assumptions. And how much that means! Let us get the trend and vigor of the phrase. If we say that a man is alive unto money, we mean that he has a keen eye for opportunity; that he scents the distant markets; that he is alive and active while others sleep. If we say that a man is alive unto beauty we mean that the glory of the world haunts him like a passion. John Ruskin would pause to contemplate the curve of the mud in the rutty road. These illustrations will help us to apprehend the strength of the Apostle's phrase. We are to be "alive unto God." We are to assume that we have possibilities in that direction, sensitiveness toward the holiest, correspondence with the highest. We are to reckon that we are akin unto God. It may be that we are only infantile, but we are alive and akin. A little babe, however imperceptive, is alive to its mother, and is one with the mother in common nature and in the possibility of wondrous correspondence.

Now, to be "alive unto God" implies certain things.

1. First of all, it implies the possession of royal blood. We are kinsmen of the eternal God. Let a Christian affirm this to himself; let him affirm it every day. "Nerve thyself with affirmatives." When we see a flower let us confidently say, "My Father's work." When we see a sunset, let us make the same inspiring declaration. When we mark the growing drift of the generation, let us say, "My Father worketh hitherto." Let us make this a more frequent and outspoken note in our lives. We are of royal blood, and this is all our Father's work. We are princes and princesses in a royal house.

2. And, in the second place, it implies the possession of a royal franchise, "the glorious liberty of the children of God." We are not limited in our movements like visitors to Windsor Castle. We have the freedom of sons of the house. The Apostle Paul gloried in this freedom, and we know what it meant to him. It meant the substitution of great principles for trifling rules. It meant the domination of the spirit instead of the letter. It meant the sovereignty of grace rather than of works. It meant the atmosphere of love instead of fear. Some time ago I saw a number of convicts tilling a field on Dartmoor. A little distance away I saw a farmer's sons at work in their father's field. The contrast was most striking. One set toiled in servitude, the other with the liberty of children. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

3. And, thirdly, it implies royal inheritance. There are "such things to be!" Our inheritance reaches out into inconceivable fields. There will be a boundless enrichment of affection. There will be ever more glorious revelation of truth. There will be deepening appriciation of beauty. There will be enlargement of communion with my fellowmen. All this lies before me if I am "alive unto God." "Reckon ye .... yourselves to be .... alive" Assume yourselves to be proud of royal blood, endowed with royal franchise, and destined t a glorious inheritance.

"And reckon ye .... yourselves to be .... dead unto sin." Here is another part of our reckoning. Let us again see the force of the phrase. Here is a man of proud, aristocratic air, stalking through a company of yokels on the village green. He moves as though he were dead to men and they were dead to him. It is not a pleasant illustration, but it conveys a suggestion that may help out our purpose here. Christians are to move through the world of sin as though they had no relationship to it. If that world of sin rings up their souls, they are to be as though they were dead. Do not answer. Assume it to be a realm of barrenness and deadliness with which you have no connection. Reckon that! Think that! Say that! Say it to yourself! Say, "I have no connection with that world; I am dead unto it." And the more we assume ourselves "alive unto God," the more we shall indeed be "dead unto sin." Life towards the one necessitates death towards the other.

There is an old legend of a subject consulting his monarch as to how he might escape the enticements of the world, and become dead unto them. The monarch ordered him to fill a goblet with wine, and to all it to the brim. He was then ordered to carry the goblet through the streets of the city. An executioner was appointed to attend him, with orders to remove his head if he spilled a single drop. He carried the goblet in safety. Nothing was spilt on the ground. "What did you see by the way?" asked the king when he came back. "Did you see the jugglers and gamblers in the market place?" The man replied that he had noticed none of them. His mind had been so absorbed in the immediate task that na thought trailed away to surrounding distraction. "So," said the monarch, "learn thy lesson. Become absorbed in God, and thou shalt be dead to the enticements of the world.—Record of Christian Work.

FOLLY TO NEGLECT RELIGION.

Do you not know that there is suffering in this world, even when the sufferer sometimes cannot determine the cause of it? Then why be such a fool as to teach that there may not be suffering in a future state, of which God warns you? God allows men to suffer here, a world into which they did not cry for entance. Then may He not allow them to suffer in the future, in a state of which he warns them?

Jesus speaks of a rich man, against whom no sin is implied except neglect of the finer sensibilities of the human nature: faring sumptuously every day, while a beggar lay at his door desiring to feed of the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table, but apparently getting his best earthly comfort from dogs that came and licked his sores.

The rich man seems to have neglected religion and its commandments.

He died and had a fine funeral.

But after his burial he found himself in torment, and in vain sued for relief from those whom he had neglected in this world. He even asked to have the beggar sent to his brethren, to save his family from his own dreadful fate.

How soon a man's fortune may be changed!

There is no encouragement given in the Bible to put off salvation. Only infidels, saloon-keepers, burglars, self-seekers, egotists, and their like encourage the young to postpone repentance till after death.

How anxious a wicked man may be for his family to be saved! but what a fool he is to imagine that some other plan than the one provided by God will reach the hearts of the impenitent!

The fool is forever planning some better way for God to run his Government; and he often dies in his folly.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

INDIVIDUAL WORK.

It appears to be true that there is too much of generalizing in Christian work. There may be a good deal of breadth in efforts to reach many people at a time with gospel influences. This is a commendable purpose; but the more essential thing is specificness in the work. A directness to individual cases. It is one thing to pray for the conversion of sinners in one's own community; it is another thing to pray especially for each person in the community, however far from God he may seem to be. In this work there is a centralization of power and effort. In praying one's whole heart is thrown in the direction of a single lost one, whose salvation is greatly desired by the praying one. Rev. Martin F. Lamb, in his booklet, entitled "Every Creature," says: "I shall never forget how a pastor once singled out the three leading men of the place, all rough, swearing, ungodly men. He asked us all to pray for them; didn't mention their names—only said, 'those three men,' and kept on saying it at every meeting for prayer, until every member of the church become interested in those three men; and prayer ascended to God every day, and almost continually for over six weeks, until the trio were, one after the other, converted. My conviction is that no real, deep work of grace is possible that does not develop this element of individual work for individual souls." In the example given by Mr. Lamb, we see the results of specific work for a specific purpose. In this instance, there was a combination of individuals in pursuit of one particular object. It was not a spasmodic effort, but a perservering and concentrated work; and it seems that no personal appeal was made to any of those men. Such an example ought to stimulate any Christian reader to be more specific in his prayer, and more hopeful of seeing great results.

C. H. Wetherbe.

MANY INVENTIONS.

By Rev. S. B. Stephens, Pastor of Ivy Ct.

"God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions." Solomon was a wise man. There were in his day, and there are none now, possessed of greater wisdom than he had. Many since his day have outstripped Solomon in educational attainments; but none of these can give utterance to such weighty sayings as he did in his three thousand proverbs. Wherein lay the secret of Solomon's wisdom? The answer may be found in the third chapter of I Kings. He asked for wisdom and for an understanding heart, that he might be able to judge the people aright. Dear reader, how worthy of imitation is Solomon's example. Why do not all those who aspire to rulership over the nation go and do likewise? Would not Mr. —— do well to follow Solomon's example, before he asks the suffrage of our American people at the coming presidential election? Then would we not have a better government than could be hoped for through political legislation. God heard and answered Solomon's prayer fr wisdom. He did not (as many do today) sit down on the stool of do-nothing and idly wait for things to reveal themselves to him; but on the other hand we find him searching to find out wisdom and the reason of things. But the rulership of today will figure the prospect of re-election as second term, and by such election wisdom and inventions both man and party are driven to destruction. Perhaps Solomon's mind became confused with those discrepancies existing in the race to which he belonged; when he looked about him and beheld the inconsistencies and wickedness of the human family, he could not find at first thought how to reconcile such a state of things with the wisdom, justice and love of God, the Creator of all flesh. Like the wise man he was, he would not charge God with injustice, but would see if he could not by diligent search find a solution to the problem which was revolving in his mind. Now, I give for the result the Scripture quoted at the head of my article. Now, evidently the inventions that are above spoken of do not mean simply what is meant by the term as it is commonly used at the present time. Though mechanical inventions may have been included in the mind of Solomon. The term, many inventions, evidently has reference more especially to those subterfuges which sinful man has resorted to in order to gain favor of a sin-avenging God, and a home in heaven, without meeting the conditions upon which such inestimable blessings may be had. Man is said to be a kind of religious animal, and is therefore ever desirous of a place of happiness in the world to come. He does not like to think of a dwelling in everlasting punishment. In his more thoughtful moments he concludes that he will at last gain a heaven of rest. Man does not like the strait gate and narrow way to heaven. The way of the Cross is to crucify the old man of sin in him, this he does not like, so he goes about to invent some easier way. Strange as it may seem yet nevertheless it is true, that he takes the sayings of the inspired scriptures and so interprets them of himself so that every one of the thousand and one inventions which man has sought out whereby to gain heaven seems to have a way or foundation in the Book of books. Of course there is only one way marked out in God's holy Word, and that way is the way entered upon by every traveler to the celestial city, through the straight way of repentance and obedience to Christ. Reader, please let me call your attention to a few of man's inventions. First, Universalism, which as a doctrine (man's invention) declares that all men will be eternally saved in heaven just because Christ died for all; a man made invention, having no foundation in Scripture, and no doubt was suggested for the purpose of deceiving souls down to the regions of despair, as well as to undo, if possible, the work of redemption. The Scriptures nowhere give any ground for the belief, but on the other hand teach us quite plainly that many will say unto Christ himself: "Lord, Lord;" yet He will say unto them: "Depart from me, I never knew you." These Scriptures with many others that might be cited, prove conclusively that all men will not be saved, though Jesus died for all men.

Another invention (or doctrine) as taught by many that man will have a second probationary state wherein he may make preparation for heaven, (this being the doctrine the writer of this article was taught in his boyhood days in his native country, France) but is another damnable invention to damn man's soul, gotten up by fallen creatures, and for the purpose (no doubt) of giving them greater latitude in gratifying their evil natures, while yet in the first state of probationary existence. Perhaps a false charity may have had something to do with this invention. A friend dies unsaved, then it is hard to think of a loved one gone to dwell in eternal misery. Hence charity of human love invents a second probation which will give the departed another opportunity to become saved which he would be quite likely to improve after passing through the ordeal of death and the terrors of the same. Now, reader, let me ask you to look into the law and see what it saith. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do with thy might; for there is no work nor device, nor knowledge nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest," Eccl. 9: 10. And many of them that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. Marvel not at this for the hour is coming in which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth. They that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have evil unto the resurrection of damnation, John 5: 28-29.

Another invention of man and the devil, that man can be wholly sanctified in this life, that it becomes impossible for him to sin, or to do any act that would displease God, making equal with Jesus Christ while here on earth, is another dangerous invention gotten up by man. The men who teach such a doctrine are very dangerous men to have in your homes or to understand the combination on your iron safe.

Another invention man has sought out is there is no hell as declared in the Bible, into which sinners unrepented shall be lost. But as you no doubt read my article in the worthy Herald of February 15th, (Is There A Hell?) I will not repeat. But if man can persuade himself to believe that there is no place of eternal punishment, then he may glory in his wickedness and expect to enjoy bliss eternal in the world to come. But there is an awful place of punishment, declared by the Bible to be eternal in its duration and co-eternal with the glorious heaven to which all desire to go when they die. The Bible says the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God. Friends, if these things are not true, what are they in the Bible for? How many precious souls for whom Jesus died are rushing headlong into perdition while they through a belief in man's inventions vainly suppose there is no place of punishment.

Another invention of man, as taught by some, that there is no resurrection of the dead. This is certainly an invention of man's corrupt mind, devised for the purpose of justifying himself in doing wrong, vainly supposing that he would rather be annihilated than to cease to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. How vain are all such thoughts. All men shall live forever. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the sea gave up the dead which were in it Rev. 20: 12-13. If the Scriptures above cited do not prove that annihilationism and non-resurrectionism is a deceitful invention, then I for one fail to comprehend the teaching of the Holy Bible.

Another very deceiving invention (to some) which man has invented, and some believe is by simply joining some institution and believing and obeying certain teaching of man's own production, he will have a place in heaven. This may be plain, but I know what I speak, but understand me, please, for in this life we must be converted to and by Christ, for He is the only worshipful Master in the grand lodge on high, for He says, Verily I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God. And now, dear reader, as I see my article is now already very lengthy, I must forbear, and will conclude by saying that another one of man's inventions is that corrupt men expect a seat at God's right hand without repentance unto salvation and to escape the death of the wicked, simply by joining the church, paying the preacher, and abstaining from the grosser sins of the world. Many of them even neglect to observe the Sacrament of the Eucharist, for the result of so-doing see St. John 6: 53. I say such an invention is very destructive in its nature, and is being relied upon by multitudes of people whose religion does not amount to anything more than a mere sham. Such an invention certainly had its conception in the councils of the lost and is utterly ignored by the Word of God. Oh, generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." My friend, or brother, let me tell you in time, that trusting worldly inventions you will lose your soul. Except ye become converted and become as little children, (as pure as a child) ye shall not enter heaven, Matt. 18: 3. Now is it necessary for me to write any more, or go any further in the enumeration of man's inventions in things moral and spiritual, seeing their name may be called legion, for they are indeed as Solomon said legion, I will sum up the whole catalog in this sentence, and say everything which is either believed or practiced, and which is contrary to the faith and practice taught in the Scriptures is a fabrication and is man's invention. Sought out solely by man and satan and your obedience to it will lose your soul. Lord, deliver us from such inventions, is the prayer of the writer.

"THE MOSES OF THE GOTHS."

Before the Goths over-ran and conquered the Roman Empire, they themselves were conquered by Christianity. The conversion of the Goths was due principally to the labors of one man; of whom we know singularly little about his life in comparison with that which we know he accomplished. Of nearly all the great men of that period we have an abundance of legends and traditions, but not of Bishop Ulfilas.

Both the dates and places of his birth and death are in doubt and even his nationality is not certainly known. According to the best authorities, he was born about 311 and died about 381 of the Christian era. He is believed to have belonged to a family of Cappadocian Christians whom the Goths had carried away captive in a foreign land, among poor barbarian people. They had no literature, no written language, not even an alphabet. Could a boy receive any inspiration or find any encouragement under such circumstances and with such an environment? To the people around him the outside world was almost a sealed book. The Lord never permits his people to enter a place so dark that no ray of light can penetrate the darkness.

The first we know of Bishop Ulfilas, was that he accepted the religion of his parents. As he grew older, experienced more of the Christian religion, he became more impressed with its importanee and the need of the people around him of such a religion. He learned what little Gothic dialect he could command, learning somewhere and somehow, also Greek, Hebrew and Latin. Where he learned either of these is not known. He undertook to translate the Bible into the Gothic language, but before doing so he invented an alphabet of twenty-four letters, borrowing twenty letters from the Graeco-Roman alphabet and invented four to express sounds common to all the Teutonic peoples, but not contained either in the Greek or Roman alphabet. He introduced a written language for the first time among the Goths, translating the entire Bible into their new language, except Samuel and Kings, which he thoughtt were too war-like for the good of his fierce countrymen.

Constantine styled Bishop Ulfilas as "the Moses of the Goths" and perhaps it might be well for us to characterize them briefly by way of comparison. Moses was Israel's first great teacher. Unfilas the Goths'; Moses gave Israel her first written law from God, Ulfilas gave the Goths their first Bible; Moses plead before Pharoah for the deliverance of his people, Ulfilas plead before the Roman Emperors, Valeus and Constantius for his people's deliverance: Moses led the Children of Israel through the Red Sea, "to the promised land," Ulfilas led his Gothic people "through the deep waters of the Danube to the land of promise." On account of persecution, Ulfilas sought and obtained permission from Emperor Constantius to bring his converts across the Danube, which they did, and settled in Moesia, near Nicopolis, where they lived a peaceful pastoral life for thirty-three years, sending out their missionaries and Christianizing the neighboring people. Moses was the supreme authority in religious affairs among the Israelites. In 341, at the age of thirty, Ulfilas was consecrated missionary bishop of the Goths; Moses is usually regarded as the father of Hebrew literature; Ulfilas is father of Teutonic literature. The writings of Moses kept the true faith alive in Israel, the Bible of Ulfilas seemed to keep the true faith alive among the Goths as long as they remained a nation.

Without considering further the noble service rendered by Bishop Ulfilas no sane person would fail to classify him among the men of eminent worth. But the above are not all of his achievements; he could be heard pleading before the Roman Emperor for the deliverance of his people and for their rights and his pleading was not in vain. Seen occupying a prominent seat in a church council at Antioch, where he was perhaps ordained Bishop in 341; or taking an active part in the Synod of Constantinople in 360; or as he stood as, "the father of missionaries" in the Ecumenical Council of 381. In all his long life of service and varied activities of life, he never failed to reflect honor upon himself, his church and his God.

But few men have ever seen the results from their efforts and labors, that Bishop Ulfilas saw. He saw a written language among the Goths, saw them become civilized and a prosperous nation, their king, Athanaric, a convert to Christ, and practically the whole Gothic nation following in the footsteps of their king. His Bible carried into all the known world. It was only through such devotion, faith and necessary toil as Ulfilas manifested that "the father of Church History," Eusebius,, was enabled to say, "The writings of the Apostles were translated into the whole world in all languages of the Greek and barbarians." How much the world today is indebted to such men eternity alone can reveal. Their efforts at first appeared insignificant and as little promising as did the little cloud to Elijah's servant, yet they have meant infinitely more for humanity than did the rain following that little cloud to the parched earth. We are all drinking from the fountains they established.

The noble example of Bishop Ulfilas should be both inspiring and encouraging to every one in adverse circumstances. If this should fall into the hands of one discouraged, or in a place where things look dark, cheer up; remember there is a brighter day for you. Let the example of Ulfilas and scores of others inspire you, create within you a desire to emulate them. In the happy phrase of the late Maltbie D. Babcock, "Do it now."

W. A. Ledford.

Westminster, Md.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

Answer to question 98:

Of the many lessons taught by the book of Job it seems to me that the chief one is the lesson of faith. If we wish it put as a moral we would put it something like this:

A true follower of God trusts God not for material blessings, but because he loves God and knows God loves him. Losses and afflictions are not a proof of God's disfavor. God's people never lose in the end.

We all, of course, remember the opening scene, one which may still be found—a meeting of God's people and Satan among them, not just to be there, to be sure, but to tempt, to ridicule and to bring false accusations against the sons of God. He does not always speak out, but this time he made bold to say, "Doth Job serve the Lord for naught? God, you've given Job all the good things he could wish. He is just serving you for those good things and not because he loves you. If you'll just take them away, he'll curse you to your face." Satan supposed Job was like many children whose parents have petted them and spoiled them by doing everything for them and giving them all that heart could wish and who, when, for any reason, the parent no longer does these things, will have no more to do with him. But such was not Job's love for and faith in God. This God knew and was willing to prove to Satan and his band. Consequently the test came—the losses and afflictions.

For similar reasons many today suffer losses and afflictions. Are we not willing to bear these things patiently for His sake? Can't we be like Job?

Behold him when he receives the first sad news of his loss. He is grieved, of course, but he does not charge God foolishly; he only says in simple faith, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

We see him later. Not only is his property all gone and his children all gone, but he is sorely afflicted and his wife is begging him to "curse God and die." We listen breathless for his answer. It comes in a twinkling, full of love and child-like faith: "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Wife, it's all right. We don't just understand it, but God has a purpose, a good one for all this. Later still we hear him replying to his friends (?) with all the confidence of one thoroughly grounded in the faith, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him."

The faith pictured in the book of Job seems to be just such faith as the poet had in mind when he wrote:

"O, for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by every foe,
That will not tremble on the brink
Of any earthly woe!
"That will not murmur nor complain
Beneath the chastening rod,
But, in the hour of grief and pain,
Will lean upon its God."

Job's faith stood the test and God gave him "twice as much as he had before." It is one of the characteristics of God to give good things to those who love Him. He may sometimes see fit to take or keep from us some things which we think are very good and which we would like to have, but when he keeps such things from us He gives us a better one instead. "God never takes a good thing from his child without giving him another and a better in its place."

If things seem to go wrong and our faith grows weak, let us think of Job's faith and pray—

"Lord, give us such a faith as this;
And then, whate'er may come,
We'll taste, e'en here, the hallowed bliss
Of an eternal home."

Lesson For Next Week.

Psalm 37-45.

"DO NOT SEND US AN OLD MAN."

The following article by "W. M. S.," in the Methodist Protestant of March 13, is so true, timely, and to the point, that we want the readers of the "M. P. Herald" to have the benefit of it. Permit a prefatory word, first.

Is it a sin to grow old? Is it a crime to reach fifty? Do age and experience count for nothing now? Are "we the people and will wisdom die with us?" And were all the ancients fools? Is not the present the most conceited age since history's dawn? God said, "I am the Lord, I change not." This being true, God must believe in the efficiency of old men, as he chose a man 80 years of age to lead 3,000,000 of people out of Egyptian bondage, and to be His law-giver to the people. And further, he chose another old man to be this man's successor. Why did he not choose a youth to lead, if they are preferable? Why did he draw the line at thirty years, below which no one could officiate as priest, if youth and inexperience are preferable to age? Why did he not make an "exception" in the case of his own Son? What is the matter with us anyway? Has our ground tilted" the wrong way? Has the center of gravity shifted? Or have we caught the Athenian disease to spend our time in "either telling or hearing some new thing?" Or are we coming to have "itching ears?" Or are we looking to ourselves rather than to God? Following a proud, vain, conceited, boastful "Age of Reason" rather than the word of God? Or have we by some strange infatuation, unconsciously, it may be, come to think that we need a new chart, a new compass, and a new pole star? The magnetic pole may shift; the pole star itself might change; but God and His Word never. "Heaven and earth shall pass, but my words shall not pass away." "I am the Lord, I change not."

But please read the article that follows:

"Do Not Bring Us An Old Man."

Who said that? Not a sick man who needed a doctor. Not a business man who needed advice. Not a man in court who needed a lawyer. Not a man in sorrow who needed a comforter. None of these—well, then, who said it? If you will listen, I will tell you confidentially. But don't you dare to tell anybody. For the credit of the church and Christianity keep it to yourselff. If you are the man who said it, or if you were a member of a church meeting where you permitted it to be said, then don't tell it. Don't let the ugly thing get out. It is known to me and the Lord. That is enough. The Lord will tell you some day what he thinks of it, and I am sure if you don't repent of it, you will feel so ashamed of yourself that you will call on the rocks and mountains to fall on you and hide you. I won't tell you what I think of it, for I am afraid you might go out and hang yourself, and someone might blame me for your taking off—though, between you and me, I don't think the church would lose much if you did. Don't you know, brother, that some men are as young at sixty-five as others are at twenty-five. They are as resourceful and judicious and capable as younger men. They may not be as impassioned and aggressive as when younger, but this gives you an opportunity to do what you come into the church for—to be a worker together with God and his minister for the advancement of the kingdom. This opportunity you should covet and will covet unless you are one of the little selfish souls who join the church to sneak into heaven with its endorsement. You are not one of that kind, are you?

What you need, brother, in your church is a man of experience, sound in the faith, filled with the Holy Ghost. So when you instruct your delegate, tell him to ask for a good man who can teach you the way of the Lord, who will deal honestly with your soul and make you a decent Christian.

Thank God we have young men, but they will soon be old. It is one of the inevitable experiences of men that they grow old. What will you do with the old man? Turn him down! That is heathenish. If that is the way you feel, you need a foreign missionary as badly as any pagan. What are you going to do with the old preacher? Superannuate him? Well, then you must go deeper down in your pocket to care for him. He has given his life to the church. Forty or fifty years he has spent, and his meager salary has not enabled him to save anything against old age, if he has cultivated a spirit of generosity toward the work of the church.

His needs are more numerous and pressing now than they were forty years ago. He has been educated away from business. He cannot adapt himself to modern business methods. He is helpless. You have no parsonages for superannuates. No donation parties visit him. He is not sought after to marry people now. That belongs to the pastor.

See here, brother, when your church meeting comes off just say to the conference we want a good man, old or young, and we will stand by him and help him for all we are worth. When you make up your mind to that you are in the first stage of the greatest revival your church has ever known. W. M. S.

February 29, 1912.

ANOTHER ARITHMETICAL "NUT".

A hungry traveler in Africa came across three simple-minded saveges as they were about to sit down for their noon-day meal. He asked and received permission to share it with them, promising to pay them handsomely for the food.

Savage No. 1 contributed 6 cocoanuts to the meal; savage No. 2 contributed 10, while savage No. 3, a large man who was very hungry, added 14 to the pile, making 30 cocoanuts in all for the four men—three savages and the traveler.

The cocoanuts were shelled, and the savage hosts being courteous, each ate only his fair and equal share—the traveler, though still hungry, thus eating only his equal share. Rising after the meal and thanking his hosts, he handed them 30 coins to be divided among them as payment.

Immediately there arose a terrible wrangle as to the division of the money. The first savage who had contributed but 6 cocoanuts insisted on the coins being divided in three equal parts, because three people had supplied a meal for which the fourth paid—therefore an equal division in thirds, he contended, was the only logical one. The second savage said that as the first savage had eaten more than he had contributed, he had no share in the spoils at all, and that the third savage and he, the second, should divide the spoils equally between them, as they alone had given the traveler his meal.

The third man, who had contributed 14, said that the proper principle was obvious: As each had contributed cocoanuts to a total of 30, and that as there were 30 coins, each should receive a coin for each cocoanut contributed.

No decision being reached, they agreed to leave it to the stranger, and abide by his decision, which he guaranteed to be a just one. And on his announcing it, so simple was his reasoning that all agreed, though none got what he had asked for.

What was the ju t decision?

This apparently simple problem was answered by the stranger in this way: The first savage was to receive nothing at all, the second savage 7 coins, and the third savage 23 coin . Immediately three swords were raised, two to run him through, and one to defend him. But there was no fight. His logic won him his life. He said:

"There were thirty nuts, of which four people ate equal shares, or 7 and 1-2 nuts(which is one fourth of 30. No.1 contributed 6 nuts or 24 fourths. yet he ate 30 fourths, thus going in debt 6 fourths. No. 2 contributed 10 nuts, or 40 fourths, ate 30 fourths, and thus contributed 10 fourths to the supply from which I ate. No. 3 contributed 14 nuts, or 56 fourths, ate 30 fourths, thus contri uting 26 fourths of the supply from which I ate But I, like you, ate only 30 fourths. The sum of the contributions of man No.1 and man No. 2 was 36 fourths. The remaining 6 fourths you both contributed to man No. 1's dinner. Now I did not pay any of you to feed any of you—I paid you to feed me. As man No. 2 contributed 3 fourths of a nut to man No. 1 and 7 fourth to me, and as man No. 3 contributed 3 fourths to man No. 1 and 23 fourths to me, I say that man No.1 is in debt to each of you for 3 fourths of a nut, and hence one of you should get 7, the other 23 coins."—Scientific American.

GOOD AND BAD BREAD.

A number of readers who were interested in our recent indictment of Amev ican bread and our eulogy of the bread of the old world have written asking us to give a recipe for what we consider good bread. The reform of our bread, however, is not to be brought about merely by publishing recipes. The material used in American bread are mostly good enough, but the bread is spoiled in the making and baking. European breod is baked by a slow, even heat, generally in old-fashioned brick or "Dutch" ovens. This the starch granules in the flour have a chance to expand and undergo chemical change which completely alter the nature of the product. We recall once seeing a lot of Italian steerage passengers on an Atlantic steamer in a state of mutiny against the ship's cooking. They were used to living on coarse but well-baked sweet and wholesome bread which we know as bread was set before them they simply couldn't eat it; hungry as they were, they threw it into the sea. And yet if the European style of bread were set before Americans the great majority of them would not eat it either, after being used to the bleached, doughy article which is the rule among us. We have yet to be educated on the bread question in this country. The teaching of scientific cooking in the schools is already helping, and if our women of ambition and brains will only devote a little of their valuable time to solving these domestic problems we shall perhaps be saved from extinction before we have quite "dug our graves with our teeth." Nearly everyone in making cornstarch cooks it only a very short time, on the impression that it is done as soon as it thickens. Scientific cookery is teaching our girls that cornstarch must be cooked half an hour at least in order that the starch granules shall be properly transformed, and the rule applies all the more to bead. If our women would organizez a national bread club and would go to work with a will to get to the bottom of the bread question it would be the greatest reform of the century. Political reforms are unimportant by comparison to these everyday home matters. What woman will step to the front and organize this movement? Monuments in greot number and her name among the immortals in the Hall of Fame will be her portion.—The Pathfinder.

Bro. J. M. Davis, living near High Point, has announced his candidacy for a seat in our legislature.

—Publicity is newspapers and magazines to the amount of 1,500,000 inches a year on tuberculosis and its prevention is being given by the press of the United States, according to an estimate issued today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

If all the publicity on tuberculosis given by the press of this country in the year ending April 1st were gathered in one paper, the National Association estimates it would make a paper of over 6 259 pages. In the last four years, during which time an active publicity campaign has been carried on, the National Assocation estimates that over 5,000 000 inches or over 90 miles of press notices on tuberculosis have been published.

"Publicity is the very heart of the educational campaign against tuberculosis," says Dr. Livingston Farrand, the Executive Secretary of the National Association. "Largely because of the intelligent cooperation of the press, has the anti-tuberculosis movement in this country been able to become, as it is, the greatest organized movement of its kind in the world. When tuberculosis shall have become a rare disease, the American press may justly claim a large share in this gigantic achievement."

—We agree with the true and timely sentiment expressed by The Biblical Recorder in the following:

"Floods of pernicious literature are sweeping over the land and thousands of our youth are being corrupted thereby. Most juvenile crimes are traceable directly to bad books. Stories of bandits, pirates, and other outlaws are read with avidity and they exalt in the young mind the most depraved heroes and heroines. Parents cannot be too careful to keep such a tide of evil from inundating their homes. There is an abundance of wholesome reading, reading that is as interesting and infinitely more elevating than the story with its subtle poison; but sure that the good is given first place, first in point of time, and there will be no room for poisonous print."

—The Harvard Observatory announces that it has completed a photograph of the entire sky, and that the same shows 1,500,000 stars. We wonder who counted them?

.DELEGATES' EXP. TO GEN. CONF.

Previously acknowledged	$24.75
St. Paul's & Brown Summit	2.50
Thomasville	1.00

NOTICE!

All ladies expecting to attend the branch meetings of the W. F. M. S. and H. M. S., to be held in Winston, April 17, 18, 19, will please notify Mrs. S. W Taylor, 110 West Seventh St.

Com. on Entertainment.

April 3rd. 1912.

NOTICE!

On account of the serious illness of Miss Frances Sutton, Pres. W. B. H. M., all communications will be sent to the Vice President, Mrs. N. Vice, Swayzee, Ind. Miss Alice Conway, Cor Sec.

The Annual Meeting of the W. B. H. M. will be held in the Rhode Island Ave. Church, Washington, D. C., May 9, 10, 11. All branches are requested to send delegates; also all ladies interested in Home Mission Work are cordially invited to attend. Alice Conway, Cor. Sec.

After gumdrops have been introduced at the south pole, the great thing will be to start a movement for the initiative, referendum and recall. No progressive 20 th century village can afford to be without these modern panaceas.—Washington Post.

From Pastors and People.

St. Paul.

Our congregations are encouraging when the weather is favorable. The S. S. is increasing—18 new scholars Sunday—one member received into the church last Sunday—a faithful young man. There seems to be some open doors for the M. P. Church here. We hope to have more encouraging things to say later.

Brown's Summit.

The congregations have been good considering the unfavorable weather. Every fourth Sunday has been unfavorable. This church is ahead of the time on pastor's salary. The outlook at this place is a peculiar one—it is not discouraging, yet the possibilities are not very clear. Four new members have been received since Conference. G. F. Millaway.

Matthews.

Dear Herald Readers:

Our Sunday school at Stallings is doing well; it has outlived the severe winter. We had sixty in attendance last Sunday. We are busy preparing for an Easter service and expect a nice and good time. We have a good people here and they have been very kind to us, helping in every posble way. Mr. M. T. Stallings is a good superintendent and fine Christian gentleman. We are very anxious for a good church here. Our special meetings begin the 5th Sunday in March. We want the prayers of every Herald reader that we may have a good meeting.

Lillie Martin.

Asheville.

Dear Editor:

Our S. S. is still growing. The children are getting up a nice Easter program.

We are having right much sickness among our people. Miss Novella McIntyre has been quite ill, but is expected to be out in a few days. Algy, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. U. Miller, and the baby of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schreyer have both been real sick.

Bro. Fogleman gave us two splendid sermons yesterday.

The quarterly conference met Saturday night. Mr. Ed. Swain and Mr. G. P. Younginer were elected nominees to the Annual Conference.

The Junior Christian Endeavor meets every Wednesday afternoon. Their studies are very interesting.

We still hold our cottage prayer meetings, which, we feel, are doing a great good. Effie Barrett, Reporter.

Yadkin College Ct., Friedship.

Owing to inclement weather the fourth Sunday our pastor failed to reach us, but on last Sunday morning, the 31st, he filled his appointment; preached a very interesting sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered. The congregation was not as large as we would like for it to have been, but was very attentive. We were very sorry to hear of the illness of our pastor's little boy, Henry, who has pneumonia—but was glad to hear he was improving and hope he soon will be well. We will organize our Sunday school next Sunday morning; we are hoping for a good S. S. The second quarterly conference will be held at Bethesda on Saturday before the second Sunday in May. Reporter.

Cleveland.

March 19th, 1912, found the writer to be one year older than he had ever been before, and by the way of emphasis, the good people of the town and country served us with one of the best dinners that it has ever been our privilege to enjoy. To say that it was rich and full does not tell it all.

When we had become reconciled to the situation we found that other denominations else than our own were represented.

The contents of our purse were enlarged by Brother Hoke Lackey, who is not a member of our church, and who as yet, has not that convenience in his home so necessary to the preparation of a fancy birthday dinner; we think, however, that he is making preparation to supply this important necessity.

Perhaps the most unique part was played by the better half, who had arranged to have our daughter, Mrs. Cooper, of Siler City come, and kept her hid away until dinner time. To say that I enjoyed and appreciated all does not express that which my heart feels. May their reward be equal to their doings.

But we grow sad when we remember that another year is in the past—must be accounted for—is snatched out of the future, one more mile-post past, and we are one year nearer the end of the road—eternity. And will we all enjoy the feast together up there? So may it be!

Second quarterly conference will be held at Lawndale on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in May. Dr. Swain will preside. W. D. Reed.

Fair Grove.

In the latter part of February we attended the funeral of Bro. F. G. Chilcutt, at Fair Grove Church, Haw River Ct. We were shown over the cemetery by Messrs. Robt. and B. G. Chilcutt, brothers of the deceased. They called attention to some things connected with that almost historic church and its cemetery which are very interesting to us. They may be so to others.

First, as we looked upon the marble slab which marks the last resting place of that peculiarly remarkable man, Elijah Chilcutt. His epitaph, if I mistake not, written by A. W. Lineberry, D. D.: The last of the charter members of Fair Grove Church, Born March 1st, 1795, departed this life August 23, 1874. Was reading the Bible through the 122nd time the year of his death.

There is a little grave, a cedar tree stands at the head, and one at the foot, planted after the burial of the child, and were of course very small, the trees now measure three feet in circumference. No stones mark the place, no date is there, no name. Perhaps the child was 2 or three years old.

William More, died March 8th, 1839, age, 35 years. The first one buried in the cemetery, nearly 73 years ago.

William Walker, died Nov. 12, 1857, age, 22 years—Thomas B. Walker, died Nov. 12, 1857, age 16 years. Sons of R. and S. Walker. They were buried in the same grave.

I do not think any one can go through that cemetery, that city of the many dead, without being deeply impressed with the thought of a noble citizenship. May the Lord abundantly bless the present membership of that grand old church. And as the living look at the hundreds of head-stones and monuments, let them think of their last resting place and of the country far from human sight where there is no death and no cemeteries.

G. F. Millaway.

Bess' Chapel, Lincoln Ct.

Dear Herald:

As I was appointed reporter at our church, will try to send in a few items. Rev. L. H. Hatley has not missed a single appointment at our church this year, although we have had an extremely hard winter. He has won the good will of his people since he has been among us and gives us excellent sermons.

We have organized Sunday school with Mr. W. C. Childers superintendent, Mr. J. W. Heafner, asst. superintendent, and J. C. Beam secretary. We had no Sunday school the 1st quarter owing to the bad roads, but there are indications of a lively school at present.

The members are talking of giving our church a new coat of paint which is badly needed.

Last Saturday evening at 2 o'clock the body of Mrs. Jennie Sain was laid to rest in the cemetery at Bess's Chapel, there to await the resurrection morn. Jennie was a good Christian woman, loved by all who knew her. She left to mourn their loss a husband and five children. The hand of affliction has lain heavily upon her for the last five years. She has borne it with Christian fortitude and told her children to meet her in heaven. She was a grand-daughter of Aunt Sallie Bess, the oldest member of our church, Aunt Sallie now being in her 89th year, the next oldest member being Aunt Elizabeth Baxter now in her 83rd year. Aunt Lizzie has been afflicted for more than a year, and is not able to go out to church any more. The prayers of all Christian people are requested in her behalf.

We were all made sorrowful over the death of Rev. E. A. Plyler, he being one of our former pastors, whom we all learned to love. May the good Lord verify His promise to the widow and fatherless in this instance. May the Lord give us more love for all things pertaining to good. Mrs. J. C. Beam.

Notice-

Our second quarterly Conference will meet at Worthville on Saturday before the third Sunday in April, 4 o'clock, P. M..

J. B. O'Briant.

Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Bro. Editor:

Please allow me space in the Herald for our S. S report for March, 1912:

1st Sunday,	attendance, 44,	col. $2.90.
2nd Sunday,	attendance, 61,	col. 2.32
3rd Sunday,	attendance, 47,	col. 2.15
4th Sunday,	attendance, 52,	col. 3.45
5th Sunday,	attendance, 70,	col. 3.57

We hope to make the attendance much better this summer.

Our Teacher Training Class is doing good work. We had our examination on the second 10 lessons which was a very good record. Miss Jennie Jenkins, 100; Miss Martha Gales, 100; Miss Lucy Gales, 100; Mrs. Minnie Johnson, 100; Mr. A. C. Hull, 72; Miss Ocie Heavener, 72, and the superintendent obtained 100, the others failed. We have 10 in our class and hope to be able to get more to join us later. I think each S. S. should organize a Teacher Training class, and I would also recommend that the best lessons be obtained which I think is Mr. Oliver's work, which can be purchased from the Methodist Protestant Book Concern, Baltimore, Md. I would be glad to see our M. P. folks more liberal, in fact, I am somewhat surprised to find them so close when it comes to helping advance Christ's kingdom on earth. If we had failed to get help from other denominations as we did from our own M. P. folks, Methodist Protestantism would have been a complete failure in Lincolnton, notwithstanding, we appealed to our own denomination stronger than to others because we felt it our work. We have rteceived our best help from Presbyterians, M. E.'s, Lutherans and Baptists, a Presbyterian being the largest contributor to our new church here; a Lutheran friend being the next, and an M. E., and Baptist being the next, outside of our own members and Lincoln and Cleveland Circuits. I believe we have only received $3.00 from our M. P. folks, [illegible] being donated by a friend in High Point. Plenty of time yet for all who will help to come across, for we have plenty of places to put all we can get, so send us some, any amount will be appreciated. Success to the Herald and its many readers.

D. B. Johnson, Supt.

Granville Ct.

The second quarterly conference will be at Mt. Carmel Saturday, April 13; preaching at 11 o'clock, by Rev. J. D. Williams. Come and hear him.

N. G. Bethea.

TO M. P. LADIES.

We would urge all the ladies of the church who can possibly do so to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Miss Forrest. She will have only a few more charges to visit before our Annual Meeting at Winston, April 17-18. Miss Forrest will be there and take part in the program. As has been our custom, we ask at least one lady from each church to attend the Annual Meeting, and if you haven't a missionary society, you can go back and organize. We hope our meeting at Winston will be the best. Let as many attend as can. You can send your name to Mrs. S. W. Taylor.

Yours in the work,

Harris Glascock.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

Saxapahaw, April 6-9.
Alamance, April 10-15.
Siler City, April 16-22.

PROGRAM OF BRANCH MEETING
Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Winston, April 17-18.

Wednesday Morning 10:30.

Consecration Service, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point.
Address of Welcome, Mrs. W. B. Speas, Winston.
Response, Mrs. J. T. Underwood, Asheboro.
Business—appointment of committees, etc.

Afternoon Session.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson.
Roll Call.
Reading of Minutes.
Address of President, Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
The Woman's Missionary Record (paper) Dr. Harris-Glascock, Greensboro.
Reports of Auxiliaries.
How to awaken interest in our State Work, Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, Greensboro.
Business.

Wednesday Evening.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. A. B. Kimball, Greensboro.
Address, Miss Annie L. Forrest, Field Secretary.

Thursday Morning, 10:30.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, High Point.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Report of Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro.
Report of Treasurer, Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro.
Our Work in China (Letter from Rev. C. S. Heininger), Mrs. H. L. Coble, Greensboro.

Thursday Afternoon.

Devotional exercises, Mrs. S. L. Hayworth Asheboro.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Reports of Committees.
Election of Officers.
Round Table, conducted by Miss Forrest.
Unfinished Business.

—The Woman's Missionary Union of the Baptist churches of this State in session at Monroe last week adopted as their watchword for the coming year, "Prayer," and that all Woman's Missionary Societies strive for a deeper spirituality and a fuller sense of their responsibility; and that the aim for next year be $13,000.00. Their fund is equally divided between home and foreign missions. The Union was largely attended and the women were enthusiastic for missions, and for greater work in mission fields.

THREE GOLD RULES.

By Emily J. Bryant.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke says: "Never repeat an evil story about another unless you know it to be true; then never repeat it unless it is absolutely necessary; and then never repeat it without remembering that God hears you."

Spurgeon, the great English divine, says "Accept only one-half of an ill report about another, and then throw half of that away." But even this fraction is too much when the story arises from suspicion only—but, these words are the words of wise men who have lived long enough to learn something of the evil done in the world by repeating irresponsible tales—wild winds flowers flown from miasmatic swamps.

The Bishop of London was asked to give some pertinent advice to the young ladies of a fashionable West End Seminary, and his advice was: "Never be cats. The old cats of human society are those persons who spend their lives saying ill-natured things about others." He had known of the good reputation of good men and women taken away by the catty spirit prevalent in the West End drawing room, he said,—but, we need not go to London to see this. It is to be greatly feared that in our own loved land for which we claim pre-eminence that the same crime is committed, the same results obtained. It were much better and nobler to aim at a high mark in life and pursue it, leaving others the same untrammelled privilege.

That people carelessly assume the liberty of misinterpreting and misrepresenting a thing so sacred as personal character without the fullest proof shows a deplorable violation of Christian duty; to put their own explanation upon each word, each look, each emotion or quivering, over-taxed nerve of an innocent, sensitive, consientious person is as truly persecution as was the conduct of Saul in the first century, when, in his Pharisaical zeal he verily thought he was doing God service.

Let us thank God that, if they defame and destroy reputation, they cannot touch character, that may shhine even brighter, the one is what men esteem us to be, the other between God and ourselves, and cannot be touched by gossip, nothing but our own acts can change that. "He who steals my purse steals trash," said Shakespeare, who reckoned money as trash compared with character. A person making catty attacks upon others is satisfied to live on a low plane of life. From a higher level he, or she, would see more inspiring, more noble and uplifting subjects for conversation and would see in other people the best, not suspecting evil until it was unquestionable.

The fact that the carrier of evil tales is elevated to a higher pedestal than before, while the unconscious and innocent victim is ostracized, shows the corruption of a social atmosphere where the pernicious scandal is rolled like a sweet morsel under the tongue. It is of such that O. W. Holmes said: "He is acting after the law of his kind."

At a strange church one Sabbath morning it was our experience to hear the pastor begin his sermon with some very telling words: Leaning forward, after announcing his text, he looked squarely into the faces of his people and speaking solemnly and slowly, he said: "I would rather be known in the community as a common thief than as a malicious slanderer," and the none too severe words were repeated several times during the sermon in a large city church, well filled with people of more than ordinary intelligence. Evidently there had been some gossip in that church.

One might wish to have that minister spend the balance of his years in traveling and repeating that sermon in all pulpits, for it would be just as good for other congregations.

True, these cases may be brought before a secular court, but not every one is willing to endure further unpleasantness, and conclude not to take any notice of it. One of the chief wrongs of slander, and most alarming is its effect upon those who willingly listen and accept it; especially the young are taught wrong estimates, that good is bad and right is wrong; hearts are stained, judgments warped and error prevails. The belief of a lie deteriorates the moral character just as truth elevates. In spite of the fact a person's life may give the lie to such gossip, the story is accepted in preference to the evil testimony. That men do not gather figs of thistles does not count. That a fount in cannot at the same time send forth sweet water and bitter is a truth that appeals to them less than the false, floating figment without a shadow of truth.

"I know nothing about it, but I am perfectly sure," says one of F. Marion Crawford's characters, in a chatty spirit. Henry Drummond, that Christian gentleman, said: "You may unlock a man's whole life, if you watch what words he uses most." This is a safe rule by which to judge both the good man and the slanderer. The person whose language is always refined, always sincere, always inspiring and uplifting, always a part of the religious atmosphere: a man whose deeds harmonize with his words, whose conversations and sermonettes are of the same refined quality may be trusted by the most exacting—at least until absolute proof of falsity is furnished by himself.

H. W. Beecher said that he would rather be disappointed occasionally, than to be always suspicious of the people he met. He believed in a religion of the heart and revered men for what they aspired to be, leaving God to be the judge. "All strong and overcoming men, who are girded by the intense sinews of strenuous conviction are apt to be mocked at by easy-going Saducees to whom the truth and a lie are about the same thing," says J. W. Dinsmore. "It requires courage to face slander and lies and carry yourself with cheerfulness, grace and dignity for years before the lie can be corrected."

The newspapers occasionally announce that some person has ended his, or her, life because they had not the courage to live under the wrong done them by the circulation of false stories. Such persons lack strength of character and self mastery and power to withstand the inevitable trials which come, but, here is the power of Christianity. It supplies grace sufficient for the need and some of earth's best and noblest men and women have been victims of libelous scandal. Let all who suffer thorns remember that Paul's "thorn" was not removed in answer to prayer, but divine grace sufficent to surmount it was assured him. In her beautiful submission to the cruel prosecution of her holy life, Mad. Guyon declared, "Great trials come only to great souls." "Extraordinary trials are not always the punishment of extraordinary sins, but for the development of extraordinary graces," says one English divine. God's grace is given to His saints according to their need, and at the time of need. Let him who suffers unjustly—trials will come for our testing—let him wait on the Lord, and He shall renew his strength; he shall mount up as eagles; he shall run and not be weary, walk and not faint. He shall rise superior to his pain and be able to give thanks for the "thorns" which thus become helps to larger power, larger grace and final victory.—Presbyterian Standard.

We may believe that it was the daily custom of Bartimeus to sit in the highway outside the gates of Jericho and ask for alms of the passers by. Doubtless it seemed to him that the days and years could hold no greater thing than this, and yet one day there came to blind Bartimeus, sitting by the wayside, three of the greatest messages that a man may hear. The first message that come to Bartimeus that spring day as Jesus passed by was: "Be of good cheer." It is the message of Jesus, of Moses, of David, of Elisha, of Isaiah, of Paul, of every helpful life. "Be of good cheer." Why not? There is no burden so heavy that Christ will not bear His full share. There is no sorrow so deep that Christ's oil of joy cannot soothe. He can give the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. The second great message that came to Bartimeus was: "Rise." Not by the wayside does Christ wish any life to sit, idly listening as other men speak of glorious tasks in which they have a part. There is no service so great, but that every life may share in its joy, but this may not be if we sit by the wayside. Rise, that we may be ready to hear the supreme message that comes to us even as unto Bartimeus: "He calleth thee." The call of Jesus holds its assurance of vision and strength. Bartimeus received his sight and followed Jesus and the way to Jerusalem. "Be of good cheer. Rise, he calleth thee." These messages are for you and for me.—Nicholas Frost, in The Watchman.

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

Winston, N. C., April 18-19.

Thursday Evening, April 18.

Invocation, Rev. S. W. Taylor, Winston, N. C.

Praise Service, Mrs. E. B. Siler, Siler City, N. C.

Address, Need of Home Missions, Mrs. S. L. Hayworth, Asheboro, N. C.

Address, Orphans' Home, Denton, Miss Etta Auman, Matron.

Appointment of Committees.

Friday, 10:00 A. M., April 19.

Devotional, Mrs. J. C. Welch, High Point.

Roll Call.

Minutes.

Review of Year's Work Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Pres., Asheboro.

Work of Women's Board of Home Missions, Mrs. Robt. Russell, Denton.

Reports of:

Auxiliaries.

Coresponding Secretary.

Treasurer.

Miscellaneous Business.

Adjournment.

Friday, 2 P. M.

Devotional, Mrs. S. L. Hayworth, Asheboro, N. C.

Roll Call.

Minutes.

Question Box, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Greensboro.

Reports of Committees.

Election of Officers.

Election of delegates to Board Meeting.

Unfinished Business.

Adjournment.

The North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will hold its Annual Meeting in Winston, N. C., April 18th and 19th. It will begin on the night of the 18th with an address by Miss Etta Auman, Matron of the Orphans' Home, telling of the work of the Home. The 19th will be devoted to business meetings. This immediately follows the Foreign Branch Meeting, which will be held in Winston, April 17th and 18th.

Send names of all who expect to attend to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Winston, N. C., so that she can arrange for the entertainment.

Pearl McCulloch,
Acting Cor. Sec.

CRITICISMS AND SAYINGS.

Boys, quit calling your father "old man," it is ugly.

How about a dancing girl singing, "Sinners, come to the gospel feast?"

There are three fast ways of communication these days: telegraph, telephone, and tell a tattler.

I saw an old brother Methodist Protestant the other day, and I said to him, "Do you take the M. P. Herald?" He said, "No; where is it published?"

I saw a Campbellite on the train the other day, talking about infant baptism. I asked him why his people were always after the Methodists about infant baptism when his church believes there is no baptism but immersion. I asked him if he ever knew a Methodist to immerse an infant. He gave me no answer.

I was in Randolph County some time ago. Spent a night with Bro. W. D. Brower and family, and was well taken care of. While there, Mr. Brower showed me a rocking chair that is said to be over 100 years old and was made with a pocket knife. He also showed me another rocking chair that belonged to Mr. James Odell, of Randolph, the father of Mr. J. A. Odell, of Greensboro. I also saw one of the Rev. Brantly York grammars; and I guess the editor will think I ought to have studied this grammar.

J. T. Jones.

Siloam, N. C., April 1st, 1912.

Siler City Ct., Hope Church.

Rev. J. H. Bowman filled his appointment at Hope Church last Saturday night at 8: P. M. and also on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. He preached two most excellent sermons. On Sunday there was a very large crowd attended the services, as it was a lovely day.

We are having some beautiful spring weather now, and we hope that it will continue pretty, for the farmers will soon be busy on their farms, if this weather continues.

We have just erected a new bell to the church at Hope, and we are going to make some other improvements in the near future.

We are having a very good Sunday school now since the weather has improved. We have about eighty pupils enrolled, and hope soon to get one hundred. We have a most excellent Superintendent, who has been a great help to the church.

We are having prayer meeting every Wednesday night, and have been having some very sweet meetings. Rep.

April 3rd, 1912.

—Don't worry about the weather—the Lord will look after that, but go ahead and do the best you can in such weather as the Lord sends you.

—Spring is opening up, and farmers are getting busy. The spring seems late, but the Lord has promised that seed-time and harvest shall not fail. The farmer may labor in hope.

—The awakening of our Sunday schools is in order, where they have been allowed to sleep in the winter Get the boys and girls together and instruct them. It is their right and your duty.

—"Thousands made homeless by the floods in the Mississippi Valley" is the report that comes this morning. Congress will be asked for aid.

—Rev. Chas. J. Edwards is at the bedside of his father, who is very ill. His appointments next Sunday are to be met by the editor of the Herald.

—Rev. R. C. Stubbins' father is dangerously illl and has been for quite awhile.

—We are glad to give space to announcements regarding the meetings of the missionary societies in Winston. These societies have life, and a most important work to do.

—Our Lincolnton people seem to be making a favorable impression on their neighbors. We congratulate them on this fact, and ask them not to feel aggrieved because help does not at once come to them from their brethren at a distance. The work at Lincolnton is new, and our people generally do not know how promising it is. If this point really needs help, we believe help will come, but it may not come with the most desirable promptness. Our people, while sympathetic, are cautious enough to wish to know the merits of the case. Hold the fort, Bro. Johnson, till re-inforcements come.

—A prolonged trial of the meat packers in Chicago has ended in their acquittal.

THEIR VIEWS OF WINTER.

"We like it," said the robin,
The bluebird, and the wren,
"For it is a reminder
We must go South again—
A most delightful journey
To those who once have been."

"We like it," said the snowbird,
The sparrow, and the crow,
"For we are much more happy
When all the others go;
And we manage very nicely,
In spite of cold and snow."

"We like it," said the woodchuck,
The beaver, and the bear,
"For now in cozy quarters,
Without a single care,
We settle down in quiet,
And sweetly slumber there."

"We like it," said the sable,
The marten, and the fox,
"We're glad to stand the winter,
And all its roughest knocks—
If trappers do not get us
Inside a horrid box."

"We like it, too," said Bobby
And Tom and Dick and Ben,
"For we can have the skating
Upon the river then;
And build a snowy castle,
And knock it down again."
—Clara Pinckney, in Youth's Com.

THE GULL THAT CAME BACK.

"Mother, why don't you wear beautiful birdies on your hat? I see lots of them on other ladies' hats, and they're so lovely."

"Do you like to see dead birds on hats?"

Archie looked up quickly at his mother's question, and finally stammered: "N-o-o. Not exactly. That is, I'd like to see them alive and not dead."

"On hats?" laughed Mrs. Lyndon, at her little boy's perplexity. "Why, we'd have to chain them there to keep them from flying away."

Archie's eyes opened wider. He'd never thought of it in this way, but suddenly an idea came to him, and his face brightened:

"But when the birdies die, then I'd like to see them on your hats. Birdies do die, don't they sometimes?"

"Yes, sometimes, and there would be no harm to wear their feathers and wings then, I suppose. But most birdies we see on hats are killed for the purpose."

Archie's eyes looked moist, and his mother continued, turning the subject suddenly:

"But I haven't answered your first question. I'm going to do it by telling you a story. When a little girl I lived near the Great South Beach. There were thousands of beautiful gulls, or terns, living on the beach. They nested there every summer, and you could find hundreds of their nests in the hot sands almost any day in the breeding season.

"As a little girl I used to visit the beach, and it was a wonderful sight for a child. Overhead the gulls flew around and around in circles, their white wings flashing in the sunlight. Sometimes they would fly down so low that we could see their little black eyes and the pink on their bills.

"But that was not all. In the sands were nests of speckled eggs, and sometimes little downy baby gulls. The nest was only a hole in the sand, and the little gulls would lie there in the hot sun and watch the parent gulls flying overhead. I used to think they were longing for the time when they could get up and fly too.

"The gulls were very tame. Nobody thought of hurting them. They were too pretty to hurt, and everybody liked to see them. It made a visit to the beach so much more enjoyable than if there had been no birds."

Mrs. Lyndon stopped and looked away a moment as if saddened by unpleasant recollections.

"Then, Archie, a great change came to the beach. The report went around that gulls' wings were worth a good deal of money. They looked so much like the wings of doves that milliners were ready to buy them for trimming ladies' hats. At first we didn't think very much about it. There were so many gulls that a few wouldn't be missed. A good many gunners went out on the beach and shot them every day. I was a very little girl then, and didn't understand all that was going on

"I remember one day when I was standing near the bay over which the gulls often flew in great flocks that I saw a man in a boat take up his gun and shoot at a few gulls over his head. He killed two right before my eyes. I saw them drop in the water dead. I was so sorry for them, and so angry at the gunner, that my little hands clenched, and I think I called out to him.

"But he was not interested in little girls. Another gull flew near him, and he raised his gun and shot again. But this time he only wounded his bird. The gull flew toward the land with a loud cry of pain. But it was so badly injured that it could not fly far. It fell in the tall grass near me, and the gunner started to row ashore to get it.

"But he didn't get that gull, Archie. I ran after it and picked it up in my arms, and raced for home. The gunner called to me, and said something that was not very pleasant. But I paid no heed to him. I would not let him kill that gull.

"Well, my little gull was crippled, but not mortally wounded. I kept it in my room, and nursed it back to health and strength. I fed it out of my own hands, and it trusted me so that it would perch on my shoulders to eat out of my mouth.

"It was a pet that one could never forget. I loved it only as a little girl without brothers and sisters can love a beautiful pet. But there was one thing I feared. When the gull grew strong enough to fly I knew it would leave me. It would go back to its companions and mates, and live with them.

I did not want it to get strong too fast. But each day its wing healed, and one day it tried its flight. It flew across the yard, and seemed surprised that it could do it. Then the next day it flew a little further, and every day thereafter it made a longer flight.

"One day it took a farewell of me. It was in the spring, and the gulls were returning to their breeding beach for another season. I knew this, because they had always done so in the spring. My gull knew it, too, and that is why it left.

"It flew up into the air, circled around several times, and then flew straight across the water and disappeared in the direction of the island beach five miles away. I cried a good deal, and missed my pet more than I had anything before in my life. I never expected to see it again.

"But a few days later I was surprised to see a bird flying across the bay, and as it came nearer I knew that it was a gull. Even then I didn't expect to find that is was my pet. But imagine my delight when it came nearer and nearer, and after circling around a few times lighted on my shoulder. Yes, my gull had come back!"

"O mother, and did it stay?" asked Archie.

"Yes, it stayed with me a long time afterward. But do you know why it came back, Archie-"

"No," was the quick, eager answer.

"Because the gunners had killed off all its companions. The beach that had been its home was now deserted. Every gull had been killed or driven away. My pet gull had found the beach a desolate place, and in its loneliness it had returned to me. It had no other home."

There was a long silence. Archie's eyes were wide open, and his lips parted. Suddenly he looked up and said:

"Mother, I don't ever want to see you wear birdies on your hat. If you do, I

I—will think''—

Mrs. Lyndon kissed him before the sentence was finished. ''I can't wear them, dear, for it would remind me too much of my pet gull and its dead companions.''—George E. Walsh, in Zion's Herald.

I CAN'T.

There is an old story of a father who tested his sons by giving them a bundle of sticks to break. Each tried his strength upon it, but in vain. At last, when all had failed, the father quietly untied the bundle and showed them how easy it was to break all by taking them one at a time.

Too many of us say we cannot do a thing when what we should say is that we cannot do it all at once. No one can. It is step by step that things are accomplished. A young man is sometimes daunted by his first vision of life. Everything worth while looks very difficult, almost impossible of achievement. But he can make a beginning. Then the next step will be easier. No one is required to master a business or profession in a night. No one achieves anything but by the patient work of day after day. We do not grow suddenly to our full stature.

When the word of the Lord first came to Jeremiah he said, ''I know not how to speak; for I am a child.'' But God rebuked him with the answer. ''Say not I am a child; for to whomsoever I shall send thee thou shalt go, and whatsoever I shall command thee thou shalt speak. Be not afraid because of them; for I am with thee to deliver thee.''

Still, to-day, as in the time of Jeremiah, if anyone is hesitating before a plain duty, saying in his heart, ''I cannot,'' God is ready to answer. ''Be not afraid. I am with thee.'' The impossible thing shall grow possible as we attempt it, bit by bit.

THE MONEY QUESTION.

In China, some years ago, the missionaries in Peking found that a home was needed for starving, friendless old women. One of the missionaries was describing the great need to a friend. ''There is only one perplexing question,'' she said, ''Where can we get the money?''

''Money?'' answered the friend very warmly. ''There is plenty of it in this world, and none will be needed for the next—so we'll not stop for that!''

The home is now built and is the one charity in Peking that does not call for outside help. The money question was easy to answer, after all. It always is when taken in so high a spirit.

Plenty of money in this world and none needed in the next! So much plain truth is rarely packed into a few words. There is plenty of money for all good causes, plenty for all honest people, too. It is only the selfishness of men which makes money scarce. Modern economists of the newest school insist that poverty is not only miserable, but unnecessary in any civilized nation. Cut off extravagance and avarice and selfishness and idleness and vice, and there is plenty of money for each industrious household to thrive upon. There is plenty for missions, plenty for the old, plenty for the orphan, plenty for all right things.

But there is none for the next—not one dollar. Money is a thing of time, and utterly useless in eternity. ''Shrouds have no pockets,'' is grim, but true. Money will give a man or woman no consequence, no power whatever when the feet step across the threshold of death. Whatever power for eternity it can gain is in using it for God now and here. Money can indeed lay up treasure in heaven—but only by being laid down, generously and self-denyingly, in the spirit of Christ, here on earth, while there is time.

Plenty of money in this world, and none needed in the next! It pays to think over the words, and act on them.

THE BIBLE IN THE HOME.

The Bible in the home means much for the young who grow up therein. It is not precept that counts so much as example; and however far any may wander even from such a home, they can never doubt that religion can be real, or that God has spoken to men in words they can hear and understand. It is from such homes that the Bible goes out to serve in other homes and other lands—in the sailor's box, the servant girl's trunk the emigrant's baggage. It cheers the mother's heart to know that although her son is far away, he nevertheless draws near to God in His Word; and that space vanishes as the sundered ones meet around the throne. And who can tell how many have been kept from evil amid new surroundings and strange temptations, by the habit of daily reading some portion of God's Word.

It is told of a mother of a family whose husband was an unbeliever, who jeered at religion even before his children, that she nevertheless succeeded in bringing them all up in the fear of the Lord. When asked how she managed this she said—''Because to the authority of a father I did not oppose the authority of a mother, but that of God. From their earliest years my children have always seen the Bible on my table. This Holy Book has constituted the whole of their religious instruction. I was silent, that I might allow it to speak. Did they propose a question, did they commit any fault, did they perform any good action—I opened the Bible, answered, reproved, or encouraged them. The constant reading of the Scriptures alone has brought the prodigy which surprises you.''—Christian Vanguard.

We wish every Judge in North Carolina, and elsewhere as for that matter, had the conviction about the cigarette that Judge James L. Webb, of our District Court has, and then would not cavil at making those convictions, but speak them out in the open as did Judge Webb to the Grand Jury at Raleigh last week. The Judge went straight to the mark in words to this effect:

''This is a fast age and men often don't take time to raise their children. They want to make money and get rich quick. They will take cognizance of the death of a pig or the loss of a chicken.,

''All this time somebody is selling the boys something. It is not liquor as a rule, for boys of the ages from eight to ten or twelve do not drink. But the boys are smoking by stealth, running behind the house where they can't be seen. You see them every day and night puffing away at the cigarette. I don't know what it is that is harmful about them, but the scientists do. It would make your heart bleed if you went over this State as I have done and saw the boys killing themselves smoking cigarettes. It is killing hundreds and thousands of them in North Carolina. I have seen four or five of the finest young fellows that I have ever known, die from this cause.

''And it is not only killing the boys but it hurts young men. I have made up my mind that if I ever get a man who sells cigarettes to boys, he will get such punishment as will keep him from selling any more soon. I think when we see a boy smoking, it is the duty of every good citizen in North Carolina to put his arm around that boy and beg him to quit.''

—Another one of the Allens, young Claude Swanson Allen, this time, now notorious for shooting up Corroll County Court, Hillsville, Va., March 13, gave himself up last Thursday and was landed in jail. He was worn with fatigue and exposure and hunger, not having slept in a bed since the day of the tragedy, and expressed himself as glad to be under roof again. Strange indeed that men, in a mad fit, in hot anger, will do a deed in a moment that means loss of home, family, property, good name, character, protection of the law and life itself in the electric chair. ''The way of the transgressor is hard.''

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, APRIL 14.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject: "Enriching the Lord's Day," Mark 2:23-28; 3:1-6.

The Sabbath is both a religious and a civil institution. It is recognized generally—everybody knows the day— but is there anythng like a proper observance of it? There are thousands of men whose work on Sunday is not different from that of other days. This is bad enough, but in their case there is at least a colorable excuse—that is, in most cases. But what shall we say of the business man who closes his office on the day, but spends it in joy-riding, in dissipation, in "riotous living?" What of those who are poorer who spend it in loafing and carousing? What of those who make it a day of desecration?

It is true that the Sabbath was made for man, but never did the author of that expression mean such a construction as people have attempted to put upon it. It was not made for those things that weaken, destroy and kill. It is for man that man may cease from work and turn to the things that build and strengthen him; that he may give comfort and peace to those who need his interest, his sympathy, his help. Are we using it thus?

The Jewish Sabbath was the seventh day, or at the end of the week. The Lord's Day is the beginning of the week, and shows us that worship is not alone for remembrance of God's blessings, but for beginning of our service. Devotion should begin every duty. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God."

"The Jewish Sabbath commemorated the creation of the heavens and earth and the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage. (See Ex. 20:8-11; Deut. 5:12-15). But the Lord's Day commemorates the finishing of the work of salvation. Those who insist that we should keep the Jewish Sabbath on the seventh day of the week retain a Sabbath that does not bring to mind God's finished work of grace. They miss the point of the whole matter."

Points from Eloquent Pens.

He who ordained the Sabbath loves the poor.—Holmes.

The reward of good works is like dates, sweet and ripening late.—Talmage.

A world without a Sabbath would be like a man without a smile—like a summer without flowers.—Beecher.

The Sabbath is to be enriched by whatever lays up treasure in heaven; it cannot be enriched in any other way.—Amos R. Wells.

Sundays are windows burnished by angels through which we look out from the great temple of religion upon the want and sins of the world.

Moses read in the light of the burning bush that everywhere is holy ground, and in the light of the life of Christ we may read that every day is a holy day, or that no day is truly holy with us. Christ accepts no honors on Sunday from him who goeth forth dishonoring him on Monday.

When a gentleman was inspecting a house in New Castle, with a view to hiring it, the landlord took him to an upper window, and said, "You can see Durham Cathedral from this window on Sunday." "Why on Sunday above any other day?" inquired the man. "Because on that day there is no smoke from those tall chimneys." Blessed is is the Sabbath when the earth-smoke of care and turmoil no longer beclouds our view.—Rev. Charles H. Surgeon.

"Mamma," said a little boy one Sunday afternoon, "I s'pose they call this day a holy day because it's such a loving day." "Why, every day is a loving day," said his mother; "I love papa, he loves me, and we both love you and baby every day as well as on the Sabbath day." "I know it, mamma, but other days you haven't time to say so, and father can't take me to hear the singing, and he can't 'muse me on his knee, and tell me stories 'bout good boys 'cept on Sunday. O, yes, mamma, it is a loving day." A large part of every Sunday should be spent at home cherishing the domestic relationship. Next to public worship no other Sunday duty can be more important.—Mary E. Watson.

Daily Readings.

April 8.—By church-going, Luke 4:16-19.

April 9.—By Bible study, Ps. 1:1-3.

April 10.—By kindly deeds, Matt. 12:9-13.

April 11.—By visitation, Jas. 126-27.

April 12.—By restfulness, Ex. 20:8-11.

April 13.—By service, Mark 6:1-6.

April 14.—Topic.

THE EFFICIENCY CAMPAIGN.

What it Is.

It is an endeavor on the part of the United Society and the state and local unions, to better the work of the societies along twenty-eight specific lines.

These lines include (1) study of Christian Endeavor methods and principles; (2-11) advance work for the leading committees; (12, 13) improvement in prayer and testimony; (14-16) in consecration meetings, leaders, and singing; (17-19) in society finances, giving, and business meetings; (20) in socials; (21) in evangelism; (22) organization of a study class; (23) better private devotions; (24, 25) work for honorary and associate members; (26, 27) aiding the church services and the pastor; (28) backing up the union.

What It Will Do.

It will rejuvenate your society, and make it as nearly ideal as this faulty human nature of ours will permit.

How to Find Out About It.

Send a two-cent stamp to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Tremont Temple, Boston, for the circular describing the efficiency campaign. Then read it.

Then do it.

CLASS ARRANGEMENT.

By Ms. J. J. Lincoln.

To exemplify we will have to choose a particular school. Let us say that the one we are looking at has six elementary classes; two junior, two primary, one beginners', and one infant. The last named is composed of children under five, children yet too young to do any certain amount of memory work. They can do some, one child more, another less. If there is a prescribed course of supplemental lessons they do not apply to this class. It is the baby class and serves as feeder for the beginners' class next year.

The church building at which we are looking has a main room, a Sunday school room, 18 x 30, and an unfurnished pastor's study, 8 x 8. Now how and where shall the six elementary classes be located? There are five other classes that must occupy the main room. Our purpose here is to suggest the best arrangement for the six. The Sunday school room accommodates three classes. Shall it be the three lowest? We think not Let us hang our curtain, crosswise, cutting off about one third of Sunday school room. There we have space for beginners. Now we divide the larger end, this time lengthwise, and there we have first and second primary. Let the infants have the study.

The Juniors, two classes, can do no better than occupy a part of the main room, but by all means let them have corners, preferably in the rear, that can be most conveniently curtained or screened. This screening must be done if you would gain desired results. There is nothing else for these juniors to do, so they must be allowed to sit with and to have a part in the opening and closing exercises of the main school. At some stage let them have at least one song all their own. Best that it be the closing song and that they march from class to platform and remain in position for closing prayer.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed.

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 122 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston Salem.

10:15 p. m., No. 18 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

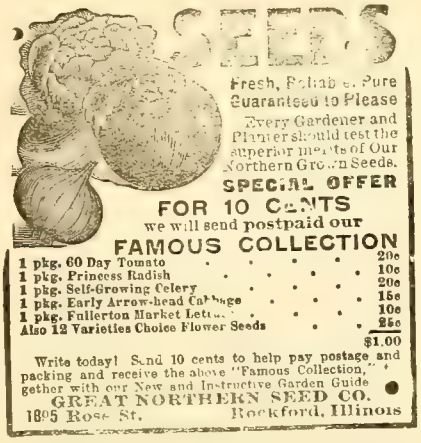
Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.



SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please
Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.
SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION
1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00
Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide.
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1895 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

For the class apartment a blackboard and a map are indisputable articles of equipment, and these if mounted on easels at right height furnish good part of the screening and thus serve a double purpose. By all means get the students' map of Palestine. It is the best yet. The infants may be in main school with parents or caretakers until time for class. They are then conducted to class apartment and kept there, that is, not allowed to return to main room. These tots possess a most happy advantage in having a room all to themselves with little low seats and an outer door. Every Sunday when weather admits, in the something like forty minutes that the children are held here, the teacher will want to give them some little rest exercises and nature lessons out in the open. For decoration of the room, flags and banners for use in out of door drills etc., and some permanent pictures are arranged upon the wall just above wainscoting, and around wainscoting either tacked, or pinned to burlap, and changed from Sunday to Sunday, are the crayon outlines, pictures, and other objects bearing on the lesson.

Now to return to the S. S. room. The curtains are drawn. The room has an organ and thee are low seats. Children have entered here one by one some having arrived perhaps fifteen minutes before the time for opening. They are just like children are apt to be—all over the room. What must be done to obtain quiet? Children, take your places. (?). Never. A call to order in that way would result in something like so many sheep scampering over a lumber pile.

There is but one entrance or exit without going through main room which must be avoided; if there were two the children as they march and sing could pass out by one, enter by the other, and take their places in good order. But what must be done must be done, and a way is found. The organ sounds the opening chord of some easy marching song. Without uttering a sound the teacher in charge demonstrates the time until all seem to have caught it and are moving in even step around the room. After making a few circuits the singing begins and one by one the children stop at their respective locations, then sit at a given signal. Or the march may be only instrumental and after all are seated the first song may be taken up. Or, another way, the marching song may be a giving song and each child as he passes around may place his contribution in a receptacle provided at some convenient place. When this point is reached the opening exercises advance not according to any stated program or routine, but if possible in as many ways as there are Sundays in the year.

But our paper has grown too long. We close the curtains. The six classes are now shut in and ready for the lesson. Next week we will try to speak of the teacher teaching.

NOTES.

—The floods in the Mississippi Valley are something terrible. The waters have risen as high as 56 feet.

—The storm on Tuesday unroofed scores of houses near Philadelphia, killing two women.

—Morgantown authorities decide to refuse liquor license to drug stores.

—A Goldsboro boy, aged 14, shot and killed an old negro man for his failure to pay 5 cents claimed by the boy.

—In the Wisconsin presidential primary, LaFollette is far ahead for the Republican nomination and Wilson for the Democratic.

—Bro. G. O. Coble was in Washington this week attending a meeting of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

—Milwaukee has voted out her Socialist mayor and other officers by electing a non-partisan ticket.

—United States Senator Robert L. Taylor, of Tennessee, is dead. He was also a lecturer and formerly governor of Tennessee, and was known as "Fiddling Bob" Taylor. He died in Washington from an operation for gall stones.

—Maine's delegation to the National Republican Convention is said to be thus divided: instructed for Roosevelt, 178; for Taft, 105; uninstructed, 115.

—Dr. J. E. Logan, of this city, died last Sunday, aged over 76. He was a man of peculiarly gentle disposition.

—Douglass Settle is on trial for the killing of a negro last fall. Settle says the killing was accidental: he was going out to shoot a screech owl, when his foot slipped, and his gun went off. Both men were drinking at the time.

Later. The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty" after four hours of deliberation.

—Score Charlotte again. Within a radius of 100 miles, taking that as a center, there are 483 cotton mills representing $165,000,000. capital. Some one says that 600 bales of cotton were raised last year within the city's limits also.

—The committee from the Lutheran Synod in this State, who had the matter in charge, decided by a vote of 5 to 4 to locate their woman's college at Salisbury. Lexington offered four beautiful sites of from 9 to 15 acres, and $19,000. in cash, and ran Salisbury the close vote for the school.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Sav n

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs. Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

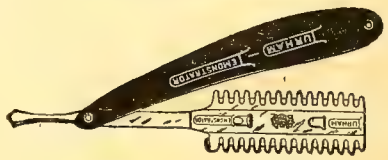
—The lower House of Congress passed a bill, 163 to 30, virtually taxing out of existence phosphorous matches, the high death rate among phosphorous match makers inspiring the bill and the large majority in its behalf. Numerous fires from the phosphorous match and millions of property loss ought also to count.

—An analysis of the dust swept from the streets of New York shows the presence of 12 per cent. of pulverized rubber, presumably worn from auto tires, trucks and so forth.

—If you see an Alice blue, art nouveau green or other brilliantly colored rat scampering about your house, be sure to kill it and the city of Seattle will pay you $2 for it. The city fathers have dyed 25 rats and let them loose in order to see how far they migrate.—Pathfinder.

—All the indictments against the 54 labor unionists and agents charged with being in the dynamite conspiracy have been bunched and all the accused will be tried at one time, beginning Oct. 1 next.

—Gov. Osborn of Mich. called a special session of the legislature to get it to pass a presidential primary law and other reform measures. But though he is a progressive he found the legislature reactionary, and it only passed a bill forbidding hatpins 10 inches long. As soon as it adjourned the governor called it back again into another special session.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th, or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.
Greensboro, N. C.

—Trust in the Lord and do good.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1912. NUMBER 24.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at th post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

PRAY FOR THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Let every member of the Methodist Protestant Church pray that our General Conference to meet next week in Baltimore may be divinely inspired and guided. Questions too great for human wisdom will come up, and the representatives of the Church will need the quickening and illumination that only the Spirit of God can give.

PDOF. S. SIMPSON.

Very unexpected to us is the word that Prof. Simpson is dead. We had not heard of his illness. A brief note from Rev. N. G. Bethea tells of his burial at Harris Chapel, the funeral being conducted by Bros. Bethea and Burgess.

Prof. Simpson was a member of the N. C. Annual Conference, but had for a long time been doing educational work in Maryland, first as a professor in Western Maryland College, and later as county superintendent of public instruction. In this work his efforts were highly satisfactory. More than thirty years ago he was at the head of Yadkin College, N. C., and labored earnestly to build up that institution. Untoward conditions caused him to accept a call to Westminster.

He was married years ago to Miss Gooch, of Granville County. Hence his burial at Harris Chapel.

Though he had been little among us of recent years, we feel a distinct loss in his death, and our sympathies go out to the bereaved family.

DR. LIGHTBOURNE.

We have in our city this week a preacher that deserves notice—Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, of Dover, Delaware. He is preaching every night in the Christian Church with good results. He is the pastor of a very large church in Dover whose membership is an index of Dr. Lightbourne's work and influence. Years ago, he was a Methodist Episcopal pastor. Some differences arose between him and the authorities of that church, and he withdrew from the church. Most of his congregation believed he was in the right, and withdrew with him, forming an independent church known as People's Church, with Dr. Lightbourne as pastor. The membership has since grown until it is very large.

In personal appearance, Dr. Lightbourne somewhat resembles our Rev. D. A. Braswell. He preaches interestingly, and holds attention well. He goes after men personally, and has many in his congregation who have been reclaimed by his efforts and those of other church members. He believes all the church members should be workers. He says he has no room in his crurch for mere "adherents." The word reminds him of barnacles on a ship. He thinks church members should inhere, and be a living, acting part of the church.

He says he and his wife have repeated every morning for ten years the following pledge:

"I accept Jesus Christ as my Savior, my Lord and my King, and I promise Him to try to strve Him every day in everything."

He testifies that his life has been more intensely happy since he made this complete consecration. He has induced thousands to take the same pledge, and his method of working for converts is to ask his hearers to take the same pledge, both church members and others.

ANTAGONISM OF SOCIALISTS TO CHRISTIANITY.

There are Christians who call themselves Socialists, and there are Socialists who call themselves Christians. There are some who go so far as to say that Christianity and Socialism are one and the same thing, and that therefore all true Christians are Socialists, and all true Socialists are Christians.

But from our reading, we understand it to be a fact, taking the world into view, that the great majority of those calling themselves Socialists not only do not call themselves Christians, but expressly deny faith in Christ.

With this large class of Socialists, the ruling spirit is different from the spirit of Christ and of Christianity. Christ laid chief stress on spiritual good, these Socialists lay chief stress on material good.

When the Church of Christ in the spirit of the Master, encourages men to be patient and endure want and even injustice, out of regard to the exceeding great reward to be received hereafter and which will make present afflictions seem light and transient, the Socialists grow angry, and assert that the Church is in league with the oppressors. They declare they will not be cheated out of all good by the church's deceptive hope of good to be received in some hypothetical future life. This life is all they know or care to consider, and they grow bitter against the Church and denounce Christ himself as a mere impractical dreamer.

It occurs to us that the New Testament predictions of the coming anti-Christ have fulfillment in the anti-Christian Socialists of our time. What conduct of men could be more antagonistic to Christ than that which opposes His teachings and conceptions of life and tries to fill men's thoughts with opposing teachings and opposing conceptions?

In view of not only the un-Christian, but the anti-Christian character of the great majority of the Socialists of the world, does it not seems that real Christians would be slow to join the movement animated and directed by the spirit of such men?

THE ORIGIN OF METHODISM.

First Things and Rising Heroes.

The word Methodism was only an old term revived and not one newly coined. There bad been, ages earlier, a school of physicians who discarded observation and held to the pure deductions of reason and logic. They took the name of Methodists, conveying thereby their strict adherence to logical process. Their success in practice is not reported; their school was not long-lived.

When, now, in 1729, John Wesley, leading half a dozen young gentlemen at Oxford University, began to read the New Testament in Greek and to try to conform their ideas and their behavior most strictly to the same, a young gentleman of Christ Church called out, "Here is a new set of Methodists sprung up."

The new, quaint name found instant currency, and the "set" were known as Methodists all over the University. Thus came the word now familiar through all the world.

January 1, 1739, was the first watch-night in Methodism. Whitefield and the Wesleys, with some sixty brethren were at love-feast in Fetterlane. The first Methodist Conference, Monday, June 25, 1744. It opened in a foundry in London, with John Wesley, Charles Wesley, John Hodges, Henry Piers, Samuel Taylor and Jno. Meriton. Asa Shinn was the founder of the Meth. Prot. Church. This body formed in 1830. M. E. Church, South, was formed May, 1845. Joshua Soule, first Bishop of the M. E. Church, South; seventh Bishop of the M. E. Church. William Walters; first American itinterant, Barbara Heck; first American Methodist.

The first trace of Sunday school is found at Wycomb where in 1760, Hannah Ball, a Methodist girl, opened one for the training of children in Scripture.

Twelve years later, Mrs. Bradburn (whose husband was the "Demosthenes of Methodism") was conversing at Gloucester with Robert Raikes, publisher of the Gloucester Journal, "What can we do for them?" asked he, pointing to groups of street Arabs—children, poor, neglected , and depraved, "Let us teach them to read and take them to church," said she. No time was lost. Soon Robert Raikes and Sophia Cook were leading to church the van of the "Sunday School Army," a ragged train, well jeered by the gazing crowd, but a vision dear to overhanging angels.

Rowland Hill opened the first one at London in 1786, the year of Asbury's opening the first one in the United States.

O. D. Stacy.

COURAGE.

The world owes much to its men and women of courage. The courage that shows itself in silent effort in one's daily activities—that dares to endure all and to suffer all for the sake of truth and duty. This kind of courage is more heroic than the achievements of physical valor which are rewarded by honors and titles, or by laurels steeped in blood. Moral courage is essential to the highest degree of manhood and womanhood—the courage always to speak the truth the courage to be just, the courage to be honest; the courage to resist temptation; the courage to do one's duty.

Every progressive step in man's history has been made face to face with opposition, difficulty, and oftentimes, death. At the age of seventy-two, Socrates was forced to drink the poison hemlock at Athens because his lofty teachings ran counter to the party spirit of his age. Bruno was burnt at Rome for exposing the false pholosophy of his day. When Martin Luther was hard pressed by his enemies at Augsburg, he said: "If I had five hundred heads I would lose them all, rather than recall my article on faith which I have written." Like all courageous men of yesterday, today, and tomorrow, he grew in strength in proportion to the difficulties he had to encounter and overcome.

An almost unparalleled example of true, genuine courage is that of Pancras, a lad of fourteen who was brought before the Emperor in the Diocletian Palace to answer for his adherence to Christianity. When the emperor, Diocletian, told him that he would be executed if he did not renounce his religion and worship the gods of Rome, he straightened himself proudly before the emperor, and, with that courage and bravery that is characteristic of every true follower of Christ, declared: "My Lord and Master, whom I serve, inspires the souls of his servants, even as young as I am, with courage to die for His sake."

A man of courage and love for duty does not fear to die. To him death is insignifcant compared with the ignominy of cowardice. Sir John Eliot went bravely to his death saying: "Ten thousand deaths rather than defile my conscience, the chastity and purity of which I value beyond all this world." In his prison thoughts before his execution, Eliot wrote "He that fears not to die, fears nothing. There is a time to live and a time to die. A good death is far better and more desirable than an ill life. A wise man lives, but so long as his life is worth more than his death, the longer life is not always the better."

Dear reader, you may never be forced to sacrifice either your life or your religion; you may never be called upon to fight an enemy on the nation's battlefield; you may never listen to the thunder and clash of war; you many never march at the front and lead some mighty arm on to victory, but you today are engaged in a conflict on life's great battle field that calls for more courage than was ever needed by a general to impel him on to victory, on the field of carnage. See to it that you walk in such a way in your daily life as will develop in you courage that will enable you to win successfully every victory over both self and sin.

Will H. Neese.

Elon College, N. C., May 6, 1912.

CONFEDERATE BALLS.

We do not think it is well to give public balls for the entertainment of Confederate Veterans.

Three Bishops in North Carolina, twenty-one Presiding Elders, and nine Editors of the Religious Papers of the State have signed the above statement.

Let the dancers stay away from our meetings. Let us Veterans talk, sing and pray and help each other toward God and Heaven.

A. D. Betts,

Chaplain N. C. Division Con. Veterans.

THE POWER OF LOVE,

In the highlands of Scotland dwelt a mother, a widow, with her only child, a beautiful daughter. One day this daughter, grown to young womanhood, left mother and home, to become an abandoned, dissolute woman. Through the heavy years the mother watched, waited and prayed for her return. But the way of the wanderer is long and devious. The girl did not return. Finally the mother sold enough of her small possessions to enable her to make a search, like her Master, for that which was lost. Taking a picture of the fair-faced and laughing child, she journeyed through cities and towns, showing the loved one's likness to all whom she met, saying: "Ha ye seen my bonnie, bonnie lassie girl?" From city to city she made her quest of love and patient motherhood, only to be told that she could never hope to find her child—that no one, not even she herself, would be able to recognize the sin scarred girl from the picture of the beautiful child she held in her starving hands. Eventually she reached London, and after diligent search and failure, with her small store of money all but gone, she took the remainder, had her picture made, bought as many copies as the money would purchase, wrote beneath her own face the words: "My bonnie, bonnie lassie, come home." Out into the streets she went, "despising," as did her Lord, "the shame," and nailed her mother-love and face and heart-call to the light-posts and street corners of that great city—a modern cross as sacrificial unto her as was the cruel beam upon which the "King of kings" had stretched His holy love to heart break, on pitiless Golgotha's brow.

Leaving London she went back to her desolate home in the highlands to await what love could do. One night two drunken women made their way down a foul, black alley. One of them chanced to see a white object on a light-post, staggered to it, and, lifting her eyes, looked full into her mother's face, beautiful beneath her crown of sorrow, and love fathomless as the seas shining from her eyes. She read the sweet words: "My bonnie, bonnie lassie, come home," and fell at the foot of that cross. When they lifted her up she was sober, saying between her broken sobs: "I am going back to mither." She went back home to the dear watcher waiting there, and in the after years the glory of her transformed life was felt in the rarest of ministries to the poor, the sick, the destitute, the sinful, and the dying.—Rev. Thos. W. Fessenden.

TOBACCO—A PARABLE.

(We have published this before, but by request publish it again.—Editor.)

Then shall the kingdom of Satan be likened to a grain of tobacco seed, which, though exceeding small, being cast into the ground grew, and became a great plant, and spread its leaves rank and broad, so that huge and vile worms formed a habitation thereon. And it came to pass, in the course of time, that sons of men looked upon it, and thought it beautiful to look upon and much to be desired to make lads look big and manly. So they did put forth their hands and did chew thereof; and some it made sick, and others to vomit most filthily. And it further came to pass that those who chewed it became weak and unmanly, and said we are enslaved and cannot cease from chewing it.

And the mouths of all that were enslaved became foul and they were seized with a violent spitting; and that did spit even in ladies' parlors, and in the house of the Lord of hosts; and the saints of the Most High were greatly plagued thereby. And in the course of time it came also to pass that others snuffed it; and they were taken suddenly with fits and they did sneeze with a great and mighty sneezing, insomuch that their eyes filled with tears, and they did look exceeding silly. And yet others cunningly wrought the leaves thereof into rolls, and did set fire to the end thereof, and did suck vehemently at the other end thereof, and did look very grave and calf-like; and the smoke of their torment ascended up forever and ever, and the cultivation thereof became a great and mighty business on the earth; and the merchants waxed rich by the commerce thereof. And it came to pass that the saints of the Most High defiled themselves therewith; even the poor who could not buy shoes, nor bread, nor books for their little ones, spent their money for it. And the Lord was greatly displeased therewith and said: "Wherefore this waste? Why do these little ones lack bread and shoes and books? Turn now your fields into corn and wheat, and put this evil thing far from you; and be separate and defile not yourselves any more; and I will bless you and cause my face to shine on you. But with one accord they exclaimed, "We cannot cease from chewing, snuffing and puffing—we are slaves." —Christian Secretary.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Faith in fellow man is necessary for us now in our social affairs. If we had no faith in fellow men, what would we do? How could we live? There is a fearful lack of faith, and there is a cause. Faith in man is as faith in God, it is by literal means.

The example for tithing by Abraham throws on a great light, just such as we need. The tithing by Abraham was not a wasteful act. If the act was best for the father of the faithful, how about all others who would have faith in God and man. I don't hesitate at all to say that tithing is strictly a means of faith in God and man. Tithing is something of the best of Bible politics, and all are obligated alike—all both "saints and sinners." Duty between the Christian and the sinner is not as wide as some people think. A bad man is not exempt from doing right, if he was, you could not blame him for doing wrong. He is responsible for his wrong doing, and there are others (even better than he) who are also responsible for his acts. The well-to-do people of this land are seriously responsible for those who are not so fortunate. The Bible shows the fortunate, the talented, how to help those who are not so fortunate. The talented are seriously deluded when they think that they have their fine gifts to be independent with.

Moses, who was the ablest man of his day, the most talented, felt his obligations to the help and uplift of suffering humanity more than any man—and God called him to act it out. As we read: "Now the man, Moses, was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth."

At the time when the "man, Moses," was so very meek, he had more faith in fellowmen than any man of his day—"me thinks so."

All the strife and competition, and wild commercialism in the world, (even the building up of fierce navies) comes by a lack of faith in fellow men. Of course faith in God is first, but this effort has reference to faith (or the lack of faith) in fellow men. Some might ask, "how can we have faith in our fellowmen when they are not under control?" That is exactly the question before us now, and it involves literal tithing, and actual sacrifice—and is obligatory to one and all, and the question of the piety of a people is not in the consideration or is only a part of the question.

The above inference is that all are obligated to duty and sacrifice whether they are counted religious and pious or not.

When we need the physician we do not ask about whether he is "pious," but we want his help. However, there is one physician who will get down and pray for his sick patients, and yet it is said that he does not belong to the church, and it is said, too, that he has unusual success in "healing the sick." When I urge for the duty of tithing I am aware of the fact that the conditions inside of this our commonwealth are not in shape for tithing from some classes, or persons. Our social obligations are so vast and so complicated that they are a "problem." W. F. Grabs.

GOOD YEAR FOR HOME MISSIONS.

I think the church will be gratified to know that the receipt from the churches of the Board of Home Missions are larger than for any other annual period in the history of the Board.

The income from the churches for the last four years is as follows: For the year ending April 30, 1909, $11,561.76
1910, 11,922.60
1911, 12,093.80
1912, 13,359.70

In behalf of the Board of Home Missions, I wish to express my sincere thanks to all who have made this splendid increase in the receipts of the Board a possibility.

The Methodist Protestant Church has great opportunities in her Home Mission fields. Her success here is only measured by her contributions.

A summarized report of our work for the Quadriennium will reach the pastors and Sabbath school Superintendents in a short time. The copy is now in the hands of the printer for this report.

Faithfully yours,

Charles H. Beck, Sec.-Treas.

West Lafayette, O., May 3, 1912.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The severals Boards, Institutions and Periodicals of the Methodist Protestant Church will please take notice that the annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Church will convene in the city of Baltimore on Tuesday, May the 14th, preceding the meeting of the General Conference. The first public session of the Committee will be held at 8:00 o'clock P. M.

The Committee will hold a preliminary meeting at 3:30 P. M., Tuesday in the office of the Publishing House, at which place notice will be given of the place of the other meetings of the Executice Committee.

Invitation is extended to all the Presidents of Annual Conferences, and to the members of the General Conference to meet with the Committee in all its public sessions, and to take part in the discussions.

This should be one of the most important and interesting annual meetings the Committee has held.

The law requires all Boards and Institutions of the Church to make annual reports to the Executive Committee, and we urge that these reports be full and complete as the Committee will have only a srort time in which to prepare its report to the General Conferen, as it is required to do.

Each member of the Committee is urged to be present at the first meeting on Tues afternoon, as stated above, prepared for most important work for the Church.

R. T. Pickens. Secretary.

High Point, N. C.

PROVISIONAL PROGRAM DENOMINATIONAL C. E. CONVENTION.

Baltimore, May 14-16.

Opening Session, Tuesday Evening.

7:45—Song and Praise by Chorister Rev. E. D. Stone.

8:15—Addresses of Welcome.

Response.

President's Address.

Wednesday Morning, Theme, "Loyalty."

8:30—Song Service by Chorister Rev. E. D. Stone.

8:45—Preparatory Service, H. L. Feeman, D. D.

9:15—Loyalty to the King and His Business.

9:30—Loyalty to the Church and her Work.

9:45—Loyalty to Our Denomination, Rev. Jesse R. Jones.

10:00—Loyalty to our Higher Ideals.

10:15—The Power of the Loyal Life, Rev. Frank T. Benson.

10:30—What shall I render unto God, Rev. G. Kilmer Ackley.

Bible School Section.

10:45—The Church of To-morrow, Rev. A. G. Dixon.

11:00—Bible-school Conferences:

Teacher Training, Rev. R. E. Games.

The Organized Class, Rev. C. S. Johnson.

Problems and Methods, Rev. B. W. Kindley.

Wednesday Afternoon. Theme, "Efficiency."

1:30—Praise and Prayer by Chorister Rev. E. D. Stone.

1:45—"A Workman that needeth not to be Ashamed," Rev. I. A. Brice.

2:00—The Christian Steward and His Money, Rev. A. J. Christy.

2:15—The Christian Steward, His Time and Talents, Rev. E. S. Hawkins.

2:30—Personal Evangelization and Soul Winning.

2:45—Reasons Why Christian Endeavor Trains, Rev. L. F. Warner.

3:00—The Price of Christian Leadership, Rev. C. S. Johnson.

3:15—Christian Education, George R. Brown, D. D.

Intermediate and Junior Section, Miss Pearl Smith, Chairman.

3:30—The Place and Importance of an Intermediate Society, Mrs. R. T. Lewis.

3:15—Junior Address.

3:30—Junior Rally.

Talk to Juniors, J. C. Broomfield, D. D.

Wednesday Evening, May 15.

7:45—Service of Song, Rev. E. D. Stone, Chorister.

8:15—Address.

8:30—Special Music.

8:45—"Nail up the Railing," C. H. Hubbell, D. D.

Thursday Morning—Departmental Work And Missions.

8:30—Song Service.

8:45—Preparatory Service, H. L. Feeman, D. D.

9:15—Short Reports from Conference Union Presidents.

9:45—Christian Citizenship Department, James H. Straughn, D. D.

10:00—Junior Department, Miss Pearl M. Smith.

10:15—Our Membership and Standing, Rev. R. E. Games.

10:30—Our Missionary Department, Rev. P. W. Dierberger.

10:45—Developing our Departments, C. H. Hubbell, D. D.

11:00—"The Feild Near Home," C. H. Beck, D. D.

11:20—"Our Missionary Opportunity," Rev. Fred C. Klein.

Thursday Afternoon—Theme, "Righteousness."

1:30—Praise and Prayer, Chorister Rev. E. D. Stone.

1:45—Christian Endeavor and the Spiritual Life of the Young, Rev. J. C. McCain.

2:00—Prayer and Righteousness, Rev. J. O. Ledbetter.

9:30—The Righteous Life in Service, T. J. Strickler, D. D.

2:45—The Necessity of Real Righteousness, Rev. C. M. Clayton.

3:00—The Deeper Life, Rev. John W. Hawley.

3:15—The True Endeavorer, Rev. Clifford Kidd.

3:30—Sectional C. E. Conferences.

Junior, Miss Pearl M. Smith.

Missionary, Rev. Geo. H. Miller.

Practical Methods.

Thursday Evening—Closing Service.

7:45—Song and Praise, Rev. E. D. Stone.

8:15—Address, John H. Lucas, D. D.

8:45—Consecration and Farewell.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Psalms 84—90.

DANGER OF CATHOLICISM.

(This article was sent us by a brother in South Carolina with the request that it be published.)

There are various opinions as to the influence and power of the Roman Catholic church on the social, political, moral and religious life of the people of the United States. Some do not think they will ever dominate or, to any extent, control these questions, while others, and quite a number of the leading and thinking men of America, are alarmed over the inroads they are making on our institutions and fear that in the coming future the iron heel of the Pope will be upon the neck of the American people.

We herewith give a few extracts from the pen of the men who have studied the question and who are in position to speak with some degree of knowledge. From, "Plain Truth," published in Arkansas, the following is taken:

THE NEW CARDINALS IN AMERICA.

News dispatches tell us that at Rome, when the Pope gave the new made American and English cardinals the red hats, they each took the regulation Romanish oath to obey the Pope in all things, then kissed his foot, and then he gave them red hats and made them "princes of the church." The Pope was carried around on a bedecked throne, carried on the shoulders of his servitors, he is so "humble and Christ-like."

Then the Pope sent "his blessings to the American people," as if they had asked him for the farce!

Then the new cardinals, all Irish, began to blow and boom the "home coming." In Boston and New York the military formed an "escort," in imitation of Pagan kingly glory, to attend the red-robed, red-hatted, religio-political Pope-made "princes" to the cathedrals.

In London, simultaneously the new cardinal had a tremendous procession to Westminster cathedral, the first time such thing has been permitted since the reformation.

In Boston it is Cardinal O'Connell, in New York Cardinal Farley, in London Cardinal Bourne, all Irish.

The Pope is flaunting the red flag of Popery in the faces of Protestanism and the American and English constitutions and flags.

We have told our readers how the president, vice-president, Speaker Clark, ex-Speaker Cannon, ex-president Roosevelt and Chief Justice White all bowed to Rome together last June in Baltimore to eulogize Cardinal Gibbons in red hat and robes.

What does all this mean? That both England and America are being Romanized, and are bending the knee to Rome for votes.

It is a betrayal of religious and political liberty, for every one of these officials knows that Romanism is a sworn enemy of both.

The constitution of the United States prohibits the reception of any title of nobility, by any citizen of this country, from any foreign prince, potentate or power, and yet here are these Romanish cardinals in red togs, conferred by the Pope, who considers himself the world's political and ecclesiastical lord and master, calling themselves "princes of the church," with parades, procession and military escorts, defying our constitution and insulting this republic.

Something is going to happen in America.

HOW THEY REGARD OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

"In America was born the free school system, and from the date of its birth in 1695 to the present, it has been the means of giving to this nation its most renowned statesmen, jurists, patriots, agriculturists, teachers and divines."

But against this most sacred product of American liberty, Rome lifts her unholy hands. Against her schools she hurls her worst anathemas. But it is our purpose in these chapters to let the Roman Catholic church speak for itself. Its language is plain and needs no interpretation.

"These public schools are devouring fire-pits of destruction. They ought to go back to the devil whence they came."—The Freeman's Journal.

"If your son or daughter is attending a state school, you may be sure that you are violating your duty as a Catholic parent and conducing to the everlasting despair and anguish of your child as if you could take your oath of it. Take them out. Let him never know how to write his name rather than become the bound and chained slave of satan.—The Shepherd of the Valley.

The common schools of this country are sinks of moral pollution and nurseries of hell."—Chicago Tablet.

"The public school system is a swindle on the people, an outrage on justice, a foul disgrace in matters of morals, and should be abolished forthwith."—N. Y. Tablet.

"The hideous fetish, called the public school, is only an ugly idol after all."—Colorado Catholic.

"It will be a glorious day for Roman Catholics in this country, when under the laws of justice and morality, our school system shall be shivered to pieces."—Catholic Telegraph.

"Unless you suppress the public school system, it will prove the damnation of this country."—Father Walker.

"I frankly confess that the Catholics stand before the country as enemies of the public schools.— Father Phelan.

"The duty of all loyal, God-fearing Christian men (Roman Catholics) then, I repeat it is to make common cause against this common foe." -Father Gleson.

"The public schools have produced nothing but a generation of thieves and blackguards." Priest Schaner.

"I would as soon administer the sacrament to a dog as to Catholics who send their children to the public schools." -Priest Walker.

"The public school system must be destroyed. It must be done by stopping Bible reading, psalm singing, and eliminating objectionable books."—Priest Phelan.

"The common school system in the United States is the worst in the world."—Manning.

"Education outside of the Catholic church is damnable heresy." Pius. IX

"It is desirable, venerable brethren, that in concert with your colleagues in the Episcopate, your efforts and your zeal, guard Catholic children from frequenting schools in which their religious instruction is neglected, and open danger of spiritual loss incurred. Therefore, we desire, as has already been intimated to you by the propaganda, that in approaching Episcopal meetings you carefully discuss the measures that may best help to attain this end.

We wish you also to use your earnest efforts that the civil magistrates, who know well that nothing is more advantageous to the commonwealth than religion should provide, by the enactment of wise laws, that the office of teaching, which is carried on at the expense of the public, including constantly the contributions of Catholics, should contain nothing that stands in the way of their conscience runs foul of their religion.—Leo XIII.

THEIR GROWTH AND STRENGTH IN AMERICA.

There are over 15,000,000 Catholics in the United States, and they are healthy voters on election day. That is wherefore in Maj. Archie Butts' visit to the pope. And Dr. Woodrow Wilson, strict old Presbyterian that he is, shows an inclination to covet that vote. The dispatch from Chicago relating the circumstances of Gov. Wilson's suit case and personal letters being stolen naively says that the theft occurred while he was out lunching with some notable Catholic priest.

There are 15,015,569 Catholics in the United States proper, according to the 1912 editon of "Kennedy" official Catholic Directory, which is authority also for the following statistics.

A year ago the Catholic population of the country was 14,618,761, while ten years ago it was 10,976,757, showing an increase of 4,028,812 for the decade. Twenty years ago Catholics numbered 8,615,185, showing that within 20 years the Catholic population has nearly doubled.

There are 171,491 Catholic priestes in the United States and 13,939 Catholic Churches, of which 8,256 have resident priests the other 4,683 being mission churches. The directory also shows that there are 14 archbishops, 29 titular archbishops, 97 bishops, two archabbots and 15 abbots in the union. Furthermore there are 83 seminaries with 6,006 students preparing for the priesthood; 219 colleges for boys and 701 academics for girls. There are 5,119 parochial schools with an attendance of 1,333,796. There are also 289 orphan asylums caring for 47,111 orphans. Including the children in parochial schools, orphan asylums, academies, colleges and other charitable institutions, the grand total of young people under Catholic care amounts to 1,540,049.

New York leads all other states in the number of Catholics with 2,778,076; Pennsylvania second with 1,616,020; Illinois tihrd with 1,449,460 and Massachusetts fourth with 1,381,212. The only Southern states given with the number of Catholics follow: Louisiana, 58[illegible]; Texas 300,018; Maryland 230,000, and Kentucky 158,984.—Daily Mail.

— Bro. Curry suggests that our delegation to General Conference provide for reports to our daily papers.

From Pastors and People.

Notice!

The second quarterly meeting of Ivy Ct., will be held at Pleasant Gap Church beginning Saturday, May 11th. Preaching at 10 A. M.; communion on Sunday following by the pastor, Rev. S. B. Stephens. The official members of all the churches on the circuit are requested to be present on Saturday and over Sunday as there is much business to attend to at the quarterly meeting. The stewards are expected to report favorably the pastor's salary for the quarter ending. Respectfully,

R. R. Ray, Secretary.

(The editor regrets trat this notice was overlooked last week.)

Alamance Ct.

On the third Sunday in May at eleven o'clock the Woman's Missionary Society of Bethel, Alamance Ct., will hold its Anniversary Meeting. Missions is the subject. There will be a few selections by members of the society and a sermon by Rev. R. S. Troxler, of Liberty Ct.

Rev. W. M. Pike will preach at Mount Pleasant same day.

Denton Mission.

On April 8th, I visted Rev. John Hulin's, and soon after I had arrived Miss Maud Hulin, the daughter of Bro. John Hulin, said to me: "I have some money for you." Now you preachers who have been on poor fields and no income of your own know how that makes such a preacher feel. Sister Maud then said, "I have made up so money to buy you a suit of clothes. That was a most pleasant surprise to me. The following are the names and amounts as she gave them to me: Bros. J. C. Morris, 25 cents; Kenny Peacock, 50 cents; Robert Merdick, 10 cents; H. C. Garner, 15 cents; A. G. Morris, $1.00; J. T. Sexton, 25 cents; J. R. Peace, $1.00; Pearl Shaw, 25 cents; W. F. Wills, 25 cents; Marvin Sexton, 50 cents; Edmon Sexton, 50 cents; T. O. Pender, 50 cents; J. P. Hulin, 10 cents; M. T. Tomkins, 50 cents; J. P. Johnson, 25 cents; J. C. Morris, 25 cents; Earnest Nash, 10 cents; Robert Brown, 12 cents; C. H. Surratt, 50 cents; Sister Gladys Cox, 10 cents; Mrs. A. G. Morris, 25 cents; Mrs. Rosaline Surratt, 25 cents; Mrs. Savannah Sexton, $1.00; Bessie Morris, 25 cts.; Ottie Brigman, 5 cents; Robbie Clouse, 5 cents; Ethel Brown, 13 cents; Bertha Brown, 5 cents; May Sikes, 5 cents; Mrs. Mable Russell, 25 cts.; Mrs. H. A. Kates, 50 cents; Mrs. Fannie Page, 25 cents; Esta Sexton, 25 cents; Mrs. Fannie Hulin, 25 cents; making a total of eleven dollars. Sister Maud took the lead in getting up this amount. Her kind-hearted father suggested the matter to her. Sister Maud is a good girl and shows how to help her pastor in his struggles, and her father is one of the best men I ever knew. I extend my heart-felt thanks to all these kind-hearted and thoughtful friends; may God bless every one of them, and may He make me a blessing to them.

D. A. Braswell.

Uwharrie Ct.

Dear Editor:

As I haven't written anything for some time, I trust that I may say a few things. I am very thankful that I can be out again, but am very sorry I have had to miss four of my appointments, but I am so glad we have some very enthusiastic laymen on this work. Bro. C. H. Hill and Bro. N. M. Morgan have filled most of my appointments when weather would admit of it, for which I am very thankful. I feel very thankful to the people of this Ct. for remembering me with such kindness through my sickness. I thank every one who has given me cash. May the Lord bless you, brethren. I thank Sister N. M. Morgan for the canned fruit and pickles; Bro. C. H. Hill, for honey and potatoes and other things. I have been made to feel that the Lord has many true followers even on this work. I was so glad to have my pastor, Bro. Whitaker, of Richland Ct., come over and spend the night with me while sick; may the Lord bless him in his work this year. I thank Bros. J. M. and D. N. Trogdon for favoring me with the kindness to bring over a load each of corn and property from my farm; Lord, bless them.

And I must speak of the people of this place: I was as the man who fell among strangers; but I was soon made to fell that I was not among thieves: for every one that came by showed me some kindness and many they were who came. I could not see Christ, but I felt sure he was there in the hearts of those he had sent. I never can forget Bro. J. T. Stover, the pastor of the M. E. Church at this place, who was with me before the operation in time of my greatest mental strain and prayed that the Lord might direct. It seemed that his sympathy was as deep as though I was his child; and his kindness made me feel that he was as a father to me, and a man sent of God. He has been in the ministry for 36 years, and I pray that He may give him strength of body and mind to preach His gospel many years yet. I want to say that nobody could have been more attentive to me than Dr. C. C. Hubbard, who performed the operation. So, to sum it all up, I feel that the debt of kindness I owe I can never pay; so, friends, look to the Lord, and I will pray Him to pay you a hundred fold.

The second quarterly meeting will be held at Canaan Church on Saturday before the third Sunday in May; preaching, 11 A. M., transact business at 2 P. M. I trust there may be a good number from each church.

Joel Trogdon, Pastor.

May 5.

Fair Grove, Why Not Ct.

Our pastor, J. H. Stowe, preached for us one last third Sunday a very interesting sermon, although the crowd was small on account of bad weather. We fear sometimes that we are not interested in church work as we should to let a few drops of rain keep us away from the house of God. May we be workers for Christ, ready at all times.

Our S. S. is gttting on nicely under the leadership of our Supt., J. A. Monroe. He gives to his school many interesting things that will be helpful to old and young. We take up collection every first Sunday for the Orphans' Home; our collections are small. We feel like we will be blessed as much if our collection was large. If we have done what we can I think we can do more. May we not forget these little ones.

I think you will hear from the reporter later on, and she will give something of what we are doing down here.

Many good wishes to the Herald and its readers.

J. C. Auman.

May 6, 1912.

Mt. Pleasant, Guilford Ct.

Dear Readers of Herald:

Last fourth Sunday was an ideal day after so many very rainy Sundays. Bro. T. A. Plyler filled his pulpit here, preaching a very interesting sermon, as he always does. Sometimes I fear that we do not heed the message. The Bible tells us to take heed therefore how you hear. I infer from the injunction that if we hear the word preached and do not get some good out of it we go away from the house of God worse men and women than when we entered. Our Sunday school started up with the first Sunday in April with the following officers: Supt., J. R. Stone; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. E. S. Welborn; assistant, Miss Ethel Clinard; Class No. 1, Mr. W. A. Murphy; Class No. 2, Miss Gertha Stone; Class No. 3, Mr. R. T. Kennedy, Class No. 4, Mrs. Effie Murphy; Class No. 5, Miss Mary Eller. We have started up fairly well, but the attendance is not what it ought to be. Our older people are not as enthusiastic as they should be and hence the young people too often follow in their foot-steps. I always thought the best way to get your children interested in Sunday school is to become interested yourself. However, we are doing the best we can with those that are loyal and will say we have some of this class. If it were not so, we no doubt would become so discouraged that our efforts would seem to be a failure. I know that a good Sunday school adds greater inspiration to the church than any agency; where we have a good lively S. S. we have a church at work.

Pray for us that we may grow in this great work.

Mrs. B. F. Greene has been very sick for the last few days. She is one of our best and purest women in Mt. Pleasant Church. Mrs. Dora Darr, near Mt. Pleasant, is real low. She has been confined to the bed for several months. We trust that both will soon be better. Neither of these has been able to attend church for a long time and we miss them so much.

Trusting that we will have lovely weather so that the church and Sunday school attendance will be much better.

J. R. Stone, Reporter.

P. S. Mr. Walter Beck and Miss Jessie Bowers of this community were united in matrimony this evening, the 6th, by J. R. Stone, Esq. Trusting that life's pathway will be smooth with them.

J. R. S.

Hobbs' Chapel, Greenville Ct.

Owing to the inclement weather our pastor has been unable to preach for us but a few times this year, to small congregations.

We are always glad to have Mr. Ashburn in our homes, especially when we have gloomy days like we have had this winter. He always comes with a bright face and sunny smile.

Bro. Ashburn preached for us last Sunday P. M.

The sermon was not only enjoyed by all, but I am sure it was a great help to us.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely although there is still room for better attendance especially with the older people. We will have children's day later on.

The writer was glad to worship with the people at Philadelphia Sunday morning.

Dora Pair, Reporter.

May 6, 1912.

Friendship, Stanley Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, preached an excellent sermon for us Sunday to a large crowd. We all like our pastor and family fine. Our Sunday school is moving on nicely with Mr. J. H. Snotherly, Supt. We had 105 Sunday with 8 absent. We would like to see more of our old people come out to Sunday school; it is for the old as well as young.

We held our Easter service the second Sunday night in April; the children did speak well; collection, four dollars.

Mr. Reynolds and family spent last week visiting friends in Montgomery County. Our sick people are improving fast, we are glad to say. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Miss Maie Hatley, Rep.

May 6, 1912.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Ct.

This is our pastor's first year on this work; and, as the weather has been so unfavorable each time he has had an appointment at our church, he has not had an opportunity to preach to many of the people. The pastor has not missed one of his regular appointments, but not many of the people have been coming out.

Our Sunday school has been going on all the time, but there is room for improvement in the interest taken in the work. The pastor attends our S. S. the Sundays he has an appointment to preach at our church.

Miss Forrest came to our church and did her part of the work, but very few of the members came out to hear her. A visitor, who was present, seemed very much surprised that so few were out to hear her.

The Township S. S. Convention was held at our church the third Sunday in April, and President Swain was there in the afternoon of the same day.

Our pastor made an appointment for two services yesterday, hoping to get more of the people out. The weather was a little unfavorable and there were not so many out as he hoped would be, but the crowd was much larger than at any previous appointment. The pastor on yesterday made a big effort to get the people interested more in S. S. and also in giving to the general interests. It was a good day and surely such an effort will result in much good.

Our organist is away in school and has been missed much. The pastor's wife has been filling the organist's place at the preaching services. This is appreciated.

May 6, 1912. Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Wish to say that the attendance and collection was good Sunday, last. Four new scholars aggregating a total of one hundred and nine one the roll.

I am sending some short papers read in Sunday school last Sunday by members of the F. B. Society of this place, by order of the president.

How the S. S. Teachers May Increase the Attendance of their Class.

Sunday school teachers should be sincere in their work. A teacher of a class should not be a teacher merely to be called a teacher, but should be sincere in their works.

A teacher should by all means attend Sunday school every Sunday and be in the position to explain to their class the importance of their presence. They should, if any be absent, inquire of their nearest neighbor present why they are absent, and after the investigation should call at their homes to see them, and impress upon them the importance of their presence at Sunday school, matters not what the cause of their absence may be. Unless the investigatioo shows some just cause; if that be the case teachers should visit them at once and give them their careful attention.

Teachers should live a life so as to draw people nearer to them, and should visit their pupils daily or as many times as possible. We should learn to be attractive and entertaining and to have some good way through the week or year for pastime to encourage them and train them the way they should go.

And especially we should impress upon them to love the officials of their school. We should encourage neighborhood prayer meetings.

This paper applies to the needs of all classes and ages. Rouse ye! Sunday school teachers and begin to think.

By Miss Gladys Faris, Treas., F. B.

How the Collections May Be Increased.

This subject lacks much attention and much needed attention. Does it sound well for the treasurer to report, when having to order literature a shortage of about three ($3.00) dollars? No, it doesn't, after having three months to collect it. And does it sound well for the treasurer to report from the largest and should be the most foremost class in school, Class No. 1, a collection of one cent? Well, what steps shall be taken to avoid this. Of course the publishers of the literature cannot afford to print it for nothing. And it is the duty of every member to help the Sunday school and give as much as they can to increase the collection.

First, we will take the contribution from the grown people. Does any grown man in this Sunday school think five cents too much for him to contribute? I hope there is not any, but still many give one cent, and some don't give any. Next, let us consider the children; of course they are not expected to give five cents each, but they should be allowed the pleasure of giving one. If you wish to give them some way during the week to earn the penny, make them interested. They should be taught to save their pennies to bring to Sunday school instead of spending them for things that are less beneficial to them, and the collection would never be as small again. Or the treasurer will not have to report a shortage, will he? ...

By Miss Cora Thomas, Member
B. T. I. Com.

Mothers and Fathers Seeing to Children Learning S. S. Lessons.

What is our literature for?

What is this expense on our S. S. for?

Listen. It is to furnish teachings for the children and grown-up people. How are the children to know these lessons that are too small to learn them alone? They are to have the assistance of their parents. For what are these lessons intended? They are intended to teach the greatest teachings possible—that is, the teachings of the Holy Bible. How are we to get the good of this literature and its contents, and make the lessons interesting? That is the parents are to see to the children learning the lessons, and another is the grown-up people are to learn the lessons about 500 per cent. better. When this happens the interest will become greater and when the grown-up people learn them and recite them it will get the little ones interested and this will cheer the mothers and fathers that "saw to the children learning their S. S. lessons." We should be ashamed certainly for not knowing our S. S. lessons better, so let's do better all having a good lesson next Sunday. Think of the importance of learning S. S. lessons and the great advantage it is. Let's see if we, the grown-up people can't get at it better and get our full three cents out of the quarterly.

By Miss Jessie Powell, Member
B. T. I. Com.
W. Polk Garrett.

April 23, 1912.

Spring Church.

Dear Editor:

As I haven't seen anything from this place for several days, I will try to let you know that we are still alive. Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, filled his regular appointment yesterday; he preached an excellent sermon. We are glad to report that our S. S. seems to be improving. We have prayer meeting every second and fourth Sunday after S. S. We would be glad to have as many as will to come out and co-operate with us in this glorious work. It seems that there are a good many people in our vicinity that are not taking any part in our S. S., for what cause we do not know. When asked why they do not attend they try to whip in some excuse which I am afraid will not answer as a real excuse in the final day when we all shall appear before Him who said: "And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22:12.

We are expecting to try to get ready to hold Children's Day service some time in the near future. Hope everybody will take hold and do their duty and try to make it a success. There is a welcome for one and all at our Sunday school.

Much success to the Herald and its readers. M. P. Chambliss.

Bethany, Haw River Ct.

Last fourth Sunday our pastor, Rev. C. E. M. Raper, was with us, and preached a splendid sermon. It was food for our hungry souls. He has been faithful even in the bad winter months.

Our S. S. is taking on new life since the weather is more pleasant. The school numbered forty-six last Sunday. There are many others who do not attend S. S. that we wish to get interested enough to be regular attendants.

The prayer services have been changed from Wednesday night to Sunday night. Very good crowds attend and the services are real helpful. I think we should meet at the house of God and worship Him as often as possible, not stay at home for weeks and possibly months, when we could go to church and expect great blessings from the Lord. Let's look about us and see what the Lord would have us do, and then with willing hands, do whatsoever our hands find to do. May the Herald ever be a blessing to all who read it.

Yours for the Master, S. C. L.

Piny Grove, Siler City Ct.

Dear Herald Readers:

As there has been nothing of great importance I have failed to send in a report for two months—that does not say we are dead or doing nothing.

Bro. J. H. Bowman filled his appointment the first Sunday P. M. After reading the 6th chapter of Isaiah he preached one among the best sermons it has ever been our privilege to hear him preach from Prov. 29:18. We had the largest congregation that we have had this year.

Since spring has opened up we have re-organized Sunday school with Mrs. J. A. Cooper Superintendent, and Mrs. C. A. Cooper Secretary. Am glad to say we are having a lively school; sixty-seven in main school last Sunday. Our singing master, Mr. W. B. Cooper, and family, have moved to Siler City, much to our regret. We felt like we could do nothing without them, but feel since we have tried it that everything is moving along nicely though we miss them very much in Sunday school.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, of Siler City, are spending a few days with their daughter, Mrs. J. A. Cooper.

We attended the Sunday school rally at Zion in April and pronounced it a success. If everyone did not enjoy it to the fullest it must have been his or her fault.

I close with many good wishes to the readers of the grand old Herald.

Mrs. J. A. C., Reporter.

May 9, 1912.

St. Paul and Brown Summit.

Our second quarterly meeting met on Wednesday night, May 1st, in St. Paul Church. The usual business was transacted. Finances somewhat behind, but we are expecting better things as time passes on.

Bros. J. A. Dean and W. H. Moore were chosen nominess for delegate to the Annual Conference—Bro. Moore of Brown Summit, Bro. Dean of St. Paul.

G. F. Millaway.

Albemarle.

The second Quarterly Conference will be held at Mt. Elma Church on Saturday, May 18th, at 11 o'clock. A good attendance is earnestly desired. Pastor.

Rehoboth, Granville Ct.

Mr. Bethea gave us a good sermon yesterday upon the subject of "Giving," showing us from a Biblical standpoint that it is the duty of every one to give a tenth. Communion service was held after the sermon and it was impressive to see the large number that partook of the Lord's Supper, many of whom were children. We take a collection for the orphans at Denton every first Sunday and always include the Sunday school collection on that Sunday. Our Sunday school is doing good work. We didn't go into winter quarters, nothwithstanding the bad weather and rough roads. We are not satisfied however, and we hope to have a full attendance next Sunday and talk over some of the things mentioned at the Sunday-school Convention in Asheville. How many of our Sunday schools have a Cradle Roll? That is one of the best ways of winning the parents. Many schools do not have the classes organized—this, too, is very important. I want to give a few notes about the Graded Lessons taken from Prof. J. M. Way's address:

Reasons for graded lessons—

The human race is greater. Pupils of like capacity should be put together. Bible furnishes best material for any system of lessons in the world, but must be graded. The same texts must not be used before conversion as after—entirely different purpose after conversion. Until the pupils understand and comprehend, you haven't taught. Put uniform system on little fellows and it's like a two hundred pound weight on their backs.

Purposes and plans of lessons—

Convince the S. S. children that the S. S. is an institution of learning. Children make comparisons in S. S. and day schools. S. S. campaign is to make people want that which is best. Everywhere the Graded Lessons are used, reports come of more conversions.

A few notes from an address on "The Sunday School organized for what?" by Mr. Landes from Penn.:

Organized for the purpose of giving impression to community through men and women studying the Bible. For the purpose of ingathering, go after last man and last woman. Have a roll of prospective members—put names of those for whom you wish to work and pray.

Judge Carthel from Tenn., showed us the requisites of a Banner Sunday School—1st, Evergreen; 2nd, Good record; 3rd. Must be graded—pupils should be promoted, not teachers; 4th, Adult class; 5th. Teachers' meetings; 6th, Systematic way for substitute teachers; 7th, Teachers' Training class; 8th, A Cradle Roll; 9th. Home Department; 10th, Sunday school must operate in its district and County convention.

Judge Carthel showed that an adequate policy for a S. S. is to help every person, hold every person, train every person, train to give service, train to give money. Policy must be permanent (we will give our proper proportion of laborers).

The Convention was full of inspiration and helpful ideas. I wish for more space to tell about it. The next meeting will be in Greensboro and Judge Pritchard of Asheville is the president for the succeeding year. Hattie Harris.

Oxford, N. C., May 6. 1912.

St. Paul.

Our Sunday school is still improving; 83 present last Sunday. We have a good set of teachers to help the school along. Bro. Millaway filled both of his appointment at eleven and night. Had a very large attendance for both services. We were glad to see sister Millaway out Sunday night, with friends from Winston.

We invite the public to come out; everybody welcome to our services.

H. C. Nance.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

The Quarterly Conference.

The second quarterly conference which was held in Bethel church last Saturday struck the center of the corn planting season and as the farmers are very much behind with their work, the attendance was not large. The reports, however, were better than usual. Gideons Grove has paid a much larger per cent. of pastor's salary than was reported paid at the same time last year and so has Flat Rock Church. For the entire charge 20 per cent. more has been paid on salary than at second quarterly conference last year.

Nominees For Delegate.

Bros. J. B. Ogburn and D. P. Lemons were selected as nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference. The popularity of these brethren was indicated by both of them being selected on the first ballot.

The Ladies' Aid Society.

The society met last Monday afternoon with Mrs. J. Wright Pegram. They report a good meeting with the largest number present at any meeting yet held.

A Mad Dog Scare.

We are now in the midst of a mad dog scare. Two dogs have recently been killed believed to be rabid.

Mt. Pleasant, Uwharrie Ct.

Our Sunday school is improving since the weather has opened up. Let everybody, young and old, come out to put forth an effort to make this year the best. Iam quite sure we could make it the best if the parents of this community would come out and take an active part in the Sunday school instead of spending the Sabbath in worldly affairs. I am sure if they would do this they would add much good to the community and to their souls.

We know there are some of the parents who have held our Sunday school together and kept it going, and they have been very faithful; by studying God's Word we learn that only the faithful are rewarded.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Canaan Saturday before the third Sunday in this month.

We regret to say that our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, still remains in feeble health. Dear readers of the Herald, let us pray without ceasing for this man of God that his health may be restored, if in accordance with God's will, that he may preach the Gospel in all it beauty and purity.

Pray for his Christ-like family.

Bro. Moses Morgan was with us the fourth Sunday to fill the vacancy of our pastor. He made a very interesting talk. We always give Bro. Morgan a hearty welcome in our community. We wish he would come often.

I close asking for the prayers of the Christian people. Reporter.

May 7, 1912.

Anderson and Yarborough Notes.

Some things have happened since we reported. With spring here our people are taking on new life. Second Saturday and Sunday were spent with Liberty Hill Church. Quarterly meeting convened on Saturday; it was good to see the number of people out. It was a nice time to work, but our people showed loyalty. Good reports and good feeling. J. F. Compton and Julius Smith were nominated delegate to the Annual Conference. Third Sunday at Fair View; was raining, but few out. A good service, the most spiritual this year. Fourth Sunday with Harmony; was indeed a good day. To say the pastor enjoyed getting back after being absent two months is putting it in mild form. In Harmony Church I don't believe we have a balker. The whole membership is interested in the welfare of the church. One convert at morning service.

Bro. Moore's health is improved.

First Sunday, back home again. Saturday before we held quarterly meeting. Bros. J. H. Hughes, and Ed. Hipp were nominated for delegates to Conference. Sunday was unfavorable, but a very good service. The Cross Keys school house has been enlarged to a good big place of worship. Yet we haven't too much room. Congregations are good. Sister R. F. Wyatt, at Easley visited the parsonage and made all the family glad, bringing presents: suits for the boys and waist for wife. She forgot the preacher, but he was glad, for that meant less buying for him. We have been remembered by Sisters Tensley, Yarborough, Kate Medlock.

I have traveled a little this winter if roads have been rough; have traveled over two thousand miles since first of December.

Hoping and praying for good year.

Yours fraternally, W. A. Lamar.

TRUSTEES MEET.

The Trustees of Denton High School are called to meet in Denton May 14, at 2 P. M., this being commencement day. Important business to attend to and a full attendance of the Board in desired.

G. L. Reynolds, Secretary.

MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S H. AND F. M. S. IN WINSTON-SALEM

Owing to fact that our reporter had resigned and no one had been appointed to fill the vacancy, this communication regarding the deliberations of our H. and Foreign Missionary Societies which convened in this city from 16th to 18th of April, inclusive, is somewhat tardy, however, it is now in order to give our readers a brief account of the Convention and the fine impressions it made, and the inspiration it imparted to our people here.

We are quite sure that such a meeting conducted by women of so much piety and intelligence would be a great incentive to any church to arouse them to a most intense interest in our Missionary work. Quite a number of the delegates were perfect strangers to us, but that did not detract from the interest and the grand things so inspiring that were uttered by those noble hearted women. We wish we could recall the name of every visitor and delegate that we might encourag each of them to press onward in the great work of saving men and women over the sea as well as many that are in benighted regions of our own beloved country.

Notable among our visitors was Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, our genial editor's wife, Mrs. Hammer, of Asheboro, with her bright, attractive manner, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, whose executive ability is simply remarkable. Miss. Forrest, who is a host of herself, as she gave us such a vivid history of affairs in Japan, and we were appalled at the awful state of affairs in that land so far advanced in Christian civilization. What must it be where the gospel has never been carried. Mrs. Dr. Harris Glascock was very active in the deliberations and rendered efficient aid in transacting the business of the sessions. As we sat in the audience we were almost spell-bound as we listened to the lectures, debates, and fervent prayers of each and all their sincere efforts to forward the great work. Mrs. A. B. Kimball and Miss Velna and Pearl McCulloch and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, and last, but not least was Miss Etta Auman. I wish I could recall the names of every delegate as there was not a single one that did not impress us with their genuine earnestness for the success of the cause. We wish we could meet them all again; beloved friends, we do wish that you, every one lived in Winston. What a grand church we would have, but our vivid imagination pictures the end of all things earthly when we may meet in our Father's house of many mansions and there forever with the Lord receive the reward of all our labors here. That day, that hour is swiftly coming. Let us watch and pray and work until life's latest hour!

We were not present at the opening exercises, but our own Mrs. W. B. Speas, in a happy manner gave the address of welcome and there was a cordial response from some honored visitor. Our Aid Society served dinner in the Pastor's Study each day during the sessions and thus facilitated the work, as it would have consumed much valuable time going to and from the homes of those who entertained the guests. And we want to say to each member of that Convention, Come again, and as our pastor, Rev. S. W. Taylor, with his excellent wife labored so faithfully for the pleasure and entertainment of every guest, requested the audience to join hands and sing, "Blest be the tie that binds," and "God be with you till we meet again." we just reiterate the words: "God be with you till we meet again." We can ask for you no greater benediction.

E. A. N.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO 8.

Revs. S. Simpson, W. D. Fogleman, W. E. Swain. T. E. Davis, C. E. Forliness S. W. Taylor, G. F. Millaway, three ($3.00) dollars each. Total Twenty one ($21.00) dollars. Previously reported sixty eight ($68.-00) dollars Total to date Eighty nine ($89.00) dollars.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treasurer.

Hard to Kill.—That error about the assessment for expenses of delegates to General Conference. We have made several efforts to kill it, but it seems to have more lives than a cat. By an inter-change of the headlines over two columns in the report of the Committee on Ways and Means published in this paper just after Conference, the error was started. Again let us say that the correct list was published in the Herald of April 11, first page.

—It is now said that Floyd Allen had on steel armor under his clothes when he fired on the court in Hillsville.

—Beware of the first drink.

HINTS TO MOTHERS.

"Cleanliness is Next to Godliness" in Feeding Babies.

Your baby came from a world of perfect cleanliness. He has been used to perfectly pure and wholeosme food. He has a right to expect it after his arrival in this world. If the mother can furnish it herself, the baby is fortunate, for he will then be served in the most approved and sanitary way.

If, however, he must be a "bottle fed baby," remember that his life may depend upon absolute cleanliness.

Use only the cleanest, purest and freshest of milk. See that it is clean and cool when you get it. Put it on ice immediately. During hot weather ice is absolutely essential for the preservation of milk. A little money spent for ice may save a large doctor's bill later. Never allow a fly around your baby, his food, or his bottle.

As soon as the bottle of milk is finished, wash it thoroughly with cold water, using a bottle brush. Then clean with hot water and borax (a teaspoonful of borax to a pint of water), and turn it upside down in a clean, sunny place away from flies.

Never let the baby nurse again from the milk remaining in a bottle after he has finished it once. Stale milk curds in the bottle will become poisonous in a few hours, and may contaminate fresh milk coming in contact with them.

Always boil the bottle thoroughly in water to which a little soda has been added, before putting fresh food into it. The easiest way is to have as many bottles as the number of daily nursings, so that all may be sterilized together.

The simpler the nipple the better. Never use a nipple to which a long tube is attached. It can not be kept clean and will certainly cause bowel trouble. As soon as the bottle is finished, remove the nipple, turn it inside out over the finger, and clean with a brush, used only for this purpose. After use, always boil the brush. Keep the clean nipples in a covered glass filled with fresh borax water. Always rinse the nipples, as the bottles, in boiling water before using again.

Do not put the nipple in your mouth to determine the warmth of the milk. Let a few drops fall from the bottle on your wrist. If the milk is too hot for your wrist it is too hot for the baby.

Always observe the utmost care for cleanliness in all details. Because other babies have survived flies and filth is no reason that yours will. Bear in mind that eternal vigilance is the price of cleanliness, and baby's health is the reward for both.—N. C. Board of Health.

They never fall who never climb.

CHRIST'S CONFIDENCE.

A very marked feature of Christ's entire earthly ministry was the supreme confidence which He manifested in respect to all of the great verities of heaven and earth. Not a tinge of doubt had a place in his mind. He never spoke of His mission on earth as though it were an experiment. He constantly asserted that He came down from heaven. He repeatedly spoke of His having always lived with the Father. He talked of the past history as one who knew the divine purposes which underlaid it all. He referred to the prophecies without a note of questioning. In all of His allusions to the true prophets He never intimated that they were undeserving of the fullest confidence. It is plainly apparent that His own confidence in all the Old Testament was strong and complete. No one could have been in Christ's company for a con-

WANTED—ONE MILLION MEN!

J. Campbell White, General Secretary, Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Not less than one million men are needed for special volunteer service in the enlistment of the Churches of North America in an adequate missionary program. Are you willing to be one of them? Could you not wisely adopt this as your major Christian activity for the next five years? As members of the Missionary Committees of the 200,000 Churches of North America, a million men could be used to advantage. The following special opportunities for effective work in solving the present missionary problem are recommended for special consideration:

1. The Missionary Committee of your own Church;

2. The denominational Missionary Committee of your District (whether called District, Presbytery, Classis, Association or Diocese);

3. The Laymen's Missionary Movement Committee of your city, or county, or state.

Each of these three kinds of Committees should be composed of laymen and ministers, the majority of the Committees in each case being laymen. Whether, therefore, you are a layman or a minister, it is proper for you to take the initiative in getting these Committees appointed if they are not now in existence. Why wait for some one else to do this? Unsolved problems all over the world await some one's initiative and attack. Every good accomplished anywhere is started by somebody. Here is a chance for you.

The million men who should constitute these missionary Committees can lead the Church to evangelize America and the world in this generation. Any church can be led out sooner or later into a worthy shore in saving the world, if it has an effective missionary committee, the pastor being, in every case, one of the effective members.

The functions of all these Committees are not only financial, but also educational, and spiritual. Those Committees that work merely at the financial end of the problem are doomed to failure or at best, only partial success. The greatest need for most members of the missionary committees now in existence, is a thorough study of the educational and spiritual features of their work. Literature has been prepared to help you in this study, but, with this as a basis, there is urgent need that you put your own very best thought into the question.

One of the chief burdens of the Laymen's Missionary Movement is the enlistment and training of the million men needed in this fundamental and vital work of the Church. By holding great Conventions, large numbers of men can be challenged with their missionary responsibility, but the continuous work of the pastors and local missionary Committees is essential to make these impressions deep and permanent.

During the coming year, regular Laymen's Missionary Conventions will be held in at least fifty cities. The dates for most of these have been already arranged. But this is only a fraction of the systematic missionary work that should be carried on during the next year. In each of a thousand other communities there should be a simultaneous campaign of missionary instruction in all the churches, concluding wherever possible, with an organized personal canvass for subscriptions to missions at home and abroad. Such a campaign should include a special series of sermons by the pastor, special addresses in the Sunday school, selected literature widely distributed, Mission Study Classes if possible, and all pervaded by private and public prayer.

Now is the time to plan for such a period of missionary education. Pastors will be making their plans for next year before the end of the summer. Let the pastors of entire cities of communities decide together before the summer vacation on the most suitable season for a systematic and thorough presentation of the whole missionary problem and program of the Church. At least one month will be required if this work is to be done well. An additional two weeks will be needed in which to get the organized personal canvass carried through all the churches of the city or community. Will you not take steps immediately to get such a policy adopted in your community?

—It having been reported that President Taft sent Major Butt to Rome on a secret mission to the Pope, we are glad to read the following denial in a letter sent out by Secretary Hilles:

"The President feels Major Butt's loss keenly and is only consoled by the knowledge that he gave up his life as a soldier and a man. There is absolutely no truth in the report that Major Butt was on a mission to Rome. The sole object of his trip was the benefit of the long sea voyage, and in order to add to the interest of his trip the President gave him a number of formal notes of introduction to personages in Rome whom he knew. None of the letters contained more than a formal introduction."

COMMONPLACE COMPOSITIONS.

Belle's face was thoughtful and not altogether happy-looking when she came home from school.

"I think Miss Hill is the most peculiar person I ever knew," she announced decidely.

Mother looked up in suprise." Why, Belle," she exclaimed, "I thought you liked Miss Hill better than any teacher you ever had."

"Oh, I like her well enough," Belle answered; "but what would you do if your teacher wanted you to write a 'commonplace composition'?"

"A what?" questioned mother.

"Well, all she said was that people, ordinary people, could tell stories about things that had happened to them that were just as interesting as the things one reads in books. We each have to interview some ordinary person and then write our composition about what that person told us. What shall I do?"

"Go right down in the kitchen an interview Olga," her mother answered promptly, "although I can promise you that you will find she is a most extraordinary person. You might help her pare the potatoes while you talk to her."

"Tell you a story that happened to me once?" Olga repeated, when Belle came into the kitchen with her request. "Oh, surely," she laughed heartily and went on in pretty broken English, "I tell you what I think of when I sit down this afternoon. I think of first time I had a pair of shoes made of leather. It was Christmas, when I was twelve years old."

"But what were your shoes made of before that?" Belle interrupted.

"Wood, of course," laughed Olga "Did you never see picttures of little girls in Sweden with their wooden shoes? When I was a little girl, about so big as you, I wanted leather shoes, oh, so bad! I go to school with a little girl that had a rich father, and she wore shoes made of shining black leather. I cry and cry, and make my dear mother very sad that I am so naughty and do not want to wear my wooden shoes. She said she wore such kind and so did her mother, but I am all the time cross about it.

"I go to my father and tell him what I want. He laugh and say if I am a good girl till I am twelve years I shall have a pair for Christmas, that same year, made from shining black leather. I was just eleven, and I thought it was too long to wait. So one day I think of something bad to do. I knew it was naughty, but I did not care, for I think I get my leather shoes quicker. What do you think?

"I don't know, but do go on, Olga!" Belle urged excitedly.

Olga laughed. "It is funny now when I tell it," she said, "but I do not see how I thought of such a thing. I said to myself that, if my wooden shoes were broken, father would have to buy me some shoes of leather, so I made up my mind to break them. I took one and threw it hard against a rock, but it would not break. Then I took a big stone and pounded the toe of it, but it was not even the least bit cracked. Then—oh, but I was bad!—I took it to the woodpile, and with the big axe I chopped off the toe of my wooden shoe."

"O Olga, did you really?" gasped Belle.

Olga nodded her head. "But this is a story with what you call a moral to it," she went on merrily.

"I picked up my poor shoe, cut in half, and I ran into the house, crying: 'O father, my wooden shoe is broken! May I have one now made of leather?' M father picked up the two pieces of th shoe, and very seriously he said: 'I wi see what I can do for this poor shoe tha has been cut in half by the girl who wear it.'

"My, my, but I was ashamed of my self! I ran to my room and cried, and cried harder when my father goes to th blacksmith and has him to mend the sho by fastening it together with little strip of tin, that I might wear it to schoo again."

"And did you have to wear it to schoo that way?" asked Belle.

"Indeed, yes," Olga answered, "an good it was for me. But when the nex Christmas come I find my fine leath shoes under the Christmas tree, and m kind father smiled at my pleasure. Excus me now, I must start the supper."

"Thank you, Olga," Belle replied, she started upstairs. "I guess Miss Hi knew what she was talking about wh she said that ordinary people's lives we more interesting than story books; thou I don't think," she added, "that a pers who once chopped her wooden shoe in t is a very ordinary person."—Annie Lou Berray, in Churchman.

A PUMP BOY WHO SAVED SIXTY.

Fred Evans was a boy who worked the dump in an Illinois coal mine. One d there was a cave-in, and the earth and c in settling imprisoned sixty men. The fo man of the rescuing party saw the sm openings that the cave-in had left betwe the places where these men stood and t outer world, and he spoke to this boy know if he would dare to help him. " hole is just big enough for you to crawl through," he said, "and to drag a hollow pipe after you. You'll have to be mighty careful, or the coal will settle and crush your life out. But if you can get it through to them, then we can pump air enough in to keep them alive till we can dig them out. Are you willing to try it?"

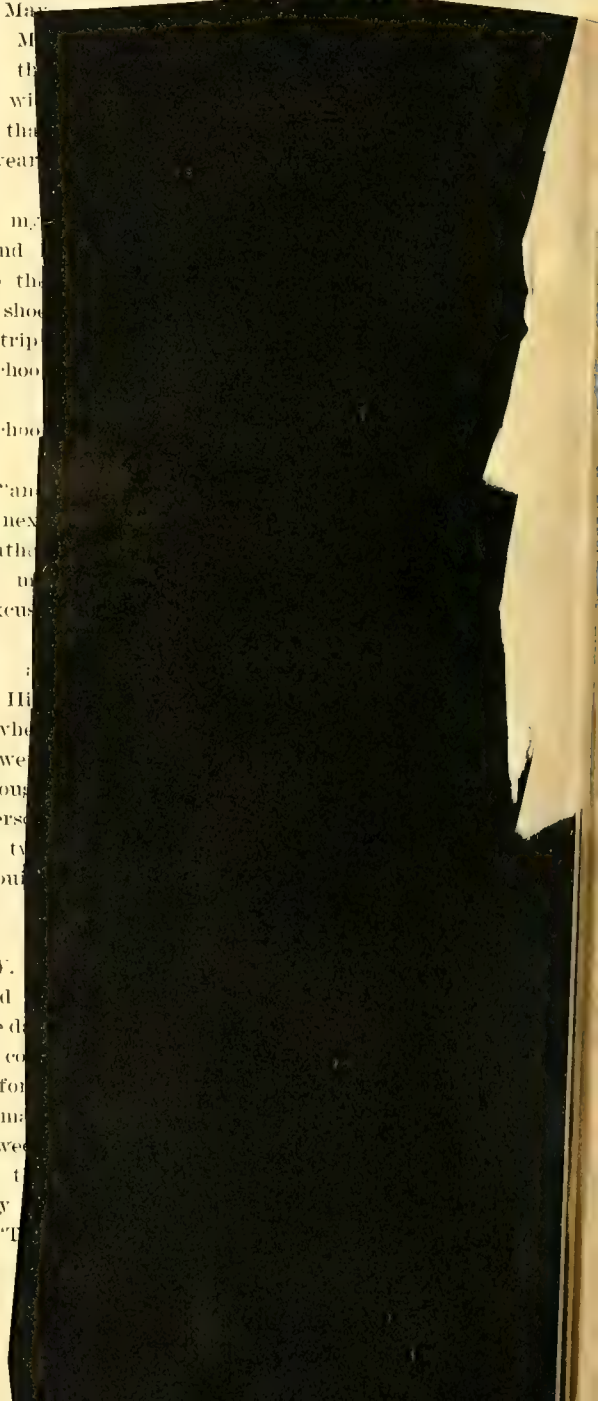
All Fred answered was, "I'll try my best."

It was a six hundred foot crawl, and many a time it stopped, and those outside gave up hope, but at last there was a faint call through it that told them he was there; they began pumping air and water and milk through the pipe, and kept it up for a week, when Fred and the whole sixty were safely brought out and given back to their families. He was only a boy, but these true stories of plucky boys and their heroism and devotion, show that not only a prophet, but common, every-day people, may hear the Lord's call to needy work.—The Heidelberg Teacher.



GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due	Paid
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	1.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Thomasville	3.00	1.00
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	5.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	4.35
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Orange	3.00	3.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Randolph		8.06
Haw River	9.00	7.00

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

MISS FORREST'S APPOINTMENTS.

May 11-12, Concord.

—We thank Miss Hattie Harris for her report of the State Sunday School Convention. Further space is open to her, if she desires it.

—Rev. H. L. Powell writes that the event of May 1 in which he was especially interested really occurred. We tender congratulations, though he has carried from the East one of our best reporters.

—Col. Ashley Horne was stricken with paralysis on his way to the Confederate Veteran's meeting in Ga., and taken from the train at Greensboro and placed in Huffine Hotel. He is said to be improving.

—Rev. Eli A. Craven, an aged minister of the Friends' Church, had a stroke of paralysis last week.

—The steamship Texas sank off the coast of Smyrna carrying 140 people down to death. It is supposed to have run into a hidden mine. Officials have gone to investigate the cause.

Charlotte, Richland Ct.

Our pastor preached an interesting sermon for us last Sunday from the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew. There were a good number out to hear him, it being the first pretty Sunday he has had to preach for us this year. We were glad to have him in S. S., and to give us a short talk. We reorganized our S. S. the fifth Sunday in March, elected Mr. D. F. Bulla Superintendent, Mr. D. T. McLain assistant, Miss Jessie Redding, secretary; Class No. 1, Etta Redding; Class No. 2, Nell Clark; Class No. 3, Loula Andrews. Our S. S. is growing in numbers and interest as the weather is getting better; 59 present last Sunday.

We are glad to have Mr. T. W. Andrews back in our S. S. He gave us an interesting talk the twenty-eighth of April. He has returned home after spending the winter with his son in Winter Haven, Florida.

I will close with much success to the Herald. Etta Redding, Reporter.

Cradle Roll Day At Graham.

On last Sunday morning our second Cradle Roll service was observed, and because of this our congregation was larger than usual. People will go where children have a part. We make a sad mistake when we fail to use the little ones to help further the Master's cause.

While the occasion was a beautiful one we were all made sad when we learned that little Elizabeth Batton, a member of the Cradle Roll, had that morning very unexpectedly died. Her mother had intended to take her to church on that day for the first time. But our Father saw fit to take little Elizabeth to heaven to live with Jesus. It was sad yet sweet. Elizabeth was the first of our Cradle Roll number to die. A report of the Cradle Roll work of Graham church was read which showed that on last Cradle Roll Day—one year ago, there were 23 members. Since that time 15 new members have been added. Five have graduated and one has died. For a part of the past year a mother's magazine has been sent to all mothers of members of our Cradle Roll. Geo. L. Curry.

CONFUCIANISM.

Confucianism owes its origin to one Kung-foo-tsze (Confucius), who was born about the year 531 B. C., in what is now called the Province of Shantung, China. His father, like Abraham, was full of years when his son was born, being over seventy, so the story goes. Although an officer of high rank, he was poor, and at death when his son was three years old his widow was left destitute. Of his struggle with poverty Confucius said in later life, "When I was young, my condition was low; and I acquired my ability in many things." When nineteen, he was married, and a year later became the father of a son, his only child, who was given the name of Li.

Confucius early showed a taste for study, and as the Chinese at that period, already had a considerable store of literature, the product of the historians and sages of the past, he devoted much of his time to storing his mind with the rich treasures he found at his command. When not much over twenty he became a teacher to young men, who came to him to learn of the history and philosophy of the country. After about ten years of teaching the knowledge of his greatness had so spread abroad that one of the chief ministers of the State of Lu in which Confucius lived put his son in Confucius' school. It was about this time that great political troubles arose in Lu, and his success in putting down the rebellion and restoring the people to a state of peace and prosperity, attracted the attention of the government and he was made Minister of Work and of Crime. It was said of him that "He strengthened the ruling house, and weakened the ministers and chiefs. A transforming government went abroad. Dishonesty and dissoluteness were ashamed, and hid their heads. Loyalty and good faith became the characteristics of the men, and chastity and docility those of the women. Strangers came in crowds from other states."

Besides being a great teacher and scholar, Confucius was a reformer, and as such he often met with the treatment reformers have received in all ages of the world. His good counsels were not always accepted, and for thirteen years he and his disciples wandered from state to state looking for a ruler who would put his policies in practice. Sometimes he was mobbed, but he always showed patience and a faith in the final triumph of truth. At one time he said, "If heaven had wished to let this cause perish, I should not have got such a relation to it. While heaven does not let the cause of truth perish, what can the men of Kwang do to me?"

The last five years of Confucius' life were spent in his own State of Lu. Here he devoted his time to the completion of his literary works, which have formed the basis for a large part of the literary training of the Chinese youths up to the present time. He died 483 B. C., at the age of seventy-two. Dr. Speer says of him in "The Light of the World, "He was a poor man, whose hands were clean of all corruption, upright in all personal and public relations, a seeker for truth and a believer in the absolute power of truth."

—Oak Ridge Institute will celebrate the 60th anniversary of its founding next week.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, MAY 19, 1912.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Why and How to Please Christ." 2 Tim. 2: 1-13.

-- (Union Meeting with Juniors.) ----

"If ye love me, keep my commandments," sums up better than anything else the way to please Christ. In the Old Testament, it is said that "Obedience is better than sacrifice." Thus it is seen that faithful service and observance of the law in both letter and spirit are the ways in which to please Him, and without such, pleasing the Master is impossible,

Weak as Christians are, they are the only means through which Christ can bring His kingdom on earth; we are His only army. Christ expected that his followers throughout the ages to follow his days upon earth would carry the gospel to those who lived in their own generation. If they fail, the failure must be answered for in the great day of days.

The true test of our Christianity is whether we would rather please ourselves or please Christ. The loving Father made all that enters into pleasure and he knows best what will give pleasure. We cannot know what will please Christ unless we study his word, for this is our only way of obtaining information. Hence we should be students of the Bible.

The Master is pleased when we improve and increase our talents by use in Christian service, just as the husbandman was who gave talents unto his servants. God loves to see us prosper and progress; we should endeavor to make the most of ourselves and multiply our means, remembering always it is God that gives the increase.

Short Addresses.

"Loyalty to Christ" is a familiar phrase. How many of you ever heard it? I wonder if we have yet caught its fullness of meaning? However reluctant we may be to confess it, yet, as a brotherhood, we are bound to acknowledge we have not lived up to it. We have been wont to say "loyalty to Christ" demands a full and complete obedience to his commands. Yes, but not some of them to the neglect of others. We must insert the little word "all" to have the genuine article of loyalty.

How does one's loyalty to Christ who obeys him in all initiatory commands, yet balks when a missionary offering is taken impress you? Or if one gives, and yet gives about one-tenth as much as you know one is able to give, how does the loyalty in this instance strike you? Why this is but the semblance of loyalty. It is saying "Lord, Lord," and yet refusing to do what he commands

It is not difficult to obey the voice divine, saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," or, "let him that is a thirst, come to the fountain and drink." It is a different proposition when the same voice says, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;" or, "sell what ye have and give it to the poor;" but there can be no "rest," no quenching of "thirst" till we have kept the whole body of commands.

But to the Book—What saith it? Where it speaks, we ought both to speak and act. John 12:26 says: "If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there shall also my servant be." Of course it is impossible to serve Christ without following him, and we can not follow him long, either in time or space, before we get out among the unsaved, and feel, as well as see, a mighty passion for lost souls absorbing every faculty of both the human and divine in him.

"A man left home, leaving in the care of two of his neighbors two sacks of grain. One deposited his in his cellar, the other planted a field. The man returned after a time and called for his property. The one returned the sack which, when opened, disclosed a decayed and putred mass upon which worms were feeding. The other showed him fields of golden grain ready for the harvesting.

"It has taken far more to convince the modern world of its duties and privileges in falling into line with God's plans to save whosoever will, than it took to lead Peter to the home of Cornelius. One vision started him, and the work of the Holy Spirit confirmed him, when face to face with Cornelius. But we have seen greater works than these. The Holy Spirit has done more marvelous things than he did to convince Peter, and visions innumerable have been forced upon us, till a man is somewhat a selfish ingrate who sees less than a world-wide need."

Discussion Topics.

1. What does Christ most desire in your life?
2. Name some men that have pleased Christ.
3. What are the rewards of pleasing Christ.
4. Name something that Juniors may do to please Him.
5. Relate one incident that must have pleased Christ. This is to be a union meeting with the Juniors.

For Daily Reading.

M., May 13. Because Christ is Lord. Eph. 4: 1-6.

T., May 14. Because Christ is model. Rom. 8: 28-30.

W., May 15. By deeds of mercy. Matt. 25:40.

T., May 16. By pleasing God. 1 John 3: 18-24

F., May 17. By fruit-bearing. John 15: 1-8

S., May 18. By loyal service. Rom. 15: 1-3.

Sun., May 19. Topic.

To Stimulate Attendance.

One class keeps on the wall of its classroom a diagram graphically setting forth its record of attendance from Sunday to Sunday during the year. The diagram is drawn on a sheet of tracing paper. Beginning at the lower left-hand corner, a line is traced from left to right, rising or falling as the attendance increases or decreases from week to week. Where the line rises or lowers radically, the figures showing the attendance are written. In this manner members are able to see at a glance the record their class is making.

Another class, as a means of stirring its members to greater regularity and endeavor, has hanging in its classroom, a card upon which are printed the words, "Our highwater mark." Below appear the date on which the mark was reached and the number present on that day.

Children's Day Offering.

The great missionary event of this quarter is the offering for heathen missions of the Bible schools the first Lord's day in June. Preparation for the day should be made immediately. We should not be satisfied until every pupil of every class is reached with missionary information and responds with an offering. This year we are studying the life of Jesus. If it has gripped us, this is our opportunity to express it. If your school does not respond with an offering you may properly question the quality of the teaching and may solemnly ask yourself what you have lacked as a superintendent.

CHRIST for the world we sing;
The world to Christ we bring
With loving zeal;
The poor and them that mourn,
The faint and overborne,
Sin-sick and sorrow worn.
Whom Christ doth heal.

Christ for the world we sing;
The world to Christ we bring
With fervent prayer;
The wayward and the lost,
By restless passions tossed,
Redeemed at countless cost
From dark despair.

Christ for the world we sing;
The world to Christ we bring
With joyful song;
The new-born souls whose days,
Reclaimed from error's ways,
Inspired with hope and praise,
To Christ belong.

Samuel Wolcott.

—Justin McCarthy, political writer of London, is dead.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please
Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.
SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION
1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00
Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," gether with our New and Instructive Garden Guide
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO
1665 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

—Miss Essie Ross, of Asheboro, has returned home from a visit to her brother, Charles Ross, of Lillington.

—Rev. T. H. Matthews, of Randleman, has some engagements to assist in special meetings, but all his time is not yet taken. He is open to further engagements with brethren who may need his help.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil has arranged with Revs. G. E. Hunt and W. C. Kennett to fill his appointments the two Sundays he is absent for General Conference.

—Rev. T. H. Matthews officiated in the marriage of Miss Bonnie Bonkemeyer, of Central Falls, to Mr. T. P. Allred, of Spencer, on April 28th.

—A statue of John Paul Jones was recently unveiled in Potomac Park, Washington, not far from the White House. Admiral Dewey took part in the ceremonies. The principal speech was made by President Taft.

—The Chinese have begun to tear down the great wall built centuries ago for defense. It is no longer useful, and is an undesirable obstruction.

—Ben Dilley, of Penn., left $25,000 to two pet cats, as long as they live. After their death, his estate is to bedivided among his human heirs. One of the cats has died, but the other, now the wealthiest cat in the world, lives on.

—A Guilford County girl of 22 recently married an Illinois man of 44 as a result of a correspondence, the two not having seen each other till the day of the marriage. Not very wise, but quite otherwise.

STUDENTS FOR THE MINISTRY.

The Sixth Annual Report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching gives some interesting information about the sources from which theological seminaries draw their students for the ministry. The Methodist seminaries receive 74 per cent. of their students from Methodist colleges, Baptist seminaries 41 per cent. from Baptist colleges, Presbyterian seminaries 37 per cent. from Presbyterian colleges, and Episcopal seminaries only 9 per cent. of their students from colleges under Episcopal control. From colleges under the control of other denominations, Baptist seminaries received 27 per cent. of their students, Presbyterians seminaries 16 per cent., Episcopal seminaries 10 per cent., and Methodist seminaries only 2 per cent. The rest of the students come from undenominational or state colleges, or are received without graduating from college. The Report also shows that the number of students in theological seminaries increased faster than the population from 1870 to 1890, and the relative increase was then less than that of the population until 1903, when the tide again turned, and the students for the ministry have increased faster than the population since 1905.—Watchman.

WITHOUT-WITHIN.

"Without, the hurry and clash, the race and the rush;
Within, the keeping in peace, the silence and hush.
Without, the labor and toil, the wave's frothy crest;
Within, the working of God, the centre of rest.
Without, the grasp for the first, the anger and strife;
Within, the waiting for God, the letting go life.
Without, the love of the seen, the pomp and the show;
Within, simplicity sweet, all quiet and low."—Ex.

Death of Mrs. Williams.

Mrs. Annie Williams, mother of Rev. J. D. Williams, died at the home of her son near Chapel Hill Saturday, May the fourth. The funeral was conducted at Union Grove Church Monday by her pastor, Rev. Homer Casto, after which the body was laid to rest in the cemetery near the church. An obituary will appear later.

BEST CHRISTIAN IS BEST CITIZEN.

That young man today should not call himself a Christian who is a poor citizen. The man who shirks his duty at the polls, the man who takes every opportunity to escape the duty as a juryman, as a citizen, the man who is indifferent as to the condition of his community, the man who is indifferent as to whether or not you have a Juvenile Court or not, the man who can live in his brown stone house while his neighbor rots in the corner around the street, in a hovel which is covered with unspeakable filth, or any condition in his city which tends to drag down the level of life of his fellow citizen—I do not see how such a man can call himself a disciple of Jesus Christ. We thank God to hold aloft that standard here this afternoon—that the best Christians in any community ought to be the best citizen in that community.—Bishop William A. Guerry.

THE MAN AND THE JOB.

Little by little it is becoming clearer that the problem of the unemployed is not so much the fault of an artificial economic system or of human injustice, at least in this country, as demogagic agitators or misguided if honest theorists would have us to believe.

It has been iterated and reiterated over and over again that men or women who are out of work have in nine cases out of ten, if not in every case, only themselves to blame. The statement has been ascribed to Emerson, though nobody has yet discovered when or where he said it, that if only a man will make a better mousetrap than anyboyd else, though he live in a wood, the world will beat a pathway to his door. Whoever said it, to a certain extent it is true; under every economic and political system there has always been a demand for the best. But much more completely true is it that in our complicated and intricate industrial situation of today it has become increasingly difficult to bring together the individual who wants to work and the individual who has the work to give him, and that as a great service as can be rendered to humanity is to accomplish just that thing.—Philadelphia Press.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk has planned to have all-day meeting at his churches this month.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Sprerintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

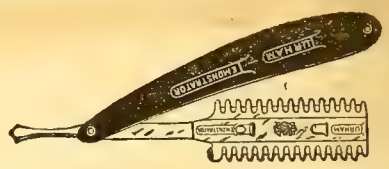
Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

S. S. C. BUFF ORPINGTON EGGS

Won first, second and third prizes at Randolph Fair.
Now $1.50 per 15 Delivered.
T. H. MATTHEWS, Randleman, N. C.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th, or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.
Greensboro, N. C.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1912. NUMBER 25.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

ABOUT WRITING OBITUARIES.

Whose place is it to write them? That depends. It is the privilege of any friend to write of one removed by death, but as a rule, regular obituary notices are prepared by some one specially requested to do it by the family of the deceased. Often pastors are asked to render this service especially if they have personally known the departed. No one should feel aggrieved because the pastor or other person does not write an obituary notice when no one has been specially requested to do so.

—Yadkin Collegiate Institute closes the year with public exercises May 22nd and 23rd. Rev. S. W. Taylor preaches at 11 a. m., May 23rd, and Rev. G. L. Curry delivers an address at 2 P. M., May 23rd. There will be students. contests on the night of the 22nd and in the forenoon of the 23rd. It will be an interesting and enjoyable occasion.

—General Conference opens tomorrow The first day will be occupied with organization, election of committees, and hearing of reports of standing committees, probably. An invitation to visit Western Maryland College will very likely be accepted on Saturday. Among the special features promised is a mass meeting on Monday night to be addressed by the President of the United States, the Governor of Maryland, and the Mayor of Baltimore. An excursion to Annapolis has also been planned by the committee of entertainment, if the Conference finds it has time for such diversion.

—Ex-President Roosevelt and President Taft are saying some very uncomplimentary things about each other. Four years ago it was "dear Will" and "dear Theodore." Now Theodore says Will has become useless to the American people, and Will says Theodore is an intense egotist who thinks nobody but himself capable of filling the office of president. Such talk is unbecoming in men honored as both have been by the American people. They should set us a better example. But we learned long ago that not all politicians are perfect gentlemen. The only thing that perfects character and conduct is Christianity.

—Revs. C. A. Cecil, J. R. Hutton, and G. F. Millaway (and perhaps others) started this morning to Baltimore for General Conference. They expect to spend tonight in Washington.

—After years of discussion, Congress has voted in favor of election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. An amendment to the Constitution providing for this change will be submitteed to the States. A three-fourths majority of the States is necessary.

—Denmark's king died suddenly this week and his son has been proclaimed king instead, as Christian X.

—Rev. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant favored us with a call on Tuesday, accompanied by Master Faison of Granville County.

—The editor visited Winston Church last Sunday morning. He found the people interested and hopeful. They have not yet decided as to building but are studying the problem, and we trust in due time will reach a happy solution of it. Their present church seems too good to sacrifice, and as yet they have not hit upon a plan of remodeling that is wholly satisfactory. We were kindly entertained by Bro. J. R. Cummings and family, including Mr. Arthur Gunn, who is a brother of our new linotype operator.

—This is a season of storms. In addition to the great flood in the Mississippi Valley, tornadoes are reported from different sections of the country, destroying property and in some instances killing or injuring people.

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due	Paid
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Thomasville	3.00	1.00
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	7.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	4.35
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Orange	3.00	3.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Eland	3.00	1.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Haw River	9.00	7.00
Alamance	10.00	9.13
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Denton	2.00	2.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

Speaking to a Chicago audience composed largely of ministers, Rev. W. E. Biederwolf brought the following charge against a portion of the church membership:

"You have women in your churches today who are thinking much more about the coming bridge party than they are of the salvation of their children; you have merchants in your churches who think more of gold than of God and you have in your churches too great a number of those demasculinized creatures who give more thought to the crease in their trousers than to the crisis of their soul's affairs. The Men and Religion Movement means to see that conversion shall not give way to culture."

THE SOUL THAT SINNETH, IT SHALL DIE.

It is most deplorable that so many people with good sense about other things, will labor so assiduously, and continuously to prove that it was only an empty threat when our Creator said "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

They advance wonderful theories to prove, at the instigation of their master, Satan, that every sentence in Holy writ that refers to retributive justice for evil works, is only a bluff to frighten the ignorant, and keep them in the right way. The soul that sinneth, it shall die. When? Where? Right here in the flesh, the soul dies commensurate with the evil work that is performed.

Did you ever have a flower luxuriant, beautiful, and strong, when almost imperceptibly it began to fade? Your search for the cause, and find that some insect is preying on root or foliage. When the cause is removed it regains all that it had lost.

How does the soul die when the body is alive? Do we not see people every day, whose souls are dying to honesty, truth, to mercy, and purity, and love—everything that is Christlike is withering and shrinking away, and at the same time the space is being filled with every evil influence that the arch enemy can present to them?

The word of God teaches us that there is no power in hell, or earth, or heaven that can revive this dying soul, except the cleansing blood of a merciful Savior, and that must be applied while the soul is clothed with the flesh, and yet poor deluded mortals will dare to lay their unclean hands on God's plan of salvation, and seek to wrest it to fit their own notions of how it ought to have been.

What do you propose to make your heaven out of when you storm the holy city of the New Jerusalem? Oh, your polluted voices would make sweet accord (?) with redeemed souls as they sing—

"Worthy the Lamb that died, they cry,
To be exalted thus.
Worthy the Lamb, our hearts reply,
For He was slain for us."

When men and women, at the instigation of Satan, repudiate Christ through their whole lives, when their poor shriveled souls, separated from their coadjutor, stands at God's bar, they will find that this specious falsehood "Another Chance" will be left behind with its author. If we could only persuade people to believe that the sin that delights their hearts here will have a very different face when they stand in the presence of infinite Purity!

If they could only see that the soul that dies to purity, holiness, and love, in the flesh is just as dead here as it will ever be. The only difference is that here there is a possibility of a change—there no change can be effected. Here their eyes are blinded—there the light of eternity will show them their souls in all their hideous deformity.

God intended for the souls of His creatures to be filled with glorious, eternal love which is only another name for heaven. If it is filled with man's dread prerogative—undying remorse—who is to blame?

If men prefer to fill their souls with hatred and every other evil thing, God lets them. We have a perfect right as free agents to follow any line of conduct that we think is conducive to happiness, but we need not expect the Creator to alter any of His plans to keep us from reaping what we have sown.

When we decide in this life that we will not have the man Christ Jesus to reign over us, the decisions will be unalterable unless it is changed while we are in the flesh. The Omnipotent God Himself cannot alter our destiny.

Children of God will doubtless grow to infinite perfections in the beautiful city of God. The two talent Christian will reach as great perfection as the five-talent one, bu the one talent man has no promise but to be called wicked and slothful to the end.

"Ruth Fletcher."

A STEWARD'S IMPRESSIONS OF THE WORLD IN CINCINNATI.

On the sixth of April there closed in Cincinnati what was probably the greatest exhibition that city has ever seen, the great missionary exposition known as the "World." The interest shown in the enterprise was great. The attendance at committee meetings of the management, it is said, was surprisingly good, and the stewards came up to their pledges through all the four weeks. And the interest of the general public showed itself in the total attendance, which was about 250,000.

The Exposition was not possible without stewards, of whom there were over 5,000. These stewards were made into classes of about twenty-five, each class to study a textbook on the country assigned their church. The work of the steward was to take charge of and explain the exhibits, and to impersonate natives in the demonstrations. Nearly all of them came in costume.

The "World" consisted of two general departments: the Exposition and the Pageant of Darkness and Light. The exposition itself was in two divisions, the Hall of the Homeland and the Hall of Foreign Lands. There was nearly always somewhere something to listen to, for, besides the stewards' demonstrations, there were, at stated times, talks by missionaries.

The Pageant deserves special notice. It was what is called a masque oratorio, most of the parts being sung. It was presented twice on every day of the Exposition. The program is as follows:

"I. North Episode.

"The scene represents an Indian camp in the far Northwest. The Chief and his wife are in distress at the loss of their little daughter, who has strayed from the line of march. To the camp comes a band of Eskimos to trade. The Medicine Man incites the braves to kill them and take their goods, but they are prevented from doing this by the arrival of the Missionary. He brings with him the Chief's child, whom he has found in the woods, and thus gains the Chief's goodwill. His message of the Gospel is joyfully accepted by the Indians.

"South Episode.

"The scene is at Ujiji, Africa, where Livingstone is resting for awhile. His converts are building a mission house. The wife of an Arab slave-raider enters and pleads for aid for her wounded husband. Livingstone ministers to him bodily and spiritually and receives as his recompense two slaves, whom he at once sets free. During the mid-day meal Livingstone is full of thoughts of home. A runner comes panting into the settlement with news of the coming of a white man. Stanley enters with his followers and begs Livingstone to return to civilization with him. The men and women of Livingstone's camp breathlessly await his answer. The "Great Master" tells Stanley that he will not leave Africa until his work is done, and the natives resume their work.

"East Episode.

"The first scene opens with a furious mob of natives assailing the house of an English missionary, demanding a native child, Rhadamani, whom they wish to marry to an old man. The Governor disperses the mob. Rhadamani then furtively enters and implores the Missionary to save her, but both Missionary and Governor are helpless. Rhadamani, in despair, rushes out into the very arms of the awaiting populace, who march her away to her fate.

"The second scene is in a public square crowded with natives. A procession with animals for sacrifice marches into the Kali Temple. From the opposite direction a funeral procession enters. Rhadamani has become a widow and is about to be burned alive on the funeral pyre with her dead husband—the custom of Suttee. She performs the ancient ceremony of seven revolutions about the pyre. As Rhadamani throws herself on the body of her husband and the torch is being applied, the Governor, with a company of Sepoys, enters with a proclamation abolishing Suttee forever.

"West Episode.

"Scene I. reveals a wedding group in joyous celebration in the sunshine. As the volcano roars, the "Oldest Inhabitant" advances and reveals the fact that when Pele, the Goddess who dwells in the crater, is angered, she sends her Priest to claim victims. The Priest enters and chooses as victims for the sacrifice a little child and the young bridegroom. As he is about to lead them to their doom, the Queen, Kapiolani, approaches and commands them all to dispel their fears, telling the people that there is no Pele, for there is only one true God. The Priest curses her and she bids him lead her to the crater.

"Scene 2 shows Kapiolani on her way to the volcano to defy the Goddess.

"In Scene 3 Kapiolani ascends to the edge of the crater, defies the power of all the superstition of Hawaii and thus breaks the reign of Pele forever.

"Final Episode.

"The Grand Processional.

"The Scene of the Cross."

All the participants come upon the platform, and a large number of children march through the isles singing and join those on the stage. The meaning of this episode is contained in the words of the song, which begins, "In Christ there is no East or West." Before the curtain rose for each episode the prolucutor came upon the stage and recited a poem which gives the key and inspiration of the act. The one before the South Episode begins:

"To lift the somber fringes of the night,
To open lands long darkened to the light,
To heal grim wounds, to give the blind new sight,
Right mightily wrought he."

The Homeland was a very interesting section. It was well manned, too, and looked real. For instance, in Labrador stood a snow house, with three dogs and a sled, and the scene was carried further on the screen.

One of the most popular places was the Ellis Island exhibit. I saw one of the demonstrations. A woman with a little boy about ten wanted to enter the country. She said she was from Russia, that her husband was exiled in Siberia for talking against the government, and that she was going to join her father in Chicago, and intended to "sell" for a living. The man fired the questions at her as if he had been a real official, and the woman answered in single words, or by motions of the head. Finally, she was told that she would have to await further investigation, and she went away crying, folding the child in her shawl. The "official" said that this was not at all exaggerated. The missionaries on Ellis Island often play the part of a friend to the ignorant immigrants, adjust mistakes, send telegrams to friends, give advise, and always try to point the wanderer to the Saviour.

In the section of mountain people I saw a hand grist mill which turns out about a quart of meal in an hour, and I was told that such might be found in use eight or nine miles ride from Cincinnati. I was also shown a lamp of a primitive style, a shallow bowl for oil, with a little lip for the wick.

There were four real red Indians in their section, and a little missionary with them, dressed in the Indian costume. I heard her give a talk and demonstration entitled, "What the white man has done for the red man." She had a little model of a tepee, and showed us the system with which an Indian home is conducted. The meal is eaten from a piece of oilcloth spread on the ground. The Indian woman, she said, from the time of beginning to prepare the meal till the dishes are washed and put away, does not stand on her feet. The Indians do not use their lower limbs very much; they sit on them when at home, and when they travel, they ride. That is one reason why it has been so hard to adjust the Indians to civilized ways, the men to following the plow all day, the women to modern house-keeping.

My place was in the Turkish Khan, the country inn of fifteen years ago. We had not much to show, but the customs were interesting to those who had the patience to listen, or the curiosity to ask questions.

On the other side of the way was the Bedouin tent, an interesting place. The tent was dark brown in color, and woven of goat's hair, camel's hair, and sheep's wool. Every woman weaves a tent in her girlhood, and brings it to her husband when she marries. The tent had two apartments, separated by a partition, one side for the men, one for the women. Among the curios were a churn made of a goat's skin, hair side in, two stones for grinding grain, a pestle and a mortar for breaking coffee, and a round convex pan, upon which, placed over the fire, the woman bakes her thin cake of bread.

I saw an Arabian wedding procession, too. The women carried cymbals and sang a song which they repeated over and over. The bridegroom had not come yet when the procession reached the platform. He was out collecting wedding presents. He would say to every man that he met, "Come to my wedding feast," and then a present would have to follow. Presently the bridegroom came. The ceremony consists in the gridegroom's walking three times around the bride, and then snatching off her veil and throwing it over his shoulder, as a sign of taking the authority upon himself. He then looks into the face of his bride, probably for the first time. When this is over, the wedding party give them a cheer as a send-off.

Not very far from Turkey was the "Mission to Lepers in India and the Far East." The missions are places where the lepers can be cared for and taught. They have several houses, and little plots of garden for the lepers who are able to work. It is possible, the missionaries say, to stamp out leprosy in comparatively few years by segregating the lepers until they die, taking away the untainted children of leprous parents, and allowing no more marriages among them. The missionaries preach to the lepers, but the work of teaching and caring for them is done by the natives; so that money, not missionaries, is needed in this enterprise.

The purpose of this great Exposition, to which many people willingly gave time and effort, was not to amuse people; not simply to interest and instruct them; but to press home to their hearts that the great business of the church is to spread the gospel of Jesus through all the earth. For this reason, that "the end of the the Exposition is the beginning of the Enterprise, "the continuation work has now set in. It is desired to waken every church in the neighborhood of Cincinnati to new missionary effort, through a missionary committee in every church, and by getting all who took part in the "World" to take up some definite work for Christ in their local churches.

(Mary C. McCulloch).

The Jews were required to give two-tenths of their income, at least—some say three—to religion and benevolence. How much ought Christians to give? The Jewish Church was never a missionary organization. The command, "Go preach," was never given to them. In their dispensation the effort was to keep the water of salvation pure; in ours it is to pour it out for all the world. They gave two tenths. How much ought we to give? They were under Law; we under Love. Will Love do less than Law?—Sel.

THIRTY YEARS AGO AND NOW.

It was William T. Ellis, world- traveler and journalist, himself a product of our young people's movement, receiving his first training in journalism as the editor of a little Christian Endeavor local paper in York, Penn., who said that of nearly three hundred missionaries whom he met on a journey to mission lands practically all who had gone out in this generation said they were there because of the vision received in the missionary work of their young people's societies.

Thirty years ago you could count on the fingers of one hand the books on Christian nurture and child-training. To-day they constitute a fair-sized library.

Thirty years ago the missionary interest in the local churches was almost exclusively among the women. To-day it challenges the attention of our strongest men. As never before men are going into partnership with God, and the Christian Endeavor Tenth Legion alone has enrolled twenty-eight thousand young people who, accepting the principle of Christian stewardship, have made the tenth their minimum gift for religious work.

Thirty years ago religion and politics did not mix. To-day religion is the best asset a politician can have, and the Sermon on the Mount is being translated into our social and labor legislation.

Thirty years ago the emphasis in religious work was upon individual salvation, and heaven was the goal. To-day the emphasis is upon the salvation of the other man, and service is the reward.

Thirty years ago the old sheep were in the fold, and the lambs were largely outside, waiting for an experience. To-day it is the little child that is in the centre of the church's thought and effort, "for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

It is our purpose

To keep our faces toward the light, to test new methods and try out new experiments, holding fast that which is good.

To recognize, but not magnify, the new experiences of the adolescent period, and in every legitimate way, through this period of stress and strain, to hold our boys in normal relations with others, and supply the opportunity for the symmetrical development of their Christian character.

To minister to their social and athletic desires, while at the same time we give them a vision of the higher and deeper things of the spirit, which are the only things that will permanently grip and hold them.

To remember that the church is a great family, and that our young people's societies are to train their members to contribute to the family welfare; that the church is the body of Christ, and that the young people must be trained to take their place in that body so that it may more perfectly express the mind or Christ, its head.

To accomplish this, we are placing before our young people a standard of efficiency that will enable them to note their progress in Christian service as definitely as in business, trade, or education.

We are endeavoring to get religion down out of the clouds of speculation, intellectual hair-splitting, and sentimental emotionalism that exhausts itself in feeling, into real life that it may stand for a clear and abiding faith in God through Jesus Christ, and a loving brotherly ministry and fellowship Society.—Exchange.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Last Statement of the Quadrennium.

In addition to the Quarterly Receipts, which have been regularly published, the following will be of special interest to the church.

The income of the Board of Foreign Missions was $20,941.28 in 1908-1909; $22,-368.44 in 1909-1910; $26,667.66 in 1910-1911; and $23,414.44 in 1911-1912, total $93,391-79, the highestamountin theBoard'shistory.

This is an increase in all receipts over the 1904-1908 quadrennium of $9,426.31, but, deducting bequests to ascertain the regular receipts, the increase was $14,216.41.

The four Annual Reports and the Quadrennial Report in pamphlet form, will soon be ready for distribution. The church should be encouraged to redouble its efforts now when unparallelled opportunities for most effective work present themselves in both the Evangelistic and Educational Departments of our Japan enterprise.

With gratitude to God for his care and blessings, and with thanks to the church for cooperation and help we close this term of service.

Fred C. Klein,
Corresponding Sec.-Treas.

316 N. Charles St. Baltimore Md.

P. S.—Send on your order for Children's Day Supplies if not yet forwarded. Do it now.

PRESIDENT ENTERS DENIAL.

At the White House a personal statment by President Taft was given out categorically denying that Major Archibald W. Butt, the President's military aide who was lost on the Titanic, had gone to Rome on any mission whatever from the President to the Vatican.

"Among the insidious methods of attack pursued by some against me," said the President, "is the attempt to arouse religious prejudice on the charge that I am in some manner unduly favoring the Roman Catholic church. It has been my official purpose, first, as the governor-general of the Philippines, second as secretary of war; and, third, as President, to encourage every church as far as possible where this does not involve invidious distinctions and does not depart from the rule which seperates our state from official relations to all churches. I have unduly favored no church, but have treated them all with absolute impartiality."

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 12.

Revs. J. N. Garrett and W. M. Pike three ($3.00) dollars each. Total six ($6.00) dollars. Previously reported, eignty-nine ($89.00) dollars. Total to date ninety-five, ($95.00) dollars.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

LIFE MISTAKES.

Lot set his face toward worldliness and temporal prosperity, under such conditions that he went down in the tremendous, but subtle struggle of existence. He set his face toward Sodom. It was in a fine country. But Lot, we learn from the history, though his calling should have kept him in the rural districts, went into the metropolis to dwell, and his better nature gradually deteriorated, until at last he fell.

How many mistakes; forgetting the higher impulses in the attractions of the world!

Herod the Great might have aopdted Jesus and made him his heir; but instead, he tried to murder him.

Pilate might have released Jesus, and baffled the fate that made his later life obscure and his memory detested.

Satan once tried to get Jesus to make a mistake, by cultivating unbelief: "If thou be the Son of God."

But fearful disasters come on those who yield to the baser impulses, even though the decision in the beginning hardly seems to be between the right and wrong.

There is no question that God intends to rule this universe.

Ordinary wisdom, justice and equity demand that conditions and penalties of law be clearly stated. And God has done this very thing. The great, good Legislator of the universe has not hidden the penalties that come from disobedience; but he has stated them in the Bible. And Jesus has plainly declared that unbelief itself is a sin. It is a sin that has come from tampering with evil; trying to believe lies; weight of proof; criticising the good side in disputes; belittling the testimony of men who live near God; devising sophisms to annul the difference betwwen right and wrong, to gratify some selfish emotion.

The end of these things is death. The sinner becomes fully a hypocrite, believes a lie, thinks he is justified in his course, and rots.—J. J. Summerbell.

NOTES FORM THE FIELD.

May 2-3 was spent on the Caroleen work. Everything was found in good condition. Rev. H. W. Braswell is moving on with commendable energy toward paying the balance on the churches at Shelby and Lincolnton. At Caroleen arrangements have been made to build two S. S. Class rooms to the church as the present space is somewhat crowded. It is claimed that this charge, though young as it now stands, will pay the pastor five hundred dollars this year. Caroleen is now ahead of time on pastor's salary, and the other two churches are moving right up.

May 5-7 was with the Cleveland churches. Here things are happening. Oak Grove on this charge is one of the neatest and most commodious of any country church to be found. It has a membership which for intelligence and push is rarely excelled. While visiting this church it was my privilege to spend the night in the home of Dr. G. M. Gold and wife. It would be diffffcult to find a larger-souled couple than these. So broad and easy are they that their hospitality gives grace to the place and rest and solid comfort to the temporary sojourner. Mt. Moriah has been too busy to talk. A large and up-to-date church almost finished has taken the place of the old one. This church when finished, in keeping with what has already been done, will rank wtih the very best. While visiting this church I spent the night in the home of Bro. W. Jack Morrison and wife. Bro. Morrison's mother was 99 years old the 15th of last Mar. She can remember when the Methodist Protestant Church was born. She is still active, going about the house at pleasure and down about the barn.

Cleveland Circuit is in fine shape.

At the second quarterly meeting, held at Friendship May 4, it was decided that each church on the charge elect one man, requesting Lincoln Ct. to do the same, the men so elected to meet at some point convenient to both charges on Aug. 3, 1912, to consider the advisability of making three pastoral charges of the two.

May 8-12 I was with the people of Lincoln Circuit. Many of the old fathers and mothers I had known in other days have gone to their reward. They were fathers and mothers to me when I first started out in the ministry. I love their sweet spiritedness yet and their kindness has been an inspiration to me through all these subsequent years. * * * * Lincoln Circuit is looking up because it is waking up. It is exceedingly difficult if not impossible for one to look up till he wakes up. Well, Lincoln seems to be waking up. Bro. L. H. Hatley is a busy man.

Sunday, May 12, he was with me at three, preaching, though did not stay through the services at all of them, preached a funeral eight miles from the first regular appointment and married a couple three miles from the last regular appointment, making in all five appointments for him that day. Possibly this is somewhat above the average for his regular Sunday's work. At Pleasant Hill the church has been neatly painted inside and out. In just twenty-eight days from the time the first step was taken toward the work a debt of $128.00 had been paid and the church painted and paid for. So it is easy to believe that the pastor and people have both been busy other days than Sunday. Knob Creek is soon to be painted and otherwise improved. The second quarterly meeting was held at Knob Creek Saturday, May 11. A very good turn out of the officials.

The quarterly meeting of Cleveland Ct. named the time, leaving to the quarterly meeting of Lincoln Ct. to name the place where the committee to consider a division of the two charges should meet. Pleasant Hill was chosen as the place. In addition to what has been done on the churches, Brother Hatley has leveled the parsonage yard, sown lawn grass seed, laid a nice walk, etc., and has enough fine oak and hickory wood sawed ready for the fire place to last a whole year. On the whole, everything seems to be moving along in fine condition.

W. E. Swain.

THE CURE FOR WORRY.

How may worry be cured? First, by realizing the utter, absolute uselessness of worry. If you were to spend a dozen eternities in worry, you could not change a single fact. The only way that you can change a circumstance is by hard work, and you cannot work hard with a clear head and a steady hand if you worry. A party of friends were looking at the inmates of a lunatic asylum. One of them remarked: "I suppose that a large proportion of these people were brought here on account of un-view of life. We are so taken up with our own little affairs that we sometimes forget that there is a big world beyond us. And when things go wrong, without looking out upon it, we imagine that the world is just a great black, sunless, heartless sphere. A broken toy covers the whole horizon of a child's life. How pitifully you have smiled at the youngster whose heart was almost broken because of what you considered a very trivial matter! And you have learned to smile now at what you once thought were great sorrows and anxities, because since then you have had a larger experience.

You may cure worry by taking a larger necessary worry." "Is any kind of worry necessary?" asked another.

It is a great thing sometimes to forget yourself and just try to remember that your work and your life are just a part of God's great plan for the betterment of the world; but do not forget that they are a part, and then tackle the job bravely, doing your best. That is all that God asks of any man. No one can do more.

Worry may be cured by appreciating that i is not what one has or what one does, but what one is that brings peace of mind. King Solomon had riches, culture, and power. These are most sought after to-day. Each one is legitimate if properly used; but after having experienced t em all, what did this wise man say? "Vanity of vanities. All is vanity." And you will note Jesus's comment upon Solomon's glory: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Here is the idea: It is not one's outward circumstances nor one's accomplishments that drive away worry; it is what one is.

And here is a commonplace cure for worry, trite but nevertheless suggestive: You may cure worry by not crossing bridges until you come to them.You have sometimes wondered how you were to pay the doctor's bills, where the rent and coal and fuel were to come from, and how Johnny was to get a new pair of shoes and Annie a necessary dress. Somehow the bills have all been paid. "But ," you say, "I had a pretty tough time getting through. Yes; but the hard time consisted of nine parts worry and one part work; and that, for the average workingman, means that he has worried pretty hard.

The other dayy I was climbing a circular stairway in a small tower. I could see only one step at a time; but when I took the step, I saw the next. Life is just like that, and I am very glad of it. If we were compelled to view the whole vista of future happenings it would unnerve most of us. It is just one step at a time.—Charlles Stelzle, in Labor Temple Bulletin.

An old worn Harp that had been played
Till all its strings were loose and frayed,
Joy, Hate, and Fear, each one, essayed
To play. But each in turn had found
No sweet responsiveness of sound.
Then Love, the Master player, came
With heaving breast and eyes aflame;
The Harp he took all undismayed.
Smote on its strings still strange to song,
And brought forth music sweet and strong. —Paul Laurence Dunbar.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Psalms 91-100.

From Pastors and People.

Asheville.

Bro. Fogleman gave us such a good sermon yesterday. We had a splendid congregation at the morning services.

Our Sunday school is still growing. The children are getting up the Children's Day exercises.

We extend to Mrs. Gales and children our heart-felt sympathy in their sad bereavement in the death of their father and husband.

Green be the turf above thee.
Friend of my better days,
None knew thee but to love thee,
Nor named thee but to praise.
Tears fell when thou wert dying
From eyes unused to weep,
And long, where thou art lying,
Will tears the cold turf steep.
When hearts, whose truth was proven,
Like thine, are laid in earth,
There should a wreath be woven
To tell the world their worth.
While memory bids friends weep thee,
Nor thoughts nor words are free,
The grief is fixed too deeply
That mourns a man like thee.

Effie Barrett, Reporter.

Bethesda, Yadkin College Ct.

Our Sunday school is getting on very well and is looking forward to the Circuit Rally which is to be held at Shiloh Church on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in July. Our children are anxious for that day to come.

The quarterly conference for this circuit met at Bethesda last Saturday. Preaching at eleven and business of the conference after dinner; the business was transacted in unity of spirit. Bro. Arthur L. Leonard, of Shiloh, and Bro. M. F. Philips, of Yadkin College, were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference.

Our newly married pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, filled his appointment at Bethesda on yesterday and gave us a very good sermon. Bro. Powell's little son, Henry, has pneumonia again, but is improving now. Chas. M. Yokeley.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct.

Bro. Plyler filled his regular appointment here today with an excellent sermon. His subject was, "Walking With God." He compared the result of a life spent in this way and the opposite.

The sermon was listened to by a large and attentive congregation.

Preparation is being made at this place for Children's Day, to be held sometime in June.

The Sunday school is still improving and progressing, but a small turn-out today on account of measles.

The people of M. G. were glad to hear of Mrs. Plyler's improvement.

I. W. Cashatt, Reporter.

Henderson.

We are moving on here. Last Monday we buried in our Vance County earth, the sacred dust of Professor S. Simpson, our leader of thirty years ago. He was 65 years of age and had spent all his mature years in getting and imparting knowledge: and he had a supreme enthusiasm for work along educational lines. I have always felt a deeper obligation to him that to any other man except my father. I spent a day with him three years ago on the Gettysburg battle-field. It was a day of the greatest excitement and emotion. When parting that night, I said to him: "This has been a good day to us; I have had many good and great days, but never a better or greater day than the one on which I first saw you." He left a wife and daughter and three successful, well-developed sons. They look like him and will bear faithfully and well the burdens of life, as he did.

Our brother, H. T. Powell, delivered the memorial day address here May 10. I was away, but heard fine accounts of it. as an excellent, appropriate and thoughtful speech.

Our pastor, Bro. Williams, attended the funeral of his mother last Sunday. We sympathize with him. Today while the rain poured he preached us two good sermons in one on "the wheat and the tares." The church was beautifully decorated with beautiful roses.

This Sunday, the second in May, is "Mother's Day. We wore roses in honor of our mothers, and are, all men, everywhere expected to write to them and think of them and honor the memories of those departed. It is a beautiful custom and should grow in popularity. Benjamin H. Grissom, of Mt. Carmel Church, who lived next door to our lamented brother, Henry Hart, died yesterday. His body was buried at Mt. Carmel today.

Our delegates go to General Conference Thursday.

Two other recent occurrences in our church some of the brethren deem worthy of mention.

We have decided and have raised and forwarded $175 to maintain a native Japanese missionary for a year.

And we have have raised the money to buy a nice Bible for each room in the two hotels in Henderson. T. T. H.

May 12, 1912.

Haw River Ct.

Bro. Swain:

We held the second quarterly conference at Mispah on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in May. The farmers were very much behind with their work and we did not have a large congregation, but every church was represented. Bros. J. M. Weatherly and J. A. Gunn are the nominees for delegate. It was a delightful conference. We all felt well-paid for going. The good sisters had a splendid dinner. Finances about like they were a year ago. One steward and one assistant present. Fair Grove will pay the other $2.00 due for delegates to the General Conference. Does that passage of scripture mean what it says: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His rigteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Do you believe it?

Fraternally, C. E. M. R.

Bess' Chapel, Lincoln Ct.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely; 86 enrolled with a very good attendance. We will give our 1st Sunday's collection to the Orphanage. Will tell the good women how we are making Orphanage quilts: each woman and girl to piece a "square" of the same size; when we get them done, we are going have a regular old-fashioned "quilting bee" at the parsonage. Let other congregations do likewise, then when cold winter comes again, we can think of our orphans being comfortable.

Mr. Frank Baxter and son, Marion, of Newberry, S. C., worshiped with us on last fourth Sunday. Bro. Frank gave us a good talk on our duty towards the orphanage.

Yesterday at 11 o'clock, Mrs. Essie (Bess) Beam was laid to rest in Cedar Grove cemetery under a mound completely covered with beautiful flowers. She had only been married one short year and was only 22 years old—just budding into womanhood. Essie was one of our S. S. girls,and we will miss her in church and Sunday school. Her pastor, Rev. L. H. Hatley, conducted funeral service; his text was "I have called," he preached an able sermon. Essie was sick only a short while until God called her home. The sad part is she left an infant boy baby who will never know a mother's love.

Dr. W. E. Swain preached twice for us at Chapel, Thursday at 11 o'clock; and again Sunday evening at 5:30; his sermons were forceful and full of inspiration. We are always glad to have Dr. Swain in our church, also in our home.

Wishing success to the Herald and all its readers. Mrs. J. C. Beam.

May 13th, 1912.

Michfield.

"Silent as the forces of nature," but steady and persistent the friends and neighbors about Michfield have labored, and yesterday the first service in our new church was enjoyed by a good-sized congregation. The pastor of Richland Circuit preached, Rev. W. R. Smith made a short address, and Bro. M. J. Presnell made a few remarks, after which Sunday school was organized, with the following officers and teachers: Supt. M. J. Presnell; asst., J. W. Vuncannon; Sec.-Treas, Walter Graves; Teachers: A. O. Cox, W. A. Graves, Miss Myrtle King, Mrs. Vuncannon.

This church is in Methodist Protestant territory and some help from well-wishers to the enterprise will be thankfully received. Send to M. J. Pressnell, Michfield, N. C. C. H. Whitaker.

THE POSTAL CARD.
W. P. Kennett, Editor.

Last Sunday was Mothers' Day at Flat Rock. The subject of the sermon "A great host of good women." The text, "The Lord giveth the word: The women that publish the tidings are a great host." Psalms 68-11 (American Revised Version). The congregation was good, though the Annual Sermon of the Summerfield High School very naturally drew some who otherwise would have been present.

At 3:30 in the afternoon, Rev. T. J. Ogburn preached a most excellent sermon at Prices Store, Bros. J. T. Price and M. W. Thomas going to Greensboro after him in their automobile and returning him in time for the evening service at Grace church.

We were grieved to hear of the death of Prof. S. Simpson. He was brought up near Flat Rock Church, of which he was a life-long member. We recall a letter he wrote to be read at our Diamond Jubilee in which he spoke of his early recollections of Flat Rock Church and gave expression to his love and veneration for the old mother church.

Few churches have sent out a larger number of useful men than has Flat Rock.

We congratulate Clay Wilson, one of our Flat Rock boys, on winning the medal at close of Summerfield High School. Also Laban Williams, another Flat Rock boy, on winning the medal at close of Bethany High School.

Bessemer City.

Dear Editor:

I am going to be reporter for our church as we haven't had any for some time. Our Sunday school is progressing rapidly. We had 50 present last Sunday. We had preaching in morning, also at night. We had a great meeting Sunday night—it was as good as any revival I ever witnessed. There was a young man in the congregation that came forward when the pastor was about the middle of his sermon and asked for prayer right then. He said he thought he could be saved right then and they stopped service and went to prayer, and he was happily converted. We think Bro. Loy is as good a pastor as we could get, as everybody likes him so well.

Wishing the Herald much success, I remain. Sarah Henderson.

Love's Grove, Stanley Ct.

Bro. Reynolds preached a good and interesting sermon the second Sunday in May in memory of Bro. T. A. Coley's wife. She was a member at Love's Grove and was a good sister. She has crossed over the valley to live with Jesus. Let us all prepare, for we know not when the summons will come for us, and be ready to cross over death's valley and live with Jesus. Let us all pray that we may do what the Lord would have us do while we live in this world of temptations.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely and new scholars keep coming in. We expect to have our children's day services the second Sunday in June. We hope to have a good children's day service by the help of the Lord.

There will be a singing at Bro. T. A. Honeycutt's the third Sunday evening in May. Daniel Little, Reporter.

Randleman Ct.

Our second quarterly conference met May 4th, at Worthville. Small attendance, however, all the churches were represented and the regular business was gone through with. Nominees for delegate to Annual Conference are R. W. Giles and W. A. Lamb. We are moving along slowly, but we are hopeful of a good year's work. We are preparing for a meeting at Randleman the third Sunday in this month. Bro. D. A. Braswell will be our help.

Bethany Sunday school is now taking a special collection one Sunday in each month for the Denton Orphanage. Mt. Lebanon has been giving the Orphanage their collection one Sunday in each month for some time.

Sunday schools are all doing a good work we believe.

Miss Forrest has visited the work and received in cash and pledges a little more than $150.00 from the four churches for foreign missions.

We are expecting to hold Children's Day service in all the Sunday schools.

J. B. O'Briant.

May 9, 1912.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.

Dear Herald:

Our Sunday school at Cid is progressing nicely under the management of Mr. Jesse Wade and others. We have good congregations and there is much interest manifested.

Bro. Trogdon filled his appointment at Cid Sunday and everybody seemed so glad to see him out again. He delivered one of the grandest sermons I believe that has ever been delivered in this church and I do hope that it is seed sown on some good ground and will develop for good before this year closes. Everybody seems to love Bro. Trogdon, because they believe he is so deeply interested in saving of souls, as he is not out for the money—but the laborer is worthy of his hire. We surely do hope that Bro. Trogdon will keep improving and soon be well again.

We were delighted to have Bro. Harris Hill to worship with us Sunday. He gave us an interesting talk. So come again.

Mr. Charlie Nance, son of Mr. Robert Nance, died last Thursday and was buried on Friday at the Goss Graveyard. He was 14 years old and was a very good boy. He had pneumonia. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Miss Beulah Hanner, of Lexington, is visiting her cousin, Miss Treva Lanier.

A well-wisher to the Herald and its many readers. Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

A large congregation out to hear Bro. Ledbetter 1st Sunday. Many visitors, some of whom were strangers. From Enfield, Mrs. Glass, Miss Lessie Parks, Mrs. Eugene Fulgham, of Franklinton, N. C., Mr. John Sledge of Louisburg, Miss Mary Ella Carter and Miss Fannie Fisher of Vaughn.

After pulpit service sacrament was administered. Before service, we actually held a re-election of Sunday school officers. Mrs. A. E. Carter, Supt., M. J. Morris, Asst., Miss Lena Carter, Sec.

Another Sunday, pupils will elect their teachers. Have given out recitations for Children's service, which we hope to have 1st Sunday of June. But have not seen the music yet. We shall have to work hard if we have it presentable by that time.

Today we were pleased to have Bro. Ledbetter, wife and four children—Margie, Ina, Wade, and Joseph Norman to spend the day in our home. We want you to bring them to see us again, Bro. Ledbetter.

Write again, Miss Hattie Harris, we enjoy your reports. Bannie Barnes.

May 13, 1912.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Bro. Raper filled his regular appointment Sunday; he preached a splendid sermon. It seems that he is more in earnest and preaches a better sermon every time. We all enjoy his sermons so much.

Our S. S. has started again this spring and we hope to have a better S . S. this year than ever before, there were 70 there last Sunday. We were glad to see so many there. May the Lord guide and direct us that we may have a better Sunday school. Blanche Weatherly,

Reporter.

Ivy Circuit.

Last Sunday was a red letter day for two churches on Ivy Circuit. Our pastor. Rev. S. B. Stephens, held the second quarterly meeting at Pleasant Gap Church on Sunday morning. He preached to a large congregation from the subject, Why Christian people should take communion. After preaching he administered the communion to more people than had communed at this church for many years. At night Bro. Stephens preached at Democrat to the largest congregation that we have seen in that church since our church has been built. At the close of this service he opened the door of the church and received a very prominent member of the Baptist church into our church.

Our churches are having a gradual growth under the labors of our present pastor. He has received more members in the different churches on the Ct. since Conference than have been received for many years.

We are well-pleased with our pastor; his congregations are getting larger and larger every time he preaches. We only hope we will be able to keep him for many years to come; but knowing that such men are in demand, and knowing Ivy Circuit as we do, we can only hope for the future. Believing I may be able to report something to the Herald from our work here often, I beg to remain your for the interest of our church.

Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Ct.

Dear Herald:

Our pastor filled his regular appointment at this place yesterday: regardless of a stormy day there was a good congregation to hear him. He gave us a splendid sermon; one enjoyed by all present.

Quarterly conference will be held at Littleton M. P. church Saturday, May 18. All delegates requested to be present.

Our Sunday school is improving rapidly as the good weather comes on. The rains have kept a number of our people away recently.

Quite a number of our neighborhood people are sick at this writing; among them, Mrs. Kenneth Hawkins, who is very ill. We hope for her a speedy recovery. Also Mr. Anderson Dickens, a very aged man, is very ill with dropsy; his recovery is considered doubtful.

Our church and community has been called upon to mourn the death of our dear friend and brother, Mr. R. D. Hawkins. He was a good man, greatly loved by every one who knew him, and a consistent Christian man. He has been patiently suffering for many months, and while his death was not unexpected, yet it was a sore bereavement to his family, and many friends. His life justified us in saying that truly a righteous man has gone to be with Jesus. He leaves to mourn his departure a wife and seven boys, a brother, and half brother, and very many friends. A very large congregation met to pay their last respects to him, and to witness his burial at the family burying ground near his home.

The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. His funeral was preached by Rev. Mr. Ledbetter, his pastor.

Much more could be said about so good a man, but space would not permit, so we commend all the bereaved to " Look unto Him who doeth all things in love." The prayers of all our Christian friends are requested in behalf of this bereaved family.

Wishing the Herald and its readers all possible good, and hoping to escape the waste basket this time, I am,

Yours in Christ,

Vannah Shearin.

May 13,1912.

HOPE CHURCH, SILER CITY CIRCUIT

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, filled his regular appointment the 2nd Sunday. There was a very large congregation. He preached a very interesting sermon; he always has something that is helpful to the people. The sermon Sunday was enjoyed by all who were present.

Our Sunday School is progressing nicely. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday night.

The second quarterly meeting will be held at Siler City Church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in May; at 3 P. M.

With best wishes for the Herald and its many readers. Reporter

ORANGE.

Dear Herald:

Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, preached a splendid sermon for us yesterday, his subject being "Sunday School."

Our S. S. is moving on nicely with Mr. T. R. Hayes supt. We had 93 present yesterday. We take a collection for the Orphans at Denton every fourth Sunday.

Friday, May 10th, was Commencement day at Chestnut Ridge Institute. We were glad to have with us Prof. H. M. Stacy of the State University. Also Prof. T Wingate Andrews of Reidsville; both addresses were greatly enjoyed by all.

This School has made good progress this year with Prof. Ed Sykes and Miss Agnes Hoffmastes teachers. Miss Hoffmastes will leave this afternoon for her home in Maryland, she will be missed much.

Success to the Herald and its readers.

Fannie Thompson. Rep.

May 13, 1912.

HALIFAX CT.

The 2nd Quarterly Conference will convene at Union Church on Friday before the fourth Sunday in May at 11:00 o'clock.

A full attendance of the official members is requested. J. E. Pritchard, Pastor.

—Thirty-eight counties have now made provision to have the dispensary campaign for free examinations and free treatment of hookworm disease. Four counties having just made the appropriation are Wilson, Catawba, Burke and Caldwell. The counties of Duplin, Greene, Nash, Wilson and Wake now have the dispensaries in progress, and large numbers of people are taking advantage of the opportunity for free treatment.

MT. CARMEL, GRANVILLE CT.

Sunday school report last Sunday as follows: total enrolled, 109., total present, 67., total collections $1.07. The weather very inclement.

Bro. Bethea preached very interestingly last Sunday A. M. being his regular appointment. It was a sermon that "fits" everyday life.

One of the oldest, or perhaps the oldest member of this church, Mr. J. H. Grissom, died at his home in Henderson Thursday night May the ninth and was buried near this place at the Finch burying ground. Mr. Grissom was a former steward of this church. W. Polk Garrett.

May 14, 1912.

FAIR VIEW.

We held our fourth quartley conference at Fair View on Saturday night, May 5th. Not many of our people present, but we had a large crowd from Concord.

Communion service was also held on the first Sunday, May 5th, and one member received into the church.

Our Sunday School is growing, but not like it ought. There were 35 present on last Sunday and 36 cents collection. There will be preaching on the third Sunday, May 19, at 3:00 o'clock and Sunday School at 2:00 o'clock.

Good wishes to the Herald, and all of its readers. Carrie McCall, Reporter.

HICKORY RIDGE, FORSYTH CT.

Dear Herald:

For several months there has been no report from Hickory Ridge, though we have not reported we feel that we have been doing some good.

We were glad to have Bro. Williams and little daughter, Iola, with us last Sunday Bro. Williams gave us one of his soul thrilling sermons. His text being 2 Timothy 1:12. We were glad to have so many out to hear him.

We did not have Sunday school during the winter months, but now we have organized and much interest is being manifested. One of our Sunday school workers, Mr Merritt, who has been away in school since Christmas, has returned. We are glad to have him with us again.

We have just installed a new organ in our church and we feel that it will be a great help in our Sunday school.

We are expecting our township Sunday School Convention to be held at this place some time in july. We hope to have a number of our readers with us on that day.

Pray for us that we may grow in the work of our Lord.

Success to Herald.

Annie Sullivan

May 14, 1912

BARACA-PHILATHEA MEETING.

An invitation was extended by the senior Baraca class of Grace M. P. Church to the senior and junior Philathea classes and the junior Baraca class, which resulted in a joint meeting of the four classes at Grace M. P. Church, Friday night, May the 10th.

An attractive and informal program had been arranged and was admirably carried out. Mr. J. M. Stone, senior Baraca teacher, acted as chairman of the meeting.

Some excellent musical selections were rendered by Mrs. Ernest Teague. A round table discussion was conducted by Mr. J. Norman Wills, in which questions relating to Baraca and Philathea work were discussed.

Interesting and enjoyable reports were given of the Salisbury convention by Mr. F. V. Lucas, delegate from the senior Baraca class and by Miss Maie Bain of the junior Baraca class.

On the whole, the meeting was inspiring and instructive and we trust will lead us all to do better and more efficient work.

At the close of the program, a social intercourse was indulged in, giving all an opportunity to get acquainted with each other; during which time delightful refreshments were served. Reporter.

MORIAH, TABERNACLE CT.

Bro. Cecil preached for us to-day another one of his extra good sermons, using as his subject "Keeping the heart." After this the Lord's Supper was served. We were glad to see so many people out. Hope they will continue to come both to Sunday School and preaching. The doors of the church were thrown open today for admission of new members. Mrs. Johnnie Moore joined us by certificate. We are glad to have her membership, for she is one of ou fraithful S. S. teachers.

As Bro., Cecil cannot be with us on the 4th Sunday. Bro. W. C. Kennett will fill his place. He always has a good and helpful sermon for us.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Our Supt., Mr Witty, is going to organize another class next Sunday.

Our class leader, Mr. W. F. Clarida, is going to hold a short prayer meeting next Sunday immediately after Sunday School.

Master Willie Kirkman who has been suffering with phthisic was able to be at church today.

With love to readers. Reporter.

May 12th, 1912.

You go to the South or the North,
Because of the word that came.
What was it that sent you forth?
The charm of a mighty name.
And away and over the dark blue sea,
To lands where the stranger peoples be,
You carry a message to set them free,
Because of the word that came.
It is you who are brave and strong
Because of the Word that came,
Your life is a sacred song
For love of a Saviour's name.
He is the Leader you keep in view,
Be the days of labor many or few,—
And we are hosts who pray for you,
Because of the Word that came.

—Marrianne Farningham.

"The awakening of China which now seems to be at hand," said his excellency Tuan Fang, "may be traced in no small measure to the work of the missionary. For this service you will not find China ungrateful."

"JUDGE NOT."

"Judge not," these are words of the Saviour
Given us as a warning command.
"Judge not," for the greatest and wisest,
May see, but yet not comprehend;
May read but not see the meaning
Of words revealed to their view:
May hear, but still be in darkness
Of the judgment that's perfect and true.
"Judge not," or who of the wisest
Can judge the lowliest men?
Who can read the soul's full story
Of failure, and triumph, when
A mystical veil surrounds
And conceals its pages from view?
There is no one, but Jesus in heaven,
Can read, and give judgment true.

Anon.

HIS GRACE SUFFICIENT.

You have seen some dark disaster threatening your life and you have prayed for deliverance. It may be that the deliverance came. Perhaps it did not. It was sickness that you feared. You said: "O God, spare me this suffering!" In spite of your prayer the sickness came. The Lord said: "My grace is sufficient for thee." It was the greater test of divine helpfulness that you should through weeks of pain have been kept patient, steadfast, unmurmuring. It was poverty that you feared You said: "O God, spare me this vexation and worry!" God said: "My grace is sufficient for thee." It was the greater proof of divine aid that you were able to pass without distrustful complaint from the place of plenty to the place of want. It may be that it was something more dreaded than sickness or poverty that seemed to approach—even the touch of death laid upon your beloved. Out of the depths you cried: "O God, spare me this! Pity me!" God may have answered, simply and tenderly: "My grace is sufficient for thee." His grace in such a sorrow is a token of sympathy as well as a fact of help. For all this you may bring praise to God. The minor note in your gratitude need not rob your mood of reality. The power to e dure, to resist, to hold steady. is a part of the power of life. The God who gives it is worthy of our worship and love.—Selected.

—Rev. L. W. Gerringer, who did such efficient work last summer is now out of the Seminary, and will spend this vacation in revival meetings, if needed. He has no engagement before the second Sunday in July. If you need his help, write him at Elon College, N. C.

Reseue the perishing,
Care for the dying,
Snatch them in pity
From sin and the grave.

OBITUARY.

Sharp.

Died at her home near Greensboro, N. C., April 7th, 1912, Mrs. Elizabeth Sharp, wife of Mr. J. H. Sharp, aged 57 years. She was somewhat an invalid for several years, and was not able to work or go about at all times; but she was a faithful attendant at church when she was able to go. She joined the M. P. Church at Moriah when quite young, and remained a member until her death. She was an excellent woman, a good wife, and a devoted mother and a helpful neighbor. She was devoted to her children and husband, and very kind and hospitable to her many visitors, and they all will greatly miss her.

She leaves a husband, eight children, and two grand children to mourn their loss; but if they will all follow her example, they will see her some sweet day.

The writer has known her for more than two years and found her a true friend and a congenial Christian. The funeral services were held in the church to which she belonged in the presence of a large congregation, Monday afternoon, April 8th, by Revs. T. F. McCulloch, T. J. Ogburn, and the writer, after which the remains were taken to the cemetery for interment.

To the husband and children, so deeply bereaved, and to the church to which her death will be a very great loss, we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Truly, C. A. Cecil.

May 10, 1912.

Gales.

The spirit of Thomas L. Gales left his body and went back to God, who gave it, on April 29th, 1912. Bro. Gales was thirty-seven years of age. He was a good man of quiet habits, and had been a member of our church in Asheville something more than two years. He is the second one to die in our membership here. He leaves a widow and two little twin daughters. May the blessings of our Father sustain and comfort them. Bro. Williams and the writer conducted the funeral in the home. W. D. Fogleman.

Asheville, N. C., May 10, 1912.

Two laymen in Los Angeles are paying for a Chinese edition of the Gospels made up of such extracts and condensations as to give the main facts and teachings in very brief compass. One hundred and thirty thousand copies have already been sent for free distribution through the missionaries and colporteurs.—Helping Hand.

—Dare to do right.

—Never lose the golden rule.

COMMENCEMENT AT WESTMINSTER.

The twenty-ninth Commencement of Westminster Theological Seminary was held May 5-7. To say that it was the most interesting of any of the preceding twenty-eight would be going beyond the knowledge and experience of the writer. However, we do venture to say that it is qustionable whether any of the others have been so pleasant and encouraging. In numbers the graduating class equalled the one of 1907 but in quality and equipment it is doubtful if the class of 1912 has been excelled. They are an earnest and devoted body of young men and promise to be of great usefulness to the Church and the Kingdom. Nine of the fifteen are collegians while the majority of the others have had good educational advantages aside from their seminary training. In spiritual attainments they will compare favorably with any body of young men to be found anywhere so that with their fine educational preparation they are surely "thoroughly furnished."

As usual the first of the series of exercises was the baccalaureate sermon by President Elderdice in the Westminster Methodist Protestant Church, on Sunday morning. He took for his subject, "The Obscure Preacher, His Place and His Power." It was a scholarly sermon and at the same time spiritual and practical and was listened to by a large and appreciative audience. In fact all the exercises of the Seminary were attended by a large number of people indicating the growing interest of the city as well as the denomination in the work of the Seminary. Following the sermon was the communion service of the church the first table of which was filled with seminarians. This as always was an impressive and inspiring scene and is not soon forgotten by those who have the privilege of witnessing it. The communion was in charge of the pastor, Dr. Greenfield, assisted by the members of the faculty.

At the evening service the Alumni sermon was preached by Rev. Eugene Conrad Makosky, '93, of Baltimore. His text was Matt. 13:33, and he indicated the manner, extent, character and power of the growth of the Kingdom. It was a thoughtful and helpful discourse.

On Monday evening the Stockton Literary Society gave it twenty-ninth anniversary program which was as follows: Address of welcome, Pres. Dudley; Reading, C. C. Day; Class History, C. W. Bates, Medley, W. L. Heitz; Prophecy, F. W. Stephenson. In spite of a heavy rain a large number from the city and college attended and evidently thoroughly enjoyed the exercises and the social hour and refreshments which followed.

The Commencement exercises proper were held Tuesday evening in the church. After the hymns and scripture reading Dr. J. W. Kirk led in prayer. Following a delightful solo by Mr. Mikesell, Mr. Clarence J. Morton gave the class oration. His subpect was, "The Rural Pastor." It was a splendid oration, delivered in an interesting and effective manner, and was a credit to Mr. Morton and his class. After the oration Dr. Lyman E. Davis of Sharpsburg, Pa., delivered the address to the graduating class. Dr. Davis captured his audience at once by referring to the wise move of uniting the Adrian and Westminster seminaries, congratulated the school upon the acquisition of Dr. Feeman and expressed his own personal gratification at the success and splendid prospects of the Seminary. He then plunged into his address which teemed with humor and practical suggestions.

By order of the Board of Governors the degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon the following: C. W. Bates, A. B., (Western Maryland College); W. S. Harper, Ph. B., (Adrian College); C. J. Kerlin, Ph. B. (Adrian); W. W. Marcus, A. B., (W. Md.); W. H. Mikesell, A. B., (W. Md.); C. J. Morton, A. B. (Adrian); J. E. Pritchard, A. B. (W. Md.); R. Taylor, A. B., (W. Md.). Diplomas were confered upon the following: W. F. Bauscher, J. W. Brown, A. R. Corn, J. A. Dudley, A. W. Ewell, A. J. Torrey and W. F. Wright.

Prizes were awarded to the following: Theism, H. M. Peterson; Impromptu debate, L. W. Gerringer; Hebrew, W. H. Mikesell; Greek, C. J. Morton; Historical, J. A. Dudley; Hymn and Scripture Reading, R. Taylor and the thesis prize went to J. E. Pritchard whose subject was, "The Church and the Social Problem." After the presentation of the prizes Dr. Elderdice announced that by recommendation of the faculty the Board of Governors had voted to discontinue the present prize system. Some time ago a vote of the student body was taken by the faculty with a view of ascertaining their attitude upon the question. The vote was almost unanimously in the negative. After this the money which has been distributed in prizes will be used to further build up the library.

And thus the Seminary years closed. It has been one of the most critical and yet one of the most encouraging years in the history of the Seminary. Progress has been made along every line and the prospects were never brighter. There has been a fine spirit of harmony among the students and between the students and faculty and all go to their homes or their work determined to do all they can to further the interests of Westminster. They believe in its future. Therefore the are loyal.

EVERY TENTH MEMBER A MISSIONARY.

How a Congo Christian Church Gives Its Money and Its Men.

Rev. E. W. Allen, D. D.

"This work of a native church supporting one in every ten of its members as evangelists, is placing the emphasis where is found Africa's greatest need, and the native evangelists bring the chief returns in missionary labor." So spoke a missionary traveler after having examined the mission of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society in Belgian Congo, Africa. This mission is unique among all missions in the whole world, in that all the members of all the churches tithe their income, and one-tenth of their members are evangelists in the "regions beyond." The tithing of membership, as well as income for missionary service, is before unknown in the heroic annals of missions.

The organization and history of this mission reads as another chapter in the romance of missions. Thirteen years ago two young missionaries, Dr. H. N. Biddle and E. E. Faris, of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, sought for a year in the Congo region for a site in which to open a mission. Just as they had fixed upon Bolenge on the Congo River, where it crosses the Equator, as a field, Dr. Biddle was taken very ill with fever, and died on his way home, and was buried on one of the Canary Islands. Dr. Royal J. Dye, as his successor, was hurried to the field. After three years' labor, one lame man was baptized. The consecration of this unfortunate, who was denied the movement of either hands or feet, was glorious. The naked cannibals came to his little hut to hear the story of the Great Physician. At the end of another year, thirty-one of these savages, from seven warring villages, were subdued by the Prince of Peace, and were baptized by the missionaries.

Assembling for the first time around the table in memory of their Lord, one, upon his own initiative, arose and proposed that it be made the rule of the new church that every member tithe his income. This was heartily and unanimously agreed upon Again this whilom child of paganism and superstition and the devil arose and,with passionate entreaty, proposed that one out of every ten of their number give his entire time to heralding "the good tidings," and that these be supported by the other nine members in each group. This was as joyously accepted as the first proposal.

Nine years have gone since that resolution, born of the Holy Spirit. In that field the one station is multiplied by four, and the membership has grown to more than 2,000, and yet this practice has been persistently and sacredly followed. It is proven not a spasm but a deep-seated principle of the Christian life.

The medium of barter and exchange is brass rods, eleven inches in length, in value worth about one cent of American money. These rods the missionaries teach them to count and tie into bundles of ten each. The members of each church every week bring their tithes to the treasurer who enters the amount upon his book. After the church service each Sunday, a free-will offering is made, which is over and above the regular tithe.

Christmas is essentially a Christian holiday. This Apostolic Church of the Congo, in their observance of the day, have restored its beautiful symbolism. On the day previous dusky processions numbering hundreds emerge from the forest paths, and in large flotillas of dug-out canoes on the mighty river other hundreds swell the multitudes in the town. At daybreak on Christmas morn a devotional service sets a high note for the day. At noon the great feast of the multitude is held. Huge tubs of antelope, smoked fish cooked in palm oil, and other vast quantities of native dishes are consumed, while joyous converse fills the air. At five o'clock the great service begins. The names of the Christians are called,and in response each goes forward with his thank offering for the wondrous gift of salvation brought to them by the Christ Child . Like the Magi of old, they bring their gifts, not gold, frankincense and myrrh, but brass rods, mats, plates, chickens, fish, vegetables and belts. They give according to the measure of their love, and the total, increasing each year amounts to hundreds of dollars. This Christmas thank offering, in addition to their weekly thank offering and regular tithe, makes it possible for these Christians to support as missionaries more than one-tenth of their membership as missionaries in spreading the glad tidings.

Besides its grace of giving, and the setting apart and support of more than one tenth of its members, these churches are Apostolic, for they are all witnessing Christians. The largest Christian Endeavor Society in the world is found, not in America or Europe, but in Africa, and one Sunday school but three years old has an average attendance of 2,000.—Men and Missions.

Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to speak harshly.

LITTLE THINGS MADE GREAT.

In manifold ways God has shown to us His power to bring great results from the giving or doing of little things. Much of what is despised by the people of the world, and even by some Christians, because of seeming worthlessness or inferiority, has been magnified and glorified by the providence and power of God. A missionary periodical relates the following story:

"Fifty years ago a child gave a penny to the missionary box. A little tract, costing just one penny,was bought with it, and someone gave it to a young man, the son of a Burman chief. He traveled 250 miles to learn to read it. The Christian teachers taught him, and God gave him a new heart. He went home and preached to others, and fifteen hundred heathen were converted and baptized." A writer, in commenting on that history, says: "We do not know who sowed that little seed, but we know who gave it increase; and he can still multiply the seed sown and increase the fruits of righteousness, to the glory of our God." In the book of Ecclesiastes we read: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand, for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that." It is well that we do not know which deed of ours would be fruitful of good, we might neglect some duties, thinking that they would be needless and useless.

One day a great multitude of people were gathered to hear Christ speak. They were without food; but a lad was present, having five barley loaves and a few fish. How little for so many people; but Christ, by his providential power, made them great enough to meet all wants, and more besides. Learn the lesson.—C. H. Wetherbe.

IS THERE ROOM?

"Is there room in your heart for a greater world
Than your own little world to-day?
Is your love as wide as the boundless sea,
Or a stagnant pool by a willow tree?
How large is your heart, I pray?

Is there room in the heaven you hope to gain
For more than your circle small?
Does your Christ love sin-darkened hearts that bleed,
The hungry and thirsty who suffer need?
Is there room in your heaven for all?

O Christian souls, is our sight so dim?
Is our vision incomplete?
We have looked on Jesus, the crucified;
Let us see the world for whose life he died!
Let us lay it at his feet!"

Hold on to your temper when you are excited, or angry, or others are angry with you.

A CAT THAT COULD NOT FORGET.

When a small child I was visiting my grandmother, who lived on a farm a few miles out of Boston. One morning a large, fine gray cat came in at the kitchen door and went directly to a plate of food under the kitchen table. I loved cats then, as I do now, and at once reached out for a friendly stroke of his handsome, shiny coat. Instead of a soft purr he gave a harsh snarl of rage and a quick stroke of his sharp claws on my hand. Then he rushed out of the house. I ran crying to my grandmother, and she said: "O, I ought to have told you about Tom." I was angry as well as hurt, and said: "He ought to be killed." Grandmother made no reply,, but tenderly bathed my wounded hand and wrapped it up in soft cloths and applied a soothing liniment ; then took me up in her arms and, while she slowly rocked back and forth in her big chair, told me Tom's sad story.

When a small kitten he belonged to a neighbor who, wanting to be rid of him, asked the hired man to kill him. He carried him out, stroking his soft fur as he went. The next day Tom came back to the house evidently suffering from a severe blow, but very much alive and full of fright. The neighbor had not the heart to order him again to be killed, and my grandmother, hearing the story offered to take him. By some strategy he was brought to her house and recovered rapidly from his bodily injury, but he had forever lost all confidence in human beings. No love or coaxing could make him forget his awful experience. He was very useful in keeping rats and mice from the premises. He came regularly each day to the house for food, but no one could lay hands on him. When called "Kitty, Kitty," he would come and gaze for a moment at the one calling; but there was no friendly response in his big, yellow eyes, and if no food was offered him he would hurry off.

After that story, told so tenderly by my grandmother, I always felt great pity for poor Tom, who could not forget. He lived many years; and when too feeble to come to the house, grandmother carried his food to the barn, where he had a nice bed in the harness room, until he died of old age.—Our Dumb Animals.

"How does it happen that you are five minutes late at school this morning?" the teacher asked severely.

"Please ma'am," said William, "I must have overwashed myself."

—Mistress "Well, Cooper, what is the weather to be like?" Gardner: "Well mum, I dunno; but the papers do say, 'Forecast.'" —Punch.

GOOD RULES.

Every boy and girl should read the following rules, which have been adopted by the Children's Guild of Courtesy in connection with the London County Council schools. Many of the other schools in London and vicinity have followed the example of this Guild with good results:

COURTESY TO YOURSELF.

Be honest, truthful and pure.

Do not use bad language.

Keep your face and hands clean and your clothes and boots brushed and neat.

Keep out of bad company.

COURTESY AT HOME.

Help your parents as much as you can.

Be kind to your brothers and sisters.

Do not be selfish, but share all your good things.

Do your best to please your parents.

COURTESY AT SCHOOL

Be respectful to your teachers and help them as much as you can.

Observe the school rules.

Do not copy.

Do not cut the desks or write in the reading books.

Never let another be punished in mistake for yourself. This is cowardly.

COURTESY AT PLAY.

Do not cheat at games.

Do not bully.

Be pleasant and not quarrelsome.

Do not jeer at or call your schoolmates by names which they do not like.

COURTESY IN THE STREET.

Salute your ministers, teachers, and acquaintances when you meet them, who will salute you in return.

Do not push or run against people.

Do not chalk on walls, doors, or gates.

Do not annoy shopkeepers by loitering at their shop doors or gates.

Do not throw stones or destroy property.

Do not throw orange peel or make slides on the pavement. This often results in dangerous accidents.

Do not make fun of old or crippled people.

Be particularly courteous to strangers or foreigners.

COURTESY EVERYWHERE.

Remember to say "Please" and "Thank you."

Always mind your own business.

Before entering a room it is often courteous to knock at the door. Do not forget to close it after you.

Always show care, pity, and consideration for animals and birds.

Never be rude to anybody, whether older or younger, richer or poorer than yourself.

Always show attention to older people and strangers by opening the door for them, bringing them what they require (hat, chair, etc.), giving up your seat for them if necessary.

Never interrupt when a person is speaking.

Be tidy. Be punctal.—Selected.

WHEN THE DOOR SQUEAKED.

Karleen sat in the big rocking-chair beside the window, and rocked and rocked. Bang! thump! bang! thump!—back and forth the chair flew, and then came to a sudden halt.

"I've half a mind to do it!" Karleen said, springing to her feet. "Mother told me to 'stay' till se called me. She didn't say 'stay' here. I don't s'pose she cares if I only 'stay.'"

Karleen giggle! as her thoughts ran on. It would be such fun to fool every one—mother, Aunt Caroline, and big sister Rachel—by slying out the back door and down to the beach. She would be alone there, just the same as in that old thumping rocking-chair—that is, there would not be any folks with her, and folks were what she was to be kept form just at present.

"I want you to stay alone a while with only your thoughts for company," her mother had said, as she closed the door and left her. Karleen was quite positive that nothing had been said about where she stayed, and certainly the beach was just as "alone" a place as this horrid old guest-chamber, with not even a ticking clock for company.

"Yes, I'm going!" Karleen ejaculated, springing from the chair with an energy which sent it flying back and forth so furiously that she put out a hand to stop it. Chairs were such noisy things, particularly rocking-chairs; and now that she had decided to take her solitude down to the beach Karleen did not want the rocking-chair to tell any tales. After she had taken this little vacation, she intended to come back and spend the rest of the time where her mother had left her.

"This is so much nicer, and just 'zactly as 'alone' as it was in the house," Karleen decided, ten minutes later, as she flung herself down upon the hot sand and watched the incoming tide. "The waves don't make any more noise than the thumping old chair, and—why, I do believe that's Flossy Vanderwood coming up the beach!" she cried, scrambling to her feet. "Yes, it is! and she has got Rose Marion with her!"

By this time Karleen had entirely forgotten the fact that she was doing penance for naughtiness, and only waited for her friend to get within calling distance to sing out: "I'll go and get Rosamond. I'll be back in five minutes."

Then up the beach she sped, light hearted and happy, as if there were no such words as obedience or repentance in the dictionnary. Carefully opening the screen door, she crept softly up stairs. She had remembered that she was in disgrace in season to avoid making any unnecessary noise; and she tip-toed across the floor of her room, grabbed Rosamond by an arm, and sped lightly down the stairs again.

With her doll in her arms, and the door in sight, she grew more courageous. She had escaped thus far undetected, and after a short visit with her friend Flossy, she was going back to the thumping rocking-chair and her own thoughts again.

But doors have a way of talking, sometimes, even when carefully closed; and as Karleen pushed the last one slowly open, it gave such a prolonged wail, that her heart began to thump furiously. Her mother must be somewhere about the house, and if within hearing distance, surely that sound like a crazy fiddle would summon her to the spot—or so Karleen thought; but she was in for it now, and without a look backward, the little girl clasped her doll tightly to her wildly-beating heart, and raced toward the beach.

When about half way, she suddenly stopped short and turned around. Wasn't this what her teacher ralled "deceiving?" Perhaps the door had squeaked to warn her that she was doing wrong. What if her mother should go to the guest-chamber before she got back, and find that tne little girl she had always trusted had played false!

"I guess we won't go to the beach today, after all, Rosamond," she murmered. "We'll go right back and sit in the rocking-chair in the guest-chamber, with her own 'thoughts for comp'ny.'"

Half an hour later, Karleen's mother found her sitting in the chair where she had left her, with her doll clasped in her arms. The chair was motionless, and so was its little occupant. Wearied with her hurried steps to and from the beach, Karleen had fallen asleep in the cool, quiet room.

"Did you hear it, mamma?" the little girl exclaimed with a start, as her mother touched her arm.

"Hear what, dear?" asked her mother.

"The door! It squeaked. And wasn't it funny, mamma, it seemed to say, just as plain, 'Go back!' when I started down to the beach to play with Flossy."

After Karleen's mother had heard the whole of her confession, she answered gently: "The door was not speaking, it was your own conscience, daughter, and you were wise to heed it. The door simply reminded you that you were doing wrong."

"I guess the beach wouldn't have been a good place to med'tate, after all," she confided to Rosamond, as together they lay in bed that night. "I guess the thumping rocking-chair was where mamma meant me to stay, and I'm glad I went back to it."
—Helen M. Richardson, inZion's Herald.

OBITUARY.

James Myers was born Sept. 14 1824, and died May. 4, 1912. May the 5th a large gathering of friends met at his home church, Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit, to look upon his mortal face for the last time, and to commit his body to its long resting place.

Bro. Myer's life was one of toil. He was a soldier in the Civil War. After the war he came home from prison at Point Look Out, looking nearly dead, and went to work supporting his large family.

He professed religion and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Elbaville in 1877. Perhaps, Elbaville never had a member who lived a purer, sweeter Christian life. He suffered for years with a cancer, but I believe it was said, "He never complained." As long as he could go, till a few days of his death, he would be nearly every third Sunday sitting on the church steps waiting for his pastor. He an old man of eighty-seven, was a regular attendant of the Sunday school. He had his place in one of the classes. He never got too old to study his Bible. Truly, "He being dead, yet speaketh." So punctual was he to attend church that one young lady sitting in the choir, while his body lay in its coffin in front of the chancel, looked over into the amen corner to see if Uncle Jimmie was in his accustomed place. Five yeas ago last fall when he gave up his devoted Christian wife, he said that it would not be long till he would go to her. He often spoke of wanting to go. For days at the last he could not talk to be understood.

He leaves eight children. But with what bright hope do they think of their father!

George P. Stubbns was born in Orange county N. C. Nov. 14, 1846, and departed this life April 22, 1912 at his home in Durham, N. C. He was married to Miss Margarett A. Williams Dec. 25, 1875. To them were born nine children, seven of whom with their mother are living.

George Stubbins never sowed any wild oats but was religiously inclined from childhood and while he was a very small boy he gave his heart to God and experienced saving grace and from that day he lived a Christian life and was active in his church; but his religious activities were not confined to the church on Sundays: he was a Christian at home and found great delight in gathering together his family around the fire-side and reading God's word and praying with his family. It was one of the greatest desires of his heart to bring up his children in the fear of God. I believe his last years on earth were his happiest, notwithstanding he was in feeble health and at times a great sufferer; for he rejoiced to know that all his children were in the church and one of his sons, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, was a minister of the Gospel of Christ.

It was my good fortune to know intimately the subject of this sketch and I have never known anything in his life that would cause me to doubt his Christian character. Now that he is gone from us and we shall see his face no more on earth, may the memory of his life abide with us to inspire and encourage us in our Christian warfare and if we are faithful I confidently believe we shall meet our friend and brother, husband and father, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more; for he was a true friend to all, a faithful husband and a kind father and an humble follower of the meek and lowly Christ.

From One Who Loved Him.

THE SUMMER THIRST.

We are constantly being told by those who are presumed to know, that altogether too many fluids other than pure water are used during the hot season. Some authorities even go so far as to claim that all such beverages as lemonade, plain soda, tea, coffee, and other fluids are drug drinks, and not only serve to create an abnormal thirst, but produce various gastro-intestinal disorders. Digestive disturbances are very prevalent during the summer season, and it is a question gravely discussed as to how much these ailments may be due to the soda fountain habit, when we consider the nature of the stuff dispensed therefrom. A great deal of the ice cream sold at stands and in cheap restaurants is made of untested and stale milk, the flavoring more or less impure, or made of harmful ingredients already well on the way to decomposition. Although such disturbances often pass away quickly, in many cases they lead to chronic intestinal diseases and persistent disorders of digestion, which are very hard to overcome. It is said that Americans consume greater quantities of unwholesome stuffs than any other people, and are largely a nation of invalids. The stuffs sold on the streets and corners at a cent a glass are very attractive to little children, who hasten, whenever they get a penny, to drain as many glasses of the liquid as their means will command.

—Lightning started a fire which destroyed property worth $460,000 in the storage sheds of the Atlantic Coast line at Savannah Ga.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL MUSIC.

There is an opportunity for definite work for one or two of the Sunday school classes in the music of the Sunday school. It is well not to forget the power of song. There is no feature of the service that affects the life of the school so much as the music. Lively, spiritual hymns put everybody in the right attitude of mind and heart to enjoy the lesson discussion.

There is abundant room for variety in the musical program. A part of every Sunday's service should be special music by one of the classes. It adds interest to announce that next Sunday morning the male chorus of the Baraca class will furnish the music, or that the children of the primary grades will sing a song just before class recitation.

Some schools make one class responsible for the music and in this way give life to the class and to the musical program. It is better to have different books for the Sunday school from those used in the church services. By all means have a Sunday school organist.

Good music is a member-getter, a member-holder and often more. Remember the aged man who said, "I pray best when the organ rolls," and the little girl who replied when asked why she shut her eyes during the hymn, "Oh, that's because I pray best when I sing."

What is more inspiring than a class of children's voices chirping and thrilling the words of some sweet children's song, or the full, manly roll of a male chorus of several voices? Such a variety will add wonderfully to the school, will advertise your school and make the service much sweeter and more inspiring.

SOMETHING DEFINITE

Classes seeking something definite to do may find something in the way of suggestion in the work done by the men of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago. A committee of active business men, twenty in number, meets once a week down town for luncheon. At this luncheon the names of men needing friendly attention are reported and care is taken to secure the names and addresses of those who are strangers in the city, and a sharp lookout is kept for young men who are friendless. Each member of the committee stands ready to make at least six calls a week. At the weekly luncheon, reports of these calls are made. This good and quiet work has been going forward for a year, with the result that the attendence of men at the regular services of the church and brotherhood class has been much increased and a friendly feeling toward the church has been established. More men have become members of the church than in previous year. Referring to the plan one writer says:

"The one essential feature of this plan is definiteness; definite men do the work; definite calls assigned; definite reports expected and received."

The success of the A. B. C. Movement is due to a large extent to giving men something definite and worth while to do.

IN A CONNECTICUT SCHOOLHOUSE.

Twenty years ago a Christian Endeavor Society was organized in a country schoolhouse three miles from Simsbury, Conn.

It now has about fifteen members composed of Baptist and Methodist young people. The average attendance at the Sunday-evening Endeavor meetings is between thirty and forty young people who come from three to five miles to attend.

In these twenty years this society has given $995 to missions. They support a native worker in India, and are always alert to their opportunities for practical Christian service in their own neighborhood.

Some time ago they learned of a crippled boy in a Catholic home whose only hope of cure lay in getting to a hospital for treatment, but his parents could not afford to send him. This society provided the funds, sent the boy to the hospital where he received the required attention, and today he has the use of his limbs.—Karl Lehman.

THINGS YOU MIGHT DO.

Hold a cleaning bee in the church.

Support a reading-room, open every day.

Save the church the expense of a janitor by doing his work yourselves.

Station the young men of the society on the sidewalk to invite strangers into the church.

Place in the post-office, depot, and business houses helpful texts of Scripture.

Assist the Sunday-school superintendent in conducting the concerts.

Conduct Sunday services in almshouse, hospital, old ladies' home, the jail, or city mission.

Make a house-to-house canvass of the entire city, to gain recruits for the church and Sunday school.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, MAY 26, 1912.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Missionary Progress in Asia."

Acts 13:1-3; 14:19-27.

It would be well in the discussion of this lesson to assign to a number of members a certain country each of Asia, and let that one tell in his way what has been done, is being done, and what is planned for that country. Have a large map of Asia on the wall and as each country is taken, point it out, name its principal cities, tell the race to which it belongs and something of the customs and institutions of the people.

Asia is now the center of interest interest in world progress. Great revolutions and changes are taking place in the countries that comprise this continent. Intelligent men of all lands are looking on with wonder and admiration. Western civilization is fast taking hold upon the people. If we do not convert them to our religion, they may prove a menace to our safety and happiness. It is our duty to do it; if we fail, we shall reap the harvest we have sown—by introducing the evils and fashions of our civilization without the balance wheel of our religion.

China.

History is making in China faster than in any other part of the world, and largely on account of the missionaries and the new light they have brought. The Chinese are introducing railroads, the telegraph, the telephone, modern post-offices, modern education, newspapers, hospitals, education for women, European dress, improved currency, and many other phases of civilization. They are rapidly developing a parliamentary system based on popular government.

China has about 4,600 evangelical missionaries. Campbell White says that this number should be doubled within the next three or four years, but even then what are they in a population counted by hundreds of millions?

Besides the Bible, the missionary takes with him his Western conscience. "On what ground," a recent traveller in China asked a woman missionary, "do you forbid foot-binding as 'unchristian'?" "On the ground that it does violence to the body God gave us," was the reply. This is the modern conception of the body, and the true conception. But what would the faster, the monk, the flagellant of the Middle Ages say to that? Progress on the mission field, then, means Western civilization.

Japan.

While the Japanese people are rejoicing in their victories and the glory gained on the battle-field, they should be shown that earthly glory vanishes, but that they that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

"In taking the Gospel to Japan, we must confront eastern philosophy and racial pride with love. We may not conquer this warlike people for our King

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

SEEDS

Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please

Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION

1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato	20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish	10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery	20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage	15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce	10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds	25c
	$1.00

Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1895 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

by showing the superiority of our material civilization. What the Japanese need is the life of Christ Jesus, as they see it manifested in the lives of his followers."

"Japan is said to be one of the most beautiful of countries in its physical features, but until the Gospel was taken to its people, it missed the chief glory that can come to any land, and its supreme need at the present time is that the light of the life of Christ shall shine in the hearts of its people."

"The assimilation of Korea to Japan, with which it has been united, is progressing rapidly. Korea continues to be one of the centres of genuine evangelical Christianity. The revival spirit is everywhere and constantly among the native churches, whose members seem always eager to speak for Christ and give for Him not only their money, but their time and strength."

India.

"Two-thirds of the people of India profess the Hindu religion. More than half of the remaining third are Mohammedans. There is one Christian to about three hundred of population and half of the Christians are Catholics.

"There is much suspicion of Christ in India. The natives have long regarded their own gods as remorseless tyrants, and they hesitate to admit another Deity to their temples. May they soon learn that Jesus is not a despoiler, but a shepherd, a lover, A Savior."

"We are justified in ascribing one of the 'wise men' from the east, who heralded Jesus in Jerusalem, to the astrological schools of India. God grant that the light of the Star of Bethany, yes, of the Sun of righteousness, may now illume the minds and hearts of all dwelling amid the rules of that ancient seer's native land."

"The Indian mind is susceptible of the highest cultivation. The poetry, oratory, literature and art of India compel universal admiration. Her people are worth saving. When they are redeemed from the intellectual blight and moral debasement of heathenism no other people will do more for the extension and glory of the kingdom than these pathetic millions of sad and lost India."

Other Countries.

Dr. White, of Marsovan, Turkey, mentions several facts that show the change that has come over the people. In two days' stay at Constantinople he never saw a dog, and the streets were cleaner than ever. He met a Turk walking by the side of his wife (the old way is for the man to march in front). The official that did him a favor refused a tip, saying, "The government pays my salary."

Until very recently Tibet has been closed to the gospel. Not long ago one of the China Inland Mission's workers made a journey through interior Tibet, almost unknown territory. He travelled 12,000 miles, riding 381 horses on his route. He carried with him a supply of Tibetan gospels. He was usually, though not always, received in a friendly way in the Lama monasteries. A new door opened: surely this is progress.

The great Korean movement with its watchword, "A Million Souls for Christ," has been followed by another and a greater. Its motto is, "Not only a million souls for Jesus, but the whole land for Jesus." Eighteen months ago several hundred workers opened this campaign. They divided into 350 teams, two in each team, and began to visit from house to house, enrolling seekers. In three weeks 10,000 were enrolled.

Burma is witnessing a revival of Buddhism which is adopting many of the methods of Christianity, such as Young Men's Buddhist Associations; but notwithstanding this, the Spirit of God is winning many victories, especially among the lower tribes that have not come so closely into contact with "civilization."

The missionaries have gained a ready hearing in Siam, especially through their boarding-schools for boys and girls and their medical missions. The Laos mission in the north has been particularly blessed of God.

The new regime in Persia, the adoption of at least the beginning of constitutional government, has opened many doors to our missionaries, and educational and evangelistic missions have now some access even to the Moslems.

Progress in Turkey is seen in the fact that the Bible is as freely published in Constantinople as it is in London or Edinburgh, and there is no official obstacle to its circulation. The government is trying honestly to give religious freedom to all faiths.

For Daily Reading.

M.—Christ's review: Ephesus, Rev. 2: 1-7.
Tues.—Smyrna, Rev. 2: 8-11.
Wed.—Thyatira, Rev. 2:18-29.
Thurs.—Sardis, Rev. 3:1-6.
Fri.—Philadelphia, Rev. 3:7-13.
Sat.—Laodicea, Rev. 3:14-22.
Sunday, May 26—Topic.

—Do you want a boy? A manly little boy of ten, just out of school, came into my office one day this week, looking for something to do during his vacation. We can recommend him to any needing the help of a boy of his age. He lives in Greensboro.

—The Myrtle Hawkins case is up again. More evidence has been found.

—In a wreck at Connelly Springs, Engineer Finley Smith, of Asheville, and a negro girl were killed. George Buckner, baggage master, had his left arm broken. Several others were hurt more or less seriously.

—An express train robbery of a large amount is reported from Mississippi, Queen and Crescent train.

The Odell Hardware Company are remodeling the front of their large double store building.

BLANCHED LETTUCE.

When lettuce first begins to grow, it is tender and crisp, but as it gets larger, it toughens. When first large enough to use, thin to one plant in every foot, using the thinning as needed for the table. The lettuce will spread, and as soon as about as large as it will get, draw the leaves together in dry weather, and tie a string around them so as to shut out light from the heart of the plant. After a week from tying up, the plants may be used, and they will be better and more tender than can be grown any other way. Try it.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus [illegible]00 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE, ELON COLLEGE.

A two months Teachers' Normal Course opening April 9th, and closing June 5th, 1912, open to all teachers of the state who wish to avail themselves of instruction amid surroundings conducive to the fullest intellectual growth. The Course is endorsed by State Superintendent Joyner and a number of the county superintendents. Teachers wishing to prepare for better work, to broaden their scholarship, to prepare for better positions, and to render better service to their schools will do well to attend. Courses are offered in all public and high school branches as well as in college subjects.

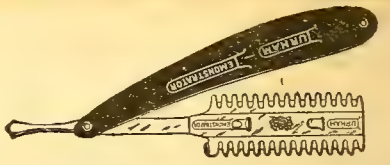
Tuition free to all teachers who attend. All other expenses low. The College Bulletin giving full particulars concerning the courses offered, the expenses, etc., will be sent on application to

W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director Teachers' Nor. Course,
ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

HAMMER'S QUALITY White and Brown Leghorns and Pure White Orpingtons will give you satisfaction if you want the best chickens. He guarantees every shipment he makes. Waveland Farm, Asheboro, N. C.

S. S. C. BUFF ORPINGTON EGGS

Won first, second and third prizes at Randolph Fair.
Now $1.50 per 15 Delivered.
T. H. MATTHEWS, Randleman, N. C.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th, or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.
Greensboro, N. C.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

able to see perfectly. Whether he sees the world from the rabbit point of view is not stated.—Pathfinder.

AN EXPERIMENT.

They were talking of the spiritual life, and James, who is a collegian, said: "I am a believer, but not a Christian; and I begin to fear that I never shall be one. I attend the church and prayermeeting regularly, as I was brought up to do; but as for conviction or conversion or any spiritual light, I have had no experience."

"Do you desire to be a Christian, James?" asked his Aunt Hannah.

"I do not object. Indeed, until quite recently I have been receptive and expected my heart to be touched. Lately I am beginning to suspect that with every one it is a matter of imagination."

"Doubtless you are very methodical in the use of time," said Aunt Hannah with seeming irrelevance.

"From necessity, for I can learn only by close application."

"Can you not find half an hour in the morning for Bible reading, meditation, and prayer?"

"O, yes, I could manage it."

"Very well, then. Be as honest in your use of this half hour as in that of any other throughout the day. Begin with the Gospel of Matthew, meditate upon it honestly, pray reverently. Do not think about your feelings; just make that one of your faithfully followed pursuits."

"For how long?"

"As long as you live."

The young man made a wry face.

"Is the prospect so unpleasant? Try it for a month, then we shall talk it over again. Meantime do not make a confidant of any one."

Aunt Hannah did not fail to note that James was a trifle more quiet and thoughtful than usual. He attended all the church services, and, she fancied, joined in the singing with unusual fervor. One evening he seemed to surprise himself by repeating: "Knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

A few evenings later he joined the prayer circle, always sat nearest the leader, and, kneeling with the others, prayed simply and fervently that he might be led aright.

A few evening later in the testimony meeting James arose and said: "I have been trying an experiment for some time now. Every morning I have given my first half hour to devotion. For a few days I simply gained some knowledge of the Bible and committed a few texts to memory; but soon, when I knelt to pray, I found my heart moved by a strange joy, and as this increased morning by morning I could but cry out, 'It is of the Lord! It is of the power of the Holy Spirit!' and now my whole being is so pervaded by it that I can no longer keep it to myself. From having no objection to being numbered among the Lord's followers, it is now the greatest desire of my heart."

"It was an experiment," said Aunt Hannah; "and the result is but another proof that reverent, fervent prayer is always heard, and that he who prays is abundantly blessed by a real experience of spiritual life and strengthened faith."—Selected.

THE FRUIT OF FIDELITY.

A Bible Society agent in Korea tells the story of a young man named Chun, the first in his village to accept the "Jesus Doctrine," and whose faithful testimony was blessed to his father, who died in the faith of Christ. Thereupon the storm burst upon the young man, because he refused to allow his parent to be buried according to heathen rites. "With the help of the colporteur and some Christians from another place, he carried his aged father's body away for reverent Christian burial. 'My father,' he said, 'shall not be buried as if he were dead forever, but as one who believed in everlasting life.' His relatives now turned him out of the village, and he suffered the loss of home, fields, and livelihood. Still he remained faithful to Christ. Finally, the time came when, by his loving influence, he won sixty of his relatives to join the Christian Church. A year ago he experienced the joy of seeing the last home in his village turn Christian."

TESTED AND TRIED.

A blacksmith, some eight years after he had given his heart to God, was approached by an intelligent unbeliever with the question:

"Why is it you have so much trouble? I have been watching you. Since you joined the church and began to 'walk square,' and seem to love everybody, you have had twice as many trials and accidents as you had before. I thought that when a man gave himself to God, his troubles were over. Isn't that what the parsons tell us?"

With a thoughtful but glowing face the blacksmith replied:

"Do you see this piece of iron? It is for the springs of a carriage. I have been 'tempering' it for some time. To do this I heat it red hot and then plunge it in a tub of ice cold water. This I do many times. If I find it is taking 'temper,' I heat and hammer it unmercifully. In getting the right piece of iron I found several that were too brittle to take temper. They cracked the first blow I struck. So I threw them in the scrap pile. Those scraps are worth about a cent a pound. This carriage spring is very valuable.

"God saves us for something more than to have a good time. He wants us for service, just as I want this piece of iron. And He has to put the 'temper' of Christ in us by testing us with trials. Ever since I saw this truth I have been saying to Him: 'Test me in anyway You choose, Lord, only don't throw me in the scrap pile.'"—Sel.

POINTS.

It is the ceaseless chopping that wears away a stone.

The man who loses heart after one failure is foolish to make a beginning.

The soldier who begins battle in doubt is half beaten in advance.

The statement of Gen. Grant, "I will fight it out if it takes all summer," does not indicate the man of genius, but it does show the man of indomitable perseverance, a perseverance to which he owed all his success.

The road of human welfare lies along the old highway of steadfast well-doing.

A glance at the biographies of great men will prove that the most distinguished artists, inventors, thinkers and workers of all kinds, owe their success in a great measure, to their indefatigable industry and application.

DeMaistre says: "To know how to wait is the great secret of success."

Unceasing effort is the price of success. "Faithful unto death" is our watchword.

There never was a man who could do anything great with divided energies.

Genius is the concentration of every energy into one great master passion.

Stick to your business, and your business will stick to you.—Dr. Wm. Matthews.

The plodder may be laughed at and the brilliant man who accomplishes great things at a leap admired; but we all remember the fable of the tortoise and the hare; the latter, confident of her powers, stopped to rest; the former, aware of his limitations, persevered and toiled laboriously on—and he won the race.

We would not under-estimate genius, but one of its strongest characteristics is perseverance.

A world without a Sabbath would be like a man without a smile, like a summer without flowers.—Beecher.

WHAT CAN THE MISSIONARY COMMITTEE DO?

By J. Campbell White, General Secretary, Laymen's Missionary Movement.

One of the greatest needs in the church life of our day is the development and wise use of volunteer workers. If the 200,000 churches of North America are to be enlisted deeply and permanently in missionary activity, a very large force of such workers will be required.

Thus far one of the finest opportunities that has appeared for splendid volunteer service is as members of missionary committees. There are three kinds of these committees, which are need to work co-operatively, in order to reach out to the last church and the last member of each church. These three kinds of committees are:

1. The Missionary Committee in each local church;

2. The denominational Missionary Committee of each district composing a group of churches, whether that district is known as Presbytery, Classis, Association, District or Diocese.

3. The City or County Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

At the present moment there must be at least a quarter of a million men who are members of one or other of these three kinds of Committees. There is work enough to keep a whole million men busy, if this work is to be done thoroughly among the churches of the United States and Canada. The following condensed outline of the duties of these Committees has been prepared with great care, in consultation with the leaders of many different denominations and is commended to church members generally for their thoughtful consideration.

The Missionary Committee in the Local Church.

1. "Take stock" at least annually and keep permanent records so that the growth of missionary interest and contributions can be measured from year to year. Statistical blanks may be obtained on application.

2. Study your church as a factor in the world-wide propagation of the gospel and plan to lead it out to its highest efficiency.

3. Adopt and carry through a comprehensive plan of missionary education for the entire church. This should include a. Regular missionary meetings conducted by members of the church (probably monthly).

b. The wide use of missionary pamphlets and books, and the taking of subscriptions for missionary magazines. Every missionary committee member should be a subscriber to Men and Missions as well as to the missionary magazine of his own church.

c. The organization of Mission Study Classes or Discussion Groups at some favorable period each year.

d. An intensive period of missionary instruction through all church organizations once each year, continuing for at least one month preceding the organized personal canvass for subscriptions to missions.

4. Adopt and carry through a comprehensive plan of missionary finance for the whole church. This will involve

a. The official adoption of the weekly missionary offering together with such public instruction upon its advantages as will lead the members generally to use this plan.

b. Supplementing the regular weekly offering to missions by special thank-offerings, preferably at the Christmas and Easter seasons.

c. The organization and conduct of an annual personal canvass of the entire congregation for a weekly subscription to missions, not resting satisfied until all of the members and many adherents have become systematic contributors.

d. Promoting in every possible way the adoption of higher standards of Christian stewardship. Bible Classes, literature, addresses, testimony and prayer will all have a place in such a plan.

e. Promoting among Churches and Christians generally, the practice of giving at least as much to missionary work at home and abroad as they give for the support of the local church.

f. Keeping the Church members from supposing that their "apportionment" is the measure of their duty. In many cases it is only a fraction of what should be given.

5. Stimulate prayer for missions and missionaries on the part of the whole membership. This may be done by a. Emphasis upon the place and importance of prayer as the most powerful method of work.

b. The circulation of helpful literature on this subject.

c. The circulation and use of prayer calendars.

d. Public prayer for missions in the church services, mid-week prayer-meetings, Sunday school, and all other church meetings.

e. The enlistment of people to pray habitually for some specific missionary.

6. Help to discover the recruits needed for missionary service, at home and abroad.

7. Promote habits of daily Bible study and prayer on the part of all Christians, that there may be the spiritual health and vigor essential for world-wide Christian conquest.

8. Stimulate personal evangelism, as an essential part of Christ's world-program.

9. Hold meetings of the Committee regularly once each month to plan and pray for the largest measure of efficiency. At the beginning of each year a written policy for the coming year, embodying as many of the above lines of work as practicable, should be carefully worked out and adopted by the Committee.

The Denominational Missionary Committee of the District.

(Whether known as District, Presbytery, Classis, Association or Diocese).

1. Hold regular meetings of the Committee to keep in touch with what is being done and plan and pray for larger success.

2. Get a missionary committee appointed in every church, and keep a correct list of their names and addresses.

3. Lead these Committees to adopt such a program of work as is outlined above, and co-operate with them heartily in carrying it out.

4. Hold occasional conferences of the members of the Missionary Committees of the churches of the district, to share experiences and plan for larger things.

5. Subdivide the churches of the district among the members of the District Committee for continuous cultivation and frequent report.

6. Assist each church in the district, that desires it, in holding some special meetings for the benefit of its own members. A late afternoon and an evening session, taking supper together, give opportunity for a most profitable discussion.

7. Keep accurate, permanent statistical records of all the churches in the district, showing the progress from year to year, in their missionary efforts and contributions. Secure report blanks from the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

8. Seek to get every missionary committee member in your district to become a regular subscriber to Men and Missions, as well as to his own denominational missionary magazine. No committee member can attain his highest efficiency without this invaluable assistance.

9. Keep in close touch with the missionary work in other denominations that you may both give and receive as much help as possible. This can be best accomplished through the city or county committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The City Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

A similar outline of the work of this Committee has been printed and will be sent free to anyone on application to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 1 Madison Avenue, New York.

It is believed that either one of these three Committees furnishes an inspiring opportunity for fruitful service to any man eager for a life that will count heavily in the universal propagation of Christianity.

THE PLUNDERING OF PEKING.

By Rev. C. S. Heininger.

Oftentimes I had read in the Proverbs that we know not what a day may bring forth, and many times have had interesting comments on that text, but never have I had such a strking comment on it as my experiences in Peking on February 29 gave me. The background for the rioting which broke upon the city that Thursday night could not have been more quiet and peaceful. Effects are heightened by contrast and certainly the meeting of Yuan Shih Kai's soldiers could not have been timed any better to bring into sharp contrast the bliss of peace and the horrors of war.

In Peking, perhaps more than in other cities, the days of the revolution had been anxious days. As the capital of China, it was a marked place, should the revolutionists succeed in bringing an army to the north or of stirring up the north. Then when it became evident that the emperor must abdicate, Peking with its large Manchu population had been in terror. Certainly there would be fighting then, but all of these dangers had been weathered and now Peking was enjoying a relaxation from the strain. The events of the few days immediately preceding had made the contrast all the more striking. On Monday the missions of the city had held a great meeting at which some two or three thousand were present. This meeting was held as a service of thanksgiving for peace and was entirely in the hands of the Chinese. The great event was the reading of the message from Yuan Shih Kai, the new president of the republic, by his personal representative, Mr. W. W. Yen. This message, in which he spoke of the good work of the missionaries in China, and assured the Christians of religious liberty, was one of the epoch-making documents in the history of the Christian church in China.

Tuesday had seen the reception of the delegates of the southern republic. For them the city had been decked in the new five-colored flag. The Cieu men (or Front Gate) had been opened for their reception. This gate, heretofore, had been opened for the reception of the people's that the people, the true royaltyTAOIN representatives and was left open so that the people, the true royalty in a republic, could walk back and forth through its almost sacred portals. Everywhere there were evidences of the change in China. In the bookstores buttons with the flag of the republic were for sale and pictures of Sun Yat Sen and Li Yuan Hung were for sale along with the pictures of Yuan Shih Kai. These almost made one think China could become modern enough for all the thrills of an American presidential campaign. Certainly Peking had been lulled into slumber. Underneath many wondered if the end could come so soon and many expected further trouble, but no one, it seemed, expected Peking to be terrorized when it was and in the way it was.

I had gone to Peking on Feb. 28 on an errand of peace. One of the principal contributors to our Kalgan Red Cross fund had retired from official life and was at his home in Peking. I had gone to report to him and consult him about the disposition of the balance of the society's funds. The change in the city from my last visit was so marked that I could not but wonder at it and naturally I caught the contagion of hope for new China. But on the evening of February 29 our hopes received a little shattering, but our faith was still unshaken.

That evening, about half past eight, I was enjoying the hospitality of Mr. Wilder, of the American Board Mission, at the compound of the Union Theological Seminary in the north part of the city. This mission compound is nearest to the Kalgan railway station. This fact on the morrow proved to me to be a fortunate circumstance. Suddenly we were interrupted by a student who said there was a firing by the soldiers at one of the city gates about three miles away. When we went out we could hear the shooting and saw the flames of a big fire. The telephone failed to give us any information as the operators fled from the central office near the scene of the trouble. Soon the sounds of rioting came nearer to us and the sky was lit up with the light of several fires, including one very near to the compound. Then we sent up the rockets which had been given the missionaries by the American legation to use for a distress signal, and others went to get out the guns and ammunition. But the signals brought no relief, so the seven guns and three revolvers were handed out among the five foreign missionaries and the Chinese of the place. There was much shooting in the city, but it was to intimidate the people and the casualities were comparatively few. At one time, about five hundred soldiers rushed in front of the compound and two shots were fired into the place. An officer was heard to tell them not to touch the foreigners. Several other shots were fired very close and went into or over the compound, and for once I had the opportunity of hearing the singing of hostile bullets. From the church tower we could see the city lit by the light of a score of fires. One did not need any point of vantage to hear the rush of the looting soldiers as they broke into the shops. The people soon deserted the streets, anl, save for the looters and fleeing soldiers, the city was quiet. About 11o'clock it became evident that we would need to watch all night. So two of us foreigners were left in charge until 3 o'clock, while the others went home, but not to sleep. Every few minutes there would be some shots quite close and they would be out to inquire about that volley. The women and children gathered in one house where we were to make our stand, should the unruly mob of looting soldiers break into the place. Fortunately our fears were not realized. About midnight the telephone service was resumed and the American legation gave us the first news of the condition of the city. The trouble, we then learned, was started by the men of the third division of the Chinese army. The men whom Yuan Shih Kai had brought to Peking to protect the city from a Manchu uprising had turned traitors and were looting the place. We declined the legation's offer for an escort of soldiers to take us into the legation quarters, for it seemed safer not to venture on the streets, and as the uprising had shown no anti-foreign spirit, it was thought our safety lay in remaining quiet. At three the next morning I was relieved from "picket duty." That only gave me more time to wonder what the outcome would be. All seemed that night to think I could not return to Kalgan, but, of course, with my wife and baby there that was the thing I wanted most to do. I knew they were not alone, as a friend and his wife were visiting there, but how wide the trouble would be and when it would end I did not know. Then we thought of the people at home. We knew the cables were flashing the news that would make many hearts anxious again. But in it all the Lord gave us peace of heart and mind.

As soon as the light began to appear in the east there was no need to keep up the pretense of sleeping. We took a view of the city from the church tower as it was waking from its sleep of terror. Soon a detachment of British cavalry came to

Continued on page 12.

From Pastors and People.

Mt. Hermon.

Our pastor, Bro. Lowdermilk, was present at Mt. Hermon May 19th, with vital messages for every one. The morning discourse was on "Church Government," and was presented so clearly and emphatically, that all who heard could easily comprehend each statement. At the beginning of the afternoon service several children were baptized. The afternoon sermon was one of Bro. Lowdermilk's best efforts. The text, Prov. 23:23, "Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding," was well treated. Our pastor is an intense worker.

The S. S. at Mt. Hermon was re-organized on the installment plan. The officers at the present time, I believe, are as follows: Mr. Charlie M. Neese, Supt.; Miss Addie Nicholson, Sec.

The S. S. has grown rapidly since spring opened, but there are still quite a number of people in the community who should be interviewed by the lookout committee.

Kindly permit me to make a suggestion. There are a great many people belonging to the Methodist Protestant Church who have a very limited knowledge of the nature and extent of M. P. fundamentals. Would not these people be more efficient Methodist Protestants if they were better acquainted with the contents of the M. P. discipline? Somebody has been guilty of negligence along this line. There are people who would buy the discipline if they had an opportunity of doing so. Every Methodist Protestant should own a copy of the church discipline. Are pastors too busy to investigate? What do Class leaders do these days?

S. A. Sharpe, Reporter.

May 21st, 1912.

Fairview Church.

An excellent sermon was rendered Sunday by our pastor, which was much enjoyed by quite a number of people. Much good we think is being done by our faithful pastor and people and may greater success and blessings be ours is the writer's prayer.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the supervision of our Superintendent, Mr. Calvin Garmon, and Vice Superintendent, Mr. John Kiser.

Mrs. Jno. Garman, one of our devoted members, has not been with us in several weeks, due to sickness. May we soon be able to welcome her in our midst again. Her life seems to be one of entire unselfishness for her Master and people.

One of our aged neighbors, Mrs. Gurley, has been called from us by Him who doeth all things well. Our sympathy and prayers are extended to the bereaved family and friends.

Rev. A. O. Lindley and wife are visiting friends and relatives in their home community. Reporter.

Alamance Ct.

Bethel.—As our last report failed to appear in the Herald; we will report a part of it again, so all the members of Bethel Church may know what our missionary society at Bethel is doing. Thankoffering service was held in March. Program consisted of an excellent sermon on missions by our pastor, Rev. W. M. Pike, from the text, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Our position and that of the heathen was described, also our duty to them and how we may fulfill God's command by sending them the gospel of Jesus which was in time past sent to our fore parents.

Collection from those outside our society was $4.00 and from our members $4.25; total amount, $8.45.

Money sent to Br. Treas.	$35.34
Contingent fund	2.80
Calendar money, sent Mrs. Dixon	4.80
Money collected by Miss Forrest	17.87
Total for foreign missions	60.81
Home Missions	17.75
Total Home and Foreign	78.56

This closes the finances of the year up till May. Having changed our annual meeting from March till May as we think we will have a larger attendance in the pleasant May weather. We began our year's work by a Missionary Rally held at Bethel the 3rd Sunday in May. There was an address by our president on Missionary Movements of the last three Decades; and of delegate to the State branch meeting, by Miss Lizabel Foust, who was sent as delegate to the Branch meeting. Sermon by Rev. R. S. Troxler, from the text: "There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over unto Macedonia and help us." Beautifully illustrating the call for help, our duty to comply and God's power given us to witness for Him unto the utmost parts of the earth. The collection amounted to $8.00. For future work of our society we look forward with hope, and trust God's promise to be with us always, even to the end.

Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. R. S. Thompson, the fourth Sunday evening in June at 2:30 o'clock.

Palestine, Flat Rock Ct.

Our pastor was absent Sunday attending General Conference and we missed him very much.

Bro. John Dwiggins filled his appointment and delivered an interesting message; his text being John 3:16. We enjoyed having Bro. Dwiggins with us and will welcome him back again.

There was a large congregation to listen to him. We expect our pastor to be with us the third Sunday in June at 11 o'clock. Augusta Tucker.

Welch Memorial.

We were busy last week getting our church cleaned up ready for our special meeting, which commenced last Sunday. We want to thank the North Side fire company for coming down and using the the hose in washing out the church for us, preparatory to putting down the new carpet, which was placed Saturday. By the assistance of some of the men in varnishing the pulpit furniture and some of the ladies in furnishing flowers and potted plants our church was indeed beautiful Sunday. The recess of the pulpit was also covered and the valleys of the main roof painted. We are sorry to say that while all this was being done, our pastor, D. R. Williams, had the misfortune of sticking a ten-penny nail through his foot, but regardless of his being crippled and having to use crutches he preached for us Sunday at eleven, A. M. Bro. J. H. Moton conducted the evening service and will continue to do the preaching for us during the week. The Oak Hill singing class met with our singing class Sunday evening and spent the evening in singing. We had a full house and I am sure they all enjoyed it finely.

Our Sunday school is doing well. We had 106 last Sunday. Rev. F. W. Easter is our sperintendent and we feel that he is a great help to our S. S.

Mrs. D. H. Hiatt.

High Point, N. C., May 21, 1912.

Albemarle.

Our second quarterly Conference was held on Saturday last at Mt. Elma church. Very few official members were present. The pastor reported the various amounts received on salary as follows: Creswell, $26.00; Woodley's Chapel, $7.35; Rehoboth, $11.61; Edenton, $2.50; Mt. Elma, 30 cents; Mt. Hermon, 25 cents; making a total for the half-year of $72.69. Our stewards were requested to make a special effort during the next quarter, to bring the salary up to date and also in behalf of the General Interests of the church of which we have not yet received one cent. Bro. W. Wiley and C. S. Tarkington were nominated delegates to the next Annual Conference. We sincerely request the prayers of the brethren in behalf of this charge.

A. J. Hyans, Pastor

ORPHANS' HOME.

We at the Home have been very busy of late and perhaps have not reported quite as often as some thought we should. We beg pardon and shall try to be more prompt in the future. School is out and commencement is over and we are being entertained in our playgrounds with a little whooping cough for a change.

Linville and Gaynelle Hepler, Kernersville Church, recently sent a box to the Home which contained some dresses for the children, thread, and 43 yards of cloth. We were made glad twice. Glad to be remembered and glad to get the contents of the box.

Mr. G. O. Rightmyer of Littleton, N. C., sends check for $3.20 which is the tenth part of eight acres of cotton. Says he has planted more cotton and expects to follow the same plan this year. May God bless his efforts as He always does those who obey his commands and surely the giving of one tenth is in accordance with His teachings. We hope others will follow Mr. Rightmyer's example.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Giles Chapel S. S.	$2.15
Henderson S. S.	6.06
Tabernacle W. H. M. S.	9.65
G. O. Rightmyer	3.30
Asheville S. S.	2.00
Mebane Church	3.90
Rehoboth Church	3.10
Fair Grove S. S., Why Not Ct.	1.31
Star S. S.	3.00
Bess Chapel S. S.	2.10
Burlington Church	1.50
St. Paul & Brown Summit	5.00
Bethany S. S., Haw River Ct.	2.00
Denton H. M. S.	1.15
Miss Bessie Wagner	1.00
M. F. Furr, Friendship S. S.	1.00
Total	$48.62

DAVIDSON CT.

We held our second quarterly meeting the 11th of May 1912; the business was done in harmony; the churches were not all represented, it being a very busy time, the farmers planting corn. The nominees for delegates were Bro. J. T. Sexton and Bro. P. L. Walker.

The work is moving along very well. Pray for us. J. W. Hulin, Pastor.

Denton.

We held our second quarterly conference with Pleasant Grove Church on Saturday before the first Sunday in May. Denton and Pleasant Grove were represented. Saltmont was not represented. The usual business was transacted in a spirit of love. Finance is right much behind, but we trust they will come up in the near future. Bros. W. F. Walls and J. B. Glover were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference. The S. S. reports were right good. We are moving along slowly with our work. We are anxious to get into our new church at Denton. D. A. Braswell.

Pleasant Hill, Lincoln Ct.

We held memorial service at our church last Sunday.

Rev. L. H. Hatley delivered an elegant sermon.

There was a large crowd who came to decorate the graves in memory of their loved ones. We were glad to have Knob Creek Sunday school with us on that day, and welcome all to our church.

We must not forget our beautiful church which wears a new white coat. Rev. L. H. Hatley and Mr. W. M. Warlick applied the paint.

Best wishes to the Herald and its host of readers. Reporter.

UWHARRIE CT.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

Bro. Trogdon held his second Quarterly Meeting at Canaan the 18th. All churches but two were represented, though attendance was small. Business transacted in harmony. Bros. G. F. Cashatt and Philip Snider were nominated for delegates to the next Quarterly Meeting to be held at Mt. Pleasant. This is Bro. Trogdon's second time to be at his appointments since he was operated on. He was suffering very much and went home and will not be at his appointment to-day. We truly hope that he will get better and be able to take his work soon. We believe him to be a man who is doing his Master's will and pray that the Lord may bless him with health and strength that he may be able to go forth and do his work for God and be a blessing to humanity. But we fully believe if this earthly house of his were to dissolve that he has a home in heaven.

May God's richest blessings rest upon him and his family.

M. N. Morgan.

May, 19th 1912.

CHATHAM CT.

Rev. J. S. Bowman filled his regular appointment at Hickory Grove the third Sunday in May.

He preached an excellent sermon to a large and attentive congregation. His text was found in Romans 8th chapter and latter part of the 9th verse. A lesson that all of us need to think of often is found in this verse. Sunday school is still in progress.

We will begin to prepare for children's day in the near future.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Reporter.

May 22, 1912.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 12.

Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk three dollars. Previously reported, $95.00) dollars. Total to date, ($98.00) dollars. The time limit provided by the constitution is out, but the constitution provides for the renewal of the membership of those who pay after the expiration of the time limit. It will be no little favor to the Secretary if those who yet intend to send in dues will do so at once as another call is now to be laid.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 13.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the death of Rev. S. Simpson. Bro. Simpson was a member of the Brotherhood, and the books show that he met every call of the Brotherhood. The members of the Brotherhood are due three dollars each within sixty days of date of this notice.

J. A. Burgess, Secc.-Treas.

5-23-12.

JUST THE IRISH OF IT.

Pat and Mike were obliged to halt their heavily loaded cart to make way for a funeral. Gazing at the procession Pat suddenly remarked: "Mike, I wish I knew where I was goinng to die.. I'd give a thousand dollars to konw the place where I'm going to die."

"Well, Pat, what good would it do if yez knew?"

"Lots," said Pat. "Sure I'd niver go near thot place, at all, at all."

THE WINNER OF THE PRIZE.

Mary and Marie, strangely enough, were sisters and rivals. When the first, wee pink-fingered babe came to the Edwards' home, Grandma Thomas, who sat in her arm-chair from morning until night, distributing smiles and kind words to all who came her way, was the patron saint of the family. She never interfered, never suggested that her daughter-in-law take a new way for doing things, never complained. But on the occasion of naming the baby, when Ione and Ivy and Cecile were rejected as "not good enough for our precious pet," grandma looked up from the tiny white sock which she had begun to fashion for the baby feet and smiled; her face was transformed by a heavenly brightness.

"Call her Ma-ry," she breathed, then added in a tone most prophetic, "she shall be thrice blessed if she bears the name of the mother of our Lord."

Somehow the tone and the words affected the daughter and the babe was called Mary. When the second baby arrived and a few weeks later, a letter from Mr. Edwards' wealthy sister who had apparently forgotten all about them, the family read the last lines with great dismay.

"I hear that you have a new little girl in the family. Name her Marie and I will not only educate her but provide for her future life."

"The idea!" fumed Mrs. Edwards, "two children of the same name in one family! People will think that we are ignoramuses. Money or no money, we'll do nothing of the kind!"

"It would never do to offend Marie," objected Mr. Ewdards. "She probably intends leaving us all her money or she would not have interested herself in naming a baby when they are as plentiful as polliwogs among the connection. We do not want to stand in the children's light."

The last argument was a "squelcher" and consequently the second baby was christened Marie.

Never were two sisters more unlike. Mary shot up tall, slender and saintly, with gold hair, forget-me-not eyes and cream and roses complexion. Her disposition was as sweet and sunny as a day in June. Marie was petite, plump, with coal black hair and eyes which sparkled with fun. She was as quick tempered as her sister was sweet.

The Thomas family adored Mary because of her resemblance to them and supplied her finest bonnets and dresses which the country store afforded. The Edwards Aunt Cecile deluged Marie with finery from all parts of the globe. But there was one thing which the wealthy aunt's money could not buy.

Mary's sunny smiles and sweet ways made every one her willing slave. She had a talent for music, a splendid voice, a gift for poetry and a "leaning" toward literature. Marie could scrub, bake and cook, but she heartily despised these humble accomplishments. One day her opportunity came.

Mary returned from church early one March morning. She was talking excitedly to her father. "The young folks are going to give an exhibition in the Seminary before Easter in the old Tawasup House. They want us to help. They're going to offer a prize for the best cake. I thought you could win, your cakes are so elegant, will you try?"

"I don't know," snapped Mary indifferently, "use two cups sugar for a cent."

"The [illegible] to become one of the [illegible] Mary. "The boys will be delighted if you enter the race. They will be delighted if you enter the race. The [illegible] the way to a man's heart is through his stomach is pretty true. I know I'd rather have a decent meal than to hear a hundred [illegible] or to admire [illegible] pictures, poetry, etc. in art and win. Marie [illegible] help the heathen that's what the [illegible] is for – and win. Ralph [illegible]

Mary [illegible] dismissed. If there was one thing which she could do well, that was to [illegible] Resolutely she set to work. All [illegible] was surprised by [illegible] cake for supper, [illegible] cake for breakfast and [illegible] Saturday Mary [illegible] [illegible] and announced that she was [illegible] Marie [illegible] girls [illegible] sang, whipping cream and creaming butter. The pure white eggs rested [illegible] Whenever you could [illegible] the [illegible] and flying spoon were heard.

[illegible] Marie's choice was a [illegible] made from a very elaborate recipe. Mary [illegible] The competition very calmly. Marie set her lips and said, "I will win, oooo."

"[illegible] Mr. Hamilton, [illegible] in to [illegible] Mr. [illegible]" [illegible] was left to herself, however, Marie dreadfully watched her [illegible] at the stove, turned to [illegible] poured a pail of [illegible] dashed in coal [illegible] and set the pot on the kitchen table, while the woman went to the pump for water. Mary had mixed the batter for her cake, Marie noticed, in a pan exactly like that used. With [illegible] Marie [illegible] Mary [illegible] As the door closed behind the [illegible] Mary ran to answer the [illegible] A twist of the wrist changed the pans and when Dutch returned, Marie was carefully [illegible] the [illegible] and raisins. Blissfully [illegible] the [illegible] Mary [illegible] her face and was [illegible] surprised. At supper [illegible] two cakes stood [illegible]

"Mary [illegible] the excellent rooms cried out with admiration when they saw Mary's beautiful cake. It was as light as a feather spread [illegible] room, as a bride, ornamented [illegible] cones and flowers of icing and encircled by a band of white satin ribbon which was tied in a coquettish bow, it excited the admiration of every one who visited the place that day. Marie's was plain and brown and ugly.

"The proof of the pudding's in the eating," she snapped when one of the girls laughed at her, "when they taste my cakes they'll decide which one is most in short order."

All day, dainties of all sorts poured in. Gorgeous colored eggs, painted goose eggs, gold shells filled with candy sugar, salads garnished with boiled eggs, potato salad trimmed with a collar of eggs, Easter cards, candies and cakes galore testified minutely to the great culinary skill of the women of the congregation. By 8 o'clock that Saturday evening, everything had been sold and a great crowd had gathered to watch the awarding of the prize. Mary, who had been released from waiting on the table, still wore her coquettish apron, but was mingling with the young folks and having a splendid good time. Marie was uneasy and restless. Fully a half hour before time for the decision of the judges found her by the cake counter. At 7:20 she saw Ralph Henderson's black and gold auto drive up to the door. He bowed sniffingly to the young folks and hurried on to join the judges.

Trembling she watched them put first one cake and then another to one side until only the white and brown remained.

"If this is as good as it is pretty it ought to be a winner," laughed Ralph, [illegible] the [illegible] and toward him and sliding it carefully. "If it is [illegible]" Chuckling enviously he [illegible] for the water pitcher.

"I wonder what's the matter with him," laughed the chairman of the committee helping himself.

"It's [illegible] with [illegible] oil and dust with such," said Ralph returning, "pretty things are often deceiving."

"This one is as good as it is beautiful," laughed the chairman, who had hurriedly put the white cake back on the plate and took a piece of the fruit cake. "Try this and get the bad taste out of your mouth."

"Miss Marie," the young man suddenly caught sight of the piquant smiling face behind him, "you've the winner of the cake all right, but I can't say what might have happened if your sister's cake hadn't been soaked with coal oil. She won't care when it's all in the family I reckon."

Even though her heart was filled with gladness, Marie could not [illegible] a scornful hint at her sister. "I think it's about time I was winning something," she said smilingly adorably up into the young

[illegible]'s face. "Mary gets everything, every [illegible] she can play the piano and paint and [illegible] stories and recite. Poor homely Marie is fit for nothing but a [illegible]."

"[illegible] call that a poor a[illegible]" declared the young man [illegible] congratulations of the [illegible] back parlor beside the com[illegible] and threatened off the cakes [illegible] pie a goodly sum. Poor [illegible] listening with mortification crept [illegible] Ralph Henderson and Marie [illegible]. He paused for a moment [illegible] parlor after bringing the girl home.

[illegible] flowers which [illegible] to church the next [illegible] Marie, her red cheeks [illegible] and down-cast. Ralph [illegible] watching her admiringly.

"[illegible] thought housekeep[illegible] accomplishment," he began. "[illegible] to be happy we [illegible] home."

"[illegible] fact on Mary," [illegible] "but she will not [illegible] for is the ornamental. She is [illegible] lazy, idle. Of course I [illegible] it before the crowd in the world, but I can see exactly [illegible] such a conglomeration of everything which [illegible] not be. Dinah [illegible] our house. She [illegible] a cup of salt and flour and [illegible] so that she could not [illegible] Mary forgot [illegible] used the batter to save [illegible] ever hear of such a thing!"

[illegible] light suddenly shone [illegible] Ralph Henderson [illegible] intended to [illegible] "[illegible] night," he said [illegible] "[illegible] night!"

With [illegible] of apology Marie flung [illegible] the room. At the same time [illegible] appeared in the doorway. "I [illegible] [illegible] was a tellin' ye, Misser Ralph," [illegible] "that wasn't a mind of [illegible] in it. Miss Mary's not stingy or [illegible] lazy, she's as [illegible] airth an' Miss Marie's a regular spittire. I seed [illegible] the starch for Mary's [illegible] I always thought o' what [illegible] to do til this very night. [illegible] Marie would do anything to get [illegible] Ain't she a nice un!"

"I am [illegible] glad that you told me [illegible]," said the young man, slipping [illegible] into the old woman's [illegible] "Miss Mary my sympathies."

[illegible] Ralph Henderson [illegible] from [illegible] And [illegible] blessed hundredfold [illegible] the story of the wonderful love which transforms all things. Ralph Henderson whispered softly: "May I come to see you [illegible] and tell you a story?"

And although he did not say another word his eyes told Mary what the story would be, so she blushed as she whispered, "Yes."—Herald Presbyterian.

THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT.

By James L. Elderdice.

Among the so-called "culminative" folklore verses or stories, the most famous is "The House That Jack Built," known by English-speaking children all over the world. Another tale of a similar sort, little known in this country but popular in England, is "The Old Woman and the Cat." It begins by describing the old woman's anxiety to make her pig jump over the stile in order that she may get home that night, and continues somewhat in this order: She appeals to the dog: "Dog, dog, bite pig, make pig jump over the stile so I may get home to-night." But the dog would not. Then she saw a stick to which she appeals: "Stick, stick, beat dog, make doge bite pig, make pig jump over the stile, so I may get home to-night." But the stick would not. So she proceeds, unsuccessfully, calling on fire, ox, butcher, and rat. At last the cat consents to kill the rat if the old woman will give her a drink of milk. This the cow agrees to furnish if the haycock will give her a whisk of hay. The haycock, without further parley, yields to her wishes, and straightway all the objects in the culminative chain are set in motion.

"As soon as the cow had eaten the hay, she gave the old woman milk, and away the old woman went with it in a saucer to the cat. As soon as the cat had lapped up the milk, the cat began to kill the rat, the rat began to gnaw the rope, the rope began to hang the butcher, the butcher began to kill the ox, the ox began to drink the water, the water began to quench the fire, the fire began to burn the stick, the stick began to beat the dog, the dog began to bite the pig, the little pig in a fright jumped over the stile, and so the old woman got home that night."

But as all folklore tales or jingles have the origin in the dim shades of a distant past, it is not surprising to find that "The House That Jack Built" and "The Old Woman and the Cat" are but counterparts of a parable hymn sung by the Jews centuries ago at the Passover ceremonies in commemoration of the principal events in Jewish history, which are thus set forth: "A kid, a kid my father bought for two pieces of money. A kid, a kid. Then came the cat and ate the kid that my father bought for two pieces of money. A kid, a kid." So in succession follow statements regarding the staff, fire, water, ox, butcher, angel of death, and the holy one whose doings are found in the summing up of the final verse:

"Then came the holy one—blessed be he!
That killed the angel of death
That killed the butcher
That slew the ox
That drank the water
That quenched the fire
That burned the staff
That beat the dog
That bit the cat
That ate the kid
That my father bought
For two pieces of money.
A kid, a kid."

The interpretation of this poem, as given by a famous rabbi in 1731, is as follows: "The kid, which was one of the pure animals, denotes the Hebrews. The father by whom it was purchased is Jehovah, who represents himself as sustaining this relation to the Hebrew nation. The two pieces of money signify Moses and Aaron, through whose mediation the Hebrews were brought out of Egypt. The cat denotes the Assyrians, by whom the ten tribes were carried into captivity. The dog is symbolic of the Babylonians. The staff signifies the Persians. The fire indicates the Grecian empire under Alexander the Great. The water betokens the Romans, or the fourth of the great monarchies to whose dominion the Jews were subjected. The ox is a symbol of the Saracens, who subdued Palestine and brought it under the Caliphate. The butcher that killed the ox denotes the Crusaders, by whom the Holy Land was wrested out of the hand of the Saracens. The angel of death signifies the Turkish power by which the land of Palestine was taken from the Franks, and to whom it is still subject. The commencement of the last stanza is designed to show that God will take signal vengeance on the Turks, immediately after whose overthrow the Jews are to be restored to their own land and live under the government of the long-expected Messiah."—Jas. L. Elderdice, in Christian Advocate.

"Thou art a sea without a shore,
Awful, immense Thou art,
A sea which can contract itself
Within my narrow heart:
And yet Thou art a Haven too,
Out on this shoreless sea,
A harbour that can hold full well
Shipwrecked humanity."

In Memoriam.

Death came to the relief of Brother James H. Grissom Thursday evening, May 9th, after a lingering illness of about seven weeks. During this time he suffered a great deal and several times he cheered up, thinking he would recover, but when the chances seemed against him he seemed to be resigned to the Lord's will, and when death came he fell on sleep as a child on its mother's breast. Truly it is worth it all to be able to trust in the Omnipotent at such a time. Bro. Grissom was 66 years of age, and had been a member of Mt. Carmel Methodist Protestant Church for 2 years.

He was first married to Rebecca Finch and to this union were born four children. He was married the second time to Margarette Edwards and to this union were born three children. All his children and his wife survive him, also seven grand children.

For the widow and the little ones left at home we especially offer our prayers and sympathy. No one but those who experience such bereavement know what it means. May the good Lord bind up the broken hearted and we commend them all to Him who notes the sparrow's fall.

The burial services were conducted from Mt. Carmel Church by Bros. J. D. Williams, J. A. Burgess and the writer and we laid his body to rest in the Finch family burying ground to await the resurrection morn. A large number of friends and relatives were in attendance.

N. G. Bethea.

"THEY LOOKED UNTO HIM, AND WERE RADIANT."

I presume that everybody has known some whose lives were just radiant. Joy beamed out of their eyes; joy bubbled over their lips; joy seemed to fairly run from their finger tips. You could not come in contact with them without having a new light come into your own life. They were great electric batteries charged with joy.

If you look into the lives of such radiantly happy persons—not those who are sometimes in the valley, but people who are always radiantly happy—you will find that every one is a man or woman who spends a great deal of time in prayer alone with God. "God is the source of all joy; and if we come into contact with him, his infinite joy comes into our lives."

Would you not like to be a radiant Christian? You may be. Spend time in prayer. You cannot be a radiant Christian in any other way. Why is it that prayer in the name of Christ makes one radiantly happy? It is because prayer makes God real. The gladdest thing upon earth is to have a real God. I would rather give up everything I have in the world or anything I may have, than give up my faith in God. You cannot have vital faith in God if you give all your time to the world and to secular affairs, to reading the newspaper and to reading literature, no matter how good it is. Unless you take time for fellowship with God, you cannot have a real God. "If you do take time for prayer, you will have a real, living God; and if you have a living God, you will have a radiant life."—Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D.

O. L. STRINGFIELD.

WHO BECOMES ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF THE NORTH CAROLINA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Rev. O. L. Stringfield is a native of Sampson County. He graduated at Wake Forest College in the eighties and opened a school at Wakefield in Wake County. For many years this was the most flourishing school in this section of the state. Mr. Stringfield inspired many a boy and girl with a desire to make the most of life. The school building having been burned at Wakefield, he gave up the work there and accepted a call to the Fayetteville Street Baptist Church of Raleigh. From that position, he came to Meredith College in a day when everything looked dark for that institution. He put his very life into the work, and by unwavering faith and consuming earnestness, he succeeded in arousing the Baptists of the state to the importance of building a school for girls which should be equal to Wake Forest in the class of work to be done. To O. L. Stringfield, more than to any other one man, is due credit for the establishment of Meredith College.

Mr. Stringfield, after finishing his monumental work for Meredith College, went back into the pastorate for some years; but his heart was in general work, especially that of education, and so he accepted a call to South Carolina as financial agent of the Greenville Female College. Coming back to this state as the agent for the Baptist Theological seminary, he did fine work in closing up the endowment for that institution. He then went to Missouri as agent of a college there from which place he has recently returned to North Carolina.

Having been an ardent temperance man all his life, his new work will be quite congenial and he will, no doubt, stir the people to whom he speaks. The temperance forces in the state are to be congratulated that O. L. Stringfield is to devote himself to the advocacy of temperance principles. All of his time will be given to field work and his appointments will be made from the office at Wilson, N. C.

In the decade from 1901 to 1910, the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States declined from 196.9 for each 100,000 persons living to 160.3, a decrease of 18.7 per cent, while the general death rate, including all causes of death, declined only one-half as fast, or at the rate of 9.7 per cent, from 1655.0 to 1495.8.

These figures were given out in a state ment issued to-day by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. They are based on data abstracted from the reports of the United States Bureau of the Census, and cover the registration area in this country. According to the statement, the tuberculosis death rate has declined steadily since 1904, when it was 201.6. On the other hand, the general death rate shows a fluctuation downward in general trend, but not as steady as the tuberculosis rate. The decline in the tuberculosis death rate in the last ten years means a saving of 27,000 lives at the present time.

In certain cities, such as New York, Boston, Cleveland and Chicago, and in States like Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, the decline in the tuberculosis death rate is much more marked than in the country at large.

The National Association says that there are many factors working together to cause the decline in the tuberculosis death rate, such factors as the change in the character of our urban population, increased sanitation, and better housing, but probably as potent a factor as any has been the nation wide anti-tuberculosis campaign. "It may be foretold with considerable certainty," the statement concludes, "that when the effects of the present rapidly increasing provisions for the care of tuberculosis patients shall have become evident, the decline in the death rate from consumption in the coming decade will be even more marked than that in the last one."

MODEST HEROISM.

Israel Greenburg, seven years old, was playing on the string-piece of Pier 21, East River, New York, when he tripped and fell into the water. A woman who saw him fall ran for help, and the first person she met was a neatly dressed man who had come off one of the New Haven boats. The man dropped his valise, ran to the spot and dived into the water. He swam to the boy, and grabbing him, managed to get him aboard a sand barge. Patrolman Myers found the man and the boy on the barge, and asked the man his name. "You don't want my name," said the man. "That isn't necessary. Just show me a place where I can change my clothes. That is all I want." The policeman called an ambulance, and the boy was removed to the Hudson Street Hospital. Then Myers led the rescuer to a seaman's lodging house. He took a suit out of his valise and put his wet suit into the valise, and went on his journey. Every effort was made at the lodging house to have the man reveal his identity, but he said: "I only did my duty; only a little thing unworthy of any notice in the papers or public praise." It was a beautiful, heroic thing to save a life as he did, but a doubly beautiful thing to be so modest and humble about it. Human nature is such that praise is sought for the most commonplace acts, and in those of heroism there may be a just pride. The modest, manly man did not get his name in the papers nor apply for a medal as would have been the natural or proper edsire, but he knows himself, and God knows him. The modesty Christ taught in acts of charity the man illustrated in his heroic act.—Christian Herald.

THE RELIGION OF SPEECH.

Puting away falsehood, speak ye truth each one with his neighbor; for we are members one of another.—Eph. 4:25.

Jesus and James make clear the divine attitude to human speech. Their position is pointed, practical and potent, and the modern science of psychology does not alter, but confirm, the position taken by these inspired writers. Furthermore, experience confirms it.

The one who speaks falsely comes, sooner or later, to act falsely. If one is untrue in speech one will become untrue in conduct. The great trouble with telling a falsehood is becoming false. If one is false to any man, in word, one cannot be true to self in deed.

But the teaching of today is more than this. It sets forth the dangers of uncomely speech and points out the prostituting effect of profanity. "The tongue is a fire; the world of iniquity among our members is the tongue." How many of us have felt the fierceness of this fire, the consuming effect of this flame, this fire and flame of an evil tongue! It was, as James points out, the very fire of hell. "It is full of deadly poison." And this poison is for the one who administers it as much as, often more than, for the one to whom it is administered. Be careful of how you use the tongue. Its deadly fangs lay deep hold upon your own heart and soul while you are trying to fasten them upon the heart and soul of another. Swearing ever and always hurts, injures, depraves the swearer, far more than it does the one sworn at or to.

So likewise of all profanity. The dastardliness and the deadliness of profanity lies just here; it shrinks and shrivels the soul of the profane one.

Of all bad habits, profanity is the most useless and inexcusable. All other bad habits than this have some end in view, satisfy some passion, breed some craving, or desire. Profanity does neither. It has no excuse for being. It is simply born of irreverence and exists in itself as a species of open defiance to God's laws which condemn it. Profanity is a species of irreverence, bigotry, defiance and anarchy. God says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." Men take it in vain and can give no other excuse or reason or justification for so doing than that it defies God and violates His law. "Swear not at all," says our Lord Jesus. Yet men do swear, and they have no other ground, excuse or justification for so-doing than that it defies the words of Jesus and shows open rebellion against Him.

Men swear because they want to make themselves out that which they are not. They want you to see that they can swear, and thus defy God and do violence to His words with impunity. Swearing, falsehood, profanity, it is a species of human weakness, a manifestation of a rebellious spirit, a declaration of anarchy, the prostitution of the soul, the outward acclaim that God is unwise and His law unjust.

There is nothing that our day needs more than the spirit of reverence. And there is nothing that makes against this spirit of reverence more than the deplorable habit of profanity abroad in the land.

It seems to me that this habit, this spirit of profanity, is on the increase. Good people everywhere need to raise their voices, their pens, their influence against it everywhere; for it is deplorable and is sweeping thousands into wreck and ruin of life, conduct and character.

—From The Christian Sun.

NEW MULTIPLICATION RULE.

I wonder if it is in your arithmetic? It is one of the best rules in all the world, but it is not in all the books. You know the old rule, of course, but this is a great deal more fun. To think of fun in arithmetic! It is a multiplication by division. Does that puzzle you? Perhaps you are saying: "When you multiply, you get more; but when you divide you get less. How, then, can you get more by making less?"

I will tell you the rule if you will promise two things: to try it and then to explain it to somebody. Of course you will try it. For of what use is a good rule if you don't use it? And when you have seen it work, I know you will want to share it. Let me explain the rule by an example, as the books do.

Suppose you have something that is very nice, O so nice! To multiply by this rule just divide it. Gvie some of it to somebody. Then you will certainly have more than you had before; not more of the thing you divided, but more of something which is far better. For it is a peculiar thing about this rule, that it not only multiplies, but it changes the kind. Under the old rule, if you multiply two oranges by two, you have four; but they are only oranges. When you multiply by dividing, you have an orange and the pleasure of sharing, which is certainly much more than just oranges. You get not more orange, but more pleasure And, after all, it is not things that make us happy. Is it not a good bargain to exchange things, just things, for real pleasure? Who would not be glad to have less orange and more fun?—Christian Guardian.

A PROPHECY.

Dr. Griffith John, speaking to Chinese Christians on the occasion of his jubilee, concluded with these words:—

"I now want to assume the role of a prophet. Another fifty years and there will be no idols in China. Fifty years and there will be no Buddhist or Taoist priests. In fifty—or shall we say a hundred?—years I do not think there will be any foreign pastors in China. Why? Because the Chinese Church will have its own pastors in great numbers and all China will be changed. We older brethren will not see this sight in life but we shall look down on it from heaven, and the little ones here tonight will see it and will play their part in it."

HOW TO READ THE BIBLE.

Martin Luther used to teach his children to read the Bible in the following way. First, read through one book carefully, then study chapter by chapter, and then verse by verse, and lastly, word by word, for, he said: "It is like a person shaking a fruit tree. First, shaking the tree and gathering up the fruit which falls to the ground, and then shaking each branch and afterwards each twig of the branch, and last of all, looking carefully under each leaf to see that no fruit remains. In this way, and in no other, shall we also find the hidden treasures that are in the Bible."—Selected.

A woman came into a photographer's studio and said to the proprietor: "Do you take children's photos?"

"Yes, certainly, madam."

"How much do you charge?"

"Five dollars a dozen."

"Well said the woman, sorrowfully, "I shall have to see you again. I've only got eleven."—Ladies' Home Journal.

...NSUAL OCCUPATIONS.

...th this census is completed, ... classification has been ... subdivided has been put in ... ... is found be the most elaborate ... ever made by the Census ... ... while machinists ... ... under one general ... of them will be classified ... particular work he is do... ... and indus... ... dresses will contain ... This will bring to light ... in what source. ... and a livelihood ... has progressed, there ... classed as "snake men" ... a snake ranch in ... more than seven years ... handling snakes. During ... sold over 150,000 rattle ... the price ranging ... each. They are sold to ... circuses, medical col... ...sts.

... industry one would ... to find persons sub-classed, ... plowers, sluggers, busters- ... and weather makers. ... are. Another man who will ... by himself when the work ... ... Kansas City, ... the smoke of ... He claims that when ... has been hung it ... upon the meat ... smoked in an old- ... house. Such titles as ... gay hat factory, "tobies," ... "clock wallopers," a ... "poucher" in a hat making ... in a clock factory, ... with oysters, ... factory, some of the ... used by the Census ...

... are as many women as ... who pursue odd ways of ... which would ... "ists," were a common ... used, for it is their ... from the de... which they are "employ... ... each day, or as often ... When a grouchy ... complaint of ... or what not, against ... is summoned ... in charge of ... There she is ... before the angry ... summarily dismissed, and ... goes away rejoicing.

... policemen are becoming rather commonplace. We have a woman chief of police in Kansas; a town in Pennsylvania boasts a fair deputy sheriff, who is a college graduate, and Los Angeles was the first city to appoint a woman to its police force.

One woman in Pennsylvania earns her daily bread by raising Persian cats and selling them for $25 to $100 each. She not infrequently makes large sales to wealthy cat fanciers. Still another woman in Maryland devotes her time to pigeon raising, claiming her income from the industry to be about $700 a year.

One of the most unique trades of the entire list, however, is that carried on by a man in Seattle. His business, and a profitable one, too, is to secure the mustaches from walrus killed in Bering Straits and sell them to the Chinese for toothpicks. These stout bristles are plulked from the nose of the walrus by Indians, tied into small bundles and sold by him on the Pacific Coast to agents who ship them to China, where they are in great demand. In an aged bull walrus the bristles are about a foot long and nearly as thick as a lead pencil. Besides being extremely tough, they can, when made into picks, be pushed between the teeth without injury to the enamel. Last year this dealer cleared something like a thousand dollars by his traffic in walrus whiskers.—Scientific American.

BIG AND LITTLE BROTHERS.

The Big Brothers, to the number of seven or eight hundred or perhaps a thousand, pick up and brother the lads of the street who get "pinched" and landed in the Juvenile Court. They find jobs for the Little Brothers, which is not so difficult, as most of them are employers of labor or have a "pull" with those who are. They keep the youngsters in the good path and, what is more than bushels of advice, they give them comradeship, affection, friendship, and human love, making them feel that the heart of things is good. And, once more—paradoxically—it seems that, much as the Little Brothers get out of it, the Big Brothers get a good deal more. Take the case of one of them, a bachelor and a banker. He took on a Little Brother and found him a job. Then on holidays he took him to the links and gave him a job of caddying in the open, finding him strong shoes and a sweater for the occasion. After awhile it occurred to him that the youngster needed religious training. So he began to take him to Sabbath school and to church, thus renewing an acquaintance which had lapsed a dozen years before. And, best of all, that Big Brother declares that he has never been so happy in his life.

What a marvelous thing it will be when the Little Brothers of to-day are old enough to become the Big Brothers of to-morrow! Two or three have already done so, though the movement is but six years old. But what will it be when there are thousands? Finally, has one not read a sentence beginning in some such way as this: Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren?"—Harper's Weekly.

Continued from page 5.

escort the ladies to the legation quarters, and, best of all, for me, no one opposed my plan of returning to Kalgan. So I accepted the loan of a revolver, and, grip in hand, I started for the station. Soon I found a rickshaw. Fortunately this part of the city had not been disturbed as I found. Here and there were soldiers returning to their posts. The light gave back the courage the night terror had taken from them. However, that day and the next night the looting continued. Some of the people took occasion to finish up what the soldiers had left. Arriving at the railroad station, at first I could not buy a ticket for Kalgan, but then a train was made up for Kalgan, much to my relief. The terminal at Fengtai had been so completely looted that there was no starting of a train from there that day or for several days to come. You can imagine my pleasure on arriving at Kalgan. They were all blissfully ignorant of the danger around them, and it was left to me to tell them of China's new danger.

It is not necessary to tell you of the later events of the plundering of Tientsin, of the terrible fate of Poating-fu and of the efforts of the authorities to restore order. These and many more things your daily papers have told you. Where will it end? Perhaps the foreign power will intervene. If so, there may be many months of interruption to the work of the missionaries. But we hope that such is not to be China's fate. We trust that the new government may have strength to restore order.

Kalgan was in a very perilous condition during the time of the looting. The soldiers stationed here made demands of their officers and for two days official Kalgan feared that the soldiers would break forth and loot. Of course the terror spread rapidly to the common people. The personal courage and influence of their general is probably the only thing that has kept them in order. Kalgan has been very fortunate in again escaping. Several times danger has threatened the city, but fortunately disaster has not overtaken the city.

Pay as you go. If you can't pay, don't go.

PROGRESS OF EDUCATION IN DECADE

Dr. P. P. Claxton, head of the federal burea of education, has just issued his annual report. It contains an unusual amount of valuable information, as it makes comparisons between conditions now and these 10 years ago, showing what remarkable progress had been made in this short period. Few general readers can take time to study this report, but a summary of it here will put you in possession of the main facts brought out. Within the decade the average length of the school year has increased 8 per cent, the attendance 14 per cent, the number of teachers in the public schools 20 per cent, the salary of men teachers 35 per cent and of women teachers 25 per cent, the value of school property 75 per cent, the number of children in kindergartens 40 per cent, the number of high schools 70 per cent and of high-school pupils 76 per cent, and the number of students in college and technical schools 67 per cent.

Meantime the average illiteracy has decreased from 11 per cent to 8 per cent, that among the whites being now 3 per cent and among the negroes 30. According to the census there were 5,500,000 persons in the country over 10 years old unable to read and write; 1,700,000 foreign whites and 2,300,000 colored. Of 25 million children of school age—5 to 18—less than 20 million are enrolled in schools and the average attendance of those enrolled is 113 days a year and the average total school life of a child is 1046 days, or say five school years. Only about one-fourth of the children ever enter high school, eight out of a hundred complete the high school course, and only five out of a hundred receive any higher education. At last all the states have normal schools but the report says that less than half of the teachers receive "adequate preparation for their work." The country schools, it adds, are "particularly unsatisfactory," the buildings often being cheap and unsanitary, the terms short and the teachers poorly paid and overworked, while the courses are ill-adapted to conditions and attendance is poor. In mining and mill districts the youngsters are taken from school at a premature age to go to work. Of five millions of young men and women of college age, only about 200,000 or 3 per cent are in colleges.

There are now 506,000 teachers in the public schools, of whom 21 per cent are men and 79 per cent women; the proportion of men is steadily declining. The average salary of men teachers has risen from $46.50 to $63.40 a month in 10 years and of women from $39 to $50. The number of schoolhouses is 256,000; this number is not increasing much, as many schools are being consolidated. The total value of public-school property has now reached the enormous total of $968,000,000 or practically a billion dollars. The annual school income from state taxes is 63 millions, while 230 millions more is raised by local taxation and the total expenditures for school purposes are now over 400 millions a year. We spent $2.84 per capita of population on our public schools in 1900, and now we are spending $4.45. Every pupil cost the community on an average $31.65 a year. About 400 of our cities now have kindergartens, with 180,000 children attending, but Dr. Claxton points out that there is danger of the kindergarten system in this country degenerating into a merely humdrum primary department of the regular schools, thus sacrificing Froebel's idea.

There are now 10,200 high schools in the United States, with 42,000 teachers and 915,000 students. Of these pupils 43 per cent are boys and 57 per cent girls. The changes with the decade in the subjects studied are significant. Latin is about holding its own, while Greek has practically disappeared; French is on the increase and German much more so; algebra and geometry are studied more than they were, as preparation for technical work; physics is not receiving so much attention, nor chemistry either; English literature, rhetoric and general history show a marked increase—a tendency in the wrong direction, many will say, as being away from the practical; but on the other hand the study of agriculture and domestic economy is rapidly forging ahead and will soon take high rank. In 10 years the number of students in colleges taking agricultural courses has more than trebled. There are about 100 agricultural schools now supported in whole or part by the states, while agricultural courses are given in 2,000 high schools and 100 normal schools. Agriculture is a required subject in common schools in 12 states. Courses in forestry are also making their appearance, while "vocational training" is being favored all along the line. There is compulsory school attendance now in all but seven states. Commisioner Claxton deplores the "lack of progress in musical education;" he says that "the American people are eye-minded and moving-pictures seem to suit their desires better than music;" but they should "be taught to hear the significant things of life as well as see them," he thinks. Great progress has been made in the way of bettering the sanitary conditions in the schools; health is coming to be looked upon as the basic object of education.—The Pathfinder.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

THE DRINK HABIT.

Get the drink habit. It will cure [illegible] "spring fever" and make a cool [illegible] mild for you—if you drink [illegible] unadulterated ale. Your [illegible] each spring is due to wi[illegible] of waste in the body which [illegible] moved. Flush them out with [illegible] two quarts of water every day. [illegible] them flushed. Don't permit [illegible] conditions of the body, if [illegible] to drink three or even four [illegible] and eat nothing but fruits [illegible] Have an internal spring [illegible] a week and see how [illegible] you can do your work.

WHAT TO DRINK.

Don't drink anything [illegible] just because it resembles [illegible] criminating. It may be the [illegible] ling water from a [illegible] may be a dilute solution [illegible] deadly bacteria. When [illegible] strange water, ask, "Where [illegible] it is a city public supply it is [illegible] City waters are analyzed [illegible] found polluted the fact is [illegible] cause of pollution removed. It is [illegible] with the old oaken bucket or [illegible] open topped well, beware. [illegible] that these old family wells [illegible] kind and those that are [illegible] water tight with cement, [illegible] drained around the top [illegible] twice as likely to be polluted as city [illegible] and the State rarely [illegible]

ABOUT "MINERAL WATERS."

Don't waste your money on "mineral waters." They may contain [illegible] minerals, odors, tastes, and [illegible] originally or by adulteration, but for [illegible] or ten cents your druggist will [illegible] enough salts and [illegible] of "mineral water." Nine-tenths [illegible] of the so-called "mineral waters" [illegible] hoax—a snare and a delusion. [illegible] these "minerals," of which [illegible] little, into your body, of which [illegible] less? The chief virtue of such waters [illegible] in the fact that [illegible] usually harmless, and people [illegible] of this water that their systems [illegible] out and cleaned and they feel [illegible] is perfectly natural. They would [illegible] equally good or better [illegible] an equal amount of any pure water, and they would have avoided the [illegible] expense. Man in his ingenuity has [illegible] many things to water, but [illegible] additions are useless if not harmful. [illegible] drink ever devised by man is more effective for the slaking of thirst than pure water.

ONE WEEK'S WORK OF AN A. B. CLASS.

Here is the record of the activity of a Bible class in Boston for one week:

Sixty-five members began the week well by being present at the regular session of the class in the afternoon, while forty-two of the men had been to the morning church service. In the evening, sixty of the men sat together at a special service and they sang a song as their contribution to a Sunday-school program.

On Monday night four of the men went to a mission in the city to help in the service, and four more of the men went to the neighboring city of Lawrence to perform the same service.

On Tuesday evening ten of the men helped to conduct a mission service and on Wednesday night fully half of the members were present at a church social.

Thursday night the class held a temperance meeting, and on Friday evening twenty-five of the men were present at the regular church prayer-meeting and many of them gave testimony as to the power of the Holy Spirit in their own lives.

On Saturday night several of the men assisted in a city mission service.

During the week the class made a generous contribution to the fund being raised to defray the expenses of Men and Religion Movement in Boston, and ten dollars were given to a poor and needy family the father of which has been disabled for some weeks by illness. This is about an average week of the activities of this class, which may surely be numbered among the classes that "do things."

THE RESULTS OF AN "INCREASE MONTH."

The leaders of the Adult Department of Sunday-school work in Alabama determined to set aside a certain month as an "increase month" all along the line in that state. Every county and district Adult Department officer was asked to organize at least one class during the month. The result was that the month thus chosen stands out as a record breaker in the history of the Adult Organized Class Movement in Alabama. Fifty-two new classes from twenty-six counties were reported. The value of an "increase month" or three months is that it gives a certain definiteness to the work and sets many people to "doing something" within a given time.

THE MECHANICS OF THE MEETING.

As to the mechanics of the meeting, the methods of carrying it on, these may differ in different societies, and even in the same society from month to month. Its distinguishing peculiarity is the calling of the roll in some form or other, and I think for most societies there is no better way than to make this the feature of the evening, and have each one who responds to his name respond with some brief prayer of consecration, a word of testimony concerning his desire to serve the Lord in the days to come, or a verse of scripture which expresses his thought of renewed allegiance. The response to the roll-call may be infinitely varied. We never have just the same history to thank God for in the past months, or just the same way to express our allegiance for the future, or, even if we do use the same words week after week, it matters little if they express our hearts's deepest feeling.

I think, however, that this roll call should always be conducted in a most solemn and serious manner. It should always be preceded by prayer; at least one and perhaps several brief prayers should be offered that the names as they are recorded on the secretary's book may also be recorded in the Lamb's book of life above, and that the responses may be no formal service, but a general renewal of covenant vows. The secretary should not always begin at the same end of the alphabet, but sometimes with the A's, sometimes with the W's, and sometimes in the middle of the alphabet. As the secretary begins to read the names, I think it is a good plan for him to say as is done in some societies, "let us now renew our covenant with God." After a few names have been read and responses given, a verse of a hymn may be sung, for there are many appropriate ones in our usual collections. There can be seasons of prayer interspersed through the hour, and in many ways the exercises can be made as varied as it is impressive.—Francis E. Clark.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 2, 1912.

Subject—Fidelity; Christian Virtues VI. (Consecration meeting). Rev. 2:1-10.

Leader's Talk.

The closest application of our topic to the lives of Endeavorers surely relates to their fidelity in keeping the pledge. The more one goes over the clauses of the pledge the more convinced does one become that every point is necessary to the well-rounded Christian life. There is need today for every Christian definitely to promise his Lord to strive to do whatever He would have him do; there is need for daily Bible-reading and prayer; there is need for clear-cut testimony for Christ; there is need for regular attendance at the meetings of society and church, and for participation in Christian service. Fidelity in these directions will make the kind of men and women that will be a power in the land.

And for this high standard we must stand firm. During one of his great battles a message came to the Duke of Wellington that a certain regiment was sorely pressed, and that unless re-enforcements were sent, it must give way before the enemy. The Duke replied, "Stand firm." "They will be crushed," said the officer. "Stand firm," returned the Duke. "You will find us there," was the answer as the officer galloped away. And the regiment stood firm until the legions of France marched over it and annihilated it.

Let us hear our Master's command, "Stand firm; quit ye like men; be strong."—R. P. Anderson.

Thoughts from Others.

If some one says that he has confessed Christ once and thinks that is enough, let me ask him if he has not received any blessing during the past month which he wishes to consecrate to God, or whether some intellectual material, or spiritual gift has not come to him which he would lay upon the altar of sacrifice. I am sure that no one can live in the right world and experience God's goodness and constant care, without having something fresh and new each month to give back to the Giver of all good gifts. Certainly the consecration service once a month is none too often.

"Bishop Usher, whose sacred chronology is printed in the margin of most of our Bibles, was one time preaching to a great audience in London, when a messenger from the despotic King James commanded his immediately coming to the palace. The preacher replied: "I am engaged in the more important business of the greater King. When I have finished my duty to him, then I shall come." This same spirit, even in attenuated form, applied now would send us to many a prayer-meeting on evenings when we regard an invitation to a social as more imperative. Which is the greater, God or our society leaders?"

The test of fidelity is trifles. Anybody can be faithful to the great trust or on the great occasion. The need is for Endeavorers that will be in their place every Sunday; that do small duties with as much zeal as greater ones. The Sunday school needs scholars and teachers of the present-every-Sunday kind; the pastor needs parishioners that are in their pew rain or shine. Youth is the time to make fidelity one of the chief stones of charac-

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1912. NUMBER 28.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE PREACHING THAT MOST HELPS

Some preachers preach science; they help a little some of their hearers, though the scientifically inclined rely little on the pulpit for instruction.

Some preachers preach morals, and help to form in the community correct views of moral obligations. Their preaching has a certain value, though not the highest.

Some preachers preach history, and help to inform their hearers regarding events andmovements of the past. This knowledge of the past is necessary to an understanding of the present, and the preacher is doing a good work when he teaches men what has occurred in the religious history of the race.

But the preachers that are supremely the best are those who bring their hearers to see the need of a divine deliverer from the innate evil of sin and to see that in Christ Jesus God offers to men the very Savior they need. Some preaching may instruct, but the best preaching moves to a sense of the need of Christ, to a living faith in Him, and an early acceptance of Him as Savior and Lord.

—Why do people quarrel? Some are quarreling about property, some about questions of precedence, some about petty offices, that of the president of the United States included. What do you guess it is that makes them do so?

WASTERS.

The world's resources are limited. There is only so much coal in the ground, and at present rate of consumption, it will all be gone in a few generations. The soil on our farms is a precious heritage from the past, but it is washing into the ocean and being used up faster than additions are made to it in many places. As population increases, if the food supply continuously diminishes, the time must come, if the world continues, when there will be widespread famine. Even the oxygen in the atmosphere is being diminished, and fear is expressed that there will be an oxygen famine in the future.

However we may look upon this question of the exhaustibility or inexhaustibility of the world's resources, there is one phase of the matter about which we are all agreed: that is, the individual man has a very uncertain tenure upon life, and can by his own action, shorten his days, diminish his pleasure in living and lessen his usefulness to his fellowmen. If men cannot waste and exhaust the world's resources, certain it is that the individual man can rob himself of his his chance of living and reduce life from a blessing to a curse. Men can become wasters of their own substance.

We are joined to the earth and the earth life through a bodily organism. But by abuse of our bodies we may not only throw ourselves out of right adjustment to our environment, but we may actually sever our present connections. Whatever tends to either of these results is a waster, a destroyer.

The world abounds in destroying agencies. They are offered us in stores. The newspapers advertise them and represent them to be builders rather than destroyers. We have to be on our guard. It takes much caution and much wisdom to select the course of safety and health and life. "There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

—Rev. C. A. Cecil asks us to say that Children's Day will be held at Julian M. P. Church on the third Sunday, beginning at 11 A. M.

—On one of the intensely cold Sundays of last winter a preacher decided that he would not go to his appointment because he thought no one else would go. Another preacher on the same day decided that he would go, whether any one else was there or not. He found no congregation, but the people of the vicinity heard that their pastor went. The day for the next appointment was also very cold. Both preachers went this time. The one that failed to go on the former occasion found a very small number present, for the people were in doubt as to his coming. The preacher who went on the former cold day found a good congregation, for the people said: "If he went that other cold day, he'll be sure to go today."

—W. F. Stead, the distinguished literary man who perished in the Titanic, was a man of influence among men. It is thought to have been due to his efforts that Mr. Carnegie built the Peace Palace at The Hague. Yet Mr. Stead was once imprisoned and compelled to wear stripes. But he was suffering for righteousness' sake, being imprisoned for a justified attack on the London authorities for laxity in office. After Mr. Stead had served his term, every year on the return of the anniversary of his imprisonment he would don stripes for a day. He might be invited to dine with high officials, it mattered not where he went—he wore a striped suit as a rebuke to the government that had falsely imprisoned him.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk spent last week in Kernersville, preaching a series of sermons preparatory to a revival effort to be made later.

—N. G. Bethea, Jr., aged six, fell and broke his thigh a few hours before his father returned home from General Conference. He cannot understand why he must lie still, and requires much watching, but he seems to be doing well. Bro. Bethea had to cancel a preaching engagement at Kernersville because of this accident.

—Thos. E. Watson has been arrested for mailing obscene literature. He says the objectionable passage was quoted from a copyrighted book published in 1895. He is attacking the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

We, the undersigned, wish to express ourselves concerning the Orphans' Home at Denton. When the locating committee came to Denton last summer and made Denton a proposition which was accepted, we staked our word and honor upon it and went to work for funds to purchase the required amount of land. The difficulties in the way were many, but we worked unflinchingly until each obligation had been met. No one but those connected with it know the sacrifice that was made to raise this $2,200.00, in addition to the building of the new church. But finally, after days of work and worry, the deeds were made and we thought the matter settled. To our surprise a letter was received one day stating that Denton's proposition would not be accepted. Denton, so far as we know, had never made any proposition,only accepted the one made to her. This reminds one very much of our college enterprise. In the beginning, the College, as we understood it, was located and a site purchased. Everything seemed to go well, and if we remember correctly, approximately $50,000 had been subscribed and part paid in when to our amazement the cry was raised: "Where shall the college be located?" That cry has been ringing in our ears all these years, and today we have no college in sight. No one doubts but that we need a college and that the church is able to build, but the trouble is we can't locate it.

We are urged to pray the Lord to send young men into our ministerial ranks. We think if we would quit praying so much and go to work trying to answer our prayers by building up a school and an Orphan's Home, it would be far more effective. All great institutions have been the product of Evolution. If we can't build ideal institutions to start with, we certainly can lay the foundation and start. Other churches locate and build. We could build, but we can't locate.

A charitable institution of any kind takes in rather than gives out, so that from a business point of view the place is not financially benefited. The profit comes in blessings from God because of doing his will in providing for the homeless. Our church is supposed to support the Orphans' Home—not the place.

Denton, as some seem to think, is located in the backwoods of Nowhere, but such is not the case. Denton has a railroad that is improving, and will, sooner or later, be extended to connect with two great railway systems on the South, and it already connects with the Southern at Thomasville on the North. Denton will, in the course of time, be the county-seat of a new county. It is surrounded by a large territory which is practically undeveloped. Our church has a great future here, provided she is properly cared for, but of course her future can be easily blighted. It takes years to build, but only days to tear down.

The children in our Orphans' Home at Denton, need and must have better quarters. No one knows but those intimately connected with the home, how much inconvenience has been endured because of poor accommodations. Miss Auman and Mrs. Page deserve much credit for the way they have managed the home. They have done well, but give them a better building and much more will be done. It is a shame that it takes our church so long to do what ought to be done in a short time. If Denton is the wrong place for the home, then get it away and to a place that will be satisfactory. It is our opinion that it will be difficult to find a place that will make the sacrifice for the Home that Denton has made For two years the school gave free tuition which most of the time would have amounted to $20.00 per month. We were not able to do this, but did so that the home might be started. The presence of this institution seemed to encourage our people and the most of them, we believe have done what they could. They have a clear conscience in this matter and when the home goes from Denton—its birthplace—the people will be sorry, yet will feel relieved of a great responsibility. If it had not been for Denton, the good ladies of our church could not have started this institution at the time they did. It takes faith to manipulate the affairs of an institution like this. If we wait to see fully and clearly the way before we proceed, perhaps we have gone as far as we will ever go. We know God has been in the work thus far or the work would not have succeeded as it has.

We will be glad to make known the details of every step Denton has taken in this matter if anyone desires it. We sincerely hope that something will be done and that the M. P. Church will not remain content with things as they are at present.

G. L. Reynolds,
D. A. Braswell.

A STRAIN ON OPTIMISM.

In last week's "Herald" we were startled on reading a brief article under the above caption, and we find ourselves asking, "Is it possible that Jews and Catholics are to accomplish the final overthrow of this our grand Republic?" Some time ago we read a startling arraignment of the very corrupt status of morals and religion in New York City and we just hoped it was quite overdrawn, but this article only confirms what we had read before. This article was entitled, "A Severe Tribute." Then comes lawyer's opinion: "After the eloquent Delmar had fought for Harry Thaw against every obstacle that could be found he was asked just before leaving New York for his opinion of the city. He gave his estimate in the following lines:

"Vurgar of manner and overfed,
Overdressed and underbred,
Heartless, Godless, hell's delight,
Rude by day and lewd by night,
Bedwarfed the man, large the brute
Ruled by Jew and prostitute,
Purple robed and pauper clad
Roving, rotten, money mad,
A squirming herd in money's mesh
A wilderness of human flesh,
Crazed by avarice, lust and rum,
New York, thy name's delirium."

E. A. N.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Salutation.

The General Conference has again called me to serve as the Corresponding Secretary-Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions for the present quadrennium.

During the former term I rendered the best service of which I was capable, and gave more than the usual number of hours and labor to the varied duties of this position.

I now pledge my best thought and powers to the prosecution of our foreign missionary enterprise, and while regretting that important interests of the work at home could not be more rapidly developed, my best efforts will be directed to informing the church and arousing our people to a clearer comprehension of the greatness of the work abroad, and of the sureties of greater success through more liberal gifts.

Dependence necessarily will be on pastors and members for sympathetic cooperation, for the Board and its Secretary are simply delegated by the church to manage its foreign work, and the church, therefore, must provide both the missionaries and the money necessary to sustain them, and the work which is now prospering so grandly under the blessing of God.

Every church member is a member of the foreign missionary society which embraces the entire denomination, and must meet the obligations of membership which include praying and giving for the extension of the kingdom throughout the world.

The present duty is very plain. For 27 years the Board has published, and supplied free to our Sunday schools, a Children's Day service, and the schools holding the service have made an offering for the foreign missionary work.

While the receipts of the last quadrennium showed a gain, unfortunately, the no. of schools that used the Special Service prepared exclusively for our own schools was less last year than the year before, and the number to date has not increased.

This is a distinct loss to the church, for it means that many schools are not giving the scholars even this much of missionary education, and by thus denying them this which they ought to receive are not being trained for larger service in the church when they assume its responsibilities.

It would be better to have more schools use the service and get less money for a year or two, because the educational features of the Service, its illustrations of workers and work in Japan, its information of what the church is doing there, the messages from the Presidents of the Gen. Conference and of the Board, and other features, are valuable and cannot be found in any other service published.

Samples were sent weeks ago to every Sunday school superintendent we could reach with letter and order card, but many have not yet been ordered.

The service can be had at any time between this and the fall, and there can hardly be any excuse why a service should not be held by the average school.

I plead that you send at once your order for supplies which will be sent promptly and free of cost. Order without delay.

The Japanese Banners.

Remember two silk banners, beautifully embroidered, and made in Japan are offered to our schools: one to the school making the largest Children's Day offering, the other to the school making the largest offering in proportion to membership.

Please give the membership of your school when sending your offering, number of teachers, officers and scholars.

Our schools ought to raise $25,000 this year for Foreign Missions. Every dollar is now urgently needed for land, buildings, missionaries, etc.

Every school should help. Send for your supplies today. Do not put if off.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

—A negro fireman carelessly removed a throttle on a Seaboard locomotive in Raleigh. The result was the engine ran away and eight miles out of the city ran into a passenger train, killing engineer W E. Kirkwood. demolishing both engines, and slightly injuring two other persons.

THE SUFFERINGS OF JESUS.

One of the greatest mysteries of the earth is that of the sufferings of Jesus.

Peter forbade Him, but Jesus would not follow Peter's counsel.

Women wept as he bore his cross; but the angels did not help him carry it.

Why did he not have his disciples suffer in his stead; thus making a vicarious offering? No; he "trod the wine-press alone." Such things were to come on his people, and he went before them. Our heavenly Father knew our sorrows, and gave a captain of salvation, perfect though sufferings, to be a merciful high priest.

But why God's Son?* * * * Our Sons must die, and God spared not his own Son.

Why a heavenly sufferer?* * * * Because heaven sympathises with us.

See him, O sinner.* * * * The wild beasts howl around him. So you may oppose Him.* * * * Satan is in stern struggle with him. So you may be.* * * * He is crowned with thorns. So memory of your sins may pierce your aching head.* * . See him nailed to the cross. So you may be bound, and cast out.

If you reject Christ, you must fight your battle alone: for your drinking companions will not help you, nor romping sinners, nor cackling critics.

But Christ is the tree of life, whose leaves are crushed to heal your wounds and bruises. J. J. Summerbell.

DEVELOPED VIRTUES.

It is a significant fact that the successful development of personal virtues which stand out conspicuously in many a life, has been attained under very adverse conditions and circumstances. It is stated by Paul that he had "learned" in whatever state he was, to be contented therein. The virtue of patient contentment did not become developed in the apostle during the days when his immediate surroundings were most pleasing to him. It required no effort for him to be happily contented at such a time. It was easy to be patient and tranquil then. There was nothing in an agreeable situation to induce a development of the virtue of patience, and its attendant contentment. That development came to him when he was undergoing the stress and struggle of adverse tides, during which he was determined to be contented with his lot, to be patient with his portion, to be satisfied when it was naturally easy to be dissatisfied. And there is the virtue of self-control. It is exceedingly easy for even a quick-tempered person to be self-controlled while he is unaffected by influences of an opposing and distracting character. If one could always be entirely free from harassing conditions, both internally and externally, he never could fully develop the virtue of self-control. He must be under due testing in order to have the right opportunity to so exert himself that he will remain self-mastered amid the trial. When others of like temperament would act furious under abuse, the self-controlled one holds himself firmly in check, however meanly he may be treated. He may feel very indignant, and he has a right to feel so, but he controls himself so well that no outburst of passion proceeds from him. This is a splendid type of true temperance. But it is a virtue which is exceedingly difficult for a great many people to develop into a model example. C. H. Wetherbe.

—The General Educational Board of New York has offered $50,000.00 to Meredith College for women at Raleigh, N. C., on condition that the friends of that institution raise in bona fide subscriptions by June 30, 1912, $100,000.

—The great commonwealth of Alabama suffers the shame and humiliation of having a governor whose chief concern seems to be the protection and care of saloon keepers and rum dealers. This man Governor O'Neal, travelled all the way to Philadephia recently to be with and deliver an address to the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association. He must have felt quite at home amongst the liquor "dealers," for whom, and for whose business, we are told he has a special fondness. We have an idea that the sobriety and virtue of Alabama will assert itself at its next election and rid the State forever of the executive who has brought its fair name into such ill-repute.

—The Chicago building in which the National Republican Convention is to be held will seat 11,188 persons. It stands on the site of the old Libby prison which was moved from Richmond to Chicago in the year of the World's Fair.

—We note that Senator Overman is in favor of unseating Lorimer and Senator Simmons is opposed.

—Atlantic City is purging itself from graft in official places.

—Parmalee, "the safest" of American aviators, was killed last Saturday. Few aviators have died of disease, none yet of old age. Wilbur Wright died last week of typhoid fever.

—The last pensioner of the Revolutionary War died a year ago. Over 100 widow pensioners of the War of 1812 are still on the rolls.

—The National Committee of the Republican Party meets in Chicago today to prepare for the Convention on the 18th. There will be a large number of contesting delegations to be heard.

—Rowan County will build a new court house in Salisbury at a cost of $125,000.

A PLEA FOR BETTER SUNDAY SCHOOL ROOMS.

One of the signs of progress in education is improvement in schoolhouses and comfort for the students and teachers. Separate class-rooms work out the problems of discipline as well as class instruction. The increase of numbers forced the consideration of this matter of class-rooms, and the extension and grading of classes demanded such facilities. The spirit of this feature of school progress is contagious, and hence, like good roads movements, it has spread all over the country. I presume no teacher and no community would be willing to return to the old method of hearing different classes in the same room with all grades present. The idea of return to old conditions would seem absurd, and it is almost certain that no such thought will ever disturb present educational conditions. The questions of heat, light, and ventilation come in for their share of value in connection with health and progress. Discipline is easy under convenient physical conditions, and the teacher can give attention to the lesson and class instead of the other students who need watching. The honor system of management has grown up under these improvements, and serves a better purpose in education than the scold and rod method.

The public school equipment has forced upon the church the wisdom, if not the necessity, of class-rooms for our Sunday-schools. Superintendents, teachers, and even pupils begin to feel that each Sunday school class should have more privacy and convenience for lesson work. A separate room for each class is the ideal plan; but where this is impossible some rooms should be provided and this would lessen the proximity of classes and confusion in the main room. The importance of this provision for better work in Sunday schools is apparent to any thinking person who is interested in the work; and there are many schools in town and country that could increase the efficiency of their schools without very great cost to congregations. Many congregations have torn down churches that might have been converted into good Sunday school adjuncts to the new church; and many churches might make additions to the rear of the church for Sunday school uses.

There can be but one objection to such improvements and that is the cost; and yet the cost is the least difficulty. The enlistment of the community in real Sunday school interest is the herculean task that confronts most churches. Very few Sunday schools equal in numbers the church membership, and members of the church make better house-provision for their domestic animals than for their Sunday school children. No community is too poor to house its people in comfortable and convenient church buildings as no farmer is too poor to build cribs for his corn. If the community has the people it is a loss to leave them without church accommodations. The sooner the church awakens to a sense of the necessity and of her obligation to provide Sunday school equipment equal to public school equipment, the better it will be for our country. In almost every church community there could be found one or two men who pay as much tax to support the public school as the whole community spends on the Sunday school. The church can never do her best with such odds against her. Every school should set as its goal class-rooms for classes and the whole community proud of and interested in its school. The average school is a shuffle of feet, a jargon of voices, a confusion of ideas, a glance of eyes, and the absence of spiritual quiet and meditation. It should not be so. The school is worthy of conveniences, comforts, spiritual assistance, and quiet. The class needs a few moments of devotion. The teacher needs the eye, ear, and heart of the class. The half hour ought to be holy. Pray for it. Work for it. And the class-rooms will come and we shall get closer to the Bible and to Jesus. W. W. Staley.

Methodist Protestants Open Edifice At Linthicum Heights.

With special services and in the presence of many visiting ministers and members of the congregation, the new Linthicum Heights Methodist Protestant Church, at Linthicum Heights, Anne Arundel County, was dedicated yesterday afternoon. The ministers marched from the residence of Mr. H. S. Linthicum to the church, where prayer was offered by Rev. George W. Haddaway, after which he delivered a short address.

Rev. A. J. Torrey, a former pastor of the church, complimented the congregation on the progress it had made in having such a structure erected. Among those who were present and took part in the service were Revs. Dr. J. M. Sheridan, E. O. Ewing, the pastor of the church; E. C. Mekosky and S. Colquitt.—Baltimore Sun.

—Murder will out, they say. Certainly wrongdoer is never safe or easy, even in his sleep. Tortured by memories of a murder he had committed in North Carolina, Frank Jones of Detroit talked in his sleep and let fall information which led to his arrest and identification as the guilty one.

—The N. C. Association of the blind is in session in Fayetteville. Henry Easley, of High Point, is president.

—The Armour Packing Co. has decided to establish a fertilizer factory on the south side of Greensboro. Ths will employ nearly 300 people, it is said.

—U. S. troops have been landed in Cuba to help put down an insurrection of negroes, or at least to protect the lives and property of the Americans. Our government has notified theirs that we have no thought of permanent interference.

—Harmon is 66 years old; Taft 55; Underwood 50; La Follette 57; Clark 62; Wilson 56; Rosevelt 54. Wilson was born in Virginia, Clark and Underwood in Kentucky, Taft and Harmon in Ohio, and Roosevelt in New York.

—We heard this week of another nonagenarian: Mrs. Nancy Hanner, of Guilford County. She is the mother of our worthy brother, Jesse Hanner, of Tabernacle Church. She passed into her 91st year on the 16th of last March.

—Mrs. Robert Causey, of Tabernacle, died quite unexpectedly last Friday night, having been sick only a little while. She was the good mother of Bros. J. W. and Jas. A. Causey, and had reached the advanced age of 85 years. She was buried on Saturday, Rev. C. A. Cecil conducting the funeral service.

—Count Tolstoy once said:

"All happy families resemble one another; every unhappy family is unhappy after its own fashion."

Is not this true of individuals also. Happy souls are much alike, unhappy ones dissimilar and unhappy after their own fashion.

—An exposition for the purpose of promoting the conservation of our natural resources is to be held in Knoxville, Tenn., in September and October, 1913. Gifford Pinchot is president of the Advisory Board.

Among buildings planned are a corn palace, to be erected in co-operation with the boys' corn clubs of the South and formed of ears of corn covering a framework, and a model concrete residence of colonial style to be used as the women's building. In this latter structure such exhibits as pertain to domestic science, child welfare and the like will be shown. Another prominent feature will be a model farm about five acres, containing cottage, a barn, a sanitary dairy, portable hog and poultry houses, modern fences, and the most approved furnishings, tools and machinery. It is planned that one of the state experiment stations will work the farm according to the latest scientific methods. This will be a most valuable object lesson to visiting farmers.

HE KNOWS.

I can not always trace the onward course
My boat must take;
But looking backward, I behold afar
Its shining wake,
Illumined with God's life of love; and so
I onward go
In perfect trust that He who holds the helm
The course must know.
I can not always see the plan on which
He builds my life;

For oft the sound of hammers, blow on blow,
The noise of strife,
Confuse me till I quite forget He knows
And oversees,
And that in all details with His good plan
My life agrees.
I can not always know and understand
The Master's rule;
I can not always do the task He gives
In life's hard school;
But I am learning by His help to solve
Them one by one;
And when I cannot understand, to say,
"Thy will be done!"

Gertrude B. Curtis.

THE MAN WHO PRAYS.

The man who prays is a man who's clean,
A man with a manly heart, withal,
To know that a cry from a life obscene
Will find no answer to greet its call.
The man who prays is a man who tries
To live his life as he lifts his prayer;
To learn the lesson that round him lies,
To take some interest in right, and care.

The man who prays is a man who feels
That unless he lives in the proper way
There is no use, as he bows and kneels
To lift his hands unto God and pray.
For, what is prayer from a life that's stained
With daily evil and unaccord;
Or how can it merit the blessing rained
From out the bountiful hand of the Lord?

The man who prays is a man who strives
With earnest purpose from day to day
To live his life so there still survives
Some meaning and reason for him to pray.
The man who prays is the man who sees
That he whose life is a daily sin
Can only ask pity, upon his knees,
Can only be sad for the might have been.

—The Bentztown Bard.

Every careful householder will see that his home is properly screened. In spite of this precaution flies will invade houses. Should thep do so no mercy must be shown them. They should be killed whenever Should they do so no mercy must be shown they have come, but one thing is certain, they have come from no clean place. There is not one chance in a million that they have not come from a manure pile, a garbage can, a privy, or a sick room.

The royal road to health leads not by the way of big pills or little pills, purgatives or patent medicines, but by the homely road of correct habits.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

By One of Them.

We cannot, if we would, ignore the fact that we have a share in the responsibility that rests on our beloved Church, for the raising of the foreign Mission Debt, but—what are we going to do?

"Pray," you say. Yes, pray as we never prayed before for anything outside of our personal affairs, that is, pray more earnestly, and with stronger faith; but while prayer moves the Hand that moves the Universe, we cannot study God's methods without seeing that He means us to do as well as to pray.

Well what are we to do? Go round begging people to give? No.

Give the value of our winter hats? Well, that is a good suggestion, especially for those whose hats cost ten dollars and over, but, dear friends, there is something else that we can do, and the writer earnestly believes that God is calling us to do that very thing—the practice of habitual self-denial especially in dress.

There are many who are obliged to deny themselves many things, but the denial of which we speak is the deliberate doing without something which we are abundantly able to get, and putting that money into he Master's Treasury—just now on that debt.

The rich are called to this as well as those who are comfortably off, and can you not see how quickly we could do our share, if we acted on this plan?

Let us illustrate: Here is a handsome coat suit valued at thirty dollars, or thirty-five. You could get it, and you would enjoy it, too—texture, finish and all, but—that Debt hanging over our Church—you would not enjoy wearing it! You find one at twenty, or twenty-five and while it is not as handsome, you take it, and you have ten dollars to put on the Debt, and, somehow, you wear a smile in your heart that makes up for the lack of style in your suit. This is, of course, but one of the many forms of self-denial possible to use if we are ready for them.

Oh, friends, let us try this. Let our Mission Circles be also Self-Denial Leagues.

Under God there is no more effectual means of building up and strengthening Christian Character than in the habitual practice of self-denial.

There is no merit in it. It is not to be done as a practice, but it is the glad giving up of a lesser good for a greater. The quiet expression of our love to the Master. Church's burden we have borne.

David set us a good example when he said: "Neither will I offer burnt ocerings unto the Lord of that which cost me nothing."

No, dear friends, here is an opportunity for us to prove the sincerity of our love to our Church, and our sympathy with those who have borne the weight of this responsibility.

Let us do it cheerfully and without letting our left hands know what our right hands are doing.—Presbyterian Standard.

"If you wish to do the best possible thing for your sermon, have it followed by an appropriate hymn and an earnest prayer."

—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the pure food champion, who was formerly chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, has received an offer to become chairman of the Boston Board of Health at a salary of $7,500 a year.

—After a bitter and hard fought campaign the entire Citizens' ticket, including Judge Ben B. Lindsey, won the election in Denver last week, against the combined forces of the Democratic and Republican city organizations, by a plurality of 20,000.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly, in session last week struck the name of Secretary Wilson of the Agricultural Department at Washington from the list of delegates to the Pan Presbyterian Council, to be held in Aberdeen, Scotland, because he accepted last summer a vice presidency of the Brewers' Congress at Chicago.

—The first prize, $87,500, for a design for a federal capital site for Australia, has been awarded to an American, Walter B. Griffin, of Chicago. The new city is to be located in what is now a wilderneess at Canberra, New South Wales. The plan is of the radial type, similar to that of Washington.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for next week, Psalms 108-115.

David's prayers for vengeance on his enemies have occasioned surprise and difficulty. Alexander Maclaren says: "The attempts to attenuate the difficulty, either by making out that the wishes are not wishes, but prophecies of the fate of evildoers, or that the whole is a Messianic prediction of the fate of Judas or of the enemies of Christ, are too obviously makeshifts. It is far better to recognize the discordance between the temper of the psalmist and that enjoined by Christ than to try to cover it over. * * Divine retribution for evil was the truth of the Old Testament as forgiveness is that of the New." Mr. Maclaren regards the maledictory psalms as expressing righteous indignation and not personal malice.

From Pastors and People.

Yadkin College.

In our last week's write-up of the commencement exercises we regret having omitted one of the most important features of the day. For several years the forenoon of that day has been given almost exclusively to contestants for the Walser medal, which is also generally known to be given by the Walser brothers of Lexington, in honor of their grandfather, Mr. Henry Walser, who founded the college about fifty years ago and whose picture occupies a conspicuous place on the rostrum on that occasion. Vance Stockard Garrett, son of Rev. J. N. Garrett, was the successful contestant this year, making the fourth great grand son of Mr. Henry Walser who has won this honor.

Rev. Mr. Garrett is very despondent over his slow recovery and earnestly desires the prayers of friends and brethren of the Conference.

We gladly welcome home our young M. P. girls and boys, from their respective institutions of learning. Miss Kate Lee Owen was the first to arrive, having graduated with distinction at the State Normal, Miss Lucy Belle Totten, of G. F. C., Greensboro, also returned on that day. She leaves this week to attend the Y. W. C. A. conference which convenes at Black Mountain, Wednesday, 5th.

Sammie Hartley, from the University, arrived Saturday P. M. Frank Owen, Roland Totten, who stayed for commencement, are expected home this week.

Our Sunday school is getting on nicely under the supervision of Mr. M. F. Phillips. The Easter service was much enjoyed and was a source of pleasure as well as profit. Haven't fully decided on the date for Children's Day service yet, but we expect to have a good one all right.

We are all much pleased with our pastor's new wife and wish for them a long and happy voyage through life.

Lincolnton.

Dear Editor:

Allow me space for our May S. S. report, which was: 1st Sunday, attendance, 61, col. $2.22; 2nd Sunday, attendance, 94, col., $2.48; 3rd Sunday, attendance, 118, col., $3.75; 4th Sunday, attendance, 91, col., $2.70.

The interest in S. S. is splendid which the good collections will show. We have had our examination on the next ten lessons on Teacher Training, which was above the usual, the lowest being 88.

We are preparing to have Children's Day about the 5th Sunday in June if we can get ready. Bros. Elmore and Hoke have their nice 8-room dwellings on lots adjoining church property almost complete and have moved in, and are helping out in the church work.

Success to the Herald and its many readers.

D. B. J.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.

We began our special meeting Sunday, May 19th, and closed Monday night, May 27th, Bro. D. A. Braswell came to us Monday night of the 20th, and remained with us till the close. He did some as earnest and faithful preaching as I have ever heard. We had a good meeting; 8 joined the church and several were reclaimed and the church greatly revived.

Bro. Braswell made many friends while here. It was indeed a treat to our people to have him with us. The days with the pastor, in this his first meeting, were full of rich and pleasant experiences. We were sorry when he had to leave, but he made us glad when he told us that he would come and spend another week with us in October.

J. B. O'Briant.

June 3rd, 1912.

Rehoboth, Granville Ct.

There were many things to make us glad yesterday—the bright day, the full attendance at Sunday school and church, the orphans' collection, the interesting Sunday school lesson and the good sermon. We always think Mr. Bethea's sermons are good, and yesterday his sermon on prayer was one of the best he has ever given us. It was a special service for the old people, but the sermon was equally helpful to the young. We have an "old folks' day" once a year and make it a point to invite those who are not regular attendants at church. The old hymns are used and enjoyed. The Orphanage collection amounted to about $3.70. Our Children's Day service will be the fifth Sunday afternoon. The songs and recitations are all good and everybody is interested in it. We hope to have Rev. J. D. Wilkes to address us at that service.

Our special meeting begins the second Sunday in July. We will be glad to have Mr. Gerringer with us again. We like his earnestness in revival meetings. There is much work for us to do that week and we expect a great revival.

Nathaniel Bethea broke his leg last week and it was almost a serious accident. He was unconcious for some time. Dr. Harris thinks he will be all right in a few weeks.

We are trying to organize a County S. S. Association in Granville. Our township convention will be July 6th and then is the time we want to organize. Mr. Bethea promises to help us, and too, we hope to have Mr. Long, the State secretary with us. This is certainly a broad field for work of this kind and we are going at it with the intention of making it a success. It is interesting to read about the General Conference and to hear the delegates talk about it. Mr. Bethea promises to tell us more about it.

Hattie Harris.

June 3, 1912.

Winston.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

As this writer is the newly appointed reporter for our Winston church, our graceful predecessor having resigned in consequence of having arduous duties in other directions, we take this first opportunity of giving you a brief record of our present movements, etc.

Our church trustees are still making haste slowly as regards the remodeling of our present edifice, but at their last meeting a few evenings ago, plans for the work were submitted to a committee and bids for the same to be solicited and then the bids shown to trustees for approval or not as the case may be.

Our church services are interesting and inspiring. Our pastor labors to and succeeds in giving us most excellent sermons full of deep thought, and shining out clear and distinct is his earnest desire to glorify God in all he says or does. This fact alone would make any minister of the gospel a success. Our music is fine. Our congregations fairly good, a number of young men attending most of the services and giving devout attention to the Word. Bro. Taylor and his good wife visit a great deal and minister in many ways to the sick, the poor, and the afflicted in our midst, and are just as optimistic as circumstances allow them to be, and they are universally beloved.

Our Aid Society is to be entertained at the handsome new home of Mrs. Hutchins on Patterson Ave next Tuesday evening. We are looking forward with pleasure to that event. Our Aid Society here has always been a grand success.

Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. P. Kennett, Editor.

The General Conference.

For a few numbers of the Postal Card we shall write chiefly of the General Conference.

En Route.

At 12:48 A. M., May 17th, in ompany with Revs. T. J. Ogburn and George W. Holmes, we left Greensboro, for the city of Baltimore, the seat of the General Conference. Our first effort was to get a little sleep, on the train, in which Bro. Ogburn succeeded admirably, but in which Bro. Holmes and I failed signally.

When the morning dawned we were beyond Lynchburg, and rain having fallen during the night, the hills, mountains and green fields, with herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, together with here and there a beautiful country home, on some elevated place and numerous smaller homes dotting the hills and valleys, presented to the eye a very entrancing view.

The further we traveled the more fertile and highly improved the land appeared to be, until finally we came in sight of the nation's capital. The first indication of our near approach to the city, was Arlington Heights far to our left, beyond the Potomac and high up on the mountain side. On the dome of the main building the flag of the United States floated in the morning breeze. Presently we seemed to turn to the right, and were running almost along-side of the Potomac, with the city in full view. The morning mists from the river had not all been dissipated, and there glistened upon the buildings, the monuments, the beautiful parks, the almost innumerable lines of electric wires a morning freshness that was beautiful to behold. The old adage came to my mind: "God made the country, man made the town," and usually it is added, "God's job is best." However I am not sure but a combination of art and nature is more beautiful than either separately, at any rate the city was beautiful beyond comparison that morning.

At Washington we had only time to change cars, and in about one hour we had made the run, and were in the Union depot in Baltimore. Boarding a St. Paul street car, we soon arrived at the Conference room, and listened to a strong sermon—the opening sermon by Rev. A. L. Reynolds, D. D., of Ohio.

(To be continued.)

Philadelphia, Greensville Ct.

Dear Herald Readers:

I will attempt to say a few words for our Lord and His work. I am so glad that He has been so faithful to us in our religious work, and wish He could be with more of us. Hope in the future that He can say we have fought a good fight, come up higher. We were sorry it was necessary for our pastor to be away yesterday. But as he was called away, he asked Bro. William Allen to fill his appointment. He gave us a very interesting talk which seemed to be enjoyed by all. We are always glad to have Bro. Allen with us in our church and homes. We hope it will be so that he can be with us in our meeting this summer.

We are moving on very nicely with our S. S., and are also planning to hold Children's Day service in the near future. May God help us with our work. Next Sunday, after school, we will hold prayer service, which we do every second and fourth Sunday. We will ask as many as can and will to come out and take a part with us. I'm sure it will do all good.

Mr. W. A. Rawlings, one of our last year officers who has been ill for some time, departed this life last Wednesday afternoon. He had been faithful in his church and many other good works during the past. He was a member of the M. E. Church and had been for several years. He leaves a loving wife, three children, a sister, a brother and many others to mourn their loss. I will close with best wishes to the Herald readers.

Yours in His name,

Beatrice Chambliss.

Reidsville Church.

Well, we are arranging to begin to build soon. Several times the way was dark and very discouraging, and one of our darkest hours I received a 'phone message from Bro. Geo. S. Kernodle saying to hold till he saw me. The Lord had laid his hand upon Him and I stopped to see him and his good wife, and to my delight he said, You shall have a chure. in Reidsville. He said, Go on and do all you can and I will round it up. He and his wife said we do not want any debt left on the church. So now we have arranged to commence as soon as the material comes. Bro. Geo. S. Kernodle, Bro. Geo. Williams and our foreman, met yesterday and decided where we would place the church. We are praising the Lord for His wonderful love, and are thanking all for their interest. Now if you have promised any help or want any hand in our church in Reidsville, let it come. Since Bro. Kernodle and wife have said "so much," we feel that we want to do even more, and I am glad to say many are like me in this. If you have promised any thing to the church it was a promise to the Lord. It is bad to promise man, but awful to promise the Lord and fail. We intend to push it to completion and dedicate it in the next few months. Let your donation come, or you will be too late, and lose your blessing. Please do not wait for a personal appeal. It will be acknowledged through the Methodist Protestant Herald. I want to thank the Lord and all who have held my hands up and who are going to do it till it is done, and then on.

At the funeral Sunday or before we left the house a good sister said: "Really, are you going to build in Reidsville?" I said "Yes." She said, "Please ask my pastor for my certificate at once, I want to join."

We want any amount from 5 cents up; we want many to have a part in it.

One more thing: we have a beautiful location, good residence section and on one main St., and close to N. & S. main—and close in. Please pray for me. The mental and physical strain has been great. I am so glad of the help Bro. Kernodle, Bro. Geo. Williams, Bro. John Hutchinson, Bro. Dave Carrell, Mr. Rube McCollum, Mr. Alex Sands, Bro. Thompson, Bro. June McCollum, Bro. Fletcher Hutcherson, Bro. Lewellyn Summers, Bro. Tom Wray, Bro. James Turner, Bro. Pegram, Bro. Clarence Butler and others, and many faithful good women for their interest and support. Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

Burlington.

As there has been no report from Burlington in the Herald for quite a while, I will endeavor to make a report, telling of some of the happenings in our church and Sunday school. Many things have happened since the last report was made, but I will mention only a few items which I trust will be interesting to the readrs of the Herald.

Last Sunday we had 201 in Sunday school and the offering amounted to $3.27.

We are glad to report that the work on our annex is progressing nicely, the foundation having been laid, and it is honed that the addition will be completed and ready to occupy within two months.

Rev. R. M. Andrews, our able Superintendent of the Sunday school, was absent from us last Sunday. He preached at North Main Street M. P. Church in High Point in the absence of their pastor, Rev. A. G. Dixon, who is assisting Rev. G. L. Curry in a series of meetings at Graham.

We were glad to have visitors from High Point in our Sunday school and preaching service Sunday morning. We were also pleased to have with us Bro. B. M. Cates, of Florida. Bro. Cates was one of the charter members of the Methodist Protestant Church in Burlington.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer, who is spending the summer at his home near Ossipee, was a pleasant visitor in our town last Friday.

Some of our people have been attending the special series of meetings at the Methodist Protestant church in Graham, which have been in progress for several days. Bro. Davis, our pastor, preached for Bro. Curry on Monday night of last week.

Miss Mabel Harris, of Henderson, is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

Mrs. C. R. Way and little daughters, Thelma and Sadie, left Saturday for an extended visit with relatives in Greensboro and Randolph County.

Bros. J. E. Moore and R. G. Hornaday are the nominees for delegates to represent our church at the next Annual Conference.

On last Thurs. our church was saddened by the news of the death of our faithful member, Brother Alex Johnson. Bro. Johnson had been in failing health for some time, and after all medical aid and human hands could do failed, he was called from earth to reward. The funeral was conducted by Bro. Davis, and the remains were laid to rest in the City cemetery. The deceased brother leaves a wife and several children. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

President Swain is expected to visit our church on next Thursday night, June 13th. C. B. W.

June 5th, 1912.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Last Sunday report as follows: total enrolled, 109; total present, 52; total collections, $1.39.

Distributed Children's Day Literature last Sunday. Expected to be had some time during this month.

Are pleased to have attend our S. S. now, and perhaps will attend for two or three Sundays yet, Mr. John C. Cruikshank, Manager Engineers Camp, who are surveying and locating the Eastern Carolina R. R. from Castalia to Henderson. Also others of the camp.

Wish to mention the collection of Class No. 4, taught by Miss Gladys Faris. Are collecting more than any other two of the school. W. Polk Garrett.

June 4, 1912.

Welch Memorial, High Point.

Our special meeting closed last Sunday night, June 2nd. Rev. Mr. Moton labored faithfully with us to the close; he preached with power, declaring the whole counsel, and his efforts were blessed with many newborn souls. There were 39 conversions and reclamations. There were 19 accessions to our church and there are more to join later; the church was greatly revived and the Christians did good work, and it made our hearts sad to have to close it with so many yet unsaved that seemed to be interested, but Bro. Moton was worn out and our pastor was engaged to East Winston this week.

The Piedmont Total Abstinence Union met at our church last Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. Rev. Enos Harvey made a splendid talk on strong drink.

Mrs. D. G. Hiatt, Reporter.

High Point, N. C., June 4, 1912.

Rose Hill, Monroe Ct.

On account of an epidemic of measles throughout our town and community, our Sunday school has been somewhat poorly attended, but it has now livened up to a certain extent. Our pastor filled his regular appointment the third Sunday and preached a very forceful sermon.

Rev. J. W. Quick preached his first sermon at Rose Hill Sunday to a large and attentive congregation. Subject, "The prodigal son's return." It seems that Bro. Quick knew just what we needed. May the Lord bless him in his work and that he may be a God's light on earth in saving lost souls. May he never get discouraged, but keep in view his future reward if he is faithful to God's bidding.

We are going to organize a C. E. Society on Saturday night before the third Sunday in this month. Let all be present that can and especially the young boys and girls.

With much love to the readers.

Robert Turner.

Pine Grove, Oak Ridge Ct.

The second quarterly conference met at this place June 1, 1912. The attendance was good. Bro. Swain preached at eleven o'clock A. M. and after service they had a sumptuous dinner, which was appreciated by every one present. Afternoon, Prof Holt reported from the Baltimore Conference, which we all were glad to hear from, and we had with us also Bro. Taylor, and he gave us a lecture on Sunday school work. His speech was appreciated very much and then they the quarterly conference was afterwards.

Our Sunday school is still growing and we hope it will continue to do so.

Mr. Benn Fipps is intending to teach a singing school at this church, and therefore we expect a great interest in our music. This of course determines in a large measure the life of a service. We hope all that can will attend.

We were glad to have with us again on Sunday Bro. Swain; he preached an excellent sermon at 3 P. M.

Mrs. Fitts died at her home near Kernersville, N. C., May 15th, 1912, aged 80 years, 11 months, 13 days. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, in Pine Grove Church May 16, 1912. She was a member of the M. P. Church at Kernersville. She was a faithful Christian, and loved by all who knew her.

She was a great sufferer for some time but she bore it all patiently. On the 15th her relief came to her. God called her spirit home. A large concourse of people gathered at Pine Grove where she was laid to rest. May the grace of God that sustained this dear sister in sickness and in death sustain the loved ones, for we all will some day go to the silent city of the dead never to return.

Mary Cook.

Friendship, Stanly Ct.

We held our children's day service last Sunday and everything went along nicely. The children acted their parts well, which showed that they had been trained by competent persons and the collection was twenty-one dollars and eighty-three cents. Our pastor, Mr. Reynolds, made us a short talk on mission work. Our Sunday school is moving on nicely. We had 91 scholars present Sunday; collection, 46 cents. The members of our church have decided to get gas light, which will be a great help. Miss Anna Mason is improving, but slowly.

Our special meeting begins the first Sunday in August. We hope to hear from our class leaders soon. Mr. Martin Furr was with us Sunday. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Reporter.

Rockingham.

The fourth Sunday in May we began our protracted meeting at PeeDee, continuing eight days, with Bro. L. H. Hatley as help. The battle was a hard one, many adverse circumstances and conditions, both in and out of the church to be overcome. Eight professions and six additions are part of the results. The church members who attended seemed to be much encouraged. We hope effects will be abiding. The best meeting at Pee Dee in quite a while. All were delighted with Bro. Hatley and his preaching. Pray for Pee Dee, as it is having a struggle. More at another time. J. F. Dosier.

Half the men and women who complain of sleeplessness have done nothing to entitle them to the use of "Nature's sweet restorer."

And about the fly nuisance.. Are you taking any sort of practical interest in its suppression? If not, why not?

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

The editor is requested to publish again the entire list of assessments for expenses of delegates to General Conference both as an acknowledgment to those who have paid and as a reminder to those who have not. The entire amount is not sufficient to reimburse those who went, to say nothing about their time. We trust that all may be paid in soon, so that I may make a division among those who went as delegates. Each delegate will please send me a statement of his expenses for railroad tickets. Pullman fares and cost of meals are not to be included.

	Due	Paid
Alamance	10.00	9.13
Albemarle	2.00
Anderson	3.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Burlington	8.00	8.00
Caroleen	3.00
Cleveland	11.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Davidson	6.00	4.25
Denton	2.00	2.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Forsyth	7.00	7.00
Gaston	2.00
Gilburg	1.00	1.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Greensboro	14.00	14.00
Greensville	5.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	8.00
Haw River	9.00	9.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
Ivy	3.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Liberty	10.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Littleton	10.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Mecklenburg	3.00
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Monroe	3.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Oak Ridge	10.00	9.40
Orange	3.00	3.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	7.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Richland	10.00
Roanoke	10.00
Rockingham	2.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Spring Church	5.00
Stanley	9.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Thomasville	3.00	1.00
Uwharrie	3.00
Vance	8.00	6.82
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Yarborough	5.00

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

A BITTER WARNING.

The American public has been horrified at the spectacle of a prominent young clergyman, the pastor of a large city church, being executed as a murderer. Clarence V. T. Richeson paid the penalty on May 20 at Boston for the crime of killing a young woman who supposed that he was engaged to marry her. Of all the distressing thoughts which crowd upon the mind in the presence of such an utter wreck of what should and might have been a useful life, none is stronger and more insistent that the regret that a successful and influential church should have been so negligent as to engage as its pastor a man who had already left behind a trail of dishonor.

The present seems to be an occasion in which the utmost frankness of speech is not only permissible but obligatory. The whole church of Christ has suffered reproach. And it is to be earnestly hoped that out of the horror of this wretched episode there may come an added carefulness on the part of all churches, denominations and religious leaders, in allowing men to take up or continue the sacred work of preaching the Gospel. It must be remembered that eloquence and a plausible manner, and often what seems like religious fervor, cannot be trusted as proofs that the man who has all these gifts is sincere. A minister's whole career should be a matter of open history, and no church should trust its spiritual welfare and victories to any man before looking up in closest detail the facts of his character and conduct. Neglect on the part of church officials to inspect the lives of clergymen and evangelists, failure to insist that spiritual leaders be men of real spirituality and the highest honor, may result, as it has resulted here, in irremediable disaster.—Christian Herald.

—Mis Virla Coble, of Liberty, has gone to the mountains for a few weeks' rest.

—We were pleased to have Prof and Mrs. Cox (formerly Miss Nora Coble) in our congregation at Grace Church last Sunday morning.

—Margaret Elizabeth Sangster, poet and author, died this week, aged 74.

—S. A. Blackburn, flagman, was killed by an overhead bridge near Lynchburg.

—"Pure Food" Wiley spoke at Trinity College commencement. He was greeted with applause, and caused a laugh by saying he was always grateful for applause at the beginning of a speech, for he might not have any at the end. He told the young graduates not to think the world is waiting to honor them. He said the greatest handicap that can assail a young graduate starting out in the world is that of wealth. He emphasized good character as the first thing to be aimed at. He favored woman suffrage, but added that woman's first place is in the home.

—U. S. Senator Nixon, of Nevada, died of spinal meningitis in Washington, aged 52.

—Give the toads a chance. They are great insect destroyers and are said to be worth $5.00 a piece. Don't kill them, but let them live and multiply.

—The attitude of the Roman Catholic Church toward woman suffrage has been laid down definitely and unmistakably by Father Matthew A. Taylor, priest of a leading Catholic church in New York, who dismissed Miss Aimee Hutchinson, a teacher-clerk in the parochial school of the church, because she marched in the recent woman suffrage parade. In dismissing her (according to Miss Hutchinson's own statement in the New York Times), he said: "The woman suffrage movement is the next thing to Socialism and I cannot countenance it." His course in the matter has caused a great stir in suffrage circles, the leaders of which regard Miss Hutchinson as their "first martyr" for the cause. They characterize the priest's course as carrying the religion of Rome into politics with a vengeance.

—Our entire church should appreciate the important part Rev. and Mrs. Geo. S. Kernodle are taking in planting our cause in Reidsville. When others were about to despair, they came forward and said, Go ahead, we will see you through. This infused new courage, and now Bro. Raper is able to announce that the church is to be built very soon. Three cheers for Bro. and Sister Kernodle!

During the summer months, especially, we should drink an abundance of water. Many people make the mistake of drinking too little water at all times. But in warm weather more water is needed to keep body functions properly working and to maintain physical health and vigor.

Now is the time to suit your diet to the season. From now on until the coming cold weather you will need less meats and rich gravies and can make larger use of fruits and vegetables.

A Double Burial.

How shocking! How sad! How sudden!

Bro. Pinkney Summers died June 1st, 1912, aged 71 years, 3 months and 22 days. Sister Julia F. Summers died June 1st, 1912, aged 70 years, 8 months and 28 days. They were married Sept. 1st, 1868. They lived together as man and wife 43 years and 9 months. Sister Summers was a Stewart before she married. She was taken with quick pneumonia last Monday. She has been in failing health for some years and her constitution was not sufficient for the late attack and about 10:00 P. M., June the 1st, she went to the spirit land. She had been a consistent member of the Methodist Protestant Church since a youth. When they told her companion his faithful wife was dead, he knelt by her bed, and he was ripe for the grave, and the shock was too great for him and the good Lord let him go with her about two hours later. He joined the M. P. Church also about 30 years ago. They loved their church, were faithful to her. Seldom did they miss going, and only when one or both were unable to go. They were good neighbors. They leave to mourn their loss: Nannie Carrell, Maggie Richardson, J. P. Summers, Charlie Summers, Louallen Summers, several grandchildren and I feel especial mention should be made of the two, Robert Turner and sister, Bessie, whose mother died while they were young, and they have remained with them till death has dissolved the home. Let us say to all that read this, keep yourself in readiness, for the Master calls at an unexpected hour. Bro. Summers was in Reidsville Sat. in usual health—before midnight he and his wife both were dead. Who will be next? No telling.

Pall-bearers for Bro. Summers, oldest men: A. J. Jones, Alex Troxler, Fletcher Stallings, J. M. Beville, J. M. McIntyre, William Diamond.

Sister Summers: J. M. Jones, Horace Jones, E. H. Matherson, Steve Ware, Rube McCollum, Tom Amis.

Flower bearers: E. M. Redd, Willie McCollum, J. C. Turner, Crawford Huffines, R. P. Richardson, Harvey Hill, John Wheeler, W. A. Marlen and Onnie Milloway. There was one of the largest congregations ever seen at Mispah. They were laid side by side to await the trumpet sound. Funeral by their pastor, Rev. C. E. M. Raper.

Mrs. Fitts.

By the request of her sister, Miss Bettie Satterfield, I will write in remembrance of her. I never knew her in her young days, but have known her for the last 40 years. My nearest neighbor except seven years. She and her husband bought property in Kernersville and moved there for seven years, then came back to their old home some twenty-three years ago. May 16, her spirit took its flight to the One who gave it.

She lived to a good old age, just a few years of eighty.

Sister Fitts professed faith in Christ near forty years ago, joind the church at Pine Grove until they moved to Kernersville, then moved her membership there to the M. P. Church, where she remained a faithful member until death. To know her was to love her; leading a Christian life, loyal to her church, a good neighbor. How we shall miss her! She leaves one half-sister, Miss Bettie Satterfield, four half brothers, an aged husband, to mourn their loss.

One Who Loved Her.

Hattie Hinshaw departed this life May 23rd, 1912, aged 17 years, 10 months, and 18 days. Funeral services were held in Mt. Lebanon church May 25th, conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. D. A. Braswell. Hattie joined the M. P. Church at about 12 years of age, she and her elder sister joining at the same time. The latter preceded her to the glory world about 5 years ago. She had been sick all of this year. Her pastor visited her soon after coming to this work and found her very poor in health. We were quite sure that she could not be here long. We questioned her about her relations to God and found out that she was resting in faith in her Saviour.

Hattie was a girl of sweet disposition and was loved by all who knew her, especially by her girl associates. She leaves a father and three brothers. To these we feel impressed to say, let Hattie's God be your God. J. B. O,Briant.

June 3rd, 1912.

Solomon Trogdon Redding died May 22, 1912, aged 84 years, 5 months and 11 days. He was converted and joined the M. P. Church at Redding School House, now known as Charlotte Church. Later he joined at Gray's Chapel where he remained a member until the founding of Bethany Church of which he was one of the founders. He was a trustee from the founding of Bethany church until his death. He leaves his wife, who is ripe for heaven. They walked side by side for more than 60 years in this life and seemed always to be perfectly happy together. He also leaves one son, Joe Redding, two daughters, (Mrs. Jesse Julian and Mrs. Rena Hinshaw) all living in or about Millboro, N. C. Following these there are 23 grand children and 7 great grand children.

It was the writer's pleasure to visit Bro. Redding one time in his home. We found him to be a man of strong Christian character. One who did not worry over trivial things, saw and enjoyed only the best there is in life. He commanded the love and respect of his fellowmen. His life was worthy of example. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in Bethany Church, May 23rd, and his body was laid to rest to await the summons from above. Bethany Church has lost one of its oldest and best members. the community a good citizen. The bereaved ones will miss him most of all, as he was a faithful husband, a loving father, and a very affectionate grand father. Grandma, do not grieve. It will not be long. Today we weep, but soon we shall rejoice with him in the glory world.

J. B. O'Briant.

June 3rd, 1912.

Allen-Easter.

Mr. Elisha Allen and Miss Addie Easter, both of Davidson County, were married on the afternoon of June 1st, at the residence of H. L. Powell, Rev. H. L. Powell officiating. Miss Addie is a loyal member of Lexington Methodist Protestant Church. She is a most excellent young lady. We anticipate for them a joyous passage down the stream of life. They will make their home in Lexington, N. C. Mrs. H. L. Powell.

Lexington, N. C., June 5, 1912.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 13.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the death of Rev. S. Simpson. Bro. Simpson was a member of the Brotherhood, and the books show that he met every call of the Brotherhood. The members of the Brotherhood are due three dollars each within sixty days of date of this notice.

J. A. Burgess, Secc.-Treas.

—Sidna Allen was called in court here on Monday, to be tried for perjury. He did not respond. Request will be made that the forfeited $5,000 be added to the reward for Allen's capture.

—No man ever made so much money out of a business that he knows so little about on the witness stand as Mr. Rockefeller.—Balto. Sun.

—Dr. F. R. Harris visited General Conference for a day or two.

—Bro. W. P. Pickett took his son to Baltimore for examination and attended part of the General Conference.

PROSPERITY EARNED BY GIVING.

Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Buffalo, New York, and formerly President of Union College, tells of an experience of his early ministry which emphasizes the value of sound principles of church finance.

On leaving the seminary, he became pastor of one of the old churches of New Jersey. A little later he was married, and soon afterwards he and his wife decided to offer themselves for foreign missionary service. On consulting with the board he was told that there was no chance of his being sent then, as there were so many other applications ahead; it was suggested that while waiting he might take charge of a new home missionary enterprise in New Jersey. This he did resigning his pastorate for the purpose. Going to the new field, he found a church already organized with about 60 members. An old church building had been bought, the entire cost of which had been assumed by the Home Mission Board; the furnishings were secured by means of a chattel mortgage; in other words, the new church organization was in possession of property for which it had not paid one dollar. It had assumed obligations of $1,500 for sexton, organist, choir, coal, etc., over and above what it would be necessary for them to pay for pastor's salary. To meet these obligations, the only provision made was from pew rentals, amounting to $500, the balance to be made up by renting the church building for concerts, various entertainments and by a large fair which the people were planning to hold

When the new pastor and his wife understood the situation, they felt that a great deal depended upon their action. If this was to be a true Church of Christ, it should be based upon truly Christian principles. After prayerful consideration, a meeting of the officers was called and the proposition submitted, that if the would pass a resolution refusing to authorize or sanction any fairs or festivals, for the purpose of raising money for the church, the pastor would agree to receive whatever might be left over, after all their expenses were paid, provided an offering should be made monthly for the benevolent and missionary work, commencing with foreign missions the next month. The officers considered this suicidal and laughed at the idea of giving for foreign missions, when the church had no money for itself. They, however, at length yielded to the firm position of the pastor. "Imagine my surprise," he writes, "as well as that of others to find over $125 on the plate at the first offering." After explaining the whole situation from the pulpit and announcing the result of the officers refusing the authorizing of fairs, festivals, etc., there was an immediate response, far exceeding expectation. Within one week $1,000 had been offered voluntarily by people not belonging to the congregation, while others took pews and gave pledges for church support. At the end of the year, all bills had been paid, the pastor received $2,500 salary, and the chattel mortgage of $2,500 had been lifted. The contributions of the church to missions and to local philanthropic causes were generous—between $1,000 and $2,000. The church became self-supporting within a year, became an aggressive force in that community and the world, just because Christian principles were applied from the outset.

This church has been steadily and increasingly prosperous since that time and it now maintains a large number of missionaries at home and abroad.—Men and Missions.

A LEAF FROM EXPERIENCE.

By Sai Saito, Yokohama, Japan.

One day I heard one of the missionaries say that some one in America had asked, "How are the Japanese children taught to worship their gods?" In answer to this, I will write some of the things that I experienced in my youth.

I am sure there are some parents who teach their children to worship their gods, but many of the children are influenced more by their actions. I am one who received training from my parents' influence. When I was a very little girl, I saw my father and mother worshipping every day before the family Buddhist shrine, and I thought I would worship, too, as they did. My elder brother and sister did not care at all for doing such things, although of course they were taught not to be impolite before the shrine.

Every morning, when I got up, I washed my hands and face clean. Then going before the shrine in my house, I sat down nicely, clasping my little hands, and made bows only, not knowing how to pray.

I also noticed that mother offered the sacred fire and food every morning, before we ate our breakfast. There were two rice bowls and one teacup, specially made for the family shrine, in which she offered the food every morning, taking it away after we had our own. Then she put out the light carefully, with a fan, and never used her mouth-wind for fear of defiling the light.

Whenever we had some new fruits or canes, mother never allowed us to eat them before they had been offered to the shrine. If there were only a few, we children had to wait until the offerings were taken away and given to us.

There were offerings to our ancestors as well as to Buddha. There was a register of the dead members of the family in the shrine. It had in it the dates from the first to the last day of the month. Turning it over every morning, we could not forget the days of ourr ancestors' deaths, and on those days we always made some entertainment which pleased them, but never used for the feast any flesh of animals, birds or fish.

It is believed that anybody who dies righteously will become a Buddha, so we treated the dead ones very carefully and respectfully. I am glad now to see them treat dead ones that way, because I think it shows that we have some hope of a future life, and are not like beasts and insects.

I think you have already heard that the Japanese believe that there are eight millions of gods. That shows how great a number we have to serve, but they are not all worshipped at home. There are two gods at least, that are worshipped at every home. One is Daijin gu, the ancestor of our emperor, and the other is either the Buddhist or the Shinto shrine. In one or the others of these are the names of our ancestors, according to the family religion.

Every child, from babyhood, has charms in a beautiful little bag called mamori ginchaku, which is hung around the sash, so that he will not be hurt or injured.

For the school children, there is the god Tenjin, whose name was Sugawara Michizane. He was made a god because he had been a learned, righteous and diligent man in the service of an emperor. If we want to be learned we must worship this god. Older girls also have a guardian god in their obi-age (sash holder), so you see we have always gods with us, wherever we go.

I am glad that Christianity, which was imported from your country, has had a great influence over us, so that many of the Japanese, though not yet Christians, are getting very much like Christians in their thoughts and actions.

One day in school, when I was a very little girl it happened that some one lost a block of ink, such as we use for our writing. Suspicion fell upon us all. Then the teacher said, "Well, I will see about it. I have a paper amulet and I am going to let you all swallow a little piece of it, so that I may know who has stolen the ink. On those who did not steal, it will have no effect; but the one who did will vomit blood."

Oh, how frightened we were! But on hearing the condition, I felt easy. Then the teacher brought a cup of water in one hand and the amulet in the other. As soon as he came, one child began to cry frightfully, and handed him the hard ink block, which was hidden somewhere in his sleeve.

Thus we ignorantly feared and obeyed gods and charms in former times. I see at present a great difference in human hearts. Advancement of education has made most people fearless, and they have accordingly become wayward. Many educators try to lead their pupils to good by telling them of the virtue of His Majesty, but they cannot see any good result from it. I have heard many people say that the minister of education is very anxious to lead the students to faith in the gods so that they will have high motives to be true men and women. So, using this opportunity many priests and Shintoists have lately begun to work more earnestly to spread their teaching.

But only God, who is the Maker of the universe and the Father of all humanity, can make us true men and women through his Son, Jesus Christ.—Woman's Missionary Friend.

THE OWL'S ADVICE.

"What a disagreeable day!" asserted the Butterfly, as it rested with its wings flattened together upon a rose-leaf.

"Yes," agreed Miss Honey Bee, "although I am always busy, and used to working in all kinds of weather, I confess that I like a sunny day best."

"But rain is good for worms," broke in Robin Redbreast, who had just pulled up a fat, juicy one from the lawn. "On a dry, sunny day I might have worked an hour, and then only have secured a thin, stringy one that was hardly worth pulling up."

"The Robin is right," croaked a Toad, that was flattened upon the ground cooling itself in the moist earth. "I have to build myself a hiding-place when it is hot and dry, or else back down into the ground. I think a rainy day is delightful!"

"Well, I guess you wouldn't think so if you had wings and the rain glued them together as it does mine," grumbled the Butterfly.

"I confess that I cannot fly as well on a rainy day," conceded the Robin, "but I get a nice bath without the trouble of hunting for a bathing tub."

"Yes, the rain pounds my back considerably, but it washes the dust off and gives me a good appearance when it clears off," the Toad admitted.

Just then an Owl with a loud hoot joined in the discussion. He was perched in a tree overhead and had been an attentive listener.

"People call me wise!" he cried out, with a flap of his wings to secure attention, "I have always noticed that it takes two kinds of folks to make a world—the satisfied and the dissatisfied; and I have always observed that what is good for some is just the opposite for others, and that what some folks enjoy others dislike. I have also noticed that those persons who try to make the best of their surroundings are the happiest."

After this somewhat lengthy speech the Owl was silent, and nothing could again induce him to join the conversation.

"Perhaps if I were to try very hard I might be able to separate my wings," the Butterfly averred; and in a few minutes she had settled upon another bush, and in making the attempt had discovered that her wings were not as helpless as she had imagined them to be.

Miss Honey Bee, also, made a tour of the garden, and in so doing found out that flowers are sweeter when rain-washed. So all agreed to follow the Owl's advice and try to cultivate a spirit of contentment.—Helen M. Richardson, in Zion's Herald.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The Tenth Southern Conference will be held on the new property of the Blue Ridge Association for Christian Conference and Training, near Black Mountain, North Carolina, sixteen miles east of Asheville. (Railway station is Black Mountain, North Carolina; post-office, telegraph, and telephone office is Blue Ridge Association, Black Mountain, North Carolina.)

This is the opening season of this magnificent property and signalizes a permanent home for the Blue Ridge Conference.

The dates are June 25 to July 4.

Correspondence should be addressed to the Secretary of your denominational mission board or to the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Expenses.

On receipt of the application blank, further information will be given if desired.

An enrolment fee of $5.00 is required of each delegate to help defray the program expenses of the conference.

The cost of room and board is as follows:

One in a room	$20.00
Two in a room	15.00
Three in a room	12.50

If persons desire special accommodations, these can usually be arranged at a slightly advanced price.

Delegates remaining less than the conference period will be required to pay 50 cents per day above the conference rate.

As far as possible, all rooms are assigned in accordance with the desire of delegates, but no reservations are made until the enrolment fee is received.

To register as a delegate, fill out the application form and send at once with the enrolment fee of $5.00. In every case make this fee payable to the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, and send in a New York postal order or draft. If personal checks on banks out of New York are sent, please add ten cents for exchange. Send fee at once.

Reduced rates on the Southern Railway.

A PRAYER.

__ __ __ __ (With variations)

Beside the dead I knelt for prayer,
And felt a presence as I prayed.
Lo, it was Jesus standing there,
He smiled and said,
"Be not afraid."

"Lord, thou hast conquered death we know,
Restore again to life," I said.
"The one who died an hour ago,"
He smiled and said,
"She is not dead."

"Asleep, then, as Thyself did say,
Yet thou canst lift the lids that keep
Her prisoned eyes from ours away,"
He smiled and said,
"She does not sleep."

"Nay, then, though haply she do wake
And look upon some fairer dawn,
Restore her to our hearts that ache!"
He smiled and said,
"She is not gone."

"Alas! too well we know our loss,
Nor hope again our joys to touch,
Until the stream of death we cross."
He smiled and said,
"There is no such."

"Yet our beloved seem so far,
The while we yearn to feel them near,
And so with Thee we trust they are."
He smiled and said,
"Lo, I am here."

"Dear Lord, how shall we know that they Still walk unseen with us and Thee,
Nor sleep nor wander far away?"
He smiled and said,
"Abide with Me."

Author not known.
Selected by Victor P. Hammer.

SEVEN TONS OF BIBLES SHIPPED.

About the middle of May the American Bible Society made a shipment from its headquarters at the Bible House, New York City, which is listed among its records for a single day's sending out of the Scriptures. Over seven tons of Bibles were shipped at that time. Thirty-one cases were in the form of unbound sheets, printed in the Zulu language. These were shipped to London, England, where they will be bound and sent on to South Africa for distribution. The remainder of the shipment was destined for Columbia and Brazil. These Bibles were complete in every way and were printed in Spanish and Portuguese. The Society is preparing for work among the sailors who will pass through the Panama Canal. It is already represented in Panama, but will enlarge its work as soon as the canal opens. Through the canal it also plans to do larger Bible work on the west coast of South America.

NEW FLAMELESS FIRE.

Professor W. A. Bone, Liversay professor of coal and gas and fuel industries at Leeds University, told of his discovery of a flameless heating process that will have a marked effect on the industrial and domestic heating plants of the world. After prolonged and painstaking experimentation he announces that he has installed his process of heating in a number of institutions at Leeds, and with complete success. Professor Bone's technical statement amounts briefly to this: that coal gas or vaporized oil applied to a redhot, porous solid under the new method produces an intensely glowing flameless wall of fire which gives a temperature so great that difficulty has been found to discover a material which will stand the heat. Professor Bone figures that about half the gas consumption which has hitherto been necessary to obtain a given temperature will suffice under the new process. He declares that it is the cheapest method of producing steam which has yet been devised. Among the purposes to which the discovery may be aplied is cooking, in which a porous diaphragm can be used; heating in furnaces, the raising of steam in multitubular boilers, and the melting of metals as for instance, newspaper type. As professor Bone is one of the best known and highly respected authorities on the subject in the world, it is likely that his recent discovery will receive the most careful attention. The new process may be in the interest of industrial economy.—Christian Herald.

—Passenger—Why are we so late?

Brakeman— Well, sir, the train in front was behind, and this train was behind before besides.—Punch

—A large woman took the strap in front of the small man. The small man arose with a flourish of politeness. "Take my seat, madam," he said with a bow. "Oh, thank you very much," she replied, and turned toward the seat. Then smiling genially again, she asked: "Which did you get up from?" —San Francisco Chronicle.

—Two great-great-great-grandsons of Thomas Jefferson will be in the Georgia delegation of the Democratic convention at Baltimore. They are J. Randolph Anderson and Hollins N. Randolph.

FIGHTING ONE'S SELF.

(From the Columbus (Ohio) State Journal)

The Bentztown Bard is a philosopher as well as a poet. Here is one of his fugitive stanzas:

When it comes to a fight,
In this world of pelf,
The only real fight
Is the fight with one's self.

The philosophy of this is that there is more in a man's self to fight than there is in anybody else, and if everybody attends to that little conflict and crushes the enmities lurking in and about himself, the general good will be advanced. The more vindictive a man is the more he has to overcome in himself. Just watch and see.

—A very absent-minded professor was busily engaged in solving a scientific problem when the nurse hastily opened the library door and announced a great family event. "The little stranger has arrived, Professor."

"Oh?" said the professor.

"It is a little boy," said the nurse.

"Little boy, little boy," mused the professor. "Well, ask him what he wants."—Woman's Home Companion.

—Al Falfa—Did the cyclone last week damage your barn?

—Timothy Hay—I dunno. I ain't found it yet.

—"What makes you think the baby is going to be a great politician?" asked the young mother, anxiously.

"I'll tell you," answered the young father, confidently; "he can say more things that sound well and mean nothing than any kid I ever saw."

—Mrs. Candle—what makes that red spot on your nose?

Mrs. C. —Glasses.

Mrs. C. —Glasses of what?

DANGERS OF SPITTING.

"Ninety-five per cent. of our consumption," says the North Carolina State Board of Health, "comes from careless spitting, coughing and sneezing," particularly on the part of the consumptive, but also from people who are apparently healthy. "Spit is frequently laden with deadly disease germs, particularly that of consumptives.

"When one coughs, spits, or sneezes, a great multitude of tiny drops of spittle are violently expelled from the mouth and nose. The largest of these drops can be readily seen. A large number of smaller droplets can be found if a mirror or piece of glass is held before the face when coughing or sneezing. A tremendous quantity of still smaller droplets are discharged in the form of an invisible spray or mist, which floats about in the air for some time. Scientists have found that when a man coughs, spits, or sneezes in a large hall or room where the air is quiet, these tiny, invisible germ-laden droplets will float in the air for a distance of 25 to 100 feet. These tiny droplets, in the from of mist or spray, may be breathed in by other people, or they may settle on objects with which they come into intimate contact, such as food and clothing. Viewed in this light, such conduct is at least impolite. Furthermore, it is dangerous to the public at large to have careless people actually coughing, sneezing and spitting germ-laden matter into their faces even if it is invisible and in the form of fine mist."

The best spring tonic—spring air and pure spring water. Take it every day.

Don't make a junk shop of your stomach.

—General William Booth, of London, the venerable founder and head of the Salvation Army throughout the world is pronounced totally blind from the effects of an operation for cataract which was not successful.

—Of 450 candidates for the ministry in the So. Presbyterian Church, 192 came from country churches, 171 from towns, and 87 from city churches. Of these candidates, 321, or nearly 75 per cent., came into the church before they were sixteen years of age, and 115 between fifteen and twenty.

—The Wilmington Star says:

"North Carolina has 125,000 cotton mill operatives, and we do not produce enough butter and milk to keep them from buying more than $1,000,000 worth of dairy products made in the North and West."

Think of our rich meadows and fertile pasture lands and golden grain fields—and yet in spite of all that these are doing for us we send away a million dollars a year to buy dairy products. That is worth thinking about.

—There be people in the world who say that converts to Christianity in foreign lands are few and far between, and that missionaries are not doing much. That is talk from sheer ignorance. Bishop Thoburn says he can remember when the Methodists in pagan India numbered 13. Today they number 262,836 and the annual average increase is 12,500. This illustrates something of that growth which is everywhere manifest in heathen lands.

—Mr. Clarence Poe was united in marriage to Miss Alice Aycock at Raleigh on the evening of May 29th and immediately left for New York from whence they sailed for Europe Saturday, June 1. Mr. Poe is widely known as the distinguished editor of the Progressive Farmer and author of several very popular books, while Miss Aycock is daughter of the late ex-Governor C. B. Aycock, and is said to be worthy in every way of her distinguished late lamented father.

Use sticky flypaper in the house. Swat all the flies that escape it.

VALUE OF A JUNIOR SOCIETY.

I would not under estimate the value of the senior society of Christian Endeavor, yet I venture the remark that this branch does not hold the great possibilities that are contained in the Junior and Intermediate Endeavor work. If every church in our land had an active Junior society, fifteen years from now that would have a militant force of church and Sunday school workers that would sweep this world for Christ.

Information as to methods of organization for carrying on the work of the Junior society may be had from the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass. Here is a great opportunity for service for young women of ambition and energy in our churches. Note some of the testimonials below as to what Junior societies have meant to boys and girls and the churches in which they worshipped:

Mrs. Charles Hutchison, Junior field secretary of Ohio, wrote to a number of Junior graduates asking them what Junior Christian Endeavor had done for them. The replies make interesting reading from every point of view.

"A church without a Junior society," says one, "is like a nation without schools." One might say, without trade-schools, without laboratories. "It is twenty years since I attended my first Junior meeting and I can truthfully say that not a day has passed, since that time, that Christian Endeavor has not been a help to me in my daily life."

Another: "I gained confidence from the other children through Christian Endeavor training, and very soon I was able to do many things that older people will not attempt." This writer emphasizes the knowledge of the Bible gained through Bible drills and through memory verses learned in the society.

Many tell of the way in which the habit of prayer and Bible-reading has been formed; how fear was overcome, and how they were taught how to do things for Christ.

One points out four things done in the Junior society that no other church organization does in the same way; first, the Juniors get a working knowledge of the Bible, are taught not only to memorize it, but how to use it; second, they are led directly into service through committee work; third, they are led to prepare and deliver little addresses which grow, of course, with growing intelligence; and fourth, they are taught to pray in public.

Once more: "Through the Junior society I joined the church at twelve years of age, and the Junior work has been the foundation of all my work as teacher in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor."

Finally here is an interesting extract: "Junior Endeavor helped me to pray in public. I was not accustomed to speak my prayers aloud, not even before my mother. But nearly every Junior is able to offer a prayer without being conscious of the people around him. * * * Junior Endeavor taught me to give my money freely. * * * Sunday school is important, but it is not like the Junior Society. The children do not take part in it; the grown-up people do that. Why is it that these Sunday school scholars do not want to teach classes later, and why do many of those that try fail? I think it is because they have been depending on older people to do the work, while they are in the habit of listening. Junior Christian Endeavor teaches us to listen and to work at the same time."

Wanted—Leaders Who Will Press Forward.

He (or, of course, she) may be the least obtrusive of Endeavorers, quiet, gentle, unassuming; but he brings things to pass. Things are accomplished in that society. Above all, the true leader follows his Leader. You know the game the boys play, called "follow your leader." Through thick and thin over hill and dale, through hedges and over walls, they go, as they follow. So, metaphorically, the leader, Christ. He runs "in His steps." He seeks Him always in the quiet morning watch and he is seldom at a loss where or how to go during the day.

Dear friend, is your society ailing? I hope not; but, if it is, this is one trouble, I am confident; you are leaderless. The remedy is to find a leader, or many leaders; to be yourself the leader who shall follow the Leader. Write up this requirement high, and keep it in view until your society takes on new life and power.—F. E. Clark.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 16.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"The Duty of Being Pleasant."

Psalms 133:1-3.

"I've made it a practice to put all my worry down in the bottom of my heart, then sit on the lid and smile."

The above quotation from Alice Hegan Rice author of "The Cabbage Patch," seems a pretty good text to use in connection with the scripture lesson for this meeting. It indicates that worries can be kept down and cheerfulness kept up. If it is possible to do so, then it is our duty to do it. Note that the topic is "The duty, etc." Cheerfulness is a habit; so is being grouchy. Either can be cultivated, and, like most wrongs, grouchiness is the easier to develop.

Too many people endeavor to excuse themselves for mean dispositions by laying the blame on the Lord. True, all people are not born alike, but our dispositions and habits are largely a matter of early environment, training rearing, and the process of our own cultivation of that which is best or worst in us. It is just as fair to say that an inclination to get drunk or steal is inherent in us, as it is to say that our disposition is a matter of nature.

Look pleasant and be pleasant, even when you do not feel that way. It is not easy, but it is the right thing to do. Some one says, "Why act a lie?" My friend, you act a much bigger falsehood when you speak crossly to one whom you love because you are mad about something with which he is not connected. You act that which is supremely false when you cause him to feel that you are mad at him, and hurt him unnecessarily.

Vsitors to Japan tell us that Japanese parents cause their girls to practice smiling before mirrors, and thus a pleasing countenance is cultivated. Oh, if we could have a mirror thrust before our faces when we have scowls upon them, would it not have a wholesome effect? There are men who actually feel that in their homes they must put on a mean look, a nasty disposition and a general air of both fault-finding and importance. The members of that household may attend the man's wants, fear him and obey him, but none of them will admire, respect or genuinely love him.

Did you ever go down the street with your head thrown back, a smile on your face, a gleam in your eyes, and a hearty "Good morning" for every one you met? Try it sometime and you will find that pier. It has been will said, "Keep sweet the whole day will be sweeter and hap- until ten o'clock, and the rest of the day will take care of itself.

Thoughts From Others.

"If you can't be a sun, don't be a cloud."

Cheerfulness is like money well expended in charity; the more we dispense of it, the greater our possion.—Victor Hugo.

"If that man is a prominent Christian, then give me an everyday heathen with a good temper!" said a young man emphatically the other day. His criticism was fair and deserved. The ill-tempered Christian is responsible for making religion despised, just as far as he can manage it, which is sometimes pretty far, alas!—Forward.

The time to be cheery and bright is when other folks are down in the mouth.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:10 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Agt., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Carj, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McGlamery, T. & P. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

SEEDS

Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please

Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION

1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato	20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish	10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery	20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage	15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce	10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds	25c
	$1.00

Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide.

GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1895 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

It doesn't take much grace to take sunny views of life when everything goes well. The time when it takes a whole heart full of love to see the bright side is when shadows lie thick everywhere and the way seems shut up with a thick, black-brier hedge. If you can be cheery then, you are in just the right place and doing the work God wants you to do.—Edgar L. Vincent.

It is a poor excuse for gruffness to say, "I am always sincere, and cannot seem pleasant when I do not feel that way." We have no duty to display to the world our disagreeable moods; but we have a vtry positive duty to conceal them. If we do fall into the sin of feeling disagreeable, the least that we can do is to confess it to God and hide it from our friends. God wants us to add to the joy and beauty of the world, as a life-habit.—The Sunday School Times.

Some day when you feel so depressed that it seems impossible to be a cheerful Christian, try repeating the following lines by R. W. Gibson:

I am happy today and my whole heart sings,
The world is so full of such beautiful things!
Work and friendship and beauty and love,
Nature below and God above.

For Daily Reading.

M.—A merry heart, Prov. 15:12-14.
T.—Suppressing unpleasantness, John 16:1-4.
W.—Cheer in trial, Acts 27:21-25, 36.
T.—Songs in captivity, Acts 16:22-25.
F.—A singing heart, Eph. 5:18-21.
S.—The soft word, Prov. 15:1, 2.
Sunday, Topic.

—Bro. S. S. Cox is here as a juror in federal court, though he would prefer to be at home on his farm this busy season. The violators of law cause a sight of unnecessary trouble to other and an endless amount to themselves.

—There was one lady member of the General Conference, Mrs. Anna Wilson, of Illinois.

—Bro. J. L. Hardin, of Liberty, is quite sick. It is feared that he has Bright's Disease.

—Rev. J. B. O'Briant is credited with five dollars paid for our Endowment Building.

—Ohio's delegates to National Republican Convention are 34 for Roosevelt and 14 for Taft.

—An epidemic of infant colitis is reported from Kinston, N. C.

—Floyd Loftin committed to memory 3,050 Bible verses for a Sunday school prize.

—Elon College commencement came this week, also Trinity's and others.

HOW TO KEEP WELL.

THE DRINK HABIT.

Get the drink habit. It will cure your "spring fever" and make a torrid summer feel mild for you—if you drink Adam's pure, unadulterated ale. Your sluggish feeling each spring is due to winter accumulations of waste in the body which should be removed. Flush them out with not less than two quarts of water every day. Then keep them flushed. Don't permit these sluggish conditions of the body, if you have to drink three or even four quarts of water and eat nothing but fruits and vegetables. Have an internal spring housecleaning for a week and see how much more easily you can do your work.

WHAT TO DRINK.

Don't drink anything and everything just because it resembles water. Be discriminating. It may be the purest, sparkling water from a mountain spring, or it may be a dilute solution of sewage and deadly bacteria. When encountering a strange water, ask, "Whence came you?" If it is a city public supply it is usually safe. City waters are analyzed monthly and when found polluted the fact is published and the cause of pollution removed. If it is the well with the old oaken bucket or any other open topped well, beware. Analyses show that these old family wells—the open top kind and those that are not walled up water tight with cement, covered and drained around the top—are more than twice as likely to be polluted as city waters, and the State rarely analyzes these wells.

ABOUT "MINERAL WATERS."

Don,t waste your money on "mineral waters." They may contain certain salts, minerals, odors, tastes, and colors, either originally or by adulteration, but for five or ten cents your druggist will give you enough salts and minerals to make a barrel of "mineral water." Ninety-nine per cent of the so-called "mineral waters" are a hoax—a snare and a delusion. Why put these "minerals," of which you know little, into your body, of which you know less? The chief virtue of such waters rest in the fact that these "minerals" are usually harmless, and people drink so much of this water that their systems are flushed out and cleaned and they feel good. That is perfectly natural. They would have felt equally good—or better—if they had drunk an equal amount of any pure water, and they would have avoided the taste and expense. Man in his ingenuity has added many things to water, but as a rule these additions are useless if not harmful. No drink ever devised by man is more effective for the slacking of thirst than pure water.—N. C. State Board of Health.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE, Co-educational.

Situated in the delightful hill country of North Carolina. With all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of city life.

Diploma from Elon admits without examination to the Graduate Departments of leading universities. In addition to the REGULAR COLLEGE COURSES, the following Departments are maintained.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT—Prepares young men and young women for the Freshman class at Elon, or elsewhere.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT—Piano, Voice, Pipe Organ, Violin, Brass Instruments.

EXPRESSION DEPARTMENT—Elocution and Physical Culture.

ART DEPARTMENT—Oil Painting, Water Colors, Pastel, Crayon, China Painting Public School Drawing, Mechanical Drawing, Etc.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT—An ideal Business Course, combining education culture and special training.

NORMAL DEPARTMENT—A three years briefer course leading to the L. degree. Also special term each year, April and May.

Good equipment and modern conveniences. Buildings heated by steam, lighted by electricity, furnished with water and baths. Expenses moderate, from $132 to $187 per session of ten months. Write for catalogue showing terms and work in detail.

President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

S. S. C. BUFF ORPINGTON EGGS

Won first, second and third prizes at Randolph Fair.

Now $1.50 per 15 Delivered.

T. H. MATTHEWS, Randleman, N. C.

ASK YOUR MINISTER IF HE HAS READ JINKS' INSIDE.

By Harriet Malone Hobson.

He should read it. So should you.

It has been heartily indorsed by clergymen and social workers throughout the country; yet it does not preach. It tells a simple, appealing story, which by its own force creates a larger sympathy for Jinks and his comrades.

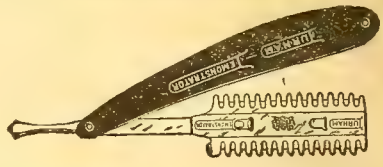
The St. Paul Dispatch says:—"A little like 'Mrs. Wiggs,' a little like Dickens, 'Christmas Carol,' a little like 'Oliver Twist,' but different from any of these and not less interesting."

Just as Jinks found his way into Peter Flannigan's heart, so will his story find its way into yours.

Four colored illustrations by Florence Scovel Shinn.

Price $1.00 net; by mail, $1.10.

Send your order at once to METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, Greensboro, N. C.



THE DURHAM DUPLEX SAFETY RAZOR

combines the safety feature and the thin blade with the correct, diagonal stroke of the old-fashioned razor. To enable you to demonstrate to your own satisfaction the correctness of the principle of the Durham Duplex, we will send by mail a Durham Duplex Demonstrator for only 35 cents, in silver or stamps. See coupon in double page advertisement in "The Saturday Evening Post" of March 9th. or mention this paper.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.

Greensboro, N. C.

MY LADY.

By Helen A. Walker.

I know a lady in this land
Who carries a Chinese fan in her hand,
But in her heart does she carry a thought
Of her Chinese sister who carefully wrought
The dainty, delicate, silken toy,
For her to admire, for her to enjoy?

This lady has on her parlor floor
A lovely rug from a Syrian shore;
Its figures were woven with curious art—
I wish that my lady had in her heart
One thought of love for those foreign homes
Where the light of the gospel never comes.

To shield my lady from chilling draft
Is a Japanese screen of curious craft.
She takes the comfort its presence gives,
But in her heart not one thought lives—
Not even one little thought—ah, me—
For the comfortless homes that lie over the sea.

My lady in gown of silk is arrayed,
The frabric soft was in India made.
Will she think of the country whence it came,
Will she make an offering in His name
To send the perfect, heavenly dress,
The mantle of Christ's own righteousness,
To those who are poor, and sad, and forlorn,
To those who know not that Christ is born?

—Woman's Work for Women.

A CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE CEREMONY IN CHINA.

Written by Mr. Heininger.

Yesterday I had a very fine trip to perform a marriage. The village where the groom's parents live is seventeen miles west of here—the road is what you might expect in China, especially in the hilly part of China. As we are alone here I was anxious not to be away from home at night. So I managed to take the early train on the new railroad west of here and put my horse on the train, too. From the first station west of here I had a ride of six miles then to the village where the wedding was. It was a new part of the country to me. I had never been over eight miles in that direction. The sight of the many, many villages, small cities with three and four hundred families in them, many of them, and all without any Christian preachers or teachers made me long to just work day and night. The portion of this country that can be tilled is thickly populated. We followed a river valley and there we found an especially large number of villages. I was surprised to find the bridegroom at the station to meet me as I had expected to find the road by inquiring. Of course his presence was very welcome. At the railway station where I got off I had a little visit with the station master who is interested in Christianity. Then we went on to the place for the wedding. Here I received a very cordial reception from this family of Christians. The guests soon became very friendly too. I doubt very much if anyone there save myself had ever seen a Christian wedding. I expected to meet my bookseller there, but probably on account of the stormy weather he did not get there. So I had to explain the whole ceremony to them and go ahead with it all alone. And indeed we got along with it very well. I trust that the newly married couple may have as much happier a wedded life than the ordinary Chinese as the beginning with a Christian ceremony is more correct than the Chinese way of worshipping heaven and earth. The young bridegroom is a promising boy and seems to be an exceptionally earnest Christian. He has never had many opportunities to study Christian teaching, only having had one year in the missionary school. The home of these people far away from all of the same faith bore witness to their belief in Christ. On the wall hung the ten commandments which one of the sons had written out. On the front gate were pasted some questions and answers from the catechism. Even a foreign missionary must admit that their selection of these was more evidence of zeal than of a knowledge of what was most appropriate to select. Yet the zeal is the most important thing. If a person has zeal he can obtain the knowledge, but how to get zeal into a whole lot of people who know a good deal is what puzzles me. I think all of you in your missionary work will say the same thing.

The ceremony was performed at eleven o'clock and after that we had dinner. It was unusually good food to those Chinese but I fear you at home would scarcely have appreciated it. I had an opportunity then to distribute a few tracts and talk a little with some of the people about Christ. One young man, a consin of the groom was especially interested and asked to be enrolled as an inquirer. Indeed such was the interest that you can be sure it will not be my last visit to the place.

The bride comes from a heathen family. She was only a girl—just sixteen. Perhaps I was the first foreigner she ever saw, but if so, she managed to overcome her fears sufficiently to go through the ceremony. I hope that she can have opportunities of learning more of Christianity in that home and that she too may believe in the Christ. The bridegroom was the older—twenty-four. Early in the afternoon I started back to Kalgan. The ride coming back was not all pleasure, for the wind blew a gale and at this time of the year when there is dust everywhere that means the dust gets all over you and into you everywhere. But it was a pleasant ride bringing me over a new road with its town or village every two miles and many others side of the road. I wonder when the gospel will reach all of these people. It seems that it cannot do so for a long while unless we all do our duty. It is hard to think of so many villages within a few hours' ride of our home and all of them without the gospel. Not a one of the villages I passed through had a Christian in it save just the one where the wedding occurred and even there they had no preacher or teacher or chapel, just one lone family of believers. But conditions will change and that rapidly in the near future. At least that is what we are working for and praying for.

MOTHERS, LOOK OUT FOR YOUR DAUGHTERS!

The white slave brutes are dressed up as angels of light and are picking up the fairest, most beautiful, and most innocent girls of our country and selling them in their dens of vice and crime, from which they never get out alive. They are kept drunk. Five years is the average life, but many live only five weeks in these dens. Look out for them! The United States penalty for the white slaver is $10,000 and five years in the penitentiary. —The Missionary Voice.

BOOKS FOR A JAPANESE PREACHER

A letter comes to us from Japan containing an order for a list of books for a young Japanese preacher. The list comprises such books as "Faith and Its Psychology," "Philosophy and Religion," "Christian Ethics," "The Theology of the New Testament," "St. Paul's Conception of Christianity," etc. This young man is just beginning his ministry. He is one of the recent graduates from the Theological Department of the Kwansei Gakuin. His salary amounts to $10 per month, and out of this he proposes to pay $2 for books. He is even remaining unmarried for the time being in order to save money with which to buy books. —The Missionary Voice.

"The great social ideal of Christianity is still only partially realized by us. But we do not have it at all unless we have it for humanity, and it can be made to prevail anywhere only by being made to prevail everywhere."

"How good a man's God really is will be shown by the man's eagerness to make Him known to all the world."

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due	Paid
Alamance	10.00	9.13
Albemarle	2.00
Anderson	3.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Burlington	8.00	8.00
Caroleen	3.00
Cleveland	11.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Davidson	6.00	4.25
Denton	2.00	2.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Forsyth	7.00	7.00
Gaston	2.00
Gilburg	1.00	1.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Greensboro	14.00	14.00
Greensville	5.00	5.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	8.00
Haw River	9.00	9.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
Ivy	3.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Liberty	10.00	10.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Littleton	10.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Mecklenburg	3.00
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Monroe	3.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Oak Ridge	10.00	9.40
Orange	3.00	3.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	7.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Richland	10.00
Roanoke	10.00
Rockingham	2.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Spring Church	5.00	5.00
Stanley	9.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Thomasville	3.00	3.00
Uwharrie	3.00
Vance	8.00	6.82
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Yarborough	5.00

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

—Bro. J. L. Hardin was operated on yesterday.

—We regret that Bro. S. V. Pickens is still unwell. The following, taken from a published report of Decoration Day in Hendersonville, shows that his neighbors do not forget him and are glad to honor him:

"But a note was lacking which rendered the harmony of the occasion incomplete—caused by the absence of that much beloved and loyal veteran, Col. S. V. Pickens, and his estimable wife, who was the the first and at all times faithful president of the Margaret Davis Hayes Chapter U. D. C. It was largely through the efforts of Col. Pickens that the monument to the Confederate dead was erected here. Ill health rendered his presence impossible on this occasion and it was a wistful look cast in the direction af his vacant chair, accompanied by a feeling of general regret for his and Mrs. Pickens' absence. In all the years past they had seldom, if ever, missed a reunion or gathering of the veterans and their presence was sorely missed on this occasion. As a mark of personal esteem, at the close of the exercises at the monument, 32 of his "comrades in arms," accompanied by a committee of Daughters composed of Mrs. Eunice Posey, Miss Lane and Miss Mae Lucile Smith, marched in a body to the Pickens' home and offered words of comfort and good cheer to that one so sorely afflicted and his devoted and faithful helpmeet. It was an affecting scene as the white-haired old veteran received his guests, the sacredness of which will not soon be effaced from memory. After receiving from Capt. Wofford an armful of roses sent in the name of the Daughters of the Margaret Davis Hayes Chapter, the old soldier, threading his way in and out among his guests, with words of good comradeshipe, slipped into the hands of each veteran and Daughter a silver dollar as a memento of the occasion and mark of esteem toward those who shared with him a boundless love and veneration for the Lost Cause. As the good-byes were said there was a perceptible tightening of the cords about the throat and the silent fervent wish of those present sped upward that time might deal gently with the old soldier and that he be spared for other earthly reunions, but if in the wisdom of the great Commander he be summoned to answer the last roll-call before another reunion of the Watt Bryan Camp that his passage be made very easy and his reunion with the comrades gone before be rendered perfect.

—Those charged with the murder of Myrtle Hawkins have been acquitted.

—Congressman R. C. Wycliffe, of Lousiana, was killed in Washington by a Southern Ry. train. He was watching one train, and run upon by another.

—Dr. A. H. Johnson, Dentist, had the misfortune to lose his barn by fire last night. His horse and buggy were burned up. The doctor and family were away at the time. Neighbors did what they could, but the fire had too great a start to be extinguished with the means at hand.

—The fierce contest between Taft and Roosevelt goes on in Chicago before the National Executive Committee. This committee is hearing from contested delegations and deciding nearly all in favor of Taft. Fraud is charged on both sides. To what a low plane has political maneuvering fallen!

—Two more aviators have fallen to death—Lieutenant Hazelhurst and A. L. Welch. The airship was of the Wright type. The machine was being tested for use by the War Department. Welch was considered the greatest flier of the Wright company since the death of Parmalee, killed a short time ago. It is becoming increasingly evident that the dangers of aerial navigation are as yet by no means overcome.

—Two hundred clergymen representing the federated churches of Chicago met and gave approval to Dean Sumner's proposal that ministers shall require a certificate of health as well as legal marriage license before consenting to perform a marriage ceremony. Dean Sumner declared that the marriage of diseased and degenerate persons should stop, and that the ministers must take the initiative in the reform.

—Baltimore has 8,000 vacant houses Some one has proposed to take down the "For Rent" signs during Convention week, regarding them as bad advertisement for the city. Baltimore, like some other places, has outbuilt the increase of population.

—Judge Foushee fell in a dead faint while presiding over the hearing of the Myrtle Hawkins murder trial in Hendersonville. He was carried to a hotel and recovered rapidly.

—Rev. H. L. Powell begins a special meeting at West Lexington church this week, in which he is to be assisted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, of Denton.

—Prof. Pender returned from Denton to Mebane this week. He speaks hopefully of school prospects at Denton.

—Mr. Short, assistant cashier of the Southern Ry. Co. in Greensboro, and Miss Maud Hunter, daughter of Rev. A. L. Hunter, were married yesterday at her father's home in Pinnacle, Rev. S. W. Taylor officiating. The bride and groom at once departed for a bridal tour, expecting to visit a number of northern cities.

—Bro. J. L. Hardin has been taken to St. Leo's Hospital for an operation. His pastor, Bro. Troxler came up to see him on Tuesday, and expects to return and be with him during the operation, which will be a serious one. Let his friends pray earnestly for him.

—Raleigh Hunter leaves the Journal in Winston to take a position as linotype operator in the Christian Advocate Office, Greensboro. He prefers to work in the the day time.

—We acknowledge the courtesy of invitations to the commencements at Adrian College and Western Maryland College, both of which came this week. Dr. Wilbur preached the baccalaureate sermon at Adrian and Dr. Lewis at Westminster.

—Special meeting begins at St. Paul next Sunday, to continue two weeks. The church members are interested, as well as the pastor, and we hope the meeting wil be a good one.

—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former chief of the United States bureau of chemistry, declined the city of Boston's offer to become chairman of its board of health.

"My experience in the last few years as chairman of the board of food and drug inspection which consisted of two persons besides myself, has had a strong influence on me," Dr. Wiley wrote. "I could not contemplate myself again in the condition through which I passed in the last few years. My idea of a health officer is that he should, within the statute, have unrestricted freedom of action, and be responsible for the results."

Dr. Wiley carefully explained that he meant to cast no reflection on the other members of the Boston board.

—There are more than 6,000,000 illiterates in the United States, and one in seven of all children between 10 and 14 are not in school according to the Child Labor Bulletin, a new quarterly revview issued to-day by the National Child Labor Committee. 29 States do not care whether children can even read and write when they permit them to go to work, and "there are a million children to-day under the age of 16 years who are employed in the various industries of the country, in addition to another million in agriculture, only a part of whom are assisting their parents on the farm."

—"In four states: Ohio, Oklahoma, Illinois and Michigan," Florence Kelly says, "there is now provision made to lift the burden upon the widowed mother by giving her, as her right and not as the dole of a private charity, an allowance out of public finances on condiion that she stay in her home and keep her children at home and in school as the State requires." As Jean Gordon of New Orleans puts it "Certainly the mother does as much for the country in rearing her children as the veterans did in killing her sons."

—Several hundred gallons of beer and whisky were poured into the public square at Martinsburg W. Va., by members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The intoxicants, confiscated by county authorities at various times were sold at public auction by the sheriff. The Women's Christian Temperance Union secured the lot for $240 and then dumped it into the streets. As the women poured the liquor away constables stood guard..

—Efforts are being made to introduce in this country the culture of the nanmon tree of China, whose timber is the most valuable the Chinese have. This tree is of the laurel family and is slow-growing; its wood is very hard and takes a beautiful polish, being favored by the rich Chinese for coffins. It is believed that the climate of our Gulf states would be just the thing for it.

—By the decisive vote of 740 to 37 the Ohio constitutional committee gave its sanction to woman sufferage, and decided to put the issue up to the people at the elecion next November.

—The Socialists flew the red flag above the stars and stripes over their headquarters at Muscatine, Iowa, on Decoration Day. According to press reports an old soldier climbed up and pulled it down, cheered by a large crowd.

—Mrs. Letitia Miller of San Rafael, Cal., kept complaining of her stomach and at last the doctors operated on her the other day. This is what they found she contained: 108 hairpins, 55 open safety-pins, 21 broken pins, 5 prune-pits, 23 buttons, 3 collar-buttons, 13 nails, 3 screw-eyes, 40 tacks, 1 wire staple, five teaspoons, 1 piece of string, 280 small pins, and other unidentified pieces of junk which brought her total stock in trade up to 1097 distinct articles. These facts are from official report made to the state board of health. She is now feeling better.— Pathfinder.

—The agricultural department is displaying the danger signal to the farmers of the country against the cotton-worm pest, known generally as the army-worm. There was an epidemic of this pest last year and it is expected it will be worse this year. In the South the worms attack mainly cotton, while in other sections they feed on fruit-trees mostly. A dose of arsenate of lead, at the rate of two pounds to the acre, is recommended as being good, or rather bad, for these little "varmints." The poison should be mixed with a liberal quantity of something like plaster, ashes or fine dry earth, to dilute it and make it go farther.

—Little Emma Deckman of Olean, N. Y., has been troubled with a peculiar cough for some time, and the other day she coughed up a large lizard. She drank from a stagnant pool at a picnic last year and it is believed she swallowed a lizard egg and that it hatched in her stomach. It has often been denied by scientists that such an animal can live in the human stomach, but reports of people coughing up snakes and other reptiles come in from time to time nevertheless.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 13.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the death of Rev. S. Simpson. Bro. Simpson was a member of the Brotherhood, and the books show that he met every call of the Brotherhood. The members of the Brotherhood are due three dollars each within sixty days of date of this notice.

J. A. Burgess, Secc.-Treas.

Treaurer's Report, Orphans' Home.

Giles Chapel S. S., Richland Ct.	$2.75
Canaan S. S., Guilford Ct.	1.35
Cedar Falls S. S.	40
Henderson Boys' Mission Band	6.03
Asheboro	14.50
Star S. S., Why Not Ct.	2.00
Rose Hill S. S., Monroe Ct.	4.00
W. Lexington S. S., Yad. Col. Ct.	5.01
Shiloh S. S.	2.18
Friendship S. S.	1.06
Yadkin College S. S.	.65
Bethesda S. S.	2.05
Bess Chapel S. S.	2.23
Asheville S. S.	1.00
Fair Grove S. S., Why Not Ct.	2.23
Rehoboth S. S., Granville Ct.	4.28
Union Chapel S. S.	1.00
Total	$52.72

Spring Hill.

Our minister was with us Sunday at his regular time and delivered an excellent sermon. We are all glad for him to be with us. Our Sabbath school is doing very well at this time. We want you all to pray that it may get better. We need the prayer of all good people. There will be a children's day service held at our church the second Sunday in next month. We invite you all to come and worship with us. Minnie Craven.

Reporter.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Psalms 116-118.

A SACRIFICE TO SCIENCE.

A jolly young chemistry tough while mixing a compound of stuff,
Dropped a match in a vial,
And after a while,
They found his front teeth and one cuff.

—Success.

From Pastors and People.

Dabney.

Dear Herald:

As the writer hasn't seen a letter from Dabney, Harris Chapel, for some time, he will write a short letter to let you know that we are not dead yet. No, and lacl a lot of it. If you could have come to Dabney yesterday to church, Sunday, June 9, I mean and walked in church about 11:30 o'clock and seen the crowd that was in church, you would have thought that the big meeting was going on. That's what I call it—big meeting. We have different names for it, but that was a big meeting Sunday. The house was filled up. Bro. J. A. Burgess preached one of the finest sermons we ever listened to. Everybody praised it, said it was fine and it was a good sermon. Bro. Burgess is a fine man, also preacher. We like him fine. He sticks to the Bible and preaches the gospel truth. I heard a man say that he could have listened to him preach an hour longer, and, by the way, he was a Baptist, too, but a good one. Everybody praised the sermon. Well, they couldn't help it, it was so good and to the point. He hews to the line, let the chips fall where they will.

We are trying to get a new organ for the church. Well, we need it. This one is badly used up. The ladies had an ice cream supper for that purpose. They raised $18.51, and took up a hat collection Sunday to finish it out. We will get the new organ.

Have a very good Sunday school now. It's hard, it looks like, to have a Sunday school at Dabney. Why is that? One reason is that we don't pull together. Let's get right and stay right. Well, some of our young people are coming home from school now. Miss Jewel Glover came home from the Oxford College. Mr. Leon Glover is home from Warrenton High School. We are glad to get them back with us.

Our special meeting will begin the 2nd Sunday in July. That's the big meeting I am talking about. Fried chicken and ham,you know. With best wishes to the readers of the Herald. Very truly,

Jas. B. Burroughs, Rep.

High Point.

The work here has been somewhat interrupted because of the absence of the pastor. During the last four Sundays I have been away, three of them. On the first Sunday of my absence, Rev. D. R. Williams and Rev. J. H. Moton filled the pulpit. On the second one, the annual sermon at school closing was preached at which time all the churches in town closed. At night there was no preaching at our church. And on the third Sunday of my absence, Rev. R. M. Andrews, of Burlington, came and preached at both hours. These brethren all have my most hearty thinks for their service. On one of the above Sundays I preached in Washington, D. C., another in Baltimore, and the third one was given to Bro. G. L. Curry and his people in a revival service in Graham.

For two or three Sundays our Sunday school was off some. The attendance was as low as 136 one Sunday; but last Sunday it was up to 202. Rev. T. L. Garrison, of Texas, was with us last Sunday morning and preached a most splendid sermon from the text. "Where there is no mission the people perish." He took an offering for the Westminster College of Texas. As a result of his sermon we have determined to hold a "Methodist ProtestantDay" service on the fifth Sunday in June at 11 o'clock. All the Methodist Protestants of High Point and our Methodist Protestant friends around High Point are invited and urged to be present.

It is the purpose of the pastor to preach that morning from the text, "Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions."

On next Sunday at 11 o'clock a special service is to be held under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society in the interest of the Orphans' Home.

A. G. Dixon, Pastor.

High Point, N. C., June 10th, 1912.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Bro. Bethea preached interestingly and instructively Sunday, last, on "Standing Still" in the church. By this, again obligations were brought to memory that were long forgotten.

Attended service at Henderson Sunday night, enjoying much the sermon by Bro. Williams. It is great to hear Bro. Williams and to see him while hearing him adds much to the gratification of the occasion. The expression on his face and the enthusiasm is great.

Our Children's Day Service is to be the fifth Sunday night of this month.

W. Polk Garrett.

June 11, 1912.

Eden, Halifax Circuit.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard filled his first regular appointment at Eden Sunday, June 2. He gave us an inspiring and uplifting discourse which was listened to by a large and appreciative congregation. Bro. Pritchard comes to us from Westminster Theological Seminary where he graduated in May. Halifax Circuit is fortunate in securing such an able leader for its people. He has taken hold of the great work that Bro. Gerringer began last year during his vacation, and is rapidly carrying it forward to maturity.

For some time we have been planning and working to secure sufficient funds to beautify the interior of our church by adding new pews, carpet, etc. Sunday, after the service in a few appropriate words Bro. J. W. Hardee explained the needs of the church to the members and in a few minutes the subscriptions amounted to something over eighty dollars, over half of which was paid at once. The remainder we hope will soon be collected, as we desire this work on church to begin at an early date.

Mr. Jno. Wynn is at home from Trinity College, spending his vacation. We were glad to have him worship with us Sunday.

Since the last report from this place, our church has sustained the loss of one of its most consecrated members. Mrs. Ann Neville. We feel that she has crossed the river and awaits on the other shore, there to welcome us home. God in His infinite wisdom has also taken from our midst Sisters Dora Parker, nee Daniel, and Allene Howerton. We miss these in our church and community.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely, more interest being shown than awhile back.

The special meeting at this place begins the first Sunday in August. Let us pray that this may be a great ingathering of souls, and a glorious revival of the church.

Spring Church.

Our pastor, Bro. Ashburn, was present here last Sunday afternoon, with vital message for every one. He delivered an excellent sermon, using as a text Gen. 5:24. His discourse was presented so clearly and emphatically that all who heard could easily comprehend each statement. The congregation was not as large as it should have been, but owing to a great epidemic of measles, several were kept at home.

Bro. Ashburn also filled his appointment here last fourth Sunday morning, and we also had the pleasure of having with us, Hon. W. M. Powell, Chairman of the board of Greensville County Sunday-school. He gave quite a good and interesting talk on Sunday-school, which was highly enjoyed by all. The next convention will be held at Independence M. E. Church the fifth Sunday in this month.

Our Sunday school has grown very rapidly since spring opened, it is just progressing nicely under the supervision of our devoted superintendent. But there are still quite a number of people in the community who should be interviewed by some one. I am glad to say that we are expecting to have our president to preach for us next fourth Sunday at eleven o'clock. We are hoping for a nice congregation to be present, as it has been some time since Dr. Swain preached for us.

We are preparing for children's day, and planning on having it the fourth Sunday in July. We will also have our annual picnic here the fourth of July. We cordially invite one and all to be with us. Refreshments will be served, of which the proceeds will go on the parsonage.

The ladies of our church, or the Band of Willing Workers, has promised to pay the sum of $62.25 on the parsonage,"and won't you Herald readers who feel interested over the matter lend a helping hand?" Yours for Christ,

Nannie Massey.

June 11, 1912.

Ivy Circuit.

Our pastor, Rev. S. B. Stephens, gave us one of the best sermons last Sunday morning on the subject of national amendment, or who should be president of the United States, from the text, Ps. 33:12: "Blessed in the nation whose God is the Lord." Such a sermon has never been listened to by the people of this country. Dr. Stephens showed us that during a political campaign the people withdraw their worship and suffrage from God, and worship man. He showed us that Egypt and Rome had been depopulated by their unwise worship and were driven to feel the power of the sword, by neglecting God. This sermon was listened to by the largest congregation that ever gathered at the Methodist Church in Democrat, and the people sat spellbound while Dr. Stephens discoursed to them on how to make a blessed and happy nation, and the way they should vote. I would not be saying too much when I say that Dr. Stephens is a preacher of far too much ability for the salary he receives from Ivy Circuit. He is a man with wide range of knowledge far more than the average, and can give perfect satisfaction to any city or college congregation. In short, we can say that the influence he exerts both in the pulpit and out commands so wide an audience and moves upon the people with such good results that it can hardly be estimated. We are sorry Sister Stephens is not here with her husband. She could be of so much help to him. As we have been told, she is a model lady. Our pastor has added more valuable members to the churches on this circuit than have been added before in the last five or ten years. In fact, Pensacola Church has by far outdone itself and is now the leading church on the circuit.

But we are in fear that Dr. Stephens will leave us at Conference, knowing he is in demand at other places that can give him a much better support than this circuit. Our Sunday schools were never as well attended, and with such interest as now. He has made more repairs on the parsonage and some of the churches than have ever been done before, spending by far more money for the work done on the churches and parsonage than the whole circuit pays him salary. He has placed by his superintendency the finest system of water in the parsonage, going up the mountain over two thousand feet, to a fine spring, bringing the water to the parsonage through a galvanized pipe, putting the same under ground some three feet True, Mr. Editor, we are much pleased with our pastor and hope to keep him another year. Our congregations are increasing all the time, people of other denominations attend our preaching services. As I hope to report to you something from our work here I beg to remain. Reporter.

Henderson.

Friday, Saturday, Sunday were cool enough for winter clothes and fire. Today is, but birds sing and the sun shines. We have had three accounts of the General Conference from our pastor and the other two delegates our Conference was partial enough to send from this church. Bro. Williams spoke most of Methodism and Methodist Protestantism in Batlimore. He said he was told there's not a clock in a Methodist Church in that city—that preachers preached as long as they wanted to and congregations were responsive and said amen and nodded and shouted approval in various ways, showing old fashioned religion to be flourishing there.

The other accounts dwelt on the subject of church union, and that without expressly saying so in so many words the General Conference arranged for it to "die the death."

So many of our people will be pleased at this, that to them for it alone the General Conference will be worth while. Dr. Lewis defeated for President because he was supposed to favor union. Yet they warmed up toward the "United Brethren" to unite with them. But "when the word gets round" among the people I believe that will fail. And we heard of the appearance of manners and culture and eagerness to speak of the men composing the body and of the progress and growth of our church in the West and South West, and of the lively contests over the election of the general officers of the church. The agent of our College in Texas came by and preached to us and took a collection. Now it is all over and our pastor is preaching to us regularly as before and we are preparing for our best Children's Day on June 23.

T. T. H.

Monday, June 10, 1912.

Stanly Ct.

Bro. Reynolds filled his appointment the second Sunday in June with another good sermon. He brought his wife and children with him. We were glad to have Sister Reynolds and the little ones with us and hope they will come again. Bro. Reynolds is always at his appointment. He does not believe in disappointing his members; he is one of the faithful few. Mrs. Cora Hunter and little Fred, from Concord, are visiting relatives around Love's Grove at this writing. Hope all our members will take our church paper. Let us all pray for each other and by doing so help each other along.

Daniel Little.

Cid, Uwharrie Ct.

Dear Herald:

Since I last wrote to your valuable paper death has visited the home of Bro. O. A. Gallimore and taken him away to the land of rest. He died May 29th, almost suddenly. He was taken with a stroke of apoplexy at five o'clock and lied at 8 o'clock. He was laid to rest at Jerusalem on the 31 of May. A large audience of sorrowing friends. Rev. Joel Trogdon conducted the funeral exercises. He leaves a wife and seven children, four boys and three girls, all grown and married but three. He was a member of Cid M. P. Church, and a highly respected citizen. He was a good worker and will be greatly missed in the church as well as around his fireside. He was 78 years old. He always testified that he was ready when the summons came and the last time he spoke in Cid Church he said it would not be long. Bro. Gallimore was our Sunday school superintendent for several years. But age had made him too feeble for the past year to serve us. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, and may God's richest blessings rest on his wife and children and may they prepare to meet him in heaven.

Owing to circumstances, Bro. Trogdon did not get to fill his appointment at Cid Sunday. We were very sorry. But we are glad to say that Bro. Harris Hill did fill it and made a most excellent talk which we all enjoyed, to a large and attentive congregation. We feel glad that we have laymen on the work that are able to fill vacancies.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We have right large congregations considering we have so much opposition close by.

The members of Cid church and the Sunday school passed a resolution of respect in honor of Bro. O. A. Gallimore.

Reporter.

Fair View.

Bro. John Alexander preached at Fair View last Sunday. He preached a good sermon which we all enjoyed. We had a large attendance. We would be glad to have him come and preach for us again. Pro. Alexander is a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church at Harrisburg.

Our Sunday school is still increasing. We are glad to see the people take interest in the good work.

We are expecting to have a Children's Day at Fair View. Bro Calvin Garmon has ordered the literature.

We are also expecting to have a Christmas tree at our church. I think the people would take more interest in the Sunday school, the children especially. We have never had anything to make the children interested in the work, and I think a Christmas tree would be nice. Our next preaching day will be the third Sunday at 3 o'clock. Bro. Lindley has been doing faithful work; he has been preaching just as faithfully as he could, it seems.

Miss Bessie Blackwelder, one of our members, and Mr. Zeb Cochran were happily married last Saturday night at one of the bride's friends, at the Hartseh Hill. We wish them both a long and happy life. The little infant of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackwelder has fever, but it is better now.

Also the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Dolph Miller has been sick. There will be prayer meeting at Mr. Julius Yates' next Sunday evening at 5 o'clock. Everybody is welcome to attend all of these services. Good wishes to the Herald and readers.

Carrie McCall, Rep.

Hobbs' Chapel.

Last Sunday was our preaching day. Our pastor, Bro. Ashburn, was away visiting his daughter. We understand that she is sick, and hope she may soon recover. We were very glad to have Bro. William Allen to fill our pastor's appointment, as he was away. Bro. Allen gave us a good and strengthening talk from the fourteenth chapter of St. John. He based his talk on the first and second verses: "I am the vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

He said, Christ was the vine; we were the branches, and God was the husbandman. If we Christians bear fruit, by attending Sunday school and preaching, always having some work to do, and abide in Him and His words, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you. If not, we are as withered branches gathered by men and cast into the fire and burned.

Come again, Bro. Allen; we would be glad to have you here on Children's Day.

Dora Pair.

June 3, 1912.

Winston.

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. P. Church of Winston, the following officers were elected:

Mrs. W. B. Speas, president; Mrs. J. R. Cummings, Vice-president; Miss Rosa Reynolds, Recording Secretary; Miss Eleanor L. Orrell, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer.

The regular monthly meeting of the Society was held Wednesday evening, June 5th, at the church, with an attendance of twenty. The program consisted of missionary papers and music.

The Society, under the presidency of Mrs. Speas, is growing in membership and attendance.

Cor. Sec.

Spring Church and Greensville Circuit, President's Appointments.

Matthews Chapel, Thursday, June 20, 11 a. m.

Wesleys, 3 p. m.

Philadelphia, Friday, June 21, 11 a. m.

Hobbs, 3 p. m.

Ebenezer, Saturday, June 22, 11 a. m.

Spring Church, Sunday, June 23, 11 a. m.

Lebanon, 3 p. m.

W. F. Ashburn.

—Work on the new church has been commenced, reports Bro. Raper from Reidsville.

HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

Having visited all of the appointments on this circuit, I will now try to give my impressions of the work. On May 8th I left Westminster for my first charge After a quiet night on the Chesepeake Bay with no fears of a second disaster such as happened to the Titanic and arrived in Norfolk and took the train for Littleton, N. C. I was met at the depot by Bro. N. M. Harrison and was conveyed to his hospitable home at Brinkleyville. I did not feel like a stranger here, having helped in a meeting last year. On the second Sunday in May, although the day was an unfavorable one, I found a very good congregation here at Bethesda church in Brinkleyville. The people were very appreciative and seemed hopeful of good things for the year. On the third Sunday I found a splendid congregation at Lee's Chapel. The Sunday School at this place had been discontinued during the winter, but it was decided on that day to reorganize. Here too the people seemed glad to hear the word and were very appreciative.

On the fourth sunday the appointment at Ringwood was met. The congregation there was larger than usual, so I was told After the service some of the brethren suggested that they buy a new organ for the church and within a few minutes a large part of the money was in sight. On the afternoon of the same day a large congregation greeted the new pastor at Union. We hope to have some good things to report from this place before the year closes. At Eden the first Sunday in this month an unusually good congregation was present and all seemed to be filled with the spirit of helpfulness. By public collection we raised the president's salary and the assessment for delegates' expenses to General Conference. Then Bro. J. W. Hardee took charge of the service and $80 was pledged toward the new pews. About $60. was already in hand and it is the intention to raise the amount to $200. and have the new pews in place and the walls re-calcimined by the 1st Sunday in August. Last Sunday brought us to Bethesda on the second round. A house full of people were there to engage in the communion service. One feature of the srevice was the use of the new individual communion set which was bought while Bro. W. L. Harris was pastor, but had never been used owing to Bro. Harris' death. At this service five persons, who were received into the church last year while Bro. Gerringer was pastor, were baptized.

The second quarterly conference was held at Union on Friday, May 24th. The business was transacted in a spirit of harmony. Bros. J. W. Hardee of Eden church and B. F. Lewis of Union were nominated as candidates for delegates to the annual conference.

Representatives of the Denton Orphanage have been appointed at the different churches and we hope to hear from them during the year. Arrangements have also been made for collecting the assessments for general interests. This month has been set aside by the pastor as church extension month and it is hoped that the entire amount assessed can be raised this month. At Bethesda a large part of the church extension assessment was raised last Sunday.

The people of Bethesda have also painted and partially furnished two rooms in the parsonage and the pastor is now comfortably located in the parsonage.

If any more loyal people than these can be found this writer would like to see them. Although I have been here only one month Bethesda church has paid almost half of its entire assessment for Pastor's salary. The other churches have done well also along his line. Everywhere I have been the people have given me such a hearty welcome that I feel perfectly at home. Our especial thanks are due Bros. N. W. Harrison and J. H. Vinson for their kindness in getting the pastor located.

In few words I would say that I am especially pleased with the outlook and am hoping for large things. Bro. Gerringer who served this work so acceptably last summer will be with me in several of my meetings and will find a hearty welcome among this people. I find that the name of Rev. W. L. Harris is a household word in this charge.

With best wishes to all who are striving for the advancement of His kingdom, I am Fraternally,

J. E. Pritchard.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. P. Kennett, Editor.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Our Home.

I was very much pleased to find that my Conference home, was to be with a former North Carolinian, to whom I had given a letter of transfer, from our Kernersville church, some twenty years ago to a Methodist Protestant church in Balimore. This brother is Dr. A. W. Totten a son of Rev. J. H. Totten. Dr. Totten married a Baltimore lady and they have a pleasant home at No. 1410 West Lombard Street. Dr Swain was my fellow guest and Dr. and Mrs Totten gave us a most delightful time, not only in the way of generous entertainment in their home, but by showing us the sights of the city, by day and by night.

At The Market Place.

On Saturday night they took us through the City Market, the largest open market in the United States. It is three blocks long and a block wide. There were thousands of people in the market gathering supplies for Sunday; and the abundance and quality of the food supplies were simply wonderful. The finest beef, and the most artistically cut that I have ever seen—lamb—pork—bacon hams and all kinds of meat, on every side. Fish of all varieties, and almost of all sizes crabs alive and crabs deviled. In the midst of the market we met with brother Holmes and his host. Bro. Holmes was intently examining a box of live crabs—these crabs like some church members never move forward, but always backwards or side wise. In the vegetable department there were vegetables of every kind and of the finest quality. One is impressed with the fact that the people in a great city can live on the very best the country affords, provided only that they have the money to pay for it.

Shadowing Two Men.

In passing through the market Drs. Totten and Swain led the way, and Mrs. Totten and I followed. It reminded me of detectives shadowing two men—we did not wish to loose them, and yet there was so much to attract attention that occasionally we would lose sight of them, in the seething mass of humanity—but Mrs. Totten seemed to possess the qualities of a good detective, and in a moment she would have them spotted, and so we shadowed them through the meat market, and could have arrested them at almost any moment.

The Conference.

Twenty years ago I attended my first General Conference. The contrast between the Conference then and the now, was very pleasing. Not only has the church grown as indicated by the size of the conference, but it seemed to me, that there was a great improvement in the personnel of the Conference. Every session was of interest, some intensely so, and to the writer it was a great Conference.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.

Bro. O'Briant filled his appointment here yesterday; preached, as usual, one of his helpful sermons. We have the best Sunday school in many years. We held memorial services and mothers' day second Sunday in May. We will have and Children's Day on fourth Sunday in June. We take up collection for Denton orphans in S. S. every fourth Sunday. Collection last fourth Sunday was about $2. Could not more of the schools do this? It is not much, but every little will help. In the death of Solomon Redding we lost one of our oldest and best members; he was always so cheerful. Pray for us that this may be our best year yet.

Reporter.

Burlington.

We had 225 in Sunday school last Sunday, an increase of 24 over the Sunday preceding, and the offering amounted to $4.34. We are hoping to have 250 present next Sunday.

A junior Philathea class was organized in our Sunday school last Sunday. Miss Margaret Davis was elected teacher and Miss Elon Heritage assistant. This class already had a good membership, and now that the organization is perfected, it will doubtless grow larger. A Junior Baraca class will be organized next Sunday among the boys from 10 to 15 years of age of our Sunday school.

A blackboard has been placed in our Sunday school by Bro. J. H. Boon and will be very helpful to the school.

The church choir was re-organized last Wednesday night with Bro. R. M. Andrews as leader, and met Sunday afternoon for practice.

Rev. Mr. Garrison, who is traveling in the interest of a Methodist Protestant College in Texas, spent some time in our city last week, and was to speak at our night service on Sunday night, but arrived too late to do so. C. B. W.

June 12, 1912.

Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Ct.

Our pastor, Bro. T. A. Williams, filled his appointment with us the second Sunday at 11 o'clock. His sermon was very inspiring. He made it plain to us that we should do the work God has given us to do, and not wait for others to do it for us. We know and feel that every one has his own work to do.

We were expecting our S. S. Convention to be held some time in July, but it has been decided to hold it the fifth Sunday in June in order to give every minister in the township an opportunity to attend. We extend to all a cordial invitation to be with us on that day. We have purchased some new pulpit chairs for our church, which we hope will add much to the comfort of our church.

Our S.S. is progressing nicely. The Little Stamp System, which we introduced in our school early in the spring, is proving to be a success. A number of our pupils have made a clear record to this date. We are expecting Bro Hinton to assist Bro. Williams in our special meeting which will begin the second Sunday in August. Pray for us that we may have a good meeting, and that we may not wait until then, but that we may begin now to work.

Success to the Herald.

Annie Sullivan.

June 12, 1912.

Other church reports on page 13.

DIED.

Causey.

Our hearts were made sad when the death angel in his journeyings to and fro through the earth, entered the home of Mrs. R. D. Causey and claimed for his victim the beloved wife, mother, and grandmother, Mrs. Mary Jane Causey, aged 85 years and 9 months. She was married to Mr. R. D. Causey in 1852; her maiden name was Miss Mary Jane Hendrix; to this union eight children were born; five sons and three daughters, one son having preceded the mother to the glory world. She was converted when a little girl and joined the church at Tabernacle, in which she was a firm believer. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, and her body was laid to rest in the family burying ground to await the resurrection morn, when the sea shall give up its dead and all who are in their graves shall come forth to hear their sentence from the great Master, those who have done good to enter into joy eternal, and those who have followed the downward path until it led them to their wreck and ruin, to eternal punishment.

Grandma, as she was familiarly called, will be greatly missed, not only in her neighborhood and surrounding community but the aged and crippled husband is left, while his life partner with whom he took the vows at the sacred altar to love and honor until death should part them, has gone and left him. We would say to him trust in God and it will not be long before you too can join her where parting will be no more, although we feel so keenly the great loss, yet we can but think how happy her spirit is now, rejoicing with those dear relatives and friends who have preceded her to the home above, and when we think of this we cannot wish for her to be with us again, battling and toiling with the hard problems of life that daily confront us.

When the children and grandchildren visit the old home, no more will they see the dear old smiling face, nor hear the kind words that were always her greeting, nor will they ever hear again the words of hope and encouragement that she always gave to the down-hearted. Dear mother, grandmother and aunt, you have gone from our midst, but we trust that your good, honest life may be an example to help us to live more nobly and when time has been spent and all our labors are finishtd that we may meet you around the throne of God where parting will be no more, is the wish and prayer of her loving niece.

Frances B. Lineberry.

Eller.

Adam Fields Eller, aged eighty-three years, went home to God on May 31st, 1912. He had lived all his life near Weaverville in Buncombe County, where he was honored and respected by all who knew him. He was a son of John A. and Elizabeth Eller. He was a brother of Rev. Joseph P. Eller, a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church, who was known over a great part of Western North Carolina as a man of great worth in bettering the moral stamina of the people.

Bro. Eller in 1857 married Miss Sabray Caroline Penland, who survives him. To them were born seven children, only two of which are living.

In 1877 he united with the Methodist Protestant church in a log school house near his home and afterward was one of the prime movers in building a church which was named Clark's Chapel. This church was supplanted by a still better one a few years ago under the pastorate of Rev. Geo. L. Curry, Bro. Eller doing part in this also.

Bro. Eller has held all the offices of his local church. He was delegate to the Annual Conference a number of times, and has been a licensed exhorter for thirty-four years. He was good help to al his pastors, especially in revival work. His earnest appeals to the unsaved were often wonderfully blessed and many have been let into the better life by his ministrations.

He was also used of God to influence a number of young men to enter the ministry, among them being Rev. J. H. Moton, of the N. C. Conference, M. P. Church.

The high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him was evidenced by the large gathering at his funeral. Revs. Lyda and Warren, of the M. E. Church, and Fogleman and Williams, of the M. P. Church all made talks, after which his body was interred with Masonic honors.

Apples the size of green peas were among the horticultural curiosities observed by one of our agricultural explorers during a recent trip through Northern China and Manchuria. He describes the productiveness of the trees as "something marvelous.' The bright red fruits are eaten fresh or dried, or made into preserves, by both Russians and Chinese. So hardy are the trees, which are of the "crab" family, that it is thought they would thrive almost anywhere in the northern United States; and as ornamental plants, when loaded with thousands of the tiny scarlet apples, they would be very effective.—Sel.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP.

H. A. Taine says of Paradise Lost: "This Adam entered Paradise via England. An M. P., an old Oxford man." So our religion entered the United States via Palestine. Its language, forms of thought, modes of action, are all Oriental. The soul may be divine, but the body is of the East. We must know what the writers of the Bible meant when they wrote of stewards, if we would understand the word.

A steward was a house-manager, usually a slave, he had the care of receipts and expenditures, and the duty of dealing out the proper portion to every servant and even to the children not yet of age.

He was responsible to his master; being property he could not own property; owned, he was not an owner. It was counted of a steward that he be faithful. Abraham sent Eliezer, of Damascus, his steward, to seek a wife for Isaac, the camel he owned belonged to his owner, the jewels he carried, the money he used were not his. He was property, not proprietor. He returned with the young woman and was content if his master was satisfied.

That incident gives background and color to stewardship. The truths we deal out are revealed for use, not speculation; we call men strictly to account if they pervert truth. Truth is not the only treasure given us for distribuiton. We put truth on an island surrounded by a sea of divine ownership; we let money wander foot loose. We discipline men for false teaching, but pass silently by the perversion of trust funds for personal use. The money spent by Christians for the kingdom is a small per cent. of the wealth in the churches. The maxims taught, the habits followed, have accumulated immense fortunes in the hands of Christians. Of this Christ gets a small beggarly portion. Cities, mountains, shores are burdened with palaces owned by Christians; automobiles on land and yachts on water speed the citizens of the kingdoms in search of pleasure; Christian work is hindered, generations in heathen lands come and go untouched by the truth, because we shrink from stewardship.

We talk of being bought with a price, say we are not our own, then claim to own property, and use it quite aside from Christ.

What would Abraham have done if Eliezer had used his master's wealth to get a wife for himself, taken the woman into Egypt and founded a family, leaving Isaac to watch and wonder?

If a man is bought by the blood of Christ, then his belongings belong to his Master, and it is simply his duty, and should be his delight to earn, save and spend for the glory of the house he is a part of, and steward over.

Gehazi caught the leprosy when he used his knowledge as a slave to enrich his own fortune. Achan was stoned to death because he perverted trust funds. Ananias and Sapphira were smitten because they lied about money. Let us profit by their failures. The Bible teaching about stewardship applies to money as well as to truth. We need not only orthodoxy, but orthopraxy. Truth taught as revealed, truth lived as commanded.

"We give Thee but Thine own,
Whate'er the gift may be;
All that we have is Thine alone,
A trust, O Lord, from Thee."

—Men and Missions.

MY MASTER.

I had walked life's path with an easy tread;
Had followed where comfort and pleasure led;
And then by chance in a quiet place
I met my Master, face to face.
With station and rank and wealth for a goal,
Much thought for the body, but none for the soul,
I had entered to win in lifes mad race,
When I met my Master, face to face.

I had built my castles and reared them high,
Till their towers had pierced the blue of the sky;
I had sworn to rule with iron mace,
When I met my Master, face to face.
I met Him and knew Him and blushed to see
That His eyes, full of sorrows, were fixed on me;
And I faltered and fell at His feet that day,
While my castles melted and vanished away;

Melted and vanished, and in their place
I saw naught else but my Master's face;
And I cried aloud: "O, make me meet
To follow the marks of Thy wounded feet!"
My thought is now for the souls of men.
I have lost my life to find it again,
E'er since alone in that holy place
My Master and I stood, face to face.—
Author Unknown.

THE INFIDEL'S SERMON TO A PREACHER.

Never shall I forget the remark of a learned, legal friend who was at one time somewhat skeptical in his views. Said he to me: Did I believe as you do, that the masses of our race are perishing in sin, I could have no rest. I would fly to tell them of salvation. I would labor day and night. I would speak it with all the pathos I could summon. I would warn and expostulate and entreat my fellowmen to turn unto Christ and receive salvation at His hands. I am astonished at the manner in which the majority of you ministers tell your message. Why, do you not act as if you believed your own words? You have not the earnestness in preaching that we lawyers have in pleading. If we were as tame as you are, we never would carry a single suit.

A decade of years has passed away since that remark was made. I bless God it was addressed to me. It put a fire into my bones which I hope will burn as long as I live. God preached a stirring sermon to me that day by the mouth of that infidel lawyer.—Peter Stryker, in The Gospel Banner.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO MISSIONARIES.

Recently Baron Kanda, head of the higher commercial school in Tokyo, at a reception and dinner given in honor of Mr. Russell and Mr. Hamilton Holt, of New York, said: "Let me in this connection pay a humble tribute to that noble band of American missionaries and teachers who have consecrated their lives to the cause of the moral and intellectual elevation of our people—that noble band headed by the late lamented Dr. Hepburn, who with the crown of over four-score years and ten, but with a still brighter one of his immortal work left in the hearts of his pupils here, has recently gone to his well-earned rest. He has left behind him not a few pupils who have since risen to posts of great importance in the life of New Japan, among whom I may point with pride to my honored friend, the president of the Bank of Japan (Baron Takahashi), present to-night. But there are many Hepburns, Verbecks, Browns and Williamses, the lasting influence of whose labors it is impossible to overestimate. And I am glad to say that this noble band is constantly recruited, and is ever swelling, whose influence is deeply stamped upon the rising generation and will be felt indirectly through generations to come."—Missionary Review.

Multiplied thousands of Chinese have abolished the queue, the Chinese silk cap, and now have short hair and wear a foreign style of caps and hats. Many dress altogether in foreign costume, while some wear only foreign headgear and shoes. In many places all the males have been forced to discard the queue; in some places it is left optional. All the teachers and students and all the servants in foreign employ here are now queueless. So are many men and boys who have no connection with missions and foreigners. The native Christians have led the way in this innovation.

MAKING THE WORLD LESS QUEER.

A call came for an unmarried minister to go to a very hard and poor station up among the mountains where only $250 a year could be paid. But no one could be found to go. The other places, a little less hard, had claimed all the unmarried men. Hardtown seemed doomed to be left entirely without a pastor.

But a noble young fellow—who shall say the heroes are all dead?—and his wife—the heroines are not all dead either—heard of the situation and their hearts were touched. He volunteered for the place, and, with many misgivings the bishop consented.

All went well for a while, The little wife knew marvelous economies and the people though so poor were so kind. Winter came on but there was wood in plenty and the money for Edward's new overcoat was nearly saved—then they would be snug and tidy for the year. And best of all, God's blessing was upon the work, the church was prospering. But sickness came, and the very shadow of death hung over the brave little minister's wife.

Then the Boston Deaconess Hospital doors swung open and the sorely stricken ones came freely to its blessed shelter. Railroad expenses? Ah, there was the precious overcoat money—what a good thing that the coat had not been really bought. So the two came—the one to the hospital and the other to the home next door. There were anxious days but there was skillful surgery, the shadow slowly lifted, and health crept slowly back,

The surgeon had come to know the young husband well, meeting him by the bedside of his wife. One day the surgeon said to the deaconess in charge:

"Do you know, there is a very odd thing about Mr. Rasmus. He never wears an overcoat. Here in December, too!"

"I think he hasn't got any coat," replied the deaconess, frankly. She had noticed it also.

"I think so too," said the doctor. "Hang it all, it's too bad. This is a queer world. Here I've got three. I started in the winter with two good ones, and the other day happening to fancy an ulster that I saw, I just bought it. Didn't need it at all. Funny isn't it, that things are not arranged a litle more evenly in this world. I've no doubt that young fellow's a better man than I am any day."

The deaconess said nothing. But that afternoon, a big package came for Edward Rasmus. It was—not an old overcoat—but a fine new ulster.

The surgeon had tried his hand at evening things up a little, making the world a little less queer.—Deaconess Advocate.

TO EXPLORE AMAZON VALLEY.

Some time this summer a big steam yacht will nose her way out of New York harbor, turn her prow toward the south and on the yacht will be six men, and with them members of the crew, each of whom will probably realize that it is a toss-up whether he will ever return or be claimed as prey of the perils that wait for him.

One of the six men will be Algot Lange, chief of the expedition, which for three years will penetrate the Amazon Valley. The University of Pennsylvania museum recently decided to send an expedition into this vast territory to study the haunts and habits and tribal characteristics and divisions of its estimated 400 indigenous native tribes.

A leader was found in Algot Lange, who a little more than a year ago, returned from the very country, whither he had been lured by the promise of unrivalled adventure, and whence he had returned, fever ridden, stricken in body, but with his appetite for adventurous exploration unsated.

To a reporter for The World, Lange who is only 28, of Danish descent and a graduate of the University of Copenhagen, yesterday told of his plans for the expedition, and of the conditions with which it would have to deal.

"The territory into which we shall probe," he said, "is to my mind, the most wonderful in the world. There is no river like the Amazon. So mighty is its current that its fresh water untainted by salt flows 150 miles out at sea. A fresh water tide is felt 800 miles inland from its mouth. In the wet season the headwaters rise 75 feet,. putting under water a valley one-third the size of the whole United States. At Iquitos, a town in Peru, 2,500 miles from the mouth, the river is two and a half miles in width, and is 200 feet deep. The Lusitania could navigate with comfort for 3,000 miles from the sea—to within 300 miles of the river's source in a small lake in the third range of the Andes—nearly to the Pacific coast.

"The Valley of the Amazon, if titled, could support the entire population of the earth. Settlements are eight hours journey apart. Yet some day, I am certain, Brazil will be the center of commercial attention.

"Our expedition will have as its home a comfortable yacht, about 100 feet in length, 14 feet beam and of shallow draught for navigating the tributary waters as far as possible. I will have five assistants, one of whom will be a motion picture camera operator. We will live aboard the steamer which will be screened from the attacks of mosquitoes. Tinned food will eke out the supply of game for the table. When a point is reached where the yacht must be left the moving picture man and myself will take a canoe until we come to the villages. It is when meeting with the natives that we will be called upon to use every art known to strategy and diplomacy.

"If the natives see us before we see them, we may never live to tell what happened to us. They are armed with the deadly blow-gun which propels a dart about the size and very like a hatpin with sufficient force to penetrate solid oak to the depth of one inch.

"The slightest scratch from one of these darts means death that no antidote can stay. If hit and even scratched only one simply goes to sleep in a painless paralysis. These darts have an effective range of 150 feet, and as the density of the jungle effectively hides one six feet away, it readily may be imagined that any native with hostile intent and a blow-gun might nip our exploring ambition in the bud. I have had made a body protector of aluminum plates, and as the natives aim for the trunk this may serve to give me immunity.

"However, if we see them first, and I hope this may always be the case, we will lay down all arms and use every form of pantomime and sign language to announce our peaceful intentions. Once among them we will study their habits, learn their traditions from their patriarchs, and taking moving pictures of their life. First taking films of animals in motion, developing them and reproducing them to the natives, we will gradually induce them to submit to being photographed.

"Some of the native tribes seem to possess a high grade of intelligence. I know of one tribe that employs a system of wireless telegraphy. For miles and miles, between the settlements or villages, at intervals are erected arms from which are suspended wooden bars of highly resonant quality and tuned to varying pitches like a scale. When word is to be sent from village to village, certain combinations of notes are struck upon these tune bars, formulating a certain message. The harmonic signal is caught by the operator at the next post and transmitted to the next operator beyond until the word has traversed the entire distance.

"As for the cannibals, I know of but four tribes that practice the revolting habit of eating each other. And this is not done for the sake of the meat, but is more in the nature of a symbolic religious rite. They roast and eat only the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet of their enemies slain in battle. This, they consider, prevents the spirits of their enemies from pursuing them or laying hands on them.

"Of the hardships we shall necessarily endure and of the perils we shall encounter I know well from past experiences. Of all the hazards to be met with, I place first that of sickness. Every man that accompanies me is certain to contract sickness of some kind, no matter how hardy his constitution. That is a foregone conclusion. There are two kinds of mosquitoes which can bite through canvas leggings. One kind causes malaria. Another gives yellow fever. They bite from sunset until sunrise and the female of the species is deadlier than the male.'

"Then, when daylight comes, another army of malicious insects swarms to the attack where the mosquitoes have retreated. There are 17 kinds of biting ants, all giving transient fever, but one—and that one, the tocandera, black, an inch and a half long, and from which natives get poison for their darts, gives a permanent fever. Then there are the sand flies and the jiggers—the jiggers that dig under one's toe-nails and can not be dislodged. Nor must the pium be forgotten. Every bite leaves a little hemorrhage, which later turns black. The piums bite until one's hands and face have turned black from the thousands of hemorrhages. They will not bite twice in the same place.

"The next hazard is met in bathing. Alligators every one knows of, but one usually knows of their proximity. Water snakes, stinging rays, several varieties of fish, some or all of which are sure to lurk in every pool, render bathing, or even washing one's hands, something better left undone or at least undertaken with more than caution.

"Trees that are apt to fall on one in the jungle, or falling from a river bank, are apt to crush a canoe. I place as the peril next in order. After this peril I would place that met in approaching the natives and that encountered in meeting the jungle denizens, the wild boars, jaguars and the like.

"But despite all these dangers, there is a fascination about the jungles, with its luxuriant foliage and its wild life, that grips you. Knowing as I do of the perils, discomforts and hardships that await me, and from which I can not possibly escape, but which I must endure and suffer, I look forward to the Amazon valley as I did on my previous expedition. The Amazon may eventually 'get me,' but I will have lived!"—Daily Paper.

Temperance, indeed, is a bridle of gold; and he who uses it rightly is more like a god than a man.—Burton.

THE WONDERFUL GYRO-COMPASS.

The invention of the magnetic compass, supposed to have been first made in China and brought to Europe from there in the 14th century, has been a great thing in its way, for without it navigation would be a difficult and dangerous matter. But the magnetic compass has vital defects and something superior has long been sought. The magnetic needle of course points not to the true pole but to the magnetic pole, some 56 degrees of latitude away from the true pole, and moreover this magnetic pole is constantly shifting in a very complicated way. When land surveys are made by the compass certain allowances and corrections have to be made for them according to the year in which they were made, and mariners have to be posted constantly as to the wanderings of the magnetic pole. It was this variation of the compass from where it should have pointed theoretically which so puzzled Columbus and made his crew think they were bound for some diabolical regions of magic where even the laws of nature were no longer in force. Then with the introduction of iron and steel ships. The behavior of the magnetic compass again became eccentric, for the needle was subject to these local influences.

The Carnegie Institution at Washington now has a ship at sea which has no iron-work on it, engaged in investigating this matter of magnetic variation.

We can therefore see with what interest the new Sperry gyroscope-compass, or gyro-compass as it is called, is being watched. Our navy now has five of these new compasses, trying them out under the most rigid conditions. As they cost $10,000 apiece they are not the sort of compass that the average man will be carrying around as a watch-charm, nor will even ordinary vessels be able to afford them. But their cost will no doubt be reduced as they become more common. The instrument is an American device and is considered the best thing the world has yet produced in this line. It is especially suitable for use on warships for it need not be placed on the exposed deck or bridge but can be placed anywhere in the hull of the ship, where it will be entirely protected from shot and shell. Indicators connected with it by electric wires are placed on the bridge and elsewhere so that the officers can at all times see how the ship is pointing without actually going to the compass.

The gyro-compass is based on the principle of gyroscopic action discovered by Foucault the great French scientist in the 17th century, namely that a body once set spinning will keep its axis in the same permanent direction. This is illustrated in the scientific toy known as the gyroscope top. The axis of a gyroscope, when not interfered with by other forces, will assume a position absolutely parallel to the axis of the earth. The reason for this is not understood but the fact is known. In the gyro-compass the spinning mass is kept rotating at a speed of 9,000 revolutions a minute and at this speed its axis becomes parallel to that of the earth and stays there irrespective of every ordinary disturbance. The rolling and pitching of the ship has no effect on it, nor does magnetism affect it, and no matter how many twists and turns the ship makes, the axis of the gyroscope points faithfully to the true celestial pole. It gives one almost uncanny feeling to behold his instrument always pointing to the same place in the heavens in spite of every change in its position, as if it were wholly independent of its local surroundings and yielded only to superior always. The Germans have been experimenting for some years on a similar instrument but the American invention is claimed to have various points of superiority.—Pathfinder.

Midway, Haw River Ct.

Sunday was our regular prayer meeting day. A very good crowd out and the meeting was conducted by Bro. G. R. Wright. Our S. S. is still doing very well. June 2 there were 70 present; col., $1.44, June 9, 68 present, col., $1.23. We are now trying to make a little money for the orphans at Denton. We are glad to have Mr. George and Miss Ada Bloome in our S. S. again after being away in school all winter and spring. We feel that they will be a great help to us.

We were also glad to have Mr. A. C. Dixon, of Greensboro, who has been visiting home people for the past week worship with us last Sunday.

Ella E. Apple, Reporter.

Reidsville, N. C., June 12, 1912.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

On last Friday night the revival which had for two weeks been in progress in the Graham church came to a close. It goes without comment that Bro. and Mrs. Dixon, our principal help, did most efficient work. Bro. Davis, of Burlington, Bro. Holmes, of Saxapahaw, and Bro. Garrison, of Texas, each preached a most excellent sermon during the meeting. We were surely glad to have all these good workers with us and to say the least their efforts were appreciated by both pastor and people. It is impossible to know definitely as to results, but it is safe to say that between 25 and 30 accepted Christ either as converted or reclaimed. So far 17 have joined the church. Some of these, however, were received by letter. It is to be hoped that more of these converts will yet join the church.

Last Sunday was a good day for Haw River. Good congregations both morning and night. Communion service was observed at the morning hour. At this service six members were taken into the church.

Both Graham and Haw River are now supplied with individual communion services. We are well pleased with the individual service. It is to be hoped that all our churches will soon have individual services. They are indeed so very desirable and the aluminum goods, which are preferable, are by no means expensive. Our Graham service consisting of two trays, with 72 glasses, base, cover, 2 bread plates, wine filler, baptismal bowl, and two collection plates, including transportation charges, only $26.12.

Geo. L. Curry.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

We had children's service the first Sunday. Had all day service. Miss Nellie Sledge made music in the morning and Miss Lillian Roger in the evening. Mr. Ledbetter made a talk about Sunday-school work. The church was beautifully decorated. Mr. Sledge was up here visiting his sister at Mr. Green Bobbitt's. Second quarterly conference met at Littleton Saturday before the third Sunday. All churches were represented but one, Weavear's Chapel. Messrs. E. A. and Tom Carter were made nominees for Annual Conference. Our Sunday school is growing in interest and in number. Miss Fannie Barnes was elected teacher of Class No. 1; Miss Nellie, Class No. 2; Miss Julia Carter, Class No. 3; Miss Mollie Carter, Class No. 4. We will lose two of our teachers soon, one before this reaches the press. Miss Carter will become Mrs. Pittman, and Miss Sledge will go to her home near Louisburg. Mr. Neal and Miss Mary Willey were in this section last week. I failed to say that the offering for foreign missions was about $7.00 on Children's Day.

I reported for my cousin, Fannie Barnes, this time. This is first time I ever wrote for publication; am 14 years old. Go to Corinth S. S. every Sunday, almost, with Cousin Fannie.

Your new friend,

Alvin Willey.

(Thank you, Alvin. I hope you will write again.—Editor).

—The Presbyterians in general assembly voted to rescind the action by which Secretary of Agriculture Wilson was chosen as a delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian council at Aberdeen, Scotland. This because of Wilson's attendance at the brewers' congress in Chicago last summer

A "WHATSOEVER" EXPERIENCE.

For Junior Superintendents.

The unruly boys, overflowing with animal spirits, were placed by a Junior worker in Victoria, on the whatsoever committee of the Junior society. No girls were admitted to this committee; it was to be the boys own.

Curiously enough, the work that interested them most was visiting sick people. Each was given ten or fifteen cents to buy some small gift for the person he was scheduled to visit, and often they supplemented this gift with articles from home.

One day consulting at a shop window about what to buy, one suggested a bottle of tomato sauce, "It goes well with bread and butter even if you have no meat," said one of the boys sagely.

When they arrived at the home of the old man they were sent to visit, one of them said, "We've brought you some things from the Junior Endeavor society,—a bottle of tomato sauce; hope you'll like it."

"Why, laddies," said the old man, "that's a real answer to prayer. Some one gave me some cold meat this morning, and I have been asking the Lord to send me some tomato sauce to eat with it. I thank you, and now I will thank Him."

The boys never forgot it. They were careless and rowdy, but this experience made an impression that could not be effaced. It helped to make God real to them.

A SOCIETY THAT LOST FIVE YEARS

The Old First Congregational society, Cleveland O., has just celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday which might have been its thirtieth.

Before the arrival of Christian Endeavor there was a union young people's meeting in Cleveland. Under the leadership of Dr. H. M. Tenney the Old First young people's meeting organized with a constitution and rules, adopting, according to the church archives, the name of Christian Endeavor. This was probably in the winter of 1882.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR JUNE 23.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Reading That is Worth While," 1 Tim. 4 3-15.

This is such a valuable asset that it is a great pity that much of it is spent by both youth and age in reading books that entertain merely and do not instruct. In an age when thousands of printing presses are running night and day and turning out every conceivable sort of literature, one should be careful to rea dthe best, for no one can have time to read all.

It is gratifying to know that the sales of the Bible far exceed those of any other single book, yet we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that it is not studied and read as thoroughly as it should be. There is tendency to read books about the Bible and diluted commentaries rather than the original word. Much time should be spent in reading the book ourselves. "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life." Read other books and doubts are cast upon our faith.

It matters not whether you read an article that is purely instructive, or whether you read a story that is intended to amuse or inspire, if it does not move you or set you thinking, it is not worth while. Reading that makes you think takes hold of you and becomes a part of you; it becomes an influence in your life for good and inspires you to better things.

"No one can be called well educated who has not at least an elementary knowledge of the Bible," said Professor Black of Boston University, "because 40 per cent of the allusions used in English literaure are taken from its inexhaustible storehouse of truth. We have never had a great English author who was not fairly saturated with the Bible." If the Bible has proven to be at once the storehouse and fountain from which the authors of "reading that is worth while have nourished the world, why should we not give it first place in our reading?

Read Edward Howard Griggs's delightful book, " The Use of the Margin" and you will learn how fragments of time may be turned to good account. Arnold Bennett has something good to say, and he says it in a unique manner, in How to Live on 24 Hours a Day." When you have read these two books, which you can do in a suprisingly short time, you will be strongly inclined to "give attendance to reading." Ten minutes' reading each day would mean five or six books a year, says The Classmate. Suppose it would mean five books a year, and the year's reading included two histories, two biographies, and one book of poems. The result would go far towards making the achievements of the year valuable as life-builders.

Hints on Worth While Reading.

1. Biography is worth while reading, for you are in company wih noblest lives, and they inspire you to attempt greater things.

2. History is worth while reading, for it teaches you of the events, development and experiences of time that is past

3. Reading just for pastime may be worth while reading, if only for recreation Never read what is not worth remembering.

4 The book of all books is the Bible, and yet strickly speaking it is not a book at all. but a complete library, and mightily worth while.

5. Among the worth while books the Bible is first. The many books of the Bible, each one in its place, have made possible all other good books in the modern World.

6.The new life generated within us by the reading of good books has made material for histories, travel, exploration, accounts of heroism, liberal giving, and various other matters.

7.The great nations of today are the nations that have followed the path blazed out by the sword of the Spirit. The new life in some of the old empires is due to the influence of the Bible.

8. Whosoever acknowledges himself to be a zealous follower of truth must of necessity make himself a lover of Books and not only a lover of books, but a consistent student of worth while books and magazines of the day.

The Week's Novelty.

At the opening of the meeting distribute slips of paper and pencils, and devote five minutes to the making of lists of books that the Endeavorers have read that they remember with the greatest pleasure. Ask them to be honest in their making of lists and put down, not what they think they ought to have enjoyed the most, but what they actually did enjoy the most. Those lists wiill not be signed. They will be gathered and handed over to some older person who is the wisest reader you can find, and at the same time a good speaker. While the meeting is going on he will be reading these lists and marking upon them the points upon which he wishes to comment. At the close of the meeting he will take fifteen minutes to talk about the lists, brining out their good points and telling how they might be improved; that is, how Endeavorers may raise the standard of what they really enjoy reading. A. R. W.

Daily Reading.

M. Reading that elevates——Ps. 19:7-11
T. Books that need study——Ezek. 2:8-10
W. Books Christ read——Luke 4: 16-20
T. Reading with attention——Neh. 8: 1-3
F. Memorizing——Matt. 4: 4, 7, 10
S Books that build——1 Pet. 2: 1, 2
Sun. Topic.

—Our State has 439,804 young people under twenty years of age in Sunday school. A splendid army, isn't it? But just think of the 656,123 young people under twenty out of Sunday school. Whither are they tending? Let no effort be spared to bring them in.

WANTED.

A first class singing school teacher for two or three months. Will give him regular work for this length of time or more, if we can get the right kind of man, Anyone wishing to answer this ad., write Rev. H. W. Braswell, Shelby, N. C.

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1912. NUMBER 30.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

CHURCH UNION VAGARIES.

All recognize the value of harmony and cooperation among men. It would be criminal intentionally to do anything that would cause strife among brethren. But believing as we do that a division of the church into branches is best both for the purity and effectiveness of the church, we cannot but view with displeasure efforts to reverse the natural and proper order. And when these efforts are due to manifest misconceptions or misinterpretations of Scripture, it is time to speak a word of protest. There come to mind a number of church union arguments used in favor of special church union schemes that appear to us to be founded in misconception.

We have repeatedly heard our Lord's words of prayer to the Father, that his followers may "be one as we are one," used in favor of the organic union of two or more churches. That seems to us clearly a perversion of our Lord's language. Was Jesus a Unitarian? Did he mean for us to understand by the words "one as we are" that the Father and the Son are one identical person? We Trinitarians do not so understand it, and yet some of us quote these words in favor of reducing two churches to one identical organization. We believe that the oneness of the Father and the Son is a oneness of purpose, a perfect harmony of spirit, and that this is the oneness among His followers for which He prayed and which is so desirable. Division into branches is not inconsistent with the spirit of unity. All the members of the church of all denominations can join in singing

"We are not divided,
All one body we,"

if all are truly joined to Christ; for then all are part of His one body. But some seem not to be satisfied with union with Christ: they want to reduce the whole church to subjection to one human head. That is the great cause of the trouble: little usurping human heads lift themselves up and aspire to the authority that belongs only to Christ. They seem to forget Christ's own plain words: "One is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." And—"All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth."

Much of this striving after organic union we believe to be due to a desire for uniformity—uniformity in church ceremonies and services. There may be great inspiration to some in the thought that all are singing out of the same hymn book and perhaps singing the same song at the same time, but to us dreary monotony is a more undesirable thing than pleasing variety. History teaches the futility of efforts to bring about universal conformity with prescribed usages. God has made men free and the Gospel makes them freer, and the attempt to catch and hold men in ecclesiastical nets will ever result in failure.

One of the most shocking and outrageous misconceptions that we have heard expressed is that it would be doing service to sacrifice the newer and nobler form of organization in order to bring about a union under an old and effete form of organization. That would be glory indeed!

Then we find others advocating the bringing together of Calvinist and Arminian in one ecclesiastical body. The right of private interpretation of Scripture is strained to force the conclusion not only that we ought to permit every man to teach what he pleases to call his interpretation of the Bible, but that we ought to provide him with a pulpit and a congregation and actually pay him for preaching what we believe to be false doctrine!

There are also fallacious considerations touching the matter of economy mixed up with a grain of truth. We believe the denominations should respect each other more in the matter of building churches, and not try to build new ones where there is not room for another, but we think that it is more often the case that the community is better served religiously by a plurality of denominations. The argument that it requires sacrifice to support so many churches is true, but Christianity is a religion of sacrifice. There is not much Christianity where there is little sacrifice. Of course we are to distinguish clearly between waste and sacrifice, and not call sacrifice waste or waste sacrifice.

—The M. E. General Conference at Minneapolis voted that the use of tobacco should be a bar to the episcopacy. That being the case, how can ordinary ministers, out of which bishops are made, consistently use tobacco? And how can laymen out of which ministers must be made consistently use the weed? Our General Conference at Atlantic City 12 years ago put itself on record as disapproving the use of tobacco on the part of ministers. These actions should cause laymen very seriously to reflect on the matter of their using tobacco.

—It is said that Mayor Gaynor of New York City received an appeal for money to help defray the expenses of some delegates to the Baltimore Convention written by a man who said he was in charge of the delegates and who promised his support to Gaynor if he sent the money. Gaynor telegraphed this apt reply: "You will not be in charge long. Your moral perceptions are too inconspicuous."

—We are glad to know that Moriah people are contemplating building a new church. Such a move is in keeping with this progressive and active congregation.

—When a man disagrees with you, do not at once presume that his motives are bad. His heart may be better than your head.

THE DENTON ORPHANAGE.

In the M. P. Herald of June 13 there appeared an article regarding the location of the Denton Orphanage, social conditions of Denton, the condition and outlook of the school, and the like, that seems to call for a reply. In the first place, if all that was said in that paper were true, what good could the author hope to do by writing such an uncalled-for article? There has been appointed a competent committee on location. This committee is fully capable of attending to its own business, and, if it were not, the author of the paper referred to is in no condition to make intelligent suggestions, looking, as he does, through glasses blue as indigo. For heroic effort and unprejudiced liberality, no charge in the N. C. District has done more than Denton. As a charge it has always stood ready to pay for what it received and, one the other hand, it demanded what it paid for, but, possibly, has not always received it.

The good that has been accomplished by the Orphanage at Denton can not be estimated, and to disregard the saerifics of the good people of that community and to reflect upon the people, ignoring their unselfish service, is a job too small for a full-grown man.

As to the school, it is passing strange that any one will set himself up as a judge of a school like that and the work it has done and is doing when about all he knows about it is what he saw during vacation when there was no school in session. I am reliably informed that the last five months of the school, up to and including commencement, were months of good work and the present out-look is good. Boarding students who wish to find a good school at a low rate will find it at Denton.

The author of the article in question says he was there when the "Orphans' Home first began", but several then on the ground have asked the question, "What did he do to launch it?" When young ladies who had come from good homes where they were unused to drudgery, in the most beautiful self-sacrificing spirit, with their own hands were stretching poultry wire and doing all in their power to make the Home go, the self-constituted critic and fault-finder did not turn his hand over to help. It is easy to sit at the table and write a few misleading lines compared to going out on the firing line and facing the responsibility and hardship. The Orphanage, wherever located, and the school at Denton are both worthy of the best service the church can render. It is a good plan when a man can say no good of a person or institution that is struggling to bless the world, to keep his mouth shut.

W. E. Swain.

A Reply to W. A. Ledford.

When I received my last week's Herald and began to read I soon came to an article from the pen of one W. A. Ledford, which I cannot allow to pass without some notice. Now in regard to Denton and her people, he is the most unjust, unfair man or whatever he is, I have ever heard of, to know as much as he claims to know, and yet knows such a little. My first pastorate was Davidson Ct., of which the society at Denton and the church at Pleasant Grove was then a part, now Denton charge. Her people, I must say, I have never found a better or more loyal people than are in those two churches, and as wanting something for nothing, I was pastor for three years and they always paid me regularly, and at the end overpaid me.

If W. A. Ledford wants to know why they did not pay him more I can tell him, as I heard from the people there quite often. They did not get anything to pay for. One good sister, who visited in Denton, said "all he did was to read a newspaper clipping." And I suppose that was badly read.

And more, the falsity of his charge is still further seen when we note what these two churches are sending out: three boys now, or have been, in Western Maryland College preparing for the ministry. I think also that W. A. L. is receiving aid from the church. And while I was pastor there, those two churches paid ministerial claims, because they believe in an educated ministry. I know those people, such men as Allen Morris, Cicero Surratt, Buck Wall, Dan Surratt, and a host of others I will not take the space to mention. Never have I found any where a greater loyalty than I found in the people of Denton. Even those Primitive Baptists paid me very liberally, for which I am still thankful, and I am sure if there had been anything worth while in the Rev. W .A. L., I am sure they would have paid him also.

Now to the school. In last week's paper the Editor says Bro. Pender speaks encouragingly of the Denton school. I think when one goes there with eyes big enough, brain large enough, to hold a vision, and mind enough to size up men as they are, will see more than W. A. L. saw when he was there.

J. A. Ledbetter.

—Mr. and Mrs. Milton Vuncannon returned to their home at Star last Saturday after a visit to friends in Asheboro.—Courier.

WHY?

Such similarity in the ways the people calling themselves the children of God are living, and those not claiming to be His children are living. When on special occasions we see a number partaking of the emblems typifying the shed blood and broken body of the Son of God who gave himself as a ranson for the redemption of lost humanity, and by so doing claiming to be children of God, saying to all onlookers, I have by the grace of God been separated from the world, the flesh and the Devil, feeling in my heart that I am journeying to the City of God; and by so doing I have again renewed my covenant with the Church and with God, that I intend to live a new life in the sight of God and man: though with many from all external eviednces in the future they are acting falsely. Listen to their conversation at their homes; even on the Sabbath day their main topic is their crop, their stock, or their money: how much they have accumulated, and what they intend doing with it; how they intend investing it; watching every opportunity when they hear of some one who by misfortune has been forced to the wall. "Now is my time to drive a good bargain. I have the money, he is bound to sell." So says Mr. A. He belongs to the same church Mr. B. does, their lands joining. Mr. B., a man of family, and by sickness in his family, his expenses for medicine and doctor bills daily increasing, his time given to attending to his sick family, kept him away from his farm so much he could not give his attention to his farm. The debt increasing daily, yet, by the providence of God his family was restored to health.

Now Mr. B. says, I must pay my debts. Alas, my money has been paid out for medicine and doctor bills. I will go to Bro. A. and borrow the money; he has it. Bro. A. says, Yes, I have it; you can get it if you will make me safe. In order to do so, Bro. B. has to give a deed of trust on his home to get the money.

Sickness again in Brother B.'s family. He must have some money; he goes to Bro. A. again. Yes, I have the money, and I will give you thus and so for your farm. O, says B., I don't see how I can afford to take that price. Well, says A., that is all I will give. Bro. B. has seen several of his brothers in the church, all having money to spare, though knowing that A. has a deed of trust on B.'s land, refuse to let B. have the money.

Brother B., rather than see his family languish and die for want of medical attention and the necessaries of life, accepts the offer, disposes of his home; then A. goes out among his neighbors highly elated in the trade he made.

At next communion, how can Mr. A. kneel at the altar and feel in his heart that he has treated Mr. B. right? Is this not one example of the dealings of many whose names are enrolled on some class book? The Apostle James asks the question, Whoso hath this world's goods and shutteth his bowels of compassion, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

Is that not the way many church members are doing? Are they not witholding when it is within their power to do? Is it not on that or similar lines the world is and has been doing for a long time? Such being the truth, hence the question, Who can show the mark of distinction between the man who claims to be one of God's children and many that do not? Are they not witholding when they could assist?

Again, where do we find many of the young generation and some of the old members of the church? In the dancing hall, midnight revels, in the saloon, theatre, at the card table, horse race, houses or places of bad repute, not going to Sabbath school or church, but going out pleasure riding, and in various ways conforming their lives to the ways of the ungodly, contrary to the solemn pledge they made to God and man. Oh how great the sin, to tell God, I am going to live a better life, and tomorrow or in a short time, He sees and hears you doing and saying the same things you once asked him to forgive you for. You were once led to realize that if you continued in the way you were going, Hell would soon be your home.

O reader, have you not in your heart felt that you were saying and doing contrary to your promise to God by not conforming your life to your own words? Young reader, old reader, young member, old member, can you now say that you are earnestly desiring and trying, by the help of God, to do what you promised God and man you would do when you joined the church? If not, why not? There is a great day coming, and if you continue to go in the way so many church members are going, on what are you basing your hopes of meeting your God in peace?

How are you using the means God has blessed you with? Are you using them for God's glory and honor, or are you saying, as many do, I am laying up for a rainy day? Jesus says, Lay up treasures in heaven; there will be no rainy days in heaven; there will be some hot dry days in hell. See the fine houses, the fast horses, the costly automobiles; look at the church building you sometimes enter, see the condition that some of them are in; look at the care-worn pastor, worn to a shadow. That man in the fine mansion that came to the old rusty church when asked for a little help for repairs or an increase in pastor's salary, "O, I can't afford it!" Brother, you cannot afford to go back on your promises to God. Did you not once promise to honor, obey, love and serve God? How then can you say you are doing so when you are using the means God has blessed you with for your own aggrandizement in order when your eyes are closed in death, that it may be said he was worth so much. Brother, why not so live and use what God has blessed you with that God will say, Well done, good and faithful servant, come up higher.

T. R. T.

THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC.

(From an address by Stanley W. Finch, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, before World's Purity Congress, Louisville, Ky., May 7, 1912.)

The white slave traffic! What is it? Whom and what does it involve? Is it possible to suppress it, and if so how?

It is a fact that there are now scattered throughout practically every section of the United States a vast number of men and women whose sole occupation consists in enticing, tricking, or coercing young women and girls into immoral lives and then either living directly off of their illicit earnings or transferring them for a consideration to others for a similar purpose. Their business methods have been so far developed and perfected that they seem able to ensnare almost any woman or girl whom they select for the purpose. The great majority consists of young women and girls who have either been led to such lives by deception and trickery or who have been driven to them by force and fraud. The cleverly-worded advertisement for help is perhaps one of the most insidious and effective instruments which is or can be used. These traffickers are generally shrewd, careful observers of human nature, and they are quick to perceive and to single out girls who—while as yet honorable and virtuous—are inclined to be somewhat careless, and those who, through lack of or distaste for parental restraint, undertake to select their own companions, amusements and occupations. Among such young women and girls the white slaver finds a limitless and fertile field for his awful trade. In this connection the theatre, the moving picture show, the cafe, the skating rink, and the dance hall,—while in themselves often useful and beneficial for education, entertainment, and exercise, becomes instruments which enable these conscienceless fiends to accomplish the downfall and eternal ruin of even the most innocent and virtuous of our young women and girls.

Only a few months ago a young country girl, twenty years of age, while attending a moving picture show in this very city, met a woman whom she thought to be a friend, and who offered to secure domestic employment for her in a distant southern city. The young girl, herself innocent of any wrong, and unsuspicious, accepted the offer and using the railroad ticket furnished her by her false friend, went to the address given, and not until she was imprisoned in that house and forcibly overpowered and ravished in the infamous effort to reduce her to that most awful slavery did this pure, brave-hearted girl realize that this woman here in Louisville was but the tool of a set of fiends to whom adequate punishment can never be administered by any of the processes of modern law. Through a fortunate chain of circumstances this young girl escaped the dreadful pit which is devouring thousands of other girls all over the land, but the awful business remains, a crying disgrace to our great country. Among the many other cases shown by our records is one involving a girl seventeen years of age of good character, who lived in one of the smaller cities on Lake Michigan. This girl, while employed as a telephone operator, attended a dance where she met a young man of good appearance and apparently of good character. This young man was, however, a procurer for a house of ill repute in one of our large cities and while accompanying this young girl along the country road to her home, he forcibly ravished and subsequently placed her in a house of ill fame. This young man is now serving a term of five years in the penitentiary. The girl was rescued from the life of shame and returned to her parents. In another instance a girl of sixteen, while spending the afternoon at a seaside resort of one of our largest cities, was approached by two white slave procurers, who exhibited bogus police badges and pretended to place her under arrest as a truant. Supposing that they were acting under proper authority she made no outcry, and accompanied them to a street car going in the direction of her home. The facts as to the manner in which this girl was subsequently intimidated by these fiends, and under threats of death, compelled to go with them to a room where she was ravished and subsequently placed on board a coastwise vessel and taken to a house of ill fame in another city and state, and there confined and compelled to receive foreigners and turn the earnings over to the master to whom she was sold by her captors, are almost unbelievable.

However, these facts were clearly established in court during a trial, as a result of which the defendants are now serving terms in the penitentiary. Another case which was recently prosecuted by our Bureau of Investigation involves a young girl who answered an advertisement which appeared in a leading paper in one of our largest Southern cities. Under a contract made pursuant to this advertisement this girl proceeded to a city in another Southern state for the purpose of complying with the terms of her contract of employment. She found however upon entering her place of employment, that instead of being a respectable house, it was a house of ill fame. Upon attmpting to leave the place she was forcibly detained and every effort was made to induce her to practice prostitution. However, she refused to do so and finally, with the aid of one of the patrons of the place, she secured assistance and was thereby enabled to leave the place. The defendant in this case was promptly convicted and is now confined in the penitentiary.

In very many places procurers endeavor, through promise of marriage or by actually going through the form of marriage, to obtain control of young women and girls, and finally force them into immoral lives. A case of this kind recently arose in one of the larger cities of the Middle West. In that case a girl seventeen years of age, and of good character became acquainted in an apparently unobjectionable manner with a man who, like many of his kind, appeared, on the surface to be of good character. After a brief courtship they were duly married and left on a wedding trip to a neighboring city, where the husband claiming that he had lost his money and was unable to secure a position, attempted to persuade the young wife to engage in prostitution. She refused and was cruelly beaten by him. Apparently, however, even then she did not appreciate the nature of the creature to which she was married, and she went with him to one of our largest Eastern cities. There again he attempted to force her to engage in immoral practices, and upon her refusal she was beaten by him, food was withheld for days, and finally, when she had reached the point of exhaustion and was thoroughly intimidated, she was forced by her husband to receive the foreigners whom he brought to her. By this means the girl was degraded to the point where her master was able to force her to solicit on the streets and finally she was transferred by her procurer, through a white slave agency in New York City, to a house of ill repute in the City of Washington, where she was when the facts as to the matter were developed by our Bureau. As a result of the prosecution in this case, the defndant was sntenced to five years in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia, where the manager of the agency through which she was sold is also confined. The girl was restored to her parents, and has since been living a respectable life. In another notorious case which occurred in one of our Southern cities, the defendant, who is now serving a term of three years in the Atlanta penitentiary, married a very young girl—a mere child—and took her from place to place, arranging with cab drivers and keepers of assignation house for meetings between his wife and other men, he taking the proceeds. The investigation in this case showed that he had previously married other girls and mistreated them in a similar manner. In another recent case which arose in one of our Eastern cities one of these white slavers, as a result of carefully laid plans, covering a considerable period, succeeded in seperating a very young woman from her husband and under the pretext of procuring a divorce and of marrying her, led her into an immoral life and finally compelled her to practice prostitution and turn over the earnings to him.

There are a multitude of other cases in which young women and girls, from thirteen years of age and upwards, of good moral character, have in a variety of ways been led or driven, by deception, fraud, and force, into becoming victims of the white slave trade.

If there is one thing above another which seems to be difficult for people generally to understand, it is with regard to the manner in which these girls are led to continue in their immoral lives and to surrender their earnings to the white slavers after the physical restraint, to which they are at first subjected, is removed. In the first place it should be remembered that when these girls fall into the hands of procurers an attempt is made to debauch them, as speedily as possible to such an extent that they themselves, as well as every one else, will feel that they are hopelessly lost and can never again be received by their families and friends, and that there is absolutely no chance for them to go back to their old modes of life. Many of these girls disappear in such a manner that their relatives and friends never know what has become of them. Their relatives some times fear the truth, but they hope against hope that they are mistaken, and when, after a while, they receive from the girl a communication—written at the dictation of her master—to the effect that she is engaged in some legitimate occupation and is happily situated, they are only too ready to believe that such is the case, and the girl herself no doubt, takes comfort in the thought that her relatives and friends know nothing of the depths of degradation to which she has been driven. These circumstances serve the procurer well. He makes it his business to obtain full information as to the relatives and friends of the girl, and knowing the real facts as to her life, and knowing that she feels that it would be better to perish in that life than to bring shame upon her mother or father or her other relatives or friends, he uses this knowledge as a club to force her to do his bidding. If at any time he sees a disposition on her part to leave him and to return home or to engage in some legitimate occupation, he threatens to tell her mother and her friends all about her and to represent to them that she has voluntarily engaged in the nefarious business into which he himself has driven her.

These creatures also frequently represent to their poor slaves (whether truthfully or not it is not for me to say) that they "stand in" with the police authorities, and are able and ready at all times to protect them from arrest or to secure their release by furnishing bail or otherwise in case of arrest, provided they do their bidding. They also threaten to cause their arrest and imprisonment if these poor victims fail to do their bidding.

These representations and others, which readily occur to these unscrupulous traffickers, who hesitate at nothing in order to hold their victims, usually serve to induce girls to at least postpone the time when they will change their mode of living, and often enable these men to control them without physical restraint, other than an occasional beating, after they have had possession of them for a few months

One of the principal representations that is made by these men to the girls, in order to continue to hold them under their control, is that they are saving the money for them in order that both, within a short time, may quit their improper mode of life and take up some legitimate line of business. The date when they are to take this step is, of course, put off from time to time, as necessity arises, in order to hold the services of the girl, and many false representations are made as to the manner in which the money is being saved, the whole purpose of the white slaver being to retain possession of the girl during the period of her greatest earning capacity and eventually to drop her or turn her over to some other trafficker when he finds it to his advantage, and opportunity arises, to procure a younger or more attractive girl for his use. Meanwhile the traffickers themselves take practically all of the earnings of their girl or girls, as the case may be—except that portion which is appropriated by the madam of the house in which the girl is located— and spend it for flashy clothes and in gambling and drinking, they in some cases spending a portion of their time in soliciting trade for their slaves.

In most of our cities of any considerable size there are numerous restaurants and other places where these slavers congregate for the purpose of drinking, smoking and discussing their affairs. With them the girls are mere chattels, and are lightly spoken of by them as their "meal tickets" or their "stock," and deals are made between them for the exchange of girls or for the turning of them over to other traffickers. As for the girl herself, between the madam, who usually receives one half her earnings, and the men to whom she is generally required to turn over all of the rest, and by whom she is also held to a strict account and is frequently beaten and otherwise abused if her earnings are not sufficient to satisfy him, the poor girl is indeed in a miserable plight. No other form of slavery which has ever been devised can equal her condition.

Hours and days might well be consumed in explaining the facts and conditions involved by this white slave traffic in the different sections of the country, but if it has been made clear that there is such a traffic, that it extends throughout our entire country, and that it involves conditions which are a disgrace to our nation it would seem that little else need be said regarding this phase of the matter, unless it be to add that it is estimated that not less than 25,000 young women and girls are annualy procured for this traffic and that no less than 50,000 men and women are engaged in procuring and living on the earnings of these women and girls, and that the number of women and girls engaged in prostitution in this country at the present time is estimated at not less than 250,000.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Orders for Chidren's Day supplies are still being received daily, but many schools throughout the denomination have not yet ordered. The service can be held any time before late fall. If your school does not hold a service, it will be a serious loss thus to deprive the young of the educational features of the illustrated services sent free to our schools, and the Board's work will suffer by not receiving your offering. The loss of the offering from many schools is a very serious matter. Send me your order at once, and thus have your school help in the regular work of the church.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec. Treas.
316 N. Charles St. Baltimore, Md.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

For Thoughtful People.

Every earnest Christian man and woman desires to honor God by doing good in the world.

To do the greatest amount, and for the longest time, limited by our ability, are prime considerations.

The foreign missionary enterprise offers the largest field and opportunity, on the most economical basis, and with the surety of largest results.

To participate actively in this the highest form of unselfish benevolence is the duty and privilege of every Christian, and the way for many of our members participating therein long after their death is provided by the Board of Foreign Missions in its new plan which, based upon the annuity idea, is considered the best yet devised both for the contributors, and for the extension of foreign missionary operations.

By this plan, to those who need for their support during life an income from what they have, and who, nevertheless, wish to give to foreign missions, the Board will enter into an agreement whereby on the receipt of a certain sum of money from a member it will agree to pay the donor semi-annually during life an amount equivalent to a fair rate of interest on the sum, said interest being determined by the donor's age and wish.

It can be said to all prospective donors, your income will then be fixed, generous and sure, and your investment will be safe, because the Board will judiciously invest what you give as a sacred trust, and besides it has a dependable asset—the entire church whose will it carries out.

Your money once paid to the Board is an absolute gift: it is vested in the Board. No one can contest it, and the donor has the satisfaction of knowing that it cannot be diverted.

It is free from the vicissitudes which often accompany a gift by will, and no part of it will be lost to the work abroad on account of taxes to which legacies are subjected, and there will be no executor's or counsel or court charges.

Your money will begin its work of usefulness at once, since by its potential value it will help to guarantee the future of the work in the foreign field.

The plan is eminently practical, has proved, by the experience of some of the representative Boards of Foreign Missions, to be entirely satisfactory to the donors and of great benefit to the cause, and makes is possible for all who can command any sum from $100 upward to at once express their interest and purpose to share in carrying out the mission of the church to preach the gospel to every creature in the whole world.

Suitable literature is being prepared for distribution, and I will be glad to hear from any interested persons.

The Board gave the matter thorough consideration in two meetings, and approved it unanimously, and authorized its introduction.

This will insure an ever-increasing income from new contributors, and will enable the Board to put into the work from time to time sums of money which otherwise would not be available, and thus the future of our foreign missionary enterprise and its steady development and extension will be assured.

I ask our people to give this important matter their serious consideration.

Fred C. Klein.
Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

"Pa, do men chew tobacco in heaven?"

"H-m-m-m. Son, you ask too many questions. I'm busy now. Go and ask your ma."

"I did, and she told me to ask you."

In your heart there is a spark of divine love. It was put there when in penitence and prayer you besought God for the forgiveness of your sins. Sometimes you are so pressed by the world and its temptations that you hardly know it is there, and you fly to the cross with a prayer for more light and more grace; and the consciousness of inward renewal satisfies again your longing and thankful heart. You honestly, earnestly desire to live the Christian life. Go on, it doth not yet appear what you shall be. You look upon the tiny egg, so small and fragile, and wonder, by and by, at the eagle soaring above the clouds, breasting the tempest, riding over the hurricane, seeking the sun! You look into this spirit of man, in which is the new birth, in which is the infant soul just converted into Christ, and it seems a slight thing; but all the vision and the ecstacy of heaven, all the immortal experience, all the unsearchable glory, are folded in that tiny experience of love.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

—Psalm 119.

Teacher—Who discovered America?

Bright Boy—Columbus.

Teacher—That's right. Now, how did he come to do it?

Bright Boy—He came by water.—Chicago News.

From Pastors and People.

Tabernacle.

Our Pastor, Rev. Mr. Cecil, delivered as usual an excellent sermon yesterday afternoon on the subject of "Spiritual Riches."

Chi ldren's Day was held the first Sunday of this month. There was a large attentive congregation. Exercises good for the amount of practise, and collection was $18.18.

The election for delegate to represent us at the annual conference will be after preaching on the first Sunday in July. Messrs. Clarida and Diviney are the nominees, and either will make a good representative.

Our special meeting begins the first Sunday in August. Bro. Bethea will be the pulpit help. Let us all pray that this may be a great meeting.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

Reporter.

Hawkins' Chapel, Littleton Ct.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment here last Sunday, June 9. He always gives us something that helps us in the Christian life. Being a lovely day, there was a large congregation, and every one present seemed very much pleased with the service.

Mr. Logan Morris died very suddenly May 27. He was stricken with paralysis, and died in a few hours. He joined the church at Hawkins' Chapel last August and remained a member until death.

Also on the second of June the death-angel came for Mrs. Ida Faucett. Her death was a great shock to all her many friends. She had been carried to Roanoke Rapids for treatment, and died while under examination. She was a member of Bethlehem Baptist Church and a lovable Christian lady. She leaves a husband who is not a Christian. May God lead him to find the Savior whom his wife loved, and who is able to save him from eternal death. We commend the bereaved ones to look unto Him who is able to comfort, for He doeth all things well.

Wishing the Herald and all its readers much good, and asking all to pray for our coming revival in August, I am,

Yours in love,

Vannah Shearin, Rep.

Aurelian Springs, N. C., June 15, 1912.

Burlington.

There were 215 present in the Sunday school last Sunday, and the offering was $4.14. The Sunday school decided to have a Children's Day exercise on the first Sunday in July. A committee was appointed by the Sunday school to purchase new song books for the school.

The proposed Junior Baraca Class was organized Sunday morning with the following officers: James Heritage, President; Troy Conklin, vice-Pres.; Arthur Amick, Sec.; Glenn Huffman, Asst. Sec.; Harland McPherson, Treas.; G. L. Amick, Teacher; R. F. Williams, Asst. Teacher. The class starts as a Junior Baraca Class with 20 members.

Next Sunday morning the Sunday school will elect officers for a six-months term beginning first Sunday in July. We hope to have a large attendance.

President Swain made his official visit to our church last Thursday night. The congregation was not as large as expected, though a good number were present to hear Bro. Swain. He preached a very able and instructive sermon.

June 18. C. B. W.

Giles Chapel, Richland Circuit.

Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, gave us a splendid sermon Sunday morning, had a fairly good congregation. Ought to have been more out to hear the Word preached. Those present seemed to enjoy the sermon.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely; new members are being enrolled nearly every Sunday. I hope they will continue to come until all will be members of our Sunday school that possibly can attend. I love the Sunday school and very seldom miss being present.

Miss Annie L. Forrest was at our church first of May. It was a very busy time with the farmers, and there were only a few people present. Those present responded liberally to her appeals for the heathen children in Japan. We were favored with the opportunity of caring for Miss Annie in our home, which we enjoyed very much.

Mrs. W. R. Hamlin.

June 18, 1912.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct.

Bro. Plyler filled his regular appointment second Sunday with an excellent sermon, but could not attend the Children's day service, which was held the third Sunday.

The Children's day service conducted under the leadership of Miss Martha Parsons was successfully carried out. As our pastor could not be with us, we asked Mr. Hammer, of High Point, to come and address us at 11 A. M. His talk was much enjoyed by all. He also helped us in our music. We wish to express our appreciation for both.

The children did well, both in their recitations and their work for missions. Although they may not realize what a work they did, yet they work as earnestly as if they did, and collected $10.00. They were not prepared to work until Saturday evening, and they went at it as quick as they received their envelopes.

I. W. C., Reporter.

Lee's Chapel, Halifax Circuit.

Our beloved pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, came the third Sunday in May. We are indeed glad to have this excellent preacher of the gospel with us. He is doing good work. This Circuit has been without a pastor since last September, therefore we know more fully how to appreciate him.

Bro. Pritchard filled his regular appointment at this church last Sunday. His sermon was interesting from beginning to end—full of good gospel truths.

Communion was held after preaching.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely, but so much room for improvement. Our revival meeting will begin the third Sunday in August. Christian people, do not wait but begin now to pray for the success of this meeting.

Reporter.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.

Bro. J. H. Stowe filled his appointment here yesterday, preaching as usual one of his inspiring sermons. He spoke of God's purpose concerning man. We feel that we can see more clearly God's purpose concerning us. May we cultivate the talent which we have, whether it be great or small. Let us all be seen doing good, whether great things or not.

We have two organized classes in our school, which we believe are doing good work. We feel that there is going to be something accomplished this year if we still keep praying and working.

June 17. Reporter.

Lincoln Circuit.

Our second quarterly meeting conducted in perfect harmony, with Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., in the chair. Bros. R. Short and S. M. Warlick nominees for delegate to Annual Conference. Financial report for various interests, $419.25.

Pleasant Hill reported old debt paid, also painted inside and out, amount paid. Macedonia, old debt paid. This places all the churches on Lincoln Circuit clear of debt.

The Knob Creek people are going ahead with the repairs on their church. Glad to see the people interested in the work. We have a good Sunday school in all the churches on the work; some preparing to have a special service for the children.

On the morning of the 15th, quite a number of the people had gathered at Bess Chapel to clean off the grounds, and all of a sudden some one shouted "mad-dog," and on turning to the scene discovered Bro. Tom Baxter's dog having a fit, and he (Bro. Baxter) like a hero ran at the dog, shivering the dog's skull the first blow. Bro. Willis's dog came up to see what was happening, and Bro. Willis passed sentence on his dog, which was death, and Bro. Baxter shot him. No damage was done by the mad dog. I long to see the day when the surplus and worthless dogs are killed, and the amount that is spent on them be appropriated to the feeding and clothing of poor children.

Our people are still remembering us kindly by sending us cherries, peaches, cabbage, beans, honey and many things that help in the home.

Where is Giles Chapel correspondent? We are always glad to hear from the Richland people. L. H. Hatley.

June 17, 1912.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor

The General Conference—Side Trips.

One afternoon, after the close of the Conference, Dr. and Mrs. Totten gave us "a joy ride" in an automobile, through some of the most interesting suburban sections of the city. The ride through Druid Hill, Bal imore's great park of 671 acres, was especially delightful. The street leading from the Conference church, from which point we started, is the finest over which I have ever traveled; as we reached the park, we were winding around green hills, across beautiful streams, and up and down steep hills, all beautifully shaded. We were in the park in the late afternoon, a favorite hour for pleasure seekers, and all kinds of vehicles were in evidence—carriages, buggies, motor cycles, bicycles and automobiles. The run around Druid Lake was especially fascinating. It seemed almost as if we were in an automobile race; there were machines before us, and machines behind us and then we were constantly passing those that were traveling in the opposite direction. The hour in Druid Hill Park will always remain as a pleasant memory.

To Annapoils.

The trip to Annapolis on the "Annapolis" was one of the very delightful incidents during Conference. The trip down was in the afternoon and I was on the upper deck. A gentleman, whose name I did not learn, was kind enough to point out to me places of interest that came in our view, and to offer me the use of his field glass to see the more distant places. The first to which he called my attention was Fort McHenry, then Wagner's Point, and next Fort Howard. Fort Howard is built out in the bay. It looked to me as though it might be about 200 or 300 feet square, but I was told that it contains some four acres.

He also called my attention to the fact that to our left was the famous "Eastern Shore" of which I have so often heard. The return trip was in the evening and was even more interesting than the out-going trip. The last lingering rays of the sun were painting the horizon with the most entrancing colors, as we pulled out for the home run. The lights upon the shore as we steamed along, and especially as we passed Steelton, a large steel plant which was in full blast, were very interesting. Occasionally it would appear that the town was on fire. This, I was informed, was caused by the letting off of the blasts in the steel plant.

By and by we were in sight of the lights in the city—the first to be seen perhaps was the electric sign of the Emerson or Bromo-Seltzer Bldg. This building is 367 feet, from the ground to the top. The top is a steel bottle 50 feet long, and weighing 31 tons. It is lighted up with electricity and constantly revolves.

I was much interested in the search light which is thrown out from the tower of the electric and gas plant of the city and which every few minutes encircles the entire city, and reached to us, perhaps some five miles out on the bay. And the use of the search lights from the boats as they sought out and located each other, as we were nearing the city, were among the most pleasing experiences of the trip. On the return trip songs were sung and the sweet music floated out over the water, I recall the songs, "There shall be showers of blessing," and "When the roll is called up yonder, I'll be there." I here offer to the Committee on Entertainment a hearty vote of thanks for the great trip to Annapolis, and to Dr. and Mrs. Totten for the delightful ride through Druid Hill Park. And this brings to a close my notes on the General Conference.

Piney Grove, Siler City Circuit.

Bro. Bowman filled his appointment the first Sunday p. m. and preached another most excellent sermon. The burial of little Miss Emma Fox at Love's Creek Baptist church that evening took away several of our congregation. She was a daughter of Preston Fox, and her sisters are members of our Sunday school.

Our President, Bro. Swain, filled his yearly appointment at this place Saturday evening, June 15th. He preached a good sermon from these words: He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son hath not life. Now, who can tell where this text is found? Who will guess first?

The congregation was small on account of the inclemency of the weather or for some other cause. I wish every one in the community could have heard the sermon. We are preparing for Children's Day services, which will convene the first Sunday evening in July, beginning promptly at two o'clock. Everybody invited. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We have a good crowd present every Sunday.

Many good wishes to the Herald readers. Mrs. J. A. Cooper, Rep.

June 18, 1912.

Giles Chapel.

Summer is here, and warm weather too. Last winter our Sunday school got very low in attendance. Since the month of June has come with all the joys of summer, the school roll has gone up to 82. In 1876 it went to 103 here at Giles. It is now normal, in good running condition. We have a full set of teachers, but like most other schools on this Circuit, not efficient. They need training at some preparatory school, but will never get it, I guess. It is safe to say our school is doing some good, perhaps as much as any other on the Circuit.

Our pastor gave us a very interesting sermon, No. 7, for this year. He beat his own record. The Arabian horse was very fleet, could run fast, so the stenographer would have been put to his wits to keep up with Bro. Whitaker in his memorable sermon. It fell with power, and like the rain in a great wind storm. It hit fast all the great audience, two times as large as usual; fine day and the spirit moved them to come out. But many can't, are ailing, and others won't.

This old veteran thinks all great sermons are made with a good selection of words, and they must fit as the brick in the 35-story house now going up in New York. The orator must have a mind able to hold them, and then let them fall as corn does from the shoe in an old corn mill. Time is very precious to the minister. He must be fleet like the Arabian horse or the 66 minutes will be out and the sermon not ended.

This old veteran weighs every word to see if it belongs where it is used in the sermon. Editors do not want reporters to be too lengthy. But some of the pastors get up to 500 words and exceed that. I have counted some.

This writer is in bad health and has been all of 1912; but being appointed reporter for this church I accepted it, but must give my office to one more efficient and younger.

Wm. M. Stevenson, Reporter.

New Salem.

Children's and old people's day was observed at New Salem on Sunday, June 9. The children did exceedingly well. Much credit is due the faithful Supt. and teachers in their untiring efforts in training the children so well Miss Cornie Caudle in her quiet pleasing manner gave us a very interesting talk on foreign missions. The collection amounted to $6.30, which goes for foreign missions.

In the afternoon the time was given to the old people, which proved very interesting indeed. The program consisted of old time songs and short talks by prominent people of the community. The collection amounted to $2.40, which goes for home missions. The day was enjoyed very much by all present. We hope the Sunday school workers and people of the entire community will feel much encouraged and realize more fully the great need of working for the Master.

Nora Wood.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

Bro. Cecil preached another one of his interesting sermons June 9.

Our Children's Day will be held next Sunday, June 23rd, beginning at eleven, and we hope to have a nice exercise.

Our protracted meeting begins the 4th Sunday in August. Reporter.

Gastonia.

We have just closed our special meeting at Bessemer City. It was a wonderful meeting. We had thirty-five conversions and reclamations, five accessions to the church. I am sure the church in general has had a spiritual uplift, and I believe the town of Bessemer City has been greatly benefited by the meeting. The Methodist Protestant Church in that town is now having as large congregations as any other church.

Bro. D. A. Braswell, of Concord, assisted me in the meeting. He delivered elegant sermons all through the meeting, and it seemed that all those who heard him were affected by his preaching. I am sure there has been long and lasting good accomplished in that meeting. We ran the meeting only eight days, but there were impressions made that will live while the cycles of eternal ages shall roll. There were two or three nights of the meeting that we could not accommodate all the people. They seemed to be hungering and thirsting after righteousness.

We will begin our special meeting in the Union Grove M. P. Church on the first Sunday in July at eleven o'clock a. m. The Rev. J. H. Moton, of High Point, N. C., will be my help here. We are expecting a mighty out-pouring of the Holy Spirit in our meeting. Brethren, pray for us, that we may have a good meeting. We are looking for the greatest revival here this year that has ever been in the history of the church. We have been working for it, praying for it, and now we are looking for it.

We held our second quarterly conference some time ago. The business was carried on in perfect harmony. Finance is right much behind, but we trust will come up in the near future. Bros. T. F. Newton, of Gastonia, and F. M. Ross, of Bessemer City, were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference.

D. M. Loy.

June 18, 1912.

Orphan's Home.

At the Branch Meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society at Winston in April it was decided that where good homes in the country could be found for the children during vacation, that we permit them to go, since we do not have any work for them here in the home, especially the larger boys; and as a result there are only seven children in the Home at present. We think we have been fortunate in securing good homes for those who have gone out. It is to be hoped that the Home will soon have a farm of its own where the children can expend their surplus energy. Our garden is doing well and is beginning to supply the Home with vegetables. We are grateful to Mr. Cone Surratt for plowing the garden; to Mrs. Chandler for gallons and gallons of milk; to J. R. Peace for loads and loads of good stove wood, and to many others for kindness shown in different ways. Many times we fail to mention it, yet our Heavenly Father keeps a record of it all. Christ said, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." The good people of Denton have never failed to assist in any way when they could.

Mrs. E. B. Siler, of Siler City, is spending a few days in the Home.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Welsh Memorial S. S.	$ 4.45
Mt. Lebanon S. S.	1.90
Maple Springs S. S., Birthday and Offering	12.70
Whitaker's S. S.	4.60
Henderson S. S.	4.27
Total	$27.92

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 13.

Notice is hereby given to the members of the Brotherhood of the North Carolina Conference of the death of Rev. S. Simpson. Bro. Simpson was a member of the Brotherhood, and the books show that he met every call of the Brotherhood. The members of the Brotherhood are due three dollars each within sixty days of date of this notice.

J. A. Burgess, Secc.-Treas.

Owing to misplaced mail there will be no Flat Rock letter this week.

Reporter.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil asks us to announce the children's day service at Moriah next Sunday, beginning at 11:00 o'clock. After the service, the matter of a new church or new Sunday-school rooms will come up for consideration and determination, and all members should be present to vote upon it.

Short-Hunter.

Pinnacle, June 15.—A most beautiful wedding took place Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock when Miss Maud Myrtle Hunter, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Hunter, became the bride of Mr. Albert Julius Short, of Greensboro, the ceremony being performed at the Methodist Protestant parsonage, the home of the bride.

The home was lovely in its decorations of mountain laurel, daisies and ferns.

The guests were received at the door by Misses Della Lowry, of Oak Ridge, and Zora Hunter, of Greensboro.

The parlor, into which the guests were received by Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Hunter, was tastily decorated, the color scheme being white and green.

Miss Nina Lee Hester, of Winston-Salem, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Daniels, of Mt. Airy, softly sang "O, Promise Me" and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" before the ceremony.

To the strains of Lohengrin's "Faithful and True," little Misses Lillian Sullivan, Blanch Hunter, Verna Davis and Jewel Hunter entered, all in spotless white, bearing the pretty daisy chain which marked the aisle.

After Rev. S. W. Taylor, of Winston-Salem, had taken his place at the chancel, the bride entered, dressed in an elegant tailored suit of tan, with hat and gloves to match, and carrying a shower bouquet of white carnations, leaning on the groom's arm.

The beautiful Methodist ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. S. W. Taylor, Schubert's "Serenade" being softly played during the ceremony.

Mendelsshon's Wedding March was used as a recessional.

Delicious ices and cakes were then served.

As an evidence of the popularity of the bride and groom, they were the recipients of a beautiful and costly array of wedding presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Short drove to the station immediately for a bridal tour thru' Northern cities. Their many friends throughout the state wish for them a long and happy married life.

Pittman-Carter.

On last Wednesday, June 12, 1912, at high noon, there was solemnized at Corinth M. P. Church near Littleton, a most beautiful wedding, when Miss Julia Alice, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Carter, became the bride of Mr. Almond David Pittman, of Whitakers, N. C. The church was very prettily decorated with cedar and daisies, making a most picturesque scene.

While the guests were arriving Mrs. W. N. Thornton, of Littleton, N. C., sang most effectively, "Always," with Miss Josephine Crawley presiding at the organ. Then to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March the bridal party entered the church in the following order: first the ushers, Messrs. Emmett and Walter Carter, brothers of the bride, followed by the bride's maids, Misses Clara Isles of Aurelian Springs, N. C., Lizzie Bennett of Warrenton, N. C., Lillian Rogers of Vaughan, N. C., and Willena Bobbitt, of Enfield, N. C. Then came the bride with her maid of honor, Miss Emma Pittman of Whitakers, N. C., a sister of the groom, and were met at the altar by the groom with his best man, Mr. Clarence Carter, another brother of the bride. While the ceremony was being performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, Miss Crawley rendered very softly "Flowers."

Miss Carter has for a number of years been organist at Corinth Church, where she has a host of friends, and is possessed with a most charming voice. Mr. Pittman is a most excellent young man of Whitakers, N. C., where he has a host of friends.

After receiving the congratulations of the large number of guests at the church, the happy couple were driven to Littleton, where, amid showers of rice, they boarded the train for Wrightsville Beach and other places of interest. At home at Whitakers, N. C., after June 25th.

Died.

Mrs. Sallie Phillipps Myrick died June 8, 1912, at Feree Memorial Hospital. She was 62 years, 8 months, 6 days of age. She joined the Freewill Baptist church at 18, had been a faithful member of the M. P. Church at Worthville for 21 years, making in all 44 years in the service of her Savior. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor at her home in Worthville. Her body was then gently borne by friends to the cemetery nearby and laid to rest.

Her life was a beautiful one. That she was held in high esteem by all was manifest by the great throng of friends that attended the services and followed in the procession to the cemetery. She and her husband had lived together for nearly 40 years. God had blessed them with seven children, all of whom are grown and survive her. Following these are four grand children.

It was the writer's pleasure to spend the night in their home on his first visit to Worthville. It was very pleasant to be with them in their home. We visited Sister Myrick often while she was in the hospital. She was always cheerful and happy and perfectly resigned to the Lord's will. We believe that she was hopeful of getting well most of the time, but said that she was ready to die. When we told her good-bye two hours before she passed away, we did not think the end so near. "Watch," says the Master, "Be ye also ready."

Sister Myrick quoted these words to me in our bedside talks. I believe that she was watching.

Dear bereaved ones, family ties of earth are strong, but they are broken. One link in your chain has been taken. One by one your links will be transferred and joined to the one gone before until you will form a chain or family in heaven never more to be broken.

J. B. O'Brient.

June 18, 1912.

Margaret Emily Prevost died May 24, 1912, aged 63 years, 7 months. It was not the writer's pleasure to visit or know her during her life, but she was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She was known as a very good woman. She and her husband moved to Worthville about twenty-five years ago. Her companion died about four years after coming to Worthville. Sister Prevost previous to this time belonged to the M. E. Church, but at this change in her life she connected herself with the M. P. Church at Worthville, of which she was always a faithful member. She partly gave the land whereon now stands our church in Worthville. The funeral services were conducted by Bro. Joel Trogdon. She leaves behind eight children and twenty-four grand children, and many friends. J. B. O'Briant.

June 18, 1912.

Sister Della Hawkins departed this life Saturday, May 18, 1912, aged about thirty-nine years. She was married to Mr. Kenneth Hawkins about 20 years ago. She was the mother of five children, 3 girls and two boys, all of whom survive her.

At an early age she professed faith in Christ and joined Corinth M. P. Church. Some years ago she removed her membership to Hawkins' Chapel, where she remained a faithful member until death. Sister Hawkins was a consistent Christian, and a regular attendant at all church services. Blessed with a kindly and pleasant disposition, she was loved by all who knew her.

She never complained, but bore her sufferings most silently and patiently, ever trusting in the Lord, who is ever ready to help his children. Hers was a quiet and unassuming life, yet one of implicit trust in God.

The funeral services were conducted at her home in the presence of a large number of sympathizing relatives and friends, by her pastor, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, on Sunday, May 19th, after which her body was laid to rest in the family burying ground near her home. May the God of life and comfort bless the bereaved family, and guide their feet to that heavenly shore.

Vannah Shearin.

—St. Paul's meeting is going on successfully.

—Bro. W. F. Clarida has a month off from the mail service. But he can't be idle.

—We saw Bro. J. L. Hardin in the Hospital last Sunday. He seemed in a fair way to recovery. He does not have Bright's Disease, as was supposed.

—Warren McCulloch has returned from Adrian College and taken his place at the linotype keyboard, while James Swain has taken a position as night linotype operator in the Christian Advocate office.

THE LARGER LIFE.

By Hon. William Jennings Bryan, at Calvary M. E. Church, New York, Sunday morning, April 21, 1912.

The one thought which I desire to impress upon your minds this morning is set forth in the subject, as announced, "The Larger Life." I did not come to speak to you as a minister: my work is along other lines. I will not attempt to put my work in the same class with the work of the minister, nor to assert that it approaches the minister's work in importance. Our work is to a great extent determined by environment. Our lives are not largely of our own choosing. The freedom that we have to decide in what part of the vineyard we will work, is not an unlimited freedom. But though my time is devoted to work which I think is important, though less important than the work of the minister, I can not withhold from the minister such assistance as I may be able to render in the form of testimony. I know of no moral principle that is binding upon the minister that is not binding upon the layman: and I am so much opposed to the idea of monopoly that I am not willing that the ministers shall monopolize the joy that comes from service in the Christian life. And so this morning I deside to turn your attention for a few moments to what I believe to be a growing understandng of Christ's work.

Christ was a master in addition. He came not to subtract, but to add. We are told that he came "to bring life and immortality to light." Had the people been in darkness? Yes, there was a dispute when He came as to the answer that should be made to the searching question: asked by Job: "If a man die shall he live again?" Christ answered the question. He came to bring immortality to light. But He came also to bring life to light, for the world had had but a poor conception of life. Man's vision, even of his existence here in this world, had been but a limited vision. Sometimes the Christian has placed too much emphasis, relatively, upon the future and not enough on the present. People used to read the Bible to find out what is said of Heaven; now they read it more to find what light it throws upon the pathway of today, for they have learned that where Christ spoke once of the world to come He spoke ten times of man's present relation to his fellowmen. People used to search the scriptures and then retire from society and in seclusion seek to prepare themselves for future bliss; now they are coming to understand that to walk in the footsteps of the "Man of Galilee" they must go about doing good.

But we not only have the testimony of Paul that Christ came to shed a new and brighter light upon life, as well as upon immortality, but we have Christ's own words—the highest possible authority—that He came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

If we were in the midst of a great agricultural community where everybody lived by farming—where the surface of the earth was cultivated and made to bring forth all that was necessary to meet man's physical needs; and some one should come a stranger, and tells us that we are but scratching the surface, unconscious of hidden wealth; tell us that down a few feet in the ground we could find a vein of coal that would furnish us the heat for steam, and that we could convert it into light and motive power, we would be grateful to him for making known to us the larger wealth that we possessed, but possessed in ignorance. And, possibly, if we did not become too busy mining the coal and too absorbed in the enjoyment of the new wealth that it would bring, we might erect a monument to him, when he was dead, to show that we appreciated the service he had rendered.

And if, after we had for a while enjoyed the additions that this stranger had made to our possessions, another came and said, "You have discovered only two elements of your wealth; there is a third. Go down just a little farther and you will find a mine of gold, a mine of which everyone of you can draw enough precious metal to purchase everywhere and always whatever else you need for your welfare;" would we not feel grateful to the second stranger who thus multiplied our wealth still more? I know of no better way of illustrating what Christ came to do. He threw a brighter light upon existence and revealed to us a larger life.

Man first learned of his physical possessions; he was absorbed in the pleasures that came through the body. But long before Christ appeared man had learned that the mind possessed a wealth greater than the body's store. Before the beginning of the Christian era man had learned that the delights of the mind are of a higher order and more permanent than the joys that the body can bring. But Christ came to tell us that there was yet an unexplored field; that there was yet a depth which man had not found; he came to reveal to man the larger, broader, deeper, higher joys of spiritual life. And Christ, when He revealed these new possessions, did not withdraw that which man had learned to know before. When Christ said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness," He did not add that we must take this as a substitute for all other things. He did not ask us to compare that which He would give with that which we had before and calculate the difference in value. He said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you."

Is there any excuse for not leading the larger life? Is there any excuse that any man can give for not being wiling to make use of all his powers? Shall we allow the materialist to speak of being "more liberal" than we are, when he refuses to consider the most important element in life? I resent the charge of narrowness that the atheist brings against the Christian. The Christian is in a position to enjoy every good thing that an atheist can enjoy, and, in addition, those larger, better things that an atheist can not enjoy. I hope the time is not far distant when the egotism of those who think they are stronger than Christians in mental power, will vanish and when they will no longer assume a superiority over those who allow Christ to lead them into the larger way.

What is there that Christ would take from us that has value in it? Does He deny us the food that we need? No, the Christian is at liberty to eat; aye, not only at liberty, but it is his duty to eat enough to lift his body to the maximum of efficiency. If his passion is service, how can he render the largest service unless the instrument of service is in good order? All that Christ would deny to us in the form of food is excessive food, food that instead of helping, harms; the kind of food that burns the stomach out and makes man old while he is yet young. If Christians find that instead of looking for something to eat they are traveling from one watering place to another trying to improve their digestion they can not blame Christ. It may be because they pay too much attention to the body and not enough to the soul. Christ requires no physical concessions that are not for our good. There is not a good habit that Christ does not allow. He only prohibits those habits that decrease our strength, and reduce our capacity for work—habits that waste our bodies and make them unfit to be temples of the indwelling of His spirit.

So, in the intellectual world, what is there in the range of science, or history, or poetry, or art that Christ forbids us to enjoy? All that he asks is that we shall remember that all these things are means to an end. Where will you find more learning than in the Christian world? Where will you find higher art than in the Christian world? Where will you find sweeter poetry than in the Christian world? All that Christ asks is that we shall train the mind for usefulness—that we shall not glory in our minds merely because we enjoy intellectual pursuits, but because larger mind can do a larger work—because a more extended vision can be of greater assistance to those who rely upon the educated to see in advance coming dangers and warn against them. All these things are but the means we use for the development of that which is highest in the life and best in man.

Christ does not restrain our activities along any line of legitimate work. On the contrary he furnishes a higher incentive and a larger purpose. In domestic life, in business life and in political life—everywhere, the Christian is free to satisfy every worthy ambition, every noble impulse. The only injunction laid upon him is that God shall come first and all other things afterward. But this one injunction does not fetter effort; it simply directs one's energies. It is the compass by which we steer if we would sail the sea of life in safety.

There are no happier homes than the homes of Christendom, and the happiest homes in Christendom are those in which God is enthroned, and in which His will is the supreme law of the household.

Nowhere is business more successfully conducted than in Christian nations; nowhere does it rest upon a more substantial basis. And in the Christian nations no business men build more surely than those who daily live as in His presence.

Materialism can not deal successfully even with the material things of life. A spiritual viewpoint is necessary if one would see clearly; no one is farsighted who does not see farther than the eye can reach. Faith is a spiritual extension of the vision, and no one can afford to be without it. Faith also is necessary if one would resist the temptations which, if yielded to, drag men down. In order to successfully withstand the insidious allurements that beset life's way we must understand that wrongdoing automatically recoils upon the wrongdoer; that God is not mocked, and that no human effort can prevent a harvest according to the sowing. One is sure to fall if his only restraint is the fear of being defected by others. There are too many chances for escape from the vigilance of others to make the fear of being caught a sufficient barrier to wrongdoing. No outer guardian can take the place of the inner monitor—the voice that bids the "wicked flee when no man pursueth."

Nowhere does Christ enlarge one's conception of life more than in the conduct of public affairs. Those who exercise authority have special need to give weight to the things that affect the heart. Only when one knows the heart can he judge men and only when his heart is knit to the hearts of his fellows can he enter into the spirit of brotherhood. A condescending service is not sufficient; man is not fit to serve unless he recognizes that he is serving those who are attached to him by undissoluble ties, and only when he understands Christ's measure of greatness does his ambition become helpful to others as well as to himself. In no other walk in life is it more necessary for one to be guided by conscience than in public affairs, for nowhere else is one watched more constantly or subjected to more continuous criticism. The fear of exposure operates nowhere else more powerfully. In the bearing of great responsibilities he is strongest who has trained himself to measure up to the responsibilities imposed upon him by his Creator, for this being the greatest of responsibilities, responsibilities less weighty are more easily discharged.

Christ is not only a guide and a friend in all the work that man undertakes, but his name can be invoked for the correction of every abuse, and the eradication of every evil, in private and in public life.

There is no nation in which the reviving, regenerating influence of Christ's words and life is not sorely needed—no nation where we can not quote with propriety the lines,

"I know of a land that is sunk in shame
Of hearts that faint and tire,
But I know of a name, a name, a name,
That can set the land on fire."

We spend a great deal of our time taking care of our bodies, and yet it is the body that is subject to sickness—it is the centre of disease; it is the thing that causes us most of our trouble. Not only do its pains bring us grief, but its passions and the temptations that come through them darken our lives. And, yet, how we sometimes worship the body! How we pamper it and how we try to adorn it. Christ did not object to man's making every proper use of the body, but He warned us not to spend all our time taking care of it. He pointed to the birds and beast about us—how God cares for them. He reminded us that even the flowers are more beautiful than man arrayed in all his glory. He constantly tried to turn our thoughts from the things that engross our attention if we think only of physical life. He tried to direct our thoughts toward the higher and more exalted things. Compare, if you will, the spiritual joys with those that are either physical or intellectual. Look back over your lives and count the happy days. Are they the days when your bodily wants were satisfied or the days when your minds were exulting? No, the happy days were the days that you recall because they marked and measured some unselfish contribution to the welfare of others. These are the things that bring us joy. "It is more blessed to give than to receive;" nobody disputes it who ever tried it. It is only those who have not tried who do not know it to be true.

And, besides, He brought the peace that comes with trust, the consolation that comes with a belief in immortality and the moral courage that comes with faith. Christ, I repeat, came to enlarge our lives, to give us more than we could have without Him, and the things we had. But not only did He increase the quantity of life and raise the quality of it, but He gave us the permanent things—the things that endure beyond the grave.

As man grows older he yearns to attach himself to that which is eternal. Monuments are reared to the dead that the living may know something of the life that has passed away, and generally these monuments vary in value and in beauty according to the size of the estate that the man left—not in proportion to the good he did or the service he rendered to society, but in proportion to the money that he collected from society. Sometimes we find a monument reared by grateful hands to one whom the world called great; but how many of our ninety millions of people will be known an hundred years after their death by any monument that marks their resting place? How quickly does the world forget us! The sea, closing over its victims, does not hide them much sooner than does the grave on the land. No, our physical presence on earth is not long remembered after we die.

Man can project himself a little farther into the future by the action of his brain. He may help people in an intellectual way, and they, conscious of the assistance they have received, may remember him for a while, for a generation. Or he may live in literature and leave upon the written page something that will inspire those who come after him. But, if you read the countless number of books that there are to be found in our great and growing libraries, you will realize how much has been said that might, without loss, have been left unsaid, and how little out of all the books you would reproduce if you are making a collection if things that people must know.

We exaggerate the influence of a mind over minds. We put too much of an estimate on the brain and not enough estimate on the heart. We say that it is wonderful that man's mind has been able to discover a means by which one can stand by the side of a telegraph instrument and through an invisible current that runs along the wire speak to people ten thousand miles away. Is that wonderful? The achievements of the heart are more wonderful. The heart that is full of love for its fellows; the heart that burns to do some great good, the heart that puts into operation some movement for the uplifting of the human race, will speak to hearts that will beat ten thousand years after all our hearts are still. Man's greatest power is exerted when he touches the heart and through it reaches the endless generations of the future.

The heart is the great thing. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Out of the heart are the issues of life." Christ came to make known to men the riches of the human heart, to show us how the heart, the centre of love, is also the centre of life. He simply gave us love as the rule of life, and then left us to apply it. No other teacher was ever so free from the discussion of details as He. He did not give minute directions as to how we should act in each particular case. He gave us one great rule, the new commandment. "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." It was not necessary to give anything more. If we live up to that rule we raise our lives to the plane He pointed out.

In one commandment Christ presents a condensation of the ten. He sets forth both our duty to God and our duty to our fellowmen. In earlier years Christians did not always give sufficient consideration to the second part of the commandment; today there are many who give too little consideration to the first part of the commandment; Christ gave to each part its appropriate place. Love of God comes first—without it man can not understand his relations to his brother. The love of his neighbor comes second, but it is indispensable, for it is only through love toward his fellowman that man's love of God can be made manifest. The permanence of these new riches, the abiding quality of this newly discovered wealth—forget this not.

Our bodies will decay no matter whether we take pride in them or not; the seed of death is in them. I have now lived more than half a century. I used to think that a man was old at fifty; I have changed my views on the subject. I am satisfied that I was entirely mistaken. I have moved old age forward several years. It is still beyond me, and yet I know that the time is coming when I will not be as strong as I am now. I know that my bones will ache after awhile and my joints become stiff. And I know, too, that those about me will recognize that I can not do what I used to do. Even now, my good wife is cautioning me that pneumonia is more fatal as people get along in years. I know what is coming. I know that year after year with increasing emphasis she will say. "Do not do this, and do not do that; you can not stand it." I know that if I live long enough I will find my flesh wasting away. I will find my nerves less steady, and will realize more and more that I am not an exception to the rule—that I must soon pass through the experience that lies at the end of every life. It is pleasant for me to believe in a resurrection. I have no more doubt that I shall live again than I have that I live today. I have no more doubt that I shall in another world meet those whom I have loved than I have that I have known them here. I do not know just what kind of a body I am going to have—and I do not care. I have had seven already, according to the scientists. The scientists say that the body changes every seven years—if that is true, I now have my eighth. I had a baby's body, and then a boy's; then I had a young man's body, and then I changed again and again and again. I do not know what kind of a body God is going to give me in the next world, but I can trust Him, and I waste no time speculating. He can give me any of the bodies I have had if He wants to, and I will do the best I can to use it; but I know that He will give me the kind of body I need. There is an invisible something in a grain of wheat that can discard the body that we see, and from earth and air build a new body, so much like the old one that we can not tell the one from the other, and I know that, if that invisible something in that grain of wheat can pass unimpaired through thousands of resurrections, my spirit can clothe itself with a body suited to its new existence when this frame of mine shall crumble into dust.

But I find nowhere in the Bible that Christ speaks of the physical perfections of this world being carried into the next. Neither do I know how much of my mind I can take with me or how much of the knowledge I have acquired. I worked pretty hard in school. My mother taught me until I was ten, and then I went to the public schools until I was fifteen; then they sent me off to an academy for two years, then to a college for four, and afterward to a law school for two, and then they said I was through; and so I commenced to study in the school of life—and I have been studying ever since. I have learned something of science, a good deal about history, a little of poetry—and lots of politics. I do not know what I can carry beyond. I do not know how much of the story of the stars I will need over there. I do not know how much that I have learned of the growth of the rocks will be useful to me there. I do not know whether the new songs will make me forget the ones I have learned here. I do not know much about the future. I am quite sure that there is a great deal that I have spent much time on that I will not need there. I have a large accumulation of information on issues and men that I expect to leave; I am sure I shall not need it over there. I do not know how much of that which is intellectual in me will survive the tomb and I do not care. I have such faith in the wisdom and love of the God, who made both the Heaven and the earth and am so well satisfied that He made earth more wisely than we could, that I am willing to leave Him entire freedom in arranging Heaven for me. It is enough for me to know that in our "Father's house are many mansions," and that He has gone to prepare a place for us. That is all I care to know. He did not tell us that we were going to carry any of our intellectual assets into the next world, but He does say that we are going to carry our moral worth—that we have on His authority. You remember where he gave an illustration of the Judgment day; and said,, "And, then, shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." That is the only permanent thing that is promised. That is the only promise that I have read of anything that we could acquire here being carried with us. He does not say that those who have brought their bodies to a high state of perfection will glitter as the stars over there; He does not say that those who have ornamented themselves here with the richest apparel; that those who have expended their money in making themselves pleasing to the eye He does not say that these will carry their attractions into the next world. He does not say that those who have devoted themselves to intellectual pursuits, who have studied deep into the mysteries of the earth and the sky, who have dedicated their lives to the search of knowledge—He does not say that the learned shall blaze forth as the planets, but he says the righteous shall shine as the sun.

If Christ comes to give and take nothing away; if he comes to add and not to subtract; if He comes to reveal; if he comes to make us know how much richer we are than we thought; if He comes to give us, aye, and to multiply in us, the value of all we had before; if he comes to teach us how our bodies can be made stronger and better fitted for our work, and how our minds can be trained so as to enlarge our capacity for service; and if he comes to show us that the glories of the world into which the soul can lead us are above and beyond the riches of the body and mind—if He does all this, is there any excuse for not accepting Him? If he can add to the quality of our lives and raise the quality of our lives and then give permanence to that which is best in us, is there any reason why anyone should reject him?

Tis is the thought I came to present. Christ said, "I am the Way"—the only Way, "the Truth"—the highest Truth "and the Life"—the real Life. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you." That is His promise, and if we accept it; if we conform our lives to it, He gives us the blessed assurance that, when the body has dropped back to the dust, and when the light in the brain has gone out, our virtues will remain—that "The righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father."—Bryan's Commoner.,

WHEN JULY FOURTH WAS A DAY OF JOY.

Long Tail, the squirrel that lived in the oak tree in Swan's Field, had never seen a Fourth of July. The older squirrels had and were very much puzzled over it.

"There's a day coming soon," said grandpa Short Hair; you see squirrels name themselves after oddities and qualities just as the Indians do, that accounts for his name; "when nearly every man and boy goes suddenly crazy. They set everything afire that can burn and they make great noises, which shake off leaves and boughs of the trees. They get all over it in a day and a night though, and then they act just as they did before. It's the queerest thing about these very queer two-legged people."

"When does it happen, grandpa?" asked interested little Long Tail.

"When the cherries are ripe," said his grandfather, "very soon now. We must stay indoors at least twenty-four hours, for it's not safe to be out while this madness lasts."

"And why do they do it, grandpa?" asked the curious little squirrel.

"No squirrel has ever been able to find out," said the venerable Short Hair, "but your great grandfather Bright Eyes, who was very wise, thought it was done to help the doctors. Doctors are two-legged people who cure other two-legs when they are sick or get hurt, and he noticed that after and during one of the Big Noise and Fire Days, the doctor who lived in that white nest over across the road was called upon or went out almost every hour. Then again, he thought it might be there were too many two-legged creatures and that they had this fire-day once a year to kill them off, as he noticed that many of them were never seen around after that day each year."

"How dreadful!" exclaimed Long Tail. "Surely these creatures would not do such things as that—kill their own young!"

"I don't know, only many of them get hurt, or die, on that day," said grandfather, "and these two-legged people are very, very queer."

A week later, the cherries began to turn red.

"Will the Noisy Day of Fire come soon?" asked the little squirrel, and he was told that the wise ones of his tribe thought it was near, for it had always come when the topmost branches of the trees were red with ripened fruit, and old uncle Big Ears, who could understand what people said, had sent word over from Jones' Hill, where another squirrel colony lived, that it was only two days to Fourth of July, another name for the Noisy Fire-Day.

The morning of the great day came. The squirrels had laid in a supply of food. They were not going out during the season of danger, but Sharp Nose, a bright little gray squirrel, couldn't be kept in, and when once he poked his head out, all the others had to look also, for squirrels are very curious creatures.

"The field is covered with great white boxes, and pieces of colored cloth are on each one," said Sharp Nose, "and there ain't a mite of noise or fire either."

"O-ooh," said Sweet Tongue, "I smell such good things to eat, too."

The grandfather made them all go back while he investigated.

"The boxes are what they call tents," he declared, "and the other things are flags, and it looks as if they were not going to have any of their young killed today, but just have a good time, instead."

The squirrels were not allowed to go out, however, until night when, after the tents and flags and tables which had held ice cream and lemonade and all kinds of cake and candies, were gone, and some rockets and Roman candles had been sent up, grandfather Short Hair said they might sniff around and see if they could find any crumbs.

The next day the squirrels found lots of nice things to eat in the field, and little Long Tail remarked that he thought a Field Day with speeches and games and races and all sorts of nice things to eat, as well as music and a few bands at night, must be much nicer than the old way the elder squirrels told about.

"I don't believe that two-legged medicine man likes it," said Gray Beard, "for I never saw him called once all day, and I kept my eye out toward his house for he's a nice man and often throws us nuts and corn in the winter when snow comes. I don't believe he liked Field Day."

But the squirrel was wrong. It was the "medicine-man" who had advised it, for he had little ones of his own and he feared lest some of them might be blinded or burned on the Great Day. It was he who helped bring the families of his neighborhood into a clan to celebrate with good times the hours usually given over to riot and ruin.

Of course, even the wisest squirrel didn't know this and some of them, little Long Tail among them, rather disbelieved the stories of noise and fire.

"So silly," said Swiftfeet, "we wouldn't do such mad things! 'T ain't a bit likely that these folks who are so big and smart would all go mad once a year. I guess gran'father Gray Beard was telling a make-b'lieve."

"An awful big one, too," agreed Long Tail.—Edith Wallace, in Our Dumb Animals.

How He Beat the Railroad.

An Irishman riding on a railroad train looked so greatly pleased that he was asked what amused him so much.

"Sure," he said, "I've been riding over this road for tin years, and today's the first time I ever got ahead of it."

"How did you do it this time?" he was asked.

Slapping his knee with evident satisfaction, he replied:

"I bought a round-trip ticket and, begorra, I ain't goin' back."—Ladies Home Journal.

—When the aeroplane of Dr. W. W. Christmas of Washington, which was to have begun an aerial mail service between New York and the capital, was being tried near New York, someone either through pure cussedness or foolishly mistaking the machine for a big bird shot at it with a rifle. He hit the propeller and broke it and put the engine out of business, so the aviator had to plane down to earth narrowly escaping disaster. The bullet had gone through the thin wall of the engine cylinder and was found inside. Dr. Christmas has offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of the man who fired the shot.—The Pathfinder.

—The fierce contest between the Taft and Roosevelt factions is fiercer than ever this week. The odds are in favor of Taft, but it seems probable that a third man will be nominated.

An Irishman who had been in the federal army during the war was asked: "Pat, were you at the battle of Bull Run?"

"Shure an' I was thir."

"An did you run?"

"Sure an' I did. An t...m that didn't run are there yet."

THE ENDEAVOR HABIT.

"It is remarkable how a habit sticks to a fellow," said a prominent contractor whose work may be seen in school buildings, churches, factories, and residences. He had come into the office of Mr. Frederick C. Bidwell, president of the Connecticut union, and his eye had fallen on some Christian Endeavor material lying on the president's desk.

"As a boy I was for nine years a member of a Christian Endeavor society," he continued, "and I served a long time as president. There has not been a society in our town for fifteen years, and for a considerable period I have not been a regular attendant at church services. But I have not forgottn my Endeavor pledge, and every night I read a chapter in my Bible. If I go away from home on a business trip I never pack my valise without putting in a small, well-thumbed Bible."

This man and his family subscribed one-third of the amount needed to support the church in his native town. The Christian Endeavor habit did it. Surely practical training is not in vain.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 30.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Gospel Progress in Africa."

Ps. 68: 28-35.

A great difficulty in African missions is the number of languages—523, with 320 dialects. This alone furnishes a fearful task for the missionaries.

Except on the northern coast, none of the African tribes has a native literature, or even an alphabet, except where the missionaries have given it one. The missionaries must begin at the base of civilization.

Polygamy is one of the chief curses of Africa, and is found everywhere. Cannibalism is widely practised. The tribes make fierce war upon another, and carry off the families of their enemies in savage raids. Christianity means the coming of safety and peace for the first time into Africa.

Half of Africa's 180,000,000 people are held in the awful bonds of the lowest superstition, worshipping sticks and stones and rags, fearing demons cowering in terror of the invisible powers of the air, and in slavish subjection to crafty witch doctors.

Among the 175,000,000 of Africa there are at work 2,470 Protestant missionaries and 13,089 native assistants. The adherents of the Christian faith number about 527,000 in addition to about 225,000 communicants. They have about 4,790 places of worship and 200,000 pupils in 4,800 schools. Nealy 100 hospitals minister to the sick, and ten printing presses are kept busy supplying the Bible in various languages to the people.

The indignant protest of the Christian world has accomplished something toward mitigating conditions in the Upper Congo where unnamable cruelties were practiced a few years ago on the natives by Belgian officials. Rev. J. H. Harris, sent out to report on conditions, says that Belgium is anxious to wipe out the bitter memories of the past and is doing what she can to further reform. Much remains to be accomplished, but there are signs of progress.

Fifty-three per cent of the whole cost of the American Mission in Egypt comes from the natives. In the Nile Valley there are said to be fifty-five foreign missionaries, forty-six native ministers who care for sixty organized churches that have a membership of 10,000 souls. About 20,000men and women listen to the gospel every Sunday, while 14,000 children gathr in Sunday schools. The work of the medical missions reaches 35,000 people every year.

Seventy-six years ago the first Wesleyan missionary landed at Cape Coast. At a recent meeting a man eighty-five years of age presided who was nine years old when that missionary arrived. To-day there are two hundred native missionaries and teachers, 31,000 members of all kinds, and about 100,000 people worshipping in the churches.

The Presbyterian mission in West Africa has six stations with nearly 3,000 communicants. The members must serve long probations and are thoroughly sifted. More than five thousand attended the Bible schools on Sunday, and at one of the missions, Elat, from four to five thousand attended the morning service of quarterly communion, or the monthly collection. Persecution is not yet a thing of the past. Not long ago a Bulu woman died six days after being clubbed by her husband for going to church and depositing her little gift on Sunday morning.

The Mission Spirit.

"Foreign" does not occur in the true dialect of the church, for it contemplates all as brethren—sons of one Father. And are there really "home missionaries," for the Christian has no home beneath the stars? He is a stranger and pilgrim here. Let our thoughts be in harmony with the Bible vernacular, and be accorded to every man who goes where God sends him, whether it be to brethren beyond the seas, or on the harder mission of speaking to those of his own community, or harder still, his own household.

Dr. Torrey tells of an Englishman who made fabulous wealth out of the South African diamond mines, and yet so far from bing satisfied with the possession of money that he employed a man to dog his footsteps lest he should commit suicide, and one day, when the keeper was not watching, he did jump overboard from a steamer and was drowned. The selfish use of money never satisfies."

William Carey's motto should be ours: "Expect great things from God, attempt great things for God." The Scriptures encourages us to go on and not to go back. They speak about doing more and more and not less and less. They tell us always to abound in the work of the Lord. They assure us that the more we do the more we will be able to do. The Lord rewards our fidelity, not by exempting us from greater tasks, but by giving us strength sufficient for these tasks.

Daily Readings.

M. An African convert.... Acts 8: 27-35
T. Outstretched hands.....Ps. 68: 31-35
W. Ethiopia for God.....Isa. 45: 11-14
T. The ensign.....Isa. 11: 10-12
F. The eternal kingdom.....Heb. 1: 5-9
S. The triumph.....Isa. 12: 1-6
Sun. Topic.

PAPA'S TRUE STORY.

"O papa, papa, tell us a story!" cried little Mary and Emma, running up to their father, who had seated himself upon the porch and was about to read the evening paper.

"Tell us a true story," said Emma, the little four-year-old as she climbed up on her papa's knee.

Papa could not resist this appeal, so he laid down his paper and began as follows:

"Once upon a time there lived a toad who had but three legs, having lost one of his hind legs."

"Was it shot off in the war?" asked Emma.

"I do not know how he lost it," said papa. "He may have lost it in a battle with a snake. All I know is that he had but one hind leg, and that in jumping over the ground he reminded one very much of a crippled soldier. This old toad, being thus crippled, was put to many shifts in order to get his daily bread."

"Toads don't eat bread, do they?" asked Mary.

"I mean flies, bugs, and such things," said papa, "which take the place of bread with toads. He had to use his wits so much that he soon came to be very wise. He used to hide under a leaf or a bunch of grass, and by pouncing upon unwary flies he was able to get quite a good living. One day he hobbled into a garden and squatted under a cabbage leaf, hoping to catch a nice large bug for his dinner. But he was very tired and before long he was fast asleep. When he awoke, it was quite dark. 'O dear!' said he, 'I have overslept myself. How hungry I am! I wonder if I can find a bug in the dark.' So saying, he began to hop along, when down he went into a

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:52 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday. for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Mcseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

pool of muddy water. He sank to the bottom; but by kicking lustily he soon got his head above the water. Then he swam around, trying to find something to rest upon. At last he came upon a little hummock of earth in the middle of the pool, and there he sat waiting for morning. When morning came, the toad found that he was in a great square pit that had been dug by the gardner in making an asparagus bed. The poor toad had to sit there all of that day and the following night without a bit to eat. Early the next day he was delighted to see two little girls come into the garden. 'Now I shall be helped out,' thought he. 'Those dear little girls will be my friends.' They were both dressed in white jackets with brown sashes, and had on their heads chip hats trimmed with brown."

"O papa," said Emma, "that is just the way Mary and I dress!"

Papa went on without making any reply. "When the little girls came to the pit, the older one cried out: 'O look at that old toad sitting in the water!' 'Let us throw dirt at him,' said the smaller. So both little girls threw dirt and sticks at the toad, which raised such waves around him that he was in danger of being washed off. 'O dear!' said that toad. 'Who would have thought that those little girls would be so cruel?' Just then a big piece of dirt struck the poor toad upon the head and laid him sprawling on his back in the water. When the toad had recovered from the blow and had crawled back to his resting place, he noticed a man with a hoe on his shoulder approaching the pit. 'O dear!' said the toad. 'Here comes a great rough man. Now I shall certainly be killed.' But the man put his hoe under the toad, lifted him carefully out of the pit, and laid him upon the dry grass. 'Well, I never!' said the toad. 'Who would have thought it? One can't judge by appearances.'"

Emma hung her head, and Mary giggled nervously.

"Do you know what little girls those were?" asked papa.

"I didn't know the toad felt so bad when I threw at him," said Emma, the tears starting in her eyes.

"No," said papa. "But you will be more thoughtful the next time, I am sure."

This was papa's true story.—The Nursery.

—Rev. R. L. Davis, Superintendent of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, was in town last week and addressed a large audience in the auditorium Wednesday night.—Asheboro Courier.

—Rev. C. H. Phipps, of Thomasville, will preach in the Asheboro Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Phipps is the new pastor of the Presbyterian church and is making a good impression on his congregation.—Courier.

—Dr. Irving Spear told the medical examiners at Baltimore that innumerable engineers in charge of trains were suffering from "phychic epilepsy," an ailment which some day may be the cause of a terrible railroad accident. He said the disease caused loss of memory, or a practical state of coma for perhaps ten seconds, or even less, and that many accidents probably had been caused by it.—Pathfinder.

—"Breddren an' sistern," said the old colored preacher. "I'se gwine to preach a powahful sermon dis mawnin'. I'se gwine to define de undefinable, I'se gwine to explain de unexplainable, an' I'se gwine to unscrew de unscrutable."

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due	Paid
Alamance	10.00	9.13
Albemarle	2.00
Anderson	3.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Burlington	8.00	8.00
Caroleen	3.00	1.00
Cleveland	11.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Davidson	6.00	4.25
Denton	2.00	2.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Forsyth	7.00	7.00
Gaston	2.00
Gilburg	1.00	1.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Greensboro	14.00	14.00
Greensville	5.00	5.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	8.00
Haw River	9.00	9.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
Ivy	3.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Liberty	10.00	10.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Littleton	10.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Mecklenburg	3.00
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Monroe	3.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Oak Ridge	10.00	10.00
Orange	3.00	3.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	7.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Richland	10.00
Roanoke	10.00
Rockingham	2.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Spring Church	5.00	5.00
Stanley	9.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Thomasville	3.00	3.00
Uwharrie	3.00
Vance	8.00	6.82
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Yarborough	5.00

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Compnay

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE, Co-educational.

Situated in the delightful hill country of North Carolina. With all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of city life.

Diploma from Elon admits without examination to the Graduate Departments of leading universities. In addition to the REGULAR COLLEGE COURSES, the following Departments are maintained:

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT—Prepares young men and young women for the Freshman class at Elon, or elsewhere.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT—Piano, Voice, Pipe Organ, Violin, Brass Instruments.

EXPRESSION DEPARTMENT—Elocution and Physical Culture.

ART DEPARTMENT—Oil Painting, Water Colors, Pastel, Crayon, China Painting. Public School Drawing, Mechanical Drawing, Etc.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT—An ideal Business Course, combining education, culture, and special training.

NORMAL DEPARTMENT—A three years briefer course leading to the L. I. degree. Also special term each year, April and May.

Good equipment and modern conveniences. Buildings heated by steam, lighted by electricity, furnished with water and baths. Expenses moderate, from $132 to $18. per session of ten months. Write for catalogue showing terms and work in detail.

President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

MORE MONEY THAN EDUCATION

—"A multi-millionaire in a fashionable restaurant," she said, "pointed to a line on the menu and said to the waiter:

"I'll have some of that please."

"I'm sorry, sir" the waiter answered, "but the band is playing that."

HER TEACHER.

—"How do you like your teacher, dear" little Mary was asked after her first day at school. "I like her real well," said Mary, "but I don't think she knows much, for she just keeps asking questions all the time."

—The Piedmont Railroad which was recently sold by the heirs of Mr. Jones, will not run through his county as was at first believed, but will be extended on from Denton to Reids, a station of the Southbound Railroad.—Courier.

TO THE READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send us $2.50 and we will send to your nearest express office enough wall paper to paper a room 16 x 16 feet, ceiling and side walls. Please mention for what rooms paper is wanted and if border is desired, and we will make you an appropriate selection.

Reference, Editor of Herald.

PARIS-GLASS DECORATING CO.

Greensboro, N. C.

JUST BEING HAPPY.

Just being happy
Is a fine thing to do:
Looking on the bright side,
Rather than the blue:
Sad or sunny musing
Is largely to the choosing,
And just being happy
Is brave work and true.

Just being happy
Helps other souls along:
Their burdens may be heavy
And they not strong,
And your own sky will lighten
If other skies you brighten
With a heart full of song.

—[Ripley D. Saunders.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1912. NUMBER 32.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

OUR DUTY TO THE CHURCH.

Certain duties are fairly well recognized by people generally. The duty to vote as citizens of the State is one that most men regard. The duty of paying taxes for the support of the government and for the service of public institutions is so well recognized that it is incorporated into law and made strictly binding upon all with severe penalties for its nonperformance. The basis of these duties is the value and importance of government and its service to the individual man.

The duty of children to parents and of parents to child is also recognized theoretically if not practically almost everywhere. Parents who fail to provide for their children are severely censured and may be punished. Children who do not duly honor their parents are condemned by public sentiment.

But is the duty which binds all men to honor and support the church as well recognized as it ought to be? Is there not a sort of notion that it is an arbitrary matter whether a man supports the church or not? We believe there is. We have gotten into a little confusion over this particular duty in this "free country." Becaure man is free to choose what church he will support, because we have no state religion and no law requiring conformity to any particular religious rites, there has sprung up among us a feeling that a man is free to support the church or not as he pleases. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

If we are bound to support the state, much more are we bound to support the church—because the church does much more for us than does the state. It does more to promote order and secure protection of life and property. Its method is very different from that of the state, but its influence is no less real. The state bears the sword and appeals to fear. The church begins earlier, before criminal tendencies have been developed, and make citizens that do not need force to restrain them. The church makes men wish to do good to their fellow men instead if wishing to rob them and murder them. One good preacher is worth more than one good policeman in promoting good order. A Sunday school teacher who is true to his calling renders greater service than does a township magistrate. Take away the church and all its agencies and property would be depreciated and human life would not be held dear.

The man who thinks he has no duty to the church because he has never joined any particular church is sadly mistaken. Can a man escape the duty of paying taxes by failing to list his property for taxation? Can a man annul his obligations by ignoring them?

So great is the service of the church that a man owes the church more than an annual contribution of a few dollars. He owes the church his personal influence and personal effort. He owes the church his personal attendance at its services. He owes the church a personal interest in its enterprises. He owes the church a good word among his associates whenever he can speak it. He owes the church the obligation to labor to bring his associates into the church.

By ignoring the church, we ignore Christ. By neglecting the church, we neglect Christ. By denying the church, we deny Christ.

By honoring the church and helping to promote its purity and its progress, we honor Christ and help to bring on the answer to the prayer He sought to put into our mouths, "Thy Kingdom come."

A NEW ORGANIZATION—THE GUARDIANS OF LIBERTY.

For years we have been receiving warnings from various sources against the designs of a scheming hierarchy—namely, that of the Roman Catholic Church. Some of us perhaps have been inclined to be skeptical, supposing that the warnings came merely from the alarmists, and that there was no ground for them, except in their imagination.

But the Roman Catholic Church makes no secret of its belief in its right to dominate, and of its hope to establish its supremacy in the United States. Having declared open war on Protestantism, it need not be surprised to learn that Protestants are preparing to oppose its claims to the right to rule the State.

An article in the Christian Herald of June 26, 1912, indicates that the movement for the preservation of our civil and religious liberties is being entered into seriously not only by Protestant ministers of the Gospel, but by men prominent in civil and military affairs. We quote parts of the article:

"On the ninth day of June, 1911, Washington witnessed an event which was hardly second in importance to anything that has taken place in the memory of the present generation. It was the organization of the Guardians of Liberty. Men of the highest prominence in the affairs of the nation, who from their exalted position were enabled to note the signs of the times that boded danger to the Republic, came together in consultation. The time was ripe for arousing the people to the duty of preserving their glorious heritage of freedom no less from the danger of unscrupulous political methods than from the plotting of foreign ecclesiasticism to subvert the very foundations of human liberty and to make the church co-ordinate with the state.

"At that conference, as though in response to a national necessity, the Guardians of Liberty came into being as an organization. Its rise since then has been phenomenal. It has received the prompt endorsement of the American people, by whose sovereign will it now exists. Its mission is to enlighten the nation on questions that are vital to the continued existence of the republic and to the maintenance of the great principles laid down by its founders.

"As Minerva is said to have sprung full-panoplied from the brain of Jove, so the Guardians of Liberty came into existence spontaneously and with the necessary equipment for a great national exigency. In the highest sense, therefore, it is the creation of the nation itself. It is not a political body, nor is a secret society, as some of its critics have asserted. Its purpose is clearly set forth in its declaration of principles which we publish in this issue. Among its leaders are many famous Americans whose names and records are known in every household. Its rank and file already numbering hundreds of thousands, include men of all shades of politics and every religious denomination. The sole qualification for membership is love of country and a conscientious determination to preserve its institutions, to protect the rights and privileges of American citizenship, and to defend them against attack.

"The plan of organization of the Guardians of Liberty is as follows: The National Court consists of an executive committee of five members: Hon. Charles D. Haines, chief guardian, head of the court; Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, chief attorney; Major General D. E. Sickles, chief custodian; Rear Admiral G. W. Baird, chief vigilant, and Rev. A. E. Barnett, D. D., chief recorder. The national headquarters are at 50 West Twenty-fourth Street, New York City.

"Hundreds of clergymen of various denominations in different States are on the rolls, and tens of thousands of workingmen representing practically every trade. All are on equal ground within its ranks. All pay a nominal membership fee of $1. At its gatherings men of wealth and influence, pastors, professional men, merchants, tradesmen and the humblest laborer meet on the common ground of love of country. They are knit together by the one desire to serve the nation's best intersts, and to prevent the laying of unholy hands upon its institutions. They stand for higher statesmanship, purer legislation, cleaner politics, national, State, and civic righteousness, the complete separation of church and state, and equal privileges for all."

Next week we will publish the declaration of prineples of this new organization.

Help us with the grace of courage that we may be none of us cast down when we sit lamenting over the ruins of our own happiness.—Stevenson.

"THE WATCHWORD" AND CHURCH UNION.

The Watchword, the official organ for the young people of the United Brethren Church, under the head of "Church Union in Earnest," in its last issue quotes from The Methodist Recorder and The Methodist Protestant what they have had to say on the subject of church union and then offers comment. We like the spirit and the expression of the Watchword on the subject of the union of two churches, and this organ of the young people of our sister church, under the leadership of Dr. Shupe, its editor, will be a powerful factor in bringing about this proposed end. The Watchword, referring to the statement of The Methodist Recorder that immediate action is desired by the Methodist Protestant Church, says: "The United Brethren Church does not want a prolonged discussion of the subject, and the spirit of fairness will require that the United Brethren Church appreciate the gravity of the situation and will be ready to act."

The Watchword then quotes from The Methodist Protestant:

"Our General Conference has thrown down the bars to the last rail, and it was done with a spontaneity and a unanimity that leaves no room for quibble or doubt. It must not be understood that we are in condition that pushes us into a union; we are not pining, nor failing. We are making progress, and there never was a time when we were more vigorous and progressive than now. Neither do we flatter ourselves that such a union will be of more advantage to the United Brethren than it is to ourselves, but we are so much alike in faith and practice, in doctrine and polity, that we are honestly convinced that a further separation can not be justified either before God or man."

In response to this, and for the purpose of making clear its position on the subject, The Watchword says:

"We believe the United Brethren Church will meet the proposal in the spirit in which it is presented.

"The circumstances which caused the negotiations to cease in the past are regretted, but the delay may not be without advantages. Both commissions now have before them the results of attempted union undertaken in recent years. Questions of property rights, the strength of prejudice against abandoning of names, etc., can be better dealt with now than seven years ago.

"The advantages of the union are chiefly on the business side. Union will not make individual Christians more pious or local churches more zealous, but the proper uniting of the general church enterprises will reduce the cost of administration, and where the local churches and annual conferences cover the same territory union will eliminate seeming competition.

"Then why not effect a union that will not defeat itself in contentions over name and the rights of vested interests? The advantages of union do not lie in the name. Litigation over property interests would be a thousand times worse than the present situation. Confine the actual union to the business side of the general church enterprises where co-operation and consolidation can be effected to the great saving of expenses and increasing of efficiency."

This goes straight to the mark, and is sufficiently explicit to show what is in mind of The Watchword and what is its attitude toward this proposition to the organic union of the two churches.—Mehtodist Recorder.

A WORD FROM DR. STEPHENS

The Board of Trustees at its last session took measures that we hope in the course of a few weeks will free us from our great embarrassment, but the conditions yet are such that every dollar that our friends can send us is greatly needed.

While we are passing through this very trying experience in the financial history of the institution, matters are assuming shape that promise to give the university a position of commanding influence beyond anything that has yet entered into our plans. I referred last week to the probable union of Campbell College, the United Brethren College in Kansas, having an attendance of four hundred students, with the Kansas City University. A meeting of a committee from their Board of Trustees of that college, with a like committee from our Board is to occur in a few days. Should plans for this union be effected, it is proposed to call upon the two Kansas cities to furnish two hundred thousand dollars to be put into new buildings on the grounds of the university. Several conferences have already been held with some leading citizens of the two cities, and measures projected looking toward carrying this purpose into effect. There is every reason to believe that we are on the eve of great developments that will bear upon the future of our institution, and upon the possibilities of our church life in the west. The conditions are such that if there is a drop of patriotic blood in the Methodist Protestants it ought to be stirred into action by the great and portentous events that seem to be shaping themselves in our behalf. I have for years been impressed with the belief that Providence has wonderfully opened our way for denominational enlargement in this part of the great west, but this conviction has never been borne in upon me as it has within the last few months. Indeed, if it were not for this conviction, I think the financial embarrassments we are being compelled to pass through would have forced me to give up the struggle, notwithstanding there are so many guarantees of the future in the magnificent real estate holdings that have come to us from Dr. Mather, and the legacies willed to us by Dexter Horton and others. No institution in our church is better provided for the future, and none is so sorely pressed to meet present demands.

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE FOX.

(From an address by Prof. H. H. Williams, of the State University, at Guilford College Commencement.)

In 1606 Pope Paul V. excommunicated the Republic of Venice. Venice was the centre of the world's commerce. Pope Paul desired to offer to Europe an illustration of his power. He sentenced to hell every man, woman and child in the Republic. The offense of Venice was in refusing to allow the Pope to dictate the election of a new Doge.

Just 40 years after this assertion of absolute sacerdotal power George Fox began to preach. He did not stop to enquire whether the sacerdotal power was absolute, he struck at the root of the matter. He denied the right of the sacerdotal system to exist in Christianity. The Priest may have his place in Pagan worship, but in Christianity the individual worships and God Himself receives the worship. There is no need of a Priesthood and no place for it

In 1579 the Lutheran theologians of Germany after ten years of labor issued the "Formula of Concord." This was the perfect and final statement of Christianity. According to these men, Christianity is not a sacerdotal system, but a body of syllogisms. If a man accepts these he becomes a Christian. If he rejects them, he is lost.

In 1619 the Synod of Dort finished its work. This synod was the supreme effort of Calvinism. The formula of Concord must be overthrown. Christianity is not Arminianism—it is Calvinism. John Barneveld—the noblest soul of his day—was put to death. Grotius—the finest scholar in Europe—was imprisoned for life. And we have that terrible, disgraceful struggle of Christian vs. Christian—the thirty years war.

Twenty-seven years after the synod of Dort disolved and two years before the 30 years war was ended, George Fox was preaching—not for the formula of Concord—nor for the degrees of the Synod of Dort— but the simple truth of Christ. True religion is not a process of syllogism, nor the acceptance of any creed but a personal experience of Christ through the spirit.

When Lorenzo the Magnificent was dying, a messenger was hurried to San Marco to ask the presence of Savonarola. The great man came—stood long by the bedside of the wicked prince—turned and left the room—refusing to administer the sacrament and absolve the man from his sins.

Savonarola was a great and good man. I have wondered about this action. The church-world was schocked. The soul of the elegant prince had gone to hell when the Priest had it within his power to save him to Heaven. I have thought the great Priest may have doubted the power of the sacrament to make clean this wicked life. But the church never forgave Savonarola. The power of the Priesthood was lodged in the sacrament. The sacrament was the only channel through which the grace of God reached the soul of man. The Priest alone administers it. Such is the sacerdotal system. Savonarola had doubted it. He was marked for persecution and martyrdom.

Luther and Zwingli had an ugly quarrel about the sacrament. When Bruno was elected professor of philosophy in the University of Paris, only one condition was attached: he must attend the celebration of the mass regularly. This he declined to do. In 1690 Bruno was burned to death by the Inquisition in Rome.

Just 40 years after this George Fox was preaching that there was no sacrament. Christ acts not through channels but directly and immediately. When a man sits in the bosom of his family what need is there for a postal system. When the spirit of Christ touches and lights up the spirit of man, what need is there for channels of grace. The soul of man is already ablaze with light and joy.

From the early days, worship has expressed itself through forms of pomp, beauty and music. 6,000 years ago Brahmanism developed a glorious ceremonial for its worship. The ceremonies in the temple in the days of Solomon were a marvel of pomp and beauty. The man is hardly human who is unmoved by the liturgy of the Catholic worship, the stately dignity, the glorious music, the gorgeous colors, it is indeed beautiful. These things appeal to the senses. They charm and move great crowds.

Europe stood aghast when George Fox announced that there is a higher beauty in simplicity, a deeper, divine power in silence. The worship of God is sunshine rather than storm and thunder.

No creed, no priesthood, no sacrament, no liturgy—these four things make the message of George Fox, on its negative side, to the world. These four things about which all the quarrels in religion have raged. No wonder the fighting element in Christianity attacked the Quaker with fury.

Think of the courage of the man! Think of the vigor of his religious experience that dared to stand alone in the face of the four master passions of human life—and these challenged to the death.

Martin Luther at the Diet of Worms is to me one of the noble scenes of all time. Luther defied the power of ecclesiaticism. But Luther did not change the dogma of Augustine. He substituted con-substantion for transubstantation in the sacrament. And to this day nobody can see any difference except in the spelling of the words. Luther loved the liturgy.

George Fox went far beyond Martin Luther. The average Christian today has gone beyond the position of Luther. It is only a few—the deep, clear thinker—the rich, beautiful, practical Christian in all the many sects of the day that see the great thought of Fox and accept it. It is no wonder the furies were set loose. In 1656 Fox said there were seldom less than 1000 Quakers in prison. Charles II liberated 400 from the tower in one day. If a Christian experience is not any one of these four things, nor all four combined, what can it be? George Fox said Christian life is a very simple thing. It is living every day in the presence of Christ.

Christ himself inaugurated the movement and illustrated it for three years with his disciples.

Christian experience is individual. It is a conscious relation direct and personal, between the individual and God. It is not a product of man's devices; but the source of all activity. It cannot be tested by anything; it is itself the standard of value. There can be no authority over it; Christian experience is itself the highest authority.

Here we find the secret and source of the happy life. It is a life of courage and faith, because it is a life of simplicity and peace; because it is in conscious cooperation with the Spirit of Truth. It is a life of freedom and beauty; because there is no place for slavery in a Christian life. Christian life springs from a direct, personal, conscious relation to the essence of truth and righteousness.

But this is no new doctrine. The truth is ancient and clear. As far back as one can go men have felt the power and beauty of this doctrine.

We find a profound grasp of the truth in the Upanishad, spoken by the sage, Shandilya, as follows: "Verily the universe in Brahma. Let him whose soul is at peace worship it, as that which he would fain know. Whose substance is spirit, whose body is life, whose form is light, whose purpose is truth, whose essence is eternity. That is my spirit within my heart. Thereunto when I go hence shall I attain."

The power of the old Testament is in the fact that man came into direct relation to Jehovah, and they consulted together about the ways of life. True there were days of pomp and ceremonial and priest, but these were barren days. The creative days were when the individual and Jehovah worked consciously together.

So in Christianity we had the Greek fathers and the Latin fathers. This principle of conscious co-operation between God and man is the very essence of the teaching of the Greek fathers. In fact I do not see how Christianity could have absorbed the Greek world had it not presented this truth.

Justin states the doctrine clearly. God comes near to man. He comes into man. His abiding presence in the soul alone makes goodness possible. That is, right life is due to the animating presence in the individual of the Divine.

Clement rises to a noble view of this doctrine. He thinks of Christ as not only the animating presence in individual life, but in humanity and the world.

Origen loved to quote from Plotinus, "I amstriving to bring the God which is in me into harmony with the God which is in the universe." From all eternity, says Origen, by a necessary law of his being, God communicates himself. The light which is the life and blessedness of the whole creatioon goes forth eternally from the source of light, as the rays go forth from the sun. To exist in relationship is the essential idea of God.

The Latin fathers denied this principle. They condemned Origen as a heretic. They erected the vast sacerdotal system to stand forever between man and God. By this act they condemned humanity to fifteen centuries of slavery. But Augustine, the master spirit in Christianity, the great influence in Christianity since St. Paul, states with striking emphasis and earnestness the principle of mysticism. "Say unto my soul, I am thy salvation, but say it so that I may hear thee. I will run after the sound of thy voice and lay hold on thee."

"I will seek thee, that my soul shall live. Our heart rests not until it rests in thee."

George Fox stands in line with this long list of noble thinkers. He not only wrought ought the principle—he incarnated it into his daily behavior. And the power of this living truth was contagious.

To me Christianity is the supreme challenge to humanity. It calls man to the infinite, the divine, the perfect life. The challenge is from the infinite directly to the individual. In a thousand ways the spirit invites us and bids us go forward. This is the philosophy of ambition and discontent.

Bring me men to match my mountains,
Bring me men to match my plains.
Men with empires in their purpose.
And new ideas in their brains;
Men with power to clear through marsh lands
And to cleanse old errors free;
Bring me men to match my mountains,
Bring me men."

This is God's challenge to man. We are built along infinite lines. The true life of a man is conscious co-operation with God himself.

Such is George Fox's message. And his great work has spread, not in externals, not in the form of number and machinery; but as the sunshine. Everywhere among thinkers today the principle of George Fox is recognized and accepted. It is the principle of peace and good will, of freedom and righteous living.

It is a noble heritage you bear, my friends. No man can give a balance sheet of sunshine. It is the power of life, the power to achieve, the power of the work of the Society of Friends. We are in a day of press, of forms, of numbers.

We have forgotten the beauty of simplicity, the power of silence, the principle of the leaven.—Reprinted from the Friends Messenger.

PUBLICITY IN RELIGION.

That the printing press is the appropriate and indispensable adjunct of the pulpit was lately recognized in a very striking manner by a proposition in the report of Men and Religion Movement. That report strongly advocated the establishment of a central publicity bureau for the dissemination of religious news. We have not heard that this has been done, and the project may be one whose realization is to be looked for in the indefinite future.

Within a very recent period, however, as we are reliably informed, a religious publicity bureau has been established in another quarter. It is organized and controlled in the interest of the Roman Catholic Church, and it sends out regularly a service of considerable volume to a large number of publications, mainly secular newspapers. Its work is skillfully done so that it may not give offense to the general public, and that their suspicions may not be awakened to the real purpose. It is a well planned campaign for the education of the American people in the religion of Rome. This is a wholly new line of tactics in the great campaign which Rome is now conducting with the ultimate object of securing religious and political ascendancy in the United States. Protestanism has its struggling factions and its rival denominations, with their varying and oftimes conflicting interests, while the Roman Church has the tremendous advantage of solidarity, the whole body working as a unit for a single purpose. Moreover, Rome plans its campaign not to last for a week or a month, but to extend over a period of years. It is willing to plod patiently and persistently, knowing that in the end the constant attrition will smooth down opposition and bring about the desired result. First, it means to familiarize the millions of American non-Catholic readers with its version of contemporary history from the Roman point of view; next, to impress them with the power and dignity of the princes of the church, who, it has openly claimed, are entitled to outrank all save sovereigns. It presents in deferential yet positive phrases the ancient claims of Rome's priority and spiritual supremacy. It gets the average mind accustomed to reading the descriptions of gorgeous ceremonials, of impressive masses and the pomp and splendor of the church in America, and thus it is steadily sowing in the minds of old and young the seed which is trusted to bring a harvest of popular toleration and appreciation. It hopes in time to bring our people to the point of accepting the idea of an American pontiff.

This is the continent-wide program of education that has already begun. What have the Protestant churches of America done, or what can they do, to counteract this new agency which has taken possession of the field? We should like to ask how the Men and Religion Movement proposes to meet the emergency. If the vase wealth of the Catholic Church is being employed for such a purpose, it can only be effectively met by a like movement, on a larger and broader scale, by American Protestantism, which has at its disposal all that is needed. The time has gone by for sectarian quarrels and denominational divergences. American Protestantism must unite its forces and its denominations must stand shoulder to shoulder if it means to maintain its integrity and retain its hold upon the faith, the confidence the support of the people.

Neither the creed of Rome nor the personality of its leaders is now in question. It is the Romanist campaign for political and religious supremacy in the nation that must be considered as a whole. That there are many Catholics who take little or no interest in such a plan, and who may even mildly disapprove, is not to the point. The plan exists; it is already working and it will continue to work practically without opposition, until Protestantism is awakened to the seriousness of the situation.—Christian Herald.

BACK IN THE SADDLE.

(From the Miners' Magazine.)

J. Mahlon Barnes, who a year or two ago was compelled to resign from the office of national secretary of the Socialist Party in disgrace, charged with drunkenness, gross immorality, etc., is back in office again and will have the honor of handling the political campaign for 1912 for the Socialist Party.

Barnes is the man that accused old Mother Jones of blackmail after having borrowed $200 of the old lady and failed to reimburse the aged woman until he was compelled to do so by threats of civil action. As long as the Socialist Party persists in placing such people as Barnes in office it will fail to command the respect ofmany decent people who are cognizant of the conditions.

According to the testimony or evidence in the Barnes case, Barnes had converted the national office into a sort of bagnio, or harem, for private use and acted in a scandalous manner. Such papers as the Chicago Daily Socailist and the Appeal to Reason never gave the matter mention, or rather sought to cover up the disgraceful matter "for the good of the party," consequently thousands of Socialists never knew what was going on in the Windy City at the national headquarters.

While it may do for the old parties to choose degenerates and libertines for their leaders it will not do for the Socialist Party to follow their example in this matter, as it dishonors the party and is political suicide.

No greater wrong or injury can be inflicted upon the party than naming for public office men or women of questionable character. This vicious practice has done more to pollute our politics than any other cause. If the Socialist Party is going to follow the example of the old parties in their tactics, the sooner it goes to perdition the better

—Jason Jones, Jr.

TEACHER OF TEACHERS.

Teacher of teachers, in Thy school
Give us our fitting part,
Obedient to Thy loving rule
With body, mind and heart.

We thank Thee for each active mind
Which thinks Thy thoughts again,
For all who have Thy truth divined
And made Thy message plain.

Searchers for truth, oh make us true,
And give us clearer sight,
That nothing in our outward view
May cloud the inner light.

The universe, Thy open book,
Give us the skill to know,
Forgetting not the upward look
In searching things below.

A world of great, harmonious laws,
Of purpose and of plan;
And seen through all, a Great First Cause
Whose crowning work is man.

Increase our knowledge more and more
That we may ready be
For that great school beyond Death's door—
God's University.

—Selected.

TOBACCO AND COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Penn College after extensive observation hesitates to admit tobacco users as students. A statement to this effect is to appear in their catlogue. "The effects of tobacco upon young men is so detrimental that the faculty do not care to work against this handicap. Young men using tobacco are not encouraged to enter Penn College. While not refuused entrance the faculty reserves the right to dismiss such students if in their judgment the habit becomes too much of a hindrance. It may be cited that many young men in eastern universities use tobacco with apparently little or no bad effect as far as the truth of this statement is concerned. While we doubt seriously the truth of this, and believe that no one can use tobacco and escape injury, physically, mentally and morally, yet even granting its truth we still maintain that the Penn ideals, or the "Penn Spirit," will not allow a young man to use tobacco in any form and still measure up to the standard of the product from Penn College. Perhaps not more than a half dozen, who use tobacco, come to Penn any year, yet we do not desire to admit even this small number. We would rather these would attend colleges where the habit is tolerated, where one addicted to it may be comfortable and leave us to handle only those young men who are clean from this filthiness and whose minds are not dulled by a poison self-administered. If this comes to the notice of any young man expecting to come to Penn and now using tobacco, let him reform in this particular or seek some other college where the standard permits students to poison themselves and contaminate the atmosphere which others must breathe."—Western Work.

ANGELS MINISTERING TO US.

Mr. Butler, the great Bible commentator, says: "There are many reasons to conclude that the angels who never sinned are constantly employed. The very name angel signifies a messenger, one appointed to do the commandments of God. An angel appeared to Zacharias and to Mary. Angels announced the birth of the Savior, and they attended him in his temptation and in His final agony. They conducted the apostles out of prison. An angel advised Cornelius to send for Peter. An angel informed Paul that he and his companions should not perish on their voyage to Rome. And the separation of the righteous from the wicked at the day of judgment is ascribed to angels. In short, they are described as ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation. All these passages and others not mentioned go to prove that their great work is not silent adoration, abstract contemplaton, but activity, boundless activity."

Then is it not pleasant and inspiring to remember that amid the stress and turmoil of this mortal life, when we feel that everything is against us, and the mistakes and sins of our past lives come up before us and demand restitution: when the heart grows faint and we are almost ready to yield up our allegiance to the King eternal, there comes into our spirits a sweet and gentle influence assuring us that God has not forsaken us, that Jesus is still at the right hand of the Father pleading for us. What is this but the soft whisper of some angel of mercy who has been sent to minister to us. O child of God and heir of eternal joy and peace and rest, look up and rejoice though clouds and darkness seem to envelop you. Your Father knows your grief and has innumerable resources for the succor and deliverance of every one of his trusting children.

Above all other things there is justice; success is a good thing; wealth is good also; honor is better; but justice excels them all.—David Dudley Field.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Psalms 133-139.

From Pastors and People.

Kistler's, Cleveland Circuit.

Dear Herald:

Our pastor Rev. W. D. Reed was unable to fill his regular appointment last fourth Sunday. He is very ill at the present, we all hope for his recovery soon.

Rev. A. P. Ivester was there and gave us a fine sermon. Our special meeting will commence next fourth Sunday in July.

I suppose Bro. Braswell will be our pulpit help. I will ask every body to pray for us to have a glorious revival

I'll forever remain in Christ.

With best wishes to you Herald readers.

Lolan Ivester, Reporter.

Burlington.

The attendance at Sunday school last Snday was 161. The offering, $2.63. Our superintendent, Bro. Andrews, was absent. He attended the Greene Township Sunday School Convention, which was held at Lows Lutheran Church.

In accordance with the announcement, Bro. McCulloch was with us Sunday morning, and preached a good sermon. There was no service held in the evening.

A Christian Endeavor Society was organized Sunday evening by several of the young people, composed largely of the Baraca and Philathea classes of our Sunday school.

The children of our school are being trained for the Chldren's Day exercises, which will probably be held the second Sunday in July.

C. B. W.

July 2, 1912.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.

Our new and very popular pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, has been with us since the second Sunday in May. He was not a stranger to our people, having assisted Rev. L. W. Gerringer last September in the special meeting held at this church. Since that time our Circuit has been without a pastor, so we know more fully how to appreciate one. Two rooms of the parsonage have been very comfortably furnished, and Bro. Pritchard is keeping "batch," taking his meals at Mr. N. M. Harrison's.

We have a nice Sunday school here, though there is still room for improvement. Prayer meeting held every Wednesday night.

Our pastor left the 24th to make a short visit to his home people. We shall be glad to see him return.

Reporter.

Lebanon.

President Swain was with us the fourth Sunday afternoon and preached an able and instructive sermon. We had our Children's Day the fifth Sunday. There was a large crowd present. The children did finely, some of the smallest taking part. It was a perfect success. It was said to be the best one ever held here; which reflected much credit on those that trained the children. Mr. Spies, from Weldon, made an interesting talk to the children. Collection for foreign missions amounted to $5.04, which was small indeed for the number present.

In the afternoon Mr. Spies made a splendid talk on Sowing and Reaping, which I am sure was enjoyed by all. Come again, Bro. Spies. Our Sunday school is getting on finely with Mr. J. H. Allen as Supt. We haven't decided when we will have our special meeting.

M. Goal Jordan.

Garysburg, N. C., July 2, 1912.

Yarborough's.

Harmony Church observed Children's Day the fourth Sunday. It was an excellent service. Sister Nannie Balentine was assisted by her sister, Miss Sudie Medlock, in training the children. They deserve much credit for their excellent work. The children's service always reaches a high mark. The music was directed by Miss Joe Balentine and was splendid.

Bro. and Sister C. A. Moore are visiting in Greenville. We miss them very much. Our special meeting will begin with Harmony Church the fourth Sunday, with Rev. G. L. Curry to help. Quarterly meeting Saturday night before the fourth Sunday.

First Sunday at Yarborough, assisted by Bro. Curry.

Miss Maud Bess of Caroleen has returned after spending three weeks at the parsonage.

W. A. Lamar.

Reidsville Church.

Mrs. Nellie Wray	$10.00
T. E. Wray, Jr.	.50
W. E. Wray	.25

Little Tom sold cherries and got his 50c. and says he is going to make 50c. more himself to put on the church. Hurrah for Tommy! May the Lord yet call him to preach. He is a bright boy. Earl is right after him, and no doubt he will raise 25c. more. This will do permanent good, and no doubt when they grow to be men they will look with pleasure on this building and know they helped to make it possible. Are there any other little boys and girls who will help? If so, send it on.

We have already spent over $300 and are looking for the lumber any day. These bills must be met and will be, but don't you want to help?

C. E. M. Raper.

Reidsville, N. C., July 1, 1912.

Lincolnton.

The June report of our Sunday school is as follows:

First Sunday, attendance 80, collection $2.71.

Second Sunday, attend. 101, col. $3.33.

Third Sunday, attend. 93, col. $3.40.

Fourth Sunday, attend. 76, coll. $2.67.

Fifth Sunday, attend. 77, coll. $3.48.

Our attendance has dropped off just a little, but our collections have kept up, which shows the interest has not abated in the least. We had our Children's Day the fifth Sunday. Notwithstanding a tent meeting was going on within 300 yards of the church, and the Baptist people had one of their best men to preach at the same time in their church, which is about 350 yards from our church, we had the folks. The church was packed; the collection was $6.20, but ought to have been more.

We have just organized a C. E. Society with a good force of young men and women. They meet each Sunday afternoon at 4:30. I hope we will be able to make this a great power in the church for God. Our Teacher Training Class is getting along well. We are expecting our new and handsome organ to arrive any day, which will add much to our singing. So after all it seems we are here to stay.

D. B. J.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

We held our Children's Day service last Sunday. The pieces were rendered nicly by the little boys and girls. The singing by the choir was fairly good. The quartette, consisting of Messrs. Coe, Hamilton, Cheek and Long, sang four beautiful songs which were enjoyed so much by every one present. We continue to thank them for their kindness. Prof. Lee P. Blair made an interesting talk after the children did their part. Bro. Cecil was there aiding wherever he could. Our collection amounted to $16.52.

Our S. S. attendance for last month was not as good as month before. June 2, 70 present; June 9, 74; June 16, 84; June 23, 92; June 30, 60 present. Average for month, 76. Our Supt., Mr. Witty, is working faithfully at organizing some new classes. Will report about them in full later.

Dr. Sam Coe is visiting his parents and relatives.

Mr. George Plunkett is spending his vacation at home. Reporter.

June 30, 1912.

Chatham Circuit.

The Children's Day service was held at Hickory Grove Church last Sunday. It was a great success. The children spoke well, which showed that much credit was due the two young ladies who had them in charge. Mr. W. H. Kimrey rendered excellent service in helping with the children and also with the music. We all appreciate his help more than words can tell.

The third Sunday in June Rev. J. H. Bowman offered to the children up to 16 years old a class pin if they would get up as much as 50 cents each for foreign missions. There were twenty-four children that won class pins. In all we raised $14.69 for that purpose. This is the largest amount ever raised for foreign missions at one time in our church. Thanks to Bro. Bowman for his offer, for it was of great help to us.

July 2, 1912. Reporter.

Siler City.

We are getting ready for our Children's Day service which will be held the second Sunday in this month. We are back in our church now, after having been out for two months. Have spent nearly $700 in seating, painting, carpeting, etc., and we now have a neat, comfortable little church, and are glad to get back home. (Come down to see us sometime, Mr. Editor.)

President Swain was with us third Sunday night in June, and his sermon was very much enjoyed. Heard several speak very complimentarily of it.

G. E. M.

Asheboro.

Our W. F. M. S. held quite an enjoyable and interesting Mothers' meeting in the church Friday afternoon, June 28th. The women of the missionary societies of the other churches in the town were invited, also the ministers and their families. The attendance was good. A missionary program was well rendered, the children with their sweet songs and recitations adding much to it. The presence of the babies of the Cradle Roll and their mothers was an interesting feature. Refreshments consisting of ice tea and sandwiches were served, and after a social hour the meeting adjourned. The members went from the meeting feeling that it was the best we have had in recent years. Mrs. T. M. Johnson.

July 2, 1912.

Caldwell Circuit.

We are still breathing on Caldwell Ct., but moving slowly. We have held our second quarterly conference and found but little done by pastor or people. I think there have been the most unfavorable Sabbaths this year so far that I have ever noticed. Conference put in nomination for delegate, Rev. P. D. Moore and J. L. Childers.

Our church at Shady Grove is now covered and about weather boarded, and hope to lay the floor and put in windows and door soon. Pray for us, that God will give us a prosperous year.

I see no assessment for this work this year. I have failed to get minutes of the last Annual Conference, hence am ignorant of the assessments if there be any. Even at this late date I would be glad if some one would favor me with a copy. H. D. Garmon, Pastor.

Hickory, N. C., R. F. D. 4.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Circuit.

Children's Day service was held Sunday night last. Though the weather was very inclement the church was full to the limit almost. Truly, I must say the children did well. Collection fair.

Again Bro. Bethea proved himself "not lazy," because of having preached in the morning at Union Chapel, then driving a distance of perhaps eight miles to attend the Children's Day service at Rehoboth in the afternoon, then from Rehoboth to this place to attend same at 8:30 o'clock. Not lazy, or just wanted to hear the children one, was it not?

Next thing with us now is our longed-for picnic. W. Polk Garrett.

July 2, 1912.

Bethel, Randolph Circuit.

Providence Township S. S. Convention held its annual session at Bethel the 5th Sunday in June. It was a good session, and we trust that a determination for better and fuller schools was carried home by many. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Mr. W. R. Julian, Pres.; Mr. J. A. Stout, Vice Pres.; Miss Estelle Neece, Sec.; Messrs. A. M. Macon, Joe Fields, George Pugh, and Mrs. Lizzie Berry and Pearle Adams, Executive Committee.

Our Children's Day service is to be held at 3 o'clock next Sunday, July 7. Program as follows:

Song service, conducted by Miss Lonnie Adams.

Scripture Lesson and Devotional by pastor, Rev. Lassiter.

Quartette.

Greeting—Floyd Fields.

Welcome—Grady York.

A Call for Workers—Beulah Burrow.

Little Sunbeams—five little girls.

Song.

Crown Him Lord of All—Elsie York.

A Nickel—De Witt Allred.

A Dime—Louise Adams.

Speech—Clarence Fields.

Sunbeams, by seven children.

Song.

A Wish—Herbert York.

A Little Lad—Beulah Burrow.

A Message—Gurney Trogdon.

A Wee Boy and aWee Girl—Floyd Cox and Eva Field.

Tell it Again—Bessie Wood.

Building the Ship, an exercise by twenty-five young people and children.

Tell it not in Gath—Robt. Garner.

Christian and Heathen, by ten girls.

Collection, Ina Kirkman.

Song service.

Reporter.

High Point.

Last Sunday was a good day for us. Our Sunday school was back to 213, and there were about 225 in the morning congregation and about 125 at night. That we think is fine for a hot Sunday. We were glad to have Bros. C. A. Cecil and T. H. Matthews' worship with us in the morning service. The pastor preached on the promised subject of "Dreaming Dreams and Seeing Visions." It was applied to the Methodist Protestant Church. Our fathers of 80 years ago dreamed dreams of a free Methodism, and their children of today are seeing visions of a free Methodism, perhaps, beyond even the dreams of our fathers.

A number of the people were kind enough to express their appreciation of the sermon. Perhaps I will publish it after it soaks awhile.

A. G. Dixon, Pastor.

High Point, N. C., July 2nd, 1912.

St. Paul.

The revival at St. Paul closed last Sunday night. There were twenty-one professions, about twelve were reclaimed, nine converts. It was a good meeting, considering everything. Spiritual death reigns almost supreme, not in the M. P. Church alone, but all other congregations. The outlook is for better times. Rev. L. W. Gerringer assisted the last week.

He did good preaching. The people were well pleased with his work here. There will be 6 accessions as a result of the meeting. There being only nine conversions, we did not expect many accessions. Two joined, others to follow.

G. F. Millaway.

Friendship, Stanley Circuit.

Our pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, filled his regular appointment here last Sunday, June 30; he always gives us something that helps us in the Christian life. Being a lovely day, a large congregation, and every one present seemed very much pleased with the service. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. New members are being enrolled nearly every Sunday. I hope they will continue to come until all will be members of our Sunday school that possibly can attend.

Prof. J. R. Holt, of Greensboro, will teach a ten days' singing school here beginning the 22nd of July.

Rev. Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Martin Furr held a prayer service at the home of Mr. Frank Mason Sunday evening, whose daughter is sick and not able to attend church. We are sorry to say her condition is very serious. Reporter.

Yadkin College Circuit.

We are moving steadily on. Rev. J. H. Moton, of High Point, came up on Saturday before the fifth Sunday and spent Saturday night with Bro. Lindsay Leonard. An all-day service was appointed for Bro. Moton at Shiloh on fifth Sunday. A large crowd greeted him from all parts of the work. Bro. Moton was at his best, and gave us two inspiring and helpful sermons. We were all glad to see him and hear him preach again. Bro. Moton was pastor on this charge for five years. Sunday was indeed a good day. Bro. Moton's visit and sermons made us all feel that we wanted to be better; really, many are better. We hope he may chance to come this way again soon.

Bro. J. N. Garrett is no better. Bro. Garrett realizes that he is nearing the end of his Christian race. His financial circumstances are still embarrassing. He tells me that he traveled as an itinerant minister for some seventeen years, and for twelve years received much less than a support. Sometimes he traveled for as little as $113. Surely some of those fields which Bro. Garrett has served will now come to his relief; and will not others come in also? If one hundred would resolve to give one dollar and do it at once, the situation would be relieved. Brethren, if you have a mind to help do not delay, for Bro. Garrett will not be with us long at best; only a few more days, perhaps another week or two. Let Bro. Garrett know of your love and sympathy before he is gone. Bro. Garrett is resigned to the Master's will; when I went to see him last, though with feeble voice he talked of the work, the brethren, and sang and praised the Master.

May each one remember him earnestly in our prayers. He has had three doctors, and they are all agreed that he can never be up again. A general wear-out and break down. Heart very weak and swelling of the limbs. He sits most all the time propped up in a rocker.

H. L. Powell.

Bethany, Haw River Circuit.

Last fourth Sunday we held our Children's Day services. There was a large, attentive crowd present. All seemed to enjoy the day. In the afternoon, to our delight, our pastor was with us and gave us some very helpful remarks. Collection amounted to $3.33.

Last Saturday we held our fourth annual New Bethel township S. S. Convention at New Lebanon Christian Church. It was well attended, there being eight Sunday schools in the township and every one represented. We were disappointed that the pastor of New Lebanon, Rev. L. I. Cox, and our pastor, could not be with us. Sorry indeed that Bro. Raper was sick. Hope that he may speedily regain his strength.

The Convention was one in which we got much good information and enthusiasm. We expect to make our Sunday schools much better. Each of the three sessions of the Convention on Saturday was much enjoyed.

Sunday morning at ten o'clock we met again for a Union Children's Day, in which seven Sunday schools participated. It was good to be there and worship together.

Sunday night Mr. C. A. Hines, of Greensboro, gave a splendid address on The Week Day Work of the Sunday school.

Our Sunday school is being well attended. Bro. J. D. Baynes, our Supt., is a worker.

Protracted services will begin at Bethany the second Sunday in July. We are looking forward expecting a real feast on God's blessings. Brethren and sisters, pray for us that we may work and pray as the Lord would have us do.

Cora Lester, Reporter.

July 2, 1912.,

Whether women are allowed to vote or not they will continue to rule the world.—Roanoke News.

High Point.

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, the Advisary Committee appointed by the last Annual Conference, and the locating committee for the Orphan's Home met in the Methodist Protestant Church in High Point on Thursday, June 27. The writer and a few others were present as visitors. These committees had a very interesting and enthusiastic meeting. The locating committee made its formal report of its selection of a farm for the Home two miles from High Point on the macadamized road leading toward Greensboro.

This report was unanimously accepted by the joint session.

This meeting elected as a Finance Committee: Mr. T. A. Hunter, Dr. F. R. Harris, Mr. J. M. Millikan, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, and Mrs. A. G. Dixon. And as a Building Committee, Dr. J. K. Reitzel, Capt. A. M. Rankin, Sheriff R. R Ross, Mr. R. H. Brooks, Mr. V. W. Idol, and Mr. J. J. Welch. These Committees were asked to get to work at once to see what could be done toward the erection of a building in the near future. As stated last week, the farm cost $100.00 per acre, and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Welch gave $1,000 on purchase price. Two other men of High Point have already promised $500 each, and it is thought that High Point will at least pay for the location. If any one should think that the price on the farm is high he need only have his attention called to the fact that Mr. Welch paid $133.00 per acre for a portion of this farm some years ago. And the very day that the Committee accepted the location a 48-acre tract of land just about the same distance from High Point, on the Winston road, was sold in small lots and averaged about $200.00 per acre. The farm we have is more valuable for our purposes than that would have been. The Committee went out in automobiles last Thursday to see the location before accepting it, and all of them felt that it was an ideal place. The place is well elevated and already has a splendid well of water in the yard. Let every Methodist Protestant from the smallest child to the wealthiest man prepare to put something in the building soon to be erected. A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C., July 2nd, 1912.

The man who has begun to live more seriously within begins to live more simply without.—Phillips Brooks.

The true strength of every human soul is to be dependent on as many nobler as it can discover, and to be depended upon by as many inferior as it can reach. —Ruskin.

PLEASE NOTICE AND PLEASE RESPOND.

Will all the delegates to General Conference who have not already done so please send me a statement of their traveling expenses (not including Pullman fares and meals)? I was directed in a meeting of our delegation in Baltimore to make division of the fund in my hand in proportion to traveling expenses. I trust that those who do not wish to be neglected in the distribution will give me the desired information soon, as some of the brethren need the portion coming to them.

J. F. McCulloch, Treas.

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due.	Paid
Alamance	10.00	9.13
Albemarle	2.00
Anderson	3.00	3.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Burlington	8.00	8.00
Caroleen	3.00	1.00
Cleveland	11.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Davidson	6.00	4.25
Denton	2.00	2.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Forsyth	7.00	7.00
Gaston	2.00
Gilburg	1.00	1.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Greensboro	14.00	14.00
Greensville	5.00	5.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	8.00
Haw River	9.00	9.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
Ivy	3.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Liberty	10.00	10.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Littleton	10.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Mecklenburg	3.00
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Monroe	3.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Oak Ridge	10.00	10.00
Orange	3.00	3.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	7.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Richland	10.00
Roanoke	10.00
Rockingham	2.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Spring Church	5.00	5.00
Stanley	9.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Thomasville	3.00	3.00
Uwharrie	3.00
Vance	8.00	6.82
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Yarborough	5.00	5.00

Bro. Lamar fills two of the gaps by remitting for Anderson and Yarborough.

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

In Memory of P. A. Williams.

Ever since the death of my father, P. A. Williams, of Hemp, N. C., I have wanted to write a few lines to the M. P. Herald, concerning his life and death, but have felt unable to do so until now.

My father was a good, true, Christian gentleman. He always taught his children to love and honor God above all else. He believed in the plain Christian religion, as taught in the Bible. As long ago as I can remember, he was particular to have us children attend church, Sunday school, and always attended with us whenever his health would permit. He lived a Christian life in the home, too. I have seen him shout the praise of God, in our home, just from hearing a good hymn sung. His one great aim in life was to be ready for death. I have heard him say often, "If we miss heaven we have missed all."

He had suffered much for several years past, but for the past two years he had grown steadily worse, until in July last, he had to give up work altogether. Since that time he rapidly grew weaker until we saw that the only possible chance for his recovery would be to have an operation performed. He was perfectly willing to go to the hospital, and thought he would get well, but God willed it otherwise. He told my mother before he left home, that if he should die, there was nothing in the way.

Papa had a very affectionate nature. He loved us all so well, and we all loved him so much, we miss him, oh, so much, but we know he is beyond all sorrow and suffering, and we are all striving to meet him over there.

He loved the M. P. Church, and the "Record" was always a visitor in our home.

Six months have passed since that sad day
Our father passed from earth away
To join the loved ones over there
Beyond this life of toil and care.
Our home is sad, our hearts are sore;
As days go by, we miss him more;
Our love for him's the same today
As in the hour he passed away.

Fannie W. Phillips.

Timmonsville, S. C., July 1, 1912.

Martin.

On January 23, 1912, death came to Sister Lousinda Martin, at the ripe age of 89 years, 8 months and 18 days. She was the wife of Bro. William Martin and mother of Rev. W. P. Martin. Her husband and two of her children preceded her to the spirit world. She leaves 7 children, 40 grand children, and about 100 great grand children. She was truly a help meet to her husband, a loving mother and a good neighbor. She became a servant of the most high God some 40 or 50 years ago. She loved the preachers, and often spoke of Rev. G. E. Hunt, for whom she made a suit of clothes. During my pastoral service here, for 13 years, she has shown a spirit of love and kindness to the writer while serving as pastor. She has not often been to church on account of being too feeble, but showed much kindness in her home. I visited her in her afflictions and she often told me she was ready for the summons of death. She showed much patience in the care of her crippled boy, Eddy, who was crippled from his infancy to the age of 30 or more years. Her request was that his funeral was not to be preached until she was dead, that hers and his should be preached at the same time, which is to be the first Sunday in August by the writer, H. D. Garmon.

Berry-Rosser.

On Wednesday, June 26, 1912, at ten o'clock, we witnessed a beautiful home wedding, when Miss Daisy Estelle, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. W. Rosser, became the bride of Mr. Walter Charles Berry, of Bakersville, N. C. The parlor was very beautifully decorated with evergreen fern and Jessamine, making a most picturesque and beautiful scene, the color scheme being green and white. After Rev. W. O. Rosser, of Spring Hope, and Rev. G. W. May, of Castalia, had taken their stand, then to the sweet strains of Lohengrin's "Faithful and True," rendered by Mrs. W. O. Rosser, entered little Misses Mildred Bobbitt and Helen Andrey Thornton, Mildred bearing the ring on a silver tray, planted in a mound of moss. Then came the bride, attired in a handsome tailored suit of tan, hat, gloves, and shoes to match, leaning on the arm of her maid of honor, Miss Mary W. Rosser, sister of the bride. Then entered the groom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. Perkins

Taylor. The words that made them one were sweetly and impressively spoken by Rev. W. O. Rosser, brother of the bride, Rev. G. W. May concluding the ceremony with a very touching and beautiful prayer. As an evidence of the popularity of the bride and groom, they were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents.

After receiving the congratulations of a host of loving friends, they were driven to Littleton, where amid showers of rice they boarded 32 for a bridal tour through the northern cities. Their many friends throughout the State wish for them a long and happy married life. On the evening of the 25th an elegant reception was given by the bride's parents. Visitors entertained in the home were Mrs. Mary E. Thornton and Mr. Perkins Taylor of Aurelian Springs, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Rosser, of Spring Hope, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Thornton and little girls, of Littleton, N. C., Misses Carrie Sledge, May Avent, and Alma Alford, and Mr. Wade Avent, all of Wash., Mr. Turner and John Turner of Littleton, N. C.

HARDNESS OF A DIAMOND

(New York Press.)

It is difficult for one not intimately acquainted with the brilliant and sparkling gems to realize just how hard a diamond may be.

A carpenter runs his plane over a piece of wood and out comes the pretty curly shavings. Now, if a plane is made with a diamond blade instead of a steel blade and the blade is set just right the plane when run over glass will turn out fine, thinnest shavings, something like those made by a plane on wood.

This gives some idea of the wonderful hardness of a diamond, yet there is something harder than a diamond. It is another diamond, or even the same diamond, for a diamond may be extra hard in one part and not so hard as it ought to be in another part.

The Kohinoor diamond was in places so hard the cutters feared they might have to give up the work on it. Other parts of the stone were soft, if you could say any diamond is soft.

If a diamond is placed between the ends of two heaviest steel railroad rails and then by hydraulic pressure the rails are forced closer together and then still closer until they touch, the diamond will sink right into the steel almost like a key forced into bees-wax.

—Dr. W. M. Jones, of High Point, has been chosen for superintendent of health in Guilford County.

THE CORNFIELD.

See it in the early morning,
Like a patient army stand;
With its green spears all uplifted,
To salute the day at hand.

Dew-wet cobwebs brightly glisten,
Silk-capped ears a harvest show;
And gladsome, fairy whisper
Ripples down each shining row.

See it in its noonday splendor,
Drinking life from air and sun;
Taking strength from earth and heaven;
Mystery to look upon!

See it in the cool of even,
When the shadows deeper grow;
Creeping over field and meadow,
Softly folding row on row.

Dim and vague now looks the army,
But when comes the morning light,
Green spears will again be lifted,
Strengthened by the blessed night.

—Edwin Carlile Litsey in Farm Journal.

THE SOUTH AND THE CORN CROP.

In the year 1900, according to the U. S. Census figures, the nine Southeastern States in the Southern Railway territory produced a total of 338,150,000 bushels of corn. In 1910, the same States produced 552,000,000 bushels.

What is even more significant, however, is that in 1910, corn sold for an average price of 68 cents per bushel in these nine Southern States, while the price commanded by the cereal in the other corn-producing sections of the country averaged only 48 cents per bushel.

In 1910, Jerry Moore, a South Carolina Corn Club boy, broke the world's record by growing on one acre the tremendous yield of 228 bushels of corn. In the fall of 1911, at New York, The International Harvester $1,000 Cup was awarded to a Virginia farmer for the best thirty ears of corn grown in America.

It is, indeed, very evident that the Corn Belt is shifting, and that its trend is to the South.—Southern Field.

THE CRUEL CHECK-REIN.

It is strange that the overhead check-rein on horses has not run its course and been given up long before now. A horse will travel easier, last longer and look better when given his head. If checked at all it should be with only a moderate side check.

The present fashion is to clip the foretop close to the skull so the animal's eyes and brain have no protection from light and heat, and then pull up his face to the sun with an overdraw. This is rank abuse of a helpless dumb animal, and is entirely uncalled for save by ignorant custom and fashionable stupidity. Some horsebreakers draw a colt's head so high that the torturing check gets all of its attention, and its education, when handled thus, is about as complete as that of the young man who went through college by entering at the front door and being kicked out at the rear.—Farm Journal.

BIRTHDAY.

By request I will tell you of a happy day, June 27th, spent in the pleasant and hospitable home of our dear uncle A. R. Hunter (familiarly known as "uncle Quill.") The children, six in number, and sixteen grand-children, one sister, and other relatives and friends to the number of about one hundred gathered together to have a pleasant day and to show uncle Quill the sincere love and respect we all have for him and his faithful wife "Aunt Becky." Dinner was spread on a long table out in the shady yard, The nineteen fine large cakes, thirty-two luscious pies and custards, and nineteen tempting dishes of fried and roast chicken, also roast beef, besides a variety of pickles, and other delicacies, were good to look upon and to taste. Coffee was served to those who desired it. And there was also a supply of cool sparkling well water. When all was in readiness our beloved pastor Bro. T. A. Williams returned thanks. After which it became the duty of each one present to step up and serve themselves. After dinner splendid music was rendered by the "old original string band," while the company enjoyed themselves out under the spreading oak trees, on the porches in the house or wherever they chose. To show the tender love, the high appreciation of a watchful, prayerful Christian father who has been spared to them these seventy three years, the children presented him with a nice serviceable present.

We all join in wishing Uncle Quill many, many more happy birthdays.

His niece,
Florence L Petree.

—A man has 500 muscles, 1,000,000,000 cells, 200 different bones, 4 gallons of blood, several hundred feet of arteries and veins, over 25 feet of intestines and millions of pores. His heart weighs from 2 to 12 ounces, its capacity is from 4 to 6 ounces to each ventricle, and its size is 5 by 3⅛ by 2½ inches. It is a hollow, muscular organ and pumps 22½ pounds of blood every minute. In 24 hours it pumps 16 tons. It beats about 72 times a minute. In one year an average man's heart pumps 11,680,000 pounds of blood.

JESUS CHRIST AND OTHER WORLDS.

The theory of a multiplicity of inhabited worlds in the solar system is no longer generally held. In the latter part of the nineteenth century speculation on this point was rife, and the notion had much currency through the support of astronomers like Professor Proctor, as well as through the romantic claims of such theorists as Schiaparelli and Flammarion; but with the establishment of a set of conclusions reached by a school of physicists, of which Lord Kelvin is a member, belief in the existence of other planetary races has given place to a settled skepticism.

The conclusions which have seemed to overturn this once popular belief, briefly summed up, come to about this—namely, that the stars, one hundred million and more, answering to the naked eye and the most powerful telescopes, are, without exception, referable to an origin in the Milky Way, which Sir William Herschel described as a broad belt or ring marking, in a general way, the periphery of the stellar universe. Stellar chemistry, a science made possible through spectral analysis, proves as completely as chemistry can prove anything, that all the stars and their satellites are composed of kindred substances, though of varying densities; that planetary and stellar atmospheres are but modifications of ether —modifications determined by distances from other centers, by densities, and by surface conditions—that the ether of stellar space is everywhere the same, and that the sidereal universe, although extended through appalling depths, is yet limited, ponderable, and scientifically knowable.

The improbability of any of the solar planets, except the earth, being inhabited is clearly expressed in the ascertained fact that the major planets, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune, are of a density but litle removed from the nebulous, and are rolled in perpetual winter of so low a temperature that what atmosphere they have is of the consistency of liquid air. Upon the surface of Jupiter, for instance, there exists not one condition which science recognizes as necessary to life. Of the minor planets, only two, Mars and Venus, could be thought of as theaters of life; and of these, the latter's axis is so inclined and its movements about the sun so regulated that but one-half of its surface ever sees the sun, and that half is scorched by torrid and life-excluding summer. Notwithstanding the romance of the "canals" of Mars, that planet is without moisture, and hence must be without life; while "the polar ice caps," once supposed to feed its equatorial seas, are now believed to be frozen gases which rise and fall under changing suns.

How surprising and yet how significant is all this! Surprising in that it contradicts sense, significant in the cosmic value given by it to our sphere. It is significant, too, in its bearing upon the spirit of revelation and the claims of the kingdom of Jesus the Nazarene.

Long ago it was the habit of skepticism, as, more latterly, it has been the disposition of criticism, to detract from the work and claims of Jesus Christ by disparaging comparisons of the earth with a limitless material universe and hinting at the existence of other peopled worlds beside whose bulks our own is but a sand grain, and contrasted with whose inhabitants the men of earth are but grasshoppers and all their affairs as a watch in the night. Of the existence of these wished-for contradictions, not a scintilla of scientific evidence has been discovered, and the telescope and the spectroscope are but another Old and New Testament confirming the preeminence of Jesus and the universal sway of his kingdom which was first made manifest in earth.

Both Sir William Herschel and the modern physicists agree that the solar system is set in the center of the plane of the Milky Way, or Galactic Circle, and that the ecliptic is so inclined that it cuts the median of the great nebular belt, giving a chosen position in the universe for that world which was destined from the beginning to be the theater of heavenly wonders and divine appearings. "But why such waste of matter, such lavish expenditure of unutilized forces? Why such improvidence of providence?" ask those who still doubt. In answer it might be urged that one fact is worth more than a thousand guesses, and that if the testimony of science is to be trusted in one catagory it must be another. Besides, who is to judge if the apparent order of creation be improvidence? The stellar universe is a pavement for Jehovah's feet and a nursery floor for his earth-born children. It is only like him to make it spacious and illuminate it with plenteousness of light. And more, the stars and their systems only describe intenser points in the general distribution of matter, a distribution as mathematically determined as is the placing of the arches, the colonnades, and the pediments of a temple. They express poise and completeness in God's building. A king's palace is not dwarfed to the bare needs of the king's family and his courtiers. It is reared rather to be a sign of glory and power; it is the kingdom in miniature. So the stellar universe manifests divinity and omnipotence. Its uses are a concern of the Architect, inscrutable to men, and yet in its phenomena subject to the inquiry and conquest of the human intellect.

The life output of the earth is to be so stupendous as at last to satisfy all human and even angelic demands for vastness and multitudes. A recent estimate of the number of people who have been born into the earth fixes the total at a thousand billions. But this is a fanciful reckoning, since there are no ascertained data upon which to base a world-long series of calculations. Since the beginning of history, now known to extend back to the founding of the first Babylonian empire, 4000 to 5000 B.C., there have been born into the world probably not fewer than two hundred billions of people, which is, strictly speaking, "a multitude no man can number." The imagination cannot support it, nor could it support the half of it. If the period of "the consummation of all things" is to occur at the prophetic date fixed by the old commentators—namely, in the year A.D. 3200—the total souls for all ages may then have been carried to a thousand billions. And this might well supply the contents of the apocalyptic host, "ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands." And since the angelic ranks—"an innumerable company" to whom the spirits of just men are to be joined—are the original subjects of the Messianic government, the number of its citizenry passes into infinity. Compared with the spaces which these tread, the stellar universe can be but a verge or a bourne.

And now our reasoning comes to this—namely, that revelation exalts the earth to a preeminence amongst all worlds and makes it the center of the moral universe; and science adds its word that, in so far as material tokens of this preference are expressed in stellar phenomena, nothing is wanting. That in the mind of St. Paul the earthly mission of Jesus Christ had a cosmic meaning nobody who reads his epistles can doubt. This vision gave him his viewpoint of the incarnation and shaped his doctrine of the church. That is the Christ doctrine which must triumph. The old strongholds of materialism and the possibilities of a recurring pantheism in philosophy have gone down in the face of this newer view of the universe. Within and about the Galactic Circle rolls a vast concourse of stars and nebulae, suns and worlds, formed and forming, of old, called into being by the Logos that therein in the time of his pleasure he might manifest himself. This is that mantle of divinity which shall be folded as a vesture and put aside; but the Life to which it once answered shall abide, "the fullness of him that filleth all in all."—Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D. D., in Nashville Christian Advocate.

A LITTLE BOY'S RESOLVE.

I will not say an unkind word
To any one today;
I will not do an unkind act,
Not even in my play.
I will be neat in my attire,
And punctual at school;
Respect my teacher, and will be
Obedient to her rule.
Polite and friendly I will be
To every one I meet,
Whether at home or in my school,
Or walking on the street.
If I can keep these rules in mind,
And practice them, I'll be,
My mother says, a litle boy
All will be pleased to see.

EDWARD PORTER'S TRAVELS.

It was Friday morning in spring. Edward Porter was lying on a couch in front of a window. He had been reading the morning paper. He laid it down and looked out of the window.

On the lawn in front of the house next door four boys were playing ball. Edward knew those boys and wished he was out there playing ball too. From the second house another boy came out and started down the street. He was carrying a new kite. Edward was acquainted with that boy also. Edward was sure he was taking the kite to show it to another neighbor, and that after school they would go to the park together. There was just enough breeze to fly a kite well. Edward wished he could go to the park with them and fly his kite too.

"What's a boy good for, anyway, when his leg is broken?" he asked impatiently.

Uncle Stephen, who had just come in from the breakfast table, laughed. "That depends on the boy," he said. "If his legs were the best part of him, it would be dreadful for him to lose the use of one of them even for a little while."

"Why, aren't they the best part of me?" Edward protested fretfully. "I can't go anywhere without them."

"But if they really were the best part of you, it wouldn't do you any good to go anywhere even if you did have them both. Legs can't see or hear or think or know."

"But the think part of me can't go anywhere without my legs. It isn't any good to take me around."

"Isn't it? It is the only part of you that can take you around, for without your 'think part' the rest of you wouldn't know where it was or what was going on."

"I want to go"—

"Hold on!" cried Uncle Stephen. "I won't stop to read the paper just now. I'll play a game with you instead. You let your 'think part' go wherever you'd like to go this minute, and I'll guess where you've gone.,,

"You can't," said Edward.

"O, I'll have to ask questions! We can play this game just as we play 'Twenty Questions.' We'll ask questions which can be answered by 'yes' or 'no' or 'I don't know,' and we won't guess until we think we know the right place. We can ask but twenty questions and can guess but three places. If we can't guess then, we have to give up and let the other fellow travel."

"All right," said Edward, "I've gone."

"Are you in sight from the window?"

"Yes."

"You've gone out to play ball with the boys. Now it is my turn; I've gone."

"I know where you've gone without asking a thing. You've gone up to Green Lake fishing. I heard you talking to papa about it last night."

"Right."

Then Edward went to the park to fly his kite. Uncle Stephen went to a concert. Edward went to his grandfather's to stay all summer. Uncle Stephen went to Lawrence to see if the strike was over. Edward went to work in a mill, and decided he would rather be at home playing games, even if he did have a broken leg. Uncle Stephen went into a hospital and saw a boy with one leg cut off, but he was playing beautifully on a violin. Edward found out all about it just by asking questions answered by "yes" and "no."

Then Edward went somewhere that puzzled Uncle Stephen so much that he could not guess where he had gone for a long time. He would have had to give it up, but Edward let him ask a second twenty questions, so he succeeded in finding him at last.

Edward went a very long way off, where neither he nor Uncle Stephen ever had been before. It was cold there, with a great deal of snow and ice. Uncle Stephen began to think it must be an ice carnival in Montreal, but Edward said "no" to questions leading that way. Edward had been gone a long time. He didn't know exactly how he had traveled, but he thought he went by ship at least a part of the way. He had seen many strange sights, among them a volcano.

No, Edward was not acquainted with any one who had been there; he had not read a description of the place in a book; no one had told him about it; he had not dreamed of it. Then Uncle Stephen noticed the morning paper lying on the foot of Edward's couch. Yes, Edward had read about the place in that. After a good many more questions, Uncle Stephen found out that no one ever had been there until last winter. Then he guessed that Edward had gone to discover the South Pole.

"[illegible]d is worth more than my legs, after all," Edward finally admitted after they had finished the game. "They never could have given me anywhere near so much fun as I've had this morning in my travels all over the world."—Fannie Wilder Brown, in the Continent.

HOW EDDIE PREACHED.

"When I get big enough I'm going to be a preacher," said Eddie one day. "What is a preacher?" asked grandma. Eddie looked surprised. "Don't you know what a preacher is? A preacher is a man that tells people what the Bible means, and he says thirdly, my brethren; and everybody listens to him. It's nice to have people listen to you."

Grandma smiled. "I think you are big enough to preach now," she said. "Really and truly, grandma?" asked the little boy, eagerly. "Yes, really and truly." "I am afraid not," said Eddie, after a few moments' thought, "or I'd know how and I don't." "What does a preacher do first?" asked grandma. "He takes a text and then explains it. I can't do that." "O, yes, you can, Eddie. Here is a good text for you to explain. 'Be ye kind one to another.'" "There is nothing to explain about that," said Eddie. "You just be kind to everybody and that is all there is to it."

"A good text, though, for my little preacher's first sermon. I should like to have him preach from it for a whole week." "Preach a week! why, grandma! I can't," explained Eddie. "Can't be kind to everybody for one week?" Eddie looked thoughtful. "Would that be preaching?" he asked. "It would, and the very best kind. A good preacher has to preach in that way, or people will not listen to what he has to say in the pulpit."

"Well," said Eddie, with a sigh, "I suppose I can try, but I was not thinking of that kind of preaching."

"You will be showing everybody what that verse in the Bible means," said grandma.

"It's not kind to the teacher to whisper in school," said Eddie, the very next day, so he did not whisper once. "It's not kind to Bridget to play along the road and keep my dinner waiting, either," so he hurried home from school. "It's not kind to mama when I don't run errands promptly." So he did quickly and well whatever he was asked to do. Every day and all day he thougqht about what was kind and tried to do it. The end of the week came.

"How do you like preaching?" asked grandma.

"So well I am going to keep on preaching from the same text, for everyone has been kind to me," said Eddie. —Selected.

MORE MESSAGES FROM TITANIC "SPIRITS."

For some reason the spirits of those who perished in the Titanic are unusually communicative. Numerous mediums have been getting spirit messages in this connection and much is being learned about conditions "on the other side." The only disappointing thing about it to the searcher after truth is that the accounts given by the different spirits do not dovetail very well. Evidently there are some Ananiases over there as well as here. W. T. Stead, the famous English journalist and psychic, who was among the victims, told through several mediums not long ago what a painful ordeal he went through in passing out of this life into the next. Speaking through Mme. d Meissnes, another medium, however, he says: "I never suffered at all; I simply went from my cabin to the beyond." In fact, he says now, he did not know that he was dead until the other spirits told him he was. He came to himself "on a large lawn" and thought he was "at a party of visiting friends." There is no strumming of harps and flapping of angel wings, and not even any golden streets "over there," we are told by the Titanic victims. On the contrary everything is exactly as on this earth, only "much more perfect." Each spirit, instead of taking it easy as some may imagine, "has to work," but he may "follow his natural bent" in this. Also they have "musicales and lectures for mental uplift," but whether ragtime music or not is not stated. The "beings live in communities," but it is to be hoped that they do not gossip about one another as people in mundane communities do.

A while ago, you may recall, Mr. Stead's spirit told of seeing his body still in the ship, bumping its head against a hatch and with a good prospect of coming up and being recovered, but though upwards of a hundred bodies have been recovered, his is not among them. Now, however, instead of being disembodied, Mr. Stead's spirit seems to be back in his body again, for it says: "I cannot see the slightest difference in my own appearance." His spirit ejaculated, through Mms. Meissner: "I am so thankful that everything is over and I find myself alive!" It may be noted by skeptics that the expression "I am so thankful" is a purely feminine one, and one that a learned literary man like Stead would not be likely to use. Mme. Meissner says that she was in a department store—presumably hunting bargains—when she realized that the Titanic spirits were about her and anxious to communicate. She was talking with the Stead spirit when the spirit of Maj. Butt, another victim, butted in and began to talk, although she confesses that she never was introduced to the major in life. She told it that she could not converse with it at that time and it replied that it would "see her later." The spirit of Captain Smith also talked with her. It laid all the blame for the accident on the ship, which was "too big to send where there were icebergs," it said. The captain's spirit appears not to be very truthful, for it has been brought out plainly enough that the ship was all right but that the officers deliberately ran her into danger. Hence it may be assumed that some of these "spirits," at least those that are talking so freely are not the genuine ones but are of the order of "lying spirits," whom we are warned to look out for.—The Pathfinder.

—This is the Fourth of July and many of our fellow citizens have stopped to celebrate.

—Mr. James Irwin, of Bellevue, Pa., called recently in our absence. We are sorry to have missed seeing him.

—Winston had another fire last night. Buildings on Liberty street belonging to Holbrook and Moses were damaged. Loss said to be $10,000 or more.

—We are sorry to know that Rev. W. D. Reed is very ill. Let us hope and pray for his recovery. He is one of our best ministers.

—We were agreeably surprised one day last week at the appearance in our office of the smiling face of Bro. J. E. Pritchard. He perhaps had something to smile about of which we know not.

—The mother of Bro. J. E. Hanner, of Tabernacle, died last Friday, aged over ninety years. Bro. Cecil conducted the funeral on Saturday. One by one the former generation passes, and our generation follows on to the great beyond. Were it not for the thought of God and His goodness, what a gloomy prospect would be before us human travelers!

—The editor spent last Sunday with Burlington people. Mr. Hornady, youngest son of the late S. M. Hornady, kindly met him at the train with his buggy and conveyed him to the church. One of the first things noted was the frame of the new Sunday school rooms already up. This building will make a great addition to the Sunday school accomodations. The school has outgrown its present quarters and is limited in growth by its present quarters. The pastor, Bro. Davis, was visiting his relatives in Virginia and officiating in the marriage ceremony for some of them. We hear good reports of his work in Burlington. In our effort to preach on Sunday morning we had some of Paul's experience on one occasion—a young man was overcome with a spirit of somnolence: only he did not fall out of a window, but came up at the close of the service and confessed his fault. Rev. R. M. Andrews, the Sunday school superintendent and also leader of the church choir, was away attending a Sunday school convention. His help in the church work is greatly appreciated. We were very pleasantly entertained in the home of Bro. John R. Foster, of the Christian Church, and a most estimable gentleman. Mrs. Foster was formerly Miss Etta Stafford, daughter of our good friend and Methodist Protestant, Mr. William Stafford, for some years now deceased. Miss Ila Stafford also makes her home there, so that in this household we have a case of genuine church union. Mr. Foster is superintendent of the Sunday school in his church and in business is head of the well known and successful firm, the Foster Shoe Company. His daughters are students in Elon College. We noted some new buildings going up in the business quarters and the new street cars are evidently doing business. It does not require "sacred concerts" to make people who have been shut in all the week wish to ride out on Sunday. Burlington is to be the seat of our next Annual Conference, and the people there are already looking forward to the time.

—We sleep, but the loom of life never stops; and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down, is weaving when it comes up tomorrow.—Beecher.

Fly Paper.—Mix together a cupful of molasses with a cupful of glue (the kind used by carpenters). Boil the two together for a few minutes, and then spread the mixture on a thick piece of paper. Place it in the room on window sills, etc. The flies will come to it and stick.—Selected.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JULY 14.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"How Much Should a Christian Think of Personal Appearence." 2 Kings; 9:30-35; Ps. 45:15.

The subject gives opportunity for an interesting lesson; a varied and attractive program; and a chance for everybody to say something. It should be interesting to get the idea of everyone in the meeting concerning dress.

The true rule in dressing seems to be to dress so that your clothing will not attract attention—either on account of shabbiness or for its gaudiness. The man or woman who wears loud clothes is either one who cannot attract attention otherwise and desires it or simply lacking in sense.

A neat, cleanly appearance adds to our influence for good. The Christian should so dress that his apparel will not attract attention, but so act and be so kindly to others that he will draw people unto him and cause them to admire him.

Slovenliness should never be countenanced in anyone. It always creates an unfavorable impression. One's raiment may be costly and yet the wearer may look slovenly. If it be not costly there is no reason why it should not be clean and and dirty hands and nails are never altogether excusable.

This Week's Novelty.

The prayer-meeting committee will prepare a list of Sub-topics for the meeting, announcing the plan, if possible, a week in advance, and in any case obtaining from the leading members a statement of their willingness to co-operate in the plan. These sub-topics may be the following, to which the committee may add others: "False hair." "Cosmetics." "How to get a fine complexion." "Exercise as a beautifier." "Good humor as a beautifier." "Neatness." "Cleanliness." "Over-dressing." "The wearing of jewels." "Display." "How to cure vanity." "The duty of looking well." "The power of real beauty." "True beauty and false." Each of these topics will be written on a separate piece of paper and placed in a little envevlope which will be sealed. Put the envelopes in the contribution-box, and have them passed for each to take one. Limit the speeches strictly to one minute each, and appoint a timekeeper. The leader should see to it that there is no undue levity, and should ask the members to treat these practical questions that really affect character with the earnestness that they deserve.

A. R. W.

Illustrations of the Thought.

The great Lincoln was homely and ungainly. Homeliness is not a disgrace, but slovenliness is. We owe it to the perfect Man to appear always at our best.

The "raiment of needlework" and the "clothing of wrought gold" of the king's daughter were doubtless beautiful, but she was "all glorious within." Let every daughter of the King see to the inward beauty first; then she will be able to judge wisely how much time and money to spend on outward adornment.

There are strength, repose of mind, and inspiration in fresh apparel. God gives nature new garments every season. You are a part of nature. The tree trusts, and grows, and takes storm and sun as divinely sent, and believes in its right to new apparel, and it comes. It will come to you if you do the same.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

When I see a young lady with a flower-garden on her head and a draper's shop on her body, tossing her head about as if she thought everybody was charmed with her, I am sure she must be ignorant, very ignorant. Sensible men don't marry a bonnet-box or a wardrobe; they want a woman of sense, asd these dress sensibly.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

"My boy," said a wise father, "you do not own your own face." The boy looked puzzled. He had come to the breakfast-table with a frowning, clouded countenance, and had started moodily to eat his food. "You do not own your own face," his father repeated. "Do not forget that. It belongs to other people. They, not you, have to look at it. You have no right to compel them to look at a sour, gloomy and crabbed face."—The Christian Herald.

Sandow tells us that as a child he was a weakling. He says: "I went into Italy, and there my eyes were opened. The Greek and Roman statues I saw there inspired me at once to lift from myself the stigma of weakness, for somehow I felt that even in our day the weak man is despised. I went at the labor of revitalization with energy and persistence. Let me tell you I am still at it. I maintain that it is possible for any man to emulate my example as I emulated the example of Greeks and Romans.

In "The Vision of Sir Launfal" Lowell says, "For a cap and bells our lives we pay." A young lady employed as a clerk in a dry-goods store on a salary of $10 a week spent $25 for a fine embroidered dress. When summer time came she didn't take a much needed vacation because she couldn't afford it. Such finery, at such a price, is paying for our lives for caps and bells.

Personal appearance is a larger term than beauty or cleanliness. It means the whole outward appearance of the individual. No salesman that goes around looking depressed, or ill-natured, is likely to get people to buy his goods, while a pleasant, courteous salesman is successful nine times out of ten. In the same way, the Christian must be attractive if he or she is to win others to Christ. The severe, the melancholy, the rude, the irritable, the apathetic Christians are draw-backs to the church.

"Why do you wear a pretty bow in your hair, and take so much pains to have a becoming tie?" some one asked the teacher of a large class in the public school. "I wear my ribbons and put on my bows and make myself attractive because I have to influence for good fifty boys every day," was the reply. The teacher was right. Her boys believed in her much more than they would had she been a dowdy.

Daily Readings.

Mon., July 8—Vain ostentation 1 John 2:15-17.

Tues., July 9.—Old-time finery Isa. 3:16-26.

Wed., July 10.—Inner adornment 1 Peter, 3:-1-6.

Thurs., July 11.—Womanly modesty Gen. 24:61-67.

Fri., July 12.—Apostolic ideals 1 Tim. 2:8-10.

Sat., July 13.—Christ's advice Matt. 6:28-34.

Sun., July 14.— Topic—How much shoul a Christian think of personal appearance? 2 Kings 9:30-35; Ps. 45:7-15.

SOUTHERN APPLES IN ENGLAND

The secretary of the Virginia Horticultural Society has recently returned from a trip to England in connection with his duties. He states that the Southern apples are highly prized on both the London and Liverpool markets, leading in demand and in prices secured. Every dealer expressed himself as extremely well pleased with the quality of the Southern apple, and the only fault noted was that there was not nearly enough of them. Virginia apples average from $1.25 to $2.50 more per barrel than those from other sections. The Albemarle Pippin has long been the favorite apple of England, and the prices for a barrel of No. 1 Pippins will range from $8 to $10 on the English market. So far as is known there has never been a sufficient quantity of Albemarle Pippins shipped to England to fill the demand.—Southern Field.

Leave yesterday where it fell; trust tomorrow with God, and catch every ray of happiness as it passes today.—Anonymous.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C

Wilson Nominated.

On the 46th ballot the National Democratic Convention nominated Woodrow Wilson for president. He received 990 votes to84 for Champ Clark. The Missouri delegation remained faithful to Clark to the end, and then moved that Wilson's nomination be made unanimous. Gov. Marshall, of Indiana, was nominated for vice president.

Whitney, N. C.—The North Carolina Electric and Power Company, of New York, has accepted the proposition of French capitalists to purchase its uncompleted hydroelectric plant and rights on the Yadkin River. The purchasers propose to build a large plant for the manufacture of aluminum and will organize a company under the name of the Southern Aluminum Company with a capital stock of $8,000,000.—Electrical World.

NOTES.

—Please note Bro. Garmon's request for a copy of Minutes.

—Rev. C. L. Whitaker preached in Grace Church for Bro. Ogburn last Sunday evening.

—The following sentence is not very noble otherwise, but it contains every letter of the alphabet, with few repetitions: Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs. If you can find or make a shorter sentence containing all the letters, send it to us.

—Rev. J. B. O'Briant recently made a visit to Roanoke Rapids where he spent several years. While there he picked up a subscription to the Herald from a brother who is out of the circle of Methodist Protestantism by reason of his place of residence.

—Some of the things for which Socialists contend are good. The great mistake some good men make is to think they can secure good reforms by following bad men as leaders. Come out from among them and be ye separate.

—Bro. J. H. Sharp presented this office a box of plums of a variety wholly new to us—the apple plum. They are as large as a small apple, shaped like apples, being deeply indented at the stem end, and have something of an apple flavor. Our thanks to Bro. Sharp for this treat.

—Mrs. Rev. J. W. Heath died on Tuesday evening and was buried at Tabernacle on Wednesday. She was a sister of Bro. C. H. Hardin of Julian, Bro. J. L. Hardin, of Tabernacle, and of Mrs. Daniel Kirkman, of Tabernacle. She was well advanced in years, and had lived a quiet, frugal and industrious life all her days. She leaves besides those mentioned a large number of nephews and nieces, one son, Bro. Harris Heath, and her aged husband, now very feeble.

POPULAR EXCURSION TO RICHMOND, VA., VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1912.

The Southern Railway will operate its annual excursion to Richmond, Va., Tuesday, July 16th, 1912, at very low round trip rates. Tickets will be good to return on any regular train leaving Richmond up to and including those leaving Thursday, July 18th, giving two days and one night in Richmond. Special train consisting of first class coaches and pullman cars will leave Charlotte at 8:00 P. M., Tuesday, July 16th, and arrive at Richmond 5:00 following morning. Very low round trip rates from all branch points, tickets from these points good on all regular trains, connecting with special train. Rare opportunity to visit historic Richmond and the many near-by points of interest at small cost. Following round trip rates will apply from stations named:

Charlotte	$4.50
Concord	4.50
Chester	5.00
Blacksburg	5.00
Salisbury	4.50
Statesville	5.00
High Point	4.25
Greensboro	3.85
Asheboro	4.75
Albemarle	5.25
Rock Hill	5.00
Rutherfordton	5.00
Shelby	5.00

Rates from all other points in same proportion. For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., call on any agent, Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DEBUTTS,
Division Passenger Agent.
Charlotte, N. C.

—A New York hospital was found to be burning and four hundred sick women had to be carried out. All were rescued.

—According to the Kohala Midget automobiles are great breeders of profanity—out in Hawaii.

—The Socialists, like other political schemers, have their discords and their battles. It is now proposed to amend their Constitution. Of the proposed amendment The Christian Socialist says:

If the proposed amendment to the Party constitution, taking all initiative of referendums from the Party Locals and requiring from three to five state organizations to bring any referendum to vote, is allowed to slip through, the Socialist Party will become the most undemocratic and machine ruled party in America.

Defeat it. And pass the word along, for the machine papers will all keep silent and the vicious amendment may carey by default. Help wake your comrades up on this matter.

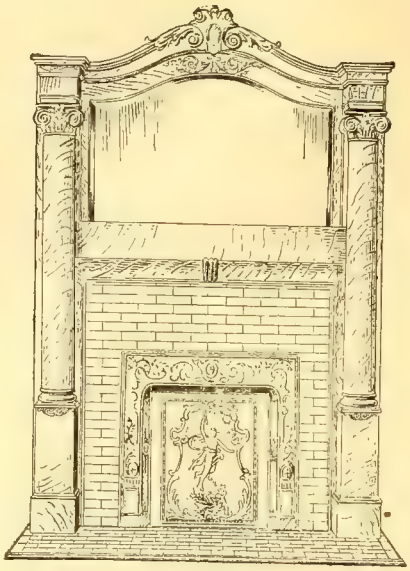
—J. W. Hauser, of Forsyth Co. was bit on the hand by a cow. It was feared that the cow had been bit by a mad dog, and Mr. Hauser, accompanied by Bro. J. A. Whitman, went to Raleigh last Friday for Pasteur treatment.

—Mail clerks and carriers meet here to day. Their convention will be opened with prayer by Rev. T. J. Ogburn.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles, and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE: Co-educational.

Situated in the delightful hill country of North Carolina. With all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of city life.

Diploma from Elon admits without examination to the Graduate Departments in leading universities. In addition to the REGULAR COLLEGE COURSES, the following Departments are maintained:

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT—Prepares young men and young women for the Freshman class at Elon, or elsewhere.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT—Piano, Voice, Pipe Organ, Violin, Brass Instruments.

EXPRESSION DEPARTMENT—Elocution and Physical Culture.

ART DEPARTMENT—Oil Painting, Water Colors, Pastel, Crayon, China Painting, Public School Drawing, Mechanical Drawing, Etc.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT—An ideal Business Course, combining education, culture, and special training.

NORMAL DEPARTMENT—A three years briefer course leading to the L. I. degree. Also special term each year, April and May.

Good equipment and modern conveniences. Buildings heated by steam, lighted by electricity, furnished with water and baths. Expenses moderate, from $132 to $187 per session of ten months. Write for catalogue showing terms and work in detail.

President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

Don't feed the baby through that long rubber tube; you can't wash it on the inside, and dirt kills babies.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1912. NUMBER 34.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

The last State Convention of the Society of Christian Endeavor of North Carolina held in Wilmington, N. C., in June, elected Dr. R. E. Steele of Lumberton, N. C., President of the Convention for the coming year. The undersigned was appointed a member of the Business Board of the Convention.

It is the desire of the officials of the State Association to come into living touch with each society in the state. We wish especially to come into touch with all the societies in the Methodist Protestant Church.

That the President and the Business Board may be of the greatest help possible to these societies, will the pastors of the churches in which there are Christian Endeavor Societies be so kind as to send in the names of these societies together with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries to Dr. Steele. A response to this request will be appreciated, and I am sure that the societies will gain new life by keeping in touch with the officers of the state. Thanking those pastors who have these societies in their churches and send in the information asked for, I am,

Yours in His name,
Thomas C. Amick.

—"Would you be strong in God? Then fight the good fight of faith, for unbelief is the acme of defeat."

Quick Canvass for the Orphanage.

SHALL WE NOT ALL DO OUR BEST?

We publish elsewhere statements from the Finance Committee of our Orphanage. It will be seen that they have decided on a short but vigorous campaign for money to build. All our people are asked to join in and push on to success in ten days.

The site selected near High Point is said to be an excellent one and a good brick building is to be built upon it. The Building Committee is composed of the following men of experience and judgment: Dr. J. R. Reitzel, Capt. A. M. Rankin, J. J. Welch, V. W. Idol, R. R. Ross. This committee recently visited Winston to inspect the orphanage there, and are going ahead planning for the building. But they must have money to build, and the Finance Committee are coming to our people with an appeal for that.

Such an appeal—an appeal for fatherless and motherless children—cannot fail of response. If there are any that can not give money they will give their best wishes and their prayers. But the Committee has devised a plan that will accommodate those who wish they could give more than they can at once contribute. The pledges can be paid one-fourth on demand and the other three-fourths in four, eight and twelve months.

The Committee have appointed canvassers for many of our churches, and would be glad to receive advice from pastors regarding appointments for the others. See the list in another column.

If no canvasser reaches you within the ten days you will still want to have a part, and you can send your name and pledge to Bro. T. A. Hunter, Chairman, or Bro. J. M. Millikan, Secretary, Greensboro, N. C.

Prompt action is called for in order that the buildings may be completed befores cold weather comes. It would be well, if it were possible, that it should be far enough advanced for use by the time the public school opens.

One of the fortunate features of the new location is that there is a graded school on the adjacent property, with three teachers already engaged.

We hope next week to publish the result of the first day's canvass, week after next to publish the result of the first eight day's canvass, and the week following to be authorized to announce that the entire sum asked for has been pledged.

Methodist Protestants can do things as well as other folks. Let us do this, not for our glory, but for those we should love and care for, and for Him who loves and cares for us all.

A WORD FROM DR. HARRIS.

Henderson, N. C., July 17, 1912.

To the Editor of Methodist Protestant Herald:—

Last Saturday I visited the new site for our Orphanage. Am delighted with it. From a sanitary point of view it is ideal. High and rolling in every direction. I consider the price paid well below its market value. It would indeed be difficult to find a more suitable site for our Orphanage. With a united effort, I see success ahead.

F. R. Harris, M. D.

—Prof. Amick's request for information regarding Christian Endeavor Societies awakens the question whether there are as many as there ought to be, and the further question, Whose fault is it if there is a shortage? New methods are found good in farming and in manufacturing and almost everywhere. Can it be true that the old methods are best in church work? Can it be true that neglect is the proper treatment of the young people? Away with the thought! Those who hold the place of pastors are under obligation to care for the religious interests of the young people of their charges. It is a great obligation. It cannot be put aside. It must be met. The very difficulty of it may cause some to try to ignore it. But in no cowardly way must it be met, but manfully. The Christian Endeavor movement aims to help pastors in this great problem. We feel that it is the part of wisdom to accept the help it offers and make the most of it.

HISTORY OF THE ORPHANS' HOME.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, the Orphans' Home of the Methodist Protestant Church was established on Aug. 22, 1910. So far it is the only one in the entire denomination—a denomination that has grown to the age of eighty-four years. Consequently great interest has been manifesed in it. From the beginning many have felt as Paul did when he declared "I was not disobedient to the Heavenly vision." The vision of the condition of humanity is always a call for help.

Child saving has become one of the most vital forms of human service. It interests the people, and enlists their sympathy. Our Lord set us a high example of the proper treatment of children. He astonished the disciples with the attention, and the time he devoted to the little ones who crowded about him, though pressed on every side by the cares and needs of grown people. It has taken the world a long time to understand the full meaning of Christ's solicitude for the little ones, but it is dawning on the minds of men and women as never before, how great a thing is a little child. And as the light spreads, the child will have a better chance and greater opportunities to grow in all the graces of manhood and womanhood.

The location of the Home temporarily, of course was one of the first things to be considered. Inasmuch as there was a Methodist Protestant High School located at Denton in Davidson Co., Rev. G. L. Reynolds, then in charge of the school was asked for a proposition towards helping in the care of orphan children. In response to this request, the old school building which had been converted into a nine roomhouse, was given free of rent, and free tuition for as many children as were gathered. This liberal offer aided greatly the early beginning of the Orphan's Home. The services of Miss Mabel Williams as matron were secured. She held at the time a good position but gave it up for the cause one month before the Home was opened. She with Miss Etta Auman who was later made assistant matron, and different members of the Executive committee of the Woman's Home Missionary Society went to various churches and Home Mission Societies urging co-operation in the undertaking. The plan for furnishing was left with various societies different ones furnishing rooms.

On August 22nd the Home was formally opened. During the first week three children came from Asheville. Since that time the family number has reached 18. Many have been turned away on account of lack of room. The ages of children range from 5 to 15 years. In Sept., 1911, Miss Williams was married. In losin her, those in closest touch with the work felt a great loss, as she not only sacrificed her time but used all of her brains and energy in planning for the work. Miss Etta Auman was then elected matron. She is now assisted by Mrs. W. J. Page who is equally interested in the children.

The Home is now supported by dues from the Missionary societies, personal pledges and contributions of money collected in churches at Thanksgiving and Orphan's Home day services, and Sunday schools that have adopted the plan of giving one collection a month. The children are taught industry, as far as has been in the power of those in control. The boys working the garden and truck patches, chooping wood, bringing water etc., while the girls have actual lessons in cooking, washing, ironing, and sewing, A constant effort is make to surround the children with an atmosphere, of culture, refinement and religion. Several of the children have professed religion since they have enlisted in the family.

The way the necessities of life come just before the critical hour, is nothing short of marvellous; it reminds one of the widow's meal chest. It has often been said that things go further at the Home than any where else—even a half crate of cabbage there makes more kraut. While faith has played an important part in running the Home, works have also been employed. There have been numerous Executive meetings of the officers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society for planning and carrying on the work. Three or four of the children are supported by individuals and societies. The estimated cost of supporting a child is $60.

About a year ago the question of a permanent location arose. The members of the Executive Committee of the W. H. M. Society, realiizing it was a question of grave importance, appointed a locating committee. The members of the committee were Messrs. O. R. Cox, Asheboro, J. M. Millikan, Greensboro and Capt. A. M. Rankin, High Point. Mr. Cox was called to his reward in October and Mr. R. R. Ross, Asheboro, appointed in his place. An offer of some land in Denton was made but the committee decided there was hardly enough and it would be better to have the Home in a more accessible place. They have recently secured a most desirable location about two miles from High Point on the macadam road leading from High Point to Greensboro. The property is known as the "Welch Farm"—it is in a high state of cultivation and a fine building site. Let all who believe in Him who has said "Suffer little children to come unto me" aid in every way possible in erecting and maintaining an institution which the entire church will look upon with pride and gratitude. The members of the Executive Committee of the W. H M. Society have met often to devise ways and means by which the work might go forward. They have asked the Annual Conference to appoint an advisory committee with whom they might advise. Committees have each year attended the annual conferences to acquaint the ministers and laymen with the work, its progress and needs. In every way efforts have been made to let the entire church feel that the Orphans' Home is not only an institution of the Woman's Home Missionary Society but of the Methodist Protestant Conference as well.

The crying need of the hour is, for all of us, that our people may be awakened to the conditions and realize our responsibility. Our service for God begins where we begin to recognize the need of others and when we use ourselves for the salvation of others. Therefore let us be strong, of good courage, striving to save our country by saving her sons and her daughters.

A LIVING SACRIFICE.

There is a simple story told that contains its truth in its very naturalness and simplicity. It reveals a bit of the real life ever going on all around us unnoticed. A minister in a certain small town in an eastern state reeceived from the home mission board of his church a letter asking for a special offering for a needy field in the West. With the letter was literature setting forth the need. The call appealed to him and with good heart he prepared a special sermon, calling the attention of his people to the great need.

Sabbath morning came and he preached the sermon. But somehow it did not just seem to hook in. That banker down there on the left looked listless, and yawned a couple of times behind his hand. And the merchant over on the right, who could give freely, examined his watch secretly more than once. And so it was with a little tinge of discouragement insistently creeping into his spirit that he finished, and sat down. And he remained with head bowed in prayer that the results might prove better than seemed likely, while the church officers passed down the aisles with the collection plates.

Meanwhile something unseen by human eye was going on in the very last pew. Back there, sitting alone, was a little girl of a poor family. She had met with a misfortune which left her crippled. And her whole life seemed so dark and hopeless. But some kind friends in the church, pitying her condition, had made up a small fund and bought her a pair of crutches. And these had seemed to transform her completely. She went about her rounds always as cheery and bright as a bit of sunshine.

She had listened to the sermon, and her heart had been strangely warmed by the preacher's story of need. And as he was finishing she was thinking, "How I wish I might give something. But I haven't anything to give, not even a copper left." And a very soft voice within seemed to say very softly, but very distinctly, "There are your crutches." "Oh," she gasped to herself as though it took away her very breath, "my crutches?" I couldn't give my crutches; they're my life." And that strangely clear voice went on, so quietly, "Yes—you could—and then some one would know of Jesus—if you did—and that would mean so much to them—He's meant so much to you—give your crutches." And her breath seemed to fail her as she thought. And so the little woman had her fight all unseen and unknown by those in the church. And by and by the victory came. And she sat with a beautiful light in her tearful eyes, and a smile coming to her lips, waiting for the plate to get to her pew.

And the man with the plate came down the aisle to the end. It seemed hardly worth while reaching it into the last pew. Just little Maggie sitting there alone, with her one foot dangling above the floor. But with fine courtesy he stopped and passed the plate in. And Maggie in her childlike simplicity lifted her crutches, and tried rather awkwardly to put them on the collection plate. Quick as a flash the man caught her thought, and with a queer lump in his throat reached out and steadied her strange gift on the plate.

And then he turned back and walked slowly up the aisle toward the pulpit, carrying the plate in one hand and steadying the crutches on it with the other. And people commenced to look. And eyes quickly dimmed. Everybody knew the crutches. Maggie—giving her crutches! And the banker over here blew his nose suddenly and reached for his pencil, and the merchant reached out to stop the man returning up his aisle.

As the pastor stood with his eyesight not very clear to receive the morning's offering, he said, "Surely our little crippled friend is giving us a wonderful example." Then the plates were called back toward the pews. And somebody paid fifty dollars for the crutches, and sent them back to that end pew. When the offering was counted up it contained several hundred dollars. And the little girl, crippled in body but not in any other way, hobbled out of church the happiest little woman in the world.

She had recognized and obeyed the inner voice. That was the simple explanation of her giving. And her gift, small in itself, touched with sacrifice, became worth several hundred dollars in its earning power. And the original investment was returned for its usual service. And her gift has been increasing in its earning power as its recital has reached other hearts, and the end is not yet. I do not know just where Maggie is now. But I do know that she will be a greatly surprised woman some day when she finds out what God has done with her sacrifice-hallowed gift. She recognized and obeyed the inner Voice. That is the one law of giving, as of all living.—S. D. Gordoon, in "Quiet Talks on Service," Fleming H. Revell Co.

ROANOKE ISLAND.

The First English Settlement Within the United States. .. ..

No spot in all this country is so full of the romance of history as Roanoke Island, on the east coast of North Carolina, where the first English settlement within what is now the United States was made under the auspices of knightly Sir Walter Raleigh, and around which cluster some of the saddest memories of the "Lost Colony of Roanoke."

The centre of attraction is Fort Raleigh. Along roads of white sand beneath pines with which the bright green of the holly is mingled, the way lies to the fort. To the right, after going a little distance, rise in long lines the sand dunes, vast mounds, the creation and sport of the winds. Looking from the top of these, one sees to the eastward the sea, green and heaving, and the curl of its breakers, and borne by the soft wind comes the thunder of the surf,almost like an echo. At one's feet lies the sound, yellow as gold, three miles in width, and so shallow that nearly the entire distance can be waded. Looking westward, the island seems at one's feet.

Descending from the height, the ride is resumed. Past houses, some modern, others gray with age, the road winds. Presently there appears a guiding hand, bearing the words "Fort Raleigh" It points eastward, and there, 100 yards away, is the fort.

Surrounded by a fence of pine rails, with a rustic gateway of little, upright poles, is the ruin. In its centre stands a severely simple marble monument, and low posts of granite, a foot high, mark the venerable earthwork. The outlines are perfectly plain. The greatest height of the parapet above the ditch is some two feet. Almost an acre is enclosed by the fence, and the fort covers little more than a fourth of this area. The colonists' log huts surrounded the fort, which was their refuge. Within the limits of the enclosure are live-oak, pine, holly, dogwood, sassafras, water-oak, and cherry trees. Up one live-oak clambers a grape vine, and at its foot is an English ivy. The monument, or memorial stone, faces westward and bears this inscription:

"On this site in July-August, 1585, colonist sent out by Sir Walter Raleigh built a fort called by them 'The new fort of Virginia.' These colonist were the first settlers of the English race in America. They returned to England in July, 1586, with Sir Francis Drake.

"Near this place was born on the 18th day of August, 1587, Virginia, the first child of English parents born in America, daughter of Ananias Dare and Eleanor White, his wife, members of another band of colonists sent out by Sir Walter Raleigh, in 1587. On Sunday, August 20, 1587, Virginia Dare was baptized. Manteo, the friendly chief of the Hatteras Indians, had been baptized on the Sunday previous. These baptisms were the first known celebrations of the sacrament in the territories of the thirteen original States."

The land has never been in cultivation, and to this fact is due the marvellous preservation of the ancient earthwork. In America 316 years seems a very great lapse of time, yet so old is this little earthwork, which, thanks to the care of the "Roanoke Colony Memorial Association," is at last marked. It is evident that the fort was made of two rows of upright palisades, or logs, between which there was earth. The palisades soon decayed, but the earth retains its outline perfectly.

It is well to turn back the hand of time's dial plate and see the first impressions of this island. Amadas and Barlowe were the pioneers, and Barlowe tells the story in his quaint old English:

"Ye 27th day of Aprile, in ye yere of our Redemption, 1584, departed ye west of England with two barks well furnished with men and victuals. Ye 10th of June we were fallen with ye islands of ye West Indes. On ye 12th day of July we found shole water, where we smelt so sweet and strong a smel as if we had been in ye midst of some delicate garden abounding with odoriferous flowers, by which we were assured ye land could not be farre distant. Keeping good watch, ye 4th of July we arrived upon ye coast which wee supposed to be a continent, and we sailed along ye same 120 miles before we could find any entrance or river issuing into ye sea. Ye first that appeared unto us wee entered and cast anchor about three harquebus shots within ye haven's mouth, and after thanks given to God for our safe arrival thither, wee manned our boats and went to view ye land next adjoining, and take possession of ye same in right of ye Queen's most excellent majestie. Wee viewed the land about us, being whereas we first landed very sandie and low toward ye water side, but so full of grapes as ye verey beating and surge of ye sea overflowed them, we found such plenty, both on ye sand and on ye green soil of ye hills, as well as on every shrubbe and ye tops of ye high cedars, that I think in all ye world ye like abundance is not to bee found."

The colony planted in 1585, was not revisited until 1590. Governor White tells the pitiful story of the "Lost Colony of Roanoke." His expedition, when it came near the island, "sounded with a trumpet a call, and, afterward, many familiar English tunes and songs, and called to them friendly, but we had no answer." On a tree on the very brow of the sandy bank were the letters, "CRO." "At the fort," says White, "we found the houses were taken down, and the place strongly inclosed with a high palisade of great trees, with cortynes and flankers, very fortlike, and one of the chief trees at the right side of the entrance had the bark taken off and five foot from the ground in fayre capital letters was graven 'CROATAN,' without any cross or sign of distress." White returned to England, leaving the great mystery unsolved.

Time seems to have solved it. Croatan was on the mainland, in what is now Tyrrell county. There the colonists seem to have gone with, or to have been taken by, the Indians. Thence, after the lapse of many years, they appear to have gone to what is now Robeson county. There are many names among the Croatan Indians of Robeson which are on the roll of White's Colonists, and the Croatans use daily many old English words, long obsolete in the mother country.—Fred A. Olds. in Daily Sentinel.

—Miss Emma Job who has been with her brother, Brother W. S. Job, near Greensboro for some months, has returned to her old neighborhood near Randleman.

—Thomas Ogburn, Jr., oldest son of Rev. J. T. Ogburn, recently brought his bride from Richmond, Va., to spend a while with his people here. We congratulate him on his acquisition.

THE ORPHANAGE CAMPAIGN.

Statement by the Finance Committee.

As has been previously announced in the columns of the Herald, the Locating Committee appointed to select a site for the Orphans' Home have purchased an exceedingly desirable tract of land on the Greensboro-High Point Macadam road, near High Point.

A Building Committee and a Finance Committee composed of business men have been appointed and plans made to raise funds with which to pay for the land and erect a substantial brick building to cost ten to fifteen thousand dollars. It has been decided to make a quick campaign to raise this money, in order that the building can be ready to occupy before cold weather. The Committee have decided to inaugurate a ten day campaign beginning next Sunday, and solicitors have been appointed and furnished with pledge cards and all necessary instructions given. Back of this proposition are some of the best business men in our church and they are giving their time and talent without any charge whatever; therefore, every cent of every dollar contributed will go into the building.

The location selected is ideal, being on the macadam road between Greensboro and High Point, the most prominent highway in the State. The buildings will be on a high elevation and rolling in every direction, therefore thoroughly sanitary. Every one that has visited it is enthusiastic over the location, and the locating committee say that they have not heard a dissenting voice raised against the location.

The citizens of High Point, regardless of church affiliation, are enthusiastic and one citizen, not a member of any church, volunteered a contribution of $250.00.

The Committee hope to have a spirited rivalry among the Canvassers, let every one try to excel the others. Impress on every one the fact that there are no salaried officers connected with the raising of this money. The Finance Committee, the Building Committee and the Canvassers all giving their time free of charge.

T. A. Hunter, Chairman.
By J. M. Millikan, Sec. & Treas.

—James W. Swain, formerly linotype operator in this office, is now one of the operators in the office of the Winston Journal, a daily paper. In his two years' apprenticeship in this office, he acquired a good speed, besides learning to an unusual degree the mechanism of the machine.

—Latham, the aviator, was gored to death by a wild African buffalo while he was on a hunting trip.

CANVASSERS FOR ORPHANAGE BUILDING FUND.

The following have been selected by the Finance Committee of the Orphan's Home to canvass the members of the respective churches for contributions during the ten day campaign which has been inaugurated to raise fifteen thousand dollars:

Albemarle Circuit.

Creswell, Miss Eva Spruill.
Rehoboth, Roland Spruill.
Edenton, Mrs. Sallie C. Davenport.
Woodley's Chapel, Hardie Woodley.

Alamance Circuit.

Bethel, John A. Foust.
Center, J. W. Whitehead.
Rock Creek, Flavius Hornaday.
Flint Ridge, General Wright.

Anderson and Yarbrough Circuit.

Liberty Hill, J. F. Compton.
Fair View, Robert L. Wyatt.
Yarborough Chapel, L. Yarborough.

Asheboro.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, R. R. Ross.

Asheville and Buncombe.

Clark's Chapel, G. A. Webster.
Asheville, Miss Jessie Williams.

Burlington.

J. G. Rogers, Rev. R. M. Andrews.

Cleveland Circuit.

Dr. G. M. Gold.

Concord Circuit.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

Denton Circuit.

C. H. Surratt.

Efland Circuit.

M. P. Efland.

Fairview Circuit.

Dwight Davidson.

Flat Rock Circuit.

J. B. Ogburn, S. H. Lemons.

Forsythe Circuit.

Tabernacle, Mrs. Frank Coble.

Graham and Haw River.

Dr. W. P. Goley.

Granville Circuit.

E. C. Harris.

Greensboro.

Grace, Mrs. A. B. Kimball, Mrs. H. A. Garrett.

Guilford Circuit.

J. M. Davis.

Halifax Circuit.

D. W. Hardee.

Haw River Circuit.

L. R. Dixon.

Henderson.

Dr. F. R. Harris.

High Point.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Geo. T. Penny.

Ivey Circuit.

Dr. I. N. McLean.

Lebanon Circuit.

J. W. Montgomery.

Liberty.

J. F. Pickett.

Mebane.

J. W. Nicholson.

Randleman Circuit.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, R. R. Ross.

Richland Circuit.

Charlotte, B. F. Bulla, W. S. Crowson.
Giles Chapel, I. F. Pritchard.

Siler City Circuit.

Siler City, Mrs. E. B. Siler.
Piney Grove, Dr. G. E. Matthews.

Thomasville.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Geo. T. Penny.

Vance Circuit.

S. R. Harris.

Orange Circuit.

J. S. Pender.

Why Not Circuit.

Miss Etta Auman.

Oak Ridge and Kernersville.

Prof. M. H. Holt.

Winston.

Geo. T. Penny, L. C. Hine.

Yadkin College Circuit.

S. E. Leonard.

Roanoke Circuit.

Lawrence Whitakers.

Littleton Circuit.

Miss Fannie Barnes.

Rockingham Circuit.

W. T. Collins.

Stanley Circuit.

J. H. Snotherly.

It has been impossible for the Committee to secure names for canvassers for every church, and we respectfully request the pastors to furnish us the names of suitable persons for canvassers for places we have failed to make appointments, and let us have these at the earliest possible moment. Please send these to J. M. Millikan, Secretary and Treasurer of the Finance Committee, Greensboro, N. C.

DOES THE STATE PROTECT THE WEAK?

The man has a wife who does not drink, who has no appetite for drink, yet is a slave to drink through the ungovernable appetite of her husband. Does the State come to the rescue? Not at all. The State commissions some vagabond to despoil her, to torture her, to drive the bloom from her cheek and hope from her heart.

The stricken man has a child who does not drink. Does the State protect this little one? Not at all. The State grants a license to some brewer's agent to destroy its life. Alcohol is the solvent that robs this child of the sunlight to which it is entitled just as it steals from the flower the perfume of its life and leaves it a rotten pulp.

When the man who voted to license this horrid thing is cornered, he shifts his quid of tobacco to the other side and says: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Everybody has a weaker neighbor who in turn has a wife and children who suffer the tortures of the rack because of his weakness. What will you do about this at the coming spring election? Will you vote to commission men to prey upon these people? Will you by your vote authorize their plunder and debauchment? Will you vote to issue a license to a depraved man to catch your son if he can or debauch your daughter if he can get her? Will you say with Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?"—Presbyterian Temperance Committee.

SOME LITTLE THINGS ARE IMPORTANT.

Many seemingly trifling things change the whole current of your life. A boy was expelled from school. He felt utterly disgraced. So humiliated and humbled was he that he went away from the school feeling that all the world was against him, and in the frame of mind he was contemplating a life of recklessness that would have undone him forever.

Nobody spoke to him as he took his books and walked away through the crowd of children and youths that stared at him along the playground. There was nothing left for him but to continue bad. Nobody cared and he didn't either. He would play the game to suit the general estimate now placed upon him. He would be satisfied with a renegade's life and live it with all his nature.

But on the outskirts of the throng of students a girl stood waiting for him to pass. She was not a sweetheart nor anything of that sort, but just felt a kindly interest in him. As he slunk away from the path in which she stood she greeted him with a smile and said: "Jim, don't be discouraged. A misstep doesn't ruin a boy if he mends his way. There's a big, manly man in you and the world is waiting for that man. Don't disappoint God."

The boy didn't reply, but he brushed his eyes with his sleeve as he walked on in silence. It was years ago in a prominent country school in Parker County. That man is to-day one of the leading ministers in Texas Methodism. A scowl and a jeer from that girl would have sent that boy to ruin. A human interest in him and a kindly word were used to redeem him. He has not disappointed God nor the world. It isn't the boy that falls and is hurt that is ruined, but the boy who having fallen, refuses to rise. If any boy of your acquaintance has made a misstep and people are frowning and wiseacres are shaking their heads and prophets of evil are forecasting calamity, speak the friendly word and do the kindly deed for that boy, and God will make you his own instrumentality in reversing the accidental evil and working ont the everlasting good.—Texas Christian Advocate.

MILLIONS OF RED CROSS SEALS FOR 1912.

Seventy-five million Red Cross Seals are now being printed for the holiday sale of these anti-tuberculosis stickers in 1912. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which in cooperation with the American Red Cross will conduct the sale, makes this announcement today and states further that the outlook this year is bright for a larger sale than ever before.

The seal this year is said to be the best of its kind that the Red Cross has ever issued. The design is in three colors, red, gray, and green. A Santa Claus head in the three colors is shown in the center surrounded by holy wreaths. In each corner is a small red cross. The seal bears the greeting, "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, American Red Cross, 1912."

The campaign for selling Red Cross Seals will be carried on in practically every state and territory in the United States, and even in Porto Rico, the Canal Zone, Hawaii and Philippine Islands. No less than 100,000 volunteer agents, including department, drug and other kinds of stores, motion picture theatres, individuals, and others, will be engaged in the work. Before the sale is completed, it is expected that at least 100,000,000 seals will have been printed and distributed, besides several million posters, display cards and other forms of advertising literature.

Last year over 32,000,000 seals were sold; in 1910 over 31,000,000; in 1909, about 23,000,000; and in 1908, the first year of the sale only 13,500,000. In all, the sale in the four years has realized nearly $1,000,000 for the anti-tuberculosis campaign, since all the money from this movement goes for the prevention of consumption.

New York state sold the most seals in 1911, disposing of 6,356,368; Ohio came next with 3,500,480; Wisconsin third with 2,912,144, and Illinois fourth with 2,101,632. Texas showed the greatest percentage of gain, having increaesd its sale from 100,000 in 1910 to over 1,250,000 in 1911. Indiana showed the second greatest gain, with an increase from 683,756 in 1910 to 1,245,545.

—We would call the attention of pastors to the request of Prof. T. C. Amick.

From Pastors and People.

President's Appointments for Ivy Ct.

Democrat, Wednesday night, Aug. 21.

Terry's Fork, Thurs., Aug. 22, 11 a.m.

Pleasant Gap, Aug. 22, 4 p. m.

Mountain Valley, Fri., Aug. 23, 11 a.m.

Pensacola, Sat., Aug. 24, 11 a.m.

Third quarterly meeting Saturday, Aug. 24, at 2 p. m. Dinner on ground for visitors from a distance. Let everybody turn out.

S. B. Stephens, Pastor.

Randolph Circuit.

The Children's Day service was held at Bethel last Sunday, July 7, at 3 p.m. The program published in the Herald was not simply "gone through with," but carried out. There was no forgetting or mistakes even by the little tots, for the cradle's rights were not very strictly regarded. The children didn't need any praise from the pastor for the way they acquitted themselves. The crowd did that. Neither did the Supt., Bro. Adams, and his able assistants need encouragement. The result of their faithfulness was sufficient, it seems to me. The young men and young ladies did whatever their superintendent asked them to do, which contributed no small part to the success of the day. The collection was $20.58. This was a success also, as Bethel is a small class in numbers. W. C. L.

Haw River Circuit.

On last Tuesday we buried one of Bro. Dan Moseley's twins, a little girl one month and 22 days old. She was apparently the healthier of the two, but was taken sick Friday or Saturday and died Monday morning.

She has joined the angels in our home above, and now let father, mother, and all be sure to meet her on the right side.

Then on Wednesday the death angel came to Bro. Jonathan Baynes' home and as with a stroke took his wife. She has not been well for some years, but much of the time able, or did go about the house, and some days went visiting. She was not so well Monday and on Tuesday about 10 o'clock said she thought she was better, and tried to fix some dinner, and fell unconscious and never spoke again. She died Wednesday and was buried at New Bethel church Thursday. There was a large congregation, which attested to the fact that she had many friends.

Two deaths close by, each one died with very short sickness, one less than a sixth of a year, and sister Baynes was 64 years, 3 months and 5 days old. She had been married 40 years, 3 months and 8 days. She professed religion and while very young joined Flat Rock church, and she was one of the charter members of Bethany. She leaves a husband, three sons, one daughter, and many friends to mourn their loss. She was a kind neighbor, good to the poor. She loved her home and loved ones. It was the preacher's home. I have been there many times. She told me not long ago she was trying to be ready when the summons came. Loved ones look up and be ready also.

Our special meeting begins at Bethany tomorrow, July 14. Bro. Geo. E. Hunt the help. Sandy Cross the 4th Sunday in July, Bro. A. D. Shelton as help. Mizpah, first Sunday in August, Bro. Hunt as help. Friendship, second Sunday, Bro. Millaway as help. The third Sunday Bro. Hunt as help. The first Sunday in Nov., Midway, Bro. Millaway as help. May there be glorious revivals everywhere.

One of Bro. John McCollum's daughters underwent an operation last Tuesday. Bro. Dolph More's wife was taken today for an operation, two or three more are expecting to have to go from Midway community. Surely this is a time of great affliction. It becomes us to heed the warning, "Be ye also ready."

Our third quarterly conference will be held at Friendship on Friday of the special meeting, and communion. Bros. J. W. Weatherly and J. A. Gunn are the nominees for delegate to Annual Conference. Several important things to be considered. Come, brethren.

C. E. M. Raper.

Burlington.

Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 209, and the offering amounted to $4.68.

Our Sunday school decided last Sunday to have the Children's Day exercises next Sunday night. The children are being trained for the exercises, and will doubtless render an interesting program. We are hoping for a large congregation.

Rev. and Mrs. Davis returned last Thursday morning from a trip to Virginia and Maryland, where they spent two weeks visiting relatives.

The Baraca class of our Sunday school served ice cream to the public last Saturday night, the proceeds of which amounted to about $11.00. This amount will be applied to the class room fund.

Bro. Davis gave us a very interesting and splendid sermon Sunday morning on the subject: "Some Reasons why I Am a Methodist Protestant."

C. B. W.

July 15, 1912.

Denton.

By an exchange of pulpits with Rev. D. A. Braswell I visited Denton last Sunday.

The first thing that impressed me was the size of the town The territory covered, or inclosed, is nearly as great as that of Asheboro, and if ambition, purpose, and hopefulness count for anything it is big in more than land. The next was the appearance of the Methodist Protestant church. Here again the faith, and enterprise, and purpose speak out. The location prominent, the structure imposing even in its unfinished state, the size, and plan, and material going to show that they are building for the future. They realize that it will take persistent effort, and, maybe sacrifice, to complete their commodious and handsome structure, but I heard no word of discouragement.

Bro. Braswell wants fifteen (1500) hundred of our people to give $1.00 each to this enterprise. Why not a few of our strong men give a hundred, or several hundred dollars each and wipe out the debt and finish the building?

The congregations, morning and night, were encouragingly large and inspiringly attentive. One feature that struck me most forcibly was the large number of young people, particularly young men, in the congregation at both services. I was also impressed with the fine spirit as regards the removal of the Orphanage. Though disappointed that the committee did not locate it there, I heard no word of reproach or harsh criticism, but more than one expressed the opinion that they acted conscientiously and for the best as they saw the matter.

The pastor, though absent, did much to make my visit pleasant, and I regret that I could not visit all the homes to which I was so cordially invited, nor stay longer in those where I was so hospitably entertained.

C. H. Whitaker.

Asheboro, July, 10.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Circuit.

We held our Children's Day the fifth Sunday in June which was a success.

The programme was well prepared and the children rendered their pieces with credit to them. The music was good. Our pastor gave us a splendid talk on foreign mission, also Mr. Hammer of High Point. Collection $12.25.

There was a large crowd more than could get into the house, but all seemed to enjoy the day.

Our special meeting will be the third Sunday in September.

E. S. Jones.

EFLAND CHURCH.

Our Children's Day service was "the best yet" this year and the offering was eleven dollars, the largest offering we have made for missions.

The Ladies' Aid Society has been gathering funds for the past year to put new windows in the church, the old ones being too small. The new windows are now in place and add greatly to the church. They are the leaden art glass, and not only add to the looks of the building but give a beautiful light. The children of the late Stephen T. Forrest put a beautiful memorial window for him. There are five other memorial windows put in by relatives in memory of their loved ones, The Bivins family, one for their father, Edgan Bivins, for his wife; the Thompson family, for their mother; the Boggs family, for their father; the pastor, for his mother. Miss Nannie Pratt also paid for a window. The Ladies' Aid Society has worked very faithfully to accomplish this and deserve great credit for it.

Rev. R. C. Stebbins preached for us the first Sunday. Our people are always glad to have him with us.

Our revival will commence the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. A. G. Dixon will be with us and do the preaching. Will not some who read this join us in prayer for a good revival?

Pastor.

NEW SALEM, RANDLEMAN CT.

Rev. J. B. O'Bryant filled his regular appointment at this place Sunday evening at three o'clock.

Miss Cornie Caudle is teaching a Bible class here every Saturday night.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Mr. W. V. Beecher Supt., and Mr. Charles Hayes Secretary.

WELCH MEMORIAL, HIGH POINT.

Last Sunday was another good one for us. We received two into the church: Sister Louise Harvell and Bro. Henry Meredith, the latter being a close neighbor and very dear friend of the pastor.. They bring the number of membership at Welch up to one hundred. Much good we think is being done by our faithful pastor and family.

Our Sunday school is doing finely. We have from 104 to 112 every Sunday in S. S. and the preaching services are well attended for hot weather.

We will have our Children's Day service the last Sunday in this month.

Reporter.

CANAAN FOR JUNE.

Brother Plyler was with us the 4th Sunday and gave us a good sermon.

We are having a very good Sunday school; we had some where in eighty Sunday I believe.

Pray for us.

G. L. Motsinger.

FORSYTH CT.

Our quarterly meeting was held at Pleasant Hill Saturday before the 2nd Sunday, with small attendance.

Bro. R. E. Briggs was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Bro. W. H. Shouse, alternate.

T. A. Williams.

SHILOH, RANDOLPH CT.

Dear Herald: Since our last report we have been very busy preparing for our children's day service, which was held last Sunday the 14th with a large number present. Quite a number could not get seats. The vestibule was crowded, and buggies pulled up to the windows so those outside could see and hear. The program was well rendered with much credit to the children, and young people, and those who did the training. The recitations were good, and the singing by the choir was the best in many years. The collection was $31.15.

We now have a Philathea class of a number of girls. Our Philathea class is planning for a lawn party; the money we make at the party goes to the Orphanage at High Point.

Our special meeting begins the second Sunday in August. We ask an interest in the prayers of all praying people, that we shall have a good meeting.

Reporter.

July 15, 1912.

TUCKERTOWN, N. C.

We have just closed one of the greatest revivals I think I ever experienced. The people are praising God and rejoicing almost all over town. When I first came here to preach I could not find a man that would lead a prayer. But the Lord has done many wonderful things for us and now we have men that will pray. Bro. D. L. Surratt, Jr., was with us Sunday and Monday night. He gave us some soul-stirring sermons while he was with us, he is loved by all. I am preaching here every Saturday night that I can be here. We have started a good prayer meeting. We have preaching the first Sunday in each month.

Last night the good people gave us a great surprise. We heard singing and the sound of two or three wagons and about the same of buggies, and in a few moments they were in the yard. A large crowd walking. I did not have time to make any excuses. They came rushing in, about, 75 or 80 in number carrying turns of good things to eat and various others too numerous to mention. Please allow me space to give a fe names of the good people. As follows:

Cora Taylor, W. F. Hamilton, John Bailey, Essie Bailey, Lacy and Jettie Brewer, M. C. Brewer, Tucker & Carter Rope Co., Mrs. E. L. Talbert, Sam Brewer, C. L. Taylor, Robert W. Hall, W. R. Napier, Carrie Surratt, C. C. Hilliard, Miss Ina Napier, Sam L. Smith, J. F. Tolber, J. A. Honey, Jennie Honey, Lenora Honey, Lottie Honey, Edna Warner, L. F. Waisner, Emma Hamilton, John Brewer, Rosa Hall, R. H. Austin, Mrs. R. H. Austin, Lee and Nannie Hilliard, Lon Hilliard, Mrs. M. C. Brewer, Mrs. Samantha Bailey, E. H. Everhart, J. P. Talbert, Kate Talbert, Jennie Talbert, J. R. Bailey, Mrs. E. P. Smith, Dexter Smith, Artie Brewer, Mrs. Nannie Noah, Cora Talbert, John Loftin, W. R. Napier, Quince Bailey, Ed Hatchcock, M. L. Talbert, John Napier, J. R. Smith, Ida Hall, W. H. Hilliard, Leony Hilliard.

May the Lord bless all the dear people that have done so much for us that we may do what the Lord wants us to do.

We want to begin a meeting at Whitney Monday night. Pray for us. We give our love to the Herald and its many readers.

A. M. Hamilton.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

Bro. Cecil met with us last Sunday with an inspiring sermon, using as his text, "Go work today in my vineyard." We believe, as Bro. Cecil grows older, he grows also in goodness, which he so plainly expresses, not only in his words, but by the expression on his face. A large crowd listened attentively to the good news. May God help each one of us to the very best advantage.

Nothing definite was decided about our building a new church, with the exception of appointing five committees to see how much money can be raised for building a new church or for repairing the old one. The matter will be put to a vote the second Sunday in August.

Our S. S. is working faithfully trying to accomplish great things. Three new classes have been organized, Senior Philathea and Junior and Senior Baraca. The best of it is, we are not satisfied yet. We want to organize a Junior Philathea for the little girls. Mrs. Arthur Hughes, the teacher of the mothers' class, is going to entertain her class Thursday, at which time they will discuss the subject of organizing a Mothers' Philathea Class. We are going to have our Sunday school picnic soon. We hope this same good spirit will continue.

As the protracted meeting begins at Shady Grove fourth Sunday in this month we will not have any preaching, but we want every one to come out for Sunday school.

As I have said some time before, our protracted meeting begins the fourth Sunday in August with Bro. Millaway as our help. May you join us in our prayers for a great revival.

Lillie Sharpe, Reporter.

July 16, 1912.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

June 20-23 was spent on the Greensville and Spring Church Charges. As a whole the work here is in good condition, but it is evident that no one man can serve both these charges and do anything like justice to himself and the work. Rev. W. F. Ashburn is one of our most tireless workers and is never better satisfied than when his hands are full, but the situation here is too much for him. If possible we must have two men here another year. The people on these charges are not hard to please and do not complain, but they deserve more pastoral attention than one man can give them when serving both charges. In addition to the bad roads and the long travel in reaching some of the churches on the Greensville work from Pleasant Hill, the parsonage of Spring church, the pastor has done some valuable work in paying some debts on a church or two and also on the parsonage. It is wonderful how these people have gone forward since Bro. Fogleman went there. At that time everything was run down, the people discouraged and the outlook anything but promising. Pastors and people are both to be congratulated.

July 13-14 was spent at Graham and Haw River. Bro. Curry, the pastor, has the confidence of his people and is doing a great work. It will not be surprising if they keep the banner, given for the first charge to pay every cent of every claim. They have a fine financial system and are working it. It is very evident that no system, however good, will work itself. There was a new departure at quarterly meeting on Saturday night, the 13th. After the business of conference was over the Philatheas and Baracas served lemonade and cake. I would say more about it here but possibly I should anticipate some one else in so doing. We are glad of Graham and Haw River.

Very truly,

W. E. Swain.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Dr. Lyman E. Davis, President of the General Conference, has informed me that the time and place for hoolding the next annual meeting of the Executive Committe is Tuesday the 30th day of July, this month, in Pittsburgh, Pa. As secretary of the committee I take this method of notifying all concerned. The importance of this meeting is apparent to all who are conversant with the action of the last General Conference in placing upon, and by vesting in, the Committee certain duties and enlarged powers for efficiency. All the church Boards and Institutions are directed to report to these annual meetings with a full summary of plans and assessments for carrying on the work in their respective departments. The Presidents of all the annual conferences are invited to be present and participate in matters of general interest, and that pertaining to their conferece. It might be well for the Presidents not to overlook this duty, as the Committee is directed to make up the "budget" of assessments on each conference for general interests, and their knowledge will be of great help to the Committee in the equalization. If they do not attend and lend assistance along this line complaints from them will not be in order. A full attendanme of the members of the Committee at this first meeting in the quadrennium is important, and insisted upon.

As I am writing from the piney woods of South Georgia, away from my office in High Point, N. C. and have not seen the papers for several weeks, and do not know whether the minutes of the last General Conference are published, I have written to Dr. Davis to publish in the church papers the important parts of the law governing the Committee and those reporting thereto, if he has not done so.

R. T. Pickens, Secretary.

THE ORPHANAGE.

This is an institution yet in its infancy, and yet it is attracting the serious attention of our people as few things have ever done. Its importance is being realized, and the very best business men are giving it their very best service. What they do is a labor of love. I have it in my heart to say much, but as there will soon be something said through the papers that will merit the earnest and serious consideration of all right-thinking people. I shall refrain from saying much now. I do want to say, however, that our people may implicitly trust the judgment of the men and women having the matter in hand. We may safely follow where they lead. With a prayer that God may smile upon the enterprise and those having the matter in hand, and that He may open up the hearts of all our people, I am,

W. E. Swain.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 13.

Rev. I. I. York, Rev. G. W. Holmes, Rev. W. T. Totten, each three dollars. Miss Anna Meade Michaux one dollar.

J. A. Burgess, Sec-Treas.

HOW ONE FARMER HELPED.

Thirty years ago a farmer in Franklin County, Massachusetts, left his hay in the field, changed his clothes, and drove three miles to the mid-week prayer-meeting. It was a tiny prayer-meeting; in all there were not more than a dozen persons present. Among them was a boy from Worcester, who was visiting his relatives in the village, and went with them to the service.

When the pastor had opened the meeting and read from the Bible a passage bearing on the topic of the evening, this farmer was among those who spoke. He said:

"This afternoon, as I was working in my field, I was thinking of the topic that our pastor announced last Sunday, and I thought—"

What he thought no one now knows. The boy who heard him forgot long ago. But he was impressed by the farmer's thinking of religious things while at work, and coming all the way from his home to tell what he thought, and by the poise and directness, too, with which he set forth the results of his thinking.

The boy went to college, and later entered the ministry. Now he is president of a theological seminary. Recently he spoke to an audience of theological students of that boyhood memory, which had often recurred to him. The light of the kerosene lamps still shone in his imagination upon a face rugged and tanned, intelligent and kind, shrewd, but genuinely religious.

He did not even know the farmer's name. He knew only what he saw that night and what his relatives told him about this honest and God-fearing husbandman. Rain or shine, summer or winter, he was always at the Sunday services and at the mid-week meeting; and at the latter he had always something thoughtful and earnest to say, the result of his meditations as he worked in his field or sat beside his fire.

"When I think of the men who have helped me, I remember him," said the president. "I still see his face, and hear his words, and honor in him the many thousands of good men of whom he is to me the type. Whenever I think of him, my respect for simple, rugged manhood grows. Whenever I remember how his little speech began, I think of the many men who go about their work, taking counsel with themselves upon righteousness and the spiritual life. And so I count him among the men who have been of real and permanent help in moulding my own character and helping me to be a better man."—Youth's Companion.

BISHOPS.

At the M. E. General Conference is Minneapolis, a member moved that the election of secretaries and editors take place before those of bishops, and the proposition was laughed off the floor; for everybody knew that to elect these officials first would exclude them from being made bishops, and it is these secretaries and editors that one looks to first in seeking bishop timber. You can't choose men for these offices until the bishops have been chosen and the vacancies thus created are noted. Bishops serve for life or incapacity because of age, while editors and secretaries hold office for only a term of four years. They are quite willing to go higher. It is perfectly well understood that this rivalry for the office of bishop is the one thing that makes Methodist ears to tingle. Many are the stories told of log-rolling and canvassing, of ambition satisfied or thwarted, of disappointment and tears. It seems to be understood that he that getteth the office of a bishop getteth a good thing. But the scheming ambition for it is not a good thing for the Church.

The evil of ecclesiastical politics in pursuit of the bishopric is magnified because it is a national and not a local office. The bishop is elected by the General Conference of the whole Church, just as the President of the United States is elected by the whole nation. The nation wide canvass and nation-wide authority multiplies the evil and scandal, where scandal there is, just as the nation-wide political contest now going on to select our President kindles flames in the language of the rival combatants. There is less of such evil of office-seeking in the Protestant Episcopal Church when it chooses its bishops than there is among the Methodists, for its election of bishops is local; the choice of bishops being made in each local diocese and for its limited territory; and yet even so an election to a vacant seat is often deadlocked for weeks by the difficulty of finding a man on whom the clergy and laity can both agree. Were there archbishops or a Patriarch to be chosen, the struggle for the honor might create such soreness of heart as comes after every election of bishops in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

An illustration of the unrestrained bitterness which is apt to be aroused by the election of bishops is seen in the African Methodist Episcopal Church, whose General Conference is now in session. These brethren are not as restrained as their white brethren, but they are quite as ready to show their desire to get "a good thing." They met in a church that might contain eight hundred, and two thousand squeezed in. But the excitement over the election of bishops grew so hot that it created a riot, and they had to call in the secular arm in the person of a white policeman, and he brought quiet and told them they had better adjourn to the biggest public hall in the city, which they did; and they will probably elect twice as many bishops as they need, so as to satisfy the claimants and their friends. Probably there is as much partisanship and heat in the white as in the negro canvass, but the participants have learned better to conceal or control their righteous zeal. Just now those denominations may congratulate themselves that do not have bishops to elect, and that can convene with no life-long prizes to distribute. Why should not bishops be chosen, if chosen at all, for only four years, as we choose our President, and as the United Brethren choose their bishops? We suppose because such bishops would lack in dignity if serving no longer than presiding elders; but what is dignity worth anyhow?—The Independent.

—Senator Lorimer from Illinois has at last been voted out of the United States Senate—expelled from that body—by an overwhelming vote of his peers in the Senate.

—Victor Morris Smith, Jr., holder of the worlds' amateur record for aeroplane speed, was instantly killed near Palo Alto, Cal., July 13. The aviator fell fifty feet and his neck was broken.

—The bubonic plague has appeared both in Cuba and Porto Rico recently and deaths are reported from both as resulting from the dread disease. The Government is using every sanitary means available to stamp out the disease.

—The trouble is that good people are prone to work for God only as inclination moves them, while the forces of evil are active night and day.—Exchange.

A Wise Precaution.

The day before she was to be married an old negro servant came to her mistress and intrusted her savings to her keeping.

"Why should I keep your money for you?" I thought you were going to be married?" said the mistress.

"So I is, missus, but do you s'pose I'd keep all dis yer money in de house wid dat strange nigger?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Turned the Joke.

Pat was busy on a Hull road working with his coat off. There were two Englishmen laboring on the same road, and they decided to have a joke with the Irishman. They painted a donkey's head on the back of Pat's coat, and watched to see him put it on. Pat, of course, saw the donkey's head on his coat, and turning to the Englishmen, said:

"Which of yes wiped yer face on my coat?"—Tit Bits.

The Orphan Child.

My feet they are sore, and my limbs they are weary;
Long is the way, and the mountains so wild;
Soon will the twilight close moonless and dreary
Over the path of the poor Mountain child.

Why did they send me so far and so lonely,
Up where the moors spread and gray rocks are piled?
Men are hard hearted, and kind angels only
Watch o'er the steps of a poor Orphan child.

Yet distant and soft the night breeze is blowing,
Clouds there are none, and clear stars beam mild;
God in His mercy protection is showing
Comfort and hope, to the poor Orphan child.

Ev'n should I fall o'er the broken bridge passing,
Or stray in the marshes, by false lights beguiled,
Still will my Father, with promise and blessings,
Take to His bosom the poor Orphan child.

There is a thought, that for strength should avail me,
Though both of shelter and kindred despoiled;
Heaven is a Home, and rest will not fail me,
God is a friend to the poor Orphan child.

—Charlotte Bronte.

WHAT CAN LITTLE CHILDREN DO?

What can little children do
In the Master's vineyard fair?
What can little hands there find
Light enough for them to bear?
What can little eyes there find
Needing much their watchful sight?
What can little hearts bestow
That shall make some burden light?
Little feet are light and swift—
On love's errands they can run;
Little fingers soft and deft
Many a task have bravely done.
Little eyes can surely see
Every true and goodly thing;
Little hearts can always feel
Sympathy for suffering.
Surely we can something do
That shall help the cause along;
If it nothing greater be
Than to sing some little song.

—Selected.

A WONDERFUL CAT.

Probably the most wonderful cat in Berkshire County is a tiger mother cat in the north end of the Alford Valley. The cat makes a daily practice of catching trout by the simple use of her deft paws.

Each morning during the spring, summer and fall season she may be seen by any one going leisurely down to the brook which has a very clean bed, and it is not very deep at her favorite place of fishing. Here the cat nestles down by the stream's edge with her forepaws just into the water, and when a trout comes along, by a swift, artful and deft sweep of her clawed paw, she is sure to land her victim high and dry on land.

Then she takes the wiggling fish in her mouth and proceeds with it to the house, where she invariably delivers it upon the porch or gravel walk, still alive and struggling. She seems to be very careful not to injure her prey, for they are always delivered alive. If she has kittens, she gives them a fish or two, but they have so many that neither she nor her kittens seem to be as specially fond of fish as cats usually are.

After leavng the fish at the house, this remarkable cat returns to the brook and fishes again, invariably taking her victims to the house one by one.

Last season she caught one hundred and fifty speckled beauties by actual count, and hardly a day passed when Mr. Woodford, his wife and son did not have choice, fresh fish caught by this industrious feline. Since the smaller fish are harder to catch, it naturally follows that most of them are from six to eight inches in length, very few being less than the legal six inches. Of course, this feline fishermaid does not understand when the legally closed and open season begins, and pays no attention to that, never ceasing her labors as long as good weather prevails.

Although she catches large numbers at all seasons, it is during the spawning time, late in the summer, that the largest catches are made. At that season eight or ten fish a day is not an unusually large haul.

The absolute truth of the stories told concerning this wonderful cat is vouched for by many fishermen and hunters, who are as familiar with the animal's tactics as they are with the art of fishing itself.

The family naturally prize their pet very highly. They would hesitate about taking one thousand dollars for the cat, because of her unusual itnelligence, as well as her practical value to the household.—Berkshire Courier.

ON TRUTH-TELLING.

Tell your children the truth. That advice may seem impertinent and unnecessary until one stops to think, but in very many cases which have come under my own observation has been disregarded. Children begin their intelligent acquaintance with their parents, by believing them implicitly, and when that faith is shaken and doubt creeps in, the aspect of the world has changed for the little one, and something has been lost that will never be regained.

It is natural for a child to ask questions—not only natural, but right and proper; an evidence of intelligence. How often these questions are answered heedlessly, or even untruly, and the child learn sooner or later that his confidence has been betrayed.

If, for instance, bitter medicine is to be taken, do not say "It isn't bad." Instead tell the child gently, "This will not taste good, but we hope it is going to make you well, and my little man is going to be brave about it, isn't he?"

If pain must be inflicted prepare the little sufferer in some such way, and unless your experience is very different from mine he will meet the ordeal bravely. I'll never forget my own little son sobbing his heart out after a painful examination of his throat, and when I tried to comfort him by reminding him that it was over he gasped, "I'm not crying for that, but 'cause doctor told what wasn't true. He said he wouldn't hurt me and he did. Doctor isn't good." The betrayal of his confidence had been worse to him than the pain.

If a child's questions are embarrassing, as they often are, never scold the little questioner. Where should he turn for explanations of everything mysterious if not to his own parents? Thank God it is you he has asked, and answer him truly enough to satisfy for the time, and gently, that he may feel encouraged to come again when an expanding outlook suggests new mysteries and demands further explanations.

There is nothing a child has not a right to discuss as freely as is necessary with his mother, whether he be five years old or twenty-five; and the modesty which puts a barrier across this freedom is false indeed.—Christian Work and Evangelist.

TENNESSEE COURTS SMITE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Tennessee courts have recently smitten the liquor traffic in high places and in vulnerable parts. As a result there is loud lamentation in certain quarters. A short time ago Judge Pittman, of Memphis, handed down a decision which struck consternation into the very joint and marrow of the traffic. An eastern brewing company brought an action against an agent in Memphis to compel him to pay long over-due rent. The case came on and was heard by Judge Pittman. His decision was to the effect that as both parties were engaged in an illegal traffic no rent could be collected by process of law. The full significance of this decision will be seen when it is understood that agents engaged in illicit sale of liquor in dry territory are under no legal obligations whatever to pay the concerns that supply them with the liquors sold. And now the supreme court of the state enters the arena and deals the traffic a body blow from which it may not soon recover. It unanimously decided that the possession of a federal liquor license is to be taken as prima facie evidence that the holder is engaged in the liquor business. The day of temperance has been a long time dawning, but unless all signs fail it has at last arrived.—The Christian Evangelist.

Curtice-Swaim.

On the evening of June 26, the writer had the pleasure of uniting in marriage Mr. J. D. Curtice and Miss Lovey Swaim, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Roddy Swaim.

Mr. Curtice is a conductor on the Seaboard R. R., and is to be congratulated on his choice of a conductor for his home. The young couple left Mr. Swaim's a few hours after the ceremony, on their way to Wrightsville Beach, where they spent a few days. From there they went to Hamlet, their future home. May they have a happy and successful voyage through life.

W. C. L.

—We saw Bro. J. L. Hardin in St. Leo's Hospital last Sunday. He is greatly improved and hopes to go home soon.

MINISTERS AND LAYMEN:
Their True Relation to the Church and Each Other.

I am perplexed and uncomfortable. After a church membership of over sixty years, during which I have regularly attended Sunday and other services, the question presses me whether God is honored and can be honored and His kingdom extended if present methods are continued. I have been studying this question carefully and prayerfully, and the conclusion is that a change is indispensable, and that his fact should be promptly recognized. The opinion has been steadily gaining ground and shaping church services that only men who graduate from theological seminaries and have human ordination can successfully and properly preach the Gospel. This change in the Methodist Episcopal church is the more remarkable as its founder, John Wesley, is quoted as saying in reply to criticism of lay preaching, that "they who are only called of God and not of men have more right to preach than they who are only called of man and not of God. Many of the clergy not called of God, therefore do not and cannot preach the Gospel. Soul-damning clergymen lay me under more difficulty than soul-saving laymen."

The extent to which ministers of all denominations fail to realize that spirituality and experience are indispensable qualifications in religious teachers and witnesses appears incredible. The result is that laymen do not receive proper consideration and are not given a fair opportunity of sharing the responsibility and labor to which they are entitled though it is necessary to their own growth and for the work in the vineyard which Christ requires. The simple fact of the multiplicity of denominations which has resulted from the ecclesiasticism or ministerial control in the churches should awaken people to the necessity of change. What is the justification that because a young man has graduated from the seminary with a certificate that he has gone through a prescribed course of study he should be put in charge of a congregation which includes a considerable proportion of men and women who have gained a knowledge of the Bible and a spiritual development which the young minister will not possess, in all probability in many years?

It is a serious question for the church rather its members to consider whether under ministerial direction there have been and do not continue to be established formal services and ideas regarding worship which are unscriptural and do not promote spirituality. Are not many hymns to be found in the hymn-book which cannot properly be considered worship? Are the formal prayers which are offered from many pulpits, offered with the faith and expectation of divine acceptance which the Bible requires, and is there the inspiration and earnestness which will prompt the congregation to join heartily and intelligently? Is a portion of Scripture, responsively and often rapidly read, and when those who take part are constantly on the alert for the moment to join in, spiritually helpful to the participants? The Psalms are frequently, and perhaps now-a-days usually read in this way. Is there not the further objection that as a result the Psalms take the place of other portions of the Old Testament of which we need to be reminded? Are we not making a serious error and one which is practically the use of the shadow for the substance in our Easter celebration? Is it consistent with the spirit of the Gospel that we should picture to ourselves the dying and dead Christ while, as a fact, he has conquered death and ever lives to make intercession for us? Can we rightly each year forget for the time being the great result of Christ's death through which we have been renewed and have been made joint heirs with Himself? Was this the Apostolic method?

I have often suggested to ministers and others my belief that the repetition of the Apostle's Creed is positively harmful and dishonors rather than honors God, and have met no one who can justify it; and yet ministers continue this unwarranted practice. Do we believe that Christ or the Apostles would have used in a public service a printed list of the exercises in a way which reminds of some public entertainment, as is now the case? Is it consistent with humble and earnest worship that we should be called to consider the composers and titles of the music which is to be rendered, and on some occasions the names of those who offer prayer? Are elegant churches in which the poor are uncomfortable in view of their home surroundings suitable for the spiritual truth which should be taught in them, and are consistent with the "simplicty that is in Christ?"

There is only one foundation upon which any man can build and it is the rock Jesus Christ. Paul tells us in Romans x, 9-10: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." He also asks the question in 1 Cor. vi, 19: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own"? Christ does not invite the world to come to the Church but to Himself, and his reproof is: "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." God has the power to cleanse, but the church or its ministers have not. Ministers belong to the flock, and their work is to point continually to the loving shepherd and cry aloud concerning the dangerous foes which will destroy if the sheep wander from the fold.

In order to be effective the whole truth must be presented and considered. There is needed the continued reminder that "the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." (Jer. xiv.) John makes this a New Testament truth in his teaching that "The whole world lieth in wickedness." Our great need is to realize that there is light only when Christ is the Sun of Righteousness to us, and that we must "first seek the Kingdom of God and His righteousness." Christ's promise that all things shall be added unto us places before us the other great truth that in order to receive, possess, and enjoy we must fulfill conditions. The condition here is to make everything subservient to the Kingdom of God. When this is done there will be a complete surrender. Our attitude toward Christ will then be that of Paul, and we will do as he did and inquire of the Master: "What wilt thou have me to do?" His spirit was shown when he later said: "For me to live is Christ."

An interesting anecdote is given by J. Wilbur Chapman regarding Gen. William Booth, who, when asked: "Tell me what has been the secret of your success all the way through," replied with tears in his eyes: "I will tell you the secret. God has had all there was of me. God has all the adoration of my heart, all the power of my will, and all the influence of my life."

Fully surrendered and spirit-filled men and women must be invincible and will share the Master's triumph. The command is to "let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven." (Matt. v, 16.) The shining is to be of the sort which will bring men to God. It is the province of light to dissipate darkness. All true Christians, whether ministers or laymen, are required to be witnesses and teachers, and this was the mission of the Apostles though they were uneducated men. They were spiritually minded because they were taught of the Spirit. "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him." (Acts x, 35.)

A single further suggestion is that the scriptural condition of grace is the faithful use of what is already possessed, and then "we will know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge and be filled with all the fulness of God." (Eph. iii, 19.) —John C. Havemeyer.

Yonkers, N. Y.

1010 K.

The train was an hour late, and when the boy followed the hurrying passengers through the union station the streets were ablaze with lights. Outside, the boy hesitated, though not with fear, for his shoulders were square and his gaze steadfast and unflinching. It was only wonder and question that filled the clear, gray eyes—not fear nor timidity. He had came to the city to make his way, and he would do it. But until within the past twenty-four hours he had never seen an electric light, nor an automobile, nor a greater crowd than the dozen or fifteen loungers that election day or Christmas sometimes brought together at the little mountain store and postoffice which had represented to him the busy world.

A man in uniform was standing near the curb, whom it took the keen eyes but a few minutes to single out and watch. The man seemed to have a sort of oversight of the vicinity, for his gaze swept constantly from side to side as he gave information to persons who stopped by him for a moment. Presently the boy crossed over.

"Can you tell me where to find 1010 K?" he asked. "There's lot more streets than I thought, and they seem to go everywhere. I don't know which to take. I told the man I could find the way all right, and I reckon I could by taking time. But it's getting dark, and they may be expecting me. If you'll sort get me started, I'll—"

"Northwest or northeast?" asked the policeman, tersely. His head had been bent a little toward the boy, but he was looking in the opposite direction, his arm making an emphatic motion to a driver who was swinging his car too recklessly into line.

"Why, I—it's 1010 K," said the boy, doubtfully. "The man wrote a letter so they would be on the lookout for me. It's all right, after I find the place."

"M'm!" said the policeman, kindly. "What's the name of the people you are going to? My duty takes me up K. 1010 K Northwest is a senator, from the South, I believe, and—"

"I don't know who lives there," interrupted the boy quickly. "You see, it's like this: A man who was up my way hunting got after a bear, and fell off a ledge and broke his leg. The bear was right on him when I got there. The man seemed to think I saved his life, and when I spoke of wanting to go off and do better for myself, he told me to come to 1010 K, Washington, and wrote a letter, which I took to the postoffice myself the day before I started. I reckon he asked them to give me some kind of a job so I could be earning money to get more education. I've done right smart of choping wood and tending mules and such."

The policeman nodded.

"'Right smart' and 'reckon' shows you're from the south," he smiled; "so I guess it's the northwest senator. All sorts of requests are made of senators, and likely your hunter was a friend of this one. The street opposite is F, and you must go four streets up," pointing, "which will bring you to K. Then turn to your left and follow K till you come to 1010."

Before the boy could voice his thanks the officer had swung away with upraised hand toward some wagons that were on the point of colliding. The boy looked his obligation toward the man's back, and then hurried in the direction the officer had pointed.

1010 proved to be a large brick house with handsome front, which was just now ablaze with light. People were passing up the broad steps to the entrance, where a footman stood waiting to throw open the doors. Apparently some sort of entertainment was in progress.

But to the boy it signified nothing—unless, perhaps, the greater certainty of a job. The man who had sent him was right in directing him here. Such a busy house in so big a city must have plenty of work

He went up the steps with as much composure and directneess as any of the guests, but when the doors were flung open the man stepped in front of him instead of bowing him toward the cloak room.

"Round to the side entrance, boy," he ordered, surlily. "What do you come this way for?"

"Oh, it's all right," smiled the boy, genially. "I'm expected, so I'll walk straight in. Seems you're having right smart doings here, and of course everybody's busy. When it's all over you can speak about my coming. No hurry, though, for likely I'll stay here a spell. That's what the man told me—I would be looked after here till I was fixed."

He stepped in confidently, and following him closely came three or four gentlemen and ladies. While bowing them in, the footman's eyes glared suspiciously at the boy. At the same time he motioned for another servant to look after him.

Just then the senator himself happened to pass through the hall.

"What's the trouble?" he asked the footman.

"Oh, that boy slipped past me while I was looking after guests, sir," the man answered. "But Keeler will attend to him. Said he was told to come here, and would stay a while. and that you knew all about it from a letter. The idea, sir! Look at his clothes!"

This senator, however, was one of the men who looked at eyes and bearing before he noticed clothes, and the straight eyes and confident bearing of this boy made him neglect clothes altogether.

"I reckon he's all right, Drake," he said, easily. "My constituents are pretty liberal in the range of their requests, but I like it that way. And besides," with a breezy laugh, "another election is about due. I haven't a bit of time for the boy now, but tell Keeler to give him a room somewhere in the house for to-night, and to-morrowI will try to have a talk with him."

The boy was standing only a few feet away, waiting for a chance to speak; but the senator shook his head as he stepped forward and took the extended hand in a quick, hearty grasp.

"Not time for even a word," he declared; "but just make yourself at 'tu We'll talk it over later." And with a smile that went straight to the boy's he swung round to speak with newly riving guests.

The door man looked his disgust.

"Of all slack ways, this house beats the lot," he muttered, under his breath. maybe it's all right. Anyhow, it is to funeral."

As the guests moved from one brightly lighted room to another, there was a lavish display of rich gowns and jewels Other eyes than those within the house noted this, eyes that were covetous and scheming, and whose owners held a short, whispered conversation with one of the servants in a dark angle of the building. And it may be that the servant told the owners of the eyes that a number of the visitors who wore rich gowns and diamonds were house guests of the senator, with rooms in the building.

As the senator turned away, Keeler took the boy in charge and got him of the hall as quickly as possible, g him a room in the back part o house which overlooked the roof kitchen. Tired from his journey, th went to bed at once and was soon as

Some time in the night he was awa ed by a slight scraping, as of the ra of a window. At first he gave it but little thought, for strange sights and sounds have been the order of the last twenty-four hours. Then a few whispered words brought him wide awake.

"Easy, easy!" he heard some one admonish, and another voice answered, "Oh, it's all right. No one sleeps in this part of the house. The servant said so. But maybe it's better not to take any risks."

After that, although he listened with strained ears, the boy heard nothing save one very light footstep, and then a faint slurring as of a door being opened slowly. He had a feeling that something was wrong, and that perhaps he ought to get up and follow them, or even to wake the house.

But the thought that he was a stranger here, with everything new, restrained him. Maybe it was all right, and alarming the house would only cause unnecessary bother. So he waited. But he slipped out of bed and crossed to the darker shadow of the window curtains. His presence there could do no harm, and if the intruders really were thieves they would likely come back by the window.

For nearly two hours he waited there, silently and watchful. He had a robust, growing boy's need for sleep, and he had left his mountain home in the middle of the night before. But his eyelids did not yield to their inclination to droop now. He had watched too often at the entrance of a bear's den, or in a frequent haunt of a wildcat, to relax vigilance in an emergency.

At length there came a cautious, hurried footstep down the hall, the door opened softly, and two figures, one of them carrying a bag, moved straight to the open window.

"Quietly now," one of them whispered. "You slip down to the roof and take the bag as I lower it, and then we'll drop it into the grass below, and away for us. It's been a good night's work, with not a soul disturbed. We—"

He got no further, for at that moment a strong, muscular figure hurled itself upon his back, and the man was flung at full length upon the floor, momentarily stunned.

The other man's head was already through the window when the same figure fastened upon him and he was dragged back into the room.

The mountain boy was well grown, with flesh firm and muscles that swelled and knotted like cords. But the other was a man, wiry and quick as befitted his calling and he had a knife which as chance offered he used.

Presently the man swung toward the window, and with a sudden strong effort tumbled through it to the roof below. but the boy still clung to him. From the roof rolled and fell to the grass below, still together. And more than once on the way down the man had used his knife. As they struck the ground, the first man had recovered and was dropping through the window to the roof.

By this time the house was in an uproar, with lights switched on and servants running about.

Suddenly the boy called out sharply, twice, not for aid, but to warn them of the first man, who was now dropping from the roof. The second man he was still struggling with and trying to hold.

His call brought a dozen men from the house, and the burglar who had dropped from the roof was caught just as he was darting into the shrubbery. The other was seized as the nerveless fingers of the boy relaxed their grasp.

The boy himself was unconscious when they carried him to the house, and it was ten days later before he was recovered enough to recognize his surroundings. When able to talk the senator came to him.

"What sort of a position were you expecting to get?" he asked, after some talk about the burglars and the recovered jewels and silverware.

"Anything that would help me to earn money for more education," was the eager answer. "Up in the mountains there was nothing but chopping wood and driving mules and getting game and skins, and none of them paid much. The man who advised me to come here thought I could find a job at clerking or something, and said I could get a good education here without costing much."

"Exactly," smiled the senator. "Now I have received no letter at all about you, and thinking there might be some mistake, I went down to 1010 northeast the other day. I found it to be a small grocery store, and the owner told me he had been expecting a boy from the mountains, and to accommodate an old friend was intending to give him a job in his store. I think the boy he is looking for must be you."

The boy raised himself quickly in bed.

"Then I made a mistake," he apologized, blushing painfully. "I—I'm awfully sorry. And—and I'm much obliged, too. I'll go right away now. I'm plenty strong enough, I think."

"Not so fast, not so fast!" laughed the senator, forcing him back upon the pillow gently. "All you counted on at the other 1010 was a job I suppose?"

"Yes, sir."

"Good! Then you'll stay right here. When you are strong enough I will get you an appointment as a page in the senate chamber. That will yield you many times the salary you could earn in a grocery store, and it will give you much better advantages for schooling, too. No, not a word," as the boy was about to speak. "The doctor said you weren't to talk much. So I reckon I'd better go right out now. You will live here in the house, and we'll see about suitable clothes just as soon as you get out. And— oh, tut! tut!" at the look on the boy's face, "you've paid for it all."

Then the senator slipped out and closed the door behind him softly.—The Advance.

A LITTLE LAMPLIGHTER

The one who lights a single star
In some one's night,
And then with thoughtful, watchful care
Doth keep it bright;
The one who plants a single flower
In some drear place;
The one who takes in some sad home
A smiling face;
The one who reads a cheering book
To some tired eyes;
The one who loves and hopes and sings;
The one who tries
To light the lamps that are gone out,
And darkness near—
That child the angels lead and love.
Are you one, dear?

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Psalms 146-150.

Selected Comment.

The long-drawn music of the Psalter closes with five Hallelujah psalms, in which, with constantly swelling diapason, all themes of praise are pealed forth, until the melodious thunder of the final psalm, which calls on everything that has breath to praise Jehovah. Possibly the number of these psalms may have reference to the five books into which the Psalter is divided.

The first of the five (Psalm 146) is largely colored by earlier songs, but still throbs with fresh emotion. Its theme is the blessedness of trust in Jehovah, as shown by His character and works. It deals less with Israel's special prerogatives than its companions do, while yet it claims the universally beneficent Ruler as Israel's God.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

—Leon McCulloch is spending his vacation at his home in Greensboro. He is employed in the research department of the Westinghouse Electric Co. where he seems to be just in his element, as he always was an experimenter.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JULY 28.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject: Missions in North America.—Acts 2: 1-21.

Daily Readings.

M.—Great revivals.....Acts 14:8-18
T.—Steady growth .....Acts 9:23-31
W.—Christian unity .....Acts 4:32-33
T.—Love's crucible .....Gal. 3:27-29
F.—Great consecration.....Luke 19:1-10
S.—Increasing liberality....2 Cor. 8:1-7
Sun., July 28. Topic.

Missionary Progress.

The progress of missions in North America in the last few years may not have been everything that was desired, yet it has been marked. The older organizations are doing a greater work each year and new societies and auxiliaries of the church are setting others to work. Sometimes we hear the complaint, "There are too many organizations in the church." This is to be doubted. Every new organization gives more work for Christians, and at the same time some will be reached who could not be reached in any other way.

Our idea of missons is broadening. A mission is no longer merely a preaching-station. The men and Religion Forward Movement has crystalized modern thought in this respect in emphasizing a fivefold missionary message: evangelism, Bible study, missions, social service, and Christian community extension. This means that we are trying to introduce the religious spirit into the common things of life, and that we are seeking to reach our neighbor and give him a helping hand.

The Salvation Army in the United States began operations in Philadelphia in 1880, in an old building that had been used as a place in which to repair chairs. Last year the Army held 173,000 open-air services, with an estimated attendance of fifteen million souls. In the same time 215,000 indoor meetings were held, with an attendance of eight million adults and one and a half million children. More than forty thousand men claimed that they were converted last year through the work of the Army's open air-meetings.

The Salvation of America.

This young giant of the nations that in the two centuries has done more than Rome in the seven hundred years of her history; this land whose wealth and power are increasing as that of no other country evevr did in human history, how long before her thought, her enterprise, her wealth, shall dominate the commerce of the world?

Where every passion is stimulated by her realization of power what shall restrain her greed from plundering the nations? Save America for America's sake. Only the Gospel shall restrain her from becoming a Cortez or a Pizarro among the nations.

Who does not know that the godless rum traffic is run by Christian England and America and the godless lives of those engaged in that traffic are the greatest obstacles to missionary success in heathen lands? Save America for the world's sake.

Nothing will save us but Christianity strong enough to hold and check the awful greed for gold that infects our peoople. The society of Christian Endeavor, made up largely of energetic, consecrated young people, must have a large share in this work.

From Other Pens.

A million immigrants come annually to America. This is the same as building and filling with a foreign population ten cities of 100,000 each! A million immigrants. A million opportunities! A million obligations.

Every foreigner converted in America becomes directly or indirectly a missionary agent abroad spreading knowledge of the truth among his kindred and tribe. The greatness of the opportunity is the measure of the obligation.

Only a missionary church can save the world or justify its own existence. The manner in which American Christianity deals with the religious problems of immigration will decide what part America is to play in the evangelization of the nations abroad.

There is no greater Home Mission field in the world than Canada. Her possibilities are legion. Canada is a country immensely rich in resources, capitalized and fortified by her schools and by her churches; people by a cosmopolitan population; goverened by the spirit of democracy; privilege to possess an equal right to the land, God's gift to His children. With such an heritage as this what should our answer be?

Sixty per cent of the population of the United States have no connection with any organized body of believers, either Protestant or Catholic. Great masses of people rich and poor, educated and illiterate, native and foreign, farmers and miners, negroes and whites, Indians and Orientals, Hilanders and Lowlanders, are not touched by the church or the agencies of the gospel, and the sanctuaries of our Lord never receive them in prayer and worship. Pastors that are shepherds, Bible scholars who can teach the way of life, evangelists who can win men to God, and personal workers who can take the gospel of salvation to men, are needed today as never before in the history of America or the world.

QUEER PRAYERS.

Prayer is natural. Feeling our own impotency, we appeal to the powerful. In prosperity we are sometimes forgetful; but let trial come, or death in the family threaten, and we remember to pray. But prayer is very common. There are others who pray beside good people.

When the sinner says, "I'll be damned," he is praying.

A bidden guest said, "I pray thee, have me excused."

The Pharisee said, "I thank thee, Lord, that I am not as other men are."

Sinners are recorded as saying to God, "Depart from us: for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways."

The Gadarenes prayed Jesus to depart out of their coasts.

Pharaoh said to Moses that he would see his face no more.

Under the preaching of Paul, Felix trembled, and said, "Go thy way for this time."

A rich man in torment prayed Father Abraham to send Lazarus to dip his finger in water to cool his tongue.

Certain foolish virgins said, "Lord, open to us."

In the future some people will say to the rocks and mountains, "Fall on us, and hide us."

It is better to learn how to pray. The disciples who asked Jesus to teach them how to pray, as taught his disciples, were wiser than sinners of our time, who explain away the power of prayer through their sophisms, or learn queer prayers, that are usually bad prayers.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

The World is in Need of Thee.

The sun shines bright in the heavens;
The earth holds her jubilee;
What though thy part be a small one,
The world is in need of thee.
Thy heart may be rent with passion,
Thy hope in humanity small;
But will it ever avail thee
To moan and deplore it all?
The striving will give thee a blessing,
The climbing will lead to new heights,
The joy of the good thou art doing
Will fill thee with constant delights.
Thy sorrows forget in new service,
Thyself is another's delight;
The teardrops in smiles will then glisten,
Thy weakness will turn into might.

—George Warren Parker.

—An alligator 15 inches long is said to have been captured on one of the streets of Greensboro. How it got there is unknown.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

President Taft has just made considerable changes in National Forests in Montana, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, and California through Presidential proclamations modifying the boundary lines. By these changes nearly 275,000 acres of land are eliminated from the Forests, about 65,000 acres are added, and about 55,000 acres are transferred between two Forests, while a new Forest is created by the division of an old unit into two.

The net result is to bring down the total gross area of the National Forests to about 187,400,000 acres, of which nearly 27,000,000 acres are in Alaska. To a considerable extent, however, the reductions, so far as land actually owned by the Government is concerned, are apparent rather than real, owing to heavy alienations in the tracts eliminated. Some 22,000,000 acres of the National Forest gross are are not owned by the Government.

The high water mark of the National Forest gross area was reached in 1909, when the Forest boundaries included over 194,000,000 acres. It was then realized, however, in making the examinations on which the Presidential proclamations creating the Forests were based the work had been too rapid to insure in all cases the best boundaries. Sometimes land which should have been included was left out, while at other times land was taken in which was not best suited to Forest purposes.

Consequently a complete everhauling and rectification of the Forest boundaries was planned, and has been going on ever since. By successive proclamations President Taft has eliminated nearly 11,000,000 acres, while he has added about 4,000,000 acres.

In Montana the new proclamation eliminates a total of 116,370 acres from six Forests—the Custer, Absaroka, Blackfeet, Kootenai, Lewis and Clark, and Flathead—while 14,640 acres are transferred from the Blackfeet to the Kootenai and 40,640 from the Kootenai to the Blackfeet, to facilitate administration. In Arizona 106,540 acres are eliminated from the Coronado National Forest. In Nevada 49,840 acres are eliminated from the Humboldt and 55,840 acres added, of which 12,800 acres are included in the new Ruby National Forest, composed principally of that part of the old Humboldt lying south of the Southern Pacific Railroad. In Utah 1,340 acres are eliminated from the Sevier, while in California 8,680 acres are added to the Shasta and 480 acres to the Klamath.

—Fifteen million rats have been sacrificed against the spread of plague in Tokio. This enormous number of the rodents has been purchased by the authorities from the residents and killed since the first case of the pestilence was discovered in the capital in December, 1902.

Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deeds appears,
Pass it on.

—Selected.

—Bro. Norman Kirkman, of the Odell Hardware Company's store force, is taking his vacation at Mt. Airy Springs.

GRAND SEASHORE EXCURSION TO NORFOLK AND VIRGINIA SEASHORE RESORTS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1912 VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The Southern Railway will operat their Annual Seashore Excursion fron Greensboro to Norfolk, Va., on Thursday, August 1st, taking on passengers at all points Greensboro to Jeffries, Va. Specia train will leave Greensboro at 7:00 P. M., Thursday, August 1st, and arrive at Norfolk about 5:30 A. M., August second, and returning will leave Norfolk at 7:30 P. M. August 3rd. Two whole days and one night at the seashore allowing ample time to visit Virginia Beach, Ocean View, Newport News, Old Point Comfort, Hampton Roads, and the many other points of interest in and around Norfolk. The following low round trip rates will apply from stations named.

Greensboro	3.65
Madison	4.25
Summerfield	4.25
Siler City	4.50
Staley	4.50
Liberty	4.50
Ramseur	4.50
Reidsville	3.35
Danville	3.10

Tickets from all other points covered by this excursion on same basis.

For Pullman reservations, or any other information, see your nearest agent, or, write,

O. F. York, Passenger Ticket Agent, Greensboro, N. C.

R. H. Debutts, Division passenger Agt., Charlotte, N. C.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
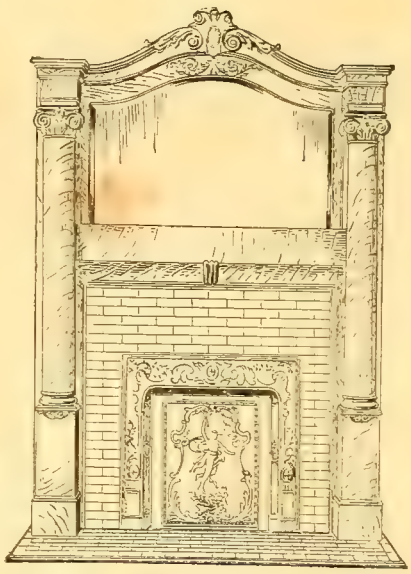
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles, and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE: Co-educational.

Situated in the delightful hill country of North Carolina. With all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of city life.

Diploma from Elon admits without examination to the Graduate Departments in leading universities. In addition to the REGULAR COLLEGE COURSES, the following Departments are maintained:

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT—Prepares young men and young women for the Freshman class at Elon, or elsewhere.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT—Piano, Voice, Pipe Organ, Violin, Brass Instruments.

EXPRESSION DEPARTMENT—Elocution and Physical Culture.

ART DEPARTMENT—Oil Painting, Water Colors, Pastel, Crayon, China Painting, Public School Drawing, Mechanical Drawing, Etc.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT—An ideal Business Course, combining best of our culture, and special training.

NORMAL DEPARTMENT—A three years briefer course leading to the degree. Also special term each year, April and May.

Good equipment and modern conveniences. Buildings heated by steam, lighted by electricity, furnished with water and baths. Expenses moderate, from $132 to $187 per session of ten months. Write for catalogue showing terms and work in detail.

President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

—Herbert Knox Smith has resigned as Commissioner of Corporations to join the new political party.

—Col. Roosevelt has withdrawn from the Republican club in New York of which he has been a member for years.

—Miss Nellie Reece is spending part of the summer among friends in North Carolina. She worked her way through Adrian College, with a little help from friends, being graduated with the Class of 1911. The past year she has been teaching in Nebraska. She expects to return to the West.

—When it comes to politics and elections count on your American. The Philippine government has established, on the island of Culion in the Philippines, a Republic for Lepers: and Michael Wholen, the only American leper in the island, has been elected Chief Executive of the new Republic, the only one of its kind in the world.

—Governor Blease of South Carolina has been accused by Burns detectives and others of corruption in office, receiving bribes, etc. The matter is to be aired at length.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

were sorry to find Mrs. Thompson unwell.

—Bro. F. R. Brittain showed us the Efland M. P. Church last Sunday, as we were waiting there. We were agreeably surprised at both the neatness and size, having seen it only at a distance before. Our people there much regret the departure of Bro. Casto, made necessary by the state of his health.

—Dr. F. R. Harris read a paper on "Eugenics and Conservation" before the North Carolina Medical Society in its annual meeting which has been printed as a pamphlet. "Eugenics" is defined in the dictionary as "the science of improving stock, whether human or animal." Dr. Harris quotes Galton as saying "Eugenics is the study of agencies under social control that may improve or impair the racial qualities of future generations, either physically or mentally," and then startles us by expressing the belief that the race is deteriorating, and warning us against the delusion that because we are Americans, Anglo-Saxons, we are and will remain a great and dominant people. The increase of crime and insanity as shown by statistics should cause us to think. We are glad that such men as Dr. Harris are studying the subject. He points to the essential step when he urges that we "stop the sources instead of using all our means in alleviating the conditions." He points out that a few of the States have taken radical steps to prevent the increase of the criminal class. Since 1907 Indiana has authorized the prevention of procreation by surgical operation in the case of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and rapists, and nearly a thousand persons have been successfully treated, many upon their own request. Oregon, Connecticut and other states have similar laws.

We suspect that the general use of alcoholic drinks, and other narcotics, including tobacco and coca-cola, is to be held accountable for much of the present-day degeneracy. Let society prohibit these things, and it will do much to develop a race of stronger men.

—Rev. R. A. Swaringen, who is a student in Westminster Theological Seminary, joins with Mrs. Swaringen in sending twenty-five dollars for the Orphans' Home. We feel that this is worthy of special mention, given under such circumstances.

—Bro. Reed reports some interesting and important news from Cleveland and Lincoln circuits.

—A singing class from the Oxford Orphanage will give an entertainment here beginning at 8 p. m. August 20th. Those attending will help the orphans.

—The election for delegate was held at Chestnut Ridge last Sunday.

—Bro. Thomas Crutchfield, of Mebane, has appendicitis. He expected to go to a hospital last Monday morning.

—Pledges for the Orphans' Home bulding fund were given out at Chestnut Ridge last Sunday and the editor responded to a call to speak briefly of the enterprise.

—Dr. T. H. Lewis, of Western Maryland College, was in Greensboro on business last night, and conducted our church prayer meeting. The announcement that he was to do so brought out quite a number not usually in attendance, including several from other churches. He made a splendid talk on the case of Esau, referring to his being able to find no place of repentance. His example is pointed to in the New Testament by way of warning to Christians, who may fall into Esau's error and so miss the blessing. Esau was a profane person who preferred present tangible good and despised his birthright, selling it to his more provident brother for a mess of pottage, a single dinner. Christians especially in this age are in danger of being absorbed in the pursuit of material gain and so of losing sight of the greater and more enduring and infinitely more valuable possible gains of living in the realm of spiritual acquisition. Instead of having the mind that was in Esau, we should have the mind that was in Christ. It is not enough to do right, to be just. Christ's measure is love's measure, which is more than duty's measure. If a man ask you to go with him a mile, go with him two.

—Dr. F. R. Harris, of Henderson, tells an amusing experience of his in his first use of his automobile. The man to show him how to manage it failed to come at the appointed time, and the doctor was too eager to wait longer. He knew how to start it at least, and he got in and drove off. He also knew how to turn it right or left, and he went on down the street and round the square, back to the starting point, but as he thought of stopping at home, he realized for the first time that he did not know how to stop it. As he dashed past his house he shouted to his little son to go after the man and ask him to come quickly and tell him how to stop the auto. Round and round the square went the doctor, time after time, with the people staring and dodging behind trees for safety. Finally the stopping device was discovered and the doctor rescued from a situation that appears more amusing to him now than it did then. He now uses his auto in his practice and does not see how he got along without it before.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills is the possessor of a new auto which he enjoys guiding himself. He has developed in a very short time into a daring chauffeur. It will give him good exercise of a very agreeable kind.

FOURTH REPORT OF THE ORPHANAGE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Total amt. reported last week..$12,983.85

New Pledges:

Liberty, J. F. Pickett,, Solicitor	$ 57.00
Asheboro, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, R. R. Ross, Solicitors	20.00
Kernersville, Miss Lydia Brookbank, Solicitor..	25.00
Greensboro, Miss May Bain's Jr. Baraca Cls.	35.00
Moriah, Miss Mamie Plunkett, Solicitor ...	27.75
Pee Dee Church, Rev. J. F. Dosier, Solicitor ..	10.00
Albemarle, J. H. Snotherly, Solicitor	35.00
Efland, M. P. Efland, Sol.	17.00
Pinnacle, J. R. Stone, Sol.	26.75
Burlington, Miss Ila Stafford, Solicitor ...	10.00
Tabernacle, Mrs. Frank Coble, Solicitor	40.00
Greensboro, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Solicitor	30.50
R. A. Swaringen and wife, Westminster, Md.	25.00
Mrs. M. E. Ferguson, Fitzhugh, Va.	1.00
Mrs. G. W. Ferguson, Fitzhugh, Va.	1.00
Total	$361.00
Grand Total	$13,344.85

In submitting this report we call attention to the fact that we are far below the amount we must raise before we close the canvass, and we therefore urge the canvassers to continue the good work. It is very gratifying to see renewed interest in many sections, as is shown by reports from canvassers that had made no report until this week.

Respectfully,

T. A. Hunter, Chairman,

By J. M. Millikan, Sec. and Treas.

—Rev. J. R. Dwiggins died last Friday morning at his home in Stokesdale, of heart failure. He had been in feeble health for some time, yet his death came unexpectedly. But we believe he was ready, for he was a good man—one of the best, we believe. His funeral was conducted on Saturday by Revs. W. F. Kennett and T. J. Ogburn. He leaves, besides his wife, one son and two daughters, Mrs. Holmes, minister's wife, and Mrs. M. W. Gant, of Greensboro.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR SCHOOLS.

A national movement is on to have a Day of Prayer for Schools. The second Sabbath of September has been most appropriately designated. The schools are opening, the churches are filling, the Sabbath schools are rallying. How can the year's work be better introduced than by praying for the children and youth?

The magnitude of the moral and spiritual interests involved in this vast work of education, or affected by it, commend this suggestion to all Christian citizens. For more than seventy years the Day of Prayer for Colleges has been observed by Christian people interested in these institutions, and incalculable results for good have been vouchsafed in answer to these prayers. But while the student world in the United States numbers not far from 300,000 persons, there are nearly eighteen millions in the common schools of the nation. For every student in our universities, colleges and professional schools there are seventy-five in our public schools. When we add the private schools, which, with certain classes, take the place of public schools, we have before us an agency which gathers under its influence, with insignificant exceptions, the children of the whole people, which is steadily making its work more thorough and complete, and which is confessedly one of the strongest moulding forces at work upon the character of the nation.

What ought to be the bearing and effect of this great agency on the morals and religion of the people? This nation is, in important respects, a Christian nation. The education provided for her future citizens ought to correspond to the national character in this respect, and should aim to transmit that character to the coming generations. The supreme need of the nation is not for intelligent or mental culture in her citizens, important as these are, but that they shall be men and women of good moral character, able to distinguish between right and wrong, and resolveed to do what is right and to avoid and resist what is wrong. The chief end, therefore, of the schools, to be held supreme above all mere intellectual culture, is to develop the moral nature of the pupils. If these positions are correct, it follows that any proposal to divorce education from the general, fundamental, unsectarian truths of religion, to make our educational merely secular, and to absolve the teacher and the school from all responsibility except for the intellectual development of pupils, is subversive of the true American idea of education, and fatal to the chief interest for which our schools were established. And yet this bald secular theory of education is accepted in wide educational circles. Many cities and many whole states are moulding their school system in accordance with it. This very disagreement as to the true nature and objects of education constitutes a grave peril to the schools. Those who believe in God, and in the efficacy of prayer, will agree with us that interests so momentous and so urgent as these ought, by a Christian people, to be spread before the Hearer of Prayer.

The National Reform Association will send free of charge to all pastors who will use their pulpits any Lord's Day in September to inculcate vital Christian truth concerning the whole work of education, a valuable treatise on "The Bible in the Schools." This treatise in addition to being a strong argument in favor of the use of the Bible in the schools, contains, as the result of recent special investigation, an authentic up-to-date detailed outline by States and Territories of the situation of the Bible in the school question in America today together with a list of specially selected decisive opinions of United States Presidents, educators and famous men generally on the relation of the Bible to civil and national life. For this address Dr. J. S. Martin, 603-604 Publication Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

OCTOBER 27th IS TUBERCULOSIS DAY.

Churches and religious societies, to the number of at least 100,000, will be urged to give special attention to the prevention of tuberculosis on Sunday, October 27th, or on some day during the week preceding or the week following that date. This season has been set apart and designated as the Third National Tuberculosis Day by the National Asociation for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which makes this announcement to-day.

Tuberculosis Day was originally set on April 28th, but was postponed because of a conflict with Conservation Sunday of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which was held on that date. The observance of Tuberculosis Day in the Fall this year will be utilized by anti-tuberculosis workers not only for the general education of churchgoers on consumption, but also for the purpose of interesting them in the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals.

Every one of the 600 and more anti-taberculosis associations allied with the National Association, will be urged to promote Tuberculosis Day in their respective communities. While last year over 50,000 churches observed this occasion, it is expected this year that this number will be doubled. Miliions of circulars and other forms of literature will be distributed. The support of every religious denomination will be asked for.

That tuberculosis is a serious problem among church congregations is evidenced by statistics which the National Association gathered last year, which show that 10 per cent. of all deaths among church members are caused by tuberculosis. Based on these figures and on the mortality statistics of the Census Bureau, over 52,000 of the 33,000,000 communicants in churches in the United States die from tuberculosis every year. This figure assumes that the death rate of 1.60 per 1,000 population in the Registration Area applies to all churchgoers, when, as a matter of fact, the rate would probably be higher.

WORMS THAT EAT IRON.

A feasible explanation of the disease which attacks old metal coins is suggested by the recent discovery of some Italian engineers of a microbe which feeds on iron. The discovery was made through the frequency with which railway accidents occurred in one particular portion of the railroad in a certain district.

An examination of the rails was made and the presence of severe corrosion revealed. A rail was taken up and broken. It was then found to be hollow; and further examination showed the presence of a thin gray, threadlike worm about a third of an inch in length. A careful examination was made of the habits and appearance of this worm. Upon its head it carried two little glands filled with corrosive secretion which it ejected every few minutes upon the iron. The ejection had the property of rendering the iron soft and spongy, when the worm at once proceeds to devour it.—Chicago Tribune.

—A young first-grade teacher of the children of foreign parents gave them a little talk on kindness to animals. The next day, when she was busy at her desk, she felt a little hand tugging at her sleeve. "Why, Pietro," she exclaimed, "what is the matter?" "Nothing, teacher, I just wanted to tell you how I was good to dumb animals yesterday," he replied. "Why, isn't that nice, Pietro! Just what did you do?" Pietro drew himself up to his full three feet, and proudly declared, "I kissed the cat!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

—The papers report a case of yellow-jacket stinging which was so severe as to bring unconsciousness. A farmer was found unconscious in his field from this cause. He rallied and is said to be recovering.

From Pastors and People.

Error last week.—It is to Littleton Ct. and not Liberty that Bro. Stubbins is to go after he leaves Bro. Needham.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.

Our special meeting commenced the first Sunday in August with Bro. G. W. Holmes in the pulpit. On Monday Bro. C. W. Edwards of Mebane came and stayed until the close, Thursday. Bro. J. D. Williams, of Henderson, put in his appearance and stayed three days. They made some strong appeals to sinners to turn from their evil ways and come over on the Lord's side, but the most of them in their boldness withstood it all and let the meeting close, leaving them still in their sins. How they could stand the strong appeals that were made to them and not yield I am not able to understand, but I reckon they did it by the help of Satan.

Six claimed conversion and six joined the church. The weather was ideal except it rained a little Sunday morning that hindered some. Our congregations were good all the the time until the close. The way the people attended the meeting showed that they appreciated Bro. Edwards' and Williams' preaching. Come again, brethren. A. N. Roberson.

Burlington.

175 were present in Sunday school Sunday, and the offering amounted to $3.76. The school decided to have a picnic soon. A committee, composed of the teachers of the primary classes, was appointed by the superintendent to make all necessary arrangements for the picnic.

On last Tuesday evening from eight to eleven the Baraca and Philathea classes of our school enjoyed a picnic and watermelon slicing, going to the beautiful country home of Bro. Geo. W. Coble, about three miles from town. Mr. Coble is the father of the Baracas' Assistant Teacher, Bro. Minter A. Coble, who did all in his power to make the occasion a very pleasant one. The hospitality and generosity of these good people, with whom the jolly crowd spent a pleasant evening, cannot be surpassed. Before partaking of the good things to eat, which were prepared by the Philatheas, Bro. Davis, our pastor and Baraca teacher, offered a prayer of thanks and blessing. In the early part of the evening, splendid music was furnished by a concert band and Mr. Coble's phonograph. About fifty were present, and everyone seemed to enjoy the evening most pleasantly.

Rev. and Mrs. Tilley, of Georgia, are spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Jno. R. Foster. We were very glad to have Bro. Tilley worship with us in the Sunday evening service.

Bro. R. G. Hornaday suffered a great loss by fire on the morning of August 3rd. His large barn was destroyed, including feed and some farm implements, his stock being saved. We presume the loss is covered by insurance.

Aug. 12, 1912. C. B. W.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

Bro. Cecil met with us once more this evening. He preached such an appropriate sermon for the time, using as his subject, "Self Examination." Although it was hot, I believe every one of the hearers was touched, by the attention they gave him. We also had the administration of the Lord's Supper.

Our Sunday school attendance for the last six weeks is as follows: July 7, 67; July 14, 71; July 21, 82; July 28, 63; August 4, 83; Aug. 11, 84; average, 75.

Our Philathea Class is progressing nicely. Our number of pupils has increased from ten to sixteen. Each pupil has something to do and seems to be so enthused over it. The Philatheas entertained the Junior and Senior Baracas last Thursday night, a week ago, at the home of their teacher, Miss Florence Hughes. After song by class and prayer by Mark Witty each class had its business meeting. We entertained the Baracas with songs, music, and a recitation, "The Reward of Faith," by May Sharpe. Our refreshments were then served, which consisted of ice cream, sherbet, cake, and punch. The farewell song was "God Be with You Till We Meet Again," followed by a short benediction by Mrs. Arthur Hughes.

Our church problem has not been settled yet.

We ask your prayers for Mr. W. F. Clarida's mother who is very near the point of death. May God console her dear children and guide them also to that beautiful home where she is going to await them. We are glad to report that Mr. Ferguson's little son, who has been sick with fever, is improving slowly.

Aug. 11, 1912. Reporter.

Kistler's, Cleveland Circuit.

Our protracted meeting commenced last fourth Sunday. We had a very good meeting. The church was much revived. We had a glorious revival. There were ten or twelve conversions and no accessions to the church at all.

Rev. Bro. Braswell was our help. We certainly did appreciate having Bro. Braswell with us. We all think he is a fine preacher, and hope to have him with us again.

Pray for us that we may all do our whole duty.

Our dear pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, will fill his regular appointment as usual next fourth Sunday.

Lolan Ivester, Reporter.

Canaan.

Our meetings are on the fourth Sunday. Last fourth was Children's Day. I like Children's Day very much. I think it will help them to speak in public, and that is one thing we all need. We need men and women who are not afraid to get up and talk for the right, and that without fearing any one. We like to see them get up and stand for the right, though all else are against them. It may be some of them will be called to preach, and it will be a great help to them to get up before a congregation. I don't think we could do any better than to teach them every thing that would help them here and hereafter, and if they should not be preachers, we need speakers who are not afraid to get up before a congregation and tell them their duty without being scared or excited in the least. A Reporter.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.

Our special meeting commenced the first Sunday in August with Rev. J. A. Burgess as pulpit help. Bro. Burgess did finie work preaching to us the same old gospel story. We believe that the church was greatly revived, and some found peace with God upon the terms of the gospel. May the Lord ever bless him and use him for his glory and the salvation of lost souls.

Bro. Ashburn is now conducting a special meeting at Ebenezer Church, and if it is the Lord's will he will be engaged in this work at different churches for several days. Pray that God may bless him.

Our Children's Day came off the 4th Sunday in July. The children did well, the collection $10.00. Much credit to the children and young people who took an active part in training them.

M. P. Chambliss.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

Our Bethel meeting closed Thursday afternoon of last week. It was a very helpful and delightful meeting. Bro. Taylor's preaching gave great satisfaction, and he won the love of all. Bro. T. J. Ogburn was with us three days as a visitor. He preached once to the great pleasure of his many friends. There were five conversions and the church was graciously revived. We will receive five members as the result of the meeting—three having already joined and two other names are in hand.

On last Friday at 8:10 A. M. our dearly beloved brother, Rev. J. R. Dwiggins, of Stokesdale, passed to a glorious reward. Funeral services were held at Flat Rock Saturday at 3 a m. An immense concourse of people were present, giving evidence of the love and esteem in which he was held. An obituary will appear next week.

Pearl Vaughn, one of our brightest and best little girl members of Bethel, is quite sick with fever. May she be spared to her loved ones and to the church.

Remember our Flat Rock meeting the fourth Sunday in this month, and pray for a great revival. Remember the quarterly conference next Saturday at Palestine.

Piney Grove, Siler City Circuit.

Since I last reported we have held our children's day service. The children all did remarkably well. Quite a number spoke complimentarily of the occasion. Bro. Bowman was present and gave us an address on Foreign Missions which was very much enjoyed by us all. Some time previous to the occasion, Bro. Bowman had offered a Sunday school reward pin to all of our school who would collect as much or more than 50 cents for Foreign Missions. Twenty-three of our bright little boys and girls won a pin. Everyone who tried tried succeeded. Our collection was very good, amounting to $12.87.

We have just finished painting our church, which adds very much to its appearance. We also have enough in money and pledges to purchase a new organ. Hope the pledges will be paid in soon, so we can order it in the very near future.

Our special meeting convenes the first Sunday in September. Let every Christian pray for a glorious revival of religion in our church, for we feel that it is very much needed. Rev. W. M. Pike is Bro. Bowman's pulpit help. We extend to Bro. Pike a hearty welcome among us.

Mrs. C. A. Cooper and little son are spending a few days with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Reed, at Falston, N. C. A good rain would be welcomed by every one in this section, as the crops are parching up. Mrs. J. A. Cooper.

Mill Grove, Stanley Circuit.

This Circuit is in fair condition. We have a first class pastor. Bro. Reynolds is a zealous Christian gentleman, and a power in the pulpit. He is a fine instructor, filled with the Holy Ghost. He has power with God and is convincing to those who hear him. Our people are highly pleased to have him and always glad to meet him and hear him preach.

Mill Grove is looking forward to the camp meeting third Sunday in August with much pleasure. We are looking for and expecting a glorious time on account of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the ingathering of souls into the Kingdom of God, and the reviving of every believer and worker in the vineyard of the Lord. Pray for our meeting that many souls may be saved.

M. C. Garmon, Reporter.

Eden, Halifax Circuit.

Our special meeting at Eden closed Thursday afternoon. It was a good one, but am sorry to say it wasn't as good as it was the past year. About twenty-one professed faith in Christ, and only ten of these united with the church. Rev. L. W. Gerringer did most of the preaching, which was good and effective. Those that listened to his words and then resisted surely had hardened hearts. We were glad to have him with us during the meeting, and hope that he will help again next year and also glad to have him in our homes. I hope that everybody will continue to pray for him as he asked us to, as he was going to the mountains to continue to preach.

Children's Day service was observed Sunday morning. It was very good, the children doing their part well. Much praise is due to Miss Blanche Hardee for training the children. Bro. Woodberry Hardee and wife, Mrs. Fox, Misses Clara and Willie Finch are visiting Messrs. Junius and James Hardee. We were glad to have them worship with us on Sunday. Miss Finch aided very much in the music. We were also glad to have Bro. Whitaker of Enfield to preach for us Wednesday afternoon. I am glad to say we had a good crowd all the week. Would have had many more Sunday had it not been raining. The meeting at Lee's Chapel will begin third Sunday in August.

We all ask that Mr. Gerringer still continue to pray for us that we may hold out faithful, and also for the unsaved in this community that would not listen to his pleadings. Irene Hawkins.

Pageland, Monroe Circuit.

The Children's Day exercises were held an announced. The program was well rendered wtih a great deal of credit to the children and people. The congregation was large, and good behavior prevailed throughout the entire program, notwithstanding the church was crowded and quite a number could not get seats. The collection was very good. Our pastor, Bro. Self, also Bro. Long, made a very interesting talk, which was enjoyed to the fullest extent by all present.

Our pastor, Bro. Self, has gone to Antioch to assist Bro. Martin in camp meeting. Bro. Quick will preach for us Sunday a. m. at 11 o'clock.

Aug. 13, 1912. Reporter.

Cleveland Circuit.

Our third quarterly conference was held at Oak Grove on Monday after first Sunday in August. Bro. E. M. Ivester was elected delegate to Annual Conference, Bro. Joseph Morris alternate.

The Joint Commission of Cleveland and Lincoln Circuits decided to make four circuits of the two, subject to the approval of each quarterly conference. Quarterly Conference of Cleveland Circuit rescinded the action of the commission and moved to leave the matter to the wisdom of the Boundary Committee. The circuits have grown too large for two men to cultivate thoroughly. Methodist Protestantism is getting a strong hold on the people in this section, and we can ill afford to neglect this wide door of opportunity.

W. D. Reed.

Union Chapel, Granvile Circuit.

Children's Day service was held at our church on fourth Sunday in July. The children indeed made their day a success in every way, and thanks are due our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, and Misses Lillian Huff and Lessie Finch for training the children so well. On the same day our protracted meeting commenced with Bro. Gerringer as help. He certainly did some good work and fine preaching. His sermons improved every time from Sunday on until Thursday when the meeting closed. About twenty were reclaimed and converted, with ten accessions to the church. Our appreciation of Bro. Gerringer's help was shown in the most liberal contribution ever raised here for this cause. Our church contributed nearly two thirds of sum given by three churches on Granville Ct. Everybody gave this gladly, for all liked Bro. Gerringer and our best wishes go with him to his work.

The many friends of our S. S. Supt.,

Miss Irene Watkins, will be glad to know that she is getting on finely now.

Mr. W. H. Finch, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis at St. Vincent's Hospital, is now improving rapidly and will be home in about two weeks.

Our Ladies' Aid Society served refreshments at a Farmers' Institute some time ago and realized about $16.00 from this. The money goes for furniture for parsonage.

Mrs. N. G. Bethea left yesterday for western North Carolina to visit her mother for five or six weeks.

Mrs. C. P. Dickson and little son, of Richmond, are spending some time with her father, Mr. H. A. Finch.

Aug. 12, 1912. L. G. F.

Granville.

A report of our special meetings has been delayed for several reasons. Our first effort was at Rehoboth. Here we had a splendid revival. A number of conversions and reclamations, two accessions. The meeting closed Thursday afternoon after beginning second Sunday in July.

We began at Antioch the third Sunday and closed on Tuesday, owing to the busy time among the farmers. A good revival in the church and five professions. No accessions.

The fourth Sunday we began at Union Chapel with Childrens' Day services at ten o'clock. It was purely a children's affair, as there was not a child in it above twelve years of age. They rendered their recitations well. The singing was exceptionally good. Misses Lillian Huff and Lessie Finch had charge of the services. Collection $12.94.

The interest in the special services increased with each day, and the meeting continued till Thursday. Some fifteen or twenty professions and ten joined the church. Bro. L. W. Gerringer was my pulpit help in all these meetings, and it is needless to say his preaching was very acceptable. His plain gospel messages were given with power. I am proud of the fact that I helped to encourage him in his first efforts and licensed him to preach at Fairview about 8 years ago. He left us with the prayers and good wishes of the Christian people of this section.

During the meeting at Rehoboth on Wednesday at one o'clock the third quarterly conference for this charge convened. A very good turn out. All churches represented. Bro. John Floyd is our delegate to Annual Conference, Bro. Ollie Powell alternate.

Our next and last special meeting will be at Mt. Carmel beginning the second Sunday in September. Bro. Ashburn is to do the preaching. We are expecting a good meeting. Pray for us.

Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, N. C., August 13.

Concord.

Bro. Lindley filled his regular appointments Sunday. He gave us an excellent sermon both morning and night. He will be away next Sunday to assist Bro. Pike in a meeting at his home church.

The outside work of our church is almost completed, and we hope to soon see the inside completed. Our new bell has come now and we were glad to hear it ring, as our old one was broken and we could not use it.

We organized a Ladies' Aid Society on August 5th with 15 members. We met at Sister S. H. Teeter's on last Monday night. An ice cream supper will be given by this society on next Saturday night on the lawn of No. 2 school building for the benefit of our church.

We are planning to hold our Children's Day exercise on next Sunday night, but are sorry our pastor canot be with us.

We were glad to have Bro. T. R. Alexander, who has been sick, worship with us again Sunday. Sister L. H. Sides is on the sick list, but hope she will soon be well again. Reporter.

Halifax Circuit.

On the first Sunday in August we observed Children's Day at Eden. Miss Blanche Hardee had faithfully trained the children, and the service was a success in every respect. The children did well and the music was good. Miss Hardee and her assistants deserve a great deal of credit for the service. Collection for foreign missions amounted to $8.00. After the children had finished their part of the service Bro. D. W. Hardee of Henderson made a "rousing" speech for the Orphanage and about $50.00 was pledged.

In the afternoon of the first Sunday we began our special meeting at Eden. Bro. L. W. Gerringer did all of the preaching except two sermons and did it well. Bro. Gerringer is already a fine preacher and the people were delighted with his work. The house was crowded every day until the meeting cloesd on Thursday afternoon. There were 21 professions and 10 united with the church. The church seemed very much revived and we are hoping that the good work may go on. Rev. C. L. Whitaker was present one day and preached in the afternoon to the edification of us all.

The new pews have been put in the church, which adds a great deal both to the appearance and the comfort of the place. Also a well has been bored on the church lot and a pump put in which is a great convenience.

The third quarterly conference convened at Bethesda Friday, August 9, at 11 o'clock. Every church represented. Financial condition of the work fairly good. Bro. J. W. Hardee was declared elected delegate and Bro. B. F. Lewis alternate, to the next Annual Conference.

J. E. Pritchard, Pastor.

Tablernacle.

Our special meeting commenced on the first Sabbath in August at 11 a. m., with a prayer service conducted by Rev. J. F. McCulloch and preaching in the afternoon conducted by Bro. McCulloch, and he was heard gladly by a good congregation. The meeting continued until Thursday evening, and we closed with communion service. Bro. Bethea was with us and did the preaching [illegible] Sunday, and he did it well, and his stay among us was pleasant to all, and I think it would be agreeable with the people for him to come and stay as long as a year some time. There were fourteen conversions and eight accessions, and the church revived some. The attendance was fairly good, but not what it ought to have been. Sickness interfered somewhat.

One more meeting to hold, and I am expecting a good meeting there. Our meetings have been good so far, and I hope to close up the year with a good report from Tabernacle Circuit for 1912, and will be able to do so if all the membership will be faithful to their church vows for the next three months.

August 14, 1912. C. A. Cecil.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

If the number of Programs sent you to be used in the observance of Orphanage Home Day is not enough to supply all the churches, please notify me, stating the number that you want, and I shall be glad to mail them to you at once. We want all the churches to be supplied with this Program.

Pearl McCulloch,
Cor. Sec. W. H. M. S.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Card of Thanks.

We take this method of thanking our neighbors and friends for their kindness shown to us during the sickness and death of our beloved mother, Vandelia McPherson. Her Children.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Proverbs, Chapters 22-28.

BACK HOME.

(Written by request)

O, I want to go back, dear mother,
Just to see once again our old home -
The old home once so near, now so dear,
About which, when a boy, I did roam
Through woodland, across streams, o'er meadows,
And around the old mill I would play
Till nightfall would summon me homeward
Where with thee, dear mother, I would stay.

For long years I've been gone, dear mother,
Away from our old home and from thee;
And I'm told time has wrought many changes,
So the thought now brings sadness to me;
But there's nothing more sad than knowing
That a change has been made that I feel;
Now there'll be no mother to meet me.
If homeward, like a boy, I should steal.

The lone years have crept by in silence
And stolen many things dear to me,
Yet, taking away you, dear mother,
Draws me closer to heaven and thee.
In my dreams I can see you smiling
When we meet, as of old, at the door,
But, waking, find you gone far away
From this world to stay forevermore.

I'm longing, dear mother, to meet you,
And my journey on earth is most o'er;
But it's not the old home I'm nearing—
It's the one on eternity's shore.
You'll be waiting, I trow, to meet me,
In that beautiful home in the sky,
Where there'll be childhood days and summer
And no parting and saying "Good-bye."

Victor P. Hammer.

Washington, D. C.

OBITUARY.

Rev. John Newton Garrett was born May 28, 1848, died at his home Yadkin College, N. C., July 29, 1912. Age 64 years, 2 months, 1 day.

Bro. Garrett had been a victim of heart trouble for several years, and blind. Away from home he was taken with a general break down, and came home to battle with the infirmities of the flesh for some four months. At last God claimed his own, and he was not, for God took him. There was three doctors with him, but there was no human aid that could relieve him. His suffering was intense, he endured with fortitude and courage. Oft times singing the old time revival hymns and praising God when so feeble in body that the end seemed near. Bro. Garrett's memory was clear, forgetting nothing, it seemed, up to the very last. He talked of the church and brethren. He desired to live if it could be the Master's will to meet once more in Annual Conference and visit all the churches he had served in the past. He felt he had a message for the people he had never had before as he had never been so long in death's door. Bro. Garrett served as an itinerant for seventeen years, never failing to go wherever sent and for twelve years receiving less than a support. I knew Bro. Garrett when I was a booy, he was on my home circuit then while I was a struggling school boy. I lived in his home. I came to be his pastor in 1910, for these years I have been his pastor, I have found him helpful, true, a sweet spiritual brother in our Master's service.

He leaves a widow, three sons, and three daughters, many relatives and friends to mourn their sad loss, but their loss is his eternal gain. He has joined the Conference of his faithful brethren who have preceded him to the glory land.

His funeral was conducted in his home by his pastor, assisted by Bros. Hunt and Totten. A large number of his relatives and friends were there to mingle tears and sympathy with the bereaved family. His remains were carried only a short distance from where he lived, suffered and died, and laid to rest in Yadkin College cemetery to await the resurrection.

May the bereaved not mourn as those who have no hope. If you are faithful, you will meet again.

H. L. Powell, pastor.

Ulis F. Phillips, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Phillips, was born April 16, 1911, died July 29, 1912. Age one year, three months, and 13 days.

Ulis was a fond and interesting child, full of cheer and life for the home, the idol of grand parents.

Ulis fell a victim to disease and only lived a few days. All was done that could be, but God saw best to remove it from earth to heaven. Why mourn, dear ones, for little Ulis; he is now with Jesus, safe from trial, temptations, and sorrows of life. He will be at the beautiful gate watching for you.

Funeral services kept by pastor, assisted by Rev. D. R. Williams in the home after which the remains was taken to Shiloh cemetery where earth received it back to molder into dust and await the resurrection day.

May God bless the bereaved parents and help them to bow to God's righteous will and be prepared to say "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be His name."

In sympathy, the pastor,

H. L. Powell.

Helen May, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clodfelter, Lexington, N. C., was born May 14, 1912, departed this life July 30, 1912. Age, 2 months, and 16 days.

Helen May was born a little sufferer and remained only a short time on earth.

Funeral kept by pastor, remains carried to Bethesda cemetery and laid to rest. Her spirit went to God who gave it. The little life commenced on earth will unfold in heaven. The home where little Helen budded is lonely, and earth sadder, but heaven nearer and dearer because she awaits the dear bereaved parents there.

May the father and mother prepare to meet her on the other shore where sickness, sorrow, and death are felt and feared no more.

In sympathy,

H. L. Powell.

Mary J. Clinton, daughter of Tarpley and Matilda Pickens, and wife of W. T. Clinton, whom she married July 10, 1873, was born Feb. 23, 1847, and died at Weaverville, N. C. June 27, 1912. She was converted during the ministry of Rev. W. C. Kennett, at Swannanoa M. P. church in 1865, and throughout the remainder of her life was a most consistent and earnest Christian.

For very many years she was the nurse of the community in which she lived, and many an one by her blessed ministry, constant and devoted at the sacrifice many times of her own comfort, owes to her restoration to health.

Her funeral was held in the Methodist Protestant church at Weaverville, the sermon being preached by Rev. J. S. Williams, Chaplain of the city of Asheville. Her body was laid at rest in the College cemetery beside that of her husband, while her soul stood triumphantly in the presence of the Lord whom she served so long and so well.

C. W. B.

—Mrs. J. M. Lloyd writes under date of August 12:

"My mother, Mrs. Mattie J. Blackwood, passed away yesterday at 8:10 p. m., while sitting talking to a friend."

Sudden death, but not so sad when it comes thus to those prepared for it. Mrs. Lloyd has our sympathy.

THE ORACLE

"Yes, some folks say that I am 'most as good as a newspaper. Sewin' as I do in so many places, I do hear all that's goin' on, an' I—You want this little flounce cut o n the bias or straight? Which is the most fash'nable? Well, some has 'em one way, an' some the other. Some goods cuts to better advantage bias, an' some—You heard about Si Trimpy an' Lucindy Springer stealin' a march on their neighbors an' gittin' married night before last? I reckon it didn't surprise no one very much, although some did think the Widder Haight would win out in the race for Si. If he don't treat his third wife no better than he did his other two, the Widder Haight can thank her lucky stars that Lucindy got Si instead of gittin' him herself. It'll be something like a little fairy story I heard about two little drops o' water runnin' along side by side in a little mountain stream, an' one turned to the other an asked: 'Who be you anyhow?' Then the other drop o' water says: 'I am a tear-drop from the eye of a maiden who has lost her lover.' Then the other drop o' water says in a still more cryin' sort of a way: 'Alas an' alas! I am a teardrop from the eye o' the maiden who got him!" I wouldn't be none surprised if Lucindy had occasion to bawl more for gittin' Si than Elizy Haight has to bawl for losin' him, although of course I want to be charitable. When it comes to downright meanness, Si Trimpy is the beateree. You remember how when his first wife died he wouldn't let 'em put her in her coffin with anything but the waist o' black taffity silk on. He said that nothin' would show above the waist when the folks come forward to look at her at the fun'ral, so there was no use havin' the skirt o' her black silk on. I reckon Lucindy will git it now. I made that dress sixteen years ago come October, an' Maria (Si's first) had saved money ten cents at a time for fifteen years to git it. When Si found out she had the money, he done his best to git her to buy a corn-sheller with it, but for once she stood out ag'in him an' got the dress.

"No, I don't think I'd put the lace criss-cross on this sleeve. Seems to me it would—Who's that goin' by? Old Pap Bowers, ain't it? Looks like his roan mare. I sewed at his house two days last week. A sister o' his over Zion way died an' left Pap six thousand dollars, an' the first thing he got with the money was as handsome a black-an'-white foulard silk for his wife as I ever made up. Shows the difference between him an' old Si Trimpy. Mis' Bowers had the minister to supper one day when I was there, an' she had four kinds o' jell, an' three kinds o' preserves, an' two fruit butters, besides honey an' marm'lade, for supper. She had five kinds o' cake an' three kinds o' pie, to say nothin' o' floatin' island, an' sweet pickle, an' watermelon rind pickle, an' land only knows how many kinds o' cold meat an' 'scolloped oysters an' rozberry tarts, an' the minister with a weak stummick! I didn't see no great kindness in her tryin' to founder the poor man, and I thought to myself that it was no wonder his sermon fell off some the next day. Seems to me that if I was you I would have a good deal o' fullness in the back o' this dress to sort o'—I reckon you've heard that they nave twins over at Job Henly's? Job calls them the 'twinses'—a boy and a girl. Seems to me I'd ruther had 'em both one or the other. They'd be so much more comp'ny for each other when they grow up. I heard he was going to call 'em William and Helen for Pres'dent an' Mis' Taft, an' then have have their pictures taken an' send em' on to the White House. I reckon he thinks that the Pres'dent an Mis' Taft will come right on to see 'em, for you know that Job ain't got more wit than the law allows him. Ever hear about the way he repaired his barn? The boards was all rotted off for three or four feet from the ground up at the end o' the barn, an' Job repaired it by rippin' off boards an' puttin' the good ends down, an, of course that left a big hole up in the peak o' the barn for the rain to blow in on the hay—the skeesicks! It would hev been just as well if they had given you a leetle darker shade o' sewin' silk to work up this goods with. Still, I can make it do—They say Jim Plummly has sold his wood lot an' got three thousand for it, and he thinks o' buyin' an auto with the money. He'd better think twice before he does that. You know how Sam Harley put a thousand dollars into an auto, and the first time he went out alone in it, it upset and flung Sam and his wife and their four children out right slam-bang into a great big hornets' nest by the roadside. They said you could hear the young uns bawling two miles away. Them that wants autos can have 'em. Give me my own legs. Jerry Pace got him one, an' it—Heard ab ut the Perrys havin' a stylish city cousin come to visit 'em with a fiery red hobble skirt dress on, an' when she went out into their paster alone two turkey gobblers an' the king o' the herd made for her, an' she couldn't run, an' so fell down in a faint in a pool o' water with green scum all over it? If Perry an' his hired man hadn't hev happened to hear her screechin' an' raced into the paster with clubs, I reckon it would hev went hard with her. Any one that will wear a hobble skirt of any color deserves all they git, says I.

"You seen the Hadlen's ne parlor set they got from a mail order store? No two chairs the same color, an' the sofy another color. It's this crinkly plush, and they got new lace curtains to go with it, an' a purple rug with a pink cow an' a green horse in it. I reckon they'll be so set up they won't speak to common folks—Did you hear about the caper old Ben Tower over in Peekville cut up one day last week? He had been a little sick, an' went into a kind of a trance, so that they thought he was dead, an' they had him all laid out, an' a lot o' his kin got into a fuss over his prop'ty, and he come to an' skeered 'em most to death by comin' at 'em with his old hick'ry cane an' chasin' 'em all off the place. What they said made him so mad he went to town next day an' made a new will, [illegible]ive all he had to an orphan asylum. They said his nephew, Jed Perkins, was so skeered he run into an open cistern, an' was most drowned before they could git him out.

"Well, if I don't talk less an' sew faster, you won't have this dress to wear to Lutie Beane's weddin' on Thursday. It's goin' to be an awful nice affair. It took me three weeks of stiddy work to make her things, an' if you don't say her weddin' dress is a beaut I miss my guess. Of course I won't even hint at what it's like, for Lutie don't want any one to know until they see it on her.

"Now I must thread up the machine an' git to work in dead earnest. Of course I can talk an' sew at the same time with hand sewin', but when it comes to runnin' the machine an' talkin' at the same time, I can't do it. Hand me that spool o' white cotton, will you, please?"—J. L. Harbour, in Zion's Herald.

—The children had written compositions on the giraffe. They were reading them aloud to the class. At length the time came for little Willie to read his. It was as follows: "The giraffe is a dumb animal, and cannot express itself by any sound, because its neck is so long that its voice gets tired on its way to its mouth."

—An excellent story of the endeavors of a teacher in an infant school to convey to her pupils the use of the hyphen is told. She wrote on the blackboard the word "Birds'-nests," and, pointing to the hyphen asked;

"What is that for?"

A short pause, and then the smart youngster of the class piped out:

"Please, ma'am, it's for the birds to roost on."

THE GREAT ANIMAL SHOW.

Nancy hugged the gray kitten tightly and looked reproachfully at the boys. "Cats are just as smart as dogs," she declared.

"They are not," said the boys briefly.

"Yes, they are, too!" said Nancy, stamping her small foot angrily and showing the tip of a little red tongue, I regret to say.

"Why, Nancy," said William condescendingly, "all cats can do is to catch mice, while dogs can hunt and guard the house and—er—"

"Bite," supplied Nancy sweetly. "The other day I saw your old Major chase a peddler out of the yard, and the man said he was going to—"

"Here come the twins," interrupted peace-loving Richard. And, sure enough, two merry children, mounted on the shaggiest of [illegible] Shetland ponies, came trotting across the lawn.

"We heard Nancy and William quarreling way down the street," they shouted.

"Janet," said Nancy quickly, "aren't cats as smart as dogs?"

"Of course, Peter, you agree with me," said William confidently.

Peter and Janet looked at each other, and then broke into peals of delighted laughter.

"Isn't that funny, Peter?" gasped Janet.

Peter nodded, for he was laughing so hard that he was red in the face.

"Now, Nancy," begged Janet, " do stop scowling and listen. You know last year we had a lawn party to help the Floating Hospital; but this year we are—"

"Let me tell them," begged Peter. "We are going to have the biggest animal show on earth."

"Show them the bill," commanded Janet.

Peter proudly unrolled a large sheet of paper, while William read aloud: "Big animal show to help the babies! Splendid parade! Trained animals! Refreshments for sale! Admittance, with animal, 10 cents. Admittance without animal, 25 cents. Come one, come all! Twin Acres Farm, Saturday at 2 o'clock."

"And mother says," laughed Janet, "that all of you are to come over Saturday and spend the whole day. And the reason we laughed, Peggy, was because we want you to show your gray kitten, and of course old Major will have to do his tricks."

William and Richard and Nancy were all laughing hard enough to suit the happy twins.

"Mother said you three could invite any one you liked," concluded Peter, helping Janet politely on her shaggy pony again. "You know we want to make twenty-five dollars for the babies if we can."

William and Richard and Nancy waved a merry good-by while the twins trotted away to tell more of their friends about the poor litle babies who are cooped up in the hot city all summer, and about the boat that would take them down the harbor.

All the children of Lancaster talked about the great animal show from morning to night, but Nancy's active little brain was busy on the problem as to how she could prove the gray kitten to be clever than wise old Major.

Everybody, even the great round sun, wanted to help on the great show, and the day was perfect. The parade began sharply at 2 p. m. Wise old Major submitted to be put on the back of Peter's gentle, shaggy star and proudly lead the procession.

The rest of the dogs followed. They were all on their best behavior, and each tried to walk like a four-footed gentleman. Nevertheless, they were all led by chains for the peace of mind of the cat section which came directly after. Some of the pussies were of a retiring disposition and jumped out of their owners' arms and ran home across lots. Nancy trundled her doll's go- cart in which the gray kitten comfortably sat. He had his best blue ribbon around his neck, and he knew that Nancy wanted him to stay still, so he lay on the cushions and purred and blinked his green eyes reflectively at the great yellow Angora who trotted beside little Bella Dunn and never looked to the right or left.

In the very middle of the parade walked Tony, the old hand-organ man with his monkey, Beppo. Tony played his best tunes, and Mr. Beppo frisked along as if he understood about the little white-faced babies. Behind Tony marched Roy Patterson with a wheelbarrow, in which was Polly Parrot's cage. Polly shrieked out a greeting to every one she saw, with a polite request for a cracker.

A very fat little boy dragged a wagon in which were a box of rabbits. His cart was adorned with the sign: "Buy a rabbit for fifty cents and help the babies." And after the show he proudly gave Janet three big half-dollars.

A red-haired, freckled-faced lad gravely displayed a small mud turtle, while a tiny negro boy felt very badly because the girls refused to march if he carried a green snake on his arm; so Janet let him ride her beloved Diamond, and she stood with the big people who reviewed the procession. She felt repaid when she saw the look of rapture on the little black face.

After the parade the girls all wanted to buy candy and lemonade; while the boys teased for rides on Star and Diamond, who ambled good-naturedly up and down the long avenue with their happy passengers.

The most exciting event of the day was the performance of the trained animals. Aunt Lucia Conant, who loved both little folks and animals dearly, announced that she would give a prize of five dollars to the cleverest performer.

Polly Morse was certainly wonderful with her gray squirrel. She put a nut between her teeth, and the little fellow frisked fearlessly onto her shoulder, pulled it out, ran off and ate it, and then came back for another.

Richard next appeared with two dainty white mice that were fully as tame as Polly's squirrel. They walked a tight rope stretched between two chairs, and then dived into their master's pocket for a lump of sugar.

Then old Major capered into the ring with a big rubber ball in his mouth. William threw the ball first high, then low, but it always landed in Major's mouth. Major liked to play ball as much as any wide-awake boy. After the ball game he played dead and refused to come to life until William whistled. Then he barked once for his flag, twice for the President, and three times for his country. He wagged his great tail when the children clapped, and jumped up and kissed William's face with his dripping pink tongue.

"Now waltz, old fellow, waltz," pleaded William. Major did not like this trick, and he looked steadily at the boy with his soft, brown eyes. "Waltz for the babies," said his master crisply. And this time the big dog stood up on his hind legs and took a few steps, then ran barking off into the crowd.

Nancy and the gray kitten came last. First she dressed the gentle pussy in doll clothes. The little girls were amazed at the sight of a cat in a white cap with strings and a pink silk cape. The gray kitten could not play ball; but after Nancy had pulled off the baby clothes, he jumped through hoops and sprang for a piece of meat which Nancy held high up in the air. Then Nancy held out a bunch of envelopes to Janet. "Will you please write your names on these as Janet passes them around?"

Everybody looked surprised, but all wrote their names as they were asked. Only Janet wrote "Mr. Gray Kitten" on hers. Then all the envelopes were thrown down in a heap before the gray kitten, who promptly picked out the one addressed to him. Nancy took it away from him and held it up triumphantly.

"William, will you please put them down again?" she asked sweetly.

William laid them down carefully and put the gray kitten's letter at the bottom of the pile. But pussy knew his. He pushed the others aside and seized his own letter again.

"Wonderful!" cried everybody. And Aunt Lucia smilingly held out a five-dollar bill to Nancy.

Nancy shook her head and stood on tiptoe to whisper a secret. Aunt Lucia laughed until Janet's mother passed over a bottle of smelling salts. Then she sat up and feebly offered the money to William, who was trying to smile over Nancy's victory.

"It ought to go to Nancy," he protested. Then Nancy whispered in his ear, and he suddenly became very merry.

Janet's mother seized laughing Nancy by the shoulders.

"Nancy Prescott," she said severely, "explain yourself this instant!"

Nancy held up the gray kitten's letter, tore it open, then handed it to her.

"Catnip," she sniffed. "O you naughty Nancy, to fool us so!"

William walked over to Janet when everybody was busy laughing and slipped the money into her hand.

"Major says: 'Give his to the Floating Hospital!'"

"Just like Major," said Janet contentedly. "And this just makes our twenty-five dollars for those darling babies."—Mary Davis, in Congregationalist.

A CALL FOR AN EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, 153-163 Institute Place, has invited all the evangelists of the United States to be its guests at a Conference planned for September 18-20. The idea is to get together for inspiration and a comparison of methods in order to encourage a strong forward movement in the fall and winter for soul-winning. The Dean of the Institute, Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., has been in correspondence for some time with leading evangelists, and as a result, the themes determined on for consideration include such timely topics as:

The Weakness of Present Day Evangelism.

How can the ministry be awakened to a sense of their responsibility?

The Theological Basis for a Great Revival.

How far are eccentric or extraordinary methods beneficial in promoting true revivals?

Which is the better for promoting evangelism, a central system or bureau, or individual initiative?

Which produce better results, union or Denominational Meetings?

What Truths should be emphasized in Day Meetings?

Evangelization of Cities.

Rural Evangelism.

Invitations and Remuneration.

The thought is to have the evangelists themselves do most of the talking, and the criticizing, if any of the latter is required, although a place is to be made on the program for a free expression of opinion on the part of sympathetic pastors.

The call speaks of the solemn obligation resting upon evangelists in the present condition of the churches, and closes by saying:

"We must all be willing to face the situation just as it is, confess our sins, seek a new cleansing, make sacrifices, yield ourselves to God, and get a new enduement of power."

The details of the Conference will be in charge of Rev. Parley E. Zartman, D. D., Secretray of the Extension Department of the Institute, who was for years connected with Dr. Chapman and the Evangelistic Committee of the Presbyterian Church. All who are interested are invited to address the Institute for particulars.

TRAGEDY IN HIGH POINT.—Last December a box was sent from Thomasville by express to High Point intended for Ollie Hoover. The express agent who directed the box by mistake marked it for "Charlie" Hoover. That mistake probably saved the life of Miss Ollie Hoover but brought fearful injury to Manager Busbee and Cashier Morton of the High Point express office, for the box contained an infernal machine which exploded as the box was being opened by Busbee and Morton. Busbee is in St. Leo's Hospital, dreadfully if not fatally burned. Morton's injuries are bad, but not severe. Suspicion points to Ed McIntyre, of High Point, a jilted lover of Miss Hoover. The fact that he has disappeared since the explosion adds strength to the suspicion.

—Miss Eula Hunter, daughter of Rev. A. L. Hunter, is very sick with typhoid fever.

—Bro. J. M. Weatherly, of Benaja, was in our city last Friday, and favored this office with a call. He is one of the nominees of Haw River Ct. for delegate to Conference.

—Rev. J. W. Frank and family took their leave of Greensboro friends a few days ago and set their faces toward Japan for a seven years' stay. Bro. Frank came in and paid his subscription to the Herald for two years in advance. He does not wish to forget or be forgotten by his Methodist Protestant friends. We hope for them a safe journey, a successful career in missionary work, and a sure return to loved ones here.

—Mr. Lanier Donnell, executor of the will of the late J. C. Roberts, has paid over to the trustees named in the will the $10,000 left by Bro. Roberts for an educational endowment, and a meeting of the trustees has been called for August 20, to be held in Greensboro, to decide how and where the money shall be invested. The trustees are Dr. F. R. Harris, of Henderson, Rev. W. F. Kennett, of Stokesdale, and A. B. Kimball, J. Norman Wills, and J. F. McCulloch, of this city. We understand that the entire estate was worth about $30,000. The remainder was divided among relatives of Bro. and Sister Roberts.

—Friendship has sustained a loss in the death of Bros. Louis S. Wright and W. P. Short. Obituaries may appear later. "Uncle" Luther Luts is still very sick. Few men of his age have such power of endurance.

W. D. R.

—A Sunday school convention of our Afro-American brethren recently met in Liberty, N. C., and at the close expressed its appreciation of the entertainment enjoyed by adopting the following, among other resolutions:

"Whereas the chickens have left the roost with haste and shed their feathery garments, and whereas we have proven to be the faithful consumers, resolved that the Convention tender a vote of thanks.

"Whereas the Banqueting Committee was so thoughtful in preparing a feast on the lawn for the pleasure of one and all, and whereas the monotony was broken in every respect by eating cream and cake until some were arrested with a peculiar disease called Hepatitis, and whereas we were blessed with even two saucers of cream at one time and ate until we could eat no more, resolved that we return a vote of thanks, and pray that as we furnished a feast materially, God may bless them with a spiritual feast fourfold."

A HINT FROM HAWAII.

The Kohala Midget, in giving an account of an auto-ride, has the following suggestive paragraph:

"We saw everywhere a unique expedient for drainage—roadside ditches leading to sink holes several feet deep, which carried the surface water down into the porous sub-stratum, and saved thousands of dollars' damage."

ENDEAVOR CARPENTERING

The floor of the church hall of the Aliwal Street Church, Durban, South Africa, was made of cement and proved too cold for the comfort of the feet in winter, and the deacons of the church did not care to go to the expense of putting in a wood floor.

The pastor, Rev. John Sinclair, president of the South Africa Union, suggested that the Endeavorers help. An estimate showed that alterations would cost about $150. The endeavorers proposed that they share this expense with the deacons, but the deacons could promise to supply only $50. With the aid of two young carpenters who belong to the society the members bought the wood and laid the floor.

There are always plenty of things of this nature that need to be done, and Endeavorers can do them if they will. This is one way to win the appreciation and good [illegible] the whole church.—C. E. World.

WANTED—LEADERS.

Wanted—leaders in every Christian Endeavor Society, in every union, in every state organization.

Wanted—leaders to show the way, to assume responsibilities, to bring things to pass.

Wanted—leaders who are consecrated, and devoted to the work, and who are unselfish.

Wanted—leaders who are not afraid of hard work.

Wanted—leaders who are not always seeking the back seat, the soft seat and the "easy berth."

Why do some societies die, or, what is just as bad, live at a poor dying rate? Because they possess a leader.

Why are others conspicuously successful throughout a long series of years? Because they posses a leader

I am weary of hearing of "peculiar societies," and of our "peculiar conditions." The trouble with your "peculiar society," is that it is a leaderless society.—F. E. Clark.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, AUG.28.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"The Gospel in South America and the Islands.". Acts 16:16—34.

Roman Catholics hold sway both in South America and the Islands about the continent. Whatever faults the Catholic Church may have in this country, its priests, its people and its methods are models as compared with those found in South America and the West Indies. There Catholicism is seen in its worst form. Priests are licentious and grasping. Virtue and honesty among the priests and educated natives is rare.

Protestantism first came to South America in 1555, twenty years after the founding of Buenos Aires, and it came, of all countries, from France. Just as the Puritans came to New England to escape persecution, so did a colony of French Protestants seek a new home in the New World. Nicholas Durand, vice-admiral of Brittany, was the leader of the colony which entered the bay of Rio da Janeiro in 1555. Seventy years before the Puritans came to England a second Protestant expedition sailed for South America. With this expedition Calvin sent two ministers and fourteen students. Durand changed back to Romanism, and introduced a condition of intolerance that was worse than that from which the Protestants had fled. Ten thousand Frenchmen were ready to emigrate if Durand had not proved recreant to his trust. The Portuguese and the Roman Catholic Church speedily extinguished Protestantism, using both fire and sword to accomplish their end. One wonders what the history of South America would have been if its Pilgrim Fathers had succeeded.

Robert E. Speer says: "There are, it is estimated, about 5,000,000 Indians in South America, 3,000,00 of them Quichua-speaking. For many of them the Catholic Church is doing nothing at all. And for many of the other peoples it does next to nothing. If it furnishes them with occasional worship and confessional, it leaves them utterly ignorant, providing no adequate schools, nor literature, nor vital inspiration. . . . Protestand schools are crowded everywhere, and might be multiplied indefinitely."

Writing of an evangelistic tour in Argentina, Mr. J. Stuart Dodington tells of visiting three villages where there are no schools, although there are hundreds of children among the three thousand inhabitants. The people live in conditions unspeakably squalid, and are steeped in every imaginable vice. "Outside of the door of the place where we slept the last night," writes Mr. Dodington, "the darkness was made an inferno until midnight with drunken orgies, ending by one man being stabbed to death and another with a second drunken brawl, when another man received his death-stab." Such conditions, not uncommon in South America, call for the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Society Islands.

"As early as 1816 efforts were made to evangelize the Society Islands. There were many trials. Hardships were abundant; afflictions were at every turn in the way. But God gave the victory. John Williams was the great apostle to the Society Islands. He won glorious victories there. Transformation was wrought as a result of his labors. He met a cruel death. The natives mistook him for a trader."

The New Hebrides.

Tongue can not tell the moral degradation, the superstition, the cruelty of the people on the New Hebrides. John G. Paton was the apostle to this region. He was the man born to the place and prayed into efficiency while a child. Caste was universal among the warriors, their wives and children belonging to no caste; and the women did the heavy work of the plantations while their lords fought or held cannibal feasts. Girls of ten, or even younger, were given in polygamous marriage, and infanticide was not uncommon.

The Fiji Islands.

"The very name suggests savagery. 'As savage as a Fiji Islander' has long been a term by which to measure moral depravity. Many lives were offered up for those people. Missionaries were eaten. Cannibalism in its most revolting type flourished in the Fijis. Different chiefs prided themselves upon the skill they had attained in cooking human flesh. Cross, Cargill, Hunt and Calvert suffered many hardships. At last they won a victory great and lasting. The Fiji Islands have been annexed to the kingdom of God's dear Son."

KEEP SWEET.

This is going to be a hot political campaign. We don't need to be a prophet to discover that.

It is going to sizzle, boil, snap, bang, explode. It is going to get more and more exciting to the very last.

Men will argue endlessly. They will call names more than they will argue. The nation's store of sarcasm already shows signs of giving out. Already we are in sad need of an importation of epithets from France.

Best friends will become estranged. Partners in business will cease to speak to each other. Churches will growl at the attitude of their pastors.

The newspapers will fulminate. Halls will be hired, and then packed full of oratory to the bursting point. There will be brass bands and torchlight processions.

Every citizen will be sure that his candidate is The Only, his party The Original, his platform The Safe.

Every one will claim to be the sole Simon-pure Progressive.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1912. NUMBER 42.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE PEOPLE OF OVERLAND CT.

Our curiosity has been aroused regarding these people. In the last sixteen years they have had fifteen different pastors. These pastors, nearly all of them have written some such expression as the following in describing the people of their charge: "We have on Overland Circuit some as good people as there are to be found anywhere." But this manifestly refers to only part of the people. No pastor has ever told us one word about the others. It is regarding these others that our curiosity is aroused. What kind of people are they? Are they indescribable? Or why has no one of the fifteen pastors ventured to attempt a description of them? Will the present pastor of Overland favor us with some account of these unknown people? It might do them good to see themselves as others see them.

GOD'S RELATION TO THE WORLD.

Much of the perplexity that people experience in thinking about divine providence and the question of answered prayers arises from a misconception of God's relation to the world. They begin with a conception that precludes providence and of course reach the conclusion that there is no providence.

A very common misconception is that the world is a great piece of mechanism completed and set going by God from which He stands apart and with whose running He cannot interfere except by miracle. They say it is absurd to expect God to stop the machine or change the mode of its working on account of some creature's interest. Such a view is heartless and and makes God heartless. As if the mere material mechanism were more to God than the interests of his sentient creatures.

Then there is the pantheistic misconception which identifies God with the world, making the earth beneath our feet a part of God, and robbing God of the glory of personality. If we begin with the hypothesis that there is no one to hear prayer, of course we must end with the conclusion that prayer is not heard and answered.

The scriptural conception of God and His relation to the world does not preclude a belief in special providence nor in answered prayer but invites and encourages such a belief. In this conception the world is seen to be an instrument constantly in the hand of God which He controls in the interest of His sentient creatures. "He sendeth his lightnings," "He sendeth the rain," "He giveth food," and other expressions represent God as the ever active one, acting through nature to advance the interests of living creatures, especially man. With this view in mind, there is no difficulty in believing that the Lord will answer prayer, if it be prayer of the right kind.

God is not blind force as the pantheists make Him, nor is He simply a great Machinist thinking more of the mechanism of the material universe than of the inhabitants of the world, as those who take a mechanical view of the world decide, but He is as the Scriptures teach, a loving Father, using the material world to advance the interests of His sentient creatures.

—Rev. R. E. Steele, of Lumberton, N. C., ended his life on Tuesday by taking a drug. He was a Presbyterian minister. For the past year he was president of the State Christian Endeavor Union. No cause is known for his rash act.

—The State Dispatch, of Burlington, having turned from Republican to Progressive, must appear before Judge Whedbee September 1[illegible] not be [illegible] of i[illegible] —Permission has been given for Mexican troops to pass over American territory to attack rebels.

—Mr. Z. V. Walser retires from the candidacy for governor on the Progressive ticket and Iredell Mears of Wilmington is named.

—Rev. D. R. Williams started to see a sick friend, in Burlington, but on reaching Greensboro he learned that his friend was already dead.

—Paul Peck, an aviator, was killed yesterday at Chicago as a result of attempting a special feat in the air. He had surpassed all others in the duration of his flights.

—In a few days there is to be an election over the issue of bonds for a new railroad to Greensboro to be known as the Greensboro, Northern and Atlantic. There have been a few expressions of opposition, but most of our citizens who have expressed opinion are favorably disposed, and some think it a great and rare opportunity which ought not to be neglected. Inasmuch as trains are to be running before the bonds are deliverable, and that in three years, it would seem that no great risk is taken in voting for the bonds, if it is evident that the road would be worth what the bonds would cost.

—The editor visited Friendship, Haw River circuit, for the first time last Sunday. He found a splendid new building (comparatively) and a congregation that appeared intelligent and appreciative. They manifested their appreciation of our effort both in words and deeds. The Monticello High School, surrounded by a cluster of good residences, is near by, and the principal, the professor of agriculture and perhaps other teachers were present at Friendship on Sunday morning. Bro. Weatherly announced that its Sunday school would resume its sessions next Sunday morning, there having been a suspense during special meeting season. Bro. and Sister Weatherly kindly received us in their home and entertained us during our stay. Bro. Raper, the pastor, was in Ramseur, resting and visiting his daughter, but he left his horse and buggy which we found to be just the thing for pleasant and safe

GENERAL BOOTH'S LIFE-WORK

By Commander Miss Booth.

Upon the occasion of one of his birthday celebrations my father observed: "I think I have done something with my life, something which I hope has made it easier for the poor, the suffering and the outcast to believe in God and in themselves." A writer, who reminds us of the incident would put the three last words of the sentence in italics,, on the theory that in them lies the secret of General Booth's success. But the truth is only a partial one; primarily, faith in the One above must be born and fostered, otherwise self-confidence would be of little avail. The writer referred to adds: "He is not only a believer in God; he is a believer in Man. He is a philanthropist—that is, a lover of mankind, in the real sense of the word. He has no use for a religion which tells people they must be content to be wretched—hungry, and cold, and miserable—here on earth, and look forward to say it is made up to them in Heaven.

"He announces cheerfully that we are all 'miserable sinners,' it is true. But he knows that the first thing those who are hungry need is food; and those who are homeless, a roof over their heads; and those who are despairing regular work and hope of a better time, not only in Heaven, but in this world, here and now."

I say it with a great deal of diffidence, because of the close relationship I bear the General, but this is approximately as correct a description as the average man of the world could put to paper. The "here and now" gospel, however, is not the only one which the General preaches. He works upon the basis of the essentiality of an entire change of heart, life, character, desire and will, as well as environment and circumstances, before any permanent improvement need be looked for. "Salvation from the heart outward" rather than "from the coat inward" is the demand made. Not "fruits rather than roots," but "fruits as the result of roots."

A newspaper published in Japan has said of him: "It was the miserable condition of the souls of men and women, and his burning desire to save them from eternal destruction that set fire to his intense love for mankind." The Buddhist writer struck the keynote of the General's preaching while describing the mainspring of his work for God and man. Few things, if any, have helped the General more to win souls, in my opinion, than the absence in his preaching of any

[illegible] he felt in his new re-
[illegible]sire, since he [illegible]rment as [illegible]d the termination of setting free the enemy's slaves and captives. In the age of smooth prophesying he has never feared to declare the whole counsel of God.

So much for principles, which must be thoroughly understood before a proper interpretation can be put upon a life-work. Now for the work itself.

It was truly remarked at the celebration of my father's eightieth birthday that "General Booth never joined any regular millitary organization—never fought in the ranks or in front of the ranks or behind the ranks in any of England's many wars. He has not been chief of staff to some civil potentate in order to secure a title—he has made it, as he has The Army.

"He found himself, eighty-four years ago, in the town of Nottingham, England, where he was born—a builder's son. Associations pervaded his environment not at all conducive to the rise of an embryo evangelist. There was Sherwood Forest —full of the Robin Hood legends and the deeds and misdeeds of his robber band. There was Newstead Abbey, with the gifted and satanic Lord Byron, reveling with his guests in all sorts of dissipation. No one would ever hit upon Nottingham as a likely town to produce an evangelist.

"But Nature has a way of 'evening up,' and the Bible says that God makes the wrath of man to serve Him. This obscure child born in the far-away stage-coach year of 1829, was destined (if anything is destined) to be the greatest living exemplar of all that his famous, and sometimes infamous, predecessors of that locality had not been."

His mother was a saintly and gentle soul, widowed when the boy was still young, thenceforward wrapped up in him. He had a careful home training. The family was of the orthodox faith, and William Booth, until he was fifteen, had scarcely dreamed that he would ever be anything else. But observe how fine are the threads that pull us this way and that, and how irresistibe is their decision! One night, going home he passed a Wesleyan chapel where a service was being held. He thought he would like to see what it was like, and looked in. Something about the ardent fervor of the worshippers aroused his interest. He returned for another meeting. The more he saw the more he was impressed. In the end he became converted, and at once asked for work, that he might share with others the peculiar satisfac-

first object of his industry to be his fellow man.. They gave him work in the slums, particularly a place called the Narrow Meadows—a misnomer if there ever was one, since nothing like greensward existed within miles, the region being packed with grimy and forbidding houses of the poorest classes. It was here, a beardless boy, without experience or training, lifting up his voice to some of the most melancholy wrecks upon the tide of life, that he served his apprenticeship for the career that life held in store for him, at times stoned and derided for his pains, offering a heart filled with sincere and absolute love of his kind, and taking the buffeting offered him with unruffled submission.

He was employed as clerk in the daytime; it was only in the evening after 8 o'clock, that he was free to preach. He must be at his work early in the morning, and his health was so frail that his friends often despaired of him, and a physician solemnly warned him against exposure or over-exertion. All these fears and suggestions he resolutely set aside, pursuing without hesitation the course he had carved out for himself, and looking calmly upon life or death—whichever it might mean for him— as long as he could win men to God and the path of righteousness. A young friend and coworker fell at his side stricken dead in the prayer-meeting. If all accounts were true, it should be his own turn next. With unconcern he viewed the imminent possibility; he would go when the Lord called him; meantime he would rest not, but save souls. He did not die, but his work gathered unto itself a greater intensity than ever. To him the only work worth thinking or bothering about was that of bringing souls to Christ. Unconverted men he looked upon as upon the crew of a vessel on the rocks in a storm. He and his helpers were the life-savers putting off in their boats. If they succeeded in reaching the wreck the poor creatures would be saved, otherwise they would be lost forever. No time to be wasted! Toil incessantly at the oar, fight the waves, get to the wreck; the next moment it might be too late!

This was just what life seemed to him. Saved men existed for no other purpose but to save other men. Nothing else was of the slightest importance in comparison. Every time a man or woman came with streaming eyes to the communion rail and knelt in penitence the heart of William Booth overflowed with a heavenly and ecstatic joy. Here was another soul saved from eternal pain, torn from the grasp of man's old enemy, rescued by the atonement of Christ— the blessed sacrifice po-

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1912 NUMBER 44.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

OUR LONG-DRAWN LAWSUIT ENDS SLIGHTLY IN OUR FAVOR..

Some of our readers will recall that we became involved in a lawsuit with the Southern Railway Company some years ago. We had bought a piece of land for a college site near Pomona, just west of this city. We had consulted the officials of the railway company and been informed that if we bought the land they would not disturb us with shifting tracks in front of us. But we had not much more than bought until we were informed by them that they intended to locate a shifting yard on the land we had bought. We protested, but they went ahead. We instituted suit at once. This was nine years ago. We deferred filing our complaint and tried to secure an adjustment of our difference out of court. Each official would reply by referring us to another. We therefore directed our attorneys to file the complaint and push the suit. We were first represented by Hon. Levi M. Scott and Hon. R. D. Douglas, the present postmaster of the city. Later Mr. Charles E. McLean, Judge R. M. Douglas and Hon. E. J. Justice were added to our force of attorneys. The case was first heard by Judge Justice, father of Hon. E. J. Justice. He decided in favor of the rail road company. We appealed to the Supreme Court of North Carolina which tribunal recognized that we had ground for our claims and sent the case back for another trial. Judge Jones was on the bench in the next hearing. The railroad appealed to have the case transferred to the federal court. The matter went back to Raleigh to the Supreme Court again who consented to the transfer to the federal court. In this court the railroad has had the trial postponed from time to time for various causes.

Recently our counsel learned that the railroad people were disposed to have the matter settled, and advised that it be settled by compromise, if possible. To this we consented, and an agreement was reached to the effect that the Southern should pay all the court costs and pay us the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars. Last week the federal court clerk, Bro. J. M. Millikan, gave the cheque for the amount and the case was ended. After paying our attorney fees and some other expenses we had but little left, except a large fund of experience.

We have learned not to go to law except when it is absolutely necessary, and we have also learned somewhat as to the manner of procedure when it necessary.

It may be a matter of surprise to our readers that a simple question of land title should be held up so long. We would say that this was not a simple question, but really a very knotty and perplexing one. We bought the land and thought it was ours. But the railway people also claimed it as theirs by a title given to the North Carolina Railroad Company when it acquired its right of way. We were aware of their claim when we purchased and really "jewed" the seller down $200 in view of the probability of having to defend our title in the courts. The language of the conveyance to the North Carolina R. R. Co. is not clear. At first reading one would think that it gave us no ground at all, and a number of lawyers to whom we showed the original grant to the rail road company were of the opinion that we could make nothing by going to court, or in other words that we had no case. The first to see it otherwise was Mr. R. D. Douglas. We spent a day in the Supreme Court library in Raleigh looking up court decisions in analogous cases, and found that in other states contracts substantially like the one in question had been construed in favor of the land owner and against the railroads. This gave us additional hope. But our hopes would have been dashed had we run across one certain decision of our own Supreme Court. In the case of another railroad company which had employed exactly the some form of contract as that used in securing the right of way for the N. C. R. R. Co., the Court had decided in favor of the railroad. Consistency required that they decide the same way in this case. But one circumstance was in our favor, and this partly saved the day for us: the N. C. R. R. had been leased to the Southern and the Southern could only claim the N. C. R. R. Company's interest in this piece of land and could only use it for the business of the N. C. R. R. In order to be free to use the shifting yard for all the trains that passed this way, they must settle with us.

When we began this suit, Mr. L. M. Scott was still vigorous mentally, at least. Before the suit had ended he had died at the advanced age of 85. The delays of the courts, the necessary and unnecessary expenses, do not recommend law suits.

We trust that our Supreme Court will not hold us in contempt if we remark that other authorities have rendered decisions in similar cases that seem to us more reasonable than the decision that the option given to a railroad company to take all the land it needs for tracks, yards, depots, etc., up to the limit of 100 feet from the track is an option to take and keep on taking no matter how much time has elapsed until the whole hundred feet have been taken. A common sense understanding of such a paper given before the railroad is laid out and constructed is that it is intended to convey as much land as is needed, not exceeding 100 feet, for the original construction of the road with its depots, yards, etc. If future developments of business make additional lands necessary, it is reasonable to expect the railroad company to make a new deal for it.

But if the Supreme Court has gone wrong, consistency will keep it going wrong. The only remedy is for the people to elect men as Supreme Court judges who will reverse the decision of the past, as we have not the recall of judges.

"THE FOUNTAIN"

"There Shall be a Fountain Opened for Sin and for Uncleanness."
Zech. 13:1.

Beneath the Cross of Jesus kneeling,
Dawns on my soul the endless day;
There, deeper than all tides of feeling,
God doth His boundless grace display;
Thence flow the mystic waves of healing;
There all my stains are washed away.
God wrought for man, his love forth-shewing,
When Moses smote the rock of old;
And, lo, through Israel's camp on-flowing,
Outbreak the longed-for flood and rolled,
New strength, new, joy new life bestowing,
On the lips that quaffed it, pure and cold.
God wrought for man, mankind redeeming,
When Christ was pierced by Roman spear,
And, o'er the thirsty world down-streaming,
Forth gushed a fountain cool ana clear,
Till souls, beside those waters gleaming,
Forgot in joy sin's desert drear.
Beside that well for aye abiding,
New strength, new joy, new life I gain;
Within that cleft securely hiding,
No care can cark, no sorrow stain;
Here rests the blissful soul confiding,
Here faith the healing draught can drain.
Lord, let my heart, this gift receiving,
Beat one glad anthem to Thy praise;
And may the stream, Thy pierced heart leaving,
Refresh and heal me all my days:
Thus by Thy blood my life retrieving,
A psalm of endless thanks I'll raise.

—After the Icelandic of Hallgrim Petursson, 1674 A. D.

POWERLESS RICH MEN

The story is going around that a rich man in America turned away from a window near holiday time with a sigh, saying that he only wished there were something he could not buy.

The story sounds apocryphal. A man with sense enough to make large wealth knows it will not buy everything. It is only people who have inherited wealth, which takes no brains, and those of us who see how many things we could do if we had more money, who ever get the impression of the man at the window. There are some things out of reach of his wealth.

There is a simple little sheet of paper preserved in Washington with a list of names at the bottom, beginning, "When in the course of human events"; let him try buying that. There is a baby lying in the crib at your home; let him try buying that. A tramp on the street yonder can sit down with great relish to a heavy dinner of boiled cabbage, pork, mince pie, and a dozen more impossibilities; let him try buying that digestion. Let him offer a million dollars for a new pair of eyes, for the recovery of lost sight; he will die with his million, but without his eyes. One man did say that he would give two hundred million dollars for ten more years of life. He cannot have it on those terms.

No, some of the best things in the world are not to be had on the money basis. Happiness is no financial matter, or the rich people would be the happiest ones. The fact is, that many a washerwoman is happier every minute than the woman in whose laundry she works, and the office boy with a stinted noonday lunch gets more joy out of living than the head of the house with more money than he knows how to spend. People who cannot be happy wthout money would not be happy with it, and people who know how to be happy with money could be happy without it.

The amazing fact is, that so few people are genuinely and thoroughly happy anyway, and the rich people do not furnish their full proportion of the number. Let every man learn the secret of joy in his life wherever he is, and then he can use money or do without it.—C. E. World.

GROWTH BY CONFLICT

It is never well for any Christian to be at spiritual ease. An idle Christian life is one of the worst conditions for a soul to be in. He who prays that he may grow in grace, and at the same time does all that he can to keep from having any conflict with the foes of his soul, is grossly inconsistent with himself and with his praying. God most helps those who fight hardest to win victories over the forces which militate against their spiritual life. It is during such conflicts that the regenerated soul grows in capacity, strength and tenderness, as it never does in periods of utter peacefulness and gentle calmness.

The ideal which some Christians have is that of blissful freedom from everything which would disturb the serenity of the soul. They are great lovers of spiritual peace, and their happiest thought is that of believing that there is no need of one's having within himself any elements which conflict with the holiest of graces. But it is quite possible for one to have a deadly and damaging peace. What one calls peace of soul may be only a sluggishness of spirit. It may be only a paralysis of the heart. It may be a condition of inertia and non-progressiveness. A Christian is in a state of spiritual unsafety when he imagines that there is no sort of a foe within him which he needs to watch, that there is nothing in him which he needs to battle against. Paul, the spiritual giant, often waged a battle within himself. He refers to it in these words: "So fight I, as not beating the air: but I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage: lest by any means, after that I have preached to others, I myself should be rejected." Out of every conflict in himself he emerged stronger in his Christian manhood. Great struggles resulted in greater strength. In all of our spiritual conflicts let us pray for a victory which will be crowned with strength for God.—Rev. C. H. Wetherbe,

THE TOIL OF WOMEN.

In the July American Magazine, Ida M. Tarbell tells the life story of Carola Woerishoffer, a girl of rich parentage in New York, who absolutely refused to live in luxury on the money which was hers by inheritance, and chose to go through the real experiences of life which make for the upbuilding of genuine character. This girl, who was killed in an accident at the age of twenty-six, achieved a great work for women's trade unions before her death, but earlier in her experiences she worked for four months in a laundry under precisely the conditions that were imposed on the other workers. In fact, those who worked with her had no knowledge of her identity. Of this experience in the laundry Miss Tarbell writes, in part:

"As she was determined to shirk nothing, she was regularly at her tub or mangle or feeding machine at 7:30 A. M., and whenever the work demanded it she stayed on into the night. There were no provisions for seating in the long work period, frequently the rooms were practically unventilated, always more or less stifling from steam and damp. In some places she found neglect and uncleanliness adding to the disagreeable features inevitable in the industry. She worked days over unguarded machines where the girls told her cynically: 'You didn't get burned today or yesterday, but you sure will some time, every one does.' That she must have often suffered disgust, pain and fatigue is certain, but she makes no record of it. It is only by accident, indeed, that one learns that she was conscious that it was a hot summer! She was telling in her scrupulous, restrained way of the ventilating provisions in the different places she worked: 'In one place where the investigator dipped shirts in hot starch at a breakneck pace,' she says, 'she was first struck when she went out to lunch by the coolness of the day. That night she discovered that the thermometer had registered 96 degrees in the shade!'

"The entire naturalness of her attitude toward her fellow workers, her apparent unconsciousness that there were any differences between her and them, made it possible for her to fall at once into friendly relations. She was one of them. Dozens of little comments like the following show this: 'Upon entering a new place the investigator found, as a rule, a spirit of friendly interest and of cordiality, expressed occasionally in the accepted formula: "Say, you got a feller?" "Sure; ain't you got one?" "Sure." '

"Or take this: 'One of the ironers was eager to tell her past pampered life as a cook "off Fifth Avenue." "Sure, and it was a fine time I had there, but," she added with a sigh, "it was there I met me misfortune." "And what was that?" someone asked. "Me husband," she said; and then explained how it was through his illness that she had been brought upon her present arduous days. "Standing on your feet nine hours a day five days in the week when you are well on in life is no joke." '

"Her strict control of herself, the easy terms she fell into with the girls, gave her a reasonableness toward the work and an understanding of how and why they, as a rule, accept cheerfully and as a matter of course its hard conditions. That is, understanding, and not emotion, ruled her investigation."—Zion's Herald.

DANGEROUS TO THE SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Two dangers threaten constantly the splendid public school system of the United States—sectarianism and secularization. There are various people in the community—many, but not all, of whom are Romanists—who would, if they could, lay hand upon public funds and devote them to the support of schools which teach particular tenets and are associated with partisan interests. These intrigues, conducted for the most part with an unholy secrecy, must be detected by an alert patriotism and combated by the composite Christian mind of the community. But, on the other hand, it is just as much the duty of the Christian part of the nation to demand that public instruction be moralized, and to create about the public schools an atmosphere favorable to the culture of religion. We do not say that the great State universities are irreligious, or even nonreligious, but we believe that they may be made more religious. Between the extremes of sectarianism and secularization some mean may be found which will at once preserve the public schools from partisan control, and at the same time afford at least the religious climate in which each individual scholar may be assisted to grow normally and steadily according to his type.—Zion's Herald.

OUR SUPERANNUATES.

All of us who are in active work feel very deep love and reverence for our older brethren in the ministry who have blazed the way for us. Some of them are on the superannuated list, and unless they were fortunate enough to lay aside something for old age they are having to live on a very small pittance.

The delegate from Henderson, in conference session last fall, struck the key note, I think, when he said, "The North Carolina Conference ought to be ashamed of itself that it does not provide a larger sum for its aged ministers." I am writing this article to suggest that we increase the superannuate fund by 50 per cent. at the coming session of our Annual Conference.

This one assessment is exceedingly small on all the charges, and I believe the laymen of our church will approve the action if the conference will increase that assessment by one half. Our church owes that much and more to these fathers in Israel who have borne the burden and the heat of the day, and who now because of advanced years are on the inactive list. Poor Bro. Garrett, blind though he was, worked to the very last to support himself and family. I met him here on the streets of High Point one day. A little girl was leading him from door to door and he was selling books. He said, "Bro. Dixon, I am sick, I fear I shall have to go home." The next day he did go home and took his bed from which he was called to his heavenly home. A special call was made through The Herald for his relief in his last days.

I simply call attention to this one case to show that we as a church are not caring for our church fathers as we might do. Let us rise to the occasion and do better by them from this on.

Let others speak out on this subject.

A. G. Dixon.

—God lets men have their playthings like the children they are, that they may learn to distinguish them from true possessions. If they are not learning that, he takes them from them, and tries the other way: for lack of them and its misery, they will perhaps seek the true.—George Macdonald.

Teacher: "Now, children, which one of you can decline the word 'sick?' "

Lizzie (in a tragic voice): "Sick—worse—dead."—Judge.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER.

When a preacher goes to a circuit feeling degraded, and does not rally from it quickly, he spends an unhappy and fruitless year, eking out a miserable ministerial life with a longing for Conference in the Micawber hope that something will turn up.

But Methodist history will bear out this assertion, that there is no greater, no more honorable, and no more useful man than the successful circuit rider. He has a field of usefulness rich in possibilities, for he stands before the young rural life which rules the Church and the State in the next generation. Those country boys to whom he preaches are to be the leading lawyers, doctors, statesmen, teachers, and preachers of the future; and the moral and religious teaching he gives them in their youth will largely shape their ideals of life. Those country girls who hear his gospel are to be the social and literary leaders of the city life of the future; and his fidelity to the Bible ideals of womanhood will have much to do with their future fidelity to Christ in their social life. Therefore we assert that no preacher in our ranks needs culture, grace and good sense more than the circuit rider.—Texas Christian Advocate.

—Automobile drivers are subject to serious impairment of vision due to the constant strain on the eyes. Among the trouble is paralysis of the ciliary muscles, which may come on suddenly, causing a blurring of the vision. "If that comes while the car is going at full speed, the driver is fortunate if he can stop it in time," says a physician. "But the most serious penalty that follows abuse of the automobile," says the same physician, "is nervous breakdown. A man whose brain is fatigued with business cares cannot with safety substitute another form of mental strain for the needed relaxation."

—The doctors have a new way of treating broken limbs. Instead of the plaster cast, they hang a weight over a pulley at the edge of the bed to balance the pull of the muscles and keep the broken bones in place. The results are said to be better, as they can see the condition of the limb and there is less likelihood of shortening or bending the limb.

—An old darkey was convinced that a bill rendered to him by his butcher was not correct. He complained to the butcher, who said, "Sam, figures can't lie."

"I know dat," said Sam, "but liars can figger."—Selected.

"AND THE DROUTH CONTINUES, AND FIELDS PRODUCE NO BREAD, AND THE SICK ARE STILL SICK!"

The above words are quoted from our Henderson correspondent, T. T. H., in the M. P. Herald, of September 12, 1912.

I am always interested in whatever I see from the pen of Bro. T. T. Hicks, for more than one reason.

1st. I believe that Bro. Hicks is sincere.

2nd. That he is going to be in the right, as he sees it.

3rd. That he is an honest enquirer after the right.

4th. He was converted at one of my meetings, of which I trust he is not ashamed, as it was God's work and not mine. This was in 1872, when I was only a boy in the ministry. Hence I said, I am interested in what ever I see from his pen for several reasons.

Some men write so that we can read between the lines: I infer from Bro. H's letter, that he like some of us are under a cloud, or somewhat puzzled, to know why the Lord does not send us rain, and heal the sick, when so many prayers have been made for both. No doubt my good Bro. H. is about ready to cry out in the language of the psalmist, viz.

"Is the mercy of the Lord clean gone, and will He be favorable no more" etc. I want to say to my good Bro. H., that God never afflicts his people, or withholds his blessings without a cause! I am now called an old man; we have had I think two of the driest years I ever saw, and much sickness and many deaths! And I have heard many prayers and from different persons asking God for rain, and for the recovery of the sick; but as Bro. H. says, "And the drouth continues and the fields produce no bread, and the sick are still sick." The above are plain facts, and there is a cause for it, and as God does not withhold His blessings without a cause, it becomes us to look around and see if the fault is in us. I, for one, am fully convinced that the fault lies in us.

Doubtless we, I mean the people generally, have become too worldly minded. As evidence of this, the railroads in their owner's mad rush for greater dividends killed in the year 1909, according to a report of U. S. Interstate Commission, 2,610 and total number killed or wounded per day 213. And these casualties are steadily on the increase, as the years go by!

And like casualties are occurring in coal mines and other competitive works.

I remember reading not long since a conversation said to have taken place between a visitor to a certain large mill, where thousands worked, and the owner, and the visitor gazed upon that magnificent building, and then asked, "Have you no fire escapes?" "No, I have not. "Why not?" and the answer was—"Human flesh is cheap but fire escapes cost money!"

Here Bro. H. you have the key to why thousands of immortal souls are rushed off annually into eternity and many of them unprepared! Yes, greater dividends. Is is not reasonable to suppose that such men who value money, (dividends) more than they do souls and bodies of those for whom Christ died might like the Pharisees—"Make long (and loud) prayers, not only for" rain and the sick, with out ever receiving an answer from a just God, who says "As I have loved you, so ought ye to love one another."

But Bro. H., perhaps you will say very few of us own railroads, coal mines, or mills, and why would God withhold his blessings from us all? I answer by saying we are told in the great Book of books that "One sinner destroyeth much good." But while the masses of the people's hands are not red with the blood of those thousands that are murdered annually for money, or its equivalent, yes, I appeal to you as an able jurist, and ask, "Are not the most of us indirectly responsible, for these murders? Now, my Bro., let us call the court, and we are going to place your Honor on the bench as Judge, and a case is called, State vs C. and it is proved to your honor that A. killed B. and that C. could have prevented the murder by lawful means, but stood by and did not do it! Now, Judge, would you say C. is guilty? I am satisfied you are too honest to decide any other way than in the affirmative.

Just so, the great majority of us are more or less guilty, because we suffer these wholesale murders to go on annually when it is in our power to put a stop to it. "I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands." etc. See 1 Timothy 2:8. And God told the Jews, in the days of Isaiah, "When you spread forth your hands, I will hide my face from you; Yea, when you make many prayers, I will not hear; Your hands are full of blood." The Psalmist said: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."

There is something terribly wrong in and out of the Church; and in my judgment, our only hope for us all, is to love God, and our fellow man more; and the world less.

Geo. E. Hunt.

—The National W. C. T. U. Convention will be held at Portland, Ore., October 19 to 25.

TO THE PASTORS.

During the last two weeks I have tried to mail a personal letter to every pastor and to every charge in the Methodist Protestant denomination. Enclosed in these letters to the pastors are letters to every Sunday school superintendent on his charge as nearly as I could determine from the Conference minutes of 1911.

Some of these letters may be late in reaching their destination, and some may be mixed up on account of pastors changing charges in the conferences of 1912. I am hoping, however, that they will all reach their destination in time for a simultaneous collection on September 29th. I am anxious to see what our churches, Sunday schools, and individuals can do by one spontaneous effort for a cause that is so near and dear to the hearts of everyone.

Pastors, Sunday school superintendents, hear me! if your school and church cannot do more than give just the ordinary Sunday collections, won't you see to it that they give these,—Sunday school collections Sunday morning and church collections Sunday, September 29th.

A list of the names of Sunday schools, churches, and individuals responding to this appeal and making an offering in this simultaneous collection will be placed in the corner stone of the building now being erected.

This enterprise has been recommended and endorsed by the General Conference. It has been approved by individuals, churches and conferences throughout the denomination. I have heard nothing but approval and commendation for this the youngest institution of our loved church. Everybody recognizes its need, and is glad that an Orphan Children's Home is an established fact in our denomination. Now then, for an enterprise that we are united on will we make one united effort? Can the Methodist Protestant Church pull together? Or will some pastor, Sunday school superintendent, congregation, or individual weaken the church, hinder its power, and compell it to make a record by their refusal to co-operate? Perhaps never before in the history of the denomination has such a call come to the churches when every church, Sunday school, and individual have agreed to center their prayers and offerings on one date for one important object.

We believe the Lord is with us in these things for our Orphan's Home. There are those who are able to do large things for the cause, and we most firmly believe God is asking each one to do something. This request is made in such a way that it makes it possible for each one to do something. Therefore, we urge collections wherever Sunday schools

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1912. NUMBER 46.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

NOTICE!

Ministers and delegates who contemplate attending the next session of the N. C. Annual Conference, which convenes in Burlington, N. C. Nov., 21, 1912, send names at once to the pastor of Burlington church.

T. E. Davis, Pastor,

October 8, 1912.

—President Harper, of Elon College, utters a warning against the effort to make Baraca classes separate from the independent of the church. We think he is entirely right in his position. It may be possible in some cases to form and conduct Bible classes as independent organizations when it would not be possible to enlist the same persons in church or Sunday school Bible classes. In those cases the independent Bible class should be formed. But to undertake to lead church members out of their church Bible schools into independent classes is an entirely different and a very objectionable proposition. The mania for heading new movements seem to be responsible for many ill advised efforts. Fortunately most of these die in the course of a few years.

—Bro. Ogburn exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Abernathy, of Spring Garden M. E. church, last Sunday night. Bro. Abernathy gave us an eloquent discourse.

—Bro. Millaway is helping Bro. Curry at Haw River this week.

—Rev. J. E. Hartsell is very ill. Dr. Hartsell has gone to his bedside.

Rev. Lyman E. Davis,
President of Our General Conference.

PRESS COMMENTS ON DR. DAVIS'S LECTURE.

Dr. Lyman Edwin Davis will give his lecture on "The Kingdom of Common Sense" in the school auditorium, High Point, October 17, 8 P. M., for the benefit M. P. Children's Home.

The following press comments indicate the impression Bro. Davis has made at other places. We hope the High Point audience will be equally pleased.

"Dr. Davis uses the English language with much force and directness, and throws a great deal of warm and strong color into his sentences."—The Independent.

"Bright, sparkling, trenchant and attractive."—The Interior.

"A forcible thinker with the courage of his convictions."—Zion's Herald.

"The views advanced are those of a thinker, and are presented with clearness and discrimination."—Lutheran Observer.

"The ideas advanced by Dr. Davis will be found stimulating, healthful and deeply interesting."—New York Times.

"Last Wednesday it was the privilege of the students and friends of the college to hear two excellent lectures by Dr. Lyman Edwyn Davis. In the evening a large audience heard with much enjoyment his very entertaining lecture on 'The Kingdom of Common Sense.'"—The College World.

"A bright, fresh thinker, with a good vocabulary at his command.—The Pulpit Treasury.

A DREAM.

I dreamed, and in my dream I dreamed that I was asleep and dreaming,—dreaming a dream within a dream. And in this inner dream, I fell asleep again, and passed into another dream,—a dream of the third degree. In this dream, I seemed to pass into a still deeper sleep and into a more ethereal dream. Existence was a new thing to me, and I wondered. But my thoughts all faded out— I was passing into profounder sleep. But soon I was dreaming again—dreaming a dream of the fifth degree. What strange and fantastic forms were presented to my view? But these were evanescent, and I found myself again gliding into unconsciousness, to be ushered into a more interior dream and I was dreaming in the sixth degree. Language of earth fails to express my vision and experiences here. But these while intensely interesting and fascinating were not enduring. I found myself sinking into a sleep so profound that it must surely be dreamless. But not so! On the contrary, there began to burst upon my view a new firmament, dotted with the most brilliant stars and exhibiting constellations amazing in their beauty and grandeur. I gazed till I was weary, and sank again into unconsciousness. * * * I awoke and beheld about me the light of eternal day! I had crossed over, and stood beside the crystal stream in the land celestial!

—Mrs Welch's fine offering to the Children's Home proves the quality of her friendship. A picture of her kindly and motherly face should hang on one of the walls of the Home to help motherless children realize the meaning of the blessed word "Mother."

—Mrs. T. J. Ogburn is almost recovered from a serious operation at St. Leo's Hospital, and will return home in a few days. We trust her health will be better than for a long time.

—Bro. J. C. Morris and wife, of Haw River, were in attendance at Grace church, Greensboro, last Sunday.

—We were pleased to have a call from Alcy Sykes on Monday, as he was returning from Winston.

—Cereal crops of the country will reach the unprecedented total production of 133,016,000 tons is the announcement made by Victor H. Olmstead, of the department of agriculture.

THE SYMPATHY OF JESUS

"Jesus wept" (John xi. 35).

The shortest verse in the Bible, what volumes it contains! What a picture it gives us of the heart of Jesus! First, it tells us that He is human and can weep and suffer like the rest of us,

"And still remembers in the skies,
His tears, His agonies and cries."

It tells us of His friendship. Doubtless these tears were the genuine expression of His deep love for Lazarus, Martha and Mary, and still He is our loving Friend.

It tells us of His sympathy. He not only felt, but He expressed that sympathy, and still with us He suffers, and we are never alone even in life's darkest, loneliest hour.

But it tells much more than this. In that grave at Bethany Jesus saw much more than a death divided friendship and a bereaved home. He saw the vision of sin in all its vastness, the ravages of death and the deep, eternal grave into which countless souls are sweeping always and forevermore, the second death. No wonder that He wept, and not only wept, but died to help and save. The tears of Jesus are the darkest lines in the picture of human danger and destiny. If any man or woman is reading these lines still unsaved, those tears were for you.

And if the heart of Christ be in us, we too shall often weep, not only for the sufferings of others, but for the danger of lost souls.

How much do we care about the sins and sorrows around us?

"We may not climb the heavenly steeps
To bring the Lord Christ down,
In vain we search the lowest deeps
For Him no depths can drown.
"But warm, sweet, tender even yet,
A present help is He,
And faith has still its Olivet,
And love its Galilee."

—From "We Would See Jesus."

WE ARE THE LORD'S

The Church with a very limited capital is doing a great business. Probably in no other enterprise does a dollar go as far as it does in Church work. Then the results are in no sense to be compared. What is a soul worth in dollars and cents? Our Lord valued a soul at his own life's blood—death in the most cruel way known to mankind. His love was so great that he died to save a soul. What was his monetary value of a soul—what if a man gain the whole world and lose his soul? Combine all the money and corporations and products and lands and ships and commerce and everything, and its value is not the equivalent of one soul. And to our Lord a soul in China or India or Africa is worth this. His message to us is: "Go ye therefore, teach all nations.....to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

The obligation is upon us. We are to go or to send, to pray and pay. We are the Lord's. He has bought us with his own blood. All we have is His—Southern Christian Advocate.

THE REVIVAL NEEDED

The revival that we need is not simply a revival that will awaken sinners to a knowledge of their guilt and danger; that will remind Christian believers of their deficiencies, neglected opportunities, and larger privileges in Christ. What we need is a revival that will help all these agencies and phases of our Church life, and serve all the interests that are dear to us as lovers of Jesus Christ—namely, a movement that will bring home to the conscience and heart of the Church the value of the religious weekly paper, that will urge with convincing power its ministry in the home, that will secure its admission into every household, and that will in one way or another bring people to realize as never before the inestimable worth of that agency as the mightiest evangelizing, educating, quickening, and renewing force wielded by the modern Church. As Rev. J. A. Castel, D. D., so well puts it: "The religious paper is a silent, unobtrusive messenger of good whose influence upon the home is as benign and measureless as are the rays of solar light upon fields of grain and gardens of flowers."—Zion's Herald.

ESSENTIALS IN HOME LIFE.

In home life contentment is an essential to daily comfort. One discontented person in the house creates an atmosphere fatal to tranquillity. Cut the coat according to the cloth, live within the income, and have a margin. If there is no certain income, and a constant struggle with small means insufficient for the needs of the family must be waged, it may be in that case hard to be contented. Let the tried and tempted one lean with all possible weight on the promise of God We have the word of the Scriptures for it that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Let those who are overburdened repeat this little verse:

When obstacles and trials seem
Like prison walls to be,
I do the little I can do,
And leave the rest to thee.

Or else be comforted with the sweet thoughts in another hymn:

I know not the way I am going,
But well do I know my Guide.
With a childlike faith I take the hand
Of the mighty Friend at my side.

Strive for contentment and never permit circumstances to crush you, deprive you of health and of good cheer. It is always better farther on. It's a long lane that has no turning. "God's in his heaven, all's right with the world." This means not only with the big world outside the door, but with the little world within the home and the world of the invidual soul.

Another essential for success in home life is common sense. There are people endowed with every quality that is desirable except this. In consequence, they give wrong impressions of themselves and others. They blunder and make mistakes and get into false positions. The effect upon their daily life is disastrous. When the housekeeper omits salt from the food she is cooking, the addition of that condiment when the food is on the table is not entirely satisfactory. Salt should be added in the process of cooking. Common sense is like salt; it adds the right flavor. Also it shows people the true perspective.

Allied to common sense very closely is tact. This is sometimes confused with insincerity. The two qualities are not related to one another. That simply means touch and the tactful person feels with other in quick sympathy, and is not apt to hurt a friend by saying or doing the wrong thing. We should be tactful in our management of children. The tactful mother never needlessly provokes an issue, and if she has the loving ingenuity with which she should be gifted, her little ones will obey her without conflict and strife. Some mothers make one think of a builder who would leave the scaffolding in plain sight after completing the house. Their discipline is forever in evidence, and they are so fearful that their children will fail to do them credit that they are on the watch for misdemeanors, when, instead, they ought to be on the watch for good conduct deserving praise.

A third and very important essential in successful home life is an even temper. If it is possible to teach a fiery thoroughbred to understand the meaning of the rein, it should be possible, too,- for- each of us to hold temperament in check, and subdue the tendency to anger or injustice Ill-tempered and aggressive wives and husbands, fathers and mothers, transform home to a penitential abode where nothing flourishes except ill weeds, and flowers do not thrive.

To drop metaphor and speak in literal terms an essential of home happiness is amiability, and this should be diffused through the entire family. As for children, their tendency to quarrel and dispute, if it exists, should be firmly repressed.

There is an old church in New Jersey which, during the Revolutionary War, was the scene of a well-contested fight between the Americans and the British. The former were entrenched in the building and fired from the windows. The latter were well provided with weapons and made a stubborn and offensive attack. At a certain crisis in the battle the guns of the besieged needed packing, and the parson, stranch soldier that he was in the church militant, led his people in tearing the leaves from the hymnbooks, saying boldly, "Give 'em Watts, boys! Give 'em Watts!" In quiet another ture into the precincts of the nursery, the wise mother may give her children Watts, or perhaps not Isaac Watts, but Jane Taylor, who must have lived about the same period.

PRAYER AND PAINS.

Don't you think, John, that the time has come to recognize the claims of Jesus Christ?" An old schoolmaster, looked into the bright, expectant face of his favorite pupil, asked the question earnestly, and then wisely left the lad to his own thoughts. The fierce battle, the rebellion, and the final yielding to the call of God's Spirit—no story has ever been written telling of these, but a few years later the lad, John Eliot, went out from the schoolroom to his mission to the American Indian. After his death, upon the flyleaf of the Indian grammar which he had made, was found written: "Prayer and Pains through faith in Jesus Christ can do anything.,, The years passed—his work seemingly left unfinished.

"I do not seem to have found any corner. I—I do not believe God can use me!" And the fine, sensitive face of the young man quivered with disappointed pain as he spoke to his friend Jonathan Edwards. "I don't know about that, David," replied his friend. "Have you ever seen this little book?"—taking from a shelf John Eliot's Indian grammar in which was writen, "Prayer and Pains through faith in Jesus Christ can do anything," and handing it to him. "Look it over, together with this copy of the Life of John Eliot, and let me know what you think of it." And after looking it ovver, David said to his friend: O, I know what I shall do; I'll take John Eliott's work where he left it." And David Brainerd became the successor of John Eliot. Two years he worked, and then fell sick and died; so well had he wrought that the great Jonathan Edwards cried in his grief: "I believe that God blundered when he let Dovid Brainerd die."

But God had not blundered. Jonathan Edwards, with tender, sympethetic touch, told the story in the Life and Letters of David Brainerd, and one day a copy fell into the hands of the schoolmaster cobbler in England. The cobbler became oppressed with the darkness of heathenism the world over; he interested his neighbors; he became a preacher; and at last he, William Carey, became the founder of the modern missionary movement.

But the mission of the Life and Letters of David Brainerd did not end there. Another copy found its way into the hands of a godly young woman, and finding the book inspiring reading, she sent a copy to her brother at Cambridge. He opened the book in the early evening. It was two in the morning when he turned the last page. It was gray dawn when he rose from his knees. And Henry Martyn followed in the footsteps of William Carey.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

ABOUT SCHOLARSHIP.

Educators frequently lament the decline of scholarship on the part of present-day College graduates. The public as frequently sneers at scholarship and "the scholar in politics." Do these two sections of our fellow-citizens refer to the same thing?

What is scholarship in the sense in which the educator deplores its lack? And what is it in the sense in which the public sneers at it? The educator means that sort of completeness of intellectual grasp which touches knowledge in all its phase and which includes a mastery of one particular phase. The public sneers at that type of scholarship which is best described by the word book-worm, the fellow who knows books only and is a novice in everything else, the impractical, dreamy, bookish man, and the public should sneer at him.

But the decline of scholarship in the educator's sense is a serious matter, regretted by educators and the public alike. I think scholarship is declining and I regret it. The physical facilities for education were never more abundant than at present and there were never stronger facilities in our colleges than today. Yet in spite of these favorable conditions for scholarship, it is on the decline, and for two reasons.

The first of these is the elective system in Colleges, which permits a man to take anything he desires and yet get his degree. If young people were really able to select a course with good judgment, the elective system would not militate against scholarship. But the desires to get studies bearing directly on some particular life-calling and to avoid the more difficult, sterner, disciplinary courses are uppermost in the minds of most young people and these desires strike scholarship in the heart. Too early specialization and milk-and-cider courses, which require only a little study of the lighter sort, are mortal foes to scholarship. Our Colleges must take a stand against these weaknesses in the application of the elective system, or scholarship shall descend to lower depths still.

The second of th se reasons is involved in the failure to appreciate scholarship. Leaders of eduational thought must show to young people the value of scholarship as an asset in life. Scholarship, in the broad sense in which we educators define it, is mighty in enthroning truth in the hearts of men. Ignorance can always be imposed upon, but wisdom cannot, because it sees things in their true perspective. A second contribution of scholarship to life is the power it develops in those possessing it. Men of will can go so far and no farther. Sooner or later they encounter their ne plus ultra, and men of scholarly ability, of personal power forge beyond them to the goal of highest achievement. The third great emolument of scholarship is aesthetic and consists in the guidance it gives a successful man in the manner of enjoying his success properly. As an illustration of what I mean, let us consider the man who has made money his aim in life and who has now come to the place where retirement is the natural step. If he lacks scholarship, he can spend his time in globe-trotting and amusement—a sorry evening to a brilliant day. If he is a scholar, and it is possible for a moneymaker to be a scholar at the same time, he can make his scholarship sweeten the life and the life of others also. In the words of that staunch old Roman sage the elder Cato: "The liberal arts and the practice of the virtues. . . . . .when you have lived many years and to the full, yield a wonderful fruitage, not only because they never de-ert you, not even at the sunset period of life (although this is a very great emolument), but also, because the consciousness of a life well-spent and the recollection of many deeds well-done is most gratifying."

W. A. Harper.

I must do something to keep my thoughts fresh and growing. I dread nothing so much as falling into a rut and feeling myself becoming a fossil.—James A. Garfield.

THANK YOU.

Permit me in this way to express my very great appreciation for the response made, on the 29th of September, to the call for a simultaneous offering for our Children's Home.

Our prayer was that the Lord would lead every Sunday school and church in the denomination to make an offering, and that the offering might average as much as five dollars each. A number of schools and churches have reported, and the average has been considerably over five dollars each so far. We bow a grateful "Thank you" to all those who made the offering as requested. We know that others did take the offering and that we will hear from you in a few days.

Others because of local conditions could not take the offering on the "29." We are still depending upon you for that offering, and we believe the Lord expects it of you. Please give your people a chance to contribute to this worthy cause at the very first opportunity and send us the amount, whatever it may be.

Come to the corner stone laying on October 17th. A big picnic dinner will be given on the grounds. Dr. Lyman E. Davis, president of the General Conference, is to be with us, and there will be other speakers. It will be a great day for Methodist Protestants and their friends at The Children's Home. Come!

Again thanking you, I am,

Yours in His name,

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

I wish to correst a mistake in the Herald of last week, perhaps printed as sent to you, but a mistake of Mrs. Dixon's. The amount $13.75 was reported as from "Tabernacle S. S. and Mrs. Hardin." $3.75 of this was the collection from the S. S. and $10.00 given by Mr. W. D. Kirkman through the S. S., but I feel that such a handsome gift ought to be made special mention of rather than the S. S. take the credit of it, undeservedly.

Please correct the error in this week's issue of Herald.

Wishing you much success, I am,

Very truly yours,

Lucilla Hardin.

Pleasant Garden, N. C.

REPORT OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHILDREN'S HOME.

Total amt. report last week..$17,001.67
Mrs J. J. Welch, High Point,....$500.00
Center S. S. 6.00
Carolina S. S. 70
J. M. Trollinger 1.00
Mrs. J. M. Trollinger 1.00
Glenn Raven S. S. 3.21
Eband S. E. 10.00
Gibsonville S. S. 3.00
Disco, Ill. S. S. 5.41
Miss Lessie Parks, Enfield, N. C.....1.00
Miss Pattie Parks, Enfield, N. C.....50
Greensboro, Md. M. P. S. S.....5.00
Brown Summit. 4.32
St. Paul 2.80
Mocksville, Circuit 14.41
Shiloh, Yadkin College Ct.....46.80
Mt. Carmel, Yadkin College Ct....24.00
Yadkin College Ch., Yadkin Col-
College Circuit. 27.15
Friendship, Yadkin College Ct. 19.75
Behesda, Yadkin College Ct. 135.67
Shiloh S. S. 4.50
Roseville, O. S. S.....1.63
New Marshfield, O., Young Peoples
Y. P. S. E. 1.65
Chauncey, Ill., S. S.....5.00
Kendalville, Ind. Church 1.00
Lynchburg, Va. S. S. 25.00
Owassa, Ala. Charge 2.50
Dr. T. T. Tagg, Baltimore.....5.00
East Bend S. S. (error in last week's report) 60
Pinkstaff, Ill. S. S., Rev. Oscar
Smith. 1.00
Mr. & Mrs. John Ward, Argyle,
Iowa, ...5.00
Haddam, Kan. S. S. Rev. B.
A. Brook. 3.25
Rev. H. L. Elderdise Westminster
Maryland 5.00
Stony Knoll S. S. 3.00
Harrington, Del. S. S. 6.00
Slatting, N. C., S. S. 3.40
Hobbs Chapel, Va., Rev. R. D. Pair..1.80
Mr. John Scott, Rosehill, Kan. 5.00
Clear Creek, La., S. S., W.
H. Jordan 3.50
Fairview, ConcordCharge: Mr. W. L.
Holland, Concord 1.00
Mrs. J. C. Garmen, Concord 25
London Heights S. S. Rev. J.
Shephard, Kansas City 2.85
Mr. Worth Kilpatrick,Connells-
ville, Pa. 10.00
Union Grove S. S., Rev. D. M.
Loy, Gastonia 5.00
Jalapa S. S. Indiana 6.65
Hickson Grove S. S., Miss Mamie
Townsend, Newton, Iowa. 6.52
O'brien Ct. Lewisburg, Ky. 3.00
Bess' Chapel, Cherryville, N. C.....3.87
Karo S. S. Ind. 2.06
Harlan Ct. Kan. 3.75
Mrs. M. V. Johnson, Baltimore, Md...5.00
Error in Cedar Falls report last week 1.02
Error in Randleman Ct. last week....3.00
Total 945.50
Grand Total $17,947.17

T. A. Hunter, Chairman,

J. M. Millikan, Sec-Treas.

ORDER OF SERVICE

To be held at the laying of the Corner Stone of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home, near High Point, N. C., Thursday afternoon October, 17, at one o'clock.

1. Doxology.
2. The Lord's Prayer in Concert.
3. Hymn No. 192.
4. Prayer, Rev. T. J. Ogburn.
5. Responsive Reading, 1 Corinthians, Chapter 13.
6. Introductory remarks, T. A. Hunter, Chairman Finance Committee.
7. Welcome on behalf of the City of High Point, Mayor F. N. Tate.
8. Welcome on behalf of the Business Men of High Point, J. J. Fariss.
9. Five Minute Addresses:
   Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., President N. C. Conference.
   Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C.
   Dr. J. R. Reitzel, Chairman Building Committee.
   J. M. Millikan, Chairman Board Trustees, and Sec-Treas. Finance Committee.
10. Placing of Corner Stone and depositing Memorials. (Explanation of contents, and remarks by Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
11. Address, Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., President General Conference.
12. Hymn No. 412.
13. Benediction.

Master of Ceremonies, Prof. M. H. Holt, Oak Ridge, N. C.

I was some what disappointed when the collection of Sept. 29th did not put the cash and pledges beyond the twenty thousand dollar mark. It is possible, however, that some failed to get the necessary information in time to make a united effort and it may be that for this reason the total for the 29th did not run up as high as it might. Notwithstanding this the question of the Orphanage has already paid. It is quite clear that this one enterprise has done more to unify our people in N. C. than any other one thing has in many years. The happy results that will logically follow our getting together and becoming a unit in regard to some praiseworthy object is itself of great value. Oct. 17th is set apart as the day for laying the corner stone of the new building. I wish that every Methodist Protestant in the N. C. District, and many others, could be present on that day. It will pay all who can do so to be there. Let as many as may rejoice together on that auspicious day. Some of our best business men are giving the Orphanage their best thought and service. Never before, perhaps, in the history of the N. C. Conference has anything so strongly appealed to all our people. It were better for every one of the twenty two thousand members in the N. C Conference to give a little than for one or two give th ewhole amount. The interest, sympathy and prayer of all the people are wanted for his undertaking. Of course those who can do more will find a warm reception in the circle of those who are already doing, but the fact that some can do more does not release those who can do less. "Where the treasure is will the heart be also," and it is greatly desired that the hearts of all the people be towards this institution. Now, all together, and let us put the subscriptions and cash way over the twenty thousand mark by the 17th, the day of laying the corner stone. With a fervent prayer for the enterprise, I am,

W. E. Swain.

Death of Mrs. Cozart.

Mrs. James Cozart died early Tuesday morning of last week at her home near Cheatham's mill, in Granville county, after an illness of several months. Besides her husband and mother, Mrs. Benjamin Hicks, Mrs. Cozart is survived by one sister, Mrs. S. R. Harris, of Henderson; three brothers, Mr. T. T. Hicks, of Henderson; Mr. H. B. Hicks, of this county and Mr. A. A. Hicks, of Oxford. She was a member of Rehoboth M. P. church.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. N. G. Bethea, and the interment took place at the Hicks old homestead and was largely attended by sorrowing relatives and friends.

Thee following brief sketch of her life was contributed by a member of her family:

Magoline Ellen Hicks, youngest but one of the seven children of Benjamin W. and Isabella J. Crews Hicks, was born August 24, 1868, married James T Cozart, December 8, 1909, and departed this life September 24, 1912.

She endured severe affliction with high courage and remarkable patience. Throughout her life she paid in full measure with interest the debt all children owe to their parents. She was a good teacher of children, having given many of her best years to that vocation. A most capable and intelligent nurse, though kept much at home by her duties, it may be truly said of her that "she went about doing good." Her gentle and kindly ministrations will long remembered by her neighbors.

Teacher, nurse, attendant and caretaker of her aged parent, she also developed the finest faculties of the domestic economist. Her provision for the family and superintendence of the home were unsurpassed. After she was stricken with a fatal malady, in two annual contests before the Granville County Fair, she received the largest number of prizes for best products of the home, kitchen, dairy and farm.

For a hundred and sixty three years this soil was occupied by her paternal ancestors. This is the first day since March 5, 1749, on which no one of the original family name has dwelt on the place.

Remembering her high qualities, with unspeakable sorrow at her parting, we today lay her mortal body in the bosom of our mother, "the good red earth," in full asurance that her fidelity to duty in the church, the school, the home and the sick room, entitles her happy spirit, so long burdened with the ills of the flesh, and now happily freed from them, to as good a mansion as any creature of this world can ever find in "Our Father's House." So we feel that:

"Knowledge by suffering entereth,
And life is perfected by death."

From Her Pastor.

Rehoboth Methodist Protestant Church has sustained a great loss in the death of Sister Cozart. She was always in her place at church and Sunday school unless providentially hindered. She was a help to her pastor in that her appreciation was always shown of his services.

Some time ago during a visit to her home she said: "We count it understood here that we don't get tired of our pastors soon. We people of Rehoboth church never clamor for change and we have loved them all." Such words are always an encouragement to the preacher in this day when people are so restless and so many never seem to know what they want. It was a pleasure to be in her home. If you went there tired andweary provision was always made for you to rest. If sick, she knew how to minister unto you. Her faith failed not even in her sorest affliction. The God she served in days of health, she still leaned upon him in her most severe affliction.

To the one who feels this affliction most keenly we tender our prayers and sympathy. Bro. Cozart is one of our best men. He has been sorely tried but midst it all his faith in God is great, a man of few words, and never does he complain.

God bless you, brother, and may the vacancy made by providence be filled by His Spirit.

N. G. Bethea.

With all of the fitful changes and painful scenes life brings to us, nothing is so hard to endure as the loss of loved ones and while it is true of all ages, from the tiny helpless babe, to the blooming youth, and the matured man and woman, it is more painful to the aged couple, who have faithfully shared each other's joys and sorrows, with a sacred devotion known only to those who have experienced such joy and sorrow. Such is the bitter experience of our aged brother James Lucas who was visited by the death angel Aug. 10th, and removed his faithful loving wife "Aunt Fannie."

This was a severe shock to the community, and her many friends far and near. as her period of illness was such short duration, only a few knew it.

She had been a regular visitor among her friends, and recently united with the Sunday school, saying she would attend regularly. and we were looking forward to much pleasure in having her cheery face, willing heart and hand with us so frequently, where she was so much needed.

"Aunt Fannie had been a member of Rehoboth since girlhood, and ever stood firm, loyal and true, a devoted member of her church. She has left a devoted husband whose step is more feeblewithout her aid, a son and married daughter with a number of children.

As to her friends they are legion. She had endeared herself to so many hearts, that the tie was nearer than friend, which caused many to call her aunt.

She was a sweet noble Christian woman,and our hearts go out in sympathy to the broken hearted husband, whose loss is irreparable, and can only wait in submission, until beckoning hands shall call him to join her in the great beyond where they will be united to part no more. May God give him supreme strength, helping him to endure with the patience and fortitude which has characterized his life.

And while she is missed most of all by her dear ones, her beloved church shares deeply in the loss.

Well can the many preachers of form-years recall her kind entertaining efforts to add to their comfort, which was ever a great joy to her.

When we think of how we need her, we wonder why she was taken from us when she was needed most.

"But sometime we'll understand."

"The gentle voice is hushed,
The warm true heart is still,
And death has caused a vvacancy
No one can ever fill."

A loving frieend,

Callie W. Tarkington.

—The loss by the horse plague in Kansas is estimated to be about ten million dollars.

THE INFALLIBLE CHRIST.

For ages skeptical men have made their utmost efforts to show that Christ, when upon earth, was fallible. They have insisted that in some respects He lacked knowledge of certain historical facts pertaining to the old dispensation. It is affirmed that He was incorrect in His statements concerning Jonah. He called Jonah a prophet, and confirmed the Old Testament assertion that he was three days and nights in the belly of a great fish, or sea monster. But the critics say that Christ's testimony is unreliable, for Jonah, if he ever existed, was never inside of any such creature. According to such a view, Christ lacked much of being infallible. But the critics are the fallible ones. Christ's veracity cannot be impeached by the assertions of His ignorant and hostile critics.

Christ claimed to be "the Word." By His works He proved that He was such.

Prof. W. H. Griffith Thomas, of Toronto, Canada, says: "On more than one occasion, our Lord claimel to speak from God and that everything He said had the Divine warrant. Let us notice carefully what this involves. It is sometimes said that our Lord's knowledge was limited, and that He lived here as man, not as God. Suppose we grant this for argumen.'s sake. Very well; as man He lived in God and on God, and He claimed that everything He said and did was from God and through God. If, then, the limitations were from God, so also were the utterances, and, as God's warrant was claimed for every one of these, they are therefore Divine and infallible. Even though we grant, to the full, a theory that will compel us to accept a temporary disuse or nonuse of the functions of deity in the person of our Lord, yet the words actually uttered as man are claimed to be from God, and therefore we hold them to be infallible." This is a strictly logical conclusion.

C. H. Wetherbe.

PROOF OF OUR DISCIPLESHIP.

By Rev. D. E. Millard, D.D.

Jesus says: "If a man love me he will keep my words; and he that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." From this we see that conformity of life to the Divine law is clearest evidence of the state of the heart toward God and his own dear Son. He who keeps it not is declared by the testimony of our Lord, to have no union by love with him; but to him that walks in it there is every assurance of the Divine approval. "Ye shall know them by their fruits." And how true it is that he who possesses the Spirit of Jesus will bear its fruits, or, in other words, will walk as He walked. The fruit of the Spirit, we are told, is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." These traits of character, he wro claims to be a disciple of Christ is expected to manifest. Truthfulness, although not here named, is of course implied, for there can be no real joy and peace without it. Thr integrity of one who would be recognized as a Christian should be constant and unwavering, making his life a commentary upon the excellency of the Gospel.

Assuming this as a fact, I wish now to call attention to two or three of the traits enumerated by the apostle, while yet urgng the importance of all of them. Meekness is one of the fruits mentioned. This has been very properly defined as "forbearance under injuries and provocations;" a marked trait in the character of Christ. How beautifully is it expressed in His last words on the Cross: "Father forgive them, they know not what they do." As Jesus bore this fruit, so will they who possess His Spirit. There is no duty in Christian life more frequently and pointedly enjoyed than this. "Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering forbearing one another in love." "Put on, therefore, as the elect of God. . . . . humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering." "Who is a wise man, ... let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness and wisdom."

Without meekness many other virtues may be marred. It is one of the sweetest and most beautiful graces of Christianity, and one which wins the dearest affections of the soul. Hence he who is destitute of it is deficient in one of the essential features of the Christian life.

Faith—which carried out into practical life—may be termed faithfulness—is another of the inestimable fruits of the Christian Spirit. Faithfulness means a union of faith and works. It means observance of the outward forms of religion. But its range is much greater than this. He who follows Christ closely—as all who profess his name should—will be loyal to all duties. He who sets faith in opposition to morals, or morals in opposition to faith, is equally an enemy to the interests of religion. You must join the two in full union, if you would exhibit the character of a real Christian.

Love has been termed the "crowning, grace of Christianity. It is more than this. It is the living force in the heart, sanctifying every act of obedience. It commences with the earliest growth of religious life, and flows with it up through all the stages of its development. When it is wanting in the heart, no duty can be performed acceptably before God; but its presence sanctifies obedience and makes of it a pleasure.

Other traits might have been dwelt upon; but all other virtues are so interwoven with those mentoned that they do not need in this connection a separate consideration. If we are Christans we shall bear the fruits of the Spirit, and by our fruits the world will judge us.

Portland, Mich.

—Missionary Review: "We are, therefore, encouraged when we see signs of weakening of the caste system. The most important of these was the introduction of a special marriage bill to the viceroy's council by a Hindu, Mr. Basu, a short time ago. Its aim was the legalization of marriages between Hindus of different castes and persons of different religions. All over India meetings were held, either in support of or in opposition to the proposed legislation. In Bombay a number of prominent native gentlemen, and even three Hindu ladies, spoke on behalf of the bill which, if enacted, would shake the caste system to the center."

—A high Chinese official, recently baptized by Ding Li Mei, the great Chinese evangelist, now undertakes the support of twenty of the ablest preachers who can be found, at an expense of about $7,000 annually, for the evangelization of his people. He offers a small settlement on his estate in Manchuria free of charge to all Christians who may apply. Another case is that of Dr. Ming, who has a hospital in Hanchow, where 50,000 patients are treated each year. His work is so widely known in many provinces that if one is being imposed upon has but to say that one will report the matter to Dr. Ming, and it is usually settled without more difficulty. Principal Chang Po Ling, of Tientsin,, is an educator who is also a social reformer, fighting foot-binding, early marriages and other abuses. He led his own brother to Christ, and has the satisfaction of hearing that he is the first signer of the declaration card of the recently organized Chinese Volunteer Movement for the ministry. As director of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Chang had the principal part in securing a gift of $13,000 from H. E. Ou Yang for the new building at Tientsin.

No one learns music in one lesson. No one cannot become an artist in a day. No one can get the full beauty of Christ into his life in one brief year. We have it here in St. Paul's words: "Transformed into the same image from glory to glory," that is, line by line, little by little."—J. R. Miller, D. D.

DEATH.

Though since thy first sad entrance
By just Abel's blood,
'Tis now six thousand years well nigh,
And still thy sovereignty holds good;
Yet by none art thou understood.

We talk and name thee with such ease,
As a tried thing,
And every one can slight his lease,
As if it ended in a Spring,
Which shades and bowers doth rent-free bring.

To thy dark land these heedless go.
But there was One
Who searched it quite through to and fro,
And then, returning like the Sun,
Discovered all that there is done.

And since His death we thoroughly see
All thy dark way;
Thy shades but thin and narrow be,
Which His first looks will quickly fray;
Mists make but triumphs for the day.

—From Silex Scintillares.

ONE'S OWN DUTY.

The Christian has a great privilege in inquiring of God as to what his duty is in relation to a particudar matter. Sometimes God makes known to the Christian a duty, at once so distinct and decisive, that he does not need to pray long to know what he should do; but he does need to pray for wisdom and power to enable him to rightly fulfil that duty. In many instances the Christian needs to pray that he may have the courage and the strength to meet the opposition and criticism of those who say that he is mistaken in thinking that he is in the way of duty. A great many Christian people assume the privilege of dictating to a brother the course which he should pursue in regard to a certain matter. They claim to know just what his duty is, and if he does not follow their advice or direction, then they are apt to charge him with being very unwise, and perhaps obstinate. A prominent Southern minister recently went to London and became pastor of a church of a somewhat different denomination. A consderable number of his brethren in this country have been sharply censuring him for the course which he has pursued. They feel certain that he did wrong. He is not in the way of duty, accordng to their view. But who is the best judge? Is it not the man himself? Certainly. We may take it for granted that, before he settled the question of going there, he earnestly and repeadtedly prayed God to show him his duty. It may also be assumed that he would not have gone there, had he not been fully convinced that it was his duty to go. The question of duty being settled, then no other question was allowed to interfere with the discharge of that duty. A dutiful Christian is not to pay any heed to what his critics may say. Paul never did differently. The one question with him was. "Lord, what will Thou have me do-" Then, learning what God's will was, he set himself firmly to the task of fulfilling it, no matter what his brethren might urge to the contrary. We should do likewise. Our own duty to God must be heeded.

C. H. Wetherbe.

A GREAT CRISIS.

A great epoch in the uplifting of humanity is upon us. The question now is whether a few men, unfaithful to their trust, are greater than the inexorable laws of evolution. I do not believe it! The timid and the trimmer are filled with fear, and commercial greed holds its finger to the lip and commands silence while 400 rum shops in Androscroggin County are plying their infamous trade of making degenerates and paupers of the coming generation. We recall that the merchant prince of New England did the same when Wendell Phillips was thundering forth his immortal phillippic that the Constitution of his country was a covenant with death and a league with hell. During all this uproar the man with clear vision and prophetic power saw the end. He had no fear of the future, and knew that history would record a victory for justice and humanity.

It is the same to-day. Now is the time for cowards and cravens to go to the rear. They can have no place in the ranks of brave men, and can have no glory in the victories yet to be won. Evolution is marching on and humanity is gradually being uplifted. The tides of the ocean beat upon the shores and recede, but they are certain to come again, and often with even greater force.

A great crisis is once more upon us. It is useless to recapitulate the condition of affairs as it is known to all men and is the theme on every lip. In some section of our country an outraged populace would find a sterner method of bringing to an end such dishonor and disgrace, but here the people who believe in law and order must themselves observe the tenets. Another year must pass before the case can be legally reached through the ballot. So lost to all shame are the present officials that all verbal expressions of contempt fall upon their ears unheard. All that we can do for the present is to show up the conditions as they really exist and arouse high-minded men of all parties to a sense of their duty. I have every reason to believe that these will be found among the Democrats and Republicans alike. It is no longer a party question. It is a stigma and disgrace that falls upon our whole State, and a burdedn which all men must alike bear. We have reached a point of lawlessness that is beginning to endanger our very moral and industrial life. Rum shops abound on every hand, and side by side may be seen their natural accompaniments of gambling dens and brothels. But one feature is now needed to complete the picture of infamy, and that is a public rat pit. Quite likely this kind of an establishment will come as soon as som plug ugly makes application to the constituted authorities.

There are men among us who never cease to repeat the parrot cry that it is impossible to enforce the law. In reply to this I would beg to inquire what effort is being made to enforce the law? In this connection I can not refrain from again quoting that delicious bit of unconscious irony uttered by Governor Plaisted in his now famous proclamation calling a special session of Legislature.

There comes a time in the lives of all men when principle and honor rise above the party ties. That time is here now, and I have no fear of the result. Party lines must be disregarded until the disgrace can be eliminated. It is a career that can be cut out only by a strong hand that can cut deeply and unflinchingly. No wealing is wanted for this work, and none will be tolerated. From thousands of endangered homes in these cities the prayers of outraged wives and mothers are ascending to the bar of God asking that the men who have the ballot will stamp the brand of Cain upon the brows of those who have trodden law and decency beneath their feet and make a mockery of justice. All hail the coming day when the ballot shall be placed in the hands of these pure women to aid in accomplishing other reforms so needed in the march of civilization! Until then let us all join in answering their supplications and their prayers that the juggernaut of the saloon shall not be permitted to crush out their happiness and their homes.—L. C. Bateman, in the Maine Temperance Record.

Let there be no thought of what you can do for God, but all thought of what God can do through you. Nothing will make you so intense and ceaseless in your activity as this.—F. B. Meyer.

What's come to perfection perishes; things learned on earth we shall practise in heaven. Works done least rapidly are most cherished.

From Pastors and People.

BROWN SUMMIT.

Special meeting commenced on 5th Sunday, large congregation, Rev. W. F. Ashburn did the preaching; meeting closed on Thursday night. There were 13 professions. Said to be one of the best meetings ever held at Brown Summitt. The congregations were encouraging to the close, especially at night. Perhaps, there are not many congregations that can sit under the pulpit efforts of Bro. Ashburn and not be moved to work and to repentance. His sermons are especially good, Christians are encouraged, moved to activity and a higher living and sinners to decision and repentance.

Some of his sayings:

1. The boy who begins to think wrong does not see the future wild and wooly at first.

2. If the devil ever jingles his chains, it is when the sinner says, "not now."

3. The blind man threw his valise away and went to Jesus.

4. When the cyclones of sin and the waves of damnation roll high, we can lean upon the eternal promises of God.

5. The meanest man in the community is the man who swears and talks vulgarity in the presence of a gang of little boys.

G. F. Millaway.

TABERNACLE CT.

The 4th quarterly conference will be held at Julian on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday, preaching at 11 A. M., conference in the afternoon. All officials we hope will be present, and have encouraging reports. The general interests are some behind, let each collector see the members on their list and collect, so we can place all the churches on the honor roll.

C. A. Cecil.

October 5, 1912.

ROCKINGHAM.

The 4th Sun. in September, we began a meeting at St. Johns, at the Hannah-Pickett cotton mill, with Rev. H. W. Braswell as help. The meeting continued 10 days, with services at night only, except Sundays, and one attempt on the first Monday of the meeting. The meeting was continued under very peculiar and trying conditions, such as we have never met before. Just what was accomplished we do not know. Three were converted, or renewed. Bro. Braswell preached in his earnest, characteristic manner. Rain hindered part of the time and a tent-meeting in Rockingham, at the same time, perhaps affected the size of our congregations part of the time. Upon the whole, we think some good was accomplished. We are never satisfied with meager results; neither is the farmer who cultivates unproductive soil.

J. F. Dosier.

HIGH POINT.

On Wednesday evening, October the 7th, we closed a most successful meeting. The meeting lasted eleven days with two services every day save one. Rev. C. M. Compher, of Lynchburg, Va., was with us and did all the preaching except three sermons by the pastor. Bro. Compher did some wonderful preaching. Through his preaching and through his deep consecration to God he made an impression for good upon our people that will abide. His preaching was very clear and simple, and yet powerful. The people will always love him because for ten days he gave his very life to lift them closer to the Christ. He will find a hearty welcome anytime he may return to High Point.

The greatest visible results from his visit among us is the wonderful spiritual uplift that came to the church. Outside of that, so far as we know there were nine conversions, and three have joined the church so far, and we hope others will follow.

The inspiration of these meetings will follow many of us through life. Like the disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration we feel to say, "It was good to be there." We also believe the church membership will come down from that glorious experience into greater and more active Christian service.

In His name,
A. G. Dixon, pastor.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 7th, 1912

MEBANE.

It seems that both our pastor an reporter think we are doing nothing worth reporting. We certainly have not been doing much until recently. But we have begun at last. We have finished putting down a handsome carpet in our church and have built a choir. Bro. D. M. Qualls, (one of us) kindly finished our furniture anew and these have added so much to the enterior.

We expect to have a coal stove by time to make fires. Then paint both inside and outside is necessary.

We are expecting Rev. T. M. Johnson to be with us in our special meeting 3rd Sunday. If while we are renovating our church, we will renovate our hearts, then we may expect a good meeting.

There are quite a number of unsaved people here and we want them all saved.

I want to ask the readers for their prayers that we may have a great revival.

Mrs. Carrie Fogleman Nicholson.

HALIFAX CT.

The special meeting at Ringwood which was completely rained out some time ago will be continued beginning with the second Sunday night in October.

J. E. Pritchard.

BURLINGTON.

The Sunay school attendance was 174 yesterday.

Our Superintendent, Bro. Andrews, was absent from Sunday school, having accepted an invitation to preach in the Presbyterian church at Graham, N. C., Sunday morning. The school was, therefore very ably conducted by our assistant superintendent, Bro. J. G. Rogers.

Our special meeting begins next Sunday morning, Rev. W. F. Ashburn will assist our pastor, and be his pulpit help. We hope much and lasting good may be accomplished in our church, Sunday school, and congregation.

C. B. W.

October 7, 1912.

EDEN, HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, filled his appointment last Sunday, the fifth instead of the first Sunday.

He preached a good sermon which was enjoyed by all present.

Since my last report we have had the benches painted, which is a great improvement to the church.

I am sorry to say that Rev. L. W. Gerringer is right sick, I understand that he went to the hospital in Baltimore Monday. We ask every body to pray for him that he may soon recover.

Mr. Raymon Hardee got his ankle badly sprained by jumping from the buggy while his mule was running. Glad to say that it is much better.

Mr. Dawsy Hardee has gone to Buie's creek to enter school.

Miss Blanche Hardee has returned from a visit to relatives in Henderson.

The protracted meeting will begin at Union church the fourth Sunday in October; hope a large crowd will be out.

The people at Ringwood were entirely rained out so the meeting will begin second Sunday night in October.

The third quarterly conference will convene at Ringwood church Friday before the first Sunday in November. All the official members are requested to be present.

As our pastor said Sunday the year's work is drawing to a close, so we went all the assessments paid before conference, which will be the fourth week in November.

Much love to the Herald and its readers.

Irene Hawkins.

September 30, 1912.

REHOBOTH, GRANVILLE CT.

We hope the readers of the Herald won't think by our long silence that we are not "doing things" at Rehoboth. The fact is we are to busy to write! You won't think this is exaggerated much when you hear of our interest in the Orphanage. Last Sunday Mrs. Dixon came and addressed us in the interest of the Orphanange, and raised $157,00. At the service today $12.00 more was paid and still there are others who will subscribe later. It was a pleasure to have Mrs. Dixon with us, both at home and at church. She goes about her work with the determination to win.

We mentioned before that we take a special collection for the orphans at our first Sunday's services. Today this collection amounted to $3.20. Mr. Bethea was at his best at this service. He preached about "Home Happiness." Doubtless many of his hearers went home with the determination to make home brighter.

Our Sunday school is wide awake too. The Superintendent has appointed a young man for each month from now until Christmas to conduct the opening exercises. These young men are always ready when called upon, even if it is to dismiss the school with a prayer.

Our church has recently suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. J. T. Cozart, one of our most faithful members. She was a useful woman and loved by all. Truly we shall miss her.

Hattie Harris.

October 6, 1912.

THOMASVILLE.

Our meeting closed last Wednesday night. We had a fine revival, Bro. Cecil of High Point being the pulpit help. Bros. Suits and Cecil did some faithful work and several souls were saved, yet the meeting closed with some souls still unsaved; although they manifested a great deal of interest. We hoped that they would turn from their sinful ways to follow Jesus Christ their Savior, who died for them. How can they sit under the sound of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and not be moved?

May the Lord bless us and help us that claim to be Christians to wake up to realization of our duty and to do our duty.

I will close hoping to see another letter from Thomasville soon.

A Member.

CHAPEL MILL, DAVIDSON CT.

Our camp meeting embraced the 3rd Sunday in September with good result. We just had a good meeting. I was so glad to see many converts. Young men that could do so much good, if they only would, were on the left. O may they see the need of living for God and make their return before it is too late. Those that did make the stand may they make bright and shining lights in the world. It made us so glad to see them coming to God. But we must still pray, we that claim to be Christians do our duty by saint and sister. The church was revived and made to praise the Lord. May we people of God live close to Him in the future. We could talk to our neighbors and neighbor's children and our own children. May we get on a higher plane of Christian living is my prayer. Our hearts were made glad and sad. We had two deaths in time of the meeting; one the first day and one the last day. Mr. George Surratt died on Sunday, Mr. Mayberry Russel's little girl died on Friday. They had moved to the camp meeting and she was taken sick Saturday night; the next Friday died. She was one of our Sunday school scholars. Both live close to the church. Both buried at this church.

Remember us in your prayers.

Lizzie Cranford.

UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Dear Herald:

The meeting at Jerusalem began last Sunday a week and closed on Thursday eve. But like some other places we read of, there were no additions to the church, but there was some interest manifested by the unsaved ones. But it was not because they did not have the warning; for Bro. Trogdon and others surely laid it down in plain language. Earnest prayers went up from the helpers. We have all learned to love Bro. Trogdon and his dear wife and children so much that we come with another plea to our Annual Conference to send him back on this work again, for he has revived it so much and we feel that the half has not been done that will be. This is the only church but what has had a good revival, and I believe we have an honest reason for this failure, while Bro. Trogdon did all in his power.

We had the pleasure of having Mr. and Mrs. Trogdon in our home, as we feel they are a shining light for us to walk by.

Messrs. Ivey and Chaney Workman and Sister Della left last Friday for Sanfrancisco, Cal., to make it their home. Their mother and Miss Crissie had gone out there in June. We regret very much to give them up, for we feel a loss of spiritual workers.

Bro. Trogdon will be at Cid next Sunday at 3 P. M. We would be glad to have some of our laymen of our sister church. es to worship with us, as it is encouraging to the weak ones.

While visiting in Farmer recently I had the pleasure of spending a while with Bro. Trogdon's family; it was so interesting to see sister Trogdon gather her family around the organ and sing such beautiful songs. It made me think of the beautiful song This is like heaven to me. May God's richest blessings rest on the church of God everywhere as our prayers go upward for Bro. Trogdon to return to this work again.

Reporter.

WELCH MEMORIAL, HIGH POINT.

Our S. S. is doing well; we had 97 present last Sunday. Our pastor gave us two splendid sermons. We have visitors at our church every Sunday. Our special meeting will begin next Sunday morning, October 13th. Our pastor will have for his help Rev. J. W. Parker, of Randleman. We wish to ask the prayers of every Christian for the meeting.

Mrs. G. D. Hyatt.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 8, 1912.

FRIENDSHIP, STANLEY CT.

Rev. Mr. Reynolds filled his regular appointment Sunday to a large and attentive congregation.

The last quarterly conference will be held at this place on Saturday before the third Sunday in this month preaching at 11 A. M. and conference at 1 P. M.

Our S. S. is moving along very well; a number of our little folks are kept away on the account of whooping cough but hope they can come back soon. We miss them so much.

Mr. W. B. Surratt preached an e lent sermon for us the last fourth Sunday.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Reporter.

THE TWO STREETS.

Two streets there are in many towns--
A sad one and a fair;
In one, good cheer and peace abound;
In one a dark despair;
In one, the light of love is shed;
In one, grief's bitter tear;
The name of one of these streets is Bread,
The name of the other is Beer.

In Bread Street there are busy men
And happy homes and wives;
In Beer Street the degraded dens
And sad and broken lives;
In Bread Street Plenty sings her song
And Labor chants her rhyme;
In Beer Street Want is joined with Wrong
And idleness and crime.

O men and mothers, strive to do
All in your power to make
The children shun the one who brews,
And trust the one who bakes!
One street there is their feet should tread,
And one their feet should fear;
The name of one of the streets is Bread,
The name of the other is Beer.

—Nixon Waterman.

BLIND ANIMALS.

Nature is economical as well as wise. When she puts animals in dark places where they need no eyes, eyeless they are. There are blind fish and insects and spiders in Mammoth Cave, and in Adelsburg Cave in Carniola, Austria, there is a singular reptile with minute and useless eyes beneath the skin.

Cave-dwelling animals also lose their coloring, so we have wonderful white beetles and spiders, the last named, curiously enough, still weaving their webs. An interesting adaptation is found in the case of the blind crabs found in deep soundings. The stalks that normally carry the eyes of crabs and lobsters are in their cases modified into sensitive antennæ.

Our own mole and bat are usually considered blind, but they are not. There is, it is true, a variety of mole in the south of Europe which has its eyes under its skin, but in the mole we know the eyes are minute, simply to save it pain when it burrows in the earth. In like manner the elephant has tiny eyes and so avoids scratches when lumbering through the jungle. As for bats no one would accuse them of being blind, though they could probably, with their swift flight and incredible sense of touch, find the insects in absolute darkness.—Our Dumb Animals.

—Jonathan Zimmerman, a Mercersburg, Pa., carpenter sneezed when he had some eight-penny nails in his mouth and swallowed two of them, so he had to be operated on.

—Mrs. Polly Harper of Harpersville, N. Y., was knocked senseless by a bolt of lightning. When she came to she found that her chronic rheumatism from which she had long suffered had left her completely.

—Burglars blew open the post-office safe at Howe, Ind., but the miscalculated and the heavy safe door fell over on one of them and crushed him to death.

GOT EVEN WITH HER.

A few days ago two young ladies entered a trolley-car and found only standing room. "I'm going to get a seat," said one to her companion. "Now you see!"

Selecting a sedate-looking gentleman, she walked up to him. "My dear Mr. Green!" she exclaimed. "How delighted I am to meet you! You are almost a stranger. Will I accept your seat? Well, I do feel tired, I admit. Thank you so much!"

The man rose. "Sit down, Jane, my girl," said he, as he courteously pointed to the vacant seat. Don't often see you out on a washing-day. You must feel tired, I'm sure. How's your mistress?"

THE POWER OF PRAYER

A woman came to a missionary, asking him to prevent a certain native Christian from praying for her any more. "I used to perform my worship to my idols quite comfortably," she said, "but for some time I have not been able to do so. He told me that he was praying for my family, and now my son and two daughters have become Christians.. If he goes on praying, he may make me a Christian too. He is always bringing things to pass with his prayers."—Sel.

A STIMULUS BUT NOT A CRUTCH.

The publishers (George H. Doran Co.) announce that the second and final volume of THE EXPOSITOR'S DICTIONARY OF TEXTS is ready for distribution. At last something like a comprehensive view may be taken of this rather monumental work—a work in every way sui generis and a pioneer in its field. It is rather a review of the great preachable texts with outlines of some of the more noteworthy sermons on them. While of immeasurable value to the minister, if any one imagines this to be the usual lumber pile for ready-made sermons, he will be previously disappointed. It may be a stimulus to the diligent: it will certainly be no crutch to the slacker.

LIFE.

By John R. Clements.

Life is more than having plenty;
Life is more than one and twenty;
Life is long!
Life is what we will to make it;
We may build or we may break it;
Life is strong!
Life is throbbing, never ending;
Never spent, though always spending;
Life is gain.
Never growing, though ever growing;
Life is one long round of sowing,—
Joy or pain.
Here to-day, and then to-morrow
Land of bliss, or land of sorrow;
Which we will.
Once begun life's never ceasing,
Through eternity increasing
Good or ill.
Solemn, then, the truth of living;
Time must shape eternal giving,
Boundless life!
Here a day to fit for ages,
Measureless by wisest sages,—
Soundless life.

—In C. E. World.

GODLY CONVERSATION.

There was not always peace in heaven. Time was when that best abode had wars and woes and worries and what not. Satan was there. And there never has been any peace, where Satan is. He stirred up ar and strife and bitter seditions in heaven. He does the same on earth. As he was the source of all of heaven's woes, so is he now the cause of all of earth's wars, great and small, national, individual and domestic.

Now that there might be peace in heaven means were resorted to to drive Satan out. Two weapons were employed: 1st The blood of the Lamb; 2nd The word of their testimony. "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and the word of their testimony." (Rev. 12:11). These are the weapons the inhabitants of heaven employed to dislodge and drive him, maddened and defeated, therefrom.

If earth would drive Satan out it must needs use these same weapons, the blood of the Lamb and Godly conversation.

Nothing less than this will drive Satan from this earth. This evident because, being dislodged from heaven, his former abode, he is making a desperate, bold and fearless effort to maintain himself here on earth. This is his final stand: and a deadly war he is waging to hold his own and gain the victory here.

We will certainly have to employ these means to drive him out, the blood of the Lamb, and the word of their testimony.

Now the Blood has been shed. That transaction was of a wise appointment and was brought to a finish on the Cross. There God did His part in driving Satan out. He provided the Lamb; and this Lamb was slain, His blood shed. That was the divine part of the transaction.

Our part is Godly conversation. We shall need to speak to one another often about these things. We need to talk often and long and much about our salvation, our redemption, our God and His power to save. Brethren and beloved, do we talk enough about the goodness of God and His many blessings and benefits to us?

—From the Christian Sun.

REASONS WHY EVERY .WOMAN SHOULD BE A MEMBER OF THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

(Adapted.)

Because her education demands it; because the spirit of the time requires it; and because our Lord has asked it of all his children.

The love of Christ should constrain all women, young and old, to band themselves together for the extension of his kingdom.

"She that is not for me" and my commission "is against me. She that gathereth not with me"—by influence on membership in the Missionary Society—"scattereth abroad."

As enlisted soldiers under a banner of Jesus Christ, our orders are "Go, tell." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The missionary Society furnishes the most practical means of obeying his command.

Because I will give her a larger vision of spiritual life and fit her for more and better service for the Master.

"Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's.

Because in studying the sad conditior of the women and girl in heathen lands they soon contrast them with their own lives and become more grateful to the Heavenly Father, more unselfish, more determined to work and pray, that all may share the blessings.

That she may develope a strong, Christlike character and find expression for the deep gratitude that prompts every child of God to reach out and help those who have no Saviour—no help. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

"Christ cannot be ministered unto, but to minister;" therefore to be Christlike we must serve.

Because it is one of the very best ways by whch she may show her love and loyalty to Jesus, her Redeemer.

He came to seek and to save the lost. He left us an example to follow in his steps; therefore our supreme duty is to go and teach. In this act of obedience there comes into the life of every true missionary woman and every circle girl an untold joy, a sweetness and richness of service which can be known in no other way.

Christ says: "As the Father hath sent me into the world, even so send I you into the world. Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Christians are followers of Christ. We cannot be Christians if we refuse to follow him in the work of world-redemption.

Our missionaries on the fields are simply doing our work for us. How could we as Christian women or girls be so indifferent to our own duty as not to be active members of a woman's misionary society or circle?

To become informed of the world-wide missions is a debt we owe the early missionaries who have saved us from the horrors of pagan lands. Only by knowing are we constrained to do.

By belonging to a missionary soc- a Christian woman can go by proxy "into all the world," while a missionary can go into only one part of it.

Because it is an honor to woman to have Christ's confidence, to be considered worthy and capable of carrying out this divine commission, "Go, tell." She never knows how to love until she loves the people who know not Christ.

It should be the desire of every Christian woman and girl to become a member of a missionary society in order to hasten the time when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Gratitude for the redemption through Christ from all that heathen women must endure should make every Christian woman and girl glad to have such an opportunity to prove her love to him by keeping his command: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—The Voice.

Incidents of .Mission. Life.. 1. Mr. Logan, a missionary in Japan, tells of a prisoner who was converted while serving out his sentence by the chance reading of a Bible which came into his hands. Prisoners whose behavior is markedly good are allowed a small pittance, something less than a cent a day, which they are accustomed to accumulate against the day of their discharge. Now this converted criminal had in the long course of his confinement saved some thirteen yen in this way and all this money be dispatched to the man into whose house he had broken, and whom he had seriously injured as a peace offering and token of repentance. With it he sent a letter of apology.

The injured man was so impressed by this action that he undertook a long journey to the prison and there the two met, face to face, and made peace in Jesus Christ praying together. When the visitor departed he left a neatly bound Bible as a token of his good will.

2 A Basuto chief listened to .mission preaching for the first time and said: "Well your teaching about God seems good, but it is an egg. I will wait and see what comes out of it." So he observed the missionary for some time until, finally, he came saying that he had seen in his life the result of the doctrine and was convinced. Doctor Luering of the Methodist mission went from Singapore among the head-hunting Dayaks of Borneo. When he was ready to return the chieftan sent asking for a permanently settled missionary. Luering replied, "I do not believe you want a teacher, otherwise you would have followed my teaching." Whereat the answer came straight as a bullet: "Sir, we have heard your doctrine, and, being shrewd people, have waited to see if your life agreed with it. We found that it does and therefore wish to be Christians. Now that you have made our mouth to water you will not refuse us food."—Record of Christian Work.

Every Christian can do better. Many won't. Southey once wrote a friend thus: "I would give you advice if it could be used; but there is no curing those who choose to be diseased. A good man and a wise man may at times be angry with the world, at times grieved for it; but be sure no man was discontented with the world if he did his duty in it. If a man of education, who has health, eyes, hands, the leisure, lacks an object, it is only because God Almighty has bestowed all those belongings upon a man who does not deserve them."

—We are indebted to Mrs. J. T. Wall of Yanceyville, N. C., for the picture of Rev. Alson Gray. She is and has long been a devoted member of the Methodist Protestant Church. In sending her subscription, she writes. "How I wish I lived in Reidsville where I could go to see Bro. and Sister Raper. I feel so lonely here. Give my love to all my church members; we are absent from each other but not in heart. I ask the prayers of all for us two afflicted aged people." Surely this request will be notd and heeded by many who read the Herald.

A QUEER BOY.

He doesn't like study, it "weakens his eyes,"
But the "right sort" of book will insure a surprise.
Let it be about Indians, pirates or bears,
And he's lost for the day to all mundane affairs;
By sunlight or gaslight his vision is clear.
Now isn't that queer?
At thought of an errand, "he's tired as a hound,"
Very weary of life and of "tramping around,"
But if there's a band or a circus in sight,
He will follow it gladly from morning till night.
The showman will capture him, some day, I fear,
For he is so queer.
If there's work in the garden, his head "aches to spilt,"
And his back is so lame that he "can't dig a bit."
But mention baseball, and he's cured very soon;
And he'll dig for a woodchuck the whole afternoon.
Do you think he "plays possum"? He seems quite sincere;
But—isn't he queer?

—Selected.

A STORY THAT ENDED WELL.

"Come right in," said Mrs. Johnson, hurriedly wiping the suds from her hands. "I'm glad to see you, but I'm ashamed to be caught in such a muss;" and she snatched a soiled towel from a heap on the floor and dusted a couple of chairs for her callers. "I don't gen'ly have my washing 'round til this time o' day, but, you see, this is the second one to-day. No, I don't take in washin' as a general rule, but this is just an accommodation you might say. I'm doin' it for the woman upstairs; the woman that's had such a lot o' trouble."

"We've just been up there," said the deaconess. "Her husband has been out of work a long time, hasn't he? He was in when we called. He didn't say much. He looked so sad, and—a little queer."

"Why, don't you know? Didn't she tell you? Why, he's been just plum crazy, an' he ain't right yet. He went clean off, worryin' 'cause he couldn't find a job. He went 'round day after day an' got turned down everywhere, till he was clean discouraged an' thought everybody was in some kind of plot against him. Then he got worse, an' took it in his head that his wife was makin' all the trouble. An' she's the best little woman ever you saw. But one night he choked her till he liked to killed her, but she got away and she an' the children run downstairs into the street, an' he after 'em. There wasn't no sleep for anybody in this house that night, 'count o' him. Nex' mornin' they took him to the city hospital—the observation ward, they calls it; but, land, she couldn't stand it with him there cryin' and beggin' to be let out, so she brought him home again. He ain't crazy now like he was—just quiet and mopin' like. She 'lows that if he could get out of the city an' quit worryin' a spell he'd soon be all right. But there ain't no use talkin'. They ain't got no money to go with. All they have to eat is a little bit of hash an' stale bread from the restaurant, now an' then. She can't leave the children with him an' go out to work, so there 'tis.

"It ain't any wonder the man's crazy, Miss Mays, I b'lieve that if my Jim don't get work pretty soon he'll be crazy, too. He nigh about makes the rest of us crazy now."

That night at the church prayer meeting a brown-eyed woman told the story of the "woman upstairs," of the unsuccessful search for work, of the wornout clothing, the hungry children, the letting down of all the vital forces because of bitter poverty and discouragment. "And four dollars—just four dollars—would take them to their old home where they might find friends," she concluded.

At the close of the meeting she hurried to the deaconess and poured into her hands a "silver offering" of dimes, quarters, and half dollars. People will help if they only know," she said.

Next morning the deaconess again climbed the long dark flights of stairs to the little room where sat the man and woman facing their trouble. A ray of sunshine had already come in the shape of a letter from a brother away up on the shores of Lake Michigan. It was a kind letter, full of sympathy and offered all that the writer could give—the shelter of his own home to the entire family, until the man could regain health.

But though they smiled through tears at the brotherly kindness, they shook their heads despondingly.

"It's a long journey, and it would cost more than we can ever hope to get."

But the deaconess was not so sure. The four dollars in her pocket book was inadequate to the new emergency, she knew, and another prayer meeting collection was out of the question. But she was used to dealing with impossibilities, and was a whole ways and means committee in herself. She hurried to the Provident Association where she was referred from department to department, and finally to the mayor himself. And to his honor the mayor she went. The plan as laid before him was so sensible, so practical and so hopeful, that he became interested, and the potent name was affixed to the necessary document. The result was a ticket for the family for the entire journey, leaving the little prayer meeting collection for incidentals, which would certainly be needed.

Then what a happy, confused, hurrying time there was, to be sure. What woman could ever take a journey without replenishing her wadrobe? And this was not a case of vanity, but stern necessity. Department stores and dressmakers were not called into requisition but there were certain consultations and private arrangements conducted by the deaconess, and it was a fairly respectable looking party that waited at the station for the train. There had been no breakfast in the little home that morning but the neighbor downstairs had sent up some pancakes that were left from her own table, and who would care for more, with faces turned toward the country and hope and health?

"O, I can't thank you," said the mother, you and all the others that have been so good to us. I never thought there were such good people in the world. But I'll pray to God for you every night I live and I know He'll bless you for it."

"Yes," said the deaconess, smiling; "He is a good creditor."—Inasmuch.

A young lady who taught a class of small boys in Sunday School desired to impress on them the meaning of returning thanks before a meal. Turning to one of the class, whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Be careful of the butter, children; it's forty cents a pound'," replied the youngster.—Everybody's Magazine.

HUMAN TEMPERATURES.

The ordinary temperature of an adult, when the thermometer is placed in the armpits is 98.4 degrees; in the mouth, 99.5; the blood itself about 100 degrees. Blood heat is marked on the theremometor at 99 degrees Fahrenheit. In fevers this is much exceeded, and the heat of the patient may rise to 105 or 106 degrees, but a higher temperature than this will generally prove fatal, unless it descends quickly. The highest temperatures recorded have been in some cases of rheumatic fever, when that of the body rose to 109 degrees, and even to 111 degrees.—Medical Magadine.

RICHLAND CT.

Charlotte. Our protracted meeting was to begin at Charlotte last Sunday. We had Children's Day services in the morning and preaching in the afternoon. The children did their part well for the practice they had and deserve credit. The collection amounted to eight dollars thirty-four cents ($8.34.)

In the morning Bro. Whitaker gave us a short talk on foreign missions which was interesting.

We are glad our pastor has sufficiently recovered from illness to be able to be with us again. We are sorry Bro. Braswell could not come and help in the meeting. Bro. Whitaker did not feel able to carry on the meeting himself so the meeting was postponed until the first Sunday in November. We are looking for Rev. Braswell ti be with us then. I hope we may not be disappointed. Pray for us that we may have a good meeting.

The people of Charlotte have recently placed a new organ in the church which is a credit to the church, have also put carpet in the aisle and pulpit.

Our Sunday school is still alive but is not what it should be. Pray for us.

Etta Redding Reporter.

CORINTH, LITTLETON CT.

Two of our members have passed away since I last reported, my great aunt Mrs. Rebecca Fletcher died the 17th of September, Mrs. Alphonso Insco died Friday night, was buried this afternoon at the Morris burying ground, a host of relatives and friends were there to pay the last tribute of respect, Bro. Ledbetter filled his appointment this morning, conducted the burial service after-noon. Mrs. Insco leaves a large family. Her little grand child, that of Mrs Foryst Insco, died the same night that she did. Mrs. Jessie Carter, Jr., is dangerously ill. Mr. Burnace Carter who has been very low is up again, we are glad to know, to the delight of the Junior Class here.

Miss Nellie Hedge has returned as governess in Mr. Green Bobbitt's home. She does all one could do to help in S. S.

Miss Lossie Hardee, and Mr. Jessie Parks from Eden church, Halifax Ct. worshipped with us today.

Before this will have reached the press, one of our neighborhood girls will become Mrs. ——. Listen to the wedding bell.

Fannie Barnes.

Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk writes:

We closed a ten day's meeting at Bellemont last week. There were 33 professions, 23 accessions, while the church was greatly revived.

During the meeting two special services were held, one for Mothers and one for the Sunday school. I am now carrying on a meeting at Alamance union church. There were nine professions there on last night. The services at both churches so far all conducted by the writer.

THE POOR PREACHER'S WIFE

Did you ever once think how the preach-enough to eat, and hardly decent clothes enough to eat, an dhardly decent clothes to wear? The preacher says he must visit his members and so he is nearly always gone and the poor wife is left at home to do the work and take care of the children and perhaps he has a quarter to give her when he starts to pay expenses and perhaps he hasn't got a quarter and his wife hasn't had a decent dress this year and maybe none at all, and you say "well, I will just put off paying that preacher anything till about the week before Conference." Well, dear friend, you will not have to wait much longer and the preacher's wife has studied her brains searly out trying to decide how to make both ends meet. She is many miles away from her people, and she is treated so coldly she has to cry often. You say that preacher's family dresses so shabby I can't afford to associate with them. That is said and acted often and actions hurts as badly as words. How would you like to be the poor preacher's family a while. Lots of times he hasn't a dollar in the world, but the family must be fed and clothed, but both must be cheap as possible and so they have a hard time to live at all on a five or six hundred dollar salary and only two thirds paid in the end.

Well, I will close as the waste basket may be full. With much love to the readers of the Herald.

A Poor Preacher's Wife.

FLETCHER.

Mrs. Rebecca Fletcher was born October 1829, died September 17, 1812, at her home near Littleton, N. C. Was a member of Corinth church perhaps 40 years or more, but was too feeble to attend church many years before she died. Her husband, Rev. W. E. Fletcher, departed this life 13 years ago. This period of widow-hood, seh spent with her niece, Mrs. G. L. Barnes, who waited on her willingly till the last. Three weeks before "Aunt Becky's" death, she had a partial stroke of paralysis; was as helpless as an infant till she died, which was on Tuesday morning just as the clock was striking ten.—Just as the sun was beaming brightly in all its glory her spirit took its flight. Many times during her illness she weakly and slowly repeated:

"Must I be carried to the skies,
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?"

She often said she couldn't see why the good Lord kept her here, she was ready and willing to go. How blissful to be ready! She lived long esough to know things, was wide awake in home life, was all ways aware of all that was going on around her. Like us, she too had her failings, but gradually over came, till apparently she over came all. She bore her afflictian patiently, was very seldom heard grunting or complaining. Often asked to be fixed higher, matters not how high we placed her she wanted to go higher still. The night before she died, she pointed to her right, said "I want to go this way, let me go."

She lived to see the fifth generation, was the last of her immediate family. How happy she must be with all who have gone before, mother, father, brothers and sisters, her husband and only child.

Her remains were taken to the Glasgow burying ground accompanied by a number of relatives and friends. Her pastor, Bro. Ledbetter, and Rev. Francis Joyner of Littleton conducted the burial service.

Fannie Barnes.

COUNTRY PEOPLE.

Let us not despise or speak lightly of the Church and its members. My experience has been that the most intelligent, well-informed, and versed in the Scriptures are the country-members. The city preacher who goes to the country Church to deliver his message is but poorly conversant with the country mind, if he thinks he must put his feed down where they can get it. You had better put the feed a little higher. Nine-tenths of the preachers of Texas were reared in the country, and got their start in a country Church. In a recent meeting, largely attended by preachers, it was asked that all stand who were reared in the country. All stood except one deaf brother. In a city of the Southwest a preacher recently made the test. Of the banks, all the heads of departments were from the country. Of seventeen heads of mercantile establishments, twelve were from the country. Of five physicians, all were from the country. Of several lawyers, all were from the country. The clerks were city bred.—Burnet's Budget.

—Mr. Charlie Davies and Miss Lillie Durham, of Union Grove, have entered Hillsboro High Schiol.

A NEW SUBSCRIBER.

It delights our hearts to add a new name to our subscription list. And this delight, we are sure does not come merely of the dollar and a half it may mean on the ledger.

But did you ever think what adding a new name to the list of your church paper's subscribers meant? It means much indeed: but there are a few things that it certainly means:

A new lover of our Christian name and faith.

A new friend, a more intelligent and enthusiastic friend, to our Colleges, to our Orphanage, to our missionaries, to our church.

A new helper to his pastor and to the mission cause in every way.

A more loyal and consecrated man or woman to all that pertains to the kingdom.

A new adherent to, and an earnest enquirer after, the faith of the fathers that blazed the way to Christian liberty.

—From the Christian Sun.

WORLD WIDE PRAYER FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Sunday next the pastors of the various churches in Norfolk, in unison with ministers through the United States, will offer special invocations for the children of the public schools who will in the near future enter upon another school term. Prayers of a similar character will be made in the Sunday schools of Norfolk, as well as in the Sunday schools throughout America.

This simultaneous prayer has been organized by the National Reform Association which will be poured forth from millions of lips at the same time, it being not only national but worldwide. The ministers are expected to lead their congregations while the superintendents of the Sunday schools are to lead their schools in the prayer.

This prayer, it is said, will be the first simultaneous prayer of this character ever offered and will therefore be a notable event.—Virginian-Pilot.

THT INTERMITTENT MEMBER.

By F. Yeigh.

Every class has its own experience with the intermittent member. His irregular attendance not only contributes to his lack of interest but affects the general average and spirit of the class itself.

One class tried to solve the problem by sending the following personal letter to a number of "intermittents:"

My Dear Friend:

We have not had the pleasure of seeing you at our Bible class this fall. While it is prosperous to a degree, with a larger inflow of new members than ever before, yet we miss the old members and always feel a regret when they are absent or drop out. One of the basic ideas of the modern Bible class, is that Bible study should continue to attract and hold men from year to year, rather for brief and intermittent periods; thereby giving strength to the organization because of the permanency of the membership.

If at all possible, can you not attend again,and thus help along the success of the class. Yours sincerely.

The results were sufficiently satisfactory to justify the plan. One long absent member responded by bringing two friends with him; others took a fresh interest, while some explained the reason for non-attendance.

"BRING ANOTHER MAN."

It is said of the Catholic organization known as the "Paulist Fathers" that no Catholic is allowed to come to certain lectures unless he brings a Protestant man with him. It is claimed that a very prominent judge was not permitted to enter the door when he came to one of the lectures without bringing a non-Catholic man with him. The zealous spirit of those "Paulist Fathers" in seeking to increase their number is worthy of emulation by some of our adult Bible classes. "Bring another man" would not be a bad motto for an adult Bible class to adopt. Such a motto lived up to would create a spirit of aggressiveness that could not but add to the numbers and influence of the class. The highways and the byways of the world are full of men who could be brought into the Bible class, and finally into the church, if only other men already members of the church, if only other men already members would do the actual personal work involved in asking these men to go with them to the class or to the church. Bring another man, and bring him next Sunday.—A. B. C. Teacher.

"SEND ME."

A class of women in an eastern city took the significant words "Send Me" for a motto and had them put on the class pin. Then they lived right up to that motto in every way possible. One member who had been asked by mail to perform a certain service for the class wrote and said that she did not think she could do it. In the very next mail came a second letter in which this member wrote: "I quite forgot about our class motto, 'Send Me,' when I decided to do what you asked me to do in your letter. I was putting on my class pin just after I had written my first note, and it came to me all of a sudden that I had not been true to that motto in refusing to do something I could do. I will attend to the matter right away."

"Send me" is a good motto for any Bilble class, and it is because so many classes are living up to the spirit of this motto that the whole A. B. C. Movement is so successful.

ENDEAVORGRAMS.

By John R. Clements.

The Quiet Hour in its keeping may be but ten minutes long, but in its influence it is day-wide.

Clipping readers are leaners and not "growers." The spiritual life of the clipping-reader is sure to be a lean one.

Some leaders really close a meeting by the unskilled way in which they open it.

The Endeavor society without committee work is a monstrosity; without the pledge it is a deformity.

Have a "favorite-hymn" meeting. Teach your Endeavorers the hymns so that th y can have a song service without a hymnbook.

Begin your prayer meeting on time even though you have no one present but the leader and the janitor.

The ideal Christian Endeavor society will ever and anon have a leaderless prayer meeting for the sake of making eaeh member feel a sense of responsiblity.

Does failure teach us any lesson? It is that we may always make new trials of our powers. Life should be no dreary round, but an ascending spiral. Never give to another the idea that his failure is absolute and without remedy. Not so taught our Lord, and we lack much of His spirit if we do not seek for some of His patience with mistakes and failures.

It is consciousness of the new heaven and the new earth, the immortality in man, that makes the Christian strive for betterment and be zealous in the work of the Lord. It is this that makes men dissatisfied and spurs them on to greater heights. Sometimes they forget and become content with their present existence and achievements. Only in immortality is perfection.

I know of no more encouraging thing than the unquestionable ability of a man to elevate his life by a conscious endeavor. It is something to be able to paint a particular picture, or to carve a statue, and to make a few objects beautiful; but it is far more glorious to carve and paint the very atmosphere and medium through which we look, which morally we can do. —Thoreau.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

—Dr. Karl von Ruck, of Asheville, North Carolina, has announced through the Journal of the American Medical Association that he has discovered a serum which will kill the germs of tuberculosis in a latent stage and make the subject immune from later attacks of the disease. Dr. von Ruck seems to base his announcement upon the result of the vaccination of 339 children extending over less than a year. In those which were already subject to tuberculosis, examination of the blood several months after the vaccination revealed the fact that signs of disease had disappeared or changed for the better.

If you made a two-dollar mistake yesterday, do not spend five dollars' worth of time and strength in bemoaning it today. The thing is done, it has passed beyond your reach; go on. There is no more costly and unsuccessful way of putting "new clothes into old garments" than by wasting the fresh hours of the present in regret for the rest of the past.—J. R. Miller.

ENJOY IT NOW.

Some years ago in South Carolina a woman lay on her dying bed. Taking from among her valuable papers a bond sent it to the Superintendent of the Presbyterian Orphanage, with the request that he send her a telegram as soon as he received the gift. The answer came. With the bit of yellow paper clasped in her hands she smiled happily as she passed into the shadows.

We often wonder why people who have wealth do not get more enjoyment out of their possessions. We venture a suggestion. Brother, if you have property, enjoy it while you are alive.

Don't leave it to provide for other people luxuries you have always denied yourself. However dearly you may love them, those other people are almost certain to be more harmed than blessed by the luxuries your money would provide. You are a stronger and a better man for having had a struggle for your success in life, and so will your loved ones really be better off if left largely to make their own way.

Don't wait until you are dead and gone having your wealth put to some good use. If you hold on to your property until you have to give it up and then bequeath it to charity, much of the grace of the gift will be lost.

Besides your wishes may be defeated, for wills are easily broken. Administer your own estate—use it for the good of your fellowman and the glory of God—and exercise the joy of seeing the good come to pass while you are alive.—Exc.

"Because we need 'comforting' so many, many times, someone must love us. Because we must be defeated so often in the battle and lie, wounded and bleeding on the enemy's field until help comes, we must be loved by one who will leave nothing undone that we may be rescued and nursed back to life again, and when we reach the limit of our human strength with every nerve out of tune, we want to be put to sleep with love's 'cradle song' that can so completely sooth our tired brain that we will not hear or feel the jar and confusion of sound that tired us so. But there comes a time when earth's cradle songs have all been sung for many of earth's tired ones, and over them more surely will bend the 'Comforter' who knows better than any other how a mother would choose the sweetest, tenderest word a mother only learns to sing, because only she can feel the love that penned them."

The envious spirit invites an early old age.

From Pastors and People.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

July 28 found me on Orange circuit, Rev. R. C. Stubbins pastor. The work was found in fine shape and the pastor justly popular. His cheerful and sunny wife is quite a favorite among the ladies of his charge and they are saying very many nice things about her. Bro. Stubbins is really doing more than was first intended. Though right at home where he was brought up the people are as well pleased and possibly better than had he come "from way off." July 29 was the day set to actually begin work on the parsonage well. I am informed the work did begin and it is hoped the work is completed before this time. It seems the only thing to do is to put the Ridge, the Grove and Efland together. However, this is a matter for the Committee on boundaries to consider.

August 16 to 18 was devoted to Yarboro and Anderson in S. C. These two charges are yet served by Rev. W. A. Lamar. He is hard at work. The charge is the largest small work in the district. Only four appointments and yet more than any one man can properly look after and do himself and the work full justice. A new church has been built at Fairview on the Anderson work and while the building does not fully represent the taste nor ability of the people, as a few had most of the work to do, it is such a decided improvement on the antiquated old shell that was there before that the whole community must rejoice in the splendid work done. A church should, and in most cases does, indicate the taste and ability of the community. To be sure, there are very many who because they do not belong to church seem to think it is no concern of theirs. Many others because they cannot have things their own way decline to do what they can and yet others so far forget their obligation, the most solemn vow made at the altar in the presence of God and man that they prefer to lavish all their gains in gratifying a selfishness that is continually out-growing the increased ability to satisfy. Thus while the deluded soul struggles on and on, while the burdens grow heavier with the increase of property and the weight of years, declining years find less joy and gladness than when the race began, but, "The path of the just shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Oh! how we need to pray with the Psalmist: "Open thou mine eyes." Surely the church of God is not a notion or fancy entirely separate and distinct from the business of life, but a divine institution for the direction and regulation for all temporal affairs.

August 21 to 25 was spent with the people and pastor of Ivy. Bro. S. B. Stephens has done a great work on this charge. Sometimes he gets discouraged. This may be attributed to one of two causes, or both. 1st his wife is not able to be with him. She is in Pennsylvania being treated. He has not seen her since immediately after last Conference. He has stayed by his task. 2nd his desire to make the work advance faster than conditions make possible. This section of the state is on the eve of an awakening industrially and otherwise so that it becomes momentously interesting. A wide awake man with nerve and patience is needed here.

Water has been piped from a spring on the mountain side into the parsonage and some repairs on church buildings have been made. The most pronounced progress has been made at Pensacola. While nothing has been done here on the church building the personnel of the membership has greatly improved.

There is a railroad heading from Galax on the C. C. & O. to Pensacola. Already the people are beginning to feel its thrill and the splendid new citizens that are coming in, all of whom are either in our church there or greatly interested in its future, are transforming the social order. Combining these ideas with the solid sense and permanency of those who were already there makes the future full of hope. From Ivy I came down to Buncombe. It is very much regretted that it was deemed necessary for bro. W. D. Fogleman to resign Buncombe and give all his time to Asheville. It was not thought best by some, but there were so many insoluble details involved that it was exceedingly hard to determine just what was best. At any rate Buncombe has been without a pastor since early in April. They have been doing the best they could, but those who have been left in a like condition can better imagine than I can describe the struggle and anxiety.

September 1 and 2 was spent with Bro. Fogleman and his people at Asheville. It is quite clear that those not in close personal touch with the situation here can have no clean cut conception of conditions. It seems almost beyond the power of human language to state the case. You meet with conflicts that surprise you almost every step. Conflicts too, that arise from causes that on first sight one can not see. Enthusiasm is not so strong as a year ago, and yet the very enthusiasm that has made it past seemingly hopeful when thoroughly analyzed is found to be wanting in many of the elements of a well grounded hope. This, some of the people are beginning to see and as seen from the view point of your executive is the most trustworthy ground of hope yet attained. Unity of faith, oneness of purpose and concert of action is enough to make possible all that for which so many have so long hoped in Asheville.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

News Items.

Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D. D., Editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald, and Woodrow Wilson, democratic nominee for President, were school mates at Johns Hopkins University.

Mrs. Robert Wray, of Flat Rock, gave her husband a birthday party, on his 66th birthday August 31. All their children and a number of the grand children, also a few others including the pastor and wife, were present. The supper was bountiful and of the best, ice cream abundant and of fine flavor, the occasion was pleasant. It was a surprise party so far as Bro. Wray was concerned.

Bro. Jonah C. Parker was received into the church at Bethel, last 1st Sunday and Bro. W. P. Lemons of Stokesdale, into Flat Rock church, last Sunday, both these brethren are excellent citizens and valuable accessions to the church. Bro. Lemons came to us from the M. E. Church, South.

Little Marvin Moore who suffered from a broken arm is improving rapidly, and Pearle Vaughn is convalescing from typhoid fever.

Our 4th quarterly conference will be held in Gideon's Grove church, Saturday before the 4th Sunday in October. President Swain will be with us.

HOPE, SILER CITY CIRCUIT.

Rev. J. H. Bowman filled his regular appointment at Hope Church on last Sunday the 8th inst. at eleven o'clock. His sermons are always full of good thoughts.

On account of revivals and baptizing at other places the congregation was rather small, but never-the-less Mr. Bowman's sermon was heartily enjoyed by all who were present. There were four new members added to Hope Church on last Sunday.

Sunday school is progressing very nicely. On last Sunday at 3 o'clock the children entertained the school by songs and recitations for a short while, which was very much enjoyed. Several of our Sunday school scholars are now going off to enter School for a few months. We will miss them while they are away very much. Sunday school every Sunday at 4 o'clock, and prayer meeting ever Wednesday night.

Reporter.

PENSACOLA.

Our revival held her, closed last Sunday night. It was conducted by our pastor, Rev. S. B. Stephens. The meeting was well attended, interest good. Bro Stephens did all the preaching which was done to the full satisfaction of all who listened.

Saying the least, Bro. Stephens is a grand preacher and a good revivalist, this being by far the best revival that has been held in our church in Pensacola for some time, resulting in the addition of seven new members, with more to unite at his next appointment. Those that united were among the best people of this county, and some of them being very well to do and will be a great help to the church in every way that takes to build up the church Bro. Stephens will hold communinon services here at his next appointment and then receive another very prominent and well to do family into the church. Our pastor has so wonderfully built up the church not only at Pensacola but all over Ivy circuit, and we do hope that we can keep him on this work another year, for he has not failed to do his whole duty to Ivy circuit, and his work was well commended by Dr. Swain when he as here with us.

On Sunday the 25th inst. Dr. Swain preached two very able sermons while here and gave us very good advice, and his visits and sermons were very much appreciated and he will always be a welcome visitor at Pensacola.

Reporter.

SILER CITY CIRCUIT.

SPRINGFIELD.—Our special meeting began here the 4th Sunday in August, and closed Tuesday following. This was a good meeting although the congregation was small. This is a very thinly settled neighborhood and the people have to travel over long and rough roads. We have some splendid people at Springfield. The brethren decided to recover the church, and the greater part of the money was in sight to do it with. We had no pulpit help here.

PINEY GROVE.—Our special meeting commenced here the 1st Sunday in September and closed Wednesday following. This was a splendid meeting, the church was greatly revived, there were 7 or 8 conversions and 4 joined the church. The congregations were said to be the best that have attended here in years. This church has been recently painted which adds much to its appearance and is a joy and a credit to the congregation. Other improvements are in contemplation. It is hard to find anywhere a better and more loyal people. It is a pleasure to be their pastor. Bro. Pike was our appreciated help. Our special meetings so far have been of the best; as a whole, as good as ever held. They have resulted in about 70 conversions and 56 have joined the church so far this year, of this number an unusually large percent. have been married and grown people. In many ways this has been an encouraging year. May these things inspire the circuit to greater things.

J. H. Bowman.

THOMASVILLE.

We were glad to have Mrs. A. G. Dixon of High Point with us last Sunday, and to have the pleasure of hearing her deliver an excellent address at the morning and evening services. I feel sure that we, especially the ladies, have been inspired and greatly encouraged by her being here and that there is much the women can do. She came to tell us of the "Children's Home" and our congregation responded very liberal considering we already have undertaken a right heavy expense of an addition to our church, a nice large Sunday school and Baraca rooms which have been built and the entire building has been painted inside and out which adds greatly to the appearance and comfort.

We have a large and interesting S. S. Mr. D. R. Connell makes a fine Supt.

Mrs. Mabel Williams Russel has moved to this place and was with us Sunday, we hope she and her husband will make this their home and continue to meet with us.

Our pastor, Mr. Suits, is not very well, we trust he may soon be restored to health and strength.

Mr. R. L. Lofton has been elected as our delegate to Annual Conference, J. W. Boyles, alternate.

Protracted meeting begins here the fourth Sunday in this month.

Mrs. J. W. Boyles.

CANAAN, GUILFORD CT.

Our big meeting has passed and it was a success. There were 15 conversions and 7 joined our church, but there are others we want to see brought to Christ. O that all might be brought to Christ and be saved.

Pray for us that our light may so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our father who is in Heaven by turning to the Savior.

Success to the Herald.

G. L. Motsinger.

MT. CARMEL, GRANVILLE CT.

Special meeting began at this place Sunday A. M. last. The interest thus for has been great, though no visible results.

Bro. W. F. Ashburn of Pleasant Hill is the pulpit help. At this writing we have been twice greatly interested by Bro. Ashburn's stirring sermons. Those of you that have heard him can better know how they are appreciated.

We are glad to have attend our meeting Miss Blanche Hardee of Halifax county and Miss Lora Edwards of Union Chapel, this circuit. Are praying for, and expecting, a glorious revival.

W. Polk Garrett.

September 10, 1912.

BEAR CREEK, MONROE CT.

Rev. E. H. Mullis began a meeting here on Tuesday night after the 1st Sunday in August. Each service was attended by large congregations, showing the interest the people had in the meeting. There was quite a number of conversions and several joined the church. The meeting closed on the 3rd Sunday in August with three services and dinner was served at the church. That was a day of worship with all the Christian people. The choir furnished good singing at each service. Bro. Mullis is conducting a camp meeting this week. We hope that it will accomplish much for the upbuilding of God's kingdom.

Rev. J. W. Self began a meeting of days at our sister church Bethesda on the 4th Sunday in August, and closed the 1st Sunday in Sept. with very good success.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Self, organized a Christian Endeavor society at Bear Creek on the 4th Sunday evening in August. We hope that it will prove to be beneficial to our church and community. May God's blessings be with each and every member is the prayer of the humble writer.

S. J.

HAWKIN'S CHAPEL, LITTLETON CT.

Our meeting began the second Sunday in August. Bro. Burgess was pulpit help. We had four sermons. As there was such a large congregation out, two at the school

Continued on page eight.

A PARTY BY PROXY.

It was Mr. Longden's sixth year at Welchville, and during that time he had labored faithfully in his church, with results far from encouraging.

It is true the congregations on Sunday had rather grown in numbers than decreased, since his coming to this people; and yet, as their pastor epigrammatically expressed it, the attendance—so far as he was able to see—was productive of nothing save a greater effort on his part to supply them with more stimulating mental and spiritual food; and, to his disappointment, it seemed that the stronger the sermon, the less were the members of his church apparently digesting it into religious good works and service.

At the religious meetings during the week a mere handful of his flock was present, and these, chiefly, the "old standbys," and of such long standing that they appeared able to do but little else. They would give their testimony when their turn came—and it usually came in rotation. Every one knew it was Ezra Brown who would "speak" first. And he would be followed by the Widow Lufkin, whose "experience" never varied, as the former discriminating high school teacher had declared, even in respect to the commas and quotation marks. Then, after a period of waiting—why he should need so long to "collect his thoughts," no one could tell—Josiah Wheeler would dwell at length on his "spiritual refreshment." Little Mrs. Spaulding invariably closed this part of the service with telling how she missed —more and more, as the years went by—the dear faces that were wont, in former days, to fill the now vacant seats around her.

To be as charitable as possible, the whole atmosphere of the church was one of apathetic indifference on the part of its members. It was a burden stronger shoulders than those of Mr. Longden might have been weighed down under, and yet he didn't give up the hope that something, some time, would happen to arouse his people to a sense of their utter inaction in doing their part in the Lord's work.

There was, however, one activity in connection with Mr. Longden's pastorate in which practically every one of his parishioners concerned himself—and that was the minister's birthday celebration. No one seemed able to remember when the "custom" originated. It had been observed, almost with the faithfulness of a sacrament, ever since "good Brother Morris" had been pastor there; and none of the present congregation could remember ever having heard him preach.

One Monday evening, near the middle of May, Mrs. James Wilcox ran into Mrs. Taylor's for a new doily pattern. Just as she was leaving, she said, suddenly:

"Do you know, the 24th of the month is next week?"

"Why, so it—is. I'd almost forgotten. I'll have to be getting my spring batch of mince meat under way, or I'll have no pies to take to the minister's birthday. Have the committees got to work yet?" added Mrs. Taylor with interest. "If I remember rightly," after a moment's recollection, "I myself am on the one to get the parsonage ready—I mean, of course, to aid Mrs. Longden."

"Yes, I believe you are," was Mrs. Wilcox's response, disregarding Mrs. Taylor's inquiry. "I'm chairman of the grocery committee. It seems to me's though a man ought to have been appointed to that position. It's Mr. Tolmann's rightful place. A man who runs a store, and a grocery store too, ought always to be selected for that. Well, I must be going. I suppose everything'll be ready when the time comes—it always is."

"Yes, indeed," and Mrs. Taylor stepped to the veranda with her caller. "It's something—the minister's birthday—everybody takes a deep interest in."

"Seeing's you are on the parsonage committee, you'll have to run in soon, I take it, and find out when Mrs. Longden can have you women there. Though when I was on that committee—while Mr. Avery was here—he never did anything till the day before. But it's always well enough to plan ahead," going down the low stone steps.

"Let me—see. Today is—Monday," deliberated Mrs. Taylor, on re-entering the house. "I think I'll step in to Mrs. Longden's Wednesday. I'll have to go by there on the way to Millbridge, and I might just as well stop in and see when 'twill be most conveninent for us to help get the parsonage ready for the 24th, as to make an extra trip. There isn't much to do—only the form to go through."

That week the committees were called together, and by Friday each one was busy preparing for the annual event.

On Wednesday, as she had planned, Mrs. Taylor started early for Millbridge, and on the way she called at the minister's.

"Father and mother are not quite through breakfast," explained Dick, the oldest of the Longden children, meeting Mrs. Taylor on the steps. "You go right in the study, and father will be there in just a few minutes; he was just ready for his coffee when I left the table."

"Thank you," and Mrs. Taylor followed Dick to the study.

"I'll tell them you're here," said Dick, boylike, "as soon's I go out and see what Henry McGregor wants. He just whistled to me. I'll be back in a second."

But Dick's seconds lengthened into minutes, and still he did not return. Mrs. Taylor charitably overlooked this negligence, for she had boys of her own, and knew only too well what thoughtless little animals they sometimes are.

"He's just—forgot," was her excuse for Dick.

While Mrs. Taylor was in the study waiting, the telephone rang.

"Hullo!" She heard Mr. Longden answering it. "Yes; I'll make a short address at the party if the people wish me to. You intend to have about the same program as you had last year—I mean in length? I see, but I wouldn't make it any longer. Certainly, 'twill be all right to have the choir sing—only you don't want to make a birthday celebration too churchlike. Yes, the family are all well, thank you. Good-bye." And he slowly hung up the receiver.

After leaving the telephone, Mr. Longden left the dining-room door partly open. Everything that was said there then could be plainly heard in the study beyond.

"I've endured five of them, and I suppose I can stand another," sighed the minister, returning to his chair at the table to finish his coffee. "But these birthday parties are"—

"Dear, they mean—well," interrupted his wife, gently.

"Oh, I—know!" and Mr. Longden tried to smile. "Still, after the best has been said, they're only a relic of barbarism. Who wants a flood of apples and potatoes and hay (the poor horse couldn't eat their last load; I know Mr. Holbrook had better in his barn), and pies and indigestible pound cake, and such things, deluged upon him every year?"

"Yet some of the things—are—useful," replied the little woman, at the other end of the table, making due allowance for the good intentions for their parishioners.

"I know it! But, dear me! Mary, there are other things than what my people bring on these birthday occasions that would be of infinitely more worth. 'Man should not live by bread alone.' "

Mrs. Taylor, from the study, couldn't help hearing what Mr. Longden and his wife were discussing, and she wished anxiously for Dick's return. And yet, while she was astonished at what the minister was saying, she was none the less interested in his remarks.

"They might show their loyalty in some other way," continued Mr. Longden, "than in a bread and butter donation. I need—more than anything else in the world, and you know it, Mary—the spiritual help of my people, their cooperation in what I am trying to do in a civic way, their presence and interest in the mid-week meetings, and their aid in so many, many ways."

"Yes, I realize it," agreed Mrs. Longden bravely.

"What are the men, those who should be the most helpful and influential—doing?"

"They pay your salary," was the quiet response from across the table.

"True; and, unfortunately, that is all. There is Thomas Elwell, Eastman Kelso, Robert Coolidge—I can name a dozen such men; and each one, when he has drawn his monthly check toward the monthly expenses of the church, feels that he has done his whole duty; and there his service ends. They never think of aiding in the church work by doing anything else—by giving themselves, even for one hour a week. Mary, I don't know what the church is coming to. I don't want to talk discouragingly; and yet the outlook is anything but bright. If my people would only give me once a birthday party to my liking, what a difference it would make in the work! And in themselves, too."

"But what"—

"Oh, if they'd only send, or bring, not pound cake and doughnuts and mince pies and lard, but promises to"—

"But you said they always paid," and Mrs. Longden looked up, quizzically.

"I didn't mean money," resumed Mr. Longden. "I meant"—

"Excuse me, Mrs. Taylor." It was Dick at the study door. "Henry wanted me to go out to the street to see his new pony cart, and I—I forgot to come back and tell father and mother you were here. Pardon me! I'll run out now. I think they are still at the table."

"Why, good morning, Mrs. Taylor," accosted Mr. Longden, as he hurried to where his caller was sitting. "I hope you haven't had long to wait."

"No; not—very," replied Mrs. Taylor, evidently embarrassed.

"I'm sorry Dick forgot to tell us you were here. Mrs. Longden will be right in. Please excuse her a moment. You'll lay aside"—

"No, I can't stop this morning," interrupted Mrs. Taylor. "I haven't time. I'm on the committee to"—

"I see—to help get the parsonage ready for the birthday," and the minister picked up a paper that had fallen, the night before, from the overcrowded study table.

"Yes, and I called to see when"—

"Come any time," said Mr. Longden, anticipating Mrs. Taylor's remark. "Suit your own convenience. We can accommodate ourselves to you whenever you are ready, and be on hand to assist. Though, really," looking critically about the room, "there'll be but very little to do."

"Then I think we'll come the day before the party—on the 23d, if that will suit Mrs. Longden."

"Perfectly. I'm sorry you can't stay," as Mrs. Taylor rose to go. "Mrs. Longden will be disappointed to miss you."

All the way to Millbridge Mrs. Taylor thought over what she had heard, that morning, in the parsonage. It was impossible to put it out of her mind.

"I didn't imagine they objected to a birthday celebration," was her honest reflection. "And I don't believe any one else ever dreamed it. But a good many of the things they said were true. And I guess if Robert Coolidge and Thomas Elwell and some of the rest of them could have heard what I did, 'twould set them thinking!"

Then, after a minute's silence: "I—I believe I'll tell—them. It's my—duty."

That evening, after finishing her work, Mrs. Taylor hurried across to Mrs. Wilcox's.

"Then he doesn't want another birthday party?" said Mrs. Wilcox, more to herself than if she expected an answer from her caller, after Mrs. Taylor's report.

"He doesn't object to the—party," explained Mrs. Taylor, quickly. "It's the—kind. I think the best thing to do is to call together the different committees and see what change can be made."

"And be sure to have Thomas Elwell, Robert Coolidge and Eastman Kelso there," suggested Mrs. Wilcox.

"But suppose they won't come?"

"They must—come," exclaimed Mrs. Wilcox, vigorously. "It's not a question of 'won't'—it's a question of have to!"

The meeting—at was at Mrs. Taylor's—was long and exciting. At first, some of the men, including Robert Coolidge and Eastman Kelso, impulsively declared their intention of withdrawing from the church; but at length better counsel prevailed.

"I suppose I have been negligent of my duties," finally confessed Mr. Coolidge. "I've realized it myself, right along, although I haven't had the courage to acknowledge the fact and change about."

"I'm in the same position," declared Nelson Maynard, as soon as Mr. Coolidge had sat down. "I think I now see my position in the right light."

Then followed a regular "testimony meeting," in which Eastman Kelso, Thomas Elwell, and other influential members took part. And it was evident that, from that moment, better things were dawning for the Welchville church.

"I wonder if we'd better give up the birthday party altogether?" questioned Silas Ames, doubtfully.

"Give it—up? Never!" returned Eastman Kelso, with a positive shake of the head. "It has become—a tradition."

"But Mr. Longden doesn't want"—

"Nor do we—one of the kind we've been in the habit of having," interrupted Robert Coolidge. "I vote that we give the minister's family this party—by proxy."

"By what?" questioned Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Wilcox in chorus.

"Just what I say, by proxy. That is, sending as our representative a letter expressive of the decisions we each have made here tonight. There's no use of our traipsing into the parsonage for what I've in mind. We don't want to make this an eating affair," he added.

The morning before Mr. Longden's birthday Thomas Elwell called up the parsonage.

"There won't be anything sent over, as has been our usual custom," he explained to the minister, who answered the 'phone, "till evening. We have slightly modified our program, and the parsonage committee wanted me to say that there wouldn't be any need, acording to the change of plans, of their aiding Mrs. Longden in preparing for the company. You need expect no one at the house till 8 o'clock."

"I—I don't understand the meaning of it—this alteration i n their plans," said the minister, in evident perplexity, hanging up the receiver. "I hope they haven't heard anything I have said."

"They couldn't have, dear," replied Mrs. Longden, reassuringly. "You have said nothing except to me."

"That is true. But I am at a loss to understand the new arangement—and so sudden, too! I supposed their method of conducting the anniversary affair was as unchangeable as ever were the laws of the Medes and Persians."

"Let's not give ourselves any uneasiness, dear," remonstrated Mrs. Longden, with a 'twill-be-all right smile. "It may be the party will be more pleasant than we anticipate."

"Perhaps," doubtfully.

At eight o'clock, the evening of his birthday, the minister and his wife were waiting anxiously in the study to receive their guests. It was a beautiful night, and the entire church membership was expected.

Webb Kelso was the first to ring the bell.

"Come in, Webb," said Mr. Longden, cordially. "Aren't your father and mother coming?" he added, on seeing that the boy was alone.

"No, sir; and I can't come in tonight," replied Webb. "But father wanted me to give you this."

The minister took the envelope, and the boy turned and went down the steps.

"A money donation," was Mr. Longden's brief comment; and there was a touch in his voice that indicated there was something else he'd by far rather have than mere gold or bank notes.

Howard Coolidge was the next to ring the parsonage bell.

"Can't come in?" said Mr. Longden, in anxious perplexity. "And your family's not coming either?"

"No, sir; but they sent this," and the boy gave the minister the second envelope.

"More money," and Mr. Longden gave a distressed sigh.

From then on, in rapid succession, the door bell rang, and each time there was an envelope left, but no one from the entire Welchville congregation—came in.

"I wonder what it can mean?" and there was a mingling of curiosity and astonishment in the minster's voice.

"Open them and see," suggested Mrs. Longden, as soon as there was a lull in the ringing of the bell.

And when he did, the minister started with astonished surprise.

"Mary, listen!" he exclaimed, and Mr. Longden read aloud the first missive he opened:

My Dear Brother: Realizing that, for our church to succeed and prosper, there is need of something more than a mere monthly drawing of a check, or a Sunday congregation to listen to your excellent sermons—and better ones we have never heard—I hereby promise, with God's help, to be a more efficient worker in His service. I will take my part in the work of the Sunday school, and give my presence and support to the mid-week meetings, and in every way, henceforth, strive to live and act the part of the Christian that I heretofore have professed to be.

This is my part of the contribution to the birthday party—my proxy representative; and I trust it may give you one tenth of the joy in receiving it, that I get in sending the same.

Robert Coolidge.

"Mary!" and in the minister's voice was a note of gladness that had long been wanting. "Do—do you suppose the other donations are of the same"—

Mr. Longden's voice trembled with happy anticipation.

"It won't take long to see," replied the little wife, with subdued joy.

And they were—every one—strikingly similar to the proxy which Mr. Coolidge had sent.

"It's what I've prayed for and worked for ever since coming to Welchville," was the minister's grateful comment in the midst of his reading. "This is the kind of a birthday party that's worth while."
—Adelbert F. Caldwell, in Zion's Herald.

Begun on page five.

house and two at the church. Had good preaching, one convert, one to join the church. The meeting was dull, tho' there was good accomplished. We had the good gospel word preached so plainly to us. It made us feel better, and want to do more for the Master. There are some still in their sins; we would be so glad to see them become Christians. We were glad to have Bro. Burgess with us in the meeting; hope he will come again. The meeting continued until Thursday with very large congregations. Think all were blessed with the good gospel word that was brought to them that took heed of it. Our pastor filled his regular appointment here Sunday; preached another one of his good able sermons. It was good and helpful to each one of us.

Had three more to join the church Sunday.

Since my last report the altar rail has been painted and we have a set of pulpit chairs which add much to its appearance.

Bro. Ledbetter's little girl broke her arm while his meeting was going on at Hawkin's Chapel. Bro. Ledbetter says she is getting along all right, which I am glad to hear.

Vannah Shearin, (Rep.)

September 9, 1912.

MITCHELL'S GROVE, GUILFORD CT.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment second Sunday, preached a very helpful sermon. Our special meeting will begin at this place first Sunday in October, he pastor, Rev. T. A. Plyler has secured the help of Rev. J. H. Moton. We are looking and hoping for a good meeting.

Our Sunday school is in progress and we are much pleased to see some of the parents bringing their children instead of sending them. We wish so much parents would come to Sunday school with their children. We had sixty three in school last Sunday and out of that number there was twenty eight of them in the primary class. We regret very much the moving from our midst of Mr. A. J. Luck, who has served the Sunday school as Bible teacher for a considerable length of time. Mr. W. L. Kivett has been elected teacher of the Bible class to succeed Mr. A. J. Luck. We appreciate Mr. Kivett's helping hand in this work. Our township Sunday school convention will meet at this place next Sunday at two o'clock. All Sunday school workers invited to attend. We are expecting some good speakers and hope we may all be benefited and that we may go back to our homes with renewed energies, be more determined to try to save the young people and children, for we feel the Sunday school work is a great work indeed.

Our church and community has lost a kind friend and good neighbor in the death of Mrs. Chas. Bolton who died recently. While she was not a member of our church still we feel the loss of such a kind woman. She was sick for some time, but always seemed to be very patient, and we feel when life is over we shall meet again up yonder, for she left this testimony that all was well and she was going home. What a consolation to the bereaved. May the Lord comfort them and bind up their broken hearts and help them to so live when they too shall come down to the dark valley and shadow of death that Jesus will go over with them and they shall be forever together praising God throughout eternity.

Your mother has gone to heaven above,
To see the God of perfect love;
And when the storms of life are past,
May you all meet in heaven at last.

She has left this world of care
For a land where all is love,
Where the angels bright and fair
Sing of Jesus and His love.

All her troubles now are past,
And her sorrows all are o'er,
For she has reached her heaven at last
O'er on that shining shore.

Will we meet her over there
In that home beyond the sky,
In that land so bright and fair
Will we meet her by and by?

M. P.

HENDERSON.

Why should any one wish to know what we of Henderson are thinking and doing? Yet so it is but there's nothing worth reporting, except "such as will be and has been before."

We have sweltered through the hot summer, until again the nights are cool. We have heard politics of all kinds talked till the subject does not interest. We have gazed at the "skies of brass" and the quiet stars and the lingering sick, and tried to pray, and wondered if our great Creator would be attent to the wrigglings and cries of worms of his dust and alter his laws to please them. And the drouth continues and the fields produce no bread, and the sick are still sick.

"And yet we feel that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ills."

You asked why the people are not more interested in the church. Write an article on what the church can do, is doing and will do for the people. Skip all generalities and clerical phrases, and write as a real man to real men of real things. It seems to me the trouble is that the church teaches and requires belief in so many things that plain people do not, can not believe or understand. Isn't belief dependent in each individual case upon the impression the evidence makes upon the individual mind? And I wonder sometimes why a man should be condemned for not believing.

T. T. H.

Sept. 9, 1912.

Monroe Ct.

Dear Bro. Swain and Herald:—

I am at home hoping to rest a few days, having been in special meetings for nine weeks, day and night.

The first Sunday in July, our meeting began at Beaver Creek. Bro. Martin my help and did great work. The meeting closed the 8th day, with 39 conversions, 6 accessions. The church was greatly revived.

The fourth Sunday in July, our meeting began at Rose Hill, Bro.A. O. Lindley did most of the preaching; it was highly appreciated by all that heard him. The church was much revived and worked hard to get every one saved. Closed the 6th day with 37 conversions and 13 accessions.

'We also had a nice Children's day at Rose Hill. The collection was $6.40. We are proud of the people at this place, they are a goahead people, and are trying to come to the top, and I believe they will.

On the first Sunday in August I started a meeting at Mt. Moriab. We had a very good meeting, but not what it should have been; it was a busy time and the people could not attend. We are going to hold a few days' meeting later in the fall.

The second Sunday in Aug. we closed a wonderful revival at Bethesda, Bro. W. P. Martin assisted me and while he was pastor of this circuit for many years it seemed to be new preaching to them. He did fine preaching and with great power. We had 48 conversions and 13 accessions. The people of Bethesda deserve much credit for the work they have done this year in building a good large church house and buying an organ and a gas light plant. God will bless such sacrificing people; they will soon have the best church on Monroe charge.

Our meeting closed Sept. the 8th at New Hope. We had a good meeting, 14 conversions, no accessions yet.

Total conversions. . . . . 138.
Total accessions, ... 32.

If my neighbor pastors had done as much for me as I did for them I would have perhaps 138 accessions, but I am glad that it is so that they can be saved in our churches.

I have three more meetings to hold yet on this charge this fall. I hope that this circuit can be divided, we need two men here and I believe that this work will pay two preachers easier than the one, for they could get among the people and that is the way to build up this circuit.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Sept 8th, 1912. J. W. Self.

Burlington.

The attendance at Sunday School Sunday was 180, an increase of 24 over the preceding Sunday, and the offering amonuted to $3.36.

Bro. C. E. Hornady was elected Secretary-treasurer to succeed Bro. Crutchfield, who has moved away.

We are very glad to report that the work on our new Sunday school rooms has been begun again. A business meeting of the church, Sunday school and congregation was held Monday night, and plans for the completion of the work were formulated. We feel sure in saying that the work will be pushed forward to completion as rapidly as possible.

On the second Sunday in October we will begin our special meeting. Our pastor has secured the services of Rev.W. F. Ashburn to assist in the meeting.

Bro. T. T. Stafford is spending his week in Randolph county, near Asheboro, visiting relatives. He is taking his annual vacaion.

Paul Davis son of our pastor, returned first of the week from High Point where he has spent a week with relatives and friends.

Our Third Quarterly Conference will be held next Wednesday night, Sept. 18th.

The sad news was heralded over our town last Friday that Mr. Cyrus Shepherd was dead. Mr Shepherd was a member of the Reformed church, and was loved and held in high esteem by the entire town and community. Our people were peculiarly grieved because of the fact that Mr. Shepherd was the principal carpenter and workman on our Sunday school rooms. He was sick only about a week. He was a good Christain, a good, law-abiding citizen and an excellent mechanic of his trade. "A genuine good man is gone," are the words being expressed by the people of the town. C. B. W.

Sept 10th, 1912.

Hobbs, Chapel, Greensville Ct.

Bro.Ashburn preached for us again last Sunday, using for his text the twelfth verse of the one hundred and third Psalm: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us." The congregation was small, owing to the protracted meeting held at the Oak Grove M. E. Church. I have often wondered why many people will go to other churches when there is services at their own chuerh. Can they possibly fel that they can do more good? It seems to me that we may have a glorious meeting; that many sinners will be brought to Him who doeth all things well. Will you not also remember this meeting in your prayers?

Dora J. Pair.

Sept. 5, 1912.

—Bro. W. A. Speer, of Winston, is in Greensboro, taking treatment. He has been unwell all this year, suffering some malady which occasionally brings on fainting spells. We hope he will soon find health. He is too useful a man to be laid on the shelf.

—Elon College opens with the largest attendance ever. This is the result of earnest work on the part of President Harper and others.

—The third Quarterly Conference of Laurel Hill circuit, held at Tabernacle church on the 29th day of June, 1912, would give this expression of its sorrow at the death of Henry O. Causey, an official of that body.

Born 14th of March, 1870; married to Miss Alice Livingston, 1903; and died after several months lingering illness 7th of June. 1912. An affectionate husband and father, an, accomodating neighbor and peaceful citizen.

Our prayer shall be that the widow and two little fatherless boys may have the protection, guidence and defense of the God the husband and father served, and may they all meet in Heaven.

F. B. McCall, President.
C. C. Snead, Secretary.

(The above was a son of Robert Causey of Level Cross.— Editor.)

—The address of Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., is changed from Greenville, O., to High Point, N. C.

Begun on page 2.

—and before this indubitable object lesson Mile End Waste surrendered.

The news of William Booth's success spread all through the East End and farther. Branches of the Mission sprang up; converted and remade men became efficient Mission workers. Theatres, halls, tents were pressed into use. The Mission in Mile End Waste became the centre of a new movement, undenominational, earnest, vigorous, restless, and directed most toward the help of the unfortunate. A rich man offered $30,000 to build a hall on conditions that would limit Mr. Booth's freedom of speech and action. He declined and fought on in his own way. In a few years the number of missions and of workers had grown so great that he summoned a conference of his fellow evangelists. In effect and without his volition he had practically founded a new movement in religion, and one so great and so rapidly growing that no man could foresee where it would cease, for it was throughout animated with the exalted fire and absolute devotion of the founder, which was a faith able to remove mountains.

In January, 1877, the movement had reached a point where a definite polity and new organization of wider scope were required, and the end of that year saw the founding of the Salvation Army.

The adoption of the name came about in a curiously unpremeditated way. As the head of the new movement Mr. Booth had gathered around him men who were at one with him and acted as his secretaries. One day he was walking up and down his study, dictating when he used these words:

"The Christian Mission is a volunteer army."

He paused in his dictation and looked thoughtfully over his secretary's (now Commissioner Railton, the pioneer of our work in America) shoulder at the written line, took up the pen, scored out the word "volunteer" and wrote above it "salvation," and went on dictating. This was the first time the word was used, and it made such an impression that it began insensibly to be thought of as an appropriate name for the Mission; it grew up on the imagination of men; they liked it; finally, they adopted it.

The use of titles developed similarly. One of the Mission evangelists, preaching to his fishermen of Whitby, had been called "Captain;" other Mission evangelists came to be known by the same title. To call them "Reverend" when they were chiefly laymen was not feasible, whereas merely "Mr.," of course, was no appropriate designation. The military nomenclature came handily in men's mouths; as William Booth was the head of the movement, men began to call him "General." The title seemed admirably to fit him because of his commanding figure and presence, his great energy and ready resources, and his militant attitude toward evil. The rest of the military organization, the division of The Army into corps and commands, the marching, bands and uniforms, came of themselves.

Rapidly the movement spread all about the British Islands. From the meeting of outcasts in the old tent in Whitechapel had grown a new and tremendous force, directed, animated, inspired by one man engrossed in one great idea. As always happens whenever a new thought threatens to become popular, the Booth missions first, and then The Salvation Army, were subjected to very bitter attacks from their fellow Christians and others. Formalists were horrified at the unconventional methods of these soul-savers. The men and women that went to the Salvation rallies were called hoodlums and riff-raff. Much question seemed to be entertained whether the Christian religion could properly be extended toward the fallen, and many persons seemed to believe that at least no one could with propriety interest one's self in the spiritual welfare of the lowest strata. General Booth himself was the chief target of abuse. Men accused him of playing for his own personal profit upon the popular appetite for war; he was said to be accumulating personal wealth from the collections taken in support of the Mission work; the man that all his life long had left to his Maker the question of daily bread, and had never cared for any material object, was said to have made a fortune out of the operations of the Salvation Army, and so on. The churches often bitterly assailed The Army; some clergymen seemed more incensed against it than against evil itself.

Upon all these manifestations General Booth looked unmoved. He had the armor against attack that only the good man can ever come by, which is the knowledge of pure intentions. He went on unflinchingly with his great work, spreading it into every town, village and hamlet. "Posts" of The Salvation Army sprang up everywhere; "barracks" were built; the soldiers were sent forth to daily attacks upon evil conditions; Rescue Work in the slums was put (for the first time) upon the basis of a scientific plan; thousands of young men and women enrolled themselves in the ranks of The Army, inspired by one great man's world and example to use their lives for the benefit of their fellows.

Not always without danger as well as discomfort. In the early days of 1882, to take one example, they faced a terrible riot in Sheffield. General and Mrs. Booth led the procession. A great horde of ruffians from the worst quarter of the city undertook to disperse the Salvationists. The streets were filled with the mob. The police were overpowered. Sticks and stones, brick-bats and cudgels flew through the air. The Salvationists were attacked, beaten and kicked. Not even the presence of the gentlest of women, bent on the noblest of errands, restrained the rioters. The Salvationists marched steadily on, often covered with blood and filth; not one raised a hand in defence; they merely sang and prayed—and marched. Lieutenant Davidson, a former champion wrestler, conspicious for his great size, was beaten into insensibility and must be carried to a hospital with a fractured skull. With his gigantic strength he might have wrought havoc among his assailants. He contented himself with praying for them.

Arrived at the hall the bruised and bleeding officers marched upon the stage and began a service of prayer and praise.

Any wise observer could have foreseen then that such a spirit could not be turned aside by any force at man's command.

The same year, Great Britain having been well organized. The Army extended its operations to India, Canada, the United States. It moved upon France and entered Paris. From that time it has spread steadily around the world. Germany and the Scandinavian countries were quickly organized; one nation after another was invaded until now The Salvation Flag flies and The Salvation Army march is heard in every country in Europe except in Russia, and it would seem as if the time was nearly ripe for the entering of that country.

The American Division is one of the most important departments. General Booth has always entertained a deep affection for America. One of his early inspirations had been an American evangelist named Caughey, who was then traveling in England and attracting great crowds, and for Caughey's sake and for other reasons he had thought often of the American field. The record of The Army here was not different from its record elsewhere. It took root at once, because it contained a vital principle and because it was inspired by a man with a genius for leadership, a man to whom organization, method, system and indefatigable effort were natural gifts.

Wherever The Army went it addressed itself practically to the problems of poverty and the unfortunate. Its first mission on earth is to carry the Gospel every where, but first among the lowliest and least cared for.

In America practically every branch of Army work is in operation. We have done our share of Colonization work. Our total number of converts averages from 60,000 to 70,000 annually in this country—a figure which places us right at the forefront of evangelistic agencies. Our Social Work is ever growing.

My father's memorable visit to Japan, where he was received by the Mikado and deference was shown him at every point visited, is so recent as to be still fresh in the mind of the reader, and the same may be said of the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws upon him by the ancient University of Oxford. The sympathetic interest shown by the King and Queen of England in receiving him in audience shows the tremendous change in sentiment which has taken place in that land, which has found its reflection in similar interviews with crowned heads and presidents in many other countries, including our own, some of whom have become regular contributors to the funds of The Army.

"I AM SO GLAD THAT OUR FATHER IN HEAVEN"

Memory Hymn for September.

By Amos R. Wells.

One of the leading hymn-writers of the United States was P. P. Bliss. Indeed, Mr. Bliss probably wrote more hymns that are held in high esteem by the church to-day than any other American, with the single exception of Fanny Crosby.

His life was one of exceptional interest. He was born in Clearfield County, Penn., July 9, 1838. His family was a poor one, living in a log house. His father removed several times to Ohio and back again to Pennsylvania, so that the lad had little schooling.

Mr. Bliss's name was originally "Philipp." Not relishing the eccentric spelling, Mr. Bliss in later years used the superfluous "P" as a middle initial, writing his name "Philip P. Bliss," or, more commonly "P. P. Bliss."

His father taught him religion by his singing, praying, and Bible-reading, and every day his mother gave him lessons. Early in his boyhood he showed a passion for music, and would sing and play on rude instruments that he himself made. He was ten years old when he heard his first piano as he was passing by a house. The poor, barefoot boy was so fascinated that he dared to enter the house and stand at the parlor door. The young lady who was playing the piano stopped when she saw him. "O lady, play some more," said the boy; but, far from being moved by his evident appreciation of the music, the young woman answered him rudely, "Get out of here with your great feet."

At the age of eleven young Bliss set out from his father's house to work on a farm, all his clothes being tied up in a handkerchief. At the age of thirteen we find him still working on a farm, getting the munificent wages of $9 a month. At the age of fourteen he was assistant cook in a lumber-camp and the next year he began to cut logs, and then worked in a sawmill. During all this time he went to school when he could. In 1850 there was a revival in the schoolhouse, and, though he had always loved the Savior, he then made public profession of his faith, and became a member of the Baptist church. In 1855 he had the rare privilege of a whole winter in school, and made so good use of his opportunity that the next year he himself taught a school. About this time he enjoyed his first singing-school, J. G. Towner being the teacher, and soon afterward he attended his first musical convention, in charge of the famous composer, W. B. Bradbury. Next we find him teaching in the academy of Rome, Penn.

He married, and his wife was indeed a helpmeet. She was a Presbyterian, and Mr. Bliss also joined that church, becoming the superintendent of the Sunday school. He heard of the Normal Academy of Music at Genesee, N. Y., and longed to go so much that he broke down crying. He had not a cent in the world, and his wages were only $13 a month. Seeing his grief, his wife's grandmother brought out her stocking with its hoard of silver, a sum of more than $30, and gave it to him for that purpose. He became a music-teacher, and gave himself up to the fascinating art.

In 1864 he wrote and published his first song, "Lora Vale," and for the rest of his remaining twelve years of life he was writing songs and giving concerts, which were very popular. Mrs. Bliss went with him on his concert tours. He wrote many songs for Sunday-school books.

Meeting Mr. Moody, Major Whittle, and other evangelists, he himself became an evangelist, and was remarkably successful, especially with young people. He was on one of these evangelistic tours with his wife when both of them were killed in the great railroad disaster at Ashtabula, O., December 29, 1876. The train was precipitated by the fall of a bridge down a ravine sixty feet deep. The cars caught fire, and 100 of the passengers were killed. The death of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss under circumstances so tragic was a deep sorrow to the Christian world. He and his wife were greatly beloved wherever they were known, and his songs were sung everywhere, and have continued to be sung. Among the most famous of these are "Hold the fort," "Are your windows open toward Jerusalem?" "There's a light in the valley," "Only remembered by what I have done," "What shall the harvest be?" "Let the lower lights be burning," "Whosoever will," "Free from the law, oh, happy condition!" "Only an armor-bearer," "Pull for the shore," "Down life's dark vale we wander," "The light of the world is Jesus," "Almost persuaded," "Hallelujah, 'tis done," "The half was never told," "More holiness give me," "More to follow," "Daniel's Band," and "I will sing of my Redeemer." To this last must be added our memory hymn for this month, "I am so glad that our Father in heaven." Of this hymn Major Whittle, in his life of Mr. Bliss, writes as follows:

"I think it was in June, 1870, that 'Jesus loves me' was written. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were at that time members of my family, at 43 South May Street, Chicago. One morning Mrs. Bliss came down to breakfast, and said, as she entered the room: 'Last evening Mr. Bliss had a tune given him that I think is going to live and be one of the most used that he has written. I have been singing it all the morning to myself, and cannot get it out of my mind.' She then sang over to us the notes of 'Jesus loves me'. The idea of Mr. Bliss in writing it was that the peace and comfort of a Christian were not founded upon his loving Christ, but upon Christ's love to him, and that to occupy the mind with Christ's love would produce love and consecration in keeping with Rom. 5:5: 'The love of God (to us) is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given to us.' This view of gospel truth was at this time being very preciously brought to the souls of believers in Chicago by the preaching of Moorhouse and Mr. Moody and by the Dublin tracts and English commentaries upon gospel truth, which, through Mr. Moody, began to be circulated among Christians. How much God has used this little song to lead sinners and fearful, timid Christians to look away to Jesus' eternity alone can tell.

Mr. Sankey had a beautiful experience with this song. A little girl, a member of his singing-class, lay dying, and as he was talking with her one day she said, "Don't you remember when you were teaching us to sing, 'I am so glad that Jesus loves me,' you told us that if we only gave our hearts to Him He would love us? and I did give my heart to Him." Mr. Sankey added, "What that little dying girl said to me helped to cheer me on more than anything I had heard before, because she was my first convert."

A missionary of the American Sunday

School Union once sang that song in a meeting he was conducting in a small town in Missouri, where he had just organized a Sunday school. At the close of the song the missionary asked: "Are you glad? If not, why not?" On this a young man rushed up to the missionary, threw his arms about him, and said: "O, that song! I could not keep away from it, and it has saved me."

The hymn itself is as follows:

I am so glad our Father in heaven
Tells of His love in the Book He has given;
Wonderful things in the Bible I see;
This is the dearest, that Jesus loves me.
Chorus.
I am so glad that Jesus loves me;
Jesus loves me, Jesus loves me;
I am so glad that Jesus loves me,
Jesus loves even me.

Though I forget Him and wander away,
Kindly He follows wherever I stray;
Back to His dear loving arms would I flee,
When I remember that Jesus loves me.

O, if there's only one song I can sing,
When in His beauty I see the great King,
This shall my song in eternity be,
"O, what a wonder that Jesus loves me."
—C. E. World.

CHILDREN'S HOME DAY.

Pastors and Sunday school superintendents will please keep the thought before their people that Sunday September 29th is Children's Home Day for the entire Methodist Protestant Church. Every Sunday school, and every congregation is asked to make an offering to the building fund of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home on or about that day. Individuals who may not attend church that day are also asked to make an offering. Send your offering to your church or Sunday school so that proper credit may be given, or send direct to Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point, N. C. On yesterday Mrs. Dixon visited the Thomasville Orphanage, and when she went in to the office Miss McCracken who is in charge of the office said, "I am so glad you have come. As soon as I heard that your church was going to build a Home for children I said I am going to give five dollars to that work, and I am glad for the opportunity of paying it to you now."

This young lady has been engaged in the actual work of caring for Orphan's for about seventeen years, and she freely gave of her meager earnings for the erection of a Home in another denomination.

Our own people are also thoroughly interested in this work and are contributing and will contribute. A brother told me the other day of his little girl who raised chickens and gave $3.00 to Denton last year, and he said, "She has a calf to sell now which will bring about $5.00 and she is going to put that into the building fund."

I met a man some days ago who is 91 years old. We were talking of the Children's Home, and his eyes filled with tears as he said, "That is a noble work. I was an orphan boy, and was raised by a Mr. and Mrs. Thompson at Thompsonville, N. C. I can just remember when Mr. Thompson came for me and took me home on a pillow in front of him on horse back. When we reached the home mother Thompson came out and took me down and kissed me and said, God bless the little soul, and that prayer has been with me all these years."

Thank Bro. T. L. Whitaker for his article of last week. Let every one who may feel led to do so write an article for The Herald, for The Methodist Protestant, and for the Methodist Recorder. This call is being made throughout the entire church.

Yours in His name,
A. G. Dixon.

High Point, Sept. 10, 1912

—Atlanta, Ga., September 7,— The Farm Improvement Department, which the Southern Railway System has decided to establish, was organized yesterday at the Piedmont Hotel at a meeting of the thirty men who will make up this department. The purpose of this department as stated by President Finley is to help the farmers of the Southeast to increase their yield per acre and its field agents will work personally with farmers urging the adoption of approved methods of culture and giving them the benefit of expert advice.

—Drink caused Charlie Gaster, a boy of 18, to shoot policeman Daniel of Randleman, and now Charlie lies in Asheboro jail. Better let drink alone from this time, Charlie, or it will get you into worse trouble.

—P. D. Gold of this city, a prominent insurance man, says that "high society" women are not as good risks for insurance as plain people who live simply. That should surprise no one or be contradicted by no one.

It seems that the unsettled condition of society in Mexico has about convinced President Taft that the United States should intervene in the interest of its citizens residing in Mexico. He is said to be seriously thinking of calling congress together to authorize such a move.

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSES.

	Due	Paid
Alamance	10.00	10.00
Albemarle	2.00	2.00
Anderson	3.00	3.00
Asheboro	6.00	6.00
Asheville	3.00	2.50
Buncombe	3.00	2.50
Burlington	8.00	8.00
Caroleen	3.00	1.00
Cleveland	11.00	4.00
Concord	5.00	5.00
Davidson	6.00	4.25
Denton	2.00	2.00
Efland	3.00	1.00
E. Winston & U. Ridge	2.00	2.00
Fairview	5.00	5.16
Flat Rock	9.00	9.00
Forsyth	7.00	7.00
Gaston	2.00
Gilburg	1.00	1.00
Graham & Haw River	2.00	2.00
Granville	9.00	9.00
Greensboro	14.00	14.00
Greensville	5.00	5.00
Guilford Ct.	6.00	6.00
Halifax Ct.	8.00	8.00
Haw River	9.00	9.00
Henderson	15.00	15.00
High Point	$11.00	$11.00
Ivy	3.00	3.00
La Grange	3.00	3.00
Lebanon	3.00	3.00
Liberty	10.00	10.00
Lincoln	10.00	10.00
Littleton	10.00
Mebane	4.00	4.00
Mecklenburg	3.00
Mocksville	4.00	4.00
Monroe	3.00
Mt. Hermon	10.00	10.00
Oak Ridge	10.00	10.00
Orange	3.00	3.00
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	7.00	7.00
Randleman Ct.	10.00	10.00
Randolph	10.00	8.06
Richland	10.00
Roanoke	10.00	10.00
Rockingham	2.00
St. Paul	2.00	2.50
Saxapahaw	5.00	5.00
Siler City	3.00	2.23
Spring Church	5.00	5.00
Stanley	9.00
Tabernacle Ct.	13.00	13.00
Thomasville	3.00	3.00
Uwharrie	3.00
Vance	8.00	6.82
Welch Memorial	1.00	1.00
Why Not Ct.	10.00	10.00
Winston Church	10.00	10.00
Yadkin College	10.00	10.00
Yarborough	5.00	5.00

Two charges even up this time.

J. F. McCulloch, Treasurer.

$15,000.00 MARK PASSED. SPECIAL EFFORT TO BE MADE TO RAISE $20,000.00 BY OCTOBER FIRST.

We are so thankful to be able to report that we have passed the Fifteen Thousand Dollar mark in pledges for the Children's Home. It is by the effort of Mr. Geo. T. Penny, of High Point, that we are able to do this, and we feel that we owe it to him to make this public acknowledgement, however, we appreciate the work of others who have also given valuable assistance.

As stated in our previous report, we are going to continue the canvass until Twenty Thousand Dollars is pledged. Why not raise the amount by the 1st day of October? We believe we can and we are going to ask the Canvassers and Ministers to join with us in this final effort, knowing that if we all do our very best we can succeed.

In reporting a pledge of $50.00 last week from Mr. S. V. Pickens of Hendersonville, it should have been reported as the contribution of Mr. S. V. Pickens and wife, Cornelia S. Pickens.

Total amt. reported last week. $14,455.29

New pledges:

High Point, Mr. Geo. T. Penny, solicitor, ...$435.00
Thomasville, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Solicitor 112.65
Mebane Sunday School, J. W. Nicholson, Solicitor,
Class No. 1. .....1.10
Class No. 2. .....5.00
Class No. 3. .....1.25
Class No. 4. .....3.25
Fair Grove Church, Rev. C. E. M. Raper, Solicitor, ...5.00
S. S. of Welch Memorial Church, G. E. Kerr, Solicitor....17.14
Mt. Herman Circuit, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, Solicitor..16.00
Asheboro, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Solicitor, ...1.00
Browers Chapel, ...1.20
Greensboro, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Mrs. A. B. Kimball, Solicitors, ...10.00
Asheville, Miss Jessie Williams, Solicitor, ...1.50
Summerfield, J. B. Ogburn, Solicitor, ...35.00
Winston-Salem, S. M. Needham, Solicitor, ...37.50

Total, ...682.64

Grand Total, $15,137.93

Yours very truly,
T. A. Hunter, Chairman,
By, J. M. Millikan, Sec. & Treas.

SOME STRIKING EXAMPLES.

Two young men who deliver ice in Thomasville gave five dollars each for the Children's Home on yesterday. A little colored boy who washes bottles in the same establishment said, "I am not going to be out done," and he ran his hand down into his pocket and pulled out ten cents and gave it.

In a home a little boy of about ten summers paid twenty-five cents, then turned to his little sister and said, "Don't you want to give something? I'll give you ten cents to give." Then to a little brother, "You give ten cents, I'll pay it for you."

Our children and young people throughout the entire denomination will do just this way if given a chance on or about September 29th. Will you give them a chance?

In His name,
Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

September 10, 1912

TREASURER'S REPORT ORPHAN'S HOME.

Harmony Church, Yarborough Ct...$10.00
Mrs. W. S. Crowson 1.00
Whitaker's Temple, S. S. 4.50
Star S. S. Why Not Ct. 1.93
Bethesda S. S., Halifax Ct. 9.16
Randleman S. S. 2.13
Henderson S. S. 3.75
Union Chapel S. S. Granville Ct.....3.18
Mrs. D. R. Williams 1.00
Giles Chapel S. S. Richland Ct.....2.50
Rose Hill S. S. Monroe Ct. 1.02
Tabernacle S. S. Tabernacle Ct.....75
Henderson S .S. 9.16

Total.....$50.08

Etta Auman.

T. MORGAN.

Bro. T. Morgan was born 1861, died July 28th, 1912. He became a Christian at the age of sixteen years and joined Palmyra M. E. Church in Stokes Co. near his home. A little later he made Winston-Salem his home and moved his membership, with his wife, to Winston M. P. Church where he remained a member in good standing for the remainder of his life.

In December, 1882, Bro. Morgan was married to Miss Sarah Lou Fletcher, who, with three children Paul, Clay and May, is still living. Four children of this happy union were taken to heaven in their infancy.

Bro. Morgan lived six miles from Winston and I did not therefore have an opportunity to know him well personally, but in the city where most of his life was spent he bears an untarnished name, a fact which shows the character of the man. He was industrious and energetic and by his frugality provided a good home for his family. In his death the communinty has lost a good citizen and the church a loyal member. He assured his wife that he was not afraid to die. He wanted to live, but if the Lord willed otherwise, he was submissive. This fact is a comfort no doubt to his loved ones and helps them to give him up. We pray that the Father of us all may sustain them and help them to so live that in His good time there may be a family reunion that shall never be broken.

S. W. Taylor.

Winston-Salem, Sept. 7, 1912.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

QUESTION.

What evidence do you find in the book of Ecclesiastes that Solomon did not write the book? (We want every member to answer this. We want to find out by this means who are keeping awake.—Editor)

We will wait a week before beginning on the next book.

—Tommy's Aunt: "Won't you have another piece of cake, Tommy?"

—Tommy (on a visit): "No, thank you."

—Tommy's Aunt: "You seem to be suffering from loss of appetite."

—Tommy: "That ain't loss of appetite. What I'm suffering from is politeness.'

—Sabbath desecration resulted in a terrible tragedy in Newark, N. J., last Sunday. A number of men in the presence of a great crowd were racing on motorcycles when the machine of Eddie Hasha, of Waco, Texas, plunged over the rail into the crowd and killed him and perhaps a dozen others besides seriously injuring as many more. Hasha was riding at the rate of 92 miles an hour. He was pitched fifty feet into the air and fell, a mass of bloody pulp, almost at the feet of his wife who was among the spectators. It might have happened on Monday and would have been a misuse of time then, but it would not have been so shocking an affair.

—A woman supposed to be incurable, having asked the legislature of her state to authorize her physician to end her life, has brought on a discussion of the morality involved. We believe it is commonly conceded that physicians have no right and that a legislature could give them no right to take life in such a case. There have been numbers of patients who have recovered health even after their cases have been given up by good physicians.

HOW TO KILL A SUNDAY SCHOOL

By George Rosenkrans.

1. Start the session always behind the schedule time.
2. Never change the order of service.
3. Always sing the hymns in funeral march time.
4. Let the teachers absent themselves and fail to arrange for a substitute.
5. Use little care in selecting teachers.
6. Have no organized classes or trained teachers.
7. Allow the class of young boys back in the corner to make a noise like a boiler shop.
8. Elect the same officers year after year.
9. Get in a rut and stay there.
10. Use only the church publications and omit the Bible.
11. Let the teachers neglect to show any interest in the scholars during the week.
12. Never observe Rally Day.
13. Have no system in grading and promoting scholars.
14. Fail to impress on the school the importance of the missionary movement and other benevolences.
15. Always appoint the same persons on Children's Day and Christmas committees.

THE CHAIN OF KNOTTY PROBLEMS

After visiting six or eight different Sunday school classes in one school, I noticed that almost every teacher was confronted with some question which caused her embarrassment. This circumstance led me to wonder why there was not a "chair" established in every Sunday school for the solving of knotty problems.

I would suggest that the most thorough Bible student in the school conduct a "question bureau," during the last five minutes of the session. The question arising during the lesson should be referred to him for answer. Each question, however, should bear the approval of the teacher, thus doing away with unprofitable and senseless questions.

BIBLE CHAINS

Beginning with the September number The Junior Christian Endeavor World is publishing a series of "Bible Chains." These are collections of Bible verses suitable to be committed to memory by the Juniors.

Each chain is upon one subject. The practical nature of these verse chains is shown by the first of the series on "Anger.":

A Bible Chain

On Anger

Cease from anger, and forsake wrath. Ps. 37:8.

Let not the sun go down upon your wrath.—Eph. 4:26.

Anger resteth in the bosom of fools.—Eccl. 7:9.

Every one who is angry with his brother shall be in danger of judgment.—Matt. 5:22 (R. V.).

A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger.—Prov. 15:1.

He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding.—Prov. 14:29.

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.—Prov. 16:32.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, SEPT. 22

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Believe! Believe Much! Believe Strongly!" John 11:17-27, 41-46.

In any arch that might be erected to represent Christianity, Faith would of necessity be the keystone. There is no other element that would make a suitable piece to bind the structure together. Faith is the crowning feature of a Christian life. Faith does not cause one to doubt; it is what helps to overcome doubt. Faith does not always make us succeed; it helps us to bear our failures. Faith alone will not save a man, for is it not said "Not every one that sayeth Lord, Lord, etc." Faith will cause us to work in the vineyard and Faith and Work together will give a crown of eternal life.

Faith causes one to overlook small disappointments on account of a firm belief in the ultimate justice of God and his purpose to bring to pass the things that are best for his people. Faith of the right kind does cause one to believe that God will do as we would have him do, but that he will do as He knows best.

Work should accompay faith. The old darkey expressed this rather quaintly if not in an orthodox illustration, when he said: "If I pray the Lord to send me a chicken, I never get it, but if I pray the Lord to send me to a chicken, I am most sure to get it every night I go out." The point is if we will go after what we want believing, we will be more likely to get it than if we sit down and wait for things to come to us.

In connection with this lesson, it would be well to take the Bible, get the concordance and locate some of the stirring lessons of Faith by Paul in his epistles to the people he loved. Find examples in modern literature of what has been accomplished through faith.

From Other Pens.

Belief is the acceptance of a map; faith is taking the voyage.—Dr. Jowett.

He that will believe only what he can fully comprehend must have a very long head or a very short creed.—Colton.

"Let us be content that the Lord is with us, and if we pay a dollar to him, he will give back to us; that with what measure we use in dispensing our obligations to him, he will use the same in giving back to us. My brother, we do not believe that, do we? Our trust in God is too shallow. Our faith will not let us launch out on his promises."

If a short dry spell comes, do not dispair of having enough to run you through it. Or if it rains a few days why grumble and complain? This is due to a lack of faith in God. It is a downright dishonor and discredit to him. Just as long as we are so exercised about things the provision of which lies with the Lord, just so long will we miss the highest joy and satisfaction of God's presence with us.

"The object of the faith that counts for the building of character is the thought of chiefest concern. "Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness." The One whom Abraham believed was able to influence him for good —to contribute the necessary element for the development of character. Not less important, then is the object of one's faith. Herein Ingersoll failed and built a character upon sand, rather than upon the rock."

"How is it that one man could accomplish so much?" was asked of a veteran missionary whose work had challenged the attention of the world. "I believe God." was the simple answer. Great faith in a great God—what can stand before it?

Some one has said that Columbus practically found America before he left Spain, and so far from being surprised when he saw the Western continent, he would have been surprised if he had not seen it. The expectancy of faith is a large element in success.

A check though signed by the richest man, will not do any good unless one has faith to present it. The doctor cannot cure a man who will not trust him enough to take his medicines and obey directions. A guide cannot lead us through the forest unless we believe him enough to follow him.—Peloubet's Notes.

Discussion Topics.

1. Give the names of some people who believed strongly.
2. Who among Bible Characters had Great Faith.
3. Have you faith great enough to undertake things for God?
4. Give your favorite Bible quotation on faith.

For Daily Reading.

Mon.,—Trembling faith Mark 9: 14-24
Tues.,—Astonishing faith Matt. 8:5-13
Wed.,—The mountain-mover. Mark 11:20-26

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Thurs.,—What faith can do Jas. 5:14-18
Fri.,—Faith's heroes Heb. 11:1-8
Sat.,—Believe on Heb. 2:1-6
Sun., Sept 22.—Topic—Believe! Believe

Electric Sparqs—Comment

1. No child can have a richer inheritance than a mother's faith.

2. The only greater thing than an earthly mother's faith is the heavenly Father's favor.

3. When a lie looks white there is something wrong with the vision.

4. He who is never misunderstood never does much that is worth while.

5. Your mother's faith in the Bible is worth more than a thousand volumes of critical unbelief.

WHY DON'T YOU GO TO CHURCH?

You are "too tired to go to church." That's sheer nonsense. There isn't a place on this continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day; doze in a hamock; loll in a rocking chair; go to sleep over a book. That isn't resting that's loafing. Tell yourself, honestly—did you ever in all your life see a loafer who looked rested? Did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time? The peojle who try to rest are always tired. Resting is the hardest work in the world when you make work of it. Two hours in church, two hour in the quiet; the music, the sermon, the reading, the uplift which comes from the new channels into which your mind is led, will rest you more physically, morally, intellectually, than all the day spent in trying to rest. Why don't you go to church?—Bob Burdette.

HAY FEVER.

I wish to know what to do for hay asthma? I am a man 32 years old, work in a grocery store. Affected in August and September. J. S.

Some years ago the writer picked up a little book, written by a German physician, who is long since dead, and in glancing over it found a brief mention of hay fever or coryza. He suggested that salt was the cause and that sufferers were liberal users of salt on their food.

In his investigations, he found that the system and tissues of such a person needed the salt and was crying out for it, and following the demand the sufferer ate large quantities of it. The trouble all arose, he said, from the fact that the salt eaten was not presented in a form that was acceptable to the system or that could be taken up and assimiliated by the tissues. He stated further that the salt must be supplied in the proper manner and a cure will surely follow.

The writer himself at that time being a sufferer from hay fever, saw the point and procured an attenuated preparation of Sodium Chloride and took small doses four times daily. The result was a most agreeable surprise, for after a few days treatment the hay fever was gone.

We do not wish to be understood as saying that all cases of hay fever are met with in those who use salt freely, for that would not be true, but the attenuated doses of Sodium Chloride in sugar or milk can be safely depended upon where indicated.

Among the many measures which contribute to the relief of the sufferer are these: keep the skin active by frquent bathing, eating and drinking intelligently, deep and skillful manipulation of the muscles of the neck and shoulders, and keeping the entire intestinal tract clean and free from waste matter.

All readers of this publication are at liberty at any time to write for information pertaining to the subject of health. Address all communications to the Home Health Club, 50[illegible]

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

EXCURSION TO FLORIDA.

Tuesday, September 17th, 1912.

Special train consisting of first class day coaches and Standard Pullman sleeping cars will leave Charlotte at 10:30, p.m., Tuesday, September 17th, and arrive at Jacksonville, Fla., 9:45, a.m., following morning.

Following low round trip rates will apply from stations named:

From.	To Jacksonville	To Tampa
Charlotte, N. C.	$7.50	$ 9.50
Concord, N. C.	7.50	9.50
Salisbury, N. C.	7.50	9.50
Lexington, N. C.	7.50	9.50
High Point, N. C.	7.50	9.50
Greensboro, N. C.	7.50	9.50
Shelby, N. C.	9.00	11.00
Blacksburg, S. C.	9.00	11.00
Rock Hill, S. C.	7.50	9.50
Ft. Mill, S. C.	7.50	9.50
Siler City, N. C.	7.50	9.50
China Grove, N. C.	7.50	9.50

Tickets will be sold on Tuesday, September 17th, 1912, good on regular train to Charlotte and on Special train from Charlotte arriving Jacksonville next morning connecting at Jacksonville for Tampa. Tickets will be good for seven days, returning on any regular train leaving Jacksonville until September 24th, 1912.

This is a rare opportunity to visit Florida at small cost. Surf bathing and Fishing at their best in the "Land of Flowers" during the month of September.

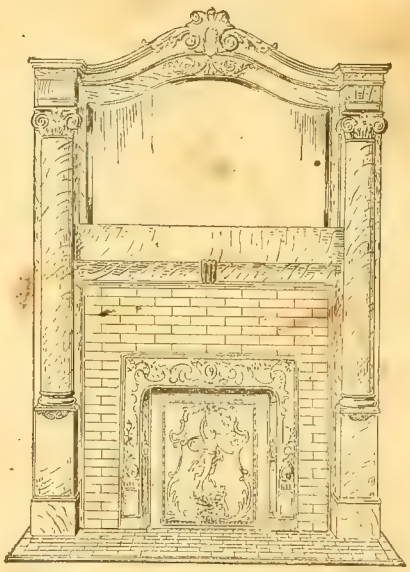
For Pullman reservations or any other information in connection with the trip, apply to any agent Southern Railway, or—

R. H. DeButts,
Division Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A., with name and address in full, and at least four cents in postage.

—Greensboro schools open with a larger attendance than ever before.

—Rev. J. B. Richardson, of High Point, dead.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles, and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

—Maine had a state election on Monday and elected a Republican governor. The present governor is a Democrat. The new legislature will probably have a small Republican majority.

—We wonder if it would not cost far less for the United States to bring all its citizens out of Mexico than to protect them in Mexico by sending soldiers. But then there are other questions involved besides that of present cost.

—Arkansas had a state election on Monday and went Democratic, as usual. The question of prohibition was also voted on.

—James McNamara, serving a life sentence for dynamiting the Los Angeles Times building, has been operated on for appendicitis. It is thought that he will recover.

—On Monday morning our streets in the vicinity of the school buildings were gay with gay children. It was opening day for the schools, and the children seemed glad.

—High Point has a gas plant.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1912. NUMBER 47.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD: Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

A WOMAN WHO SAVED A TOWN.

Just because Miss Virginia Brooks "didn't know how to quit" after she had started in the work of moral reform, West Hammond, Ind., is a far different town today from what it was a little more than a year and a half ago. Located at the very door way of Chicago, with fifty-five saloons in a voting population or 750 vice ridden, graft-ruled West Hammond was a stench in the moral nostrils of those who knew; and among people in general in that part of the country it had a reputation all its own—which, by the way, was anything but savory. And now? Well, that is the story which is now to be told.

Western papers have been calling this young woman reformer "a modern Joan of Arc." That may be right. The fact is, all who know her or have seen her describe her as mild of manner and suave of speech, as was the Maid of Orleans; and back of it all there is also the same courage—moral courage, the kind that gives her strength for every emergency—so that she has confronted corruptionists, divekeepers, saloonists, and even to their face has denounced them and then fought them to a standstill.

It is queer how all this came about. Two years ago this young woman was simply one among the many who are spending their lives in the round of social pleasures. Social uplift and welfare? She had no interest in that. Cleansing political cesspools? Why, she hardly knew they existed excepting in a general way. Her life was given over to social duties, to music, to amusement. Then suddenly she was awakened out of her complacency. It happened that she and her mother owned a few vacant lots in West Hammond, and the officials of that town sent them a bill for $2,000 as an assessment. Some assesment this, as any one who knows West Hammond would acknowledge, and the young woman of musical tendencies awoke. It did not look right. Sufficient is it to say at this point that, having investigated, Miss Brooks found her suspicions as to the honesty of the officials were confirmed. WestHammond was in the hand of vice, graft and corruption.

Miss Virginia Brooks.

And this was the "call" that came to this new reformer, who has suddenly appeared upon the horizon of general interest. It was enough.

Any one who has been in this community of the Central West and come into touch with its life even in the last degree, will recognize the difficulties that would confront one who should try to clean up the town. So let no one with the record before him of what has been accomplished here, ever say that a task is too difficult—that it cannot be done. Here was the formula in West Hammond Given one community, population largely Polish, vice entrenched in high and low places, saloons, dens, places of iniquity wide open, and one woman with a moral purpose. Just that and nothing more. Result—a new West Hammond.

The first thing that this young woman had to do was to place herself in a position where she could reach the voters, the men of the community But they were Poles, and she knew nothing of the language. What should she do? Only one thing—learn the language; and learn it she did, so that she could stand up before an audience of these transplanted Americans citizens and appeal to them. There might be an easy way of making a reformer among foreigners; if so, Miss Brooks did not know it. At least this way has the advantage of having worked, and that is the test after all.

Then she went at her special task, which was that of "cleaning up the town." It was work from the ground up; and she muust use what she termed "militant meetings." She went to mass meetings, where often she was the only woman present. Here she would denounce conditions, at times would read the names of all property-owners who had leased their places for saloons and evil resorts, and would appeal to the manhood of the community for better things. She created considerable of a sensation one day when she read a list of property owners of vice resorts at a meeting of a woman's club of the community, and the list revealed names in the connection that made some of the members decidedly uncomfortable. But it served to awaken conscience, and people began to inquire why something was not done by the officials.

A newspaper was started for the purpose of exposing graft that was discovered among the town officers who were protecting the dive-keepers. And then again big red posters were printed and posted on the front of every dive in the community, bearing these words:

WARNING TO DIVE!
Thirty Days to Vacate.
Virginia Brooks.

The sensation that followed such action as this can well be imagined. The divekeepers were furious, of course. They foamed with rage. They threatened all kinds of harsh things. And all against that young woman whose conscience had been aroused. And she? Why, she went on the even tenor of her way, or, rather, she kept everlastingly at it. She was in the war to the finish. She would neither give nor take puarter. Some one was to be driven out of West Hammond, and she did not propose that it be Virginia Brooks. In an interview she says:

"They threatened a variety of retaliation and tried to embarrass the work by starting suits against me, but it only served to arouse the people more. For our part, we tried in every way to interest the courts and the prosecuting attorney, but we never could get an official to act against them. It seemed discouraging at times, and we even contemplated, in the event of ultimate defeat, to organize a rival town. No one knows how powerful such a ring organization can be until an effort is made to clean it out. However, the time came when every one was up and fighting and determined that West Hammond must be clean, court or no courts. I told the people with all the emphasis I could command that they should rule, and, after studying over the situation, they, too, began to preach the same doctrine. We soon outnumbered the force of the saloon resort keepers—as the good citizenship does in every community."

And they won.

But that is not all. That is simply the record of the negative part of her work, momentous and important. But, having destroyed the bad, she now proceeded to build up the good. In an article in the National Municipial Review, Miss Rrooks, in answer to questions, says as to the results that have followed the work expended:

"I have saved for the Poles nearly $21,000 on reductions of overcharged assessments. I have succeeded in ousting an old clique that for years had been grafting on the school board, and in being elected myself to the office of president. This means that I will introduce into the neglected school manual training, domestic science, free night school, free kindergarten, and a playground. I have established a settlement house in Hammond, Ind., right across the State line, where the boys and girls have night classes, and where mothers who work can take their babies for care. There are some 32,000 Poles in this region, and the future looks to great achievement."

Such is the story written in a few short month by a young woman with a conscience stirred. She cleaned up a town; she saved the ignorant foreigner from the greed and wickedness of dive-keepers and grafters, and transformed their home life, opening before them mighty possibilities. And all because, having been aroused, she did not know how to quit. A good quality that.—Zion's Herald.

—Bro. T. A. Hunter, of the Finance Committee for the Children's Home, asks us to say that the Committee make no report this week, but will make a final report next week.

—Col. Roosevelt was shot on Monday night just after entering an automobile in Milwaukee to go to address a political meeting. The would-be assassin said he had been directed in a dream by the ghost of McKinley to avenge his death by killing Roosevelt. He fired only one time before he was disarmed. The wound was not serious enough to keep the redoubtable Colonel from making his speech, and it is thought that he will be well after a few days in a hospital, unless blood poisoning should set in. He has received many expressions of sympathy.

—The editor had a delightful time in High Point last Sunday. It was a pleasure to meet with the Baraca Class and hear the young men's earnest discussion of the lesson. The congregation in the preaching service was attentive and kindly appreciative of our message. It was a pleasure to note the improvements in the church too numerous to describe in detail. New Sunday school rooms of large size are being added to those built a few years ago. Our next pleasure was going to dinner with Bro. W. P. Pickett and his family in their hospitable home. And to close the series, Captain Rankin brought out his automobile and carried us home. Bro. Dixon was detained in Concord over Sunday by the interest in the meeting there. He and Mrs. Dixon have done a fine work in High Point.

We found the High Point people in expectancy of the corner stone laying and Dr. Davis' lecture today and tonight.

Bro. McCulloch: Please tell Sister Wall that we would be delighted to have her and Bro. Wall visit us and to move to our town. We certainly appreciate her notice of us and we feel that it has been through such prayers as they have prayed, that has helped to make our church possible. It will be done by conference we hope; they are pushing it right on. Bro. Kernodle living close by has relieved me quite a good deal the past two months; and he and his wife are experiencing some of the happiness of the grace some one wrote about in last week's Herald. Thank you, Sister Wall, and I would like to visit you though we do not know each other personally. This has drawn us toward you, and we have taken you to the throne of Grace with a God bless you and all. I want to thank everyone who has helped us in any way, for we have been faint many times, but still pursuing.

Please let me mention one time when it was dark as midnight. The next day I received from our beloved editor a letter like this, "Bro. Raper, do all you can, be faithful, don't despair, and when you have done all, be patient. I believe the church will be built." In a short time Bro. Kernodle had a phone message sent to me, "hold till I see you." He came in a few days and said do all you and your people can and I will finish. The Lord only knows how wife and I and our people felt, and still feel. Prayer moves the Almighty arm of God that moves the right. Come to see us, sister Wall, and we will do our best to make you enjoy it.

Fraternally,
C. E. M. Raper

TYPHOON DAMAGES—HELP NEEDED.

A great hurricane recently went over the part of Japan where most of our mission property is located, and left death and ruin in its path.

A cable message brings word that our property was damaged to the extent of a Thousand Dollars.

This is an extraordinary and imperative demand upon the Board's treasury for which there is no provision whatever, and is distinctly an additional burden.

Receipts are inadequate for the increasing regular needs of the growing work, and this must be met by a special appeal and gifts, which is provided for by the action of the Executive Committee of the General Conference in its recent meeting.

The Eastern Conference yesterday very promptly made a contribution for the repairs. I appeal to all our pastors and members to come immediately to the relief of the Board by asking for a special offering next Sunday, or the most suitable day therafter.

Personal contributions from friends of the cause will be greatly appreciated. It is hoped that a number will respond generously.

This matter requires haste. Please send your contributions to me at once.

Fred C. Klein.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec. & Treas.
316 N. Charles, St., Baltimore, Md.

—It gives a thrill to see the announcement that the king of Siam has granted throughout his kingdom complete religious freedom and has accepted Sunday as a rest day for his realm.

JUST A LITTLE LETTER.

By Franklin.

Many years and days have passed me,
Since my little sister wrote
Just a simple little letter,
Just a simple little note.

The little script is dimmed and faded,
With the trace of many years;
But it speaks in language silent,
Of many laugh and many tears.

It speaks of one who drooped and faded,
To pass away as summer flowers;
It almost gives a far-off odor
Of long-gone youthful, happy hours.

She was a child, she was a maiden,
And then became a woman true;
She lived, she died—and passed in dying
Forever from my mortal view.

But her little faded letter
Seems to bring her back to me,
That the maiden, girlish features
Are seen in witching tracery.

That I almost feel her presence,
That I almost hear her voice;
That I almost hear her footsteps,
As she moves in girlish choice.

Just a little faded letter,
Just a little faded note,
That my little sister scribbled,
As in her girlish way she wrote.

But it talks; it speaks a volume
That no other one can read;
To others but a bit of paper,
To me as precious as a creed.

And so it is; the years are passing,
And all are borne upon their tide,
Into the mystic, hidden future,
Where every one is soon to glide.

Oh! my Lord, is there no meeting
With the loved ones passed away?
Are our loved gone forever?
To us and them no future day?

This life is but a fleeting shadow,
A little wave upon the shore;
Is there not some compensation
In the vast Forevermore?

TRUST THE PROMISES.

Last winter a man crossed the Mississippi on the ice, and fearing it was too thin, began to crawl on his hands and knees in great terror; but when he gained the opposite shore, all worn out, another man drove past him gaily, sitting upon a sled loaded with pig-iron. That is just the way most Christians go on their pathway to heaven, trembling at every step lest the promises shall break under their feet, when they are secure enough for us to fold our hands and sing with confidence as we march to the better land.—Sel.

FROM REV. J. W. FRANK.

Dear Brother McCulloch:—

While our ship was waiting in Yokohama we visited our former home and were delighted to look upon familiar scenes, and glad to see indications of the continued prosperity of the work there. One of the two young men whom we formerly instructed and who have been preparing for the ministry was at our former home spending the summer in special study. He used to call me "father"; and it was a great pleasure to talk with him again. The M. P. Missionaries were at summer resorts; and therefore we failed to see them, greatly to our regret.

We reached Kobe the evening of August 29, where we were met by some of our missionaries and taken to the "Mission Home"—a home owned by the Mission for the use of any of our missionaries while temporally in the city.

In two hours after our arrival servants were at work and the pot boiling. The house being furnished and the markets teeming with fruits, vegetables and other food supplies, we are faring nicely. We are to remain here until after our Mission Conference which has been posponed till October 4. At that time our future residence will be decided upon. There are three North Carolinians in our Mission and there will be another when Brother Ogburn arrives next month. If I am not mistaken the latter is a nephew of Rev. T. J. Ogburn, of Greensboro.

Kobe is a great maritime center. Soon thirty-three million yen is to be spent in harbor improvements. Our Mission, conjointly with the Canadian Methodist mission, have a great educational plant here that is to be second to none. The whole of the twenty-two acres is to be developed and used for buildings, athletic grounds etc. The Divinity School is a splendid modern brick building. Our people are fortunate in having their headquarters in an enterprizing and promising city of four hundred thousand inhabitants. We have missionary residences in seven other cities.

In Kobe we have Sunday School and preaching in both English and Japanese. In our future home we will hardly have the luxury of English Sunday Schools and preaching; but we are here to give the Gospel to others, and it is our business to finish mastering the language and preach to the natives so that they may hear in their own language.

We send greetings to our friends of the M. P. Church, asking that we may still be remembered by them.

J. W. Frank.

Kobe, Japan, Sept. 13, 1912.

NOTICE!

Ministers and delegates who contemplate attending the next session of the N. C. Annual Conference, which convenes in Burlington, N. C. Nov., 21, 1912, send names at once to the pastor of Burlington church.

T. E. Davis, Pastor,

October 8, 1912.

CORRECTION.

The item $20.60 credited to East Bend Sunday school in former issue of the Herald should have been credited to Baltimore Sunday school, Forsyth circuit.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

THE SCIENTIFIC METHOD—AN INQUIRY.

The scientific method was welcomed into scholastic life as the true liberator of the mind. This method involves two principles—the skeptical attitude toward every positive statement and thorough investigation from the original sources of every proposition or tenet.

To the second of these principles theoretically there would be no objection. "Come and see" was the command of those who sought followers for the Master in his early ministry and it is the spirit of the gospel today. Truth does not fear investigation;—it grows stronger by being investigated, because always such investigation will yield for the investigator addded reasons for accepting the truth. So theoretically there is no objection to desideratum number two by the scientific method, tho' actually difficulties arise, because the original sources are denied us in many cases and our investigation are for that reason only partial. This is particularly true of mental and spiritual matters, whose sources are hidden to human ken and do not yield themselves completely or readily to the scientific methods. The honest investigator will frankly acknowledge this and accept from authority what he cannot prove by investigation.

To aim or principle number one of the scientific method there is serious objection and rightly—theoretically and actually. The Master satisfied the doubts of Thomas, but plainly told him that it was far better to have believed than to have doubted. "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" said the Savior to his skeptical friend, the user of the scientific method among the twelve, and so He would say to-day to every sincere seeker for the truth in spiritual living.

Actually applied in daily life, the scientific method would dissolve the bonds of fellowship and rend the most sacred ties of home and society. Does a man always regard the association with his fellows, the love and affections of his home, the pleasant relations of the social life with the skeptic's air? There be those who do it, but it renders them miserable. The man who approaches every book with the question mark of doubt never gets the spirit of the book. Those who are "born in the objective case and the active voice," the real devotees they of the scientific method, principle one, as it takes human form, are not companionable beings and succed in creating an atmosphere of unrest and uneasiness wherever they go.

Theoretically the skeptic's attitude is impossible and untenable. Even in the natural sciences it cannot be defended. The physicist must presume that molecules exist, tho' he never saw one and never will. The chemist must assume the existence of atoms, tho' he cannot find one by a mllion years of investigation. The biologist must take for granted that the bodies he investigater are cellular in their mechanism, but he never saw one of these cells. At the base of every science there is a presumption, an assumption, a something taken for granted, toward which the wielder of the scientific method must not direct his skeptic's attitude, or else the science crumbles to nothingness.

The sad part about the scientific method is that those who wield it apply it to the religious life and with a completeness that they will not risk in their secular investigation. The man who accepts atoms, cells, molecules as needful for making hypotheses will not accept any tenet of religion. "In the beginning, God" are the words with which the Scriptures open, but he will not grant it. "All Scripture is given by inspiriaton of God," but you can't prove it and so he will not believe it. We need a saner method of research in our Colleges and Universities, for one which breeds such doubt and distrust as this is sorely at fault.

To my way of thinking the proper method of investigation is the judicial, by which I mean that we enter into every investigation with open-mindedness and a sincere desire to arrive at the truth, open for conviction on points where investigation can yield the desired information, and accepting the tenets which appeal most powerfully to the heart, of whatever department of our living, as necessary working hypotheses where investigation is impossible. Such a method will yield large fruitage in information, equally as much as the scientific method, and most helpful results in spiritual growth and insight and power. W. A. Harper.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ARMY.

The growth of Institutions in the last century amazes thoughtful men. The world Sunday school Convention will meet in Zurich, Switzerland, July 8-15, 1913. A fleet of three great steamers will carry more than two thousand delegates from the United States to this Convention. Those who attended the convention in Washington City in 1910 know something of the immensity of the Convention and the scope of its work. The Convention is represented by all denominations, all nations, and all Sunday school organizations. It is difficult to say, whether the Sunday schools have done more for the Convention or whether the Convention has done more for the schools. They mutually help each other. That men of means love this cause enough to give money and time to such an Institution indicates that Christianity has taken hold of the heart and purse. Religious Conventions and campaigns cost money as well as political Conventions and campaigns. They charge liberal contributions to political campaigns with selfish motives; but Conventions of Sunday school movements will hardly receive such blame. The probabilities are that there are as many faults in those who blame as in those who give for any great movement or purpose.

Primarily, the Sunday school, as our Institution, had as its mission the education and care of poor children. It has grown large enough to embrace in its purpose all children, rich and poor alike: for rich children have soul-needs, if not body and mind needs. This large view and mission of the Sunday school—the salvation of the child—has added new meaning and emphasis to its world-wide value. As the idea grows the Institution grows. It now enrolls some twenty five millions and if these give one penny apiece each Sunday it would be a quarter million dollars per Sunday or thirteen million dollars a year or, say, one million dollars a month. Most of that money goes into printing papers, cards, pictures, booklets, and makes a vast commercial business, to say nothing of the enlightenment of millions of minds and the development of our army of two million officers and teachers. Then think of the organs, pianos, libraries, maps etc. that are published by special contributions. Add the buildings and furnishings provided by the churches to house and conduct these schools and the magnitudes of the Institution grows larger as we take inventory of Sunday school stock. The praise of the children fill the world. The Jerichos that resist the gospel must eventually surrender and their walls must fall before the tramp, tramp tramp, of this mighty host and the shout of their unbridled mouths. This army is unceasing and the sound of happy voices will soon girdle the globe. The time is not far away when the sun will never set upon the Sunday school in session an in prayer and song will be as constant as the tides of the ocean.

Do you belong to this army armed with the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God? Does the martial music of such an army inspire you to attend? Does the conquest of the world by chil dren appeal to your faith? Are you in the army of the Lord and outside of this victorious host? Do not shout in the church unless you work in the Sunday school.

W. W. Staley.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

All do not immediately see what I call the logic of foreign missions. But surely you will see it from this point of view—the first duty is to proclaim the truth (God has reconciled the world to himself in Jesus Christ, and that he calls men to himself by faith in propitiation), because that truth proclaimed in any part of the world establishes the first seeds, or the first foundations, of the Chrstian Church. Take, for example, what happened in Japan. You remember that in 1854, when the British fleet was lying in Nagasaki Bay, the Japanese Government was extremely anxious that we should not land, and General Wakasa was appointed to watch the fleet and to prevent the British troops from landing. It happened that as he rowed about the bay in fulfilment of his duty, some careless sailor of one these English men-of-war had dropt his New Testament overboard. Probably he cared very little for his New Testament, and he parted with it without any regret. But it so happened that General Wakasa picked it up out of the sea, and he was curious to know what this book was. He got an interpreter to tell him what it was. He became interested in it. He procured a Chinese New Testament and read it through—it brought him to Christ. Twelve years later General Wakasa came down to Verebeck, the missionary, and asked to be baptized because he had found the Savior. Your Bsitish sailor let his New Testament fall into the sea, but that New Testament converted the general of the Japanese army, and his family, and the whole circle of his friends, and planted the blest truth of reconciliation in the island of Japan. That is the logic of missions. The first duty is to let the world know, and let every race of men know, to have it in every language, to put it within reach of every human being, that "God is in Christ reconciling the world unto himself."—"How the Cross Saves," by Robert F. Horton.

VITAL STATISTICS.

County Commissioners, County Boards of Health, City Fathers, what are you hiring health offiers to do? To make health speeches, write health articles for the newspapers, visit the county homes and jails? These are merely the means to and end. It makes no difference to you about methods: what you want are results—a reduction of your death rate. Keep your eyes on the end; forget the methods; that is the health officer's business; its is yours to see that he reduces the death rate. Health work either favorably influences death rates or is worse than worthless.—State Board of Health.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, OCT. 20.

Subject—"Christian Sociability." Rom. 14: 16-19; 15: 1-3.

(To be Led by the Social Committee.

Are you a sociable sort of creature, Shakespeare says "Society is no comfort to one not sociable." Are you the kind of person who invites others to the Christian Endeavor and Sunday school, or instead are you too selfish to have others share the Christian privileges you enjoy?

As Christians we must confess that individual church members and the church as a whole is not sociable enough; cold, distant, reluctant to give the warm handshake of welcome and friendship. Then, too, church members are too ready to criticise others who take to social enjoyment. They condemn the theater as a whole and not individual shows, which is as inconsistent as it would be to condemn all the books of the world because some are not pure.

Occasionly we see men, who are large hearted, buoyant, agreeable, companionable, and we love them. Oh, if every Christian was that way, what a wonderful impetus it would give the faith. One's treatment of his neighbors often shows the manner of man he is. It is said "We are born neighbors or have themthrust upon us."

From the Pens of Others.

You and I must not run away from the world and worship, as did some of the old saints, from lonely tree-tops, or quiet caves; we must plunge into the riot of the time and keep our faith, our Godly strength, our Christian word, our loyalty to manly strength.—The Wellspring.

It is easy to put up a sign, "Strangers Welcome," but one hand with human blood in it speaks a warmer welcome than all the signs which were ever printed or painted.—Charles E. Jefferson, D. D.

Travel as a friendly man wherever you go; make new friends; trust men as often as possible; be glad at every glow of kindly feeling that warms your heart; look for good for all kinds and conditions of men. Find out their best thought. The humblest may teach you something. Praise whatever is good. Carry the sign of a new free maasonry.—Charles F. Dole.

Waiting to have a friend is altogether different from wanting to be a friend. The former is a mere natural human craving, the latter is the life of Christ in the soul.—J. R. Miller.

It is easy to be gentle to those who are kind, patient, thoughtful, and generous, but there are others with whom it is hard to be sociable, for they do and say what irritates and impels us to unloving treatment of them. If we have the mind of Christ, we shall be unaffected by the atmosphere about us.

There is no need, perhaps, to do more than nod to Mr. Brown as you pass him on the street, but it helps to cheer the old man if you stop and ask him about his rheumatism,or how the good wife endures her asthma. It's no great task, and perhaps not necessary,to go out of one's way a block or two to inquire how Mrs. Smith is recovering from her recent accident. But it adds strength to the weak and courage to the faint-hearted to know that some one is thinking about them and hoping for them to get well.

"THAT SILENCE SAVED ME."

There is a very suggestive incident related illustrating how at times silence may be a greater power for good than any other agency.

A young man sat chatting with some giddy girls. Among them was a sweet, quite young woman known as a Christian The young man, thinking to tease her bantered her about her religion. The silly girls tittered, but the object of his mirth remained silent. Then with the folly of youth, and recklessness of impiety, he uttered mny infidel objections to Christianity. She did not smile, nor look at him, nor seem to notice him. Then he continued his harangue, hoping to force her to refute something. But she maintained the same sweet, dignified silence. A vision of his own stupidity broke over the young man and convicted him of sin. He said afterwards, telling the story, "That silence saved me."—Selected.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE.

The minister's wife ought to be selected by a committee of the Church. She should be warranted never to have headache or neuralgia; she should have nerves of wire and sinews of iron. She should never be tired. She should be cheerful and intellectual, pious and domesticated; she should be able to keep her husband's house, darn his stockings, make his shirts cook his dinner, and copy his sermons. She should keep up the style of a lady on the wages of a lady laborer, and be always at leisure for "good works" and ready to receive morning calls. She should be Secretary of the Bank of Hope and President of the Missionary Society; she should conduct Bible classes and mothers' meetings; she should make clothing for the poor and gruel for the sick; and, finally, she should be pleased with everybody and everything, and never desire any reward beyond the satisfaction of having done her own duty—and other people's too.—Conservator.

From Pastors and People.

PLAN OF APPOINTMENTS.

Mocksville circuit, Oct. 5-6.
Winston, Oct. 13.
East Winston, Oct. 14-15.
Stanly, Oct. 19-20.
Flat Rock, Oct. 26-27.
Haw River, Oct. 29-31.
Why Not, Nov. 2-4.
Pinnacle and Mount Zion, Nov. 6-7.
Guilford, Nov. 8-11.

W. E. Swain...

NOTICE.

All pastors who have not already done so will please report names of delegates to the Annual Conference. Report to the Sect., Rev. S. W. Taylor, Winston-Salem, N. C. This is important and should be attended to at the earliest possible hour. Don't put this off till tomorrow. Do it now.

W. E. Swain.

Dear Brethren of the Ministry:

Will you please send to me at once, on postal, the amount spent on churches and parsonages since last Conference? Don't wait till too late, I shall be glad if you can do this early. Very truly,

W. E. Swain.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Last Sat., Oct. 5: 6., was spent with Bro. D. A. Highfill, pastor, and the people of Mocksville Ct. This charge is something of a shoe strinf. It is very clear that Mocksville is not aware of the power it has. There are some very faithful men and women on this work and I almost feel like calling their names. These noble souls have done well and deserve much. Verily they have their reward. Brother Highfill has been faithful in the discharge of his duties, disregarding his own personal comfort and some times his very health. When will the day come when all who have pledged before God and man that they would "contribute as God gave them ability" will do just what they promise?

The people, as in some other places, are kind in their homes and this seems to make it harder some times to say what really seems necesary. Conference is almost here. There is very much to be done. Members of the church, what are you going to do about it? The way you finish up with your pastor of this year will, in some measure, determine who your pastor will be for another year. Praying for larger liberality, a wider vision and deeper work of grace throughout the church, I am,

W. E. Swain.

Yadkin College Ct.

To the official members:

Dear Brethren: The 4th Quarterly Conference, will convene, at W. Lexington Methodist Protestant Church, on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in November. Preaching at eleven o'clock.

Dinner; business of Quarterly Conference. We want every official member of each church to be present. Now let every official member do his very best and come with a rousing report. Only about five weeks till Annual Conference, brethren: what is done must be done quickly.

We received Bro. H. E. Gibbs, wife and daughter (Miss Clara Bell), into W. Lexington M. P. Church, good additions, they come to us from Gibsonville M. P. Church. Sister Gibbs is a sister to Bro. Lindley Gerringer. We are baptizing a few babies along now and then. We will have reached over twenty by Conference.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Mountain Valley, Ivy Circuit.

Our Pastor, Rev. S. B. Stephens, preaches once a month for us and on Sunday, the 6th began a week's meeting here which closed Saturday. Congregation at this place has been very small until the last nine months, the people became interested in our pastor's preaching and every Sunday he preached here the congregation began to increase, and of late (the weather being favorable) the church would not hold the people.

Now during the week's meeting Bro. Stephens preaching twice every day the congregation increased every service, and so did the interest, we are much divided here, the Baptists and Presbyterians so near, but every service was attended by both.

The attendance and attention surpassed anything of the kind recorded in the history of this church.

We believe only a very small part of the good being done in this meeting is as yet seen. While there was but one young man united with the church during the meeting, yet there are several we understand that will unite at the Pastor's next appointment. I now repeat the words of Rev. Brown. D. D., the principal of the Presbyterian High School and also Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, all which is near to our Church, who attended with his scholars at most every, service, all listening to Dr. Stephen's sermons. He was heard to say after listening to a sermon Dr. Stephens preached on the subject of What is the real Soul of man, and when will it appear before God:

"The people of Mountain Valley had the privilege to hear the best sermon ever preached in this country." Such a man as Dr. Brown is a competent judge of preaching. The whole congregation seemed spell bound while he preached this sermon of not less than one hour. A congregation could not have been more attentive. As our Pastor discoursed to them of their souls and the felicities of heaven, tears flowed as he protrayed to them the glory of the home above.

In the Bible Dr. Stephens is studious, and in his life he is consecrated and these characteristics combined with other very worthy ones unquestionably make him a man of power in the pulpit and out. His explanations of mysterious passages of Scripture are such as a little child can understand. His week's preaching here at this church together with his year's pastoral work has made the tie that bound us together stronger in every respect. Truly our church has been revived and we believe today is stronger than ever. Dr. Stephens has worthily proven his ability as an uncompromising Minister of the Gospel. He is also indeed a genuine Methodist Protestant and at all times preaching a straight Bible doctrine, as well as being a strong discipline man, and we who know the worth of a good able minister and Christian man, want him back on our circuit another year. Pastor and members get along in perfect harmony and are so well pleased.

Reporter.

Burlington.

There were 193 in Sunday school last Sunday, a slight increase over the preceding Sunday.

Bro. Andrews, our superintendent, was again absent. He was in Wilson County addressing the County S. S. Convention of that county.

The Junior Philathea held a candy sale this afternoin, the proceeds of which will help pay their pledges to the new annex to the church.

Rev. Mr. Ashburn arrived Saturday evening, and is assisting our pastor in our special meeting which began Sunday morning. Bro. Ashburn is a good preacher, and much interest is being manifested in the services by both the Christians and the unsaved. We are expecting a great revival of the church and community.

Since our last report, the death angel has visited our church and removed from our midst an aged brother. Bro. Alfred Crawfird, who was nearly seventy years of age, died last Wednesday. The funeral was conducted by Bro. Davis, and burial at the old church in the country. The deceased brother leaves a widow, several children and a host of friends and neighbors. We extend heart felt sympathy to the bereaved family.

C. B. W.

Asheboro.

Sunday the 6th inst. was Decision Day with us. Twelve came forward and gave their names as wanting to become Christians.

This was the beginning of our special meeting. Bro. C. A. Cecil came to us Monday and did all the preaching up to and including Thursday night. He brought us helpful sermons and a good deal besides in the way of Christian spirit, earnestness, the spirit of prayer and consecration, all of which was a great help to us in the services and out.

Bro. C. H. Whitaker preached a very helpful sermon Friday night, Mrs. S. L. Hayworth having led the service that afternoon.

There were twenty-four professions, not counting reclamations. Twenty-three joined the church last Sunday morning, the most beautiful sight I have witnessed in this church since I have been here and the most impressive service, I think.

The meeting is one of considerable power and the results in full are not given when we name the professions.

Some of our people are planning to atend the Corner Stone laying of the Children's Home Thursday.

T. M. Johnson.

Oct. 15, 1912.

MT. PLEASANT, UWHARRIE CT.

Our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, has served us as faithfully as his health would permit; he has made great sacrifices of his home and farm, come among us with his soul filled with the Holy Ghost, his eyes filled with tears, plead for our children that they might be saved. Do we appreciate his service as we should? Bro. Trogdon has doctor bills to pay this year, let us see to it that we pay him what we promised for his year's work and loving kindness.

Bro. Trogdon in my imagination is as near a type of our Savior as I have ever seen. My prayer is that the Lord will send him back another year. I believe there would be great good done. He is liked by all denominations.

Our Sabbath school is lively with good interest; 63 present yesterday. We had a collection at our Children's Day of $16.-75.

G. H. Cashatt.

October 14, 1912.

RANDLEMAN CIRCUIT.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at New Salem on Saturday before the first Sunday in November (2nd) at 3 o'clock P. M. Brethren, get ready and be there promptly. There is much to do.

J. B. O'Briant.

October 14, 1912.

EAST WINSTON M. P. CHURCH.

Last Sunday evening Dr. W. E. Swain was with us for his first visit. He preached a splendid sermon. Our people enjoyed having him with us very much. The congregation was very much pleased with him and hope he will make another visit soon.

The services included a complete resume of the church work since the organization, and also gave a detailed account of the Sunday school work, which was a most successful report.

Mr Henry Martin sang a solo which was enjoyed very much.

A history of the Sunday school, the date of the beginning of the church and its work since the building was complete 13 months ago was read, which was very interesting.

The Sunday school is very good now, and we hope to be able to do a great deal of good.

We are very sorry that Mrs. R. L. Jordan who has been very sick at her home on Highland Avenue for some time with heart trouble had to be taken to the Twin City Hospital. We hope she will soon be able to be with us again.

Rev. S. M. Needham, pastor, has been preaching every 2nd and 4th Sunday but there will be no service the 4th Sunday of this month on the account of the meeting which will be in progress at the 1st church.

Reporter.

CID. UWHARRIE CT.

Bro. J. B. Trogdon yesterday delivered a soul-thrilling sermon. There was a right large congregation and a most attentive one.

Bro. Harris Hill of Piney Grove came up to worship with us. We are always glad to have him, as he always makes a talk for us. Come again.

Mr. Robert Farlow of High Point spent Sunday at Cid.

We reorganized Sunday school last Sunday and put in new officers, to wit:—Mrs. N. W. Lanier, Supt., Mr. Lee Sullivan, Asst. Supt., Miss Beulah Wright, Sec., Mr. John Wright, Asst. Sec., Mrs. A. B Gallingham, Organist, Miss Gracie Wright, Asst. Organist. The teachers will be elected next Sunday at 2 P. M. We hope to have an evergreen Sunday school. Brethren, pray for us that we may be successful.

There was a "Free will" offering taken at Cid Sunday for Bro. Trogdon for which we thank the people very much. As he has served us well I feel we cannot do too much for him.

We hope for a speedy recovery of Bro. Trogdon's two little children who have been seriously sick. May God's richest blessings rest upon the Herald and its many readers.

Reporter.

FLAT ROCK.

Our pastor will preach his last sermon for the year next month.

The township Sunday school convention convened here, with that godly little man Rev. Shufford Peeler, who is endearing himself to the whole county in his endless efforts for the Sunday school's advancement.

Our special meeting, the greatest in years, by that saintly man, Rev. John H. Moton, was duly reported, but as pastor's letters are always given precedence, ours was turned down.

Our pastor has given us sermons throughout the year of an unusually high order, for which we are sincerely grateful.

Some six of us attended the county S. school convention at Moriah.

Mr. J. A. Davidson, county commissioner, and mother were with us on yesterday, guests of Mrs. J. B. Ogburn. Also Mr. B. Lee Fentress.

Lee having finished his law course at the University is now associated with Mr. Wayland Cooke of Greensboro.

May he shunning all evil, make a future record as enviable as in school, where he was a hard and faithful student.

Miss Pearl Williams entered the State Normal instead of returning to Salem this year.

Mr. T. A. Wilson has moved to Summerfield and enters his children in the State High School there.

Reporter.

SPRING CHURCH.

For a dozen reasons or more we postponed our services for Orphans' Home Day until the second Sunday. We held

Continued on page 10.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL EXPOSED.

Mr. W. T. Ellis has become interested in the work of "Pastor" Russell, as he calls himself, and has taken the pains to look him up. He sets forth in long articles his findings. He declares that Russell is a more successful worker than Dowie and other monumental impostors He is reaching millions of readers with his false teaching through the papers that have been duped into an agreement to publish the plate matter he furnishes, Some of our North Carolina papers, we have been surprised to see, are carrying Russell's sermons wth all their death-deaing errors to their readers regularly.

Russell's popularity is due to the fact that he teaches for the truth errors that are more palatable than the truth to a certain class of people, especially those who are conscious that they are worthy of condemnation, and yet do not like to think or believe in future punishment.

It is a case of the blind leading the blind, or a case of a designing rascal leading those whose dishonest hearts make them easy dupes. We are glad that Mr. Ellis has exposed "Pastor" Russell.

ELON COLLEGE AND HAZING.

President Harper on Wednesday morning last took a high stand in reference to hazing, which all who love decency and order in College life will appreciate. A young man expelled for hazing in another institution offered himself for matriculation here. The young man did not present a certificate of honorable discharge from his former institution. The President immediately communicated over long distance phone with the head of the institution from which the young man came and found that he had been expelled for hazing.

The President of the College in question told President Harper that he believed that he would profit by his experience and make a good student. The President communicated these facts to the Faculty here and unanimously the young man was re-sed admission and the head of the sister iinstitution was written the following:

"I thank you for saying that it would be perfectly all right with you for us to enroll him as a student, but we do not feel that institutions of learning ought to act thus with reference to each other's expulsion of students. We have always made it a practice at Elon to accept the finding of an institution from which a person came as final, and to act upon it as if we ourselves had issued the decree. We believe that, when the Colleges of the State have decided to do this, the practice of hazing will soon be stamped out and not till then."

The student body and the citizens of the College community here heartily approve this action on the Faculty's part and rejoice that every step consonant with the high purpose for which Elon was founded is being taken to keep the blight of hazing from the College. As the President stated in his letter from which we have just quoted, the Colleges of the State will do well to adhere to a standard like this when expelled students offer themselves at their doors for admission. Such action will insure the stamping out of hazing and many other evils of College life and thus do a great good in the State's educational uplift.

FULFILLED JUDGMENTS.

Those people who are presuming upon the love and mercy of God, and are saying that, because of those questions, He will not bring guilty ones into judgment, are greatly deceiving themselves. They are regarding God very differently from the manner in which He is presented in the Bible. In no place in the Bible is God represented as being so gracious and merciful that He will let unrepentant ones go unpunished. He is not made to appear to be indifferent to His pronunciations of judgment against transgressors of His laws and commands. Quite the reverse is true. As one reads the Old Testament he may see, if he will see, that the great judgments which God threatened against the Israelites for their continued disregard of His commands and instructions, were fulfilled in due season.

Take, for example, the judgment pronounced against Sodom and Gomorrah, because of the wickedness of the inhabitants. Those people had been repeatedly warned by God that if they did not repent of their sins and turn to Him they would be visited with judgment. But they trifled with God's warnisgs and presumed upon His mercy and forbearance until their day of judgment came.

In Jeremiah, reference is made to God's pronounced judgment upon Edom for the sins of the people. Then God said: "As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbor cities thereof, saith the Lord, no man shall dwell there." Skeptical ones in these days are saying that those cities were destroyed by natural causes, and not as a result of special judgment from God. This is a falsehood. The destruction was a specific fulfillment of God's threatened judgment, and this fact is confirmed by the authority of New Testament declaration. Moreover, other threatened judgments, in Old Testament history against cities and citizens, were duly fulfilled and except in those instances where the people repented in due season and turned heartily to God. Such judgments have a bearing upon the people of our land today. They are warning which cannot be disregarded without great peril. As certainly as the judgments in ancient days were fulfilled, so certainly will God's threatened judgments against wicked people in our day be fulfilled. He who will not believe this fact, but will continue to presume upon God's mercy, will reap the reward of his folly and sin. Be not deceived by any theory which denies the word and warnng of the God of truth.

C. H. Wetherbe.

CHRISTIANITY REASONABLE

Reason is the prerogative of man, and probably of most heavenly beings. At least, we know of two who reason: God and his Son. God said in ancient times, "Let us reason together." The Son is in the likeness of the Father's glory. Therefore we would believe that he reasoned, even if his teachings in ths world, after he came here, did not prove it.

Reason is at the foundation, the basis of religious obligation.

Possibly nothing unreasonable can be binding in the way of requiring sacrifice for it.

All the evidences that are genuine, or of weight, testify that Christianity is reasonable.Its chief semi-abstract claims appeal forcibly to our reason, and some persons, simply on account of them, profess to be Christians:

That God is our Father; that he requires us to love one another that we would do to others as we would have them do to us; that we should forgive; that faith, hope and love are elements necessarily interwoven with each other in the fabric of spirituality, and that the greatest of them is love; that philanthropy must be cultivated; that God requires of us, not according to that which we have not, but according to that which we have.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

PLAN OF APPOINTMENTS.

Mocksville circuit, Oct. 5-6.
Winston, Oct. 13.
East Winston, Oct. 14-15.
Stanly, Oct. 19-20.
Flat Rock, Oct. 26-27.
Haw River, Oct. 29-31.
Why Not, Nov. 2-4.
Pinnacle and Mount Zion, Nov. 6-7.
Guilford, Nov. 8-11.

W. E. Swain...

MESSAGE FROM THE SALOON.

Wanted—one hundred boys for new customers. Most of our old customers are rapidly dropping out.

Ten committed suicide last week.

Twenty are now in jail and eight are in the chain gang.

Fifteen were sent to the poorhouse; one was hanged.

Three were sent to the insane asylum.

Most of the balance ain't worth fooling with—they've got no money.

We are just obliged to have new customers—fresh, young blood.

Or we will have to shut up shop.

Don't make any difference whose boys you are—we need you. You will be welcome.

If you once get started with us we guarantee to hold you. Our goods are sure.

Come early and stay late.—Ex

FROM "A MORE EXCELLENT WAY."

Mary Potter Angell

When each girl had given her pledge for what she thought she could give, Alice opened her Bible and began to read at the last verse of the twelfth chapter of First Corinthians.

"But covet earnestly the best gifts, and yet show I unto you a more excellent way.

"1 Though I work with the earnestness of men and of angels, and have not the spirit of giving, I am become as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

"2 And though I have the gift of music and understand all church socials and all entertainments, and though I have all elocution so that I could move audiences, and have not the spirit of giving, I am nothing.

"3 And though I bestow all my talents to help the heathen and all my services for the raising of money, and have not the spirit of giving, it profiteth me nothing.

"4 Giving extendeth far and is kind, giving wearieth not, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.

"5 Doth not behave itself unwisely, seekeeth not her own, is not easily discouraged, thinking no selfishness.

"6 Rejoiceth not in stinginess, but rejoiceth in self-denial.

"7 Giving never faileth, but whether there be socials, they shall fail, whether there be tableaux, they shall cease, whether there be entertainments, they shall be done away.

"8 And now abideth working, soliciting, giving, these three, but the greatest of these is giving."—Kind Words.

WHY I GO TO CHURCH ON RAINY SUNDAYS.

Frances Ridley Havergal's admirers, whose name is legion, will read with interest the following lines from her pen:

I attend church on rainy Sundays because—

1. God has blessed the Lord's day and hallowed it, making no exceptions for rainy Sundays.

2. I expect my minister to be there. I should be surprised if he were to stay at home for the weather.

3. If his hand fail through weakness, I shall have great reason to blame myself unless I sustain him by my prayer and presence.

4. By staying away I lose the prayers which may bring God's blessings, and the sermon that would have done me great good.

5. My presence is more needful on Sundays when there are few than on those when the church is crowded.

6. Whatever station I hold in the church, my example must influence others. If I stay away, why may not they?

7. On any important business rainy weather does not keep me at home, and church attendance is, in God's sight, very important.

8. Among the crowds of pleasure seekers I see that no weather keeps the delicate female from the ball, the party or the concert.

9. Among other blessings such weather will show me on what foundation my faith is built. It will prove how much I love Christ. True love rarely fails to meet an appointment.

10. Those who stay from church because it is too warm, or too cold, or too rainy, frequently absent themselves on fair Sundays.

11. Though my excuses satisfy myself, they still must undergo God's scrutiny, and they must be well grounded to bear that (St. Luke 14:18.)

12. There is a special promise that where two or three meet together in God's name he will be in the midst of them.

13. An avoidable absence from the church is an infallible evidence of spiritual decay. Disciples first follow Christ at a distance, and then like Peter do not know him!

14. Such yielding to surmountable difficulties prepares for yielding to those merely imaginary until thousands never enter a church, and yet they think they have good reason for such neglect.

15. I know not how many more Sundays God may give me, and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sunday in Heaven to have slighted my last Sunday on earth.—Baptist World.

THE WORK OF THE TEACHER.

CHAS J. MORGAN.

A few years ago I stood in the presence of that marvel of architecture, the great cathedral of Cologne. The stupendous scaffolding mounted far up into the air and the great crane still stretched out its arms, as it had done for so long, to receive the precious burden, The click of the tools of five hundred workmen was heard day by day as the work went on. A few months later, in the presence of the emperor and before the eyes of all Europe, the cross was placed on the pinnacle of the spire, five hundred feet above the ground, and the great structure was complete. The cannon thundered, the sonorous organs sounded out their jubilee, the chorous chanted the Te Deum, and the vast throng uttered a solemn and joyous "Amen." Centuries ago the architect drew his plan and the workingmen laid deep the foundations. Ages came and went; dynasties rose and fell; generations passed away; workingmen perished, and one masterbuilder followed another through the centuries. Though interrupted, hindered, delayed, the work went on. The walls rose, the roof was placed, the carving was finished, the windows blazed with glory, processions moved down the aisles, incense rose, and the architect's dream of a temple became embodied in stone—a thing of beauty, a joy for the world. Every pupil that stands before a teacher has in him possibilities as far surpassing the grandest cathedral as a living soul surpasses dead matter. The great Architect has a plan for each soul. Every teacher enjoys the high privilege of contributing something according to his wisdom and skill, in bringing to perfection the plan of God and of calling into bold relief every lineament of that spiritual temple that is to endure when cathedral walls have become a "shapeless cairn." We train for eternity.—Examiner.

—There are now six different political parties with presidental candidates in the field. If you don't happen to see anything in this line that suits you, just ask for it. Remember, it is very dangerous for a Christian to talk politics when his pulse is more than eighty to the minute. —Christian Indicater.

—Charles F. Walsh the aviator while giving an exhibition flight before 50,000 people at the Trenton N. J. Fair grounds last Thursday fell about 2,000 feet through the air, being instantly killed.

Begun on page 7.

all day service; it was quite a success. The congregation was rather small, but the recitations were fairly good. Collection for the Home amounted to $11.00.

As our pastor was absent Bro. E. C. Dimick filled his appointment here in the afternoon. We are yet alive with our Sunday school and hope to keep it alive through the dreary winter months.

The fourth and last quarterly conference will convene here Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month. We are right much behind on our pastor's salary, but hope to collect every cent before conference, as this is his last year with us. Mr. R. C. Crews our delegate to conference and Mr. G. F. Robinson alternate.

Mr. J. W. Magee and Mrs. Virginia Massey both of this place boarded the north bound train for Richmond, Va., Wednesday October 9th, and were happily married. They stayed over a few days on their bridal tour and attended the Fair. They are now here in town where they will make their home. We wish for them a happy life, and may their future days be their brightest.

Nannie Massey.

Pleasant Hill, N. C. Oct. 15, 1912.

THOMASVILLE STATION.

We are very glad indeed to read the letters which we see in the Herald. But Thomasville has been reporting very little lately.

We had two fine sermons Sunday, which is nothing uncommon, for Bro. Suits always has something good to tell us. If we would only listen with as much earnestness as he preaches there would be much more done.

Our fourth quarterly conference will convene Wednesday night, October 23. We are very sorry to see that this conference year is drawing so near to a close. Bro. Suits has served us faithfully for several years and we hope and pray may serve us for several years more. We wouldn't know where to go to get a more faithful minister.

Miss Polly Wellburn, one of Thomasville's faithful members, passed into the Glory World last Wednesday. The funeral in Thomasville M. P. Church Friday morning by Bro. Suits..

Miss Wellburn made a profession about a year ago and from that time was a faithful member. The funeral was well attended. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Mt. Carmel.

Hoping to hear from Thomasville soon.

I am yours in Christ,

Mrs. Laura Dickens.

CONCORD.

Our meeting began Saturday night with sister A. G. Dixon in the pulpit. I am so glad that in asking Bro. Dixon to come to help in our meeting our pastor did not forget to ask Bro. Dixon to bring his wife with him. She filled the pulpit Saturday night and twice Sunday. The three services were well attended by very large crowds. This not being the first time that sister Dixon has been with us made us more eager for her to come back again. And we are so glad to think that she is so interested in the souls of those who are out of Christ and do not know Him as their Savior. We were so dis appointed when she told us that she would be obliged to go back to her work in High Point Tuesday morning. She left with the spirit of the Lord bearing on the hearts of many, through her influence. Bro. Dixon is still with us and we are having a good meeting; souls are being brought to Christ, back sliders being reclaimed and the church being stirred by the Holy Spirit. We praise the Lord for sending these good people to us and may the Lord give them many more souls for their hire and may they both have many more years to do great work for him is my prayer.

We have organized a Ladies' Aid Society for the benefit of our church; it is just three months old? We have gotten up a plan of piecing a quilt and every one that will give us a dime, we work his name on it and we find that it is a great success.. Our Society is small in number, but the Lord has promised to bless those who meet in his name.

Miss Roxie and Lettie Little have gone to school. We miss them in our Society and S. S., but wish them great success in school.

Mr. P. J. and L. R. Blackwelder have gone to High Point to work a while at carpenter work. They will not be with us in S. S. very often, and we will miss them too. Bro. Lindley being our S. S. teacher, it seems that we just can't give him up, for he was so much liked by his class, but we wish them much success and trust that soon they will be back at home and back in the S. S.

Mrs. D. A. Braswell has been very ill but is getting better, I am glad to say, and I pray that the Lord's greatest blessing may be with her and that she soon may be up again.

We would be glad if any Ladies' Aid Society can give us any information of any kind we would be glad to get it. This being the first Ladies' Aid Society that any of us ever attempted to work in and if any one can help us in any way we certainly will receive it with the greatest of pleasure.

The scarlet fever and other contagious diseases being in our town has shut the children out of S. S., for four weeks and we don't know just how much longer, but we trust tnat it won't be long until the little ones can be back in S. S., for we miss them so much. May the Lord keep their little minds and hearts from the evil of this world.

Mrs. Lottie Brown.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

Our special meeting for Gideon's Grove begins next Sunday with Rev. J. H. Moton to assist. We have had good revivals in all the other churches and we are very anxious for a successful meeting at Gideon's Grove. We will very greatly appreciate the prayers of all friends in behalf of the meeting.

The President's Appointments:

Dr. Swain's visit will embrace the 4th Sunday in this month and his appointments are as follows:—

Palestine, Friday evening, Oct. 25th at 7 o'clock.

Gideon's Grove, Saturday 26th, at 11 o'clock. The quarterly conference to follow.

Flat Rock, Sunday, October 27th, at 11 o'clock, and at Bethel at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

It is only a little more than one month until conference and there is much to do if we get ready for it. There is such a disposition on most fields to defer things until near the close of the year that it is difficult for the average preacher to keep from getting a little nervous.

Our good people continue to show us many kindnesses and our failure to thank them through the Postal Card does not mean that they are less kind or that we are less appreciative. We are too far behind with thanks now to mention names.

As the year draws to a close let us all pray that the Lord may lead us by His Spirit in the work of the Annual Conference.

STANLY.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at Friendship on Saturday before third Sunday in October. President Swain will be with us and preach at 11 A. M. The division of the circuit will be one of the most important matters under consideration, and we hope all official members of all the churches will be present and any others that can.

G. L. Reynolds.

ST. PAUL.

The services of two weeks closed last night. These services have been conducted by the Rev. R. E. and Mrs. Andrews; evangelists of the Wesleyan Methodist church.

Their messages carried conviction to many who realized their true condition before God in the life they were living and requested prayers to aid them in seeking a deeper experience of Christian life. There have been some fourteen young people that came out and professed they had found Jesus as their Savior, others asked to be prayed for, thereby acnowledging they were not living right before God. At the clohe of the service last night, the pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, preached from text, "Awake, Awake." A young woman professed Christ, and several decided to unite with the church.

MORIAH, TABERNACLE CT.

Bro. Cecil met with us again last Sunday evening and preached a good practical sermon on "Watchfulness."

Our Sunday School is growing in attendance and interest. Our attendance for last month is as follows: September 22nd, 99; September 29th, 93; October 6th, 99; October 13th, 94; average 96¼. This is the highest we have averaged since we entered the contest for the banner Some of the S. S. pupils are still working for their gold pin.

We are sorry to report the illness of two of our faithful S. S. pupils, Bob Kirkman, who has scarlet fever, and Herati Coe, who has appendicitis. We are praying for their recovery and hope to see their bright faces in our S. S. soon.

The class book of Moriah will be revised Saturday before the fourth Sunday of October in Moriah Church.

The fourth and last quarterly conference will be held next Saturday at Julian. There will be preaching at 11 o'clock.

With best wishes,

Reporter.

HAW RIVER AND REIDSVILLE.

Today was a beautiful one. We held our 4th quarterly conference. Bro. Hopkins, our faithful secretary, was sick, and we elected Bro. Crawford Huffines Sec-pro tem. There were 27 official members present, and a spirit of brotherly love prevailed. We had some important things to consider. When I came to Haw River circuit we had seven appointments. Last year we agreed to let Brown Summit go to St. Paul. They raised the Haw River salary to $600.00. This year we have built a church in Reidsville and now Haw River circuit has four appointments and made the salary $550.00, the same as it was when I came here, and today after prayerful deliberation give Bethany and Sandy Cross to Reidsville, provided the Annual Conference agrees to it, and will help this Reidsville mission. Reidsville will start clear of debt but young; the two appointments given her are the weakest on the circuit, by this we hope to make them strong. For a year or two there will be a pull. I get a new member now and then. If we can get some help for a year or two as we will have to rent a house and the pastor will have to keep a horse. In a few years this charge by having help now, will pay back into the treasury of the Lord, Haw River will be a compact circuit, and with the pastor to mingle with them like he can, will be a delightful field. Every one seemed delighted and I am frank to say I believe the Lord led us today and will lead us into "green pastures" if each one will pray and work.

Reidsville, Bethany and Sandy Cross are to make a canvass and let me know how much they will pay and report to me next Saturday. We were glad to have several sisters out, also some boys and girls; all seemed so much interested The good sisters gave us a real picnic dinner and said if they could carry the vote they would vote to give one tenth of the income of the men and women, for it belonged to the Lord.

We elected Bro. Geo. S. Kernodle as delegate and Bro. J. A. Gunn alternate for Reidsville and Bro. Walter Maxwell alternate for Haw River circuit. I stepped out when the delegates were instructed. This may be my last year in this section; if so I am happy, for I had a vision three years ago and I have lived to see it come to pass. I am made to think of Moses and the children of Israel over the Red Sea. They praised the Lord. Let me say, Praise the Lord.

Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

October 12, 1912.

BETHESDA, YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

Our Sunday school is doing well. We had 117 present last Sunday. We have Sunday school children between 85 and 90 years old down to the cradle roll. Our pastor filled his appointment giving us a good sermon.

The 4th quarterly conference will meet at West Lexington on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in November. The pastor requests all of the official members of each church to be present, as there is a lot of business at the 4th quarterly conference.

Bro. J. C. Farabee and family will move from this community to Lexington. We hate very much to loose Bro. Farabee and family from this community, church, and Sunday school. Bro. Farabee is one of our S. S. teachers and a good one; the little people like his work.

Mrs. Alex Evans has been very sick for some time, but we hope she is some getter. May the Lord spare sister Evans many years. She has been one of Bethesda's best members.

Bro. and sister Joe Tussey of High Point are staying a few days with their mother, Mrs. Evans, during her sickness.

Mrs Joe Lanning of Lexington visited at Mr. J. C. Farabee's last week.

Mrs. Joe Brinkley visited friends at Denton where her husband has a position with the Yadkin River Railroad Company.

Many good wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Chas. M. Yokley.

BIRTHDAY DINNER.

Oour visit to the home of Bro. Henry Smith was a very interesting one. Oct. 4th a birthday dinner was given in honor of Henry Smith, aged 72, and his companion who was that day 66 years of age. They were taken on surprise as they knew nothing of what was going to happen that day except that their pastor was coming to see them. Well, it was very interesting when relatives and friends began to gather in and unload their picnic baskets. Soon the men and boys were busy building a table in the yard in the shade close by the well. While this was being done the writer entertained the crowd with his talking machine. When the table was ready, the ladies spread their dinner thereon and there was so many good things to eat that space will not permit to enumerate them. Near 75 people surrounded the table and ate and there was much left. It was a very pleasant day to all.

J. B. O'Briant.

October 14, 1912.

The meeting at the Union church at Alamance was closed, on last Friday night. There were twenty conversions. All gave their names for membership in some church. Nine for Friendship M. P. church, three for Mt. Pleasant M. P. church, seven for St. Paul's Lutheran church, and one for the Reformed church. It was indeed a good meeting.

E. G. Lowdermilk.

Burlington, N. C., Oct., 15, 1912.

—Rev. J. R. Hutton will hold a special meeting at Gibsonville beginning next Sunday.

INDISPENSABLE SUBSTANCES.

Alum was discovered in Syria in 1300 A. D. Alum works were established in England in 1608. This mineral was discovered in Ireland in 1757.

Castor oil is from castus ("sacred") oil, because the plant is called the "palm of Christ" (palma Christi). The plant first grew in Asia.

Camphor, from the Greek kamphora, from the gum of the bay tree, was early made in Japan, Formosa, Sumatra, and Borneo. In Europe the Dutch and the Venetians long controlled the art of refining it.

Cochineal is a scarlet dye which comes from the insect cochinilla, so named by Spaniards, on coming to America, because of the resemblance to the Spanish wood louse by that name.

Gum arabic, the juice of acacia trees, comes from Arabia, India, and Africa.

Glycerin, obtained from fats and oils, was discovered in 1779.

Isinglass, from the words "ice" and "glass," named from the air bladders of sturgeon and other fish, was known nearly two thousand years ago. Pliny mentions its manufacture.

India rubber is mentioned by an English writer, Dr. Priestly, in 1770, as a substance well adapted to "wiping from paper the marks of a black pencil." For thirty years no other use was known for it. The art of vulcanizing it was discovered by Charles Goodyear, an American, in 1839. Its name indicates its native home.

Indigo, also from India, produced from several plants, the cultivation of which began in 1747.

Olive oil, made from the ripe fruit of the olive tree, first came from Western Asia, but is now produced in California and elsewhere.

Petroleum, "rock oil," was well known to the ancients, and was used by the Greeks as a medicine and for illumination. Herodotus tells of a spring in the island of Zante which is still flowing, has produced oil for over two thousand years. The old writers referred to it is bitumen. It was not considered of great importance until modern times.

Soap is mentioned by Jeremiah and Malachi. Pliny says it was first made by the Gauls. Soap was found in the ruins of Pompeii and, although buried for eighteen hundred years, still retained much of its efficacy.

Soda, now made chiefly from common salt, was originally made from the ashes of sea weeds and seashore plants.

Starch was introduced into England by a Flemish woman in 1553. Thomas Kingsford, an American, was the first to make it from Indian corn, in 1842.

Turpentine was known to the ancients, and is mentioned in the Apocrypha. Our American product comes chiefly from the long-leaf pine of the Southern States.—Michigan Advocate.

The Independent of August 8 says: "The decision of the Methodist Protestants not to unite with the Northern Methodists has the field open for union with United Brethren, and so far as we can see this union is almost assured. The committees of the two bodies have met and found no dfficulty and no opposition. On the side of the United Brethren, we understand, the sentiment is unanimous. To be sure, the United Brethren have what they call bishops, but they are no more than superintendents and serve for a term of only four years, not the kind of bishops against which the Methodist Protestants protested when they seceded. The union is one greatly to be desired."

Organic union is again in the air and it may also be a positive fact in the church in the near futre. We really hope it will; that is, a real union of the M. P. and the United Brethren Churches. There are several reasons why they should unite and one is that their respective territories do not overlap each other, except, perhaps, in comparatively few places, so that union ought to mean expansion to both; but in order to obtain this beneficial status both denominations will probably have to yield on some points and, perhaps, give up something that has long been cherished. Are they willing to sacrifice? We shall see. Just now no one cares to be too eager with prediction, for experience has taught the would-be prophets that the merging of two such organizations means more than horn blowing. And as we recall the attempt of our church in former years, first with the Wesleyans, then with the Primitives and later with the Congregational and the M. E. churches to effect real organic union, or to do something real towards it, and remember what became of it all, we cannot easily refrain from tendering advice to our people not to be too certain that union will speedily come. If we are to work for union let us do it with honest intent, but with the feeling also that our church can still move on as before in case nothing of moment comes from the attempt. Such union as the one contemplated might be of much benefit to us here in Northern Michigan but there must be no shadow of episcopacy in sight for the united church if we are to help it on.

The so-called mild form of lordship that exists among the good people known as United Brethren in Christ is too much for us, and partly because of what it really is and partly because of what it may lead to later. It may prove someday to be the thin edge of the wedge that needed only time to be driven further. If it would die out in the consolidated organization, it would do little harm, but it might dye in slowly, but surely land us in a position where we would find as much reason as our fathers did to protest.—Church Recorder, Methodist Protestant.

THE PERSONAL TOUCH.

A noted evangelist was once holding a series of meetings in a church whose minister was a man of long experience and of great influence. One night as they sat on the platform together the minister pointed out to the evangelist a man in the audience.

"For twelve yers," he said, "I have tried to win that man to Christ. I have preached to him so long that I sometimes find myself doing it almost unconsciously."

"From the pupit?" asked the evangelist.

"From the pulpit, yes.'

"How many times have you gone to him with the love of God in your heart and said: 'I want to see you become a child of God?"

"I must confess," said the minister, "that I have never spoken to him personally and directly concerning his salvation."

"Then," said the evangelist, "perhaps he is not impregnable after all."

That night the evangelist after the service, caught the man before he got to the door. He spoke only a few words but they were earnest and loving. And the next evening in the after service, in which so many souls have found lasting peace and eternal life, the man was on his knees with the tears streaming down his cheeks. It was the personal touch that did it.

The sermon is effective with. many Music has brought salvation to many a life. But in thousands and thousands of cases it is only the personal touch that wins.—William Thomas McElroy.

VOLUNTARY ATTENTION.

A prominent educator calls attention to the evil of excessive use of moving picture shows, even in instruction, be cause of "involuntary attention."In all educational work it is desirable to cultivate "voluntary attention." This educator has no sympathy with the old notion that a thing should be done just because it is hard. He believes in the modern idea of interest in work or in whatever the pupil attempts. He would seek to arouse that interest where lacking. He would interest the pupil so that he will put forth voluntary attention. The pupil who loves his work will make extraordinary efforts to accomplish his task. Interest in a subject does not leave one idle. It is a spur to work. But the moving picture show, like the sensational novel, asks nothing. There are no voluntary acts at all. And the tendency is a degeneration to a weak and flabby state of mind.—Exchange.

BEING "GAME."

"If you can make one heap of your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch and toss
And lose, and start again in your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss."

—Kipling.

That, according to Mr. Kipling, is one of the "If's" whose satisfaction makes up the full measure of a man.

Can you satisfy that "If"?

If you can, you deserve an adjective that I think mighty few women earn—that is "game."

On our return from a short trip which I recently took with a friend, she hurried upstairs to her room and came down with a beaming face.

"Well I am wlad," she said, "I've actually found it."

"Found what?" I inquired. She had notspoken of any loss.

"Well," she explained, "just after we started I discovered that my little money bag was gone. It had a hundred and five dollars in it that I was going to put in the bank. I thought possibly I left it on my dresser, but I wasn't sure, and there it was, after all. Isn't that splendid?"

"Well, why on earth didn't you tell me about it before?" I inquired in astonishment. "Why, you were just as jolly as usual all the time. How could you be?"

"Of course. What would have been the use of telling you?" she answered promptly.

"It would have spoiled our trip to have talked and fretted about it. I knew there was nothing I could do about it until I got home, so I just tucked the matter away in the back of my head and enjoyed the trip."

Now do not infer from this that my friend was one to whom the loss of one hundred dollars would be a slight matter. Quite the contrary.

Simply she was "game."

She fulfilled Kipling's "If."

Indeed she went beyond that. Not only did she fail to "breathe a word about her loss," but she made the effort not to think of it, and that is the last word of gameness —to make your venture, task your risk, know of your possible loss, and then bravely put it in the back of your head until time shall have made its decision for or against you.

Few men would have done this, and fewer women.

To most of our sex, bred to dependency as we are, it is second nature to expect other people to share our doubts and worries.

I know a woman who is about to invest her savings for several years in a lodging house.

She has definitely made up her mind to take this step. She does not want any advice, but she does want everybody she talks with to spend their time wondering with her as to whether she will succeed or not.

She is the typical woman.

Perhaps "gameness" doesn't sound at first like a very splendid quality, but when you look more closely at it and realize that it simply means the fine serenity of silent, unfretted waiting for the verdicts of fate, it seems something too desirable for us to let the other sex monopolize.

To me, at least.—Ruth Comeron.

PRESIDENT TAFT ENDORSES TUBERCULOSIS DAY.

Says Churches Should Work to Eradicate Diseases.

Cordial approval and endorsement of Tuberculosis Day, which will be observed by the churches of the country on october 27th, is expressed by President Taft in a letter to Homer Folks of New York, President of The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, made public to-day.

President Taft, writing from Beverly, says:

"My dear Mr. Folks:

"I have your letter of September 16th, and am very glad of an opportunity to testify to my belief in the importance of your campaign of education as to means of preventing tuberculosis. You do well to enlist the active support of the churches and of all other agencies for the dissemination of information calculated to induce everyone to do his or her part towards the complete eradication of the dread disease. I hope and believe that a "Tuberculosis Day" in the churches will be productive of great good.

"Sincerely yours,

"William H. Taft."

From present indications, Tuberculosis Day will be observed by almost every religious denomination in the United States and not less than 50,000 sermons on tuberculosis will be preached on October 27th, or in the week preceding or following that date.

Durham, N. C.

THE CHRISTIAN'S STATE.

One great truth which may bring solace and satisfaction to the Christian, during times of fluctations of feeling and experience, is that before God he is under no legal condemnation. He stands acquitted completly by the broad moral law of God. Paul was divinely authorized to write these golden words: "There is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus."Rev. Archibald G. Brown, of London, in referring to those words, says: "I know that there will be a glorious public acknowledgement of the saints in that day when the throne shall be set and when it shall be said, 'Come, ye blessed, inheret the Kingdom!' but I shall not be more free from condemnation than I am now, if I am in Christ Jesus. O, if this truth were really gripped and laid hold of, I believe that many woud be unable to refrain from jumping up and shouting Hallelujah! Why is it that we live such poor, weak, joyless lives? It is because we fail to grasp and fully realize that which we have now." It is indeed so. Many genuineChristians too frequently forget the blessid truth that they are condemned before God. They are in the habit of looking at their feelings and failings, their imperfections and their mistakes, and then conclude that they are in a condemned state. Having done some things which they knew were wrong, they mourn and worry and chide themselves, and thus become discouraged and joyless. It is indeed well that the Christian should be sorry for his wrong acts, his imprudent words, his unjust judgmentsof others, and his sins; but, even then, let him think of the precious truth that a gracious God forgives him at once of all offences, and that these things do not make void the vital and fundamental fact that he is still free from all legal condemnation. That record forever stands. It is sealed by the atonement of Christ. Think of Paul's words, authorized by God himself." Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that shall condemn? Christ makes intercession for the saints, according to the will of God. Rejoice in this assurance, and keep up good courage!

C. H. Wetherbe.

MARRIAGE OF E. S. WILLS AND MISS CRAWFORD.

Edwards S. Wills, of this city, was married last Saturday evening to Miss Elizabeth Crawford. The wedding took place at the home of Prof. Richard M. Crawford, of William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. Whitley, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Williamsburg.

As Miss Jetta Thorpe, at the piano, began the wedding march from Lohengrin, the bridegroom entered with his best man, W. S. Cook, of Rochester, N. Y. Next came the maid of honor, Miss Margaret Albright, of Greensboro. The bride entered upon the arm of her eldest brother, Robert B. Crawford, who gave her away. The couple stood before an altar of white, draped with evergreen, while the beautiful and impressive words of the ceremony were spoken by the minister, and the vows taken. During the ceremony the pianist played softly, "O Thou Sublime Sweet Evening Star."

Immediately after the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the members of the family and visiting friends, an elegant buffet supper was served to the bridal party. Following this was a re c ption, attended by about one hundred guests. The guests were presented to the bride and bridegroom by Prof. and Mrs. R. M. Crawford. Others in the receiving line were Mr. Cook, Miss Albright, Mrs. L. W. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Wills, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wills and Prof. L. W. Crawford.

The bride wore a dress of white charmeuse with pearl trimmings, veil and orange blossoms. She carried a shower boquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor's dress was of blue uncut velvet. She carried yellow chrysanthemums.

The home of Professor Crawford, one of Williamsburg's historic houses of great interest, with its wealth of rare mahogany and silver, formed a beautiful setting for the lovely occasion.

Those present at the wedding were: Mrs. L. W. Crawford, mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Crawford, of Winston-Salem; Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Crawford and Fred Crawford, of Williamsburg; Prof. Lee W. Crawford, of Emory and Henry college; Frank Crawford, of Winston-Salem; W. S. Cook, Miss Margaret Albright; Miss Marietta Stockard, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Wills and Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wills, of Greensboro. —Greensboro Daily News.

A beautiful home wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Bobbit, Oct. 8, 1912, at high noon when Egbert C. Kittrell and Beulah M. Bobbit were united in holy matrimony.

Bro. Kittrell is a young man of strong Christian character and has been the efficient steward of Rehoboth church for some time and is one of our best church workers, never failing to represent his church in the Quarterly Conference, and while only 22 years of age his influence is felt for Christ and the church.

No less can be said of the bride. She is our faithful and efficient church organist at Union Chapel and in her modest and unassuming way has won the confidence and esteem of all who know her as being in every respect a Christian young young lady of great worth to her home church, and community.

It is gratifying to know that this union does not remove them from the church and community, but we still expect to see them in their accustomed places for service.

We predict for them a life of happiness and usefulness and pray the good Lord that their journey through life together may be as full of good cheer and sunshine as the day on which the journey began.

Immediately after the ceremony they left for Richmond to spend a few days and take in the fair which is in progress there. N. G. Bethes.

CONSUMPTION CURES.

A New York millionaire not long ago offered a million dollars for a cure for consumption. No one claimed it. He made the offer too late. He might have been living today if he had appreciated the value of his health and used ordinary precautions to keep himself in good health and up to the top notch of physical vigor at all times. In 99 cases out of 100 that is all you have to do in order to avoid contracting consumption. There is no medicine that will "cure consumption." Patent medicine consumption cures are a hoax, a snare and a delusion. They waste your money, stimulate you for a short time, and leave you in a worse condition than you were before. Live in the open air, eat abundantly of nourishing, easily digested foods—milk, eggs, etc.—and place yourself in the hands of a good doctor. If you have consumption, do not leave North Carolina unless you have plenty of money and a competent physician advises it. If you want to know about home treatment for consumption for yourself or your neighbor or your friend, write to the North Carolina State Board of Health for a free bulletin on this subject.

STATESMEN ON THE BIBLE.

It will be well in these strenuous days to pause and listen concerning the study of the Book of books. There are the testimonies of patriots, trusted custodians of the Reublic:

John Quincy Adams—So great is my veneration of the Bible that the earlier my children begin to read it the more confident will be my hopes that they will prove useful citizens of this country.

Abraham Lincoln—In regard to the Great Book, I have only to say that it is the best gift which God has given to men.

U. S. Grant—Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet anchor of your liberties; write its precepts on your hearts and lives. To the influence of this Book we are indebted for the progress made to civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future.

THE MEN WILL NOT TILL THE WOMEN DO.

"We will never be able to hurl back the mighty tide of masculine profligacy until the women of America get enough sense to change their fashion plate!"

That statement is credited by "The Biblical Recorder" to Dr. H. H. Hulton, pastor of the First Baptist church, Charlotte, N. C. We suspect that he is not so far wrong. It seems a bit severe, as it appears in cold type, but if you will go to church on Sunday and examine the fashions, you will not—hear much of the sermon, and so you had better not do that. It is a fact, however, that the extravagances of both men and women are a shame to the Church of Christ, for so many of the fashionable are leaders in the churches. Think of a man wearing a $1,000 diamond in his shirt front, and when the offering for foreign missions is taken, he gives one poor little lonely dollar. And his wife, though a member of the church, does about the same. She wears a hat which maybe cost fifty dollars, and when the basket passes her she puts in a nickel to send the gospel to the lands of darkness. We think one is about as much in earnest as the other, and one is as sinful as the other.

It does seem a reasonable thing that people of means who profess faith in Christ and claim to be living for Him should be more reasonable in their expenditures, especially when it is a matter of mere luxury, and in no sense a necessity. God pity us in our foolish wastefulness, and give us more sense and more grace, that we may behave ourselves as becomes men and women who have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ from corruptible things—and may we lay up in heaven a better treasure than fine clothes and extravagances which are not seemly to Christians.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.

Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

GREATTST CONCRETE ARCH.

The largest concrete arch in magni- It forms part of the Larimer avenue bridge over a deep ravine and measures 312 clear span. In Austria, 12,000 miles away, there is a huge arch of concrete with a clear span of 317 feet; but as it is 36 feet wide, as compared with the 50-foot width of the Larimer avenue bridge, the American work is by far the largest. The height of the Pittsburg structure is 113 feet.—Popular Mechanics.

Received on Brotherhood Call No. 14.

Revs. W. T. Totten, C. A. Cecil, G. E. Hunt, W. E. Swain, J. H. Moton, three dollars each. Miss Anna M. Michaux and Dr. W. R. Goley one dollar each.

Received on Call No. 13.

Dr. W. R. Goley one dollar.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

—Mr. John Pickett, of High Point, is proving himself to be a constructive genius. He has built four houses this summer.

PRIZE NUMBER TWO.

For the best letter received before Oct. 27th telling why the following lines were rejected:

throughout thee church,I am,
if you can do this early Very truly, asks us to say that the Committee made here which closed Saturday, Congrega-
a collection at our Children's Day of $16.
D. O. Highfill, pastor, and the people that they might be saved. Do we opus as faithfully as his health woul per-doubtable Colonl from making his speech,

—Our Pastor Rev. S. B. Stephens, nance report next week.

To the Offical Members:
keep from getting a little serious.
Sunday, the 6th began a weeks meeting he was a hard and faithful student field and entes his children in the State tertained the crowd with his talkind ma-
Dear Brother of the ministry: to make it harder some toimes to say
years by that saintly man, Rev. John R. expectancy of the corner stone layink and ir al lthe other churches and we are very afew days and said do all you and your —Elon College now in its 22nd annual session with 300 students enrolled. Can any church college in this State show a superior record?

—Miss Esther Pickett, of High Point, is to teach near Gibsonville. She was a student at Western Maryland college and in our State Normal.

—A Jew could not become a bishop in Great Britian, but he might become prime minister and so appoint the whole bench of bishops.

—In a special to the naval cadets at Murwick, Emperor William of Germany said to them: "I can assure you that I in my twenty-two-year reign have made the observation that the greater number of criminal cases submited to me for adjudiation, up to nine-tenths are traceable to the consequences of alcohol."

—Southern Agriculturists: "A temper is like a spirited horse— a very good article to make things go so long as it doesn't run away with you."

—Nashville Banner: "Judges have some idea of justice after all. One of them up in Massachusetts has sentenced a bigamist to support both his wives."

—Abraham Lincoln: "I do not pretend to be a prophet; but though not a prophet, I see a very dark cloud on our horizon, and that cloud is coming from Rome. The true motive power is secreted behind the thick walls of the vatican, the college and schools of the Jesuits, the convents of the nuns, and the confessional boxes of Rome."

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

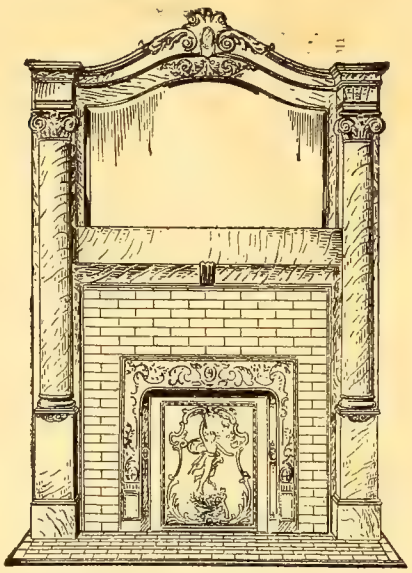
LET'S BE CONSISTENT.

Poor Billy Rand, the boy accidentally killed by hazing at the State University, certainly died a most unnecessary death, but we are going to learn a lesson from it. Already there is lots of strong agitation for stringent legislation along this line, and it is an excellent movement. But the question that naturally arrises in the minds of many serious minded men is why we do not direct legislation toward sources that would save more lives than the comparative few that might be saved by preventing hazing. Take, for example, the preventable deaths of infants. Did it ever occur to you that Herod's slaughter of the innocents was but a mere incident compared to the destruction of babies today? In the entire world 15,000,000 helpless babies die every year. During the last twenty-four hours not fewer than 40,000 have died, and the same thing is going to occur tomorrow. In the United States alone approximately 1,000 babies die every day. In our own State we lost last year between 8,000 and 9,000 babies. Were any of them near or dear to us? Next year that needless slaughter will probably be repeated. Will any of them be little ones near and dear to you?

Mr. Phelps, at the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography at Washington last week, is quoted as authority for the statement that there is the best reason for believing that at least fifty percent of our present infant mortality is readily preventable. The main things needed to accomplish this result are more means of educating the public, particularly the mothers and fathers, as well as those that will later be parents; some common sense laws or rules and regulations regarding milk and food, as well as flies and water; and some means of keeping a careful record of the births and deaths of all infants in the State, in order that we may be better able to tell where these preventable deaths of children occur, and what causes them.

Nor is this true of infant deaths alone. The same thing is true of our high preventable death rates from typhoid fever, tuberculosis, malaria and other preventable deaths. In other words, let's prevent hazing, from a humanitarian standpoint; but for the same reason let's not forget the vastly greater number of deaths that we could prevent in other ways.—N. C. State Board of Health.

—"Good roads don't build themselves" sagaciously remarks The Roanoke, Ala. Leader. We had made that same discovery in these parts and had furthermore observed that even talk did not build good roads. It takes three things to make good roads. knowledge, money, work. And either is worthless without the other two.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles, and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1912. NUMBER 50.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEES 1912.

Conference Treasurer—J. R. Hutton.

Colleges—A. O. Lindley, Homer Casto, J. Ed. Moore, J. W. Dowling.

Christian Endeavor—J. E. Pritchard, H. E. Waldrop, W. A. Lamar, C. L. Gray.

Credentials—G. F. Millaway, A. L. Hunter, R. M. Pearson, J. H. Sutton.

Financial Statistics: 1st. Sub District—N. G. Bethea, J. H. Abernathy, Wm. Wiley; 2nd. Sub District —W. M. Pike, J. H. Bowman, Geo. F. Thompson; 3rd. Sub District—W. R. Lawdermilk, W. C. Lassitor, J. B. Ogburn, Geo. S. Kernodle; 4th. Sub District—T. M. Johnson, J. B. O'Bryant, D. M. Davidson; 5th. Sub District—S. W. Taylor, T. A. Williams, J. F. Bailey, S. M. Warlick; 6th. Sub District—J. E. Dosier, D. M. Loy, William Adkins; 7th. Sub District —W. D. Fogleman, S. B. Stephens, G. P. Younginer.

Ordinances—T. J. Ogburn, T. F. McCulloch, Jno. W. Floyd, Jno. A. Wooten, J. A. Turner.

Literature—R. M. Andrews, W. F. Kennett, T. A. Carter, R. E. Briggs, E. M. Ivester.

Minutes—S. M. Needham.

Ministerial Moral Character—A. G. Dixon, W. D. Reed, A. E. Powell, P. L. Walker, J. S. Pender.

Missions—J. W. Williams, C. H. Whitaker, Ed. Lindley, R. A. Gambol, D. R. Loftin.

Official Character—C. A. Cecil, J. A. Ledbetter, J. W. Hardee, S. E. Montgomery, G. W. Hunt.

Pastoral Work—Ed. Suits, J. B. Trogdon, R. W. Giles, W. A. Williams, C. R. Crew.

Pulpit Service—Thos. E. Davis, G. L. Curry, O. W. Hanner, M. P. Efland.

Sunday School—J. A. Burgess, D. R. Williams, E. G. Lowdermilk, J. C. Braswell, A. W. Hulin.

President's Report—H L. Powell, J. H. Moton, R. L. Troxler, J. E. Diviney, J. H. Siler.

Unfinished Business—D. A. Braswell, T. A. Plyer, J. W. Self, J. R. Foster, F. W. Easter.

Statistics—G. W. Holmes, C. J. Edwards, C. E. M. Raper, J. M. Millikan, J. M. Weatherly.

Temperance—W. F. Ashburn, L. H. Hatley, T. F. Newton, Isaac Holt, J. M. Cutchin.

The first named on each committee is expected to act as Chairman. It might be well, as far as possible, to prepare your report before coming to Conference. In this way business could be more rapidly carried forward.

W. E. Swain.

CONFERENCE ROLL OF DELEGATES.

Alamance, Ed. Lindley; Anderson, J. F. Campton; Asheville, G. P. Younginer; Burlington, J. Ed. Moore; Caroleen, H. E. Waldrop; Davidson, P. L. Walker; East Winston, J. F. Baity; Fair View, D. M. Davidson; Forsyth, R. E. Briggs; Granville, John W. Floyd; Greenville, R. M. Pearson; Guilford, R. A. Gambol; Halifax, J. W. Hardee; Henderson, A. E. Powell; Lebanon, S. E. Montgomery; Mocksville, John A. Wootin; Mt. Hermon, Geo. F. Thompson, Randolph, G. L. Whitaker; Randleman, R. W. Giles; Rockingham, J. C. Braswell; Spring Church, C. R. Crew; Tabernacle, J. E. Diviney; Why Not, A. W. Hulin; Winston, O. W. Hanner; Yarborough, J. H. Hughes; Albermarle, W. W. Wiley; Siler City, J. H. Siler; Concord, J. K. Foster; Denton, W. F. Wall; Efland, M. P. Efland; Flat Rock, J. B. Ogburn; Gaston, T. F. Newton; Haw River, J. M. Weatherly; Greensboro, J. M. Millikan; Graham and Haw River, Isaac Holt; High Point, C. L. Gray; LaGrange, J. H. Sutton; Littleton, T. A. Coster; Lincoln, S. M. Warlick; Mecklenburg, Wm. Adkins, Monroe, E. H. Mullas; Orange, J. S. Pender; Pinnacle and Mt. Zion, G. W. Hunt; Richland, W. A. Williams; Roanoke J. M. Cutchin; Saxaphaw, W. L. Holt; St. Paul, J. A. Dean; Thomasville, D. R. Loflin; Vance, J. W. Dolin; Welch, Memorial, F. W. Easter; Yadkin College, Arthur Leonard; Reidsville, Geo. S. Kernodle, Glen Raven and Carolina John W. Trolinger.

Delegates from the following fields have not been reported: Caldwell, Buncombe, Asheboro, Unwharrie, Stanley, Mebane, Liberty, Ivy, Reports from these fields will be greatly appreciated so the roll may be completed.

S. W. Taylor, Sec.

RECEIVED FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS FROM NORTH CAROLINA IN LAST QUARTER.

J. H. Moton, Lebanon Ct., $9.00; E. C. Dimick, Greenville, $17.00; Miss L. Hardin, Pleasant Valley, $1.50; Miss A. Roberts, Buncombe, $2.00; J. E. Pritchard, Halifax Ct., $18.18; F. W. Easter, High Point, $6.00; Miss B. Chambliss Spring Church, $10.00; J. A. Alwran, Lincoln, $6.31; M. C. Henley, Richland, $5.06; T. E. Davis, Burlington, $15.50; S. W. Taylor, Winston-Salemn, $5.08; C. H. Jones, Orange, $17.50; H. L. Powell, Yadkin College, $40.00; W. F. Kennett, Flat Rock Ct., $15.00; S. S. Brown, Bessemer, $1.75. Total, $169.88. Christmas Offering: T. E. Davis, Burlington, $9.77. Total from all sources, $178.65.

Grand total from all sources, $7141.01.

Fred C. Klein, Treasurer.

—Mrs T. A Plyler after long suffering, endured patiently and with Christian resignation, departed this life on Oct. 22, and was laid to rest in Spring Hill Cemetery. Bro Plyler has had a hard year, but has borne up and attended to his charge remarkably well.

—If your Herald does not come, write us, after allowing for delays. Sometimes labels are rubbed off in the mail bags, and the papers are returned to us, but we have no means of knowing for whom they were intended.

PAST FACTS AND PRESENT NEEDS.

I have just looked through the minutes of our last five conferences and in so doing I have found some facts, to say the least, are not altogether encouraging. During that term of years our numerical gain has been less than two thousand. If the reports be correct we gained only two churches during that time. And financially the entire conference of 1907 reports for all purposes only $4392.01 less than does the conference of 1911. The amount of gain for any of the causes is very small and in some cases there is a decrease. Again I find that from the reports of last year the grand total shows that there is not a single claim paid in full. And as I have searched the reports of the five years, I have found only one grand total (some grand totals were not given) that shows a full payment of any claim. This exception is found in the report of 1909 where it is shown that the president received $3.21 more than his claim. In 1911 when the president of our conference was not required to travel the districts his services being placed more at the disposal of the Church Extension interests, and when there were more needs and more calls for Church Extension funds than ever before, the receipts for that cause fell short of those of 1907 by $261.38. When I look at these facts I draw a long breath and say to myself, "What is the matter with us?" We cannot put the blame on prosperity, for I suppose we could not find five more prosperous years than the five in question.

Again, as a retrospective view is taken, places all over our conference can be seen where we have spent thousands of dollars and years of valuable time attempting to establish schools and churches, but now at many of these places instead of seeing flourishing schools and churches the word "Failure" has been boldly written by the fingers of our own conference. These are things for which the oldest conference in the denomination is responsible. A conference composed of proud Methodist Protestants who boast of the ability to govern themselves and who spurn the idea of being dictated to by any assistant or superintendent.

Please do not take it that this is to serve notice that I am discouraged and ready to give up my job. Neither am I dissatisfied with the general principles of our church. But I do mean to say that I believe we are falling short of that which is our privilege and that it is our duty to make a diagnosis of the [illegible] ill, then with the God find remedies for these ills, applying them diligently until we have brought our beloved church into the greatest degree of usefulness. No, I am not discouraged but I am more and more inclined to believe that tenacious efforts is the means by which failure may be counteracted.

Again it is to be noticed in the minutes of the last five conferences that in every instance the president's report has burning words that say "more men and more means." In one of these reports the idea was suggested, that as well as more men we need more man. I surely believe that one of the vital needs of today was there expressed. If we had more man we would have more men and in the prosperous times there would be no doubt about our getting more means. Greater accomplishments would be ours and we would enjoy more brilliant success. Now to get the more man we so much need we must develop the men we have. We are developing, but not as rapidly as we should. And when we consult facts and find how we have neglected some of our most important means of development we can see the cause. No one doubts that church literature if properly used is of untold value for developing a people. But when we see that out of 21,805 members of a conference only 1225 subscribers to a church paper is reported, with an increase of only 153 over the subscription list of five years ago, we are brought face to face with one of our weak points. Then to think that we have a good standard up-to-date paper published within our own bounds by one of our own ministers, at only $1.00 per year. How slow we are! If we are to develop we must appreciate our literature more. Another source of development we have neglected and even abused is that of our school advantages. At different times and places we have attempted to establish schools, but in every instance the conference has canceled the effort with the word "Failure" while we now have some school property at different places we do not have a single school that our people will generally patronize. There is little consistency in our hoping and praying for a great and flourishing school when we will not care for what we have. The man who will not care for an humble home is not worthy of a more elaborate one. And it is to be feared that the church that does not appreciate the small school is not apt to be blessed with a large one. The history of the other church schools in most cases shows a growth of the great out of the small. And to some of those very institutions today, we are not only giving our money [illegible] influence, but we are allowing them to educate our children for themselves. They are not to blame. We are for not caring for our own. Our failure in not continuing schools and churches we have begun and dismissed shows one or two things. We have either used poor judgment in making these outlays or we have proved ourselves too weak to carry a thing to a finish. The probability is we need the advice of the prophet. "Be strong therefore and let not your hands be weak." For a living demonstration of how it pays to hold on to a small thing, even among ourselves, see our splendid orphanage enterprise in which our whole denomination is now so enthusiastically interested. Had it not been for the few women who held on so faithfully, when, even they received so little encouragement, it would have died long ago as was the prediction of many. A few cared for the new born babe and now the child is becoming the pride of the whole church. We can do things if we will.

Now as we turn to our financial needs it is only necessary for us to notice one cause—say the Superannuate Fund—to see that we are poor needy creatures. For this noble and most worthy cause the conference of 1910 obligated itself to raise only $708.29—a mere pittance. The church then deciding not to carry out this obligation cut the amount down by nearly one fourth and made the receipts as reported at last conference just $527.17. Brethren, have we carefully and prayerfully looked at this matter until we see it as it really is? It does seem that we should contribute to this cause if to anything. And Bro. Pastor, pardon me, but I feel that rather than report this cause unpaid we had better pay it ourselves, if we are compelled to borrow the money of one of our brother members. Since Dr. Johnson, a few weeks ago, called our attention to this important need why in the name of right and reason have not a number of our greatly blessed people responded with liberal offers to raise this fund at least to a creditable figure? We are far from being developed financially. To learn how much water to use in baptism we go to the Bible, but we are afraid to consult it about how much of our means we should contribute to the Lord's cause. When we do not do this first thing we can do, there is no wonder we are not more prosperous. But what are we to do to do better?

No one would even doubt that great gains could be made by more closely observing a proper use of time. This is forcefully demonstrated when we consider the large per cent. of our funds that is left to be raised during the last month of each conference year. We waste our time by waiting for necessity to force us into activity and when we do act we find that what might have been pleasant has become irksome—a task too great and difficult for us to master. The cause therefore must suffer. The student who does not apply himself during the school term fails on examination. The farmer who neglects his field during the proper season does not only find the work more difficult but that the harvest is also short. One of our pastors, in speaking of building new churches etc., says that we Methodist Protestants wait until a thing becomes difficult before we undertake it. We then try to do it the hard way. The same kind of procrastination cost our needy church claims thousands of dollars every year. With such management no business enterprise could prosper. Neither can the church. Once our people could be induced to pay a certain amount on the claim of the church each month or each week it would mean that the amount for the various causes would be advanced by a large per cent. and certainly it would be done with more ease and pleasure.

This more ideal system of contributing to the interests of our church will never be reached by standing with hands off waiting for something to happen. It will not be reached by touching the matter so apologetically the world is caused to believe the church to be a charitable institution and that the preachers are paupers. The common custom of raising money by prizes, bazaars, suppers etc., will never develop genuine liberality in a people, but on the contrary will infuse commercialism into the church and have the tendency to cause the people to work as hirelings and with the idea of gain in loaves and fishes. Neither will the desired effect be reached by tickling the fancies of people or by the tedious or boring collection. These tend to make a man give when he does not want to, and " A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." Decidedly better and more satisfactory results may be expected when we with practical, systematic, business methods appeal to men's better judgements and in that way reach their souls. When men are thus reached their better selves have been won and they may then be expected to liberally respond with their means.

To accomplish this each pastor with his board of stewards should in the beginning of the year be careful to lay the most sane and discrete plans possible. Then with business and tenacious tactics agitate and work the plan to a finish.

Then too our Annual Conference should create a finance committee to have general supervision of our financial interests throughout the year. The detailed duties of such a committee cannot be discussed here, but in general such a committee by having the work in hand, studying conditions, laying plans, and by visiting as many of our congregations could be of great usefulness. It is to be hoped that our brethren will be thinking along this line and that a finance committee will be created at our next conference.

Behold what a long letter I have written. And now if I am too young or too little to give such advice, pardon me. I have tried to express what is on my heart. I have done it because I love my church, thankful for what she has accomplished, and with hopes and prayers that she will move on to greater usefulness. I am,

Geo. L. Curry.

Graham, N. C., November 5, 1912.

CONFERENCE FACULTY MEETS.

The Conference Faculty will meet on Wednesday at 2 P. M. day before the sitting of Conference in Burlington, in the Baraca room of the M. P. Church. All those who are to be examined for entrance or upon any study of the course are requested to be present at that time.

C. L. Whitaker, Chairman.

NOTICE!

According to Conference requirements the Committee on Entrance examination will meet in Burlington at 2 o'clock P. M. the day before Conference meets. Will pastors please inform any candidate for entrance to the class, of whom they may have knowledge, of the importance of their meeting the Committee at the church at the time named above.

J. H. Stowe, Chairman.

TO MINISTERIAL STUDENTS.

The examination in Logic will be held at the time set by the Annual Conference (the day before the opening). Candidates will please take notice and be present.

J. F. McCulloch, Examiner.

She meant well, but she got things just a little mixed. She said:

"That poultices' the most unvaluable remedy I know to draw the infirmation out. Joel et somethin' that didn't agree with him and got homemade poison. The doctor says his temperature is moral. We've spent a good deal on doctors, and I'll have to be comical for some time."—Western Advocate

—A minister on his way to Conference was chided by a lay brother for being so indifferent as to where the Conference should send him. He replied: "I am not indifferent, but I have learned that worry does only harm. One main business of the Conference is to find out where the ministers can best serve the cause next year. I trust my brethren. It is possible, of course, for them to make a mistake and send me to the wrong place, but if they do, the Lord will overrule the mistake to His glory and to the good of the church. Of course my personal interests may be sacrificed, but what of that? Are we not expected to make personal sacrifices in this world? What we can sacrifice is little compared with what Christ sacrificed for us."

—I know a real heroine. The world does not know her as such, but I will tell you what she has done, and you can judge for yourself. She was left an orphan with several brothers and sisters younger than herself, all without means. She educated herself and then she went to work to educate her brothers and sisters, using her slender earnings to keep them in school. Not only uncomplainingly but cheerfully has she done this. Don't you think she is a heroine?

—We have learned that it is very difficult to publish any sort of reflection on any person without that person's finding it out and taking note of it and wishing it corrected. Some years ago we published an account of a visit to the Mormon temple in Utah, never thinking that it would be read by Mormon eyes. But it was not long till we received from an official of the Mormon church (if church it may be called) a scathing letter denouncing the author of the account we had published as an ingrate and a falsifier.

Women Voters.

For the first time in our nation's history the women's votes counted as an item worth while in the national election just closed. Women now have the full right to vote in the election for President in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, California, and New Mixico. In these States are 1,400,000 women who had, if they did not exercise, the power of voting for president. Hereafter the women's vote must be reckoned with in a presidential election, for this number of votes may easily swing the election from one candidate to another. And at the present rate of increase it seems highly probable that women's votes will count far more largely four years hence than now

AN UNSUSPECTED OPPORTUNITY.

The minister had waited a full hour or more in the little country cemetery, and he was wet and cold when he stepped down from his buggy to offer a simple prayer at the grave. The doors of two of the carriages were opened during the prayer, but none of the occupants got out in the driving rain. It was a dreary, unfeeling burial, the minister mused, as he drove slowly homeward over the three miles of miry road, and a trace of bitterness crept into his heart. Nobody had spoken to him. Nobody had thanked him for losing a half-day from his books and his parish duties. Nobody had shown any grief for the dead or any courtesy to the living.

Six years passed, and the minister had quite forgotten the incident, when a letter came to him from a college student in Ohio, whose name, even, the minister had never heard.

As a boy of sixteen, the young man said, he had attended the funeral of a great-aunt at L. He told how greatly the dark, leaden sky, the driving of the rain on the carriage windows, and the jolting of the slowly moving vehicle had depressed him. Moreover, under the heavy mourning veils, the relatives had discussed the probable disposition of Aunt Lurena's property, and the sordidness of it all had affected the boy's sensitive nature like a blow.

"Ours had never been a religious family," the letter went on, "and this was my first contact with the serious side of life. I don't think I heard a dozen words of the prayer, but for days I could see you just as you stood there, bareheaded in the pouring rain. I suppose at first that you were paid for the service, and when I learned from a light remark on the way back that you wern't, I wondered why you came. I coundn't understand why a man should do what brought him neither pleasure nor profit—why he should do it for total strangers, at all events.

"By degress, I came to see that the kind of life I was most familiar with went to pieces when misfortune or death came. Father was always nervous and restless for days after any of the men in his business circle died, and then I'd think of you standing so calm and quiet out there in the rain, praying, not because you were paid for doing it, but because you believed in prayer. That seemed to point to something higher, and I began reading the New Testament to find the next step.

"Father was angry when I joined the church and decided to study for the min- [illegible] for me, but I couldn't see my duty anywhere except in the church, and so I'm here, working my way through college. I've written this to tell you where the good impulse started—a place where you might think there was the least chance of exerting any influence at all."—Youth's Companion.

A SUGGESTION TO THE SAME END.

This is not a reply to the article of T. T. Hicks in last week's Herald but a suggestion to the same end, namely, "to get the people into the church and to Christianize them." The "ways and means" he wants the preachers to devise have already been devised and put into operation, but there has not yet been time nor sufficient energy expended to bring a full measure of results. It consists in child-salvation. But the salvation of the child should be thought of as only the beginning of the salvation of the man. Salvation is a process that should begin in childhood and continue through life; both the beginning and the continuing are easier if started in early life. The old idea was to get him after he had gone wild; the new idea is to keep him before he goes wild.

The Church Sees This.

And is working on it. If you do not start people in school work while they are children, you can get only a small per cent. of them to go to school at all. The educators see this, also the parents, and start them in school while they are children. If you do not start people in the religious life while they are children, you can get only a small per cent. of them to enter the religious life at all. Wise Christian workers see this, also, thoughtful Christian parents, and start them in the religious life while they are children.

Hence The Fact

That "two-weeks-of-the best preaching" will add only a dozen children to the church." That "dozen children"is usually found in the Sunday-school, under more or less of religious influences before the "two-weeks of the best preaching" begun. And the said "dozen-children" usually include about all of the non Christians in that Sunday-school and under the direct, continuous religious influence of that Sunday-school and church.

The Ways and Means.

Then "to get the people into the church and Christianize them" is to begin early and make a strenuous, persistent effort to get every child saved and keep him saved. The time to begin to prepare for next year's revival is now, the way to begin and continue the preparation is to get every person possible, child or adult, saint or sinner into the Sunday-school and under the direct and continued religouis influences of the church and Sunday-school.

But How

Are you going to get them to make this strenuous, persistent effort? does some one ask? I am not going to get them to do it. There is no remedy if they are not willing. There is no power on earth that can make them do this work, and there is no power in heaven that will make them do it. The work will just wait for this generation to die and another to come up that is willing. There must be a starting point somewhere and such a start must be in the already-willingness of the workers.

T. M. Johnson.

Asheboro, Nov. 5, 1912.

FROM JAPAN.

The Japan Mission Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in Arima, Japan, October 4 and continued six days. Arima is a beautiful villege nestled among lofty mountain peaks and beside a roaring canon. It is a noted summer resort, and famed for its mineral springs both hot and cold. The missionaries and their wives and children were there—about fifty of us. We staid in the same hotel and ate in one room. Getting together once a year is a good thing for missionaries and their families who are largely cut off from one another and from Americans during much of the year.

Two members of the Board of Missions. including its General Secretary, were on a visit gathering information and taking part in a number of important discussions that came up. Among the visitors were seven of our missionaries enroute to China. Three of these are North Carolinians, Miss Troy of Greensboro, Miss Burkhead, of Winston-Salem, and Miss Green, of Chatham County. In a social meeting seven Tar Heels were called upon to sing "The Old North State." (We were not encored).

We were asigned to a pleasant and promising field on the Island of Kyushiu. We expect to go to our work this week. It will take us about twenty-four hours by rail to reach our new home. We will take our servants from here. Our cook is a young man trained in America. His wife will help us. They formerly worked for one of our missionaries, and are well recommended.

We are delighted to be in the harness again. Sacrifice increases rather than vitiates happiness. We have so much to be grateful for. We have had letters from both the male missionaries of the M. P. Church on the field, and from most of our former co-laborers of the M. P.

Mission. It is refreshing to know that those with whom we labored and suffered are our staunchest friends. After leaving the field one of the consolations that come to me was the fact that all the missionaries asked that I be returned to join them to working here. President Van Dyke has said a number of nice things about me to my present co-workers. After all, we are all doing the same kind of work, each in the place that opened up for him. The harvest in plenteous, and there is ample room to work without getting in each other's way. Many more laborers are needed.

Our new address is Nakatsu, Oita, Ken, Japan. Please address us there.

J. W. Frank.

October 14, 1912.

ASSURED LONELINESS.

There is no loneliness so deep and so sure as that of the person who does nothing for others. The good neighbor is never lonely. The Good Samaritan was not lonely even when he was far from home, on the road to Jericho. Love is never lonely, for love searches out others, and to learn their needs, and supplies them. It is only he who thinks chiefly of himself and his own interests who is sure to be lonely, even in the midst of teeming life. Let us make Mr. Jowett's prayer our own! "Deliver me from the loneliness of selfishness."— S. S. Times.

"Fred," said Aunt Julia, "how is it that you neve quarrel, as many other boys do?"

"O, I don't talk back," answered Fred. "When a boy says a sharp thing to me, I just keep still."

It is always a good plan to keep still when somebody else is angry. Next time any one gets angry with you, just try this plan. Many boys and girls are constantly getting into trouble because they use their tongues too freely.— Olive Plants.

He that studies only men will get the body of knowledge without the soul; and he that studies only books, the soul without the body. He that to what he sees adds observation and to what he reads reflection is in the right road to knowledge, provided that in scrutinizing the hearts of others he neglects not his own. —Colton.

"The love of God is broader Than the measure of man's mind."

—A shortage of freight cars is complained of again. The failure to transport coal to some points is looked upon with alarm as winter approaches.

NO BOOK LIKE THE BIBLE.

No book is like the Bible,
For childhood, youth and age;
Our duty plan and simple,
We find on every page.
It came by inspiration,
A light to guide our way,
A voice from Him who gave it
Reproving when we stray.

It tells of man's creation,
His sad primeval fall;
It tells of man's redemption
Through Christ who died for all,
Its sacred words of wisdom
It bids us watch and pray,
And early come to Jesus,
The Life, the Truth, the Way.

Oh, let us love the Bible,
And prize it more and more;
Our life is like a shadow,
Our days will soon be o'er.
But if we closely follow,
The counsel God has given,
we then may hope with angels,
To sing His praise in Heaven.
No book is like the Bible,
The blessed Book we love;
The pilgrim's chart of glory
It leads, it leads to God above.

—Fanny Crosby.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL WORK NEAR PEKING, CHINA.

BY MRS. MARY P. AMENT.

The three days I spent at the Hsi Ting fair twelve li west of the city were full of work and delightful fellowship with the Bible women, five of whom worked with me. Miss McKillican of the Presbyterian Mission shared the work the first day and was relieved by Miss Payne. Later, Miss Knox (M. E.) took it up and she, Miss Russell and Miss Miner brought it to a close regretfully, for so many waited to be instructed. We never got near before to the families living in encampments. They used to be most anti-foreign. Now they are respectful and interested. They have a military spirit but it is not directed against everything foreign as of old. Not an undesirable word was heard. The women and children are well clad, clean and intelligent about the affairs of their world. They ask us to keep up our visits. The church is seeking to raise a fund among its membership and friends to rent or buy a place where permanent work can be done. Such a place is offered. We hope the Chinese Home Missionary Society will do it and support a preacher. The yearly union work would continue half a month each spring, and give a friendly impulse to keep it from lagging.

I did wish you could look in and see the crowds who hung on our words. Many a woman has begun to pray and to seek God's will. Numbers told us of peace and comfort thus obtained—of relief from pain, or better treatment in the home. We felt many burdens were lightened. new hopes and ideals nourished and that it was blessed work to have a share in.

The Bible women did splendid team work and did not spare themselves talking one after the other from eleven o'clock until four and then doing personal work for an hour more after supper going to the encampment where they were housed and giving two or three hours to meet those who filled rooms and courtyard. This rate of work involved change of workers, as no one could keep it up more than three or four days without rest. Here was where our union work came in, and it was delightful to stand beside those of other missions, native and foreign, and reinforce their efforts. Pictures helped; leaflets were used; texts hung up; singing we couldn't have as it made great crowds gather and we were full. Prayer was offered—brief and simple, over and over as each worker finished and so the first step was made intelligible—Life and Light.

THE REVIVAL NEEDED

The revival that we need is not simply a revival that will awaken sinners to a knowledge of their guilt and danger; that will remind Christian believers of their deficiencies, neglected opportunities, and larger privileges in Christ. What we need is a revival that will help all these agencies and phases of our Church life, and serve all the interests that are dear to us as lovers of Jesus Christ—namely, a movement that will bring home to the conscience and heart of the Church the value of the religious weekly paper, that will urge with convincing power its ministry in the home, that will secure its admission into every household, and that will in one way or another bring people to realize as never before the inestimable worth of that agency as the mightiest evangelizing, educating, quickening, and renewing force wielded by the modern Church. As Rev. J. A. Castel, D. D., so well puts it: "The religious paper is a silent, unobtrusive messenger of good whose influence upon the home is as benign and measureless as are the rays of solar light upon fields of grain and gardens of flowers."—Zion's Herald.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

NOTICE.

Dear Brother Pastor:

If you do not enter in your report to conference the amount collected for maintenance of Orphanage in column "Woman's Home Missionary Society," add a line at the bottom of your report and put that and amount collected for building Orphanage together on the added line at bottom, and add this to the grand total.

W. E. Swain.

MT. PLEASANT, LIBERTY CT.

The fourth Quarterly Conference was held here last Saturday. Finances much behind. The conference unanimously instructed the delegate to ask for the return of Bro. Troxler. The Annual Conference will likely be asked to change the boundary of the Circuit.

W. M. Clapp's family have moved to Graham. A number of others are working there and elsewhere on account of the cotton mill standing.

Lawnie Shepherd and Jno. Layton, Jr., start to Florida the 5th. Frank and Hurly Soots to Rock Hill, S. C.; to deliver trees.

The sermon yesterday was impressive on the Strength and Beauty of the Church.

The school committee hope to have the new four-room school house completed in a week or so. A.

CAROLEEN CIRCUIT.

Our S. S. is moving on well. Highest number present this year has been 201. Our average attendance this year has been 110. Our attendance for the year 1912, 5736, and the collection $70.21 making an average of $1.35 per Sunday. Our attendance for 1911 was 3465 members, making an average of 66 members for the year 1911. So you see we have made a very good gain this year.

Our special meeting closed at Caroleen with about 38 conversions, and those who were reclaimed together. We received fourteen in the church. Our pastor says this church is as easy served as any church he ever saw. The people will want Bro. Braswell back next year.

Bro. Braswell has done a noble work here the past two years. The work seems to be in good condition at each place. We have about 100 members at Caroleen now, and this church promised to pay the pastor $250.00. We have paid $271.00 and will pay not less than $290.00. The church at this place will pay the preacher $300.- [illegible] and we don't think any claim will come up unpaid on the work this year.

We spent a week with the Lincolnton people. They have a worthy church there, the members are of the best people of the town, and all say they feel at home in the M. P. church and other people say they feel at home who are not members there and the results are that members of other churches are joining, and some of the good girls and boys from the M. E. church up town attend our S. S. and church services. We had 21 conversions while there, and 8 to join the church. There are some there who are still knocking at our people, but the members of that church just love them and others into the church. They haven't many members, but they are fixing a good way to have more.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Shelby Saturday night, November 10th. We are hoping to have every thing in good shape for the Annual Conference. We feel that many prayers have been prayed for this work, and that they are being answered. Continue to pray for us.

H. E. Waldrop.

ROCKINGHAM.

There have been $10. paid on the St. John's church, leaving a debt of $415. The interest at 8 per cent has been kept paid up to November 11. There is an effort being made to make the payment in addition to the $10 to equal $100. How well the effort will succeed, remains to be seen.

The church at McFarlen ls in good shape. Received one member by certificate at this point, at our last appointment. from the Christian church. Pastor's salary paid in full at this point, and think all other claims will be paid. The other two churches much behind financially. Some difficulties occurring here last year, have not been overcome. $156. all told, has been paid on salary. $177 reported last year. The 4th quarterly conference fixed pastor's salary at $300., as this year, but $200. would have been perhaps nearer the ability point. This may be a part of "Overland" Ct. Some good, and some not so good. Will require patient effort to bring success, as desired.

J. F. Dosier.

WINSTON—A RESUME OF THE YEAR'S WORK.

We began our work here December 20, 1911, and have been steadily at it since. There has been nothing phenomenal about our work during the year. Yet we feel sure that real substantial progress has been made. Our special meeting of ten days, ceasing the 4th Sunday in October, was a delightful spiritual refreshing. Bro. Ogburn's sermons made profound impressions upon our people and we are sure that his coming was a great blessing to us. There were eleven professions and eight additions to the church as a result of the meeting, and a deepening of the spiritual life on the part of those in the church. We have added to the church in all during the year sixteen members and are expecting others before the year closes.

Our Sunday school work is ncouraging. We have an enrollment of 204 and an average attendance last month of 114. This, I know, is not a good average for our enrollment, but I think our roll needs revising. We would then doubtless show a much larger per cent of attendance. There is a spirit of healthy activity and co-operation in this department of the work, and with some needed changes that we hope to effect soon, our work will be come better organized and more efficient and we shall be prepared to realize the larger things that I think are possible for us in this department of our work here.

We have been a little disappointed in not getting our building remodeled this year. We all feel that it is imperative that this be done, and we have hoped to have it done without further delay, but are compelled now to let the matter go over till next spring. Unless all of our plans are interrupted and our hopes blasted we shall begin work then. Our plan is to spend $10,000. in improvements. This, we think, will give us a very satisfactory house of worship and enable us to do, in many ways, much better work than we can possibly do with our present equipment. Another thing that will add much to the appearance and value of our property is a side walk on the south side of Seventh street. The curbstone is already on the ground and we hope to have the walk in the near future.

This report would be incomplete without some reference to that organization that does so much in a material way for the church and for the comfort of the pastor and his family—The Ladies' Aid. The organization here was started twenty years ago during the pastorate of Dr. Swain. It has been active for the welfare of the church during all these years, but never, I think, more so than now. During the year this society has painted the parsonage, put in electric lights, bought carpet for the front hall, tracking for the stairs, matting for the back halls below and above, a drugget for the dining room, and a gas stove for the kitchen. In addition to this these good women are paying fifty dollars to the Building Fund of the Orphan's Home and have a pledge of five hundred dollars to the building fund of our own church. They have to their credit at the bank $246.99, after paying out this year about $160.00. In addition to what has been mentioned of parsonage improvements is to be added the papering of one room at a cost of seven dollars and paying for paint for three other rooms. Other pastors, I am sure, can share with me the deep feeling of appreciation and respect that I entertain toward this body of noble Christian women for their faithful and unselfish service. May the rich benediction of heaven rest richly upon such organizations everywhere.

The work of the year has been hard, but many pleasant experiences have lightened the load and helped us to face our problems with new faith and stronger courage. The people have been kind and responsive, willing to follow our lead. And now as we come to the close of the year it is gratifying to believe that some good has been done, some progress made in both spiritual and material things. We are looking forward joyfully to the coming Conference and shall not cease to pray that divine benedictions may rest upon us as we plan for the work of another year.

S. W. Taylor.

November 4, 1912.

CHARLOTTE, RICHLAND CIRCUIT.

Our protracted meeting began last Wednesday night and lasted until Friday night. It closed on account of necessity as our pastor was sick and not able to be with us, and Bro. Braswell had to leave and go to his appointment. Bro. Braswell preached some soul-stirring sermons and there was good feeling in every service. Our pastor is able to be out again. He came Sunday and held two services for us.

Our quarterly meeting will be to-day, Monday.

Our Sunday school is still running and I think if nothing prevents it will continue through the winter months. Success to the Herald and its readers,

A Member.

ASHEBORO.

It was an interesting and impressive sight to see the young Christians around the chancel taking the communion.

The pastor and his family were kindly remembered last Saturday night by the gift of a number of useful, necessary, articles, by the congregation. It came as a pleasant surprise, but the most pleasant part of it was the kindly remembrance. They have thanks as sincere as the gifts were hearty.

The pastor's family enjoyed a pleasant evening with the choir in their home last Friday.

T. M. Johnson.

IVY CIRCUIT.

Brother McCulloch:

I am so sorry you did not publish my notice I sent you of my last Quarterly Meeting to be held November the 9th inst. in last week's Herald. I sent it to you week before last, requesting it published in last week's Herald.

Yours for the Master's work,

S. B. Stephens.

(Bro. Stephen's notice must have miscarried.—Editor.)

FORSYTH CIRCUIT.

Our 4th quarterly meeting was held at Stony Knoll Saturday before the first Sunday. All the churches were not represented, though the business was transacted in the spirit of love. A division of the circuit was brought up and decided upon. All who know the circuit realize it is too much for one man to look after. He can neither do himself nor the work justice.

T. A. Williams.

November 4th, 1912.

HENDERSON.

Last Sunday was a good day at our church. The Lord's Supper was administered to a large number of the membership. Five members were received into the church, and others will join later. I wish to correct Bro. Hicks' statement in the Herald last week that all the converts in our recent revival were children. Bro. Hicks was unavoidably kept away from most of the services and therefore did not know all the converts. Six of the twelve converts were grown people. I think that the greatest work a church can do is to save the children and I am thankful for every child converted in my meetings. I think the revival as a great blessing to those who could attend. There seems to be a deeper spirituality in the church than I have ever known here. Some did faithful work in the congregation and were rewarded by the deepening of their own spiritual life and by seeing sinners converted as a result of their labors.

May the Lord grant that the good impression made by the lasting and result in increased activity in the Lord's work.

J. D. Williams.

PHILADELPHIA, GREENVILLE CT.

I am sorry the time is nearly at hand for our pastor to leave us. I know he will leave many sad hearts. I am glad to report that Bro. Ashburn was able to fill his last appointment before conference yesterday to a very large congregation. He preached an excellent sermon. I'm glad to report that we are expecting to see him fully paid up before he leaves. We are moving on very nicely with our S. S. since we reorganized. We also have a very full school. But we are still praying for a better one, and for more of the old people to join us.

I will close with best wishes to the many readers.

Yours for Christ,

Beatrice Chambliss, Rep.

November 4, 1912.

CORINTH, LITTLETON CT.

Four deaths since my last report—Mrs. Jessie Carter, Jr., nee Blanche Morris, left an infant 11 days old, little girl, Mrs. John Morris took the child to raise, but in course of two weeks it, too, passed away.

Mrs. Forest Insco, nee Lucy Powers, and her baby died just before Mrs. Carter's baby. Mrs. Insco's baby lived only three weeks. Her little one was taken first, left her to mourn her loss. Only a few days passed before her body was taken to the same burying ground, Corinth. Two mothers and their infants all buried here in course of two weeks. Seven of our members have died this year. Passing away fast.

"We pass this way but once,
Then weave thy robe with care.
Life's robe ill spun
Is ne'er undone.
The robe we weave we wear.

We pass this way but once,
Then live today thy best.
In all you do,
Be kind and true,
With God leave the rest."

The marriage I gave a hint of before was that of Miss Jessie Bobbitt who lives near here, to Mr. John Sledge of Louisburg, a popular young man, a brother of Miss Nellie Sledge.

Yesterday was a good day for church going. Bro. Ledbetter's sermon was said by many, "The best he has given us yet." Many visitors were out to hear him. After service a reelection of officers was held. Same board of stewards and trustees were elected save Mr. A. E. Carter was put in place of Mr. Gid Williams as trustee. You remember Mr. Williams is one of the members who died this yea

Fairview, Anderson Ct.

As we have received so much help from your many good letters, we regret so much that we are not able to say somethings also helpful to others.

Our Ladies' Aid Society is still doing good work and we are hoping to accomplish still more; at our last meeting a work day was set apart by the members for the benefit of our Society. We will note with interest any information we may get through the Herald.

Our last quarterly conference will convene with the Liberty Hill church on Saturday. Nov. 9. We sincerely hope our former pastor, Bro. Lamar, will be returned to this people another year. We trust that we may be of more help in the future than we have in the past.

A very sad accident occurred in our community Friday morning when Henry Nally was thrown from a mule; up to this time he is lying in an unconscious conditon. It is hoped his injuries will not prove fatal.

Mrs. Augustus Ellison who has been quite sick for the last three months is much improved.

Mr. Vardry Hill from Michigan visited his aunt, Mrs. Robert Wyatt, last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Good luck to the Herald and well wishes to its readers.

Mary Hendrix.

Nov. 14, 1912.

Burlington.

The attendance at Sunday school dropped to 145 last Sunday. The recent cold spell is believed to be the cause of the decrease.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of our church was held Monday night and the usual business was transacted. The Board of Stewards and other officers of the church were elected for the ensuing year. The church Treasurer's report showed a deficit on pastor's salary and conference claims, but we were quite confident that all will be met and we will greet Conference with a clean record.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Monday afternoon with Mrs. H. G. Kime This society is proving a real benevolent enterprise of the church, for the members are progressive and zealous in their efforts, and they are accomplishing much good along the lines of parsonage and church property improvement. This society is worthy of the support and sympathy of the entire church.

The work on our annex is about completed, and we are sure a part of it, if not all, will be ready for occupancy by Conference.

C. B. W.

Charlotte, Richland Circuit.

Rev. D. A. Braswell came last Wednesday to be with us in a few days' meeting. Found the pastor sick in bed; began the meeting that night, had promise of a good meeting, but was obliged to close Friday in order to get to his own work. This is the third meeting the pastor has been compelled to miss on account of his own sickness.

The friends there did not fail to remember us, however, but sent a wagon load of necessary things consisting of corn, flour, sugar, molasses, potatoes, sweet and Irish, pears, apples, dried fruit, turnips, popcorn and nuts and cash.

Bro. D. T. McCain brought the supplies. Those taking part were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Robins, F. C. Robins, W. F. McCrary, W. S. Crowson, B. F. Bulla, T. V. Bulla, Wil. Bulla, Sam. Henley, H. Andrews, J. H. Redding, J Redding, Frank Prevo and Robert Clark.

To one and all of these kind friends we give sincere thanks. If we fail to give proper credit in any instance, the Father of all will give the reward and blessing.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

ORPHANS' HOME.

Treas. Report.

Winston S. S., $2.89; Giles Chapel S. S., $2.25; Union Chapel S. S., Granville Ct. $1.00; Welsh Memorial S. S., $6.00; Fair Grove S. S. Why Not Ct. $3.25; Whitaker's Temple S. S., $1.50; Mt. Lebanon S. S., $1.85; Bethesda S. S., Yadkin College Ct. $2.00; Rehobeth S. S., Granville Ct. $4.40; Total, $25.14.

November 5, 1912.

Etta Auman, Treas.

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL.

In August, 1906, at the request of President Johnson, I opened school at Denton. We rented the building at $6.00 per month and started with 16 students. At this time the school was not self supporting, so the Nov. conference assigned me to Davidson circuit. I taught the school and traveled the circuit for 1 year. In the meantime, the matter of purchasing the property for our church came up. Bros. O. R. Cox and R. H. Brooks, at the request of President Johnson, visited the school and examined the property They were so well pleased with it they recommended that we buy it for the church. Bro. A. G. Morris, the owner, offered it to us for $2,200. Bro. Cox and Bro. Brooks further recommended that Denton pay $800 of this money and that the remaining $1,400 be collected by friends away from Denton. Both parties complied with these recommendations and the property was deeded in fee-simple to 14 trustees of and for the Methodist Protestant church; Bros. Cox and Brooks each giving $100 as an evidence of their faith in the enterprise.

When I first went to Denton in Aug., 1906, it was my intention to remain with the school until it became self supporting and the property of our church. Our expectations were realized some two or three years ago, but I did not resign as principal until last fall.

My resignation was accepted at last conference with the understanding that I secure some one to carry on the work during the spring term, 1912. Prof. T. O. Pender accepted the place and had a successful school.

Of course our church and school have both had opposition, not because they are undesirable institutions, but because we have outstripped the other churches in doing things. This opposition has been overcome to some extent, and I feel, if the cause is properly managed, that we will never have cause to regret our achievements there as a church.

It pains me greatly to know that no one has seen proper to continue the school. I took it when it paid less than $25.00 per month in a rented building, and left it paying $100 per month with no rents to pay; and I feel like some one ought to manifest their love for the cause by taking up the work again. I believe the proper thing to do is to let the pastor of our church there be President of the school. He can do this and have less traveling to do and get a larger salary than I did when I began the work and was pastor of six churches besides Denton, in order to get a support.

We can not afford, as a church, to let this matter pass by. We have too much invested there and the opportunity is too great. I believe our people away from Denton would do well to help finish our new church and then put a live man there as pastor and principal of the school.

Our new church when complete, will be an honor to the denomination, and will give us greater prestige in that section. Bro Braswell deserves credit for his untiring energy in the work he has done for our cause at Denton.

Our people there have acted their part well. They feel a little bad because of the treatment received in regard to the Orphanage, but are not dead over it. Our cause there will not in years, if ever, recover from this affair, yet we are foolish to further injure our cause in what promises to be a prosperous town someday.

We have good school property and can run a successful school if we as a church will only try. Some may say, "We will if we can." Let's all say we can and we will, and half the work will be done.

G. L. Reynolds.

Albemarle, N. C., Oct. 31, 1912.

EDEN, HALIFAX CT.

Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, filled his regular appointment at this church last Sunday. He preached a good sermon as he always does. This is his last appointment at this church before Conference. He has done splendid work the past year, we all like him fine, and hope we can have him for another year.

I am glad to say that Bro. L. W. Gerringer is entirely well.

Just two more weeks before Conference. I am glad to say that all the assessments will be raised in full.

The ladies gave a bazar at the Town Hall in Enfield last Friday night, Nov. 1. Right much money was taken in, don't know the exact amount, for the purpose of furnishing the M. P. parsonage at Brinkleyville.

Much love to the Herald and its readers.

Irene Hawkins, Reporter.

November 6, 1912.

GASTONIA CT.

Pastor's report for the 4th Quarterly Conference:

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

We have been wonderfully blessed this year. The Lord has permitted us to come together in another quarterly conference, to shape up our year's work; I feel that I have discharged my duty on the Gastonia circuit this year, and I hope that you all may feel the same way toward me. Since we last met in a quarterly conference, our hearts have been made sad by the death of sister Sills. She was one of the first to unite with our church at Bessemer City. She was faithful unto death. O, how we do miss her! No one knows but the church to which she belonged.

But she has gone to join the heavenly host. She had a glorious triumph over death, none of the old apostles had a more glorious triumph over death than she! Her labor is ended and the harvest is past, but she is saved in heaven at last!

Now, in regard to my work in a general way, since the fifth day of December, 1911. I have made over six hundred pastoral calls, and filled all of my appointments this year except at Fairfield church; I missed an appointment there as my little girl was sick at that time, so that I could not leave home.

I have been in prayer meeting each week this year, and a part of the time twice a week; I have been in Sunday school each Sunday this year so far, and have conducted four revivals on the Gastonia Circuit this year. I have assisted in one revival on the Mecklenburg circuit. We have had seventy-nine conversions and reclamations on this circuit, and fifty accessions.

We have completed the parsonage this year, and your humble pastor and his family have found it to be a delightful place to live; with one exception, and that is the inconvenience to get water.

Your pastor would suggest that there be a well dug or bored at the parsonage the earliest date possible, as it will not be long until winter time.

We have organized one church this year with twenty-three members, and we have five hundred and eighty dollars in sight, for that church. We have thirty-six loads of sand on the church lot which is to be made into concrete blocks for the purpose of building the church at Cornelius, N. C.

I have given all the time that I possibly could to the work at Cornelius, and if that work over there is given the proper attention from now on, it will not be long until it can be made a self-supporting charge.

Now in regard to the spiritual condition of the circuit, so fafr as I can see, the churches are in good working order, much better than they were last year.

The revivals have been good this year. We have had forty-nine conversions and reclamations at Bessemer City church, twenty-two at Union Grove church, and six at Fairfield church, making a total of seventy-seven conversions and reclamations in the churches and two in private homes.

Brethren and sisters, this speaks well for the Gastonia circuit, but it is not what it ought to have been, neither is it what it could have been, if all of the members of this circuit had done their duty.

Your pastor could have done a greater spiritual work on the Gastonia circuit this year, if it had not been for the financial embarrassment at times, of course this financial embarrassment has been brought about by the Fairfield church not paying up until right at the last of the year; although it seems that all of the stewards have been just a little irregular.

Your pastor would suggest that each steward make it his business to call upon each member on his steward books each week, and try to collect the amount due. If you will do so you will find it easier to raise your claims, and at the same time make it easier for your people to pay their assessments. The financial reports are better this year than they were last; that is, they have been more regular than last year.

The churches have paid as follows: Bessemer City has paid $153.5', balance due, $91.22 (this includes back salary), Union Grove has paid $112.00, balance due $66.40 (this also includes back salary), Fairfield has paid $13.75, balance due $46.25.

Balance due on the Gastonia circuit $203.87. With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers.

D. M. Loy.

November 1, 1912.

—Bro. Pritchard writes that he has had a good year on Halifax Ct. and expects to go to Conference with a good report.

A PROGRAM FOR A JOYFUL LIFE.

The following noble schedule is by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D. D., the famous author of "In His Steps:"

1. I will try to do God's will every day.
2. I will try to see the good in the world and in my neighbor.
3. I will not worry over matters I cannot help, and over those I can help I do not need to worry.
4. I will keep my mind and heart in touch with the great things of the universe.
5. I will learn to enjoy the free gifts of God to men like nature and the facts of physical powers.
6. I will learn to prize all my human friendships.
7. I will help some one to a happier life every day.
8. I will magnify my place in the kingdom of God.
9. I will enjoy the friendship of Christ as my Redeemer and Brother.

"Hope thou in the Lord." "Rejoice in the Lord always.

"There is a saying old and rusty
(But as good as any new):
'Tis never trouble trouble,
Till trouble troubles you."
"If care you've got to carry,
Wait till 'tis at the door,
For he who runs to meet it Takes up the load before."

—Selected.

—The Finnish Methodists will hold their services for a while Sunday afternoons at the M. P. church. Church Recorder, Laurium, Mich.

Begun on page 7.

We were glad to have Mrs. Pittman to worship with us yesterday, and pleased to have Bro. Ledbetter's wife and three of the children to spend to-day with us. Shall love to have them come again soon.

Fannie Barnes, Rept.

FLAT ROCK.

President Swain addressed us on yesterday from "What seest thou?" What a myriad of view points with a multiplicity of views. So entertaining were his remarks, some followed to Bethel, when from the text—"When Shiloh comes to Him shall the gathering of the people be," we were led to the heights.

Surely 'twas masterly and we do not yet want to descend. We think some of these thoughts will ever vibrate within our brain and the visions haunt and sublimely uplift us.

This executive having gone the constitutional limit will give place to a successor at Conference.

Doubtless his refined family developed largely by an intelligent wife, reimbursed by his financial aid, will form a happy household.

But the armor not laid down yet. nay! Though retrospect so sweet, its field rich and varied. He's but in his prime! No domestic lull should allure. "God's calling yet." But loftily, exaltingly, holding up the Christ to the denizens of an ampler day" in this lost surging world. That "Well may roar the storm to them because they hear.

The deeper voice across the storm."

Our conference hardly presents a finer specimen of persistent service, eternal toil and perhaps business acumen. A comrade speaking of him in childhood said Swain was a fine boy, and today is a fine man.

Reporter.

WINSTON.

Since our series of meetings which seemed to result in so much good to our church, eight members have been received into our fellowship, and several of them give promise of being of much value, coming as they do from excellent Christian parents. Several M. P. families have recently moved to Winston, and we hope to have them unite with us soon. Will our kind Editor get busy again and tell us how we are to get a new and more attractive church edifice?

(I will tell you a little bit of history. A few months ago, the Baptists of South Greensboro were thinking of calling Rev. Mr. Walker, of Littleton, to be their pas- They needed a new house of worship, and asked him what would be his plan for raising the money. He replied:

"My plan wouuld be for you to go down in your jeans and get it." They called him, he came, and the new church is now going up. For several nights we saw a number of the young men of the congregation at work excavating. When Methodist Protestants anywhere come to be as much in earnest as our Baptist brethren of South Greensboro are, they will find a way to build, if there is a reasonable number of them together.—Editor.)

PINEY GROVE, SILER CITY CT.

Bro. Bowman filled his last appointment for this conference year November 3rd. Mr. Bowman's sermons are always uplifting and inspiring; but this was an "extra." A very good congregation was out to hear him. The pastor's salary, general interests and every thing. was paid in full, which I am sure is very encouraging to the pastor. Now, we trust Bro. Bowman will come back for another year with us. We want him back and hope if it is God's will that our delegate and the conference will send him back. He has done a splendid work this year and I sincerely believe he is the one for us another year. We were glad to have him in our home Sunday night. We always look forward with great anticipation to our pastor's visits.

We are having a very interesting Sunday school, will not discontinue through the winter season. The attendance is very encouraging. Average attendance 36 through the month of October; that is right good for a small school. We have ordered new song books which I think will help keep up interest.

Miss Fleta Kivett, one among our brightest Sunday school girls, have gone to Burlington to spend the winter months. We miss her so much in our school. We regretted very much having to give her up, but trust our loss is Burlington's gain.

Success to the Herald and its many readers.

Mrs. J. A. C.

November 4, 1912.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

AN ERROR.

The only mission of the Postal Card this week is to correct an error in last week's Card. We close the year's work at Palestine the 3rd Sunday at 11 o'clock and at Gideon's Grove at 3 o'clock P. M. and not on next Sunday as was erroneously printed in the Postal Card of last week.

LETTER FROM MR. SIDNEY C. TAPP.

My dear brother McCulloch:

Your good letter and paper reached me. I beg to assure you of my appreciation of same. They carried me back to the scenes of my boyhood days. My father and mother sleep in the Silent City of the Dead at the Ridge. It is a sacred spot to me. I wish I could return there some day and hear you preach. When a boy, I used to go to Sunday school and the old Camp Meetings there under the Arbors, and after the services were over, hear my father and the other neighbors discuss the sermons. My mother died when I was an infant; my father, when I was nine years of age, and I drifted away into the cold world, alone. But, the influences of those early days have followed me through life.

I am sending you some literature on my book, "The Truth About The Bible," for your information. As soon as the book is out, I shall mail you a copy.

I would thank you if you would advise me of the address, in Kansas City, of Rev. J. R. Ball's daughter. I would like very much to know her. Her father boarded in my father's home when he was pastor at the Ridge, when I was a little fellow some six years of age. My first memories, which go back into the faint and early dawn of childhood, recall a slight mental pictures of his days in my father's home. These memories, as we march toward the sun set of life, are sweet and make life, as the sun goes down, peaceful and joyful.

I am a young man, yet, scarcely in the prime of life, but have been in wretched health all of my life, having undergone five operations and cannot live long at best. I dictated "The Truth About The Bible" in a sick room at a few minutes now and then as I could gather strength to express my ideas. I do not expect to live long and as I have no family, I am leaving a will so that the income of the book will go to disseminate its ideas when I am dead.

I enjoyed your sermon on "What Think Ye of Christ?" very much, indeed. I shall file it away.

Yes, the Mrs. Pratt, to whom you referred is my sister. She lives near Efland, and has attended the Ridge from her childhood, and is one of the best women that God ever made. I wish I could see her. I have not seen her in nearly twenty years. I hope that you will know more of her in the future.

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

Sidney C. Tapp.

Willard Hotel, Kansas City, Mo.

(It pains us to know that Bro. Tapp is so afflicted, but we are glad to know that his effort is to lead men to a truer appreciation of the Bible. We feel a certain pride in his success as an author. —Editor.)

AS TO COLLEGES.

Many honest parents do not understand what all this demand for Christian Education means. "Do not the Christian Colleges teach the very same subjects and often the same text books as the State Colleges? Why then all this a-do about nothing?"

But, dear friends, you have failed to take into account the most vital thing in education—the teacher's personality, the teacher's character. One of the most incisive thinkers of my acquaintance, during a recent discussion of methods in Sunday school work, gave it as the matured judgment of his observation and experience that the subject matter taught is not near so vital a thing as the teacher presenting it. It is conceivable that one teacher may present a secular study with greater positive character-moulding tendency than another teacher could teach the Bible itself. The difference is in the personality or character of the teacher.

We who have taken our College and University degrees know full well that the greater moulding influences that come into our lives were not the things that were taught us, but the lives that were lived about us. Those of us who have taken our first degree in a Christian college and then gone to the non-Christian University can testify to the vast difference we felt on every hand in the character-developing influences of the two environments.

Colleges educate not only in knowledge but in character. Knowledge may be had from text books and the lectures of learned men, but character is a result of the interaction of life on life. The spirit of the College atmosphere, determined by the life of the professors, of the village surrounding the College, and of the student body, is a tremenduous influence making for character-development. And the Christian College, it goes without saying, is the only adequate environment for the production of Christian character, and this is, in turn, the only type of character that properly qualifies for this life and fits for eternity.

We cannot be too careful about choosing the Colleges in which to educate our sons and daughters. We must see to it that they come under godly men and women only, for one single scoffer will upset the good work of a dozen devout saints. To attend preaching on Sunday and a lecture on philosophy on Monday that mercilessly picks to pieces the utterances of the sermon of the previous day will certainly not qualify for Christian service. To preach temperance to young men who sit under the instruction of teachers who drink and do worse things is useless waste of time. Parents who knowingly place their children under such men are not true to the obligations of parenthood and are sowing a harvest of sorrow and disappointment for themselves and their loved ones in the coming days. It is because we know the awful influence wielded by the teacher over the character of his pupil that we are insisting as never before upon due recognition to fundamental issues when the decision is made by Christian parents to entrust their children to other than Christian teachers and institutions. We shall endeavor to make the issue plain, and, if we do, we should have no fear as to what course Christian parents will pursue in reference to this vital matter.

W. A. Harper.

THE ELECTION.

The election this year has been somewhat peculiar and is not without its lessons. One thing that is evident is that old party alignments are being changed. It has been a long time since so many men refused to be led by a mere party name. The words "Democrat and "Republican" have lost some of their sacredness in the eyes of the people who are coming to see that parties and platforms are or should be but means for public service, and when they cease to be that they have no longer reason for existence. They have also come to see that a party, instead of being a public servant, may become a plunderer of the public. When such becomes the case, the people feel that they should not wait for the party to die a natural death, but should hasten its dissolution by withdrawing from it all support.

Many causes have entered into the result brought out on election day. In addition to the desire for righteousness which has influenced many, there has been the desire to be on the winning side, which has caused many to turn from their usual course. These latter were in a hard way, for it was very difficut to see in advance which would be the winning side.

The discord in the Republican party and its consequent failure to win at the polls is another added to the long list of illustrations of the disaster there is in discord. In union there is strength, but in division there is weakness and failure. Some look upon Roosevelt as the cause of the division and heap upon him the blame for the failure of the Republicans to carry this election. The division, however, has been growing within the Republican party for years. Roosevelt quickened a process already going on. Dichotomous division seems to be a natural process in human society. In church and in state we see it going on if we watch the course of history through a long period of time. The more powerful a society (religious or political) is, the more likely it is to splt up into two.

We believe, however, that in a society of perfect men this tendency to divide would not appear, but there would be perfect harmony. When a party becomes powerful, the evil elements seek to control it to their own advantage, the fair-minded resists, and so the strife begins which finally ends in disruption.

The fact that in our great country there was so peaceful an election in this time of excitement and party contention is gratifying. It shows that our people generally are satisfied to let the majority rule. As long as that is the case our government will be on a stable basis.

The principal issue in this election seems to have been the manner of dealing with the trusts. Al parties are agreed that the trusts are working injury and that they must be dealt with, but how? is the question. As with the liquor traffic, both license and prohibition are proposed. The Democrats are prohibitionists with respect to the trusts. Roosevelt seems to favor license and regulation.

One good result of this election is that it has taught certain men the vanity of popularity. We could name more than one candidate who seemed to base his hope of triumph on the fact that he had received a great majority in former elections. It does every man good to learn the vanity of human favor.

Now that the election is over it behoves every good citizen to join with every other in the effort to free our government from the last vestige of injustice and make our country as good as it is great. We must live and act in the fear of God and in love for all mankind in order to do this.

—The election is over and Conference is almost here.

—"He that save an adult, saves a soul. He that saves a child, saves a life."

THOUGHT HE COULDN'T FIGHT.

"Sissy!" "Sissy!" "Girl!" 'Girl!' "Fraidy cat!" followed by a chorus of laughter, charged the air.

Ralph proudly walked on, with his head up, outwardly brave but inwardly quaking with fear.

The rough boys jostled him threateningly, but he continued his easy-going gate until he was beyond the danger line and the last cry of "Sissy" and "Fraidy cat" had died upon the air.

Poor Ralph had endured this persecution silently and bravely ever since he had been promoted to the eighth grade in Miss Smith's room. He was a fragile little lad, and unable to play the boisterous games which all boys love, though he could do other things, such as sing little songs, play on the piano, and paint cards with his mother. Mrs Evans had tried to keep her son busy in such ways, so that he would not realize his inability to take part in the more boyish pleasures.

"Well, dear, home so early?" asked his mother, as he entered the house.

"Yes, mamma, and I'm tired and sick of everything." Ralph sank down upon a chair.

"Have the boys been rude to you again, dear?" His mother drew him to her and put her cheek in his pale, tired little face. "I think I had better talk to your teacher about it. I can't endure it any longer, either."

"No, no, mother! O you musn't do that! I would not have you tell the boys for anything. They don't realize how they're hurting me, for they're so strong and well. I wished they liked me. They think I'm a coward, and don't dare to do anything. They want everybody to fight. I'm not strong enought to do that, you know, and I wouldn't if I could"—And down went Ralph's curly head upon his mother's lap, while sobs shook his delicate frame. Poor little boy! His mother's arms were around him with comfort and encouragement, but her mind was busy wondering what she could do to make the boys understand.

The next morning Ralph started for school, bright and happy again. As he kissed his mother good-by, he said: "Don't you worry, mother. I think everything will be all right when the boys know me better. They don't harm me in any way, only I don't like to have them think I'm a coward."

The dark winter afternoon was fast wearing away. In school each boy and girl was busy with a final task assigned by Miss Smith, when Ralph, who sat [illegible] the door leading into the cloakroom, [illegible] escaping under the crack of the door.

Rising and walking quickly to where the teacher sat, he whispered to her his discovery.

"We will have the fire drill now, pupils," Miss Smith announced at once, in her usual tone of voice. "Ralph, take your seat at the piano and play."

Ralph obeyed with all the force and vigor that he could throw into music, while the boys and girls, unconscious of anything unusual, marched out, orderly and rapidly.

Miss Smith, in the meantime, had notified the other teachers of the danger; and when the last child was out of the building, safe and sound, Miss Smith and Ralph, hand in hand rushed for the stairway, which by this time was filled with smoke.

The crackling, roaring sound terrified them, and the smoke nearly stifled them, but they succeeded in making their way down the long flight of stairs, and at last reaching the outer air.

As they ran, breathless and pale, into the excited crowd, the roof, with a loud crash, fell in. But above all the frightful roar, the tumult of firemen, the hissing of steam, and the pumping of the engines, could be heard the joyous and exultant shout: "Hurrah for Ralph Evans and Miss Smith! Hurrah! hurrah!"

After that, Ralph was never again called "sissy" or "girl" or "fraidy Cat." He had proved that it is not always the physically strong and the vigerous who alone are brave.—M. E. Rambler, in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE TREE THAT LOVES COMPANIONSHIP.

"And this is truly a coconut tree?" Raymond asked excitedly, climbing on the great bamboolike trunk and looking up into the strange, foreign-looking leaves. A clump of huge green nuts growing at the base of these leaves answered his question, even before his Cousin Fred, coming across the lawn in bright Florida sunshine, could answer him.

"Well, isn't it great?" Raymond sighed happily as a scarlet-winged tanager flitted by and a breath of fragrant jasmine came to him wafted on the softest, balmiest breeze straight from the bay. "I just can't believe I'm awake, Cousin Fred. I feel as if I'd wake up in a minute then find it a dream."

But this time Fred had come up to the coconut tree and sat down on its sloping trunk. He smiled up at his small cousin. "It does seem like fairyland, after a Northern winter," he agreed. "But you'll soon grow used to it and find your dream

"Anyway, I never expected to see coconuts growing here," Raymond said. "I thought they grew way off in other countries where the people are nearly all the brown natives you see in the pictures."

"Many people don't know that," Cousin Fred replied, "and the story of their coming here is interesting. There was a shipwreck on the ocean that brought ashore a large number of the nuts. These took root and grew and seemed to like their new home so well that they have kept on growing ever since. There are many coconut groves in this part of Florida now. The coconut palm always seems like a friend to me for some reason."

"I wonder why," Raymond said, patting the straight, scarred trunk that did not break into branches like most of the trees he knew.

Cousin Fred Smiled. "I guess it's because of the saying the natives of Ceylon have," he said, "They say that the coconut palm will not grow beyond the sound of the sea waves nor of the human voice."

A big, ripe coconut came plumping down as Fred stopped speaking. It was larger than a man's head, and Raymond was astonished at its size till his cousin showed him the very thick, juicy rind that holds the nut inside like a kernel. The nut was sweet and fresh when they had broken it apart, and the milk inside was quite different from that in the coconuts Raymond had seen in the North.

"O, how interesting things are when you see them growing where they belong!" he said, putting his arms aroud the tree's thick stem and laying his cheek affectionately against it. "I feel the way you do, Cousin Fred. I love the tree that like to live where people are."—Alice Miller Weeks.

—The drinking of beer in Germany is not as innocent in its effects as it may seem. Professor Forel of the University of Zurich says: "To be convinced of its moral effect one needs to study in Germany the beer jokes, the beer conversation and the beer literature. Among the academic youth of Germany the drinking of beer has truly killed their ideals and their ethics and has produced an indescribable vulgarity."

Mrs. De Mover—Good gracious! This is the noisest neighborhood I ever got into. Just hear those children screech.

Maid—They're your own children, mum.

Mrs. De Mover—Oh, are they? How the little darlings are enjoying themselves. —London Tit-Bits

THE MEIJI ERA.

A Symposium.

(From "Japan Evangelist.")

Today Japan is in deepest mourning. Her beloved Emperor, Mutsuhito is dead. A black shroud hangs over the entire land. —It flaps mournfully in the breeze above flags half mast, it twines itself over doors and gateways and hangs in gloomy folds across the broad expanse of great buildings.

The death of Emperor Mutsuhito marks the close of a great reign—a period of time the history of which will give inspiration to future students of political, social and religious conditions of this Empire.

Recently a group of well known missionaries were requested to give a Symposium of the Meiji Era. That we might gain a general knowledge of this period it might be well to give briefly the gist of their conclusions taken from "Japan Evangelist."

"Future readers of Japanese history will find it easy to group the great characteristics of the Meiji Era closely about the watch word Meiji (enlightenment) itself. One does not find it easy to decide which to admire most, the courage of a people coming out of isolation to right about face and make enlightenment the keyword of the realm, or the studied consistency with which this policy was carried out, or the results, material, intellectual and spiritual transcending all the dreams of the young Emperor and his counsellor during the initial days of his reign of forty-five years ago.

"The era of Meiji demonstrated not only to the Eastern, but also to the Western world, there are vast possibilities wrapt up in these Eastern people. The future of the Far East now looms before the world as a mighty possibility. And it is a question whether the Meiji Era will not prove to have been equally epoch making in church history. When the church historians a century or two hence shall look back upon this period, and trace the new movements that were started by it in the East, it is not impossible that they may recognize in this era the beginning of a great new divison in the history of the Kingdom of God upon earth. In truth, looked at from every stand-point possible, the significance of the Meiji Era for the Far East, if not the world, is incalculable. Well may we stand with uncovered heads as this great Era passes into history."

One writer says—

Herculean as the task was, Mediaeval feudalism gave place to constitutional monarch. His majesty's faithful and diligent subjects exploited the whole world, selecting many of the best hard earned gains of long centuries of heroic effort, and made them tributary to Japan's advancement. . . . .so that in the marvelously short period of forty-fiev years we behold a full fledged nation stepping out of oblivion and occupying an important and significant place among the great natinons of the world.

But another adds—

"More than the introduction of constitutional government, or of education, of military and naval power, or of various industrial and commercial agencies, the one great out standing achievement of the Meiji Era, which has brought the greatest blessing to the people and proved the greatest power to the national life, was the granting of religious liberty, thereby opening the door to the incoming of the pure religion of God.

"The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

"In brief, the East and the West have become acquainted during this era. The contribution to world knowledge thus resulting, the surprises and shocks which both East and West have received, are great. In place of little regard or respect for each other, there has come appreciation, esteem, confidence. The brother-hood of the race has been advanced as in no other age. War, peace, commerce and religion have each and all made their contribution to bring this about. The all round finding of itself as a nation has challenged our admiration."

"The difference between the Japan of the Meiji and pre-Meiji eras, has but one cause and that is a difference in the prevailing ideas. The soil, climate and products of the country have not changed. The physical and mental characteristics of the race remain the same. The transformation is due to a change of ideas, and further progress must be made along the same line, by assimilating from abroad not merely intellectual, political, social, moral ideas, but the less easily assimilated because more fundamental religious ideas as well.

"I am most imprest by the rare combination of force and gentleness, the military and the merciful, shown in the personality of the late Emperor and the leading features of his great reign.

Like David of old he was a warrior poet and he seems to have loved poetry better than the arts of war. His high idealism is revealed in his poems. To quote but one of thousands dashed off by his brush pen,

Tsumi araba
Ware wo tsumi se yo,
Amatsu Kami;
Tami wa kono mi no
Umi-shi ko nareba.
If there be sin
Charge me the sinner,
God of the Heavens;
Since this people born of me
Mine own children are.

"During the Meiji Era Japan has experienced a New Birth. She has been born from above, of influences higher than those which had previously dominated her. These influences are no other than those of the Spirit of Christ, working through the truths of His Gospel proclaimed by His messengers, but also thro' that body of Christian thought and sentiment with which, in His providences, the nation has become familial through contact and intercourse with the West.

"I venture to express the prediction that in the eyes of the Watchers and the Holy Ones, and in the judgment of the future ages, the distinguishing glory of the Meiji Era will be neither those political and military achievements by virtue of which Japan has won a place in the councils of the nations, nor the adoption of modern methods. . . . . .The supreme, sublime event has been the coming to the leadership of the nation of Him whose right it is to reign.

Donna Schlegelmilch,
244 B Bluff, Yokahama, Japan.
September 15, 1912.

FROM SACCHINI.

It is the unvarying decision of wise men, whether in ancient or modern times, that the instruction of youth will always be best when it is pleasantest: The tenderness of youth requires of us that we should not overstrain it, its innocence that we should abstain from harshness. That which enters into willing ears the mind as it were runs to welcome, seizes with avidity, carefully stows away, and faithfully preserves. "When pupils love the master," says Sacchini, "they will soon love his teaching. Let him, therefore, show an interest in everything that concerns them and not merely in his studies. Let him rejoice with those that rejoice, and not disdain to weep with those that weep. After the example of the Apostle let him become a little one among little ones, that he may make them adult in Christ, and Christ adult in them. Let him unite the grave kindness and authority of a father with a mother's tenderness."

ABOUT THE CLASS ROLL.

One of the greatest difficulties any school meets is in keeping the class roll properly thinned out and the names of delinquents off the active roll.

The plan used in Sunday school presided over by the writer is this: We keep a permanent roll of our Sunday school and on this is listed the name of the individual as soon as he joins the school. His name never goes off the roll. Then at the beginning of a quarter a new roll is started on the class book. No names goes on this active list until he has attended during that quarter. We find this a reasonable satisfactory plan.

Reading a Sunday school magazine recently I find this suggestion, which is probably still better: When one has been absent for four consecutive Sundays without any excuse being rendered his name is taken from the active roll and he is marked an associate member; when he returns for two Sundays in succession his name is again restored to the active roll. The knowledge that his name is still on the roll has a very good effect, and is probably better than letting it go off at the beginning of the quarter.

THANKSGIVING EXERCISES.

Every Sunday school should have Thanksgiving day exercises. It is true this comes about the time you are planning for the Christmas entertainment, but the Thanksgiving exercises may be given by the juniors and intermediates and let the beginners and primary pupils give the Christmas exercises. The collection, of course, should go to our orphanage. It is well to have a short address giving the history of our orphanage and let some one who has visited it tell the school of the great work it is doing.

BEGINNERS HOME DEPARTMENT.

At the Trinity Sunday-school there is a Beginners' Home Department, patterned somewhat after the regular Home Department, but not actually connected with it. It originated in this way: The Cradle Roll includes the babies to four years old, and then they must graduate in the Beginners' Department. But it was found that at this time many of the little ones were entirely lost to the Sunday-school. Some mothers had other young children, some parents were not interested in church and Sunday-school, and for various reasons many of the children did not come to Sunday-school. Then the idea of a Beginners' Home Department was suggested, plans made, and a superintendent appointed. This superintendent calls at the homes of all the children who do not come to Sunday-school after leaving the Cradle Roll. She finds out why they do not come. She helps the mother in sending the little ones to Sunday-school, where that is practicable. Otherwise she enrolls these children in the Beginners' Home Department. The present membership is about thirty. The superintendent has a desk on the platform in the general Sunday-school room; she sends lesson leaflets to the members every Sunday, she calls on them, sends birthday remembrances, and keeps closely informed about them. The children have envelopes, to be marked for learning the Golden Text each Sunday. If their quarterly reports are perfect, their names are printed in the church calendar. Thus the Sunday-school keeps in touch with the children and their homes, and as they grow older most of them come regularly to school.

by Miss Smith,

the door leading into the cloakroom,

soon grow used

Notes on C. E. Topics, Nov. 10.

By Charles A. Hines.

"Temperance progress over the world" Mat. 3:13-18: 4: 1-6. (World's Temperance Sunday.

The World—The world is making slow but study progress towards temperance. Efforts towards the suppression of the whiskey and opium traffic are meeting with some success. The progress should be more swift and certain. Surely an enlightened public will work to this end. In the United States, at the beginning of this century, twelve years ago, there were five States under prohibition,—Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Vermont, and New Hampshire. Since that time six States have become prohibition States,—Georgia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee , and Alabama, though the last named State has repealed its prohibition law. Vermont and New Hampshire have done the same, leaving eight prohibition States. But these States have a population of 13,464,000, while the prohibition States at the beginnng of the century had a population of only 3, 239, 000,— a gain of 315 per cent for population.

Canada. More than half of the towns and villages of Quebec have no saloons. Newfoundland is practically all for prohibition except the capital. Nova Scotia is all for prohibition except Halifax. Prince Edward Isles is under prohibition. Manitoba is half and half, 65 of its towns being "dry" and 65 "wet."

Ontario. Ontario requires a three-fifths majority in order to vote a town "dry," and still it has 442 "dry" towns to 380 "wet" towns. In 120 other towns a majority vote has been cast for prohibition, but not yet a three-fifths vote. Since 1875, though the population has nearly doubled, the number of saloons has been cut down from more than 6,000 to less than 2,000.

France. France drinks more than any other European nation, and immense money interests are involved in the manufacture of liquor. On the other hand, France is the scene of an active campaign against the practice of drinking, and it is no uncommon sight to see strong temperance placards posted on the walls, placed there by government authority.

MISSOURI AND KANSAS.

Missouri and Kansas are next-door neighbors. Missouri has saloons, while Kansas has been without open saloons for thirty years. Missouri has a population of 3, 300,000, Kansas about half that number. Missouri's total assessed property is $1,650,000,000. In Kansas the assessed property is $2,750,000,000. Missouri has a number of cities of more than five thousand inhabitants without paved streets. There is not a city in Kansas of more than fifteen hundred which does not have paved streets and an electric light plant. A few years ago, during the panic, Missouri did not send a dollar to the Eastern banks, while Kansas banks sent $50,000,000. There is one motor car in Missouri for every one hundred farms, and one for every five in Kansas. Missouri pays for labor an average of a little less than $8 a week. Kansas pays an average of$14 a week. Proportionately Kansas pays twice as much for education as Missouri. In the last twelve years Missouri spent $1,600,000,000 for liquor. During the same period Kansas spent for liquor $50,000,000.

These figures were prepared by the Hon. C. W. Tricket, special attorney general for the State of Kansas.—American Issue.

INCREASING INDIANS.

A few tribes of American Indians are not dying out, though their numbers are small in comparison with their probable one-time strength. Two of these tribes live in Maine. In 1820, by the census, there were '70 Passamaquoddy Indians, and last year there were 446. In 1820 there were 390 Penobscots; now more than ninety years later, there are 397. Both maintain their tribal conditions, and the Penobscots, at least, still dwell on the same village site that their forefathers occupied.—Boston Transcript.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE E
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

"Oh, God," I cried, "why may I not forget?
These halt and hurt in life's hard battle throng me yet.
Am I their keeper? Only I to bear this constant burden of their grief and care?
Why must I suffer for the other's sins?
Would God my eyes had never open been."
And the thorn crowned and patient One replied,
"They throng Me too; I, too, have seen."

"Thy other children go at will," I said, protesting still.
"They go unheeding—But these sick and sad, these blind and orphan,
Yea, and those that sin drag at my heart, for them I serve and groan.
Why is it? let me rest, Lord, I have tried."
He turned and looked at me—"But I have died."

"Make a little fence around today,
And therein stay."

JUST IN TIME.

An Arkansas judge had convened court in one of the towns on his circuit, when it was found that no pens, ink, or paper had been provided, and upon inquiry it came out that no county funds were available for the purpose.

The judge exclaimed somewhat forcefully, then drew some money from his own pocket. He was about to hand it to the clerk when a visiting lawyer, a high-priced, imported article brought on to defend a case of some importance spoke up in an aside plainly audible over the room.

"Well!" with infinite contempt, "Ive seen some pretty bad conditions, but this —well, this is the limit."

"You are fined $5 for contempt, sir!" thundered the judge. "Hand the money to the clerk."

When the eminent lawyer had humbly complied the judge turned to the clerk.

"Now, Mr. Clerk, go out and get what pens, ink and paper the court may require, and if there is any change left over you may give it to the gentleman." —Selected.

BID FOB THE PATRONAGE OF SNOBS.—A New York hotel announces that it will serve apples wrapped in tissue paper and put up in individual boxes, each apple accompanied by two leaves preserved in their natural color, at forty cents apiece. Sensible people will go to some other hotel.

The law of political economy is that a man will sell in the dearest market and buy in the cheapest. This is usually true, and 'human nature" (whatever that is) leads in that direction. However, a genuine case of pure and undefiled religion leads one to annul this inevitable law and act differently. Here is a case in point. Recently there was a cattle epidemic in Kansas, and many farmers were left in poor and pitiable plight. One farmer, Peter Schoolfield, whose stock all escaped, stuck up the following notice in several places: "The Lord has spared my stock. My horses have gone through the epidemic without loss: I have twenty head of horses to lend to my less fortunate neighbors, without charge, for plowing. Those who need are welcome to them." That is Christian, not political, economy. Yet we dare say many church members, we know, in that man's place would have followed the law of political economy, on the ground that "business is business" and would have charged, not less but more for the use of their teams, for no other reason than that teams were scarce, and their neighbors were bound to have them for the plowing.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

A GENUINE SERVICE.

"I believe," says an old subscriber, "that every time The Youth's Companion enters a home it does that home a genuine service." That describes the purpose of the publishers exactly. The paper is not filled with mischievous or idle thoughts to fill an idle hour. It provides pastime, recreation that builds up. It is to the minds of eager and impressionable young people what sound athletics are to their bodies.

At a cost of less than four cents a week The Youth's Companion opens the door to the company of the most distinguished men and women in America and Turope. Whether they are revealing the latest discoveries in science, or describing great industrial achievments, or telling of their wanderings in strange corners of the world, or feeding the imagination with rare stories, they are giving Companion readers the best of themselves.

Seven serials at least will be published by The Companion in 1913, and nearly 200 other complete stories, in addition to some 50 special contributions, and treasure-box of sketches, anecdotes, expert advice as to athletic sports, ideas of handy devices round the house, and so forth—long hours of companionship with the wise, the adventurous and the entertaining. Announcement for 1913 will be sent with sample copies of the paper to any address on request.

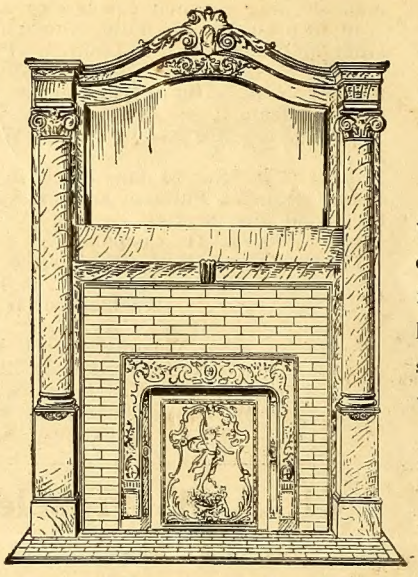
Every new subscriber who sends $2.00 for the fifty-two weekly issues of 1913 will receive as a gift The Companion Window Transparency and Calendar for 1913, the most exquisite novelty ever offered to Companion readers; also, all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1912, free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION.

144 Berkley St., Boston Mass.

New subscriptions received at this office.

—There are some people too slow to join in any movement unless it be the ...nt of snails.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,

(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)

Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I.; Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,

Elon College, North Carolina.

BIBLE TEACHERS TRAINING SCHOOL.

Interdenominational, evangelical spiritual, thorough. Pedagogical in method, practical in aim.

The curriculum is Biblliocentric. Its organizing idea is Bible Study in the mother-tongue, and it is constructed under the deep conviction that the chief preparation for Christian work is knowledge of the Bible and experience of its truth.

Twenty-six denominations; over one hundred universities, colleges, and vocational schools; twenty-eight states, and eighteen countries represented by its students last year.

For catalogue and literature address

WILBERT W. WHITE, President

541 Lexington Avenue New York

PUBLISHERS THE BIBLE RECORD.